On 12/15/66 HAROLD WEISBERG, author of the book "Whitewash No. 2", appeared on KGO-TV, San Francisco, on a talk show moderated by JIM DUNBAR from 7:05 a.m. until 7:55 a.m. A number of callers called in asking questions about his conclusions in the book and statements made during the talk show. The callers were about evenly divided as to their belief in his conclusions and against his hypothesis. He made no critical comments concerning the FBI, but in response to one caller's question concerning the Warren Commission Report WEISBERG pointed out that the Commission was "spoon fed" information from the FBI and Secret Service and, therefore, their conclusions necessarily had to be based on the voluminous reports and thousands of interviews conducted by the FBI. WEISBERG indicated he did not wish to imply that the Commission were not honorable men because he felt that they were. WEISBERG's main premise seemed to be a person who was identified by the FBI as BILLY LOVELADY who was on the steps of the Texas Book Repository was in some way linked to President KENNEDY's assassination and he felt that OSWALD was in some way a "patsy." He stated he used the word "patsy" because OSWALD used this terminology when first apprehended by the Dallas Police Department.

WEISBERG was obviously on the program to push the sale of his new book "Whitewash No. 2" and announced on the program that he would appear at an open meeting at the Hall of Flowers in San Francisco on Friday night, 12/16/66.

Honorable Marvin Watson
Special Assistant to the President
The White House
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Watson:

On November 30, 1966, Mrs. Marguerite Oswald, mother of Lee Harvey Oswald, appeared on radio and television programs in San Antonio, Texas. During her appearance on these programs, Mrs. Oswald was critical of the investigation of the assassination conducted by the Warren Commission, and she contended that the investigation of the assassination has not proved that her son was either innocent or guilty.

Mrs. Oswald also contended that her son, Lee Harvey Oswald, was sent to the Soviet Union as an undercover agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation with full knowledge of the United States Marine Corps and the United States State Department.

She also alleged that reports of the Warren Commission, Federal Bureau of Investigation and Secret Service prepared in connection with the assassination of President John F. Kennedy contained numerous errors and attributed such errors to the fact that the individuals who prepared the reports were only human beings who were subject to error.

Following her appearance on the aforementioned radio and television programs, Mrs. Oswald proceeded to the San Antonio Airport to return to Dallas, Texas. While at the airport, she made unsolicited remarks concerning the assassination to two members of the San Antonio Police Department who were assigned at the San Antonio Airport in connection with Mrs. Oswald's visit to San Antonio, Texas.

Mrs. Oswald told the two police officers that she has letters from Cuba and Russia stating that President Lyndon B. Johnson was connected with the assassination of the late President Kennedy. She also alleged that when President and Mrs. Johnson were called before the Warren Commission to testify concerning their knowledge of the assassination, neither was placed under oath. She alleged that this showed that if President Johnson did not tell the truth, he could not be held for perjury. She noted in this regard that "Mrs. John F. Kennedy and J. Edgar Hoover" were placed under oath when they testified before the Commission.

Mrs. Oswald also stated that in her opinion, President Johnson and his family violate the law but should not be allowed to do so. She did not state, however, how President Johnson or his family allegedly violate the law.

For your information, Mrs. Marguerite Oswald's behavior since the assassination has been highly erratic. In my testimony before the Warren Commission on May 14, 1964, I stated that I considered Mrs. Oswald somewhat emotionally unstable.

The above is being furnished as of possible interest to the President. This information has not been furnished to the Acting Attorney General.

RICHARD WHALEN,
PROPOSED ARTICLE FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST ON ASSASSINATION OF THE PRESIDENT

By reference from Mr. Sullivan's office, Richard Whalen came to my office on October 12 and 14, 1966, and spoke with Bishop. Whalen is the writer-in-residence for the Institute for Strategic Studies and is the author of the book about Joseph Kennedy, father of the former President, entitled "The Founding Father." He is presently on leave of absence for two months from the Institute for Strategic Studies in order to prepare a definitive article on the assassination of the President for the Saturday Evening Post magazine, to come out sometime in December, 1966.

We have no identifiable data in Bureau files concerning Whalen.

Whalen advised that in his article he intends to make a very thorough and exhaustive study of all of the books which have recently been published in a critical vein concerning the Warren Commission Report of the assassination of the President and to point out the false premises upon which the writers of these books have based their conclusions. He stated that it is his personal feeling that following the publication of the Warren Commission Report it was the overwhelming opinion of people throughout the world that the assassination was the sole work of Oswald and, because of Oswald's Marxist background, the Marxist countries, particularly Russia, lost prestige. He stated that the recent wave of books critical of the Warren Commission Report, however, several of which have been written by individuals of "leftist" background, have served to discredit the work and conclusion of the Commission to the detriment of the integrity of the U. S. and its high officials. He advised that the purpose of his article is to point out that the books critical of the Warren Commission and its conclusion are without any sound basis in fact.

Whalen had a number of questions concerning the FBI's role in the investigation of the assassination, all of which are completely and thoroughly covered in various portions of the Warren Commission Report, and the pertinent portions were pointed out to Whalen in answer to his questions. He indicated that should additional questions along these lines arise, he may contact this office again.

PERSONAL AND CONFIDENTIAL

November 15, 1966

Memo to: Cartha D. DeLoach

From: Richard J. Whalen

Before setting forth my specific requests, I would like to restate a pair of general points. First, I believe we agree that it is clearly in the national interest, and therefore in the interest of the FBI, that the full truth concerning the assassination be made known to the American people. This, of course, also requires maximum disclosure of the means by which the truth has been arrived at. (And if the truth cannot be known with absolute certainty, as so often happens in human affairs, that, too, must be told candidly.) Second, I believe we share a rising apprehension at the new-won respectability and popular acceptance of the various conspiracy-mongers. Indeed, they now dominate the mass media. What is profoundly disturbing in this development is the implicit thrust of their attack. It is directed against the person and policies -- particularly the Vietnam policy -- of Kennedy's successor. If the Kennedy assassination is not to become an occasion for wholesale assassination of the integrity of individuals and institutions, and thus perhaps the most tragically divisive chapter in our history, it is imperative that the defenders of the main findings of the Warren Commission promptly regain the initiative.

That said, here are my requests:

1. Not-for-attribution interviews, of the most candid nature and at the earliest possible date, with the following FBI Special Agents: Francis X. O'Neill, Jr., James W. Sibert, Robert A. Frazier, Lyndal L. Shaneyfelt, and John F. Gallagher. To the maximum degree possible, I would like these gentlemen to have available for my inspection the documents on which their published testimony and reports were based.

2. The staff of the National Archives inform me that present restrictions on FBI documents stored there can be removed at the bureau's discretion. For a starter, I would like the restrictions lifted from the following documents:

a) Commission No. 107.1. Supplemental Report to the Report entitled "Investigation of the Killing of Lee Harvey Oswald." 1/13/64.

b) Commission No. 277. "Lee Harvey Oswald" 12/3/63

c) Commission No. 357. Memorandum entitled "The Assassination of President John F. Kennedy." 2/2/64

d) Commission No. 696. Memorandum entitled "The Assassination of President John F. Kennedy." 3/30/64

3. I would like the bureau to use its good offices on my behalf with the Central Intelligence Agency, whose reports to the Warren Commission are presently restricted without exception. If there is nothing to conceal, the appearance of concealment must be eliminated, for it serves only the purposes of the conspiracy-mongers.

SUBJECT: ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY, NOVEMBER 22, 1963

The purpose of this memorandum is to recommend that the Bureau cooperate with Mr. Richard J. Whalen in providing facts for Mr. Whalen to use in an article to appear in the "Saturday Evening Post" in the near future, aimed at silencing critics of the Warren Commission Report.

Richard J. Whalen is an intellectual conservative. He is reliable and trustworthy and has an extremely high opinion of the Bureau. He was born in 1935 in New York City and was graduated with honors from Queens College in 1957. He formerly was associated with the Richmond, Virginia, "News Leader" and subsequently was a contributing editor for "Time" magazine, writing on national affairs, and was later an editorial writer for the "Wall Street Journal." In 1962, he joined the staff of "Fortune" magazine as an associate editor. He recently wrote a book entitled "The Founding Father: The Story of Joseph P. Kennedy." This book was written by Whalen over the Kennedys' objections. It was factual and not praiseworthy of the Kennedys.

Mr. Whalen has contacted the Bureau and requested that the FBI cooperate with him in bringing forth to the American people the full truth concerning the assassination of the late President John F. Kennedy. Whalen states he feels that this is absolutely necessary since he believed he and the Bureau shared a rising apprehension at the new-won respectability and possible acceptance of the various conspiracy mongers. Whalen stated what is profoundly disturbing in this development is the fact that their attack is directed against the person and the policies - particularly the Vietnam policy - of President Kennedy's successor. Whalen stated in his opinion it is imperative that the defenders of the main findings of the Warren Commission promptly regain the initiative.

Whalen specifically requested that he be allowed to conduct "not-for-attribution interviews of the most candid nature and at the earliest possible date" with five Special Agents of this Bureau. Agents to be interviewed would be three Special Agents of the Baltimore Office who were present at the Bethesda

Hospital when the autopsy was initially performed on President Kennedy on the evening of 11-22-63 and three Special Agents of the FBI Laboratory who furnished exacting evidence to the Warren Commission produced in our investigation of the assassination. (Special Agents Frazier, Shaneyfelt and Gallagher)

Mr. Whalen also requested that restrictions be lifted from certain documents now stored in the National Archives in order that Whalen could review such data. He listed four documents in particular he desired to have access to and a review of our files disclosed all four items are already available to the public in the National Archives.

OBSERVATIONS:

At the present time there is a considerable number of books, articles and newspaper stories appearing in American publications criticizing the Report of the Warren Commission and the manner in which the Warren Commission arrived at its conclusions. Among the more prominent critics are Mark Lane, who wrote "Rush to Judgment"; Edward Epstein, who wrote "Inquest"; Penn Jones, Jr., who wrote "Forgive My Grief"; Leo Sauvage, who wrote "The Oswald Affair"; and Harold Weisberg, who wrote "Whitewash - The Report of the Warren Report." Each of these works contain wild and unsubstantiated allegations and all have been subject of separate review at Seat of Government.

Each of these writers, in criticizing the Warren Commission, has also directly or indirectly criticized the FBI and our investigation of the assassination. It appears that it would be in the best interests of this Bureau to cooperate with Mr. Whalen in his efforts to bring the complete truth before the American people. Our investigation was sound, we have absolutely nothing to hide, and no critic has brought forth even one scintilla of evidence that would disprove our findings; that is, that Lee Harvey Oswald was the assassin, that he acted alone, and that there was no conspiracy involved in the assassination of the late President Kennedy.

RECOMMENDATION:

That this Bureau cooperate with Mr. Richard J. Whalen, in strict confidence with no attribution to the FBI, on his current endeavor to bring the full truth concerning the assassination to the attention of the American people. This will necessitate permitting Mr. Whalen to personally discuss evidential matters with FBI Special Agent personnel and will also necessitate our assisting Mr. Whalen to locate specific data in copies of our reports and exhibits maintained in the National Archives, now public domain, which clearly refute the false allegations of the various critics of the Warren Commission Report.

'Life' Urges Review of JFK Death

From News Dispatches

NEW YORK, Nov. 20 (AP) Life Magazine called today for a new investigation of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, contending there is "reasonable doubt" Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone.

The magazine said in this week's edition, to be published Monday, evidence shows "that reasonable — and disturbing — doubt remains."

"One conclusion is inescapable," Life said. "The national interest deserves clear resolution of the doubts. A new investigating body should be set up, perhaps at the initiative of Congress."

The magazine said Texas Gov. John Connally, who was riding with Kennedy in the Dallas motorcade Nov. 22, 1963, and was wounded himself, was still certain that he and Kennedy were hit by two different bullets, not one as the Warren Commission determined.

Film Sequence Shown

Accompanying the Life article are reproductions of frames taken from a strip of film made by Abraham Zapruder, a bystander in the crowd watching the President's motorcade at the time of the assassination.

Connally viewed the film when he testified before the Warren Commission.

He identified certain frames as recording the moment when he believes he was wounded.

"The moment he selected," Life said, "was at most 1.3 seconds after the earliest moment when Kennedy, according to the Commission, could have been hit. But experts have testified that the murder weapon could not be fired any faster than once every 2.3 seconds." The magazine continued:

"If the Warren Commission is right about the timing of the first bullet that hit Kennedy—and the film seems to confirm this, and if Connally is right about his own wound, Oswald could not have had time—in 1.3 seconds—to fire at both Kennedy and Connally. There would have to be a second assassin."

Studied by Connally

The magazine said that earlier this month at Life's request, Connally again looked at the Zapruder film — and this time examined enlargements of each frame under a magnifying glass. Life said:

"As he examined the individual frames he was able to see and recall a number of significant details that he had previously missed and had never brought up in his testimony. These confirmed in his mind what he had previously told the Commission—that he had been hit by a second bullet."

Life quoted him as saying:

"They talk about the 'one-bullet or two-bullet theory,' but as far as I'm concerned, there is no 'theory.' There is my absolute knowledge . . . that one bullet caused the President's first wound, and that an entirely separate shot struck me.

"It's a certainty, I'll never change my mind."

By letter dated 11-27-66 (attached) Sturn questions the Director's statements concerning the findings of the Warren Commission.

Sturn states he has read several books regarding the assassination of the late President John F. Kennedy and expresses the opinion that evidence was suppressed or ignored by the Warren Commission and that if such evidence were announced to the American people it would prove the existence of more than one assassin, as well as the existence of a conspiracy to kill President Kennedy embracing persons in local and state governments of Texas as well as the Federal Government. Sturn asks the Director why he defends the Warren Report; what he is afraid of; what the defenders of the Warren Report are trying to cover up; and who the defenders of this Report are trying to protect. Sturn ends his letter with the statement he hopes an honest investigation will be conducted and truth revealed to the American people and to the world.

It is obvious Sturn has a pre-conceived opinion of this matter and has no interest in the true facts; therefore, it is believed there would be nothing to be gained in a contact with him to straighten him out. Bufiles contain no information identifiable with Sturn.

Dear Mr. Hoover:

I have read your comments published in the newspapers recently defending the conclusions of the Warren Commission which investigated the assassination of President Kennedy. You state your belief that Oswald was the lone assassin, etc., etc.

I have read several books on this subject. Among them are "Rush to Judgement" by Mark Lane; "Whitewash - The Report on the Warren Report" by Harold Weisberg; and "Pardon My Grief" by Penn Jones. As a result, I believe the conclusions of the Warren Report on Kennedys assasination are false. It is true that the books listed above don't bring forth any new evidence to prove the Warren Commissions conclusions false. But the writers of these books have done a public service by calling the attention of the American people to existing, available evidence which was suppressed or ignored by the Warren Commission, and which if announced to the American people would prove the existence of more than one assasin, as well as the existence of a conspiracy to kill President Kennedy embracing persons in the local and state governments of Texas as well as the federal government of the United States - including private individuals whose identity is not known or has not been revealed.

Mr. Mark Lane's book indicated that the FBI, which you head, went out of its way to harass & brain-wash witnesses with certain knowledge that would refute the false story of Kennedy's assasination given to the American people by the Warren Commission. Why do you defend the Warren Report, Mr. Hoover? What are you afraid of? What are the defenders of the Warren Report trying to cover up? Who are they trying to protect?

I hope Mark Lane, Harold Weisberg, Penn Jones and their allies succeed in getting a new investigation -- an honest investigation of Kennedy's assasination -- established. Then maybe the true story of this crime will be revealed to the American people and the world.

SUBJECT: POSSIBLE CRITICISM OF WARREN COMMISSION BY OFFICIAL OF FRENCH GOVERNMENT

In memorandum of Mr. DeLoach to Mr. Tolson dated 11-29-66, Mr. DeLoach's conversation with Marvin Watson of the White House on that date was reported. Watson indicated the President was interested in securing anything in FBI files reflecting immediate reaction of the Soviet Union following the assassination of President Kennedy as well as any "trends" indicating that a specific group, including the Communist Party, was back of the attacks on the Warren Commission.

During the same conversation, Watson stated that the President believed he had seen a newspaper article reporting that a member of the French Government had recently denounced the assassination investigation. Watson wondered if we could locate anything on this matter.

A check at the Bureau failed to reveal any information concerning a criticism of the Warren Commission by the French Government. On 11-30 a cable was sent to Legat, Paris, who, by cable of 12-2, advised that no information is available to him indicating any criticism by an official of the French Government.

By Letterhead Memorandum of 12-1-66, the Domestic Intelligence Division advised the White House concerning Watson's inquiry relative to the Soviet reaction to the assassination. We should now inform Watson of the results of our checks on the inquiry regarding any criticism by a French Government official.

That the attached memo be sent to Watson.

Dear Mr. Hoover:

A number of statements have been attributed to you recently, concerning the Warren Commission and the assassination of President Kennedy. I wondered if you have a public statement as to your opinions on the validity of the Warren Commission's finding in the conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald was alone in his carrying out of the assassination of the President.

On many occasions your statements to the public are edited, and it is extremely difficult to ascertain what actually has been said. One small paragraph in quotation marks is included in a long article made up primarily of editorializing and the opinions of the writer as to exactly what you meant. In this case, I feel that the opinion that you express will be of utmost importance as far as the public is concerned.

I am not just requesting this as a matter of personal curiosity. I have the unique opportunity of utilizing the radio on the West Coast, addressing between 150,000 and 200,000 people, quite frequently, in the evenings. I always try to check my facts ahead of time, to make certain that they are correct, and would certainly appreciate your help in clarifying the statements that have been attributed to you.

(KENNEDY)

WASHINGTON--FBI DIRECTOR J. EDGAR HOOVER SAID TODAY THAT DESPITE THE CONTINUING CONTROVERSY OVER THE WARREN COMMISSION REPORT, ALL AVAILABLE EVIDENCE INDICATES LEE HARVEY OSWALD ACTED ALONE IN KILLING JOHN F. KENNEDY.

HOOVER SAID CRITICS OF THE COMMISSION CONCLUSION THAT OSWALD WAS UNAIDED IN THE ASSASSINATION HAVE EVERY RIGHT TO AIR THEIR VIEWS. BUT HE SAID "THEY SHOULD SHOW MORE REGARD FOR THE FACTS ON RECORD."

"THEY HAVE IGNORED CERTAIN FACTS, MISINTERPRETED OTHERS, AND EXPRESSED PURE SPECULATION AS TRUTH," HOOVER SAID.

"NOT ONE SHRED OF EVIDENCE HAS BEEN DEVELOPED TO LINK ANY OTHER PERSON IN A CONSPIRACY WITH OSWALD TO ASSASSINATE PRESIDENT KENNEDY."

ASKED ABOUT CRITICS' CHARGES THAT THERE WERE DISCREPANCIES IN FBI REPORTS AND THE FINDINGS OF AN AUTOPSY, HOOVER SAID THERE WAS A DIFFERENCE IN THE FORMATION, BUT "THERE IS NO CONFLICT."

"THE FBI REPORTS RECORD ORAL STATEMENTS MADE BY AUTOPSY PHYSICIANS WHILE THE EXAMINATION WAS BEING CONDUCTED AND BEFORE ALL FACTS WERE KNOWN," HOOVER SAID. "THE AUTOPSY REPORT RECORDS THE FINAL FINDINGS OF THE EXAMINATIONS."

HE ALSO DENIED A CHARGE THAT THE FBI HAD ALTERED COLORED FILM OF THE ASSASSINATION TAKEN BY ABRAHAM ZAPRUDER, A BYSTANDER AT THE TIME OF THE NOV. 22, 1963, MURDER IN DALLAS.

"THIS IS TOTALLY FALSE," HOOVER SAID. "THE FBI NEVER HAD THE ORIGINAL ZAPRUDER FILM IN ITS POSSESSION."

HE SAID THE FBI OBTAINED A COPY OF THE ORIGINAL, UNCUT FILM AND REPRODUCED IT FOR THE WARREN COMMISSION. IT SINCE HAS BEEN TURNED OVER TO THE NATIONAL ARCHIVES ALONG WITH OTHER PHOTOGRAPHIC EVIDENCE AND MEDICAL DATA CONSIDERED BY THE COMMISSION IN ITS INQUIRY.

HOOVER MADE HIS STATEMENT IN RESPONSE TO NEWSPAPER QUERIES GROWING OUT OF THE CONTROVERSY OVER THE FINDINGS OF THE COMMISSION. THE CONTROVERSY REACHED A NEW HIGH THIS WEEK ON THE THIRD ANNIVERSARY OF KENNEDY'S DEATH.

Dear Mr. Gardner:

I received your letter of November 28th and want to thank you for your interest in writing as well as for your favorable remarks.

It was certainly good of you to furnish me your observations and comments, and I appreciate them. With respect to this Bureau's inspecting the autopsy photographs and x-rays pertaining to the assassination of President Kennedy and making a public report, the examination of these was basically a medical problem and was handled by appropriate United States Government personnel with medical qualifications.

Sincerely yours,

Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, Director

Dear Mr. Hoover:

The murder of President Kennedy represented an attack not only upon a man but upon the entire Nation and every American citizen. The possibility that such a horrible crime could take place with some participants going undetected and unpunished causes me great anguish. This possibility has haunted me for three years now.

A reading of the Warren Report at the time of its publication did little to put my fears at rest. My impression was that the Commission felt the national interest dictated a finding that Oswald was guilty and acted as "a loner." All witnesses and evidence that pointed toward this seemed to be accepted and all witnesses and evidence to the contrary seemed to be ignored or discounted.

I was thus gratified to read your statement of November 25 in which you endorsed the findings of the Commission. Your professional reputation behind these findings was reassuring.

I should be much more reassured if you and F.B.I. professionals would view and report to the Nation on the autopsy pictures and x-rays. It is my understanding that these are now available for inspection to proper investigative agencies.

At 4:15 p.m. today above-captioned telephoned from New York and talked with me. He said CBS is exploring the possibility of making a television program concerning the Warren Commission Report. One of the areas to be televised is that relating to the firing of the murder weapon by a competent expert to demonstrate pictorially the time element in the firing of three shots, etc. He asked that Special Agent Robert Frazier, whose testimony appears in the Warren Commission Report, be made available for this purpose.

ACTION TAKEN

I told Lister this would not be possible. He then asked that other personnel from our FBI Laboratory be made available, or other experts in this and other areas of investigation and laboratory examination - all in connection with the Warren Commission report and the FBI investigation of the assassination. I told Mr. Lister that we absolutely could not be of any assistance to him and could not make these men available.

Dear Mr. Hoover,

Recently I have come across many books and articles by critics of the Warren Report who feel that the inconsistancies and contradictions warrant the re-opening of the investigation.

Many of the critic's speculations point out the contradictions between the F.B.I. Summary report and the doctors autopsy report. It is this critisism which leads many critics to believe that thier was the possibility of another assassin.

Why Sir, doesn't the Warren Report include the F.B.I. Summary Report of 12-9-63 or the F.B.I. Supplemental Report of 1-13-64? It is understandable, in my opinion, that the commission chose to disagree with the F.B.I. reports, but it is not understandable to me and other critics as to why the F.B.I. reports, which included the autopsy, was not covered and included in the Report or the 26 volumes of testimony.

It appears to me that the F.B.I. believes in its Summary Report and does not believe the commissions conclusions. The answer to this question by the F.B.I. would either clear the air of much confusion or create a furor (deservedly so) until the whole truth was known.

I also feel that it is your duty to inform the American public whether or not the F.B.I. Summary Report was a logical mistake. (which I happen to believe it was -- concidering the circumstances)

Following are the two quotes which I feel have created much doubt in the minds of many people:

"---Dr. Humes states that the pattern was clear that the one bullet had entered the Presidents back and had worked its way out of the body during external cardiac message ---" F.B.I. Supplemental Report 1-13-64

"The missile contused the strap musceles of the right side of the neck damaged the trackea and made its exit through the anterior surface of the neck." Warren Commission Report, Appendix IX, Page 543

A reply to this letter would be greatly appreciated.

MR. TOLSON:

Marvin Watson called me from the White House at 12:45 p.m. today [redacted]

Watson referred to the assassination of President Kennedy and stated that he would appreciate receiving, on plain paper, any "trends" which indicated that a specific group, including the Communist Party, was back of the attacks on the Warren Commission. He stated that the President in giving him these instructions had told him that he, the President, had specifically noted that a number of individuals of left-wing beliefs had made denunciations of the Warren Commission.

Watson advised that the President would also like to have anything in FBI files which would reflect the immediate reaction of the Soviet Union following the assassination and any reactions noted since then concerning the assassination. He stated the President had told him that he had seen somewhere a newspaper article reporting that a member of the French Government had recently denounced the assassination investigation. Watson stated that if we could find this news clipping we should furnish the President anything we had in our files concerning the matter.

Watson raised the question as to whether the FBI was investigating the leak of information by the Presidential Crime Commission to the "New York Times." I told him we were not, that no one had requested such an investigation. He asked if one should be conducted. I told him this was entirely up to him and the President, however, he should know that such investigations were usually a waste of time, particularly when you considered that Fred Graham of the "New York Times" to whom the information had been

Watson stated he agreed thoroughly and if the President raised the issue once again, he would try to talk him out of it.

ACTION:

2. The Crime Records Division will check news clippings concerning the French Government official who allegedly made a recent statement concerning the assassination.

3. The Domestic Intelligence Division will prepare a memorandum on plain paper concerning all these matters so that this memorandum can be furnished to Watson in connection with his request.

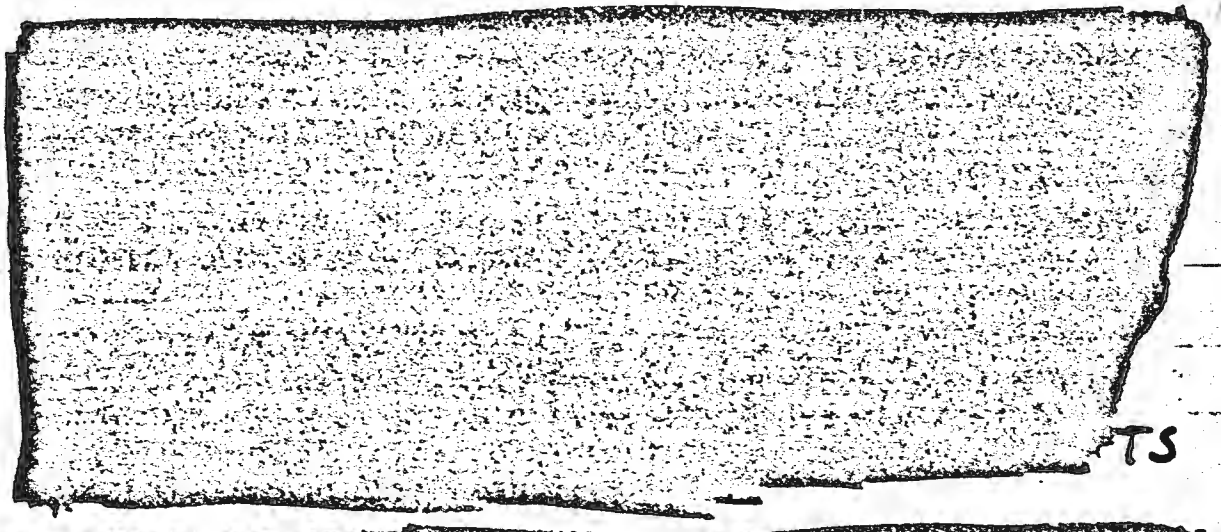
REACTION OF SOVIET AND COMMUNIST PARTY OFFICIALS TO THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY



The position of the Communist Party, USA, toward the Warren Commission Report was clearly set forth in the October 11, 1964, issue of "The Worker," an East Coast communist newspaper. In an article captioned "Warren Report Brushes Off Ultra-Rightist Conspiracy," it was stated that the Warren Report gives comparatively very little space to the material that came before it indicating that a "Right-wing conspiracy" was in the making and that Oswald was a "Left-painted" undercover instrument of such forces or of a Government agency. The article further stated that even the limited material which the Warren Commission has put into the record on the Rightist conspiracy that was in progress is an important contribution and provides a basis for further investigation.

No information has been developed indicating any of the so-called communist "splinter groups," such as the Progressive Labor Party, Socialist Workers Party or the Workers World Party, have planned or instituted any concerted effort or drive to discredit or attack the Warren Commission. Official publications of these organizations have from time to time contained isolated articles which have been critical of the Warren Commission. For example,

At the request of the Laboratory, Bishop in my office telephonically contacted the above individual on 12/15/66 after he had attempted to contact Special Agent Lyndal L. Shaneyfelt, Bureau Laboratory, in order to arrange to interview him.

Friedman advised that he desired to conduct an interview with Shaneyfelt in order to question him concerning certain of his testimony before the Warren Commission. He stated that he desired to do this "in order to clear up some points in the testimony of Shaneyfelt."

Friedman was advised by Bishop that all of Shaneyfelt's investigations and examinations made in connection with the FBI's investigation into the assassination had been completely reported to the Warren Commission and that no purpose would be served by his interviewing Shaneyfelt.

Friedman stated that he understood.

SUBJECT: JOSEPH F. LEHNAU
NORTH BRUNSWICK, NEW JERSEY

Joseph F. Lehnau, North Brunswick, New Jersey, under date of 11-21-66 wrote the Director calling attention to the program "Open Mind" on which he heard the FBI referred to in what he felt were unflattering terms during a discussion on the Warren Commission. Lehnau expressed a great respect for the FBI because of its accomplishments through the years, and he was distressed over the impression given by the show that members of the FBI are stupid, do not know how to write a report and do not get paid for so doing, that they were not competent to get medical facts correctly from doctors. He asked if the Director was going to ignore this smear. Bufiles contain no references identifiable with correspondent.

In view of the controversy being stimulated over the Warren Commission report, it is anticipated we will receive numerous similar inquiries. The material released to the press on 11-25-66 setting forth the Director's position in connection with our investigation into the assassination of President Kennedy and the Warren Commission reports certainly are the best answer possible to inquiries of this nature, and it is believed Lehnau's letter, and similar ones, can best be acknowledged by enclosing the Director's statement.

RECOMMENDATIONS:

1. That the attached letter enclosing the Director's statement be sent to Lehnau.

SUBJECT: WARREN COMMISSION RECORDS

On 12/21/66 Mr. Paul Fairbanks, Office of Security, General Services Administration (GSA), advised Liaison Supervisor Bartlett as follows:

In December, 1964, the Warren Commission sent its records to the Archives. Immediately following this, GSA picked up the furniture and fixtures used by the Warren Commission and took them to a storage warehouse in Washington.

Inadvertently, one filing cabinet containing three cubic feet of Warren Commission records was included along with the other furniture for storage. This cabinet remained untouched in the GSA warehouse until 11/22/66 when it was discovered that the cabinet contained some records. The Security Office of GSA was immediately contacted and the records were taken to the Archives where they will remain. Archives, after looking these records over, have advised GSA that these records appear to have been the official records of Alfreeda Scobey, a member of the Warren Commission staff. Among memoranda and other working papers, three investigative reports of the FBI were located. Archives indicate these corresponded with Commission documents 76, 78, and 997. Archives point out that these three documents have previously been withheld from research by the FBI. This means that these reports will not be made available for review.

GSA indicates that the original mistake was probably made by the Warren Commission staff when the cabinet containing the records was sent to storage rather than to the Archives. GSA further advised that apparently no harm has come as a result of this mistake which has now been rectified by placing the records in the proper hands.

FROM: C. D. DeLoach

SUBJECT: WILLIAM MANCHESTER
AUTHOR OF KENNEDY BOOK TO BE PUBLISHED IN 1969
APPOINTMENT WITH DIRECTOR, 10:10 A.M., 6-4-64

By appointment, I introduced William Manchester, who has been commissioned by Mrs. John F. Kennedy to write a book concerning the four days surrounding the assassination and funeral of the late President, to the Director at 10:10 a.m., today in the Director's Office.

Mr. Manchester first thanked the Director for seeing him. He explained that he had already seen approximately 90 people, principally in Washington; however had not yet gone to Dallas, Texas, inasmuch as Chief Justice Warren felt that he should not conduct interviews in Dallas until after the Warren Commission report had been issued.

In instituting a series of questions to the Director, Mr. Manchester first inquired as to what the Director was doing on November 22, 23, 24 and 25, 1963. Manchester added that he would first like to start with November 22, 1963, at the precise moment the Director first received the news that the President had been shot. The Director replied that he had just returned from lunch. This was approximately 1:10 p.m. A news item was brought in to him reflecting the President had been shot. The Director immediately called the Attorney General who was at his home dining with the U. S. Attorney from New York, Mr. Morgenthau. The Director advised the Attorney General that a news announcement had been made that the President had been wounded. The Director stated he next talked to the SAC of our Office in Dallas, Texas. He was informed that the President had been wounded and had been taken to the Parkland Memorial Hospital. The SAC also advised that Governor Connally had been shot and was now in the emergency room with Kennedy at the same hospital. Mrs. Kennedy and Mrs. Connally, who were riding in the same car, had not been hit. The SAC told the Director that it appeared that the shots had come from an upper story window of the Texas Book Depository Building.

DeLoach to Mohr 6-4-64
Re: William Manchester, Author of Kennedy Book
To Be Published in 1969
Appointment with Director, 10:10 a.m., 6-4-64

The Dallas Office additionally advised the Director shortly after 2:00 p.m. that day that the President had died. The Director immediately called the Attorney General once again and told him of the death of his brother. At this time the Director inquired as to whether the Attorney General planned to go to Dallas. The Director stated that he had advised the Attorney General that if such plans were in the making he would facilitate his departure and arrival. The Director told Manchester that shortly thereafter our Dallas Office called once again to indicate that the President's body would be immediately flown back to Washington and that the Vice President had already been sworn in as President. The Director later called the Attorney General once again and told him that the FBI was moving into the investigation. The Director advised Manchester that the FBI took this action despite the fact that there was no law making it a Federal violation to assassinate the President.

At this point the Director gave Manchester a brief history of the assassination of SAC Shanahan in Chicago, Illinois, in the middle 1920's. There was no Federal law against assaulting or murdering an FBI Agent at that time. The Director told Manchester he initiated action to make it a Federal crime to assault or kill an FBI Agent so that proper action could be taken in Federal court rather than a local court in such matters.

The Director told Manchester that if the FBI had taken custody of Lee Harvey Oswald, Jr., Oswald would never have been killed by Jack Ruby. The Director stated that the murder of Oswald by Ruby naturally gave rise to considerable speculation and rumor. All of this could have been avoided had the Dallas police taken proper action to protect Oswald.

The Director told Manchester that the FBI immediately entered the case, despite non-jurisdiction, and that we interviewed Oswald as soon as he was made available. The Director stated that on the evening of November 22, 1963, at approximately 7:25 p.m., President Johnson called him at his home and requested that the FBI take complete charge of the case involving the assassination. The Director stated he advised the President that the FBI had already entered the case and that we would, of course, go all out in this matter. The Director also told the President that he was concerned about the great amount of publicity coming out of Dallas.

The Director then told Manchester that the Dallas police had given out considerable information received as a result of FBI findings, particularly from our Laboratory. He added that on the 4th or 5th day following the assassination he instructed our SAC in Dallas to contact Chief of Police Curry and order him to make no further statements to the press with respect to the evidence or investigation surrounding the assassination. The Director told Manchester that this Chief of Police could have told him to go to hell; however, he had recognized the obvious necessity and logic of such instructions and had complied. The Director explained to Manchester at some length the necessity to keep physical evidence confined prior to the prosecution of an individual.

The Director told Manchester that on Saturday evening, November 23, 1963, our Dallas Office had received an anonymous telephone call indicating that plans had been made to murder Oswald when he was removed from the Dallas City Jail. The FBI informed the Dallas Chief of Police immediately. The Director told Manchester that original plans for removal of Oswald had been made for 10:00 p.m. that Saturday night. The Chief of Police, however, changed these plans by acceding to the pressure of the press that Oswald be removed at a convenient time so that communications media could cover the event. Our Dallas Office again called the Dallas Police Department on Sunday morning, November 24, 1963, and reminded that Department of the same anonymous telephone call. At that time the Chief of Police assured our Dallas Office that all precautions were being taken to protect Oswald.

The Director informed Manchester that following the President's call at 7:25 p.m., November 22, 1963, he gave specific instructions that the FBI do everything possible to thoroughly investigate this case. The Director stated that additional personnel were immediately sent to Dallas. He told Manchester this was necessary inasmuch as our Dallas Office and FBI Headquarters, as well as other offices, received hundreds and hundreds of phone calls, telegrams and letters setting forth leads in this case.

Manchester inquired as to whether the Director placed any significance to the anonymous phone call concerning the plan to murder Oswald. The Director replied that we had no way of knowing at the time whether any importance should be attached or not; however, we did have the responsibility to immediately notify the Dallas police, which we did.

The Director characterized Jack Ruby as somewhat of a "police buff." As a result of his friendship with a number of police officers he had easy accessibility to the Dallas Police Department. The Director stated that he did not know whether Ruby's reported insanity was of the sincere or faked type inasmuch as we were not psychiatrists. He stated that Ruby had given the excuse that he had killed Oswald because of his obvious affection for the late President and the fact that he wanted to prevent any further sorrow to Mrs. Kennedy inasmuch as she would necessarily have to return to Dallas and testify against Oswald.

Manchester inquired as to the exact location of the Director at the time Oswald was killed on Sunday, November 24, 1963. The Director replied that he was at home. He stated that the Dallas Office contacted him immediately following this event. Manchester inquired as to the Director's immediate reaction. The Director replied that his first thought was how such an event could take place, particularly under a system of civilized justice. The Director added that he had ordered an immediate check on Jack Ruby and particularly to ascertain if there had been a relationship between Ruby and Oswald.

Manchester inquired as to whether the Director was watching television at the time of Oswald's murder. The Director replied in the negative. He stated he was working on official papers at the time. The Director added that he usually saved Sundays to review lengthy documents and memoranda as well as to prepare himself for interviews, hearings, etc.

Manchester inquired as to what the Director was doing on Friday morning, November 22, 1963, prior to the assassination. The Director replied that he was conducting business as usual, that he had had a number of interviews that particular morning.

Manchester inquired as to the physical location of the wire service ticker machine. He was told that it is located across the hall and that pertinent wire service items are brought in to the Director immediately.

The Director told Manchester that his first conversation on November 22, 1963, with our Dallas Office occurred at approximately 1:48 p.m. The Director was advised at that time that the President was not believed to be dead yet but that he had suffered a mortal wound. The Director mentioned that on the occasion of his second call to the Attorney General, the Attorney General had indicated that he had also been in touch with a number of the Presidential Staff and had been informed of a number of details concerning the shooting and the fact that the President had died.

Manchester inquired as to the Director's opinion of the Attorney General's reaction upon being informed that the President had been shot. The Director replied that the Attorney General had been silent for a few moments and had then requested that the Director keep him informed of any further facts received concerning this matter. The Director told Manchester that the Attorney General is usually very quiet in manner until he has all the necessary facts of a given situation. The Director stated that the Attorney General was not the explosive type unless he became angry.

Appointment With Director, 10:10 a.m., 6-4-64

Manchester told the Director that the President's call to the Director at 7:25 p.m., November 22, 1963, appeared to be one of the first calls that the President made upon returning to Washington that evening. The Director replied that he would surmise that this was correct. The Director added that our investigation proceeded forthwith; however, it was not until Monday or Tuesday of the following week that the President decided to name a Presidential Commission to look into the assassination. The Director told Manchester that an FBI report had been sent to the Warren Commission within ten days after the President had set up this body. The Director stated that he personally had appeared before the Warren Commission and that he considered their questioning of him to be quite thorough. He stated that thoroughness was necessary on the part of the Commission inasmuch as this would serve to assist in quelling gossip and speculation in the future. The Director quickly added, however, that rumors will continue concerning this case, especially in Europe where there is widespread gossip concerning a supposed conspiracy, for many years.

The Director told Manchester that the statement that some of the information may be withheld by the Warren Commission naturally gave rise to further rumor. Manchester replied that he could understand the Chief Justice's statement in this regard inasmuch as not just any individual should be allowed to look at the classified material sent to the Commission by some agencies. The Director replied that the issue in point is such that excessive precautions of security is unwise. The Director explained that he had never been a great believer in wasteful precautions or going overboard regarding excessive security. He stated that an item is either classified or else it isn't classified. The Director gave examples of leaks in Government that have given several Presidents extreme cause and worry. He stated that the FBI is usually called upon to investigate these leaks, however, newspapermen naturally do not desire to reveal their sources. The Director stated that if newspapermen did reveal such sources that quite naturally the sources would dry up.

Manchester inquired of the Director as to whether the assassination case became one of major concern following the President's call at 7:25 p.m., November 22, 1963. The Director stated that as he had previously indicated, the FBI had already entered this case. He added, however, that after the President's call we went all out in doing such things as working around the clock, sending a Washington-based FBI official to Dallas and adding approximately 30 Agents to the Dallas personnel complement. The Director stated that we still have at least 50 men who are tied up in running down leads on this particular case throughout the FBI's service. He stated that this case will never be closed from an investigative point of view inasmuch as we will continually receive leads, many from mental cases, which necessarily have to be checked out.

Appointment with Director, 10:10 a.m., 6-4-64

Manchester asked if the matter of a President being assassinated not being a Federal crime had ever been discussed fully by the Congress, or anyone else, according to the Director's knowledge. The Director replied that there had been no discussion to any extent. He stated the matter had just never been considered.

Manchester inquired as to whether the FBI had prior material on Oswald before the assassination. The Director replied that we did have some information regarding Oswald, however, it was quite flimsy in nature. The Director then explained at some length the background of Oswald. He told Manchester of the press releases that Oswald made in Moscow. He told Manchester of Oswald's employment in a factory in Minsk, Russia, and of the fact that Oswald had later returned to Moscow. The Director stated that he certainly did not understand why the Department of State had failed to have Oswald sign an affidavit forfeitting his American citizenship at the time Oswald returned to Moscow and visited the U. S. Embassy. Manchester spoke up and stated that the State Department claimed they had wanted to find out if Oswald had committed an extraditable crime in the Soviet Union, therefore, no signed affidavit was taken from him. The Director again deplored the failure to have such an affidavit executed.

The Director continued that we had interviewed Oswald within two or three days following his arrival in the United States. He explained that we, of course, desired to find out if Oswald had been recruited as an intelligence agent by the Soviet Union. The Director told Manchester that this did not appear to be true. He added that Oswald had classified himself as a Marxist rather than a communist. The Director added that Oswald had later been interviewed in New Orleans after getting into a street squabble with anti-Castroites over leaflets being handed out by Oswald. The Director told Manchester that Oswald could best be termed a "loner." He explained Oswald's communications with the Communist Party in the United States but added that Oswald had never joined the Party. The Director told of the incidents surrounding Oswald's attempt to kill General Walker in Dallas. He added that Oswald's wife, Marina, had advised us of this incident following the assassination. The Director summarized this part of the interview by indicating there appeared to be nothing in Oswald's background which would reflect that he was a man of violence and most certainly nothing which indicated that Oswald had any intentions of assassinating the President.

Manchester asked if the Director did not find it odd that Mrs. Oswald had failed to tell anyone about the attempted assassination of General Walker until after the murder of President Kennedy. The Director replied that he did not find this odd in view of the cold relationship between Oswald and his wife, the language barrier on the part of Mrs. Oswald and the fact that Mrs. Oswald did not have the natural instincts of an American woman but to the contrary had a different attitude altogether. He stated he placed no significance in Mrs. Oswald's failure to advise of this incident prior to the assassination.

Re: William Manchester, Author of Kennedy Book

Appointment with Director, 10:10 a.m., 6-4-64

The Director told Manchester that it was extremely difficult to speculate on the motivations of Oswald to kill the President. The Director stated it was entirely possible Oswald may have wanted to kill Governor John Connally. He explained that Oswald had written communications to Governor Connally protesting his particular type of discharge from the U. S. Marine Corps. The Director added that President Kennedy was an intellectual liberal type. He stated that President Kennedy had been desirous of keeping peace with honor. He stated that President Kennedy desired peaceful co-existence --American style. The Director added that the President, although he had been firm in his dealings with Khrushchev, had a fairly good relationship with Khrushchev and the Soviet Union. The Director summed up by stating that Oswald could not have desired to kill the President because the President had dealt harshly, or spoken harshly, against the Communist Party and Chairman Khrushchev.

Manchester speculated that perhaps the communists, including Oswald, did not like the relationship between the late President and Khrushchev; therefore, the communists desired to do away with President Kennedy so that this obstacle to their desired philosophy could be removed. The Director replied that this was entirely possible; however, he wanted Manchester to clearly understand that Khrushchev was not a person to be trusted and that Chairman Khrushchev had a very cold and evil mind. The Director, at this point, gave examples of Khrushchev's understanding of the English language despite the fact that he had Troyanovsky, an excellent interpreter, with him at all times while on his visits to the United States. The Director told Manchester that he had always felt it better to kick individuals like Khrushchev on the shins once in a while rather than to boot-lick them. The Director explained that Khrushchev was basically an oriental and that individuals opposing orientals usually lost face in the oriental's opinion when fear or trepidation was shown.

Manchester inquired as to whether the Director's duties and responsibilities allowed him to participate personally in the funeral ceremonies. The Director replied in the negative. He stated he had been at his desk constantly. He added that he had issued instructions that FBI personnel participate officially in the ceremonies by assisting Secret Service as much as possible. The Director spoke of the many visiting foreign dignitaries and of the dangers involved in the march from the White House to St. Matthew's Cathedral. He told Manchester that over 40 Special Agents had been assigned to assist Secret Service, particularly at St. Matthew's Cathedral. He further told Manchester that the authority to protect the President was clearly a function of the Secret Service; however, since the assassination we have assisted when called upon. The Director briefly advised Manchester at this point of the immediate widespread ramifications of this case following the actual shooting. He told Manchester that leads had spread to Mexico as well as throughout the entire United States. Therefore, it has been necessary for him personally to remain at his desk so as to supervise this matter.

At this point I reminded Manchester of his previous statement to me that he had to be at the White House at 11:15 a.m. Manchester thanked the Director twice upon his departure and stated that he was very appreciative of the Director's cooperation and considerable time taken from a busy schedule to be of assistance.

ACTION:

The Director may desire to send the Attorney General the attached letter indicating that he had seen Manchester.

PUBLIC DISCLOSURE OF
WARREN COMMISSION RECORDS

Our letter dated August 10, 1965, forwarded to you copies of our memorandum of the same date which set forth the results of our review of certain material contained in the Warren Commission's Numbered Document File at the National Archives. The purpose of our review was to reach a determination under guidelines approved on April 19, 1965, by the Honorable McGeorge Bundy, then Special Assistant to the President, as to which of the documents may be made available to the public.

At the time of our review, certain of the documents in the Commission's Numbered Document File were missing and, accordingly, we were unable to reach a determination as to the public disclosure of those documents.

On December 30, 1966, Mr. John F. Simmons of the staff of Dr. James B. Rhoads, Deputy Archivist of the United States, advised that Commission Document Number 304 had been located in the files of National Archives. This Document consists of a letter from this Bureau to the President's Commission dated January 23, 1964, and two memoranda attached thereto which deal with a phonograph record which was issued and distributed by the Defensive Legion of Registered Americans, Incorporated (DLRA). The record is narrated by Herbert R. (Walley) Butterworth, Executive Secretary of such organization.

For your information, we have no objection to this Document being placed in the public domain.

Dr. James B. Rhoads is being informed of the foregoing.

RE: PUBLIC DISCLOSURE OF
WARREN COMMISSION RECORDS

NOTE:

The phonograph record mentioned above which was described in our letter to the President's Commission on 1-23-64 was made available to our Atlanta Office during our investigation of the assassination. The DLRA was organized in Atlanta in 1962 reportedly for the purpose of opposing communism, marxism, Mongrelism, and so forth. The organization has been active in distributing anti-Jewish and anti-Negro phonograph records and literature. The record mentioned in Document Number 304 makes a number of wild allegations in connection with the assassination and is extremely anti-Jewish and anti-Negro throughout. It attempts to show that "the communist-Jewish conspiracy" was responsible for the assassination and subsequent events. It is also critical of the FBI for not trailing Oswald in Dallas prior to the assassination. The record is narrated by Butterworth who in 1962 was Public Relations Director of the United Klans of America. Butterworth has a long record of Ku Klux Klan activity.

Under the guidelines established by the White House, there is no reason for this Document not to be placed in the public domain. This determination was coordinated with Supervisor J. W. Hines of the General Investigative Division and Supervisor Robert E. Lenihan of the Domestic Intelligence Division.

I am preparing a broadcast report on the Warren Report and the various criticisms of it. Much of the criticism is based on analysizes of the Abraham Zapruder motion picture film. So that I may present an accurate report would you please answer two questions for me:

1. What was Zapruder's exact location when he shot the film?

2. At what speed did Zapruder shoot his film?

(The Warren Report indicated that it was 18.6 frames per second. But, in his book "Whitewash II" Harold Weisberg quotes two FBI reports fixing the speed variously at: 24, 22, and 17.6 frames per second.)

Also, if possible, I would appreciate a brief statement from you on the Warren Report and the various attacks on it. Are you convinced that the evidence presented by the Report supports the conclusion that Oswald acted alone in the crime?

Thank you very much for your kind cooperation.

SUBJECT: EDWARD KERN
EDITOR, LIFE MAGAZINE;
REQUEST TO INTERVIEW BUREAU EMPLOYEE
RE FINDINGS OF WARREN COMMISSION

At 11:10 AM on 1/11/67, Bishop in my office received a telephone call from Edward Kern who stated he was an editor for "Life" magazine in New York City, but was calling locally from the National Airport. He advised he was conducting a "long range investigation of the findings of the Warren Commission," and wanted to interview the Bureau Laboratory examiner who had conducted a spectrographic examination of bullet fragments found in the assassination car. He stated he particularly wanted to know if such an examination was made by the examiner and also desired to ask him "technical" questions concerning the examination. He advised that the testimony of SA Robert A. Frazier of the FBI Laboratory as reported in the Warren Commission Report reflects that the spectrographic examination of these bullet fragments had been made, but he was unable to find the Laboratory results in the material available in Archives.

BACKGROUND

A spectrographic examination was made by SA John F. Gallagher of the FBI Laboratory of bullet fragments found in the assassination car, in the head of the President, and in the wrist of Governor Connally. The results of this examination were incorporated into a Laboratory report which was furnished to the Chief of Police at Dallas under date of 11/23/63, with copies designated for the SAC at Dallas. The results of the Laboratory report are incorporated into an investigative report of the assassination submitted by the Dallas Office. The Laboratory examination reflected that the lead metal in all the fragments are similar in composition.

Hon. J. Edgar Hoover
Federal Bureau of Investigation
Washington, D.C.

Dear Edgar:

You probably don't remember me but I was at Central High School while you were there and I remember you very well, particularly your drilling the cadets out on O Street in the broiling sun, and I have followed your career with great interest. I was in Sigma Lambda, and in later years was a neighbor to Dutch Acorn. I'm telling you these bits to identify myself.

I have read the Warren Report, and I believe that it is a fine piece of white wash and an insult to the intelligence of anyone who is interested enough in his Country to read it. I would like to know from you why in the Supplemental Report from your office which was written after all autopsy information was available, was no mention made of the "super bullet" which went thru the Presisent then thru Governor, and then out in almost perfeft condition an onto the stretcher of Governor Connolly, and while that report maintained that your agents who were present until the President's body was taken to Gawler's, saw a wound in the shoulder, and not the back of the neck. I have also read in the report testimony or evidence gathered by your Bureau that was completely disregarded by the Commission and their amateur investigators.

I believe in the integrity of the F.B.I. and particularly in your integrity. It is one thing that I hope we can believe in, but I read the Commission's twisting the words of your witnesses, and asking leading questions that could not elicit any response other than the one they wished to hear. I wish that it were possible for your Bureau to pursue the investigation, possibly for a Congressional committee, for I am completely dissatisfied with the conclusions of the Warren Commission, and I believe that if a Presidential commission can put a hoax like the Warren Commission on the American people, anything can be put over.

This leads me to another item for your attention and assistance. I am definitely opposed to the Consular proposal for the Communists, and I hope that you will continue to bring your influence to bear in the Congress. I saw Dorothy Healy on television last night, and she is definitely committed to the overthrow of our form of Gernment, by force if necessary, and brazenly said so on the air. She also ran for tax assessor out here last spring, and polled eighty-six thousand votes. In spite of her avowed stand in opposition to our Government, her son was given a Federal grant for his education of $6,400. Who is responsible for that?

You and I are each approaching the end of the line, but I love my Country. I am sure that you do, and many of the things that have happened and are happening are disquieting, and as long as I am able I shall protest secrecy and underhandedne on the part of those in authority.

SUBJECT: APPEARANCE OF WILLIAM MANCHESTER ON THE TELEVISION PROGRAM "MEET THE PRESS" ON 2-12-67

Captioned individual, who is the author of the book, "The Death of a President," appeared on the television program "Meet the Press" on 2-12-67 and was interviewed with respect to his forthcoming book.

In answer to questions posed during the course of the program, he stated substantially as follows:

Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy commissioned him to write the book as she wished to have a complete chronicle of the events that transpired on the occasion of the assassination of President Kennedy. He feels that the historical value of the book lies in the fact that he has been in a position to interview individuals closely connected with the tragedy before time has dimmed their memory of pertinent events.

He does not feel that he has broken any agreement with the Kennedys with respect to a publication date, although it was originally decided to publish the book in 1968. Manchester's purpose in publishing the book at the present time is to avoid any effect it may conceivably have upon the Presidential election in 1968. He also stated that Senator Robert Kennedy had clearly indicated to Marquis Childs, a newspaper columnist, that the old agreement had been "washed out."

Manchester was never employed or received any financial remuneration with respect to writing the book and the terms governing its publication were established in a written "memorandum" signed by Robert F. Kennedy and him. He stated that he would have prepared a document legally more binding and definitive if he had it to do again.

M. A. Jones to Wick Memo
RE: APPEARANCE OF WILLIAM MANCHESTER

Although he regards his book to be historically sound and objective, he admitted to deleting what he regarded as unfit material furnished to him by Mrs. Kennedy during his ten hour interview with her. The purpose is to avoid possible embarassment or further suffering to her.

Manchester unequivocally stated that he does not believe Robert F. Kennedy was politically motivated in releasing him from the original agreement to publish the book during 1968, nor does he regard his book as hostile to President Johnson. He feels the American public will recognize that President Johnson was not unfairly dealt with in his publication as he regards the President to have acted admirably throughout the whole period immediately following the assassination of President Kennedy.

He maintained that he had not seen any photographs depicting President Kennedy's male aids present during the swearing in of President Johnson. He continued to maintain that Kenneth O'Donnell had been described to him by several eyewitnesses as walking the corridor outside the room aboard the plane in which President Johnson was sworn in.

Manchester stated that he accepts the Warren Commission Report of the assassination as a valid finding of what occurred. He felt, however, that Marina Oswald was treated too gently in her appearance before the Commission and could have shed more light upon Oswald's activities. Of all the people connected with the assassination he had approached for an interview, she was the one person who declined to see him. He does not believe any reason exists to reopen the inquiry into the assassination of President Kennedy.

No mention of the FBI was made during the course of Manchester's appearance before this panel.

Dear Mr. Buschert:

Your letter of February 6th has been received.

In response to your inquiry, I sent the following letter to a citizen on December 14, 1965:

"Reference is made to your letter dated December 6, 1965, to Special Agent Lyndal L. Shaneyfelt regarding the labeling of two of the Zapruder frames numbers 314 and 315 of Commission Exhibit 885 in Volume 18 of the 'Hearings Before the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy.'

"You are correct in the observation that frames labeled 314 and 315 of Commission Exhibit 885 are transposed in Volume 18 as noted in your letter. This is a printing error and does not exist in the actual Commission Exhibit. For your information the slides from which Commission Exhibit 885 was prepared are correctly numbered and are being shown in their correct sequence.

"The National Archives is aware of this printing error; however, I do appreciate your interest in this matter."

Re: Recent interview in Playboy magazine

Dear Mr. Hoover:

I have just finished reading the February 1967 issue of Playboy magazine which contains an interview with Mark Lane. This concerns the assassination of President Kennedy and the Warren Commission report, of course.

On page 46 of the interview Playboy quotes from a letter offered them by Mr. Lane which purports to be from you or, at least, under your authorship. It would seem completely absurd to assume that Mr. Lane would attempt to deceive Playboy, which is very widely read, by submiting a document which were not correct.

As you will note I am forwarding copy of my letter to you to Playboy and what I wish is, first, a copy of the letter which you submitted to Mr. Lane's investigators that I might read it in its entirety or, if such is not possible then, second, confirmation that the quote is correct.

The statement ascribed to your letter is:

"Your are correct in the observation that frames labeled 314 and 315 of Commission Exhibit 885 are transposed in Volume 18 as noted in your letter."

Thanking you in advance -

Yours truly,

ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT
JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY
NOVEMBER 22, 1963
DALLAS, TEXAS

The Sunday editions of two Washington, D. C., newspapers for February 19, 1967, carried articles indicating that District Attorney Jim Garrison in New Orleans, Louisiana, is conducting an investigation of the assassination of the late President John Fitzgerald Kennedy. Allegedly Garrison claims that the Warren Commission Report is inaccurate in stating Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in the assassination of President Kennedy.

Enclosed is a memorandum which sets forth a concise summary of the results of our investigation of Lee Harvey Oswald from April, 1963, when he returned to New Orleans from Dallas, Texas, until September, 1963, when he traveled to Mexico City, Mexico. Also set forth is information in our files concerning District Attorney Garrison and data concerning Miguel Torres and David William Ferrie who are mentioned in those newspaper articles.

Additional pertinent information concerning this matter that comes to our attention will be immediately furnished to you.

This data is also being furnished to the Honorable Marvin Watson, Special Assistant to the President.

THE ASSASSINATION OF
PRESIDENT JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY
NOVEMBER 22, 1963
DALLAS, TEXAS

BACKGROUND:

The Sunday editions of the "Washington Post" and the "Washington Evening Star" for February 18, 1967, carried articles indicating that District Attorney Jim Garrison in New Orleans was conducting an investigation of the assassination and was claiming that the Warren Commission Report is inaccurate in stating Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in the assassination of President Kennedy. Garrison did not furnish details of his investigation to the press but stated that arrests will be made, charges will be filed, and convictions will be obtained.

The newspaper articles indicated that Miguel Torres, a 26-year-old Cuban who formerly lived only a block from Oswald's last known New Orleans address "is known to be connected with the District Attorney's investigation." The "Washington Evening Star" article also reported that David William Ferrie, part-time private investigator and operator of a New Orleans flying service, informed the press that the District Attorney's Office informed him it had "positively uncovered a plot in New Orleans to assassinate Kennedy."

DATA REGARDING GARRISON:

Bureau files reveal James C. Garrison was a former Bureau Agent who entered on duty 3/5/51 and resigned 7/24/51 for military purposes. His services were listed as satisfactory. He took office as District Attorney in New Orleans in May, 1962, and immediately became involved in a dispute with the New Orleans Police Department over his professed desire to clean up the so-called "minor vice" in New Orleans. In November, 1962, Garrison accused eight judges of delaying justice in New Orleans which resulted in the judges filing a defamation suit against Garrison. He was found guilty of such charges on 2/6/63 and was fined $1,000. He appealed his conviction and on 11/24/64 the U.S. Supreme Court reversed the conviction holding that the element of deliberate malice was lacking in the statements attributed to Garrison regarding the judges in New Orleans. [redacted] a reliable source, has informed the New Orleans Office that Garrison is politically ambitious and plans to run for Lieutenant Governor in Louisiana during the Fall of 1967.

ALLEGATIONS OF CONSPIRACY IN NEW ORLEANS:

During the course of our investigation of the assassination, we received a number of allegations indicating Oswald was in contact with Cuban or pro-Castro Cubans in New Orleans. Each allegation was very carefully and thoroughly run out and we found no evidence of any contact between Oswald and pro-Cuban sources in New Orleans. Furthermore, our investigation uncovered no evidence indicating Fidel Castro or officials of the Cuban Government were involved with Lee Harvey Oswald in the assassination of President Kennedy.

RE: Miguel Torres

During the course of our investigation of the assassination, we developed no information indicating acquaintanceship or contact between Oswald and Miguel Torres, mentioned above. On 10/25/62 we received information from a U.S. Customs investigator in New Orleans that Miguel Torres, his father, mother, and two brothers were all in his opinion pro-Castro in their beliefs and reportedly had a short-wave radio in their home for the purpose of receiving Cuban broadcasts. (105-117817) We initiated investigation of Miguel Torres and other members of his family on the basis of such allegations but found no information to corroborate such allegations. Our investigation did disclose that Miguel Torres was an unsavory character who had a criminal record. He was arrested 2/1/59 on an Armed Robbery Charge and was sentenced 10/2/59 for a period of 10 years. On 2/2/61 he was discharged from the Louisiana State Penitentiary. He was arrested again on 9/5/64 by the New Orleans Police Department on burglary charges and was sentenced to nine years in the State Penitentiary at Angola, Louisiana. In September, 1964, he was also arrested for violation of the Federal Narcotics Law and was sentenced on 1/6/65 to three years (sentence to begin after completion of nine years imposed on State charges of burglary).

RE: David William Ferrie

Immediately following the assassination, we received allegations that Ferrie was acquainted with Oswald and was involved in the conspiracy to assassinate President Kennedy. According to sources of the allegations, Ferrie, a qualified pilot, was to fly Oswald from Dallas following the assassination. We conducted extensive investigation of such allegations including interviews of Ferrie. No evidence was found to show that Ferrie knew Oswald or was involved in the assassination.

Memorandum W. A. Branigan to W. C. Sullivan
RE: THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY
62-109060

Our New Orleans Office advised on 2/19/67 that a New Orleans newspaper carried an article on 2/19/67 quoting Ferrie as saying that the Garrison investigation of the assassination in New Orleans is a "big joke." Ferrie reportedly told the New Orleans newspaper that he had been "pegged as the getaway pilot in an elaborate plot to kill President Kennedy. Our New Orleans Office also reported that Ferrie had contacted the New Orleans Office and indicated he planned to take civil action against those accusing him of being involved in a plot to kill President Kennedy.

OBSERVATIONS:

As early as December, 1966, New Orleans advised Garrison was conducting some type of an investigation regarding the assassination. Upon instructions, New Orleans has been following this through reliable and confidential sources. One source with whom we were in contact advised Garrison did not want this information furnished to the FBI.

We do not know what evidence Garrison possesses, if any, corroborating his claim that other individuals besides Oswald were involved in the assassination of President Kennedy. We recognize Garrison is politically ambitious and this may be an attempt by him to keep his name before the public. It is not known what part Miguel Torres plays in Garrison's investigation. However, he may be furnishing information of some type to Garrison in exchange for a reduction in his prison sentence.

In view of Garrison's background and political ambitions, it is not felt we should lend any credence to Garrison's investigation by interviewing him at this time.

ACTION:

Attached are letters to the White House and the Acting Attorney General with copies to the Deputy Attorney General and the Assistant Attorney General, Criminal Division, enclosing a letterhead memorandum setting forth data concerning Garrison's statements to the press and results of our inquiries and file reviews in this matter.

SUBJECT: "PLAYBOY" MAGAZINE
FEBRUARY, 1967, ISSUE

The current "Playboy" contains a lengthy interview of the notorious Mark Lane, author of "Rush to Judgment," a conscienceless attack upon the Warren Commission and its conclusions concerning the assassination of President Kennedy.

A review of Lane's book was made on October 6, 1966, shortly after its issue, and the many false allegations he made about the Bureau and the Commission were refuted in detail. A copy is attached.

The interview is a rehash of the scurrilous and irresponsible charges he made concerning the Warren Commission's conclusions. It is replete with allusions indicating the FBI did not thoroughly investigate the assassination.

He was questioned by the "Playboy" interviewer regarding the comment in his book that the Warren Commission "covered itself with shame" and asked whether or not he was accusing the Commission of lying to the American people. He replied he did not care to say that the Commission lied, but "it did issue a false report." Many of the half-truths, irresponsible statements, and downright lies reflected in his book were repeated in the interview. It does not appear necessary to again analyze these charges.

The current issue of "Playboy" magazine is enclosed.

DALLAS, TEXAS, 11/22/63
MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION CONCERNING

Attached memorandum of 1/26/67, captioned as above, from Mr. W. D. Griffith to Mr. Conrad, concludes by recommending that the Legal Research Unit determine whether the statements made against FBI Laboratory Examiner SA Lyndal L. Shaneyfelt are libelous. For the reasons shown below, the Legal Research Unit concludes that the statements are libelous and that SA Shaneyfelt has a cause of action against the author of Whitewash II.

The statements made in the book definitely are libelous as to any ordinary person. They go far beyond the range of fair criticism and clearly charge, in their total context, that Shaneyfelt is a liar, forger, etc. They provide an ample basis on which the ordinary person could sue for libel, slander or defamation of character as the case may be.

A special problem arises in Shaneyfelt's case, however, because he is a public employee who has come to some public attention as a result of the use of his examinations in the work of the Warren Commission on the assassination of the President. If Shaneyfelt is now a "public official" his case would be determined by a rule different from that used in deciding an action for libel brought by an ordinary person. This rule was laid down clearly by the Supreme Court in New York Times, Inc. v. Sullivan, 376 U. S. 254 (1964), and reads as follows:

ENCLOSURE

A public official is allowed the civil remedy for libel and slander "only if he establishes that the utterance was false and that it was made with knowledge of its falsity or in reckless disregard of whether it was false or true." In other words, a public official may successfully sue for libel or slander only by proving actual malice and this must be proven by showing that the utterance was false and that it was made with knowledge of its falsity or in reckless disregard of whether it was true or false. A public official is held to this stricter standard of proof because the very nature of the position of a public official is such that in a free government a great deal of criticism concerning the official and his conduct of official affairs must be tolerated.

The Supreme Court has not clearly defined the term "public official" for all purposes. As the Court said in Rosenblatt v. Baer, 383 U. S. 75 (1966):

"We remarked in New York Times that we had no occasion to determine how far down into the lower ranks of government employees the 'public official' designation would extend for purposes of this rule, or otherwise to specify categories of persons who would or would not be included."

After the above language, the Court went on, in Rosenblatt v. Baer, to use other qualifying words which we believe clearly indicate that SA Shaneyfelt is not a "public official" for purposes of suit for libel and slander. The Court said, for example:

"It is clear, therefore, that the 'public official' designation applies at the very least to those among the hierarchy of government employees who have, or appear to the public to have, substantial responsibility for or control over the conduct of governmental affairs . . . But a conclusion that the New York Times malice standards apply could not be reached merely because a statement defamatory of some person in government employ catches the public's interest; that conclusion would virtually disregard society's interest in protecting reputations. The employee's position must be one which would invite public scrutiny and discussion of the person holding it, entirely apart from the scrutiny and discussion occasioned by the particular charges in controversy."

From the above language the Legal Research Unit concludes that SA Shaneyfelt is not a "public official" for purposes of the law of libel and slander and that, hence, he is not held to the stricter standard of proof applied to a public official who sues. He is, on the contrary, held only to the ordinary standard of proof which is much easier to meet and which can be amply supported by the defamatory language used in the referenced book.

...YL... ELI
...ND...TION

It is believed, moreover, that even should SA Shaneyfelt be held to be a "public official" for this purpose, the referenced book displays such a reckless disregard for the truth or falsity of charges that are actually false that SA Shaneyfelt probably could recover under even the stricter standard applied to public officials.

There are several policy considerations which are not within the province of the Legal Research Unit but we mention them for such value as they may have in making a decision whether SA Shaneyfelt should bring suit:

(1) The author of the referenced book may be inviting a law suit to obtain publicity and sales for his book.

(2) If the libel in the referenced book is not challenged now, the author may come out with Whitewash III - a book which he is said to be now writing - and make in that book additional statements which are even more libelous than those made here. The danger seems considerable if he is not stopped now.

(3) If SA Shaneyfelt's integrity ever is questioned in court where he appears in his usual capacity as an FBI Laboratory Examiner and challenged with particular reference to the statements made in this book, a bad impression is left, to say the least, if SA Shaneyfelt must reply that he took no action in this case. Many might consider failure to take action as a sort of admission of guilt by both SA Shaneyfelt and the FBI.

(4) As time passes and SA Shaneyfelt is not challenged in court during regular testimony, his claim for damages should be later consider... action in this case is considerably weakened.

ASSASSINATION OF
PRESIDENT JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY
DALLAS, TEXAS, 11/22/63
MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION CONCERNING

The most recent book by Harold Weisberg entitled "Whitewash II - The FBI - Secret Service Coverup" is highly critical of the Bureau and specifically of the testimony of FBI Laboratory Examiner SA Lyndal L. Shaneyfelt. Weisberg previously authored the book "Whitewash" and is now reported to be writing "Whitewash III." Harold Weisberg is a Hyattstown, Maryland, poultry farmer, an ex-State Department employee, and an ex-Senate investigator who was removed from both positions because of suspicion of being a communist or having communist sympathies. Weisberg had the book printed himself because he could not interest any publishers in it possibly due to the libelous nature of its contents.

In Whitewash II, Weisberg extensively quotes the testimony of SA Shaneyfelt regarding the examination of the Zapruder film and the re-enactment that was based on the Zapruder film. He states that Shaneyfelt "ran the re-enactment that was made essential by the doctrine of the Report" and "the FBI knowingly engaged in a reconstruction they knew to be utterly false." He alleges in Whitewash II that SA Shaneyfelt "was the Commission's photographic expert," "he did or supervised their photographic lab work," and "those faces on the cutting room floor may have been put there by Shaneyfelt." After establishing in the reader's mind that SA Shaneyfelt did all the photographic work he refers unceasingly to "picture doctoring," "edited or altered' photographs and the "destruction of evidence." He concludes with a very specific implication that SA Shaneyfelt cut out the much-publicized missing frames 208 through 211 of the Zapruder film to conceal from the public what really happened during the assassination. All of these allegations are, of course, completely false. (Life Magazine has recently admitted having spliced the original Zapruder film and cut out the four frames.) These frames were not missing in the FBI copy of the film and were considered in all evaluations by the Laboratory and the representatives of the Commission who viewed the FBI copy. SA Shaneyfelt made several photographic examinations at the request of the Commission but did not "run their photographic lab work." He assisted in the re-enactment but did not "run it" and, of course, did not edit, doctor, or mutilate any evidence. Weisberg suggests that SA Shaneyfelt may be a perjurer.

The allegations of Weisberg would appear to be libelous of both the Bureau and SA Shaneyfelt. Accordingly, in an effort to discourage and stop such highly irresponsible and unwarranted attacks against the Bureau on the part of Weisberg and others like him, the Bureau may wish to explore the feasibility of having [illegible] libel action brought against Weisberg in SA Shaneyfelt's name. Factors to be weighed in any such consideration are: (1) Legal estimate of whether successful suit might be sustained based on (a) the irresponsible and malicious statements in the book as opposed to (b) the recent Supreme Court decision holding that newsworthy persons including those who do not seek publicity have only a limited right to sue for damages for false reports that are published about them; and (2) a tactical estimate as to whether a net gain would accrue, bearing in mind the greatly increased forum which such an action would provide for Weisberg, as opposed to the fact that he is now apparently forced to publish his books privately.

SA Shaneyfelt, of course, contemplates no action in the matter unless so desired by the Bureau.

RECOMMENDATION:

The Bureau may wish to refer this memorandum and the enclosed book "Whitewash II" to the Legal Research Desk for review and consideration as to whether it might serve as a basis for libel action against Weisberg.

BACKGROUND:

The Director is in receipt of the February, 1967, issue of "the Washingtonian," which was mailed from the Washington, D. C. headquarters office of that publication. It contains (pp. 60-61 & 81) an article by Milton Viorst entitled "There Was Nothing Else They Could Do." Stapled to this article was a note: "Compliments of the editors. Your comments are invited."

The Director has inquired "What do we know of Milton Viorst?"

This article calls for a new investigation into the assassination of former President John F. Kennedy, claiming that the findings of the Warren Commission are not compelling and are losing public confidence. The Commission, argues Viorst, was trapped by pervading influences that sought a solution to the assassination which would serve the National interest rather than the truth. The article characterizes the Director and the FBI as part of these insidious influences that destroyed the Commission's "capacity to function as a free agency," and "drove it ineluctably to accept" Lee Oswald as the unassisted assassin.

BIOGRAPHICAL DATA:

According to "Contemporary Authors" (copyrighted 1964), Viorst was born 2-18-30, at Paterson, New Jersey. He is married, the father of two children, and resides at 1725 Q Street, Washington, D. C. Receiving B. D., M. A., and M. S. degrees, respectively, at Rutgers, Harvard and Columbia Universities prior to 1955, Viorst took postgraduate study at the University of Lyon. He served with U. S. THERE WAS NOTHIN
THEY COULD DO

Much has been written about what the Warren Commission found— but very little on why they found what they did. . . .
It's the story of an investigation that wasn't.

By Milton Vior

More than three years have passed since President Kennedy was shot down on a Dallas street, yet the crime appears more mysterious now than it did the day it was committed. The Warren Commission has declared that Lee Harvey Oswald, by himself, was the killer, but more and more persons have come to doubt that the verdict is correct, and their arguments can no longer be dismissed out of hand. One wonders, how could the Warren Commission have gone so far astray that its efforts are the object of such numerous and such persuasive challenges? The answer emerges when one reconstructs the atmosphere in which the Commission was created and the psychology with which it went about its work. In setting out to resolve the mystery of the Kennedy assassination, the Warren Commission fell into an intellectual trap which determined the course of its investigation from beginning to end.

Think back, if it is not too painful, to those awful days in November 1963, and recall that amid the terrible confusion and dismay there was, at least, some comfort in the feeling that the assassin had been caught. Texas police officials, one after another, had announced before the television cameras that the crime had been solved and, as if their word was not enough, the FBI confirmed the claim. At the time, one had no reason to doubt that Oswald had killed the President. When Oswald was himself murdered, there was almost a sigh of relief that the country would be spared a trial that would, at best, be indecorous—and, most believed, would be superfluous, besides.

Lyndon Johnson's first impulse seemed to be to let the matter take its natural course. Evidence contains no procedure for criminal action against a dead man, Johnson regarded the evidence against Oswald as so massive that the case would, through conventional channels of information, take care of itself.

It quickly became clear, however, that, despite Johnson, others were extremely interested in bringing to the public their own versions of events. Texas, looking for absolution, announced that a court of inquiry would be established. Senator Eastland of Mississippi, with uncertain motives, said that the Internal Security Subcommittee, of which he is chairman, would conduct an investigation. The House, never willing to surrender attention to the other body, began to talk of its own committee probe. Meanwhile, a grand jury was being contemplated and parallel investigations had been undertaken by the FBI and Texas law enforcement agencies. The imminent proliferation of inquiries generated consternation among those who took seriously the nation's dignity. It was not hard to foresee that they would degenerate into an unseemly rivalry, with the country becoming, in its moment of tragedy, an international laughing stock.

To President Johnson, Oswald's death indicated that the normal judicial channels—arrest, charge, indictment, trial—were closed. If there was to be an investigation at all, it had to be by some special body. To forestall a multiplicity of inquiries, he decided to appoint that body himself. He thus created the Warren Commission.

In retrospect, one understands better why Lyndon Johnson turned to the device of the Warren Commission. In November 1963, the new President's [illegible] Johnson

Now one realizes that his method handling difficult problems is not nec sarily to resolve them but to neutra them through politics. His concept of conducting an investigation into assassination of President Kennedy not to go straight for the truth, wh ever its consequences; it was to no nate a body whose political credent were so impeccable that, whatever found, it would be immune to criti

He chose as the chairman the pres ious Chief Justice. But Earl Warre hero to liberals, was anathema to South and to the extreme right, s appointed as counterweights Sen Richard Russell of Georgia and Re sentative Hale Boggs of Louisiana. T fair to Republicans, he named Sen John Sherman Cooper, a moderate, Representative Gerald Ford, a conse tive. To mollify the Establishment selected John J. McCloy, listed in W Who as a Wall Street banker, an calm the bureaucracy, he picked A Dulles, former head of the CIA. I were naming the Commission toda would probably include a Negro a Jew, but without them he did well indeed in covering the major ments of the political panorama.

Johnson picked his candidates o basis of their reputations as politi not investigators. It is clear that h not foresee an onerous inquiry. W Warren objected that he lacked the to serve, Johnson, certain that the was open and shut, assured him th could still perform his duties Court. Johnson persuaded his cand that it was their patriotic responsibil accept appointment. He wante right men, not right as seekers of but for a crucial exercise in p For politics, as Johnson knows, is the "art of government."

G ELSE

One need not impugn Johnson's motives in setting the standards for Commission membership. He regarded it as essential to the best interests of the nation that the Commission be politically perfect. The Commission members, for their part, understood their task as a service to the nation. It has been said as the President [illegible] that the members of the Warren Commission all men of integrity. But, in a sense, their very integrity played tricks on them. Though they did not anticipate a conflict between truth and the national interest, when it occurred, they accepted President Johnson's contention that their duty was to the nation.

Having been given by the President whatever powers it needed, the Commission began by selecting a staff—a group of lawyers, which, like itself, was more politically representative than it was competent at investigation. Then the Commission made the major decisions that set the direction and the quality of the inquiry. Whatever their intent, these decisions destroyed the Commission's capacity to function as a free agency and drove it ineluctably to the verdict that Lee Oswald was, by himself, guilty of the murder. Like a Greek tragedy, the Commission marched to a foreordained climax.

By deciding not to retain its own body of investigators, the Warren Commission made itself dependent for its principal facts on the FBI. On December 9, five days after the first Commission meeting, the FBI submitted a report which declared categorically that Oswald was the killer. Thus, from the Commission's opening days, the FBI possessed a vested interest in a single story. Even more than other governmental agencies, the FBI has a profound sense of its own rectitude. It was profoundly contrary to experience and reason to expect the FBI to put significant effort into providing information that could, by leading to an alternative explanation of the murder, cast discredit on itself. At best, the FBI was involved in a conflict of interests. The Warren commission was thus an investigative body without a reliable investigative arm.

Having decided to rely on it, the Commission could presumably have pressed the FBI to perform in a satisfactory manner. The Commission, after all, had been endowed by the President with the powers of a super-agency. But, in practice, the Commission did not exercise those powers and functioned on the FBI's sufferance. When the Commission was confronted with the allegation that Oswald had been an FBI agent, it dismissed the charge on the basis of a simple denial from J. Edgar Hoover. When there arose some suggestion that the FBI might have been remiss in helping to protect the President, Hoover replied testily that he had long before rejected police-state tactics. During the course of the investigation, Hoover's aggressiveness generated open feuding with the State Department and the Secret Service. Surely the members of the Commission felt that it was not in the best interests of the nation to [illegible] bickering on display. It was far easier to accept [illegible] what the FBI had to offer than to risk an intra-government rupture.

To be sure, Robert Kennedy, then Attorney General, was J. Edgar Hoover's titular supervisor, but, even in his best days, Kennedy had found it hard to keep Hoover in line. And the melancholy months after the assassination were not Robert Kennedy's best days. President Johnson has since cited Kennedy's presence in the Justice Department as evidence of the authenticity of the Commission's findings. But even if Kennedy's objective was scientific truth, he exercised little power over the FBI and none over the Warren Commission during the investigation. Besides, there is no reason to believe that Robert Kennedy did not share the Commission's outlook that the service which was called for was not so much to truth as to the national well-being.

Having rejected establishing an investigative staff of its own, the Commission made a second momentous decision: It agreed to do its work under the pressure of time. Johnson believed that unless the Oswald case were quickly closed, the assassination might somehow become a political issue in the 1964 election campaign. He was anxious to have the Commission's report finished well before the Republican National Convention in July. Since the Commission could not do any serious examining before the termination of the Jack Ruby trial in March, the time was short indeed. In consenting to the presidential deadline, the Commission precluded itself from any kind of painstaking investigation. It meant that the Committee would have to be selective in choosing its areas of inquiry. In practice, the decision meant that the Commission would seek, in Justice Warren's words, "to close doors, not to open them." It meant, of course, that the Commission would have time only to sustain the hypothesis that Lee Oswald alone was guilty. And that was precisely what the Commission sought to do.

By the time the Commission realized how complex the circumstances were, it was too late to reverse the momentum. Warren proved to have no stomach for rethinking and reorganizing the investigation. Impatient to get over with it, he drove the staff harder and harder to reach the preconceived conclusion. The end result became the opposite of his intention. The Commission report, instead of convincing the world of Oswald's culpability, has itself become the object of enormous mistrust.

According to its mandate, the Warren Commission had been established to find out the truth about the Kennedy assassination. President Johnson had instructed it to end, once and for all, speculation over the murder. The Commission, as a result, was denied the prerogative of saying that there were several possible theories, that its members could not agree on an explanation, that the puzzle demanded a further inquiry of [illegible] duration. The Warren Commission was called upon to supply certainty. Lyndon Johnson and the American people demanded an [illegible]. Under tremendous pressure, the Commission gave it to them—but it was the easiest answer available. It is ironic that the Commission's prestige persuaded some of the most renowned sages of American society to pronounce the work perfect before they had even read it.

The Warren Commission's conclusion is not necessarily the wrong one, but, by the same token, there is nothing compelling to indicate that it is the right one. The Commission selected facts as it needed them to sustain a hypothesis. Its critics have shown that it disregarded evidence which was contradictory. It is no exaggeration to say that the report of the Warren Commission fails to meet the highest standards of scientific methodology. Understandably, it has steadily been losing public confidence.

The defenders of the Warren Commission seem to be divided into several groups. Senator Philip Hart of Michigan, a member of the let's-not-rock-the-boat school, had this to say: "We should let this one rest now with the poets and the historians. I think the caliber of the men who composed that commission insures that the verdict, the general verdict, is sound." In contrast to Hart, others have been openly pugnacious and disparage the motives of the critics. Malcolm Kilduff, a former White House press aide, has characterized attacks on the report as "pure garbage," written for personal gain. A third group, of which the President is a member, declares loftily that the critics have brought forth insufficient evidence to justify reopening the case. "I know of no evidence," he said, "that would in any way cause any reasonable person to have a doubt about the Warren Commission." But this is to ignore the questions that quite reasonable persons and publications have raised on the basis of the Commission's own data. Virtually no effort has been put into the obvious instrumentality of refuting the critics' arguments.

For President Johnson to reopen the investigation now would, of course, be an enormous admission of failure. The prestige of the federal establishment is attached to the Warren report. Great Americans have a stake in its [illegible] tion. The FBI is sternly committed to its defense. The American people are most comfortable with its message. Right or wrong, it has stood for two years as official dogma. It now represents a vested interest to the American political system. For its critics to [illegible] would be a monumental task.

The pressure, however, may grow so severe that the President may not be able to resist. But what will happen? To return the case to the Warren Commission would be to invite the same difficulties as before. The French Republic was rocked by the Dreyfus case, not because the original injustice was so shocking but because a government, by refusing to concede a small mistake, allowed the mistake to be compounded into an enormous official lie. However more stable this country may be, the American Government is not immune to a profound crisis of confidence.

But there should be a new investigation, as even Life magazine has said, and the lesson of the Warren Commission is that a new investigative body must be independent of the federal bureaucracy and dedicated to scientific truth. Its chairman must be esteemed but free, a responsible maverick, a figure like ex-Senator Paul Douglas, Admiral Rickover (if he left the Navy), or James Conant, former president of Harvard. On its staff must be highly qualified criminologists, the best experts in crime detection, and a squad of highly qualified detectives, none of them in the debt of the FBI or any other agency of the United States or Texas. They must have at their disposal the power to subpoena and to grant immunity, the capacity to pursue any lead, and the authority to spend whatever time and money they need. They must be willing to challenge the status quo and defy the vested interests. Most of all, a new investigative body would have to begin its work free of the conviction that there is a single truth which best serves American society. □ others at the very highest level of official Washington, that would prevent Griffith from ever moving.

But the complexion of things changed radically at a meeting of the American League expansion committee in New York in October of 1960. Unexpectedly, in the midst of deliberations on what new cities to move into at some time in the indefinite future, Griffith declared he wanted out of Washington. The committee chairman, the Yankees' Del Webb, quickly adjourned the meeting temporarily and reached Povich elsewhere in the same hotel.

Webb, one of the parties in the Povich plot to keep the Senators in Washington instead of losing major league baseball here, told Povich, "Calvin wants to move and he thinks he has the votes. We can block him again, but what would you say if we let him go to Minnesota and put another American League team in Washington?"

Povich didn't need much time to answer, "To hell with him. Let him go, as long as we're sure of getting another team."

Povich defends the wisdom of his advice today. "We would always be wondering when he was going to pull out," he reasons. He points out further that the Senators' management is a capable organization, spending freely and bu ing rapidly. He predicts they will a pennant contender within three y for these reasons and his high re for Manager Gil Hodges.

PUBLIC DISCLOSURE OF

On February 23, 1967, Mr. Marion Johnson of the National Archives contacted Special Agent Robert E. Lenihan to advise that correspondents had inquired concerning the public availability of information the FBI developed in 1963 concerning David William Ferrie, whose death in New Orleans, Louisiana, was reported on February 22, 1967. The "Evening Star," Washington, D. C., February 23, 1967, contains an article reporting that about 40 pages of material believed to involve Ferrie, but also to deal with FBI techniques and mode of operation, are kept secret.

The pertinent information appears on pages 212 to 221, 225 to 228, 231 to 304, 307 to 311, 313 to 316, 319 to 323, and 341 to 343, all inclusive, of Document Number 75 of the Warren Commission's Numbered Document File. Copies of these 55 pages are enclosed.

FEB 24 1967

The above pages were excluded from public disclosure as set out on page 11 of an enclosure to my letter to the Attorney General dated August 10, 1965. These pages were then excluded from public disclosure under guidelines approved by Mr. McGeorge Bundy, Special Assistant to the President. The specific guideline applicable is identified as 3(C), which provided that public disclosure should be made unless disclosure "would be a source of embarrassment to innocent persons, who are the subject, source, or apparent source of the material in question, because it contains gossip and rumor or details of a personal nature having no significant connection with the assassination of the President."

REC-74 62-109090 25 FEB 28 1967 571

As, in our view, the final decision as to the public disclosure of the material in question rests with the Department of Justice, it is requested that you advise us and the National Archives of your decision concerning making disclosure of the enclosed pages. This Bureau has no objection to public disclosure of these pages in view of the public interest.

Ferrie Death Probed, Link to 'Plot' Is Denied

A former investigator who claimed to know four conspirators in a 1963 plot to assassinate President Kennedy dropped out of sight early today in New Orleans, but later showed up at Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison's office there.

David Lewis, 26, met reporters briefly, to say that David W. Ferrie, 49, former Eastern Airlines pilot found dead in his apartment yesterday was not one of the "possible members of the plot."

Lewis said previously he had given Garrison four or five names of persons involved in the conspiracy, and as a result feared for his life.

He dropped out of sight with his wife and four children last night, but reappeared at the district attorney's office today.

United Press International said he refused to say anything other than that Ferrie was not one of the group he knew.

Ferrie was mentioned in the Warren Report and questioned by Garrison in his new investigation of the assassination. Garrison called his death apparent suicide. The coroner said suicide was possible.

Washington sources who refused to be identified told UPI that a Warren Commission investigation of Ferrie showed that he had no connection with the Kennedy assassination.

"The allegations of Ferrie's connection with an assassination plot were washed out by the investigations done for the Warren Commission," the unidentified sources said.

Ferrie emphatically denied in 1963 that he knew either Lee Harvely Oswald or Jack Ruby.

The FBI investigation at the time found nothing to tie Ferrie to the assassination, the Associated Press noted.

Statements Ferrie made under questioning by the FBI are included in the Warren Commission Report in the National Archives here. Nineteen pages of testimony about Ferrie are open to public scrutiny. About 40 more pages, believed to involve Ferrie but also to deal with FBI techniques and mode of operation, are kept secret.

Oswald was named by the Warren Commission as the assassin of President Kennedy in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963. Ruby was convicted of slaying Oswald two days later.

"Do Not Know Oswald"

"To my best knowledge and belief, I do not know Lee Harvey Oswald and have no personal recollection of ever having met him," Ferrie said Dec. 10, 1963, in a signed statement to the FBI. "If I did ever meet him it was casual and to my best recollection have definitely not seen him in recent years."

"To my knowledge, I have never met Jack Ruby, who I understand, from public sources, operated a night club in Dallas. I have seen a photograph of Jack Ruby and I do not recognize this photograph to be a person with whom I am acquainted."

The FBI investigated Ferrie in 1963, following up telephone leads, and found him to have no connection with Oswald, Ruby or the assassination, according to statements given the Warren Commission.

Agents John W. Rice and Anthony E. Gerrets conducted one investigation of Ferrie during the period Nov. 24-29 based on leads provided by a Jack S. Martin, a private investigator, to the New Orleans district attorney's office. They said Martin appeared to be an alcoholic.

FBI - NEW ORLEANS
25 FEB 28 1967

"Investigation disclosed that information furnished by Jack S. Martin to the effect that David William Ferrie associated with Lee Harvey Oswald at New Orleans and trained Oswald in the use of a rifle with a telescopic lense (sic), also that Ferrie had visited Dallas several weeks prior to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy is without foundation," they said in a signed statement.

Other statements indicate the FBI investigated Ferrie's whereabouts during the period immediately before and after Kennedy's assassination. There are signed statements indicating Ferrie and two companions made a trip by car to Houston and Galveston during the period.

There was a discrepancy over the time of Ferrie's death.

An unsigned, undated note was found in Ferrie's apartment saying that death would be "sweet prospect."

George Larder Jr., a Washington Post reporter who may have been the last man to see Ferrie alive, said Ferrie told him he was convinced Oswald killed the President Nov. 22, 1963, in Dallas, and acted alone.

Lardner told UPI he thought there was no mystery about an apparent discrepency in the time of Ferrie's death. Lardner said Ferrie was alive when he left Ferrie's apartment at 4 a.m. Wednesday.

The Coroner, Dr. Nicholas J. Chetta, had put the time of death at Tuesday night, and Garrison called the differing times "one of the mysteries we don't understand."

"Ferrie was certainly living when I said good-bye to him Wednesday shortly before 4 a.m.," Lardner said. "I can see nothing inconsistent about that."

Ferrie told Lardner that he never knew Oswald and never met him as far as he remembered.

Dr. Chetta said Ferrie's death had to have occurred before 4 a.m. but Lardner insisted he had visited with Ferrie until that hour.

Dr. Chetta, an M.D., said Ferrie suffered a massive cerebral hemorrhage when a blood vessel burst at the base of his brain. The coroner called this the cause of death Wednesday night, but said today he was not sure, and indicated he felt Ferrie could have killed himself.

Ferrie Called "Involved"

Garrison described Ferrie as "one of history's most important individuals" and said he was "involved in events culminating in the assassination of President Kennedy."

Garrison, at a hurried news conference, announced dramatically he now was not even accepting the Warren Commission's conclusion that Oswald killed Kennedy.

"I have no reason to believe at this time that Lee Harvey Oswald killed anybody in Dallas on Nov. 22.," Garrison said.

Ferrie said in an interview Saturday with the New Orleans States-Item he was afraid he was suspected of being a "getaway pilot in an elaborate plot" to kill Kennedy.

Garrison said he had feared Ferrie might commit suicide.

"Because of this . . . we had reached a decision to arrest him early next week," Garrison said. "Apparently we waited too long."

Had Encephalitis

Found near Ferrie was the unsigned, undated, unaddressed note saying, "to leave this life is for me a sweet prospect. I find nothing in it that is desirable and on the other hand everything that is loathsome."

Eastern Air Lines suspended Ferrie because of a 1961 arrest in Suburban Jefferson Parish and Ferrie eventually quit.

Lardner said Ferrie did not seem to be depressed.

Ferrie had been ill for several weeks with encephalitis. Investigators found 15 bottles of pills in his apartment. It was not known whether he had taken any of them or what they were.

Ferrie ran a flying service from New Orleans Lakefront Airport. He had no office. He operated out of the terminal coffee shop.

AP said a New Orleans florist, Edward Voebel, had seen Oswald's picture on television and reported that he and Oswald had served in a Civil Air Patrol squadron under Ferrie. When authorities sought to question Ferrie, they found he had gone to Texas.

Ferrie told a newsman recently that he and two friends took a short vacation trip to Texas the day of the assassination "on the spur of the moment." He said they visited Houston, Galveston and Alexandria, La., before returning home. They did not go to Dallas, he said.

And Ferrie said he and Voebel were in separate CAP squadrons.

A New Orleans police detective, Frederick S. O'Sullivan, told the Warren Commission he knew of no evidence that Oswald was acquainted with Ferrie. However, the district attorney hinted that he was close to finding a thread connecting Ferrie and Oswald.

The "Evening Star," Washington, D. C., 2-23-67, contained an article showing that about 40 pages of FBI investigation concerning David William Ferrie deal with FBI techniques and mode of operation and are kept secret. The Director stated, "Let me know details of 40 pages which are said to be classified."

BACKGROUND:

Ferrie, whose death was reported on 2-22-67, was the subject of investigation under the caption "Lee Harvey Oswald" in November, 1963. The pertinent information we developed was furnished to the Warren Commission 12-20-63. The information was contained in the report of Special Agent Warren C. DeBrueys, dated 12-2-63 at Dallas. Fifty-five pages containing data on Ferrie were withheld from public disclosure when all of our investigation was reviewed and a letter dated 8-10-65 was sent to the Attorney General. We then indicated the now pertinent 55 pages containing data on Ferrie should be withheld from public disclosure. The basis for withholding these pages was that five persons interviewed furnished allegations, impressions, hearsay, gossip or rumor indicating Ferrie may have been a homosexual.

Our withholding was based on criteria approved by Mr. McGeorge Bundy, Special Assistant to the President. Pertinent portions of the criteria are: "Unclassified material...should be made available to the public on a regular basis unless disclosure would be a source of embarrassment to innocent persons, who are the subject, source, or apparent source of the material in question, because it contains gossip and rumor or details of a personal nature having no significant connection with the assassination of the President." Our letter to the Attorney General 8-10-65 indicated that in our view the final decision as to the public disclosure of the material in question rests with the Department of Justice. This should remain our position today.

On 2-23-66 Mr. Marion Johnson of the National Archives contacted Bureau Supervisor Robert E. Lenihan to advise that correspondents had inquired concerning the public availability of information the FBI developed concerning Ferrie as contained in Document Number 75 of the Warren Commission's Numbered Document File. This is the previously mentioned report of Special Agent DeBrueys. The pertinent pages of the above-mentioned report have again been reviewed. There are no FBI techniques and mode of operation in these 55 pages. The pages include interview of 19 persons who either furnished some information or were questioned concerning Ferrie. Thirteen pages consist of an interview with Ferrie on 11-25-63.

RECOMMENDATION:

In view of the above and the substantial public interest, we should have no objection to the public disclosure of the 55 pages previously withheld. We should indicate this position to the Acting Attorney General and we are furnishing him copies of the pertinent 55 pages for his review in reaching a decision. We are requesting the Acting Attorney General to advise us and the National Archives of his decision.

ACTION:

Attached for your approval is a letter to the Acting Attorney General in accordance with the above.

SUBJECT: BARBARA ALDERMAN;
JANET KIMLER
KANSAS STATE COLLEGE

By letter dated 2/22/67 (attached), Alderman and Kimler express the opinion they have grave doubts a thorough investigation of the assassination of former President Kennedy was conducted. They state they believe additional investigation should be undertaken and particularly refer to the information coming from the New Orleans area. They suggest the FBI should be the agency to handle this additional investigation since they do not feel the Dallas or New Orleans authorities are competent in this situation. Alderman and Kimler suggest there is something sinister in connection with the death of a New Orleans investigator and express the opinion the police are lacking in ethics and have been guilty of harassing and intimidating the public. Alderman and Kimler inquire as to whether the Director is going to do any more about this.

Bufiles contain no information identifiable with Alderman and no record identifiable with Kimler.

OBSERVATION:

It would appear that Alderman and Kimler are sounding off regarding the Warren Commission findings without having anything specific in mind and are jumping to conclusions as to the validity of information reported from New Orleans. It does not appear any useful purpose would be served in attempting to answer their letter; therefore, the following recommendation is made:

Parker of the people involved in the Commission itself sought to support its findings. It was a travesty. Mr. Weisberg did the lions share of the speaking. I had hoped to see some questions laid to rest. Not so. Mr. Weisberg spent most of his time berating Mr. Jaffe for daring to question the findings of such an illustrious group.

This isn't right. If there are doubts and questions they must be answered — not by name calling but by facts.

I would greatly appreciate knowing your feelings on this matter. Yours is an opinion I would respect and trust. I hope you will be able to give it to me.

Dear Sir:

We wrote a letter to President Johnson about Kennedy's assassination but he never answered it. We are under the impression that you answer your mail so now we are directing our questions to you.

Not too long ago we became interested in that New Orleans detective who was positive that there was a plot behind the assassination. He said that he was collecting evidence and that it would be made public. He also said he thought there should be another, more intense, investigation and we agree. We also feel it should NOT be left to the local authorities because they all, in New Orleans and Dallas, seem to be incompetent in this situation.

We are also under the impression that the Federal Bureau of Investigations investigates. Well???

ENCLOSURE

MAR 3 1967

You must admit that the Warren Commission was rushed for its report and did not consider all the evidence nor talk to some of the "lesser" persons concerned in some way with the assassination. We should think that in such a grave matter that the

CORRESPONDENCE

Commission would have made a more thorough investigation instead of rushing their report for the benefit of the public and President Johnson.

Today we heard that the New Orleans investigator was found dead in his apartment. He is not the only person to die who had anything to do with the Kennedy death. We're sure you are aware of all of them and how most of them are classified as heart attacks and suicides. This seems to be a standard response when police don't care to investigate any farther than the ends of their noses.

It seems that in all the articles we have read, the police appear to be lacking in ethics. They tell people to keep their mouths shut, which, to us, is an obstruction of justice. People were harrassed by police and men posing as "agents" although they did not show any identification. No wonder a lot of people in the United States have no respect for law enforcing officers. Perhaps if they would show a little action and less intimidation of the public they would be looked up to.

What we want to know, Mr. Hoover, is if anything more is going to be done about investigating the plot or if you ALL are going to stuff it in the "closed" file and say the Warren Commission has already taken care of it. We think ALL evidence should be examined and ALL testimonies listened to. We also do NOT believe in "super bullets".

Thank you for your time and we hope you will take the time to answer our letter since Mr. Johnson doesn't think it is very important. Very shortly we will be old enough to vote and we will think more than twice before we help elect someone like Johnson to the White House again. Whoever said, "President Johnson has failed to capture the imaginations of today's youth" spoke the truth. He certainly has failed in our case.

Thank you again.

Being aquainted with office and clerical procedures I doubt that this correspondence will merit your personal consideration. However, "the buck stops here", for I am the Company clerk for my organization and almost everything passes by me.

The reasons for this letter are the feelings that swelled up inside of me at the reading of the interview with Mark Lane by Playboy magazine. I am not labeling what is set forth as the Gospel truth, but it seems to point out numerous concrete questions and discrepancies.

I consider myself a very conscientious American. Unlike many others who have attained high public office, my feeling is that you are conscientious at your position. I would appreciate very much a personal reply to this letter if possible.

Dear Sir:

Mr. Greg Lessig, Instructor of Political Science and I are gathering information for an article for the Southwestern Historical Quarterly, dealing with the Kennedy assassination. We wish to assure you that our purpose is historical knowledge rather than cheap sensationalism.

The theory we are attempting to gather evidence on is: that Oswald had his .38 Special revolver, V510210, with him in the Texas School Book Depository; that he fired two or three shots with his 6.5 mm. Rifle, C2766, and then drew his pistol and fired one or two shots from it at the presidential car. This theory would explain the doubts arising from the testimony of Royce G. Skelton, Patrolman J. W. Foster, James T. Tague, and Patrolman L. L. Hill. We are, thus, attempting to prove that Oswald was the only assassin.

As to the revolver, no one saw him with it, at or near the Depository, but this does not mean that he did not have it in his belt, under his jacket. Of the four bullets recovered from the body of Patrolman Tippit, three were Winchester-Western (lead with a trace of copper) and one was Remington-Peters (plain lead or lead alloy). The empty cartridge cases found at 10th Street and Patton Avenue were, however, two Winchester-Western and two Remington-Peters.

You can help us if you have information on the metal content of the bullet splash found on the south curb of Main Street by Tague, and the content of the Remington-Peters bullet removed from Tippit. Were they the same?

Dear Mr. Watson:

The Sunday editions of two Washington, D. C., newspapers for February 19, 1967, carried articles indicating that District Attorney Jim Garrison in New Orleans, Louisiana, is conducting an investigation of the assassination of the late President John Fitzgerald Kennedy. Allegedly Garrison claims that the Warren Commission Report is inaccurate in stating Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in the assassination of President Kennedy.

Enclosed is a memorandum which sets forth a concise summary of the results of our investigation of Lee Harvey Oswald from April, 1963, when he returned to New Orleans from Dallas, Texas, until September, 1963, when he traveled to Mexico City, Mexico. Also set forth is information in our files concerning District Attorney Garrison and data concerning Miguel Torres and David William Ferrie who are mentioned in these newspaper articles.

I thought this information would be of interest to the President. Additional pertinent information concerning this matter that comes to our attention will be immediately furnished to you.

ENCLOSURE This data is also being furnished to the Acting Attorney General.

ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT
JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY
NOVEMBER 22, 1963, DALLAS, TEXAS

The Sunday editions of the "Washington Post" and the "Washington Evening Star" dated February 19, 1967, contained articles reporting that District Attorney Jim Garrison of New Orleans, Louisiana, was conducting an investigation of the assassination of the late President Kennedy and was claiming that the Warren Commission Report is inaccurate in stating that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in the assassination. Garrison did not furnish details of his investigation to the press, but stated that arrests will be made, charges will be filed, and convictions will be obtained.

The newspaper articles indicated that Miguel Torres, a 26-year-old Cuban who formerly lived only a block from Oswald's last known New Orleans address, is known to be connected with the investigation conducted by the District Attorney's office. The "Washington Evening Star" article also reported that David William Ferrie, a part-time private investigator and operator of a New Orleans flying service, informed the press that the District Attorney's office informed him it had "positively uncovered a plot in New Orleans to assassinate Kennedy."

James C. Garrison, District Attorney in New Orleans, Louisiana, is a former Special Agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. He entered on duty with this Bureau on March 5, 1951, and resigned on July 24, 1951, to enter military service. His services with this Bureau were satisfactory.

Garrison was elected District Attorney, Parish of Orleans, New Orleans, Louisiana, and took office in May, 1962. On November 1 and 2, 1962, the New Orleans "Times-Picayune" carried statements by Garrison charging that the parish criminal-court judges were clogging up the city jail and delaying justice by taking excessive vacation periods. Following such charges, the judges involved instituted a defamation charge against Garrison. The trial received nation-wide publicity and Garrison was found guilty on February 6, 1963, of the charges and was fined $1,000. Garrison appealed his conviction and on November 24, 1964, the United States Supreme Court reversed the conviction of Garrison. The United States Supreme Court held that the element of deliberate malice was lacking in the statements attributed to Garrison regarding the trial judges involved.

A confidential source who has furnished reliable information in the past has informed this Bureau that Garrison is politically ambitious. Our New Orleans Office has advised that rumors have been circulating in the city of New Orleans indicating Garrison may be a candidate for Lieutenant Governor of the State of Louisiana in the next election to be held in December, 1967. [redacted]

Following the assassination of President Kennedy, this Bureau conducted an extensive investigation in New Orleans, Louisiana, concerning Oswald's residence there from April, 1963, to September 25, 1963, when he left New Orleans to travel to Mexico City, Mexico. Following his move to New Orleans from Dallas, Texas, in April, 1963, Oswald, responding to a newspaper advertisement, obtained a position with William B. Reily Company, Incorporated, an enterprise engaged in the roasting, grinding, canning, bagging, and selling of coffee. Oswald's task was the lubrication of the company's machinery. Oswald obtained an apartment at 4905 Magazine Street and made arrangements for his wife, Marina, and his child to join him in New Orleans. On July 19, 1963, Oswald was dismissed by the Reily Company because of inefficiency and inattention to his work.

On July 25, 1963, Oswald received another personal setback when he was notified that, in response to the request for review which he had made in 1962, his undesirable discharge from the United States Marine Corps had been affirmed. It was during the same period that Oswald began to evidence thoughts of returning to the Soviet Union or going to Cuba. On July 24, 1963, Oswald applied for a new passport, which he received on the following day.

In late May and early June, 1963, Oswald apparently had begun to formulate plans for creating a New Orleans branch of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee. Using a false name, Oswald ordered a number of printed circulars, demanding "hands off Cuba" in large letters, and application forms and membership cards for the proposed chapter. On August 5, 1963, he visited a store managed by Carlos Bringuier, a Cuban refugee and avid opponent of Castro and the New Orleans delegate of the Cuban student directorate. Oswald indicated an interest in joining the struggle against Castro.

[illegible] FERRELL

On August 9, 1963, Bringuier saw Oswald pass out Fair Play for Cuba Committee leaflets. Bringuier and Oswald got into a dispute which resulted in their arrests for disturbing the peace. Oswald pleaded guilty to the charges against him and paid a $10 fine.

On August 17, 1963, Oswald appeared on a radio program in New Orleans representing himself to be a member of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee. On August 21, 1963, Oswald engaged in a debate on another radio program at which time he defended the Castro regime and discussed Marxism.

During this period, Oswald wrote several letters to V. T. Lee, the National Director of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee. Oswald informed Lee in exaggerated terms of his activities in New Orleans. He also wrote to the Communist Party in New York City and informed Communist Party officials of his activities. On September 25, 1963, Oswald left New Orleans by bus en route to Mexico City.

During the course of our investigation of Oswald's activities in New Orleans, we received no evidence that Oswald was in personal contact with pro-Castro Cubans nor any indication that he might be involved in an assassination plot with others to kill President Kennedy.

In the "Washington Post" article, mentioned above, it is reported that Miguel Torres is known to be connected with the investigation being conducted by the District Attorney in New Orleans. On October 25, 1962, this Bureau received a complaint that Miguel Torres, along with his father, mother, and two brothers, was pro-Castro in his belief. It was also alleged that the Torres family had a short-wave radio in their home for the purpose of receiving Cuban broadcasts. We initiated investigation of Miguel Torres and other members of his family on the basis of such allegations but found no information to corroborate such allegations. Our investigation did disclose that Miguel Torres had a criminal record. He was arrested February 1, 1959, on an armed robbery charge and was sentenced on October 2, 1959, for a period of ten years in the State Penitentiary. On February 2, 1961, he was discharged from the Louisiana State Penitentiary. He was arrested again on September 5, 1964, by the New Orleans Police Department on burglary charges and was sentenced to nine years in the Louisiana State Penitentiary. In September, 1964, he was also arrested by the Bureau of Narcotics for violation of the Federal Narcotics Law. He was sentenced on January 6, 1965, to three years in a Federal Penitentiary with the sentence to begin after completion of the nine-year sentence in the Louisiana State Penitentiary.

During the course of our investigation of the assassination, we developed no information indicating acquaintanceship or contact between Lee Harvey Oswald and Miguel Torres.

In the "Washington Evening Star" article, mentioned above, it was reported that David William Ferrie, part-time private investigator and operator of a New Orleans flying service, stated the New Orleans District Attorney's office informed him it had "positively uncovered a plot in New Orleans to assassinate Kennedy." Immediately following the assassination of the late President Kennedy, this Bureau received an allegation that Lee Harvey Oswald may have been acquainted with David William Ferrie through a Civil Air Patrol group in New Orleans. The source of such allegation stated that Ferrie was an amateur hypnotist and the source felt that Ferrie may have hypnotized Oswald and planted a post-hypnotic suggestion that Oswald kill President Kennedy. We also received allegations that Ferrie, a qualified pilot, was to fly Oswald from Dallas following his assassination of President Kennedy.

We conducted extensive inquiries concerning the allegations surrounding Ferrie, including interviews of Ferrie. We developed no evidence that Ferrie knew Oswald or that Ferrie was involved in the assassination of President Kennedy.

On February 19, 1967, our New Orleans Office advised that the New Orleans "Times-Picayune" newspaper for February 19, 1967, carried an article which indicated that Ferrie stated the investigation of the assassination carried on by District Attorney Garrison is a "big joke." Ferrie reportedly told a New Orleans reporter that he had been pegged as the getaway pilot in an elaborate plot to kill President Kennedy. Ferrie has contacted our New Orleans Office and has stated he plans to take civil action against those accusing him of being involved in a plot to kill President Kennedy.

Dear Mr. Lane:

As I sit here at my husband's desk waiting for another load of clothes to go into the washing machine, my heart and mind are troubled. I have just this hour finished reading the interview article as printed in the "Playboy" magazine.

Mr. Lane, ever since the death of President Kennedy (and I might add I am politically on the other side of the fence) I have sincerely felt that the "act" linked too closely to people in high places. I have carefully read your answers to "Playboy" with an open mind, and I agreed down the line until you made such damning allusions to J. Edgar Hoover's integrity. Mr. Lane, have you ever read "MASTERS OF DECEIT" ? O, how it hurt me when you said, "including one called "MASTERS OF DECEIT", which, I imagine, is a kind of Autobiography".

It is a book dealing with the working mind and methods of communism. President David O. McKay and Ezra Taft Benson, both honorable men, have urged us, as members of the Mormon Church, to read it so that we will understand the enemy.

Now I would like you to tell me - were you misquoted? Isn't it quite possible in light of all the omissions and "hanky-panky" that you uncovered, that some F.B.I. and Secret Service Agents could be controlled by factions and persons over Mr. Hoover? Isn't it quite possible that the man who threatened your publishers by using the name "John" could have done so without the knowledge of J.Edgar Hoover himself?

Mr. Lane, if you were not misquoted, then you are as guilty as the "Warren Gang". You did not investigate the sources of your harrassment, but you took them at face value without true identity. You have superimposed Mr. Hoover's face onto a phony body. One of the continuing projects of the Communist conspiracy is to discredit this man and you are simply implementing their program when you cast diaperson on his good name.

Please, I am only asking you to restore to me what we, as a family, believe to be the honorable reputation of a man who has served this wonderful country for so many years honorably and as one of the very few true Americans of our government today.

2-16-67 delivered Warren Commission

Dear Mr. Rowley:

Thank you for your letter dated February 13, 1967, advising me of your discussion with Chief Justice Earl Warren on January 31, 1967, and the information he furnished to you.

In connection with the allegation that a Castro conspiracy was involved in the assassination of President Kennedy, our investigation uncovered no evidence indicating Fidel Castro or officials of the Cuban Government were involved with Lee Harvey Oswald in the assassination of President Kennedy.

This Bureau is not conducting any investigation regarding this matter. However, should Mr. Pearson, Mr. Morgan, or Mr. Morgan's source of information care to volunteer any information to this Bureau, it would be accepted. Thereafter, consideration would be given as to whether any additional investigation is warranted.

I am taking the liberty of furnishing a copy of your letter and my reply to you to the Acting Attorney General.

SUBJECT: ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY 11/22/63, DALLAS, TEXAS

Re memorandum M. A. Jones to Mr. Wick, dated 2/14/67, advising of the TV broadcast on 2/18/67, concerning the Warren Commission report.

In connection with the monitoring of this broadcast, it is suggested that the Laboratory make arrangements to tape the broadcast and thereafter representatives of the Domestic Intelligence Division, Laboratory Division, and General Investigative Division will review the material in connection with their special interests. The General Investigative Division will coordinate the over-all review of the program and will prepare a memorandum following consultation with representatives of the other Divisions who will monitor it.

ACTION:

That this memorandum be referred to the Laboratory and Domestic Intelligence Divisions so that personnel can be designated to monitor the forthcoming TV program. SA Kenneth M. Raupach, General Investigative Division, will also monitor the program and will coordinate the preparation of a memorandum analyzing it.

Dear Sir:

Please excuse my penmanship if you have difficulty reading as I got out of a sick bed to write to you. I write to you Mr. Hoover, as in my evaluation of the condition which our country is in, you are one of the true pillars of what America stands for in my mind.

Now I'm not a "Rhodes scholar" such as the most "distinguished" (?) Senator from Arkansas, who presently is pushing for convenience for Soviet agents to establish themselves here and with diplomatic immunity.

I am however still able to determine that 2+2=4 (!) And in applying the same arithmetical process to the "Hon." Earl Warren's voting record, I am able to see very clearly that his pro-communist voting record far exceeds his anti-communist voting record - like about 95%.

Therefore, it is clear to me even tho our distinguished President Johnson most likely would disagree, that Mr. Warren is a traitor to my country. The Lord blessed us with this once great country and he has also blessed us with great men like yourself, Sir. And I am sad to see our once great America turned over to a one world government - The United Nations. And to see the pro-communist decisions coming out of Mr. Warren's "court." And I am sad Sir, when I can't seem to awaken my fellow Americans from their apathy. I'm rejected and many times scoffed at, and feel as you probably felt when you made an attempt to present a file on Harry Dexter White to "little Harry." The fact that White was a member of a Commie cell right there in Washington, obviously qualified him for promotion, which is exactly what he received. I'm aware of White's contribution to Chiang Kai-shek's downfall. However, I am just as deeply concerned Mr. Hoover, when I am rejected, as you are, and have been, in your efforts to awaken America. I sympathize your position when C. F. R. member (Pres.) and now State Dept. Sec. Rusk, tried to put you in a position of agreement to the Red trap - Consular Treaty. We send career diplomats to the Soviet Union to represent Americans, who have no business there to begin with, and they send Red Agents, trained in sabotage, subversion etc. (Which reminds me of the Oksana Kasenkina case.)

To regress, in appointing leadership to the investigative committee to investigate the assassination of Pres. Kennedy, one would imagine surely that the most logical person to fill that post would be the head of the top investigative organization in the land, Mr. J. Edgar Hoover. But no, a person who has never sat as a judge, yet holds the top chair in the top court of the land, is given the appointment. And one needs look no further. What a sad, sad testimony, however it does prove the terrible shape our country is in.

To add a bit of salt to the injury, that "great disciple of Americanism," Adam Yarmolinsky is back injecting his Red venom into the mainstream of our college youth. First, he was located at his old play yard Harvard, but made a quick shuffle & I believe he's at Purdue. Most likely Robert "Strange" McNamara will watch over him & take care of him.

Here I am, identifying individuals etc., to the one person who is more knowledgeable than anyone in the country. But, Mr. Hoover, I just had to reach out of my doldrums and make contact with one who represents all the good things I believe America stands for. I do hope you understand.

Most likely this idea of mine is ridiculous & without merit. But I often think of your resigning your FBI position enabling you to tour the entire land - awakening all to the Red tentacles which are tightening its hold on us each day. Surely all Americans would accept your word immediately & possibly awaken America overnight. It might possibly be the saving of our Nation. But then they'd probably replace you with an Arthur Sylvester or Arthur Larson or someone

Well - I just had to write you Mr. Hoover and again repeat my comment: the Lord did not wish to make it too easy for us - therefore He gave us only one J. Edgar Hoover.

ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT
JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY
DALLAS, TEXAS

On February 23, 1967, U. S. Attorney Louis C. Lacour, Eastern District of Louisiana, contacted our New Orleans Office. He requested background information consisting of interview with David W. Ferrie, at the time of the assassination of President Kennedy, and copies of letters written by Ferrie in connection with investigation entitled "Carlos Marcello, aka Fraud Against the Government, Conspiracy" be made available to him at New Orleans, Louisiana. Lacour desires this information to answer inquiries of Assistant Attorney General Sanders.

For your information and to avoid duplication, we have instructed our New Orleans Office to inform Mr. Lacour, that we are furnishing all information in this matter directly to you.

Enclosed are two copies of the reporting of interviews of David William Ferrie on November 23 and 27, 1963. (105-82555-454 pp 199-205-2

The pertinent letters requested, written by Ferrie, were previously made available to Mr. Lacour and to the Criminal Division of the Department of Justice under the Marcello caption on March 24, 1964.

PURPOSE: To advise the TV show on 2/18/67, entitled "A Majority Rebuttal" was monitored and contained very few references to the FBI.

BACKGROUND: On 2/18/66, at 11 P. M., WTTG-TV, Channel 5, Washington, D. C., carried a two-hour show entitled "A Majority Rebuttal." This show primarily was a defense of the Warren Commission and the principal defender was Mr. Louis Nizer, who was assisted by Mr. Albert E. Jenner, Jr., Assistant Counsel to the Commission, and a Commission staff member, Alfredda Scobey. Representing the critics was Mark Lane, who we know is one of the principal critics of the findings of the Warren Commission, and has traveled world-wide expounding his theories that a conspiracy was involved in the assassination of President Kennedy.

Lane, in this TV show, did not deviate from his theories and did say that shots came from two directions at the time the President was assassinated. He dwelt considerably on the fact that the shot came from the grassy knoll and that a puff of smoke was seen by several witnesses.

Mr. Nizer criticized Lane severely, saying that his criticisms were "petty and nit-picking" as opposed to the objective, scientific proof that was developed by the Warren Commission. He elaborated on the scientific findings, the witnesses, which he considered positive, objective, scientific proof and further that there was no evidence of conspiracy developed.

In furthering his opinion that no evidence of a conspiracy was developed Nizer pointed out that the President's Commission had critiziced the FBI and the Secret Service, particularly for not guarding the President adequately. In this respect Mr. Nizer was in error because we were not criticized by the Commission for inadequate protection of the President, as this was not our function. The Commission did say that the FBI took an unduly restrictive role in preventive intelligence work prior to the assassination of President Kennedy.

Re: ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT
JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY

During this show other references were made to the FBI, but in each instance they were quotations from laboratory experts' testimony which were made public in the findings of the Commission. In each instance these were not derogatory.

Throughout the television show it could be readily observed that a petty atmosphere of resentment existed between Mr. Nizer and Mark Lane. Mr. Nizer charged Lane distorted and quoted out of context various statements in his book which, according to Mr. Nizer, he believes besmirch the American public and recklessly besmirch the American reputation. Nizer also stated the so-called proof Lane has developed is typical of the trifling kind of points made without any substantial evidence, referring to Lane as "a tiny little hammer picking against a marble structure of substantial evidence." He also said Lane was guilty of continually attempting to confuse the American opinion and especially the Europeans'.

Lane, on several occasions, attempted to refute the charges made against him by Nizer and this was always done in his usual sarcastic way.

The show ended with a summation and Mr. Nizer said that the American people could not reply to Mr. Lane, but that "we will" and will continue to, as he is not doing a service to the coun try.

There was nothing new brought forth in this TV show, but it appeared Nizer did in some instances effectively put Mr. Lane in his place.

Mr. Hoover:

In the past weeks it has been brought to my attention (and no doubt countless other Americans) that there is reason to doubt the findings of the Warren Commission which was assigned to investigate the assassination of the late President Kennedy. It would seem to me that in a society such as ours one of our so called "unalienable rights" should be the freedom to hear the truth. I say this because, through the writings such prominent Americans as Mark Lane, Harold Weisburg, Hugh Trevor-Roper and Sylvan Fox, I have interpreted the Warren Report as doing a great injustice to, and insulting the intelligence of, the American people.

As you can see by the recent events in New Orleans, there are American citizens who are not content to sit back and be "snowed under" by the Bureaucrats in Washington. As an American citizen, (and I am sure I speak for more than myself). I urge you to do your job -- or, if you find it impossible to "dig down" and respond to your indebtedness to our people -- resign.

Pointing a finger at the guilty is not my job, but yours. The American people will discover the truth. You know it, I know it and the people know it. How they discover the truth is yet to be seen but, if it was through the facilities of the FBI it would greatly reinforce the confidence which many Americans once had in your organization. The job belongs to you, the President, and Congress, -- will you respond to the challenge?

Dear Mr. Hoover;

I am writing this letter on matters that you have undoubtedly discussed before. I hope that you will not be too annoyed by the matters that I wish to have cleared up.

First of all I am a juhior in high school in the city of Sacramento, California. I am 15 years old and I feel, very patriotic to the American way.

This letter concerns the Zapruder film taken during the assasination of President Kennedy. I am attempting to to make a report to my History teacher to whether accept the Warren Commission as completely true and factual or if there are some decptions in it. My questioni is, are frames 314 and 315 transposed in order to create an illusion in which the presidents head is pushed to the left, thus proving that the President was hit from the back and not f rom the front? Another question I wish to ask is why did the Warren Commission dilete frames 208 to 211 in the film?

If you could I would really appreciate an answer to this letter I know that many people must write and want to know about the validity of the report and it must bother you.

Thank you for taking your time with this letter.

Dear Mr. Barnett:

Your letter was received on March 3rd.

In response to your inquiry, frames labeled 314 and 315 of Commission Exhibit 885 are transposed in Volume 18 of the "Hearings Before the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy." This is a printing error and does not exist in the actual Commission Exhibit. For your information the slides from which Commission Exhibit 885 was prepared are correctly numbered and are being shown in their correct sequence. The National Archives is aware of this printing error.

I am enclosing a copy of a newspaper article which appeared in the December 22, 1966, edition of "The Baltimore Sun" and trust this will answer your question regarding frames 208 through 211.

RE: Kennedy Assassination Investigation

Dear Mr. Hoover:

No one is more conscious of the problems of the Kennedy investigation than you are. The assassination was a national tragedy. However, the handling of the investigation of the Kennedy assassination and the subsequent death pattern of witnesses are totally unreconcilable.

The faith of the common people in a system of government and justice is badly shaken by these events. This tragedy is certainly worse than the other because we cannot correct the first tragedy but can do something about this. Obviously, we do not have the facts. This letter is simply an appeal to you urging that you take positive steps to straighten out this matter.

NOTE: Bufiles contain no information identifiable with Paxton. His letter is one of several which have been received at the Bureau and which are critical of the Warren Commission's findings. The information set forth in paragraph 3 of our reply to Paxton was previously made public in a letter and statement dated 11/25 and 11/23/66; respectively. It is believed this reply is appropriate for Paxton's ldter and those of a similar nature.

Reference: THE WARREN COMMISSION REPORT

Dear Mr. Hoover:

I have come to the conclusion that the American people have a great scandal on their hands, regarding the above referenced Report, and that it is high time we faced up to it!

No matter in what direction we review The Warren Report -- great, gaping holes appear, and it is a very popular assumption among the citizenry of this nation that this Report neither did justice to the facts nor to national interests nor to our American institutions!

Knowing that the FBI is an investigating body only, and can act only as directed by The Department of Justice -- are you also restricted under order of the President, and the Justice of the Supreme Court? Please inform me on this.

Was Oswald at any time an agent, employee, or informant of the FBI, or associated with the FBI? Did the FBI ever use Oswald's services in any other capacity? Did the FBI ever attempt to recruit Oswald in any capacity?

The Warren Commission Report must come out of hiding, and Truth must be given freedom. Otherwise, the public's imagination will run away with itself, and more innocent people will unduly suffer.

Dear Mrs. Cassil:

V. T.

Your letter was received on February 27th.

This Bureau, as a Federal investigative agency, is charged with the duty of investigating violations of the laws of the United States, collecting evidence in cases in which the United States is or may be a party in interest, and performing other duties imposed upon it by law.

At the direction of President Johnson, the FBI conducted a prompt, intensive, objective and thorough investigation of the assassination of former President Kennedy, and all of the material developed by the FBI in connection with this investigation was turned over to the Warren Commission for its consideration. I can assure you that Lee Harvey Oswald was never an employee or "agent" of the FBI nor did he have any affiliation whatsoever with this Bureau.

I have received your letter of February 24th and want to thank you for the generous comments you expressed concerning my work.

With regard to your question in reference to an alleged variance between reports prepared by the FBI and the Warren Commission Report, I am enclosing some material which I trust will clarify this matter for you. The Commission was unable to determine what struck Mr. James T. Tague in the cheek.

Dear Mr. Hoover :

I understand that the F.B.I. investigation of the Kennedy assassination does not reach the same conclusions as the Warren Commission's Report. I am curious to know how the F.B.I. Summary Report differs from the Warren Report. Also, has it ever been established if James Tague, a bystander during the incident, was hit by the assassin's bullets or fragments of a bullet ?

I wish some information also on the following subject. At the University of Florida, where I am a student, there are several organizations which I feel are left wing groups. The one that appears most prominant on the campus is the Students for a Democratic Society (S.D.S.). I have often wondered if this is a Communist oriented group and if they are on the F.B.I. list of subversive organizations.

With my admiration and respect for you and your organization, I feel your answers to my questions are the "final word" on those subjects.

To a man whose name and organization are household words held in the highest esteem by the American public, I want to say, thank you, Mr. Hoover, for helping to make and keep our country a safe and free America. I pray that you will continue to direct and run the Federal Bureau of Investigation for many years to come.

JOSEPH A. BALL, COUNSEL TO WARREN COMMISSION

I thought you would be interested in learning of the remarks made by Mr. Joseph A. Ball, Counsel to the Warren Commission, at a luncheon Thursday, March 16, 1967, sponsored by the National District Attorneys Association at its 1967 Midwinter Conference, Statler-Hilton Hotel, Los Angeles, California. Inspector W. Lynn Edwards of the Bureau, who maintains liaison with the association, was in attendance.

Mr. Ball described the functioning of the Warren Commission. He made a devastating refutation of Mark Lane and several other critics of the Warren report. In paying highest tribute to FBI work, Mr. Ball said some persons may question the Commission's use of the FBI but he felt it entirely proper for the Commission to avail itself of an investigative body which he described as the very finest in the world. In referring to FBI reporting techniques, he said he had never seen such thorough, objective, dispassionate reporting, devoid of all coloring, opinion, and all partiality. He characterized the reports as reading like "a stream of conscience." He mentioned the FBI had interviewed over 25,000 persons and handled all leads quickly and thoroughly. He described the FBI Laboratory as "absolutely the finest in the world, bar none."

Mr. Ball referred to the current New Orleans angle involving the activities of New Orleans District Attorney James Garrison. Although taking a "no comment" position, Mr. Ball described how thoroughly all New Orleans angles had been checked out by the Warren Commission and said the FBI had combed the French Quarter and the homosexuals there without developing any evidence of a conspiracy involving Lee Harvey Oswald. Mr. Ball conceded the Warren Commission had realized the possibility some future evidence might arise to shed additional light on the Lee Harvey Oswald case but he insisted such a development could not be considered as any indictment of the thorough job performed by the Warren Commission with all the available evidence at the time. Mr. Ball added he had not personally seen

JOHN F. KENNEDY

Reference is made to your letter dated March 13, 1967, in captioned matter, your reference 125-11.

In connection with your inquiry concerning Commission Document Number 75, your attention is directed to our letter of August 10, 1965, entitled "Public Disclosure of Warren Commission Records." Attached to our letter of August 10, 1965, was a memorandum dated August 10, 1965, which set forth the results of our review of material available at the National Archives in connection with the Warren Commission Report. Page eleven of this list set forth the exact pages of Commission Document Number 75 which were to be excised from the public domain. Also set forth were the guidelines which were applicable to the pages which were to be excised from public review.

Our basic position concerning the public disclosure of material emanating from this Bureau in connection with our investigations of events relating to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy was expressed in our letter to you of February 15, 1965, and was repeated in our letter of August 10, 1965. You were informed that it was our view that the final decision as to the public disclosure of the material in question rests with the Department of Justice.

In accordance with your request, we will disseminate to you on an immediate basis as we have been doing data relating to the investigation of the assassination now being conducted by New Orleans District Attorney Jim C. Garrison.

This is in response to your February 24 memorandum regarding public disclosure of 55 pages of Warren Commission Document No. 75, which have been excluded from public disclosure under guidelines approved by McGeorge Bundy, Special Assistant to the President. Your memo states that the Bureau has no objection to public disclosure of these pages.

We understand that in addition to these 55 pages there are another approximately 50 pages of Commission Document No. 75 which have been excluded from public disclosure under the same guidelines. We would appreciate your advising us whether the Bureau has any objection to public disclosure of these remaining pages.

Further, it is requested that the Bureau furnish to the Department copies of all FBI investigative reports (except Commission Document No. 75 and except information which has been furnished in the series of memos beginning about February 20, 1967) which relate to the investigation now being conducted by New Orleans District Attorney Garrison or to any alleged New Orleans area plot to assassinate President Kennedy.

Attached is a copy of a letter to the Bureau from the Attorney General dated 3-13-67 in captioned matter. Your attention is directed to paragraph three of the Attorney General's letter, wherein he requests to be furnished copies of all FBI investigative reports dealing with any alleged New Orleans area plot to assassinate President Kennedy.

You should immediately make a thorough review of your files concerning both the Assassination File and the Lee Harvey Oswald File to locate any information dealing with an alleged New Orleans area plot to assassinate President Kennedy. Copies of reports or letterhead memoranda reporting such alleged plots should be forwarded to the Bureau for transmittal to the Department. One copy of each report or letterhead memorandum reporting such plots should be submitted.

This matter must be given your immediate attention in order that this data may be furnished to the Attorney General at the earliest possible date.

It will not be necessary for your office to check the list of names attached to the enclosed Attorney General's letter through your indices. Information concerning these individuals is being furnished to the Department at Seat of Government where warranted as developments occur involving them.

SUBJECT: ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY

By letter dated 3/13/67, the Attorney General requested to be advised by Bureau whether approximately 50 pages of Commission Document Number 75 which has been excluded from public disclosure can now be made available to public disclosure. The Attorney General also requested to be furnished copies of FBI investigative reports dealing with the investigation being conducted by New Orleans District Attorney Garrison or to any alleged New Orleans area plot to assassinate President Kennedy.

COMMISSION DOCUMENT NUMBER 75: Commission Document Number 75 is a copy of the report of Special Agent Warren C. DeBrueys dated 12/2/63 at Dallas, Texas, entitled "Lee Harvey Oswald, Internal Security - Russia - Cuba." It consists of 737 pages. Fifty-five pages of this report contains information dealing with David William Ferrie, who was alleged by New Orleans District Attorney Garrison to be involved in the plot to assassinate the late President Kennedy. Ferrie died 2/22/67. By memorandum dated 2/24/67, we informed the Attorney General we had no objection if the Department made these 55 pages of our report relating to Ferrie available to the public, but pointed out that the final decision as to public disclosure of such material rests with the Department of Justice. The reason these 55 pages were originally withheld from the public domain was because they contained data showing Ferrie was a homosexual. Following Ferrie's death, the news media carried numerous articles reporting Ferrie was a homosexual and accordingly, we told the Department we had no objection if the Department desired to make the material relating to Ferrie available to the public in the public interest.

An additional 63 pages of Commission Document Number 75 is currently being withheld from public domain, since these pages contain information that prohibits public disclosure of them under guidelines approved by Mr. McGeorge Bundy, former Special Assistant to the President. These pages deal with confidential bank records, telephone company records, hospital records, arrest records of individuals not involved in the assassination and similar other material which was volunteered to us in confidence.

Memorandum Branigan to Sullivan
Re: ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY

By memorandum dated 8/10/65 entitled "Public Disclosure of Warren Commission Records," we furnished the Department a list of FBI documents that we had reviewed in accordance with Departmental instructions. We listed those documents which could or could not be placed in the public domain under the guidelines set by Mr. Bundy. Included in our list was Commission Document Number 75, and we specifically pointed out to the Department the exact pages that required exclusion from the public domain and the guidelines which dictated such exclusion. We also told the Department that the final decision as to public disclosure of the material in question rests with the Department of Justice.

DEPARTMENT'S REQUEST FOR FBI INVESTIGATIVE REPORTS: In his letter dated 3/13/67, the Attorney General requested copies of all FBI investigative reports which related to the investigation now being conducted by New Orleans District Attorney Garrison or to any alleged New Orleans area plot to assassinate President Kennedy. The Department stated it did not desire to be furnished Commission Document Number 75 or memoranda beginning about 2/20/67 relating data concerning Garrison's investigation. The day-to-day developments of the investigation of Garrison which comes to our attention through our sources has been immediately made available to the Department. We will continue to make such dissemination. The request of the Attorney General to be furnished all FBI reports relating to any alleged New Orleans area plot to assassinate President Kennedy is a sweeping request. Throughout our investigation, we received a tremendous number of allegations of plots by pro-Castro Cubans, anti-Castro Cubans, left wing elements, ultra-right elements and the like. To pinpoint each investigative report concerning such allegations will necessitate a serial by serial file review. The New Orleans Office can best handle such review, since all data concerning such plots are contained in New Orleans files regarding the assassination case and the Lee Harvey Oswald case.

ACTION: 1. Attached is a memorandum to the Attorney General referring him to our letter of 8/10/65 and the list attached thereto which set out the pages to be excluded from the public domain in accordance with guidelines established by Mr. McGeorge Bundy, former Special Assistant to the President. We are informing the Attorney General that the final decision as to public disclosure of the material in question presently excluded in Commission Document Number 75 rests with the Department of Justice. We are also informing the Attorney General we are making a thorough review of our files and will furnish to him copies of FBI communications containing any alleged plot in the New Orleans area to assassinate President Kennedy.

NOVEMBER 22, 1963
DALLAS, TEXAS

In accordance with your request of March 7, 1967, this is to advise that while most of the results of our investigation in New Orleans, Louisiana, of the assassination of the late President Kennedy is available to the public, there are some documents that are not available to the public.

The data being withheld from the public is in accordance with guidelines approved by Mr. McGeorge Bundy, former Special Assistant to the President. The guidelines approved by Mr. Bundy were furnished to this Bureau as an attachment to former Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach's letter to this Bureau dated July 6, 1965, entitled "Public disclosure of Warren Commission records."

NOTE: The vast majority of our investigation in New Orleans is contained in reports which have been made available to the public. However, some data was held back from the public since it fell within the guidelines approved by McGeorge Bundy. According to the guidelines, the type of data to be held back from the public were as follows: Statutory requirements which prohibit public disclosure; respect of security classification of the data being reported; data detrimental to the administration and enforcement of laws and regulations of the U. S.; information which would reveal identity of confidential sources; information consisting of rumor, gossip and the like, the disclosure of which would harm or embarrass innocent persons. By letter to the Attorney General dated August 10, 1965, we stated that in our view the final decision as to the public disclosure of material being held back from the public rests with the Department of Justice.

ReBuairtel to all SACs 2/24/67, containing instructions concerning the handling of information regarding investigation being conducted by District Attorney James C. Garrison in New Orleans.

As a result of publicity concerning this matter, the volume of mail regarding the assassination has increased measurably. A majority of the information received is speculative and rumor-type, alleging other individuals are involved in the assassination.

All offices should continue to accept any information regarding the assassination; however, no investigation is to be conducted without Bureau approval irrespective of the nature of the data furnished.

Should pertinent information be received, which by necessity requires immediate investigation or other action, the Bureau is to be notified either by telephone or teletype, depending upon the urgency of the situation.

SUBJECT: ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY NOVEMBER 22, 1963, DALLAS, TEXAS

PURPOSE:

To recommend airtel to the field furnishing additional instructions as to the manner information received concerning the assassination of President Kennedy should be handled.

BACKGROUND:

By airtel dated 2/24/67, all offices were instructed to accept any information furnished relating to District Attorney Garrison's investigation; to advise the Bureau promptly of data received, but that no active investigation was to be conducted. In addition, this airtel instructed that no comments concerning Garrison's investigation should be made and this matter was not to be discussed outside the Bureau.

There has been widespread publicity concerning Garrison's activities in New Orleans and, as a result, we are receiving voluminous information concerning speculation and rumors regarding the assassination. Such information, even though having no apparent connection to developments in New Orleans, should be completely evaluated at the Bureau prior to conducting further inquiries. Accordingly, attached for approval is an airtel to all SACs, instructing that we should continue to accept any information concerning the assassination; however, no investigation is to be conducted without first obtaining Bureau authorization.

In addition, field is being instructed to submit the same day data received a letterhead memorandum containing the pertinent information which can be used for dissemination purposes. In addition, this airtel instructs the field to advise the Bureau by either telephone or teletype of any pertinent information received or data which by necessity should be immediately investigated.

JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY
NOVEMBER 22, 1963
DALLAS, TEXAS

James C. Garrison, District Attorney of New Orleans, Louisiana, has been conducting an independent investigation relating to the assassination of President Kennedy.

His activities have been the subject of numerous press releases which in themselves have been controversial. He has been quoted as saying "I have no reason to believe at this time that Lee Harvey Oswald killed anybody in Dallas on Nov. 22." Garrison has been quoted as saying he had no intention of calling in the FBI, and "we've been able to make more progress in three months with a handful of men than they've been able to do in three years with 5,000 men."

Due to Garrison's irresponsible actions in connection with this matter, no contact is being made with him or any member of his staff.

You are instructed to insure each employee in your Division understands that if he is asked for any information relating to this matter there is to be no comment made; further, this matter is not to be discussed outside the Bureau. However, should information be made available to you voluntarily it will be accepted, and the Bureau is to be promptly advised. No active investigation is to be conducted.

Dear Mrs. Reynolds:

Your letter of March 15th has been received.

At the direction of President Johnson, the FBI conducted a prompt, intensive, objective and thorough investigation of the assassination of former President Kennedy, and all of the material developed by the FBI in connection with this investigation was turned over to the Warren Commission for its consideration.

The FBI has no authority to independently release any information contained in these reports; however, since certain material is available for inspection, I suggest you communicate with the Archivist, National Archives and Records Service, Eighth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C. 20408, for the data you desire.

Sincerely yours,

Another JFK-linked death as conspiracy evidence mounts

BY WILLIAM TURNER

New evidence—accented by a mysterious death—is rapidly turning the case that the Warren Commission couldn't solve into a climatic drama in Orleans Parish, Louisiana.

The un-opportune death of the New Orleans commercial pilot, David William Ferrie, and the simultaneous disclosure by Orleans Parish District Attorney Jim Garrison that he was going to arrest Ferrie this week in connection with the Kennedy assassination has raised the curtain higher on this new and third act of the affair.

Ferrie was found dead in bed on February 22, some 31 hours after being exhaustively interviewed by Garrison. The coroner ascribed death to a ruptured blood vessel at the base of the brain. Because of pills at the bedside, Garrison termed it a suicide.

It might also be pointed out that a competently administered karate chop to the neck, such as possibly killed another assassination figure Jim Koethe of the Dallas Times-Herald, could cause a fatal embolism in the brain vessels.

Although Ferrie had denied knowing Lee Harvey Oswald, a possible connection was through mutual activity in the New Orleans Civil Air Patrol.

When first interrogated by New Orleans authorities in 1963, Ferrie had admitted he traveled to Texas on the afternoon of the assassination, but claimed that it was on a spontaneous hunting trip that did not include Dallas.

Garrison has announced that he had planned to arrest Ferrie in about a week, although he did not connect the suspect with any aircraft that might have been used in a getaway plan. In this respect, the inquiry into the assassination that has been conducted by Ramparts magazine has determined that two witnesses observed a twin engine private plane, engines idling, in a field next to the highway bounding Red Bird airport, a field used primarily by business and pleasure aircraft that is situated just south of Dallas' Oak Cliff area. The witnesses took particular note of the plane because of its location well away from the paved runways and assess strips.

The death of Ferrie adds one more name to the list of mysterious deaths of persons in some way touched by the assassination which was reported in the November issue of Ramparts magazine.

Additional fuel has been heaped on the fire by a new development in the strange death of Thomas Henry Killam, one of those on the Ramparts list. Killam was the husband of Wanda Joyce Killam, a long-time employee of Jack Ruby's Carousel Club, and a close friend of one John Carter, who resided in the same rooming house as Oswald. He left Dallas after the assassination and wandered through Florida, telling his wife he was being hounded by "federal agents.". Two days before his death he called his brother Earl Killam in Dallas and stated: "I'm a dead man. I've run as far as I'm going to run."

On the day of his death, March 17, 1964, in Pensacola, he was summoned from bed by an unidentified phone caller and later was found, his throat fatally cut, in front of a broken store window. At first adjudged suicide, Pensacola authorities have re-opened the case in the light of recent developments.

Garrison's probe has included the questioning of a state prison inmate, a Cuban who formerly lived close to Oswald in New Orleans; a coffee house proprietor whose establishment reportedly was frequented by Oswald and Cubans; and a private detective. The latter, a man named David Lewis, knew Oswald in New Orleans as well as five Cubans who were fanatically anti-Castro; Lewis says he fears for his life and has asked for police protection.

Assassination buffs have long felt that New Orleans, along with Miami, Houston and Mexico City, may well hide the key to unlock the Pandora's Box. Apparently Garrison is on the spoor of an anti-Castro element, and he has developed the intriguing theory that Oswald was associated with this element, had gone to Mexico City with the intent of obtaining a Cuban visa to travel to Havana to assassinate Castro, and, failing that, had been importuned to turn to the President.

According to the State-Item, Garrison has been in Miami recently hunting for a "physically powerful and dangerous" Cuban man who "is believed to be one of a group of Cubans who reportedly hid behind a billboard on the parade route in Dallas Nov. 22, 1963."

The Warren Commission volumes contain the testimony of a Cuban refugee, Mrs. Sylvia Odio, whose father allegedly is still a Castro prisoner on the Isle of Pines.

According to Mrs. Odio, Oswald appeared at her Dallas apartment several weeks before the assassination accompanied by two Latin men who identified themselves as Leopoldo and Angelo. She did not previously know the three.

The next day, she said, Leopoldo telephoned her and mentioned that Oswald had been in the Marine Corps and had said that Cubans should have assassinated President Kennedy for his role in the Bay of Pigs fiasco. Leopoldo also assertedly said that he and his companions had just come from New Orleans and were about to leave on another trip.

Another fascinating angle to New Orleans is the testimony of Attorney Dean Andrews that an enigmatic figure using the name Clay Bertrand had brought Oswald to his office for legal counsel. After the assassination Bertrand telephoned Andrews asking him to defend Oswald. Although Andrews saw Bertrand in a New Orleans bar on one occasion afterward, the man avoided contact and slipped out a rear door. Mark Lane, the Commission's most persistent critic, contends that Andrews, a Louisiana Democratic functionary, agreed to an interview but reneged after "contacting the White House" and being told not to talk.

in refuting various comments by Edward J. Epstein, Roberts refers to an inaccurate FBI report which is the investigative report by our two Agents who observed the President's autopsy. Roberts use of words in explaining these reports as compared to the official autopsy is poorly contrived as this was explained in the Director's news release in November, 1966, regarding this matter. This book was reviewed by the General Investigative Division currently.

SUBJECT: "THE DEATH OF A PRESIDENT"
BY WILLIAM MANCHESTER

By memorandum dated March 24, 1967, the captioned book was reviewed in which it was pointed out that, among other things, Manchester had charged that immediately after President Kennedy's assassination the FBI had assigned fifty agents to a crash investigation, wrote a "skimpy report," and then "leaked the report to a news magazine." Relative to the "leak," Mr. Tolson has asked, "What about this?"

A review of our files reflects that the Bureau's first report was completed on December 9, 1963. Through Deputy Attorney General Katzenbach, copies were sent to members of the Warren Commission, the Department of Justice and the Secret Service. In a memorandum from Mr. DeLoach to Mr. Mohr on that date it was pointed out that the Bureau told Mr. Katzenbach that it was "charging him with the safety and handling of these reports inasmuch as we have discharged our duties, other than the continuing investigation."

Manchester, in making his leak charge, is manufacturing a falsehood. This is consistent with the other snide and inaccurate remarks in his book about the FBI. The FBI did not leak the results of its investigation and did everything it could to maintain the security of its reports. Of course, the press was full of all kinds of speculation as to what the FBI was or was not finding in its investigation. Manchester offers no proof of his allegation which is just a wild statement on his part.

SYNOPSIS

The New York Office has obtained from Harper & Row an advance copy of captioned book which will be officially released April 7th. Book is lengthy (647 pages of text; 710 pages total). Contains appendices, chronology of events for period November 20-25, 1963, source materials utilized by Manchester, identities of persons interviewed by author, maps and index. Key portions of book previously serialized in Look Magazine. Book deals with events surrounding assassination of President Kennedy; not subsequent investigation. Reflects tremendous amount of work and compilation by Manchester. FBI mentioned frequently, but does not play prominent role in narrative. Major comments about FBI previously publicized in Look series. For example, the comment that the Director did not send Attorney General Robert Kennedy a letter of condolence and that the Director's attitude was one of "no compassion;" a so-called favorite joke of President Kennedy in which Kennedy would state that the three most overrated things in the world were the State of Texas, the FBI and whatever else came to mind; that President Johnson applied a prod to the FBI to get the Dallas investigation underway; that Johnson showed Ted Sorenson an FBI memo that the rulers of an unfriendly power had been hoping for Kennedy's death. The memo was too vague for serious consideration and Sorenson allegedly commented that it was "meaningless." (The Director did send Mr. Robert Kennedy a letter of condolence. In this connection Mr. Hoover has commented, "Manchester is a liar, but it is obvious he was fed this by RFK." In reference to the Sorenson incident, no such FBI memo could be identified by the Bureau). In evaluating the assassination, Manchester comments that Lee Harvey

Oswald's visit to Russia and subsequent behavior had brought him "under the active surveillance of the Federal Bureau of Investigation." Manchester adds that "one might have assumed that the seventy-five man FBI office in Dallas would have relayed word of his presence to the five-man Secret Service office there. Nothing of this sort happened." Manchester speculates on all the factors involved: "Conceivably the FBI and the Secret Service did do all that could have been done... Perhaps the blow could not have been averted. Perhaps it was hindsight to suggest otherwise." Toward the end of the book, Manchester comments that "the Secret Service had failed." Investigations of the assassination had begun but "the first steps were disquieting. The FBI assigned fifty agents to a crash study, wrote a skimpy report which dismissed thorny questions with the recurrent phrase 'There is no evidence' - and then leaked the report to a news magazine. The episode was a dismaying example of how threatened bureaucracies, turning a blind eye to the national interest, rise in defense of themselves." In general, Manchester approves of Warren Commission report, but has some reservations. "Although the conduct of the Secret Service, the FBI, and the Dallas police was found to have been less than admirable, they were handled gingerly, and corrective suggestions lacked clarity and force. Their subsequent fate was disheartening. J. Edgar Hoover, furious that his bureau should be criticized at all, protested so vehemently that the public overlooked the report's harsher censure of the Secret Service (which wisely laid low); by the time the Director had finished disciplining his Dallas agents, including the unfortunate Hosty, a great many newspaper readers had forgotten which agency had really been accountable for John Kennedy's safety." Relative to security of notables walking from White House to St. Matthew's Cathedral, Manchester mentions a "vague " warning received from the FBI that the "Director" was "concerned" and "advised against" the march. This warning angered Sargent Shriver who reportedly stated that all were concerned and one didn't have to be Director of FBI to know the march would be dangerous. "It's a ploy, so that if anybody gets shot the Director can say, 'I told you so.' It'd be a different story if he'd turned up hard proof that some famous gangster had taken an apartment on Connecticut Avenue, or if the best agent in the OGPU had checked in at Washington National. Then I'd have to do a double-take. But this is just a self-serving device." The Director, in an exchange of letters with Manchester in February, 1967, relative to the series in Look Magazine, commented that Manchester's "lack of research and irresponsible reporting in this instance (referring to comments on alleged failure to send note of condolence) are most disgusting." DETAILS

BACKGROUND:

The Bureau has received through the New York Office an advance copy of William Manchester's book, "The Death of A President," which is to be published April 7, 1967. This book, which has been highly publicized, deals with the period of President Kennedy's assassination, November 20-November 25, 1963. Excerpts were previously published in Look Magazine. It is an extremely lengthy book (647 pages). It contains an Appendix, a list of source materials, maps pertaining to routes in Dallas and Washington and a diagram of the Presidential plane and an Index.

Mr. Hoover and the FBI are frequently mentioned. The major listings are being set forth below:

p. 32-33

Manchester speculates about Lee Harvey Oswald. Oswald's ravings stamp him as an "incoherent hater, nothing more. Looking for doctrine in them is like looking for bone in a polyp. Yet he had tried to defect, and both his conduct in Russia and his bizarre behavior after his return brought him under the active surveillance of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Inasmuch as the Bureau's handbook charged agents to be on the alert for information 'indicating the possibility of an attempt against the person or safety of the President,' one might have assumed that the seventy-five man FBI office in Dallas would have relayed word of his presence to the five-man Secret Service office there. Nothing of the sort happened. His file was in the hands of FBI Agent James P. Hosty, Jr., a husky, thirty-five-year-old Notre Dame graduate and an outspoken admirer of John F. Kennedy. Since November 4, 1963, Hosty had known that Oswald was employed as a laborer in the Texas School Book Depository at the corner of Houston and Elm Streets. This warehouse provided the deadliest sniper's roost on the Presidential motorcade route, because the motorcade was scheduled to first zig and then zag directly beneath its windows. A gunman could size up the President's car as it approached the building from the front, wait until it pivoted sharply at his feet, and fire as it crept slowly out of the turn to his right. Hosty, however, didn't make the connection. He had received no official notification of the route, and when local newspapers published a map of it, his sole concern was whether or not Jim Hosty would catch a glimpse of Kennedy. 'I noticed that it was coming up Main Street,' he said five months later. 'That was the only thing I was interested in, where maybe I could watch it if I had a chance.'"

Manchester then goes on - talking about all the factors involved: "Conceivably the FBI and the Secret Service did do all that could have been done...Perhaps the blow could not have been averted. Perhaps it was hindsight to suggest otherwise."

p. 119

Makes mention of Kennedy's "pet joke," the last line of which could be adapted to the occasion. It went: "The three most overrated things in the world are the state of Texas, the FBI, and hunting trophies."

p. 181

Immediately after the assassination virtual panic erupted at Parkland Hospital in Dallas. In one instance, "a tall man in a light gray speckled suit shouldered his way past her (Nurse Doris Nelson), shouting, 'I'm FBI!' He appeared violent, and Andy Berg, the closest agent (Secret Service), knocked him down. Sprawled on all fours the intruder gurgled, 'You're not in charge now. What's your name?' 'What's yours?' demanded Kellerman (Roy Kellerman, Secret Service), moving in. Credentials and commission books were whipped out; it turned out that the man really was from the Bureau's Dallas office, though his presence in the hospital was unauthorized. Dragging himself away, he protested, 'J. Edgar Hoover will hear about this!' Hoover did, and the unfortunate agent vanished into the limbo reserved for FBI men whose blunders embarrass the Director."

p. 192

Says that a United Press International Bulletin on the assassination went out from Dallas and that Mr. Hoover, along with other Government officials, learned about the news.

FOUNDATION

p. 195-196

Mr. Hoover is shown as calling the Attorney General's office. Mr. Robert Kennedy is not there and Mr. Hoover talks with Angie Novello, an assistant. The Director then calls Mr. Kennedy at the latter's home in Virginia. Kennedy was at his swimming pool. The Director advises that the President has been shot, and that he would call later when he learns more details.

p. 257

Mr. Hoover calls Attorney General Kennedy again. The Director had been on the phone with Gordon Shanklin, Special Agent in Charge of the Dallas office. "Until a moment ago he hadn't been learning much (he was among those who thought Parkland was called Lakeland), but the most important of the details which he had promised that he would endeavor to get had just come through." Mr. Hoover said that the President was dead, "snappily and hung up."

"He expressed no compassion; he did not seem to be upset. His voice, as the Attorney General recalled afterward, was 'not quite as excited as if he were reporting the fact that he had found a Communist on the faculty of Howard University.' Ordinarily garrulous, he had suddenly turned curt with his superior. It would be charitable to attribute the swift change to the stresses of that afternoon. Yet although Bob Kennedy continued in the Cabinet for over nine months, Hoover, whose office was on the same floor, never walked over to offer his condolences. One of his assistants wrote Kennedy a moving letter, and the agents in the FBI's crime squad sent him a message of sympathy, but their Director, unlike the Director of the CIA, remained sphinxlike. He did speak to Bob one day when they happened to enter the Justice Department together, and he accepted a Christmas gift from him, a pair of cufflinks bearing the Justice seal, but those were their only contacts. It was his brittle consistency which made Hoover unique."

p. 287

Mention is made that Dallas District Attorney Henry M. Wade's assistant, William F. "Bill" Alexander prepared to charge Oswald with murdering the President "as part of an international Communist conspiracy." However, Nicholas Katzenbach persuaded two members of the Vice President's Washington staff to have their Texas contacts kill it. A footnote at this point reads: "Shanklin of the FBI was especially helpful in aborting Alexander's folly."

p. 405

On Friday, November 22, 1963, after the Presidential plane had returned to Washington with the coffin, Mr. Johnson is in the White House. At 7:25 p.m., he called Mr. Hoover. "The Director was home. Unaware that regular programs had been suspended, he had waited until seven o'clock before turning his television on, thinking to catch NBC's nightly newscast on Channel 4. He was watching a rerun of Kennedy's October 22, 1962, missile speech and wondering whether this was the best Huntley and Brinkley could do when the phone rang. His old neighbor said he wanted a complete FBI report on the assassination. Depressing the receiver, Hoover called his office, ordering a special assistant and thirty agents to Dallas."

p. 432

Mention is made that an autopsy made at the Bethesda Naval Hospital: "...the metal from Oswald's bullet was turned over to the FBI."

pp. 457-459

A discussion of the Dallas situation relative to plans for convicting Oswald. Manchester comments that the publicity relative to Oswald and the so-called evidence possessed by law enforcement made responsible lawyers wince - that their comments to the press and television would make their legal case weak. In this connection, Manchester states: "...and when the FBI informed Chief Curry that its handwriting experts had identified the calligraphy on Klein's American Rifleman coupon as Oswald's, Curry revealed the details at a televised press conference. J. Edgar Hoover was furious. The Director called Dallas and warned that there must be no further discussion of FBI evidence in public. Curry admired Hoover and proudly displayed a signed photograph of him on his office wall."

p. 472

Mention is made that Johnson was extremely aggressive in ordering things done. Manchester mentions the new President "fenced sharply with the soft-spoken but immovable Nick Katzenbach over whether the assassination should be investigated by a federal or state board of inquiry; he applied the Johnsonian prod to J. Edgar Hoover, who by now was dispatching fleets of agents to Love Field...."

p. 481

The President and Ted Sorenson confer. The President asked whether Sorenson felt any foreign government might be involved in the assassination, and Sorenson questioned, "Do you have any evidence?" "The answer was that there were no hard facts. Johnson showed him an FBI memo advising him that the rulers of an unfriendly power had been hoping for Kennedy's death. The report was too hazy for serious consideration. There were no names or facts, and the name of the FBI's informant was in code. 'Meaningless,' said Sorenson, handing it back. The President said nothing."

p. 520

Manchester says that in both Kennedy's assassination and Oswald's murder "two vivid threads are evident: warnings of disaster had come from responsible sources, and peace officers, in weighing them, had miscalculated gravely." He then goes on to make the following mention of the FBI: "Actually, the Dallas Police Department's original plan had been to move Oswald at ten o'clock Saturday evening, and J. Edgar Hoover, among others, had retired under the impression that it was being carried through. At 2:15 a.m. Sunday, Hoover's Dallas office began receiving anonymous telephone calls threatening the prisoner's life. The Dallas FBI urged a 3 a.m. transfer - in vain."

p. 528

Manchester comments that after Oswald's murder by Ruby just about everyone thought the assassination actually was a conspiracy. "Indeed, the more a man knew about conspirators, the firmer his conviction was. In the West Wing lobby a Secret Service agent watched Ruby disappear and muttered tightly, 'That was the messenger.' Independently of one another the (Secret) Service, the CIA, and J. Edgar Hoover all assumed a previous link between Ruby and Oswald."

p. 560

For the funeral at St. Matthew's Cathedral were large numbers of security men of all types"...there were squads of FBI agents and the pick of the CIA...."

pp. 574-575

The discussion here centers on the walk of the notables from the White House to St. Matthew's Cathedral. A number of warnings of possible trouble were received - from the RCMP, the FBI and the CIA. "The RCMP had 'received information' that an unidentified French Canadian with an unidentified grievance was heading south to shoot General DeGaulle. The FBI was even vaguer: 'The Director' was 'concerned' and 'advised against' the march. This was too much for Sargent Shriver. Once more the precise businessman was confronted by the gray custard of bureaucracy, and once more he recoiled, emitting sparks. 'That's just ridiculous,' he snapped. 'We're all concerned. You don't have to be the Director of the FBI to know it's going to be dangerous - even the White House doorman knows that. It's a ploy, so that if anybody gets shot the Director can say, 'I told you so.' It'd be a different story if he'd turned up hard proof that some famous gangster had taken an apartment on Connecticut Avenue, or if the best agent in the OGPU had checked in at Washington National. Then I'd have to do a double-take. But this is just a self-serving device.'"

pp. 630-631

Mrs. Kennedy is now leaving the White House and Manchester does some summarizing. He comments that the President pinned the Treasury's highest award on Rufe Youngblood, the Secret Service agent, while, at Mrs. Kennedy's insistence Secretary Dillon also decorated Clint Hill of the Secret Service. He adds that these ceremonies left an undercurrent of dissatisfaction in much of official Washington. "The central fact was that the Secret Service had failed, and there was feeling that the first reaction ought to have been one of collective shame and not of pride in exceptional men - that the medals should have followed investigation of the failure. Investigations had begun, of course, but here, too, the first steps were disquieting. The FBI assigned fifty agents to a crash study, wrote a skimpy report which dismissed thorny questions with the recurrent phrase 'There is no evidence' - and then leaked the report to a news magazine. The episode was a dismaying example of how threatened bureaucracies turning a blind eye to the national interest, rise in defense of themselves."

HARRY RANSOM CENTER FOUNDATION

In general, Manchester approves of the Warren Commission report. "The Commission had met its mandate. Oswald was correctly identified as the assassin; the absence of a cabal was established." However, he has some reservations. "The treatment of related questions was less satisfactory. This was especially true of the findings on Presidential protection. Although the conduct of the Secret Service, the FBI, and the Dallas police was found to have been less than admirable, they were handled gingerly, and corrective suggestions lacked clarity and force. Their subsequent fate was disheartening. J. Edgar Hoover, furious that his bureau should be criticized at all, protested so vehemently that the public overlooked the report's harsher censure of the Secret Service (which wisely laid low); by the time the Director had finished disciplining his Dallas agents, including the unfortunate Hosty, a great many newspaper readers had forgotten which agency had really been accountable for John Kennedy's safety."

In the source section of the book, Manchester mentions that he had interviews with the Director, Mr. DeLoach and Agent Hosty. File 62-111371 reflects that he talked to Mr. Hoover and Mr. DeLoach at the Bureau. On September 24, 1964, (the date Manchester lists for interview with Hosty), he called the Dallas Office and asked to speak with Hosty, without previously identifying himself. Manchester asked several questions, but Hosty said he was not in a position to answer.

OBSERVATIONS:

Manchester's book is a massive compilation of facts, surmises and suppositions. It is tremendously wordy. Already, even before publication, it is a controversial book and will probably continue to be. Manchester makes snide and critical remarks about the FBI and sometime reports information which is completely at variance with the facts, such as the comment that Mr. Hoover did not send a letter of condolence to Mr. Robert Kennedy. In an exchange of letters with Manchester in February, 1967, relative to Manchester's comments about this matter, Mr. Hoover stated: "Frankly, your lack of research and irresponsible reporting in this instance are most disgusting, and I have no alternative but to believe you have set forth a deliberate falsehood specifically designed to malign my reputation." The Look serialization earlier this year contained most of the comments about the FBI which have been outlined above. Manchester is quick to be critical and obviously has interviewed more of the Kennedy than the Johnson people, inasmuch as the book was originally commissioned by the Kennedy family.

The book is being maintained in the Crime Research Section (in the Bureau library).

Dear Mr. Hoover,

I am, like so many Americans, interested in the findings of the Warren Commission.

I want badly to believe that the assassination of President Kennedy was the act of a mentally deranged man a thing on an impulse and alone.

Whether I wish it or not some very serious doubts have been raised in my mind concerning the Warren Commission.

I have read Mr. Lanes book, Rush to Judgement. So many seemingly valid points are raised in this book. Now we have this Garrison case in New Orleans. I don't know what to believe any more.

Our local television station had two programs recently. On the first they presented a panel discussion which presented the case against the Warren Commission findings. Mark Lane was on the panel. The questions raised seemed valid.

On the second program a panel of people involved in the Commission itself sought to support its findings. It was a travesty. Mr Neizer did the lions share of the speaking. I had hoped to see some questions laid to rest. Not so. Mr. Neizer spent most of his time berating Mr. Lane for daring to question the findings of such an illustrious group.

Dear Mrs. Joseph:

With reference to your communication of March 28th, this is to advise that all the material developed by the FBI in connection with our investigation of the assassination of former President Kennedy was turned over to the Warren Commission for its consideration and the results of our inquiry into this matter were subsequently made available to the National Archives by the Warren Commission.

In view of the foregoing, it is suggested answers to any questions you may have concerning the work performed by the Warren Commission or the FBI would be available through review at the National Archives.

I would like to add that the FBI conducted a prompt, intensive, objective, and thorough investigation of the assassination at the direction of President Johnson. The results of this investigation were accurately reported to the Warren Commission, and not one shred of evidence has been developed to link any other person in a conspiracy with Lee Harvey Oswald to assassinate President Kennedy. All available evidence and facts point to one conclusion--that Oswald acted alone in his crime.

Sincerely yours,

ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT

NOVEMBER 22, 1963

Warren Commission

Reference is made to your letter of April 6, 1967, to Assistant to the Director Cartha D. DeLoach of this Bureau which enclosed a copy of a letter to the Attorney General from Mr. George B. Hunt, Managing Editor of "Life" magazine.

In his letter to the Attorney General, Mr. Hunt wrote: "It occurred to me that in view of what has happened in New Orleans, you might be willing to declassify these reports and documents, specifically those which pertain to the alleged conspiracy."

This Bureau knows of no conspiracy in the assassination of President John Fitzgerald Kennedy. Furthermore, New Orleans District Attorney James C. Garrison has made no information available to this Bureau concerning any alleged conspiracy nor, to our knowledge, has he furnished any information in this regard to any Federal agency.

As to the question of declassifying certain Federal Bureau of Investigation reports and documents which were furnished to the Warren Commission by this Bureau and which are now being maintained in the National Archives, please be advised that such data was excluded from public disclosure under the guidelines approved by Mr. McGeorge Bundy, who at that time was Special Assistant to the President. The guidelines approved by Mr. Bundy were furnished to this Bureau as an enclosure to Mr. Nicholas deB. Katzenbach's letter to me dated July 6, 1965, entitled "Public disclosure of Warren Commission records." Mr. Katzenbach was Attorney General at that time.

Our basic position concerning the public disclosure of material emanating from this Bureau in connection with our investigation of the assassination of President Kennedy is contained in my letter of February 19, 1965, to the Attorney General entitled "Public Disclosure of Warren Commission Reports and Working Papers." I informed the Attorney General that it was my view that the final decision as to public disclosure of the material in question rests with the Department of Justice.

In connection with your request to be furnished material for your use in answering Mr. Hunt's letter, I would like to point out that this Bureau has received information from several sources that "Life" magazine has been furnishing some of Garrison's investigation. You may desire to consider the foregoing facts in preparing a reply.

Dear Mr. Attorney General:

It was a great pleasure to have met you Monday evening and I enjoyed your speech very much.

Now I am writing about a matter which concerns the recent developments in New Orleans relating to an alleged conspiracy in the assassination of President Kennedy. We have, as have numerous other journalistic publications, followed those developments with [illegible] curiosity. In the course of our studying the situation in New Orleans and in collecting on-the-record material already in the National Archives, our reporters have learned that certain reports and documents have been classified and withdrawn by the Federal Bureau of Investigation. It occurred to me that in view of what has happened in New Orleans, you might be willing to declassify these reports and documents, specifically those which pertain to the alleged conspiracy.

I hasten to add that I realize this would be an important decision and I make the request so that the information already available can be rounded out in terms of its value, both historically and journalistically.

Warren Commission

Dear Mr. President

I have just completed reading the book WHITEWASH, by Harold Weisberg.

It is a book, slated as a report on the Warren Report.

This book has raised many doubts and questions in my mind, some of which were there before reading it. I feel that if the investigation was as faulty as this book brings to light, that we should indeed have a new Committee go through this book and either prove or disprove beyond a doubt--the questions left unanswered.

I feel as the author does, that we still do not know the full and true story behind President Kennedys' assination, and that I, as a citizen of the United States of America, along with the rest of the citizens, have the right to demand the truth and to see that justice is done for all concerned. I feel that this is the business of every responsible citizen, because anything that affects our Nation is!

Are there any satisfactory explanations or answers, you can give to me, to the discrepancies and such raised by this book.

Please read this book. I would truly appreciate anything you could help me with. Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Diana Moe

FROM : M. A. Jones

SUBJECT: REVIEW OF "WHO'S LISTENING NOW" BY GIL AND ANN CHAPMAN

Captioned book's main theme is criticism of electronic "snooping" both in Government and industry.

Part one deals with Government use of bugging and wiretapping in such "fantastic proportions" that investigation by Senator Long's Subcommittee was necessitated.

PORTIONS OF PART I DEALING WITH THE THE FBI

Pages 21-30 are a rehash of the recent controversy on wiretapping involving the FBI and Robert Kennedy. The authors are particularly critical of Kennedy for denying that he knew of the FBI's bugging activities during his tenure as Attorney General. They imply Kennedy's vendetta against Hoffa was the reason for his having the FBI plant bugging devices to help trap the union official.

Pages 30-36 deal with the FBI's use of electronic devices generally and criticize Mr. Hoover and the FBI for such activities. Most of this material is plagiarized from an article by William Turner, ex-FBI Agent, 11-66, issue of "Ramparts," in which Turner criticized the Bureau's use of wiretaps. The authors state while Mr. Hoover has done an admirable job in keeping the Bureau a nonpolitical body, he runs the Bureau as a "virtual dictator" causing many to quit the FBI because they "found that they were expected to break the law in performance of their duties."

Pages 36-43 deal with the recent highly publicized case in Las Vegas in which the Bureau used bugging in connection with investigating casino "skimming" operations. Pages 43 and 44 mention the testimony in Kansas City by a phone company supervisor before the Long Committee in 1965, that the FBI had placed taps on several private phones between 1961 and 1965. Page 60 also notes Senator Long was attacked by newspapers for investigating the FBI and that Attorney General Katzenbach called on Long to "ask him to lay off the FBI." (This comment was taken from Turner's article mentioned above.)

WIRETAPPING BY OTHER GOVERNMENT AGENCIES

The use of electronic devices by Internal Revenue Service in investigating tax cases is discussed, and Commissioner Sheldon Cohen is criticized for not cooperating with Senator Long's committee. Electronic "snooping" within the Government itself is mentioned, such as the case of Otto Otepka, allegedly the victim of wiretapping by fellow State Department officials.

REMAINING PORTIONS OF BOOK

Parts two and three deal with private bugging, citing sordid divorce scandals exposed by such devices. Use of bugging devices by students against teachers felt to be "too radical" in their classes is also mentioned. Examples are set forth of industrial espionage through use of electronic devices. Part four discusses the mechanics of wiretapping and shows diagrams of devices.

The conclusion reiterates that Government agencies, such as the FBI, violate the Federal law against wiretapping.

To show that the FBI "does not let truth stand in the way of a conviction," the authors on pages 152-4 discuss the 1958 retrial of Kathryn Kelly, "Machine Gun" Kelly's widow. They state that an FBI Laboratory man had concluded that signatures on a kidnap note allegedly prepared by Mrs. Kelly were not hers; however, the FBI refused to give the 1958 jury this data. (This incident appeared in a 1962 article by Edward Bennett Williams; at that time we refuted this allegation.)

GIL AND ANN CHAPMAN, AND PUBLISHERS EXPORT COMPANY

The Chapmans are not identifiable in Bufiles. FBI library sources disclose no references to them as authors. Captioned book notes that the Chapmans, from San Diego, wrote "Was Oswald Alone?," an analysis of facts "ignored" by the Warren Commission. The FBI has recently investigated the publisher in connection with publishing obscene literature. (Interstate Transportation of Obscene Matter).

OBSERVATIONS

Captioned book is a poorly written, sensational-type rehash of information already public; it is doubtful it will receive wide distribution. The authors, while critical of the FBI, are particularly hostile toward Robert Kennedy. (Commissioner Cohen, has called our attention to the book as a "sleazy" repetition of data on the wiretap controversy.)

SUBJECT: "THE SCAVENGERS AND CRITICS OF THE WARREN REPORT" - PUBLISHED BY DELACORTE PRESS BY RICHARD WARREN LEWIS, based on an investigation by... BOOK REVIEW ...LAWRENCE SCHILLER

SYNOPSIS: (for the sake of clarity in this memo Lewis and Schiller will be referred to as "the authors.")

Review of above-titled book requested by Mr. DeLoach. FBI is mentioned throughout book. Most references merely factual. But the last chapter, titled "THE REASONS FOR DOUBT," pp. 169-179, contains criticisms of FBI and Secret Service. Typical of these criticisms is a sentence contained on p. 171 relative to possible conspiracy. The authors state: "And conceivably the FBI and Secret Service probes did not dig deeply enough into this ticklish area."

Bob Considine has an "Introduction" in book and states Lane must be accorded the No. 1 spot among the coterie that Governor Connally has dismissed as scavengers. To date, he appears indestructible. Considine feels that author Lewis and investigator Schiller have made a notable contribution toward a clearer understanding of the assassination. Schiller states in his foreword, he was in Dallas 3 1/2 hours after the assassination took place as a staff representative of the "Saturday Evening Post" and he saw the chaos and horror of that time. Authors feel majority of accusations against Commission unfounded and in some cases intentionally distorted. Authors accuse Lane of using gimmicks of professional huckster--distortion, innuendo, conjecture, allusion and sheer fantasy. Background data on Lane's civil rights participation and arrest included. Testimony of SA Shaneyfelt set forth. (pp. 69-70) Mrs. Sylvia Meagher regarded as the "Housewives' Supersleuth" and the unchallenged authority on the 26 volumes of the Warren Report. Separate chapters devoted to Penn Jones, Jr., and Edward J. Epstein, their theories of conspiracy, etc. Director's name mentioned p. 94 when authors state Commission counsel Liebeler loaned Epstein two FBI reports, one of which bore FBI seal "and J. Edgar Hoover's name on the cover...." Authors discuss observations of Mrs. Carolyn Walther which suggested a possible conspiracy and Epstein stated insufficient attention was paid to her observations. Retired journalist Harold Weisberg who accused Commission of pursuing preconceived case of Oswald is discussed in chapter V. At bottom of p. 125, Weisberg alleges the FBI and the Secret Service framed the whole thing, not the murder, but everything that has happened since. Additional testimony of SA Shaneyfelt contained on pp. 129-131. Chapter VII, p. 163, deals with George C. Thomson, California, who "peddles the most bizarre assassination theory of them all. Five people were killed in Dealey Plaza... The suspect is Lyndon B. Johnson." Last chapter "THE REASONS FOR DOUBT," pp. 169-179, contain authors' allegations against FBI and Secret Service. "Sloppiness in both the FBI and Secret Service photographic re-enactments of the assassination left the door ajar for the critics." (p. 173) This statement is typical of the statements made by the authors against the FBI and the Secret Service in these last few pages of the book.

OF THE WARREN REPORT"

BUFILES:

No record in Bufiles on author Richard Warren Lewis. Several references on Lawrence Schiller, who is a contract photographer for the "Saturday Evening Post." Bureau Agent interviewed him on 3-5-64 relative to Schiller advising Jack Ruby's attorney Tom Howard that the "Post" was interested in a story which would be of mutual benefit to the "Post" and to Howard's client, Ruby. Schiller was very cooperative. Later he sent a transcript of Ruby's conversation with his attorneys and his family. He offered Director a copy of the tape. Mr. Hoover thanked him for transcript and declined tape. Recently, Schiller furnished identity of Mark Lane's confidential informant who allegedly overheard a conversation of a meeting between Jack Ruby, Dallas Police Officer J. D. Tippit and Bernard Weissman. Lane's informant was identified as Paul Bridewell and Dallas is currently conducting investigation to locate Bridewell so that he may be interviewed.

RECOMMENDATION:

That no action be taken as no new facts have been presented in this book. The last chapter represents another very general attack on the Warren Commission, the United States Secret Service and the FBI. But there is not one thing specific. The book and the allegations are nothing more than a rehash of the same old story. It is obviously a commercial venture by another author, Richard Warren Lewis, to capitalize on criticism of the Warren Report.

SUBJECT: "THE SCAVENGERS AND CRITICS OF THE WARREN REPORT"
BY RICHARD WARREN LEWIS, based on an investigation by...
BOOK REVIEW ...LAWRENCE SCHILLER

DETAILS

The above-titled book bearing the subtitle "The Endless Paradox" was written by Richard Warren Lewis based upon an investigation by Lawrence Schiller with an introduction by Bob Considine. It has been reviewed at the request of Mr. DeLoach. The FBI is mentioned throughout the book more than 50 times. Most of the references are merely factual but the authors are somewhat critical in the last chapter of the book as set forth in this memorandum.

In his introductory remarks Considine states that author Richard Warren Lewis and investigator Lawrence Schiller have made a notable contribution toward a clearer understanding of the assassination of John Fitzgerald Kennedy...he states this book "shapes up as the Rosetta Stone of this Report." Considine states that Mark Lane must be accorded the No. 1 spot among the coterie that Governor Connally has dismissed as scavengers. To date, he appears indestructible. He states that regardless of the fact that Lane has appeared before the Commission and has had a host of open confrontations at his lectures, his book, "Rush to Judgment" is still with us. He further states that "One hopes that the work of Lewis and Schiller gets airborne through the smog spread by the poisoned calculations of the professional cultists." (pp 7 - 10)

In his "Foreword" Lawrence Schiller states he was in Dallas three and one-half hours after the assassination took place, as a staff representative of the "Saturday Evening Post" and he saw the chaos and the horror of that time and the sights and sounds of Dallas in November, 1963, are impossible to forget. In his introduction, he points out that the investigation which he and Richard Lewis conducted to get the facts for this book was not conducted from an arm chair; that they returned to Dallas again and again; that they went to

Washington, D. C., to check out facts at the National Archives; they taped interviews with Commission members and members of their staff; they traveled 18,000 miles to seek out witnesses and they met with the critics themselves. Schiller stated that in the end, there was no doubt in their minds that the majority of accusations and allegations against the Commission were unfounded and had been based on material that was not only misinterpreted but, in some cases, intentionally distorted. (pp. 11 - 15)

In speaking of Mark Lane on page 20, he states Lane was succeeding with the gimmicks of the professional huckster--distortion, innuendo, conjecture, allusion and even sheer fantasy. "A high point of the routine occurred when he dramatically unveiled well-coached witnesses he thought should have been quizzed by the Commission. He showed no restraint in hinting that President Johnson was protecting the real assassins." On page 21, he states that Lane embraced the civil rights movement in 1961; that he was arrested and convicted of breaching the peace in Jackson, Mississippi, where he and a Negro leader attempted to use segregated facilities at the municipal airport. The authors take Lane to task for his evasive testimony on two separate occasions before the Warren Commission and they set forth a variety of data concerning Lane to show his methods and his rather irrational behavior.

In chapter II, the testimony of SA Lyndal L. Shaneyfelt is set forth and the authors refer to him as a photographic expert with the FBI who made exaustive tests to determine the authenticity of certain exhibits concerning the Oswald rifle photograph. (pp. 69-70)

At the beginning of chapter II, titled "The Housewives' Underground," the authors quote Mark Lane as saying that for three years there has been an unorganized group of housewives, editors and students who have the 26 volumes of the Warren Report in their homes and they have played a very important role in developing the body of dissenting information and that he, Mark Lane, is part of that network. A great deal of space is devoted to one of the leaders of this housewives' underground movement, Mrs. Sylvia Meagher, a widow who was regarded as the "Housewives' Supersleuth"--the unchallenged authority (among the skeptics) on the 26 volumes. They interviewed her and questioned her in detail.

M. A. Jones to Wick Memo
OF THE WARREN REPORT"

Beginning on page 79, the authors devote a chapter to Penn Jones, Jr., who is convinced there were at least two riflemen firing simultaneously and he stated he knew of 18 people who were in one way or another associated with the assassination and who are now dead. Jones spread his incredible story among television and radio audiences in some of the biggest cities in the country. He published a book called "Forgive My Grief" which served as a Bible for his faithful flock. Certain photographs are contained in this chapter and stories of various deaths are contained therein.

Chapter IV is titled "Edward J. Epstein." He is a 31-year-old Harvard University graduate student; he gave up a fellowship to produce his thesis for a master's degree in government. His subject was the workings of the Warren Commission. And, through his mentor, Professor Andrew Hacker, Commission members and staff met with Epstein and he eventually gained access to privileged files and reports. A swift metamorphosis occurred once his thesis was completed. Without informing his benefactors he transformed his thesis into the book titled "Inquest" which was a broadside against the findings and methods of the Commission.

"The chemicals that catalyzed Epstein's innocent efforts into a best seller were two FBI reports, unmarked as to classification, given to him by assistant Commission counsel Wesley J. Liebeler under representation that they were to be used only in connection with his thesis. One of the blue-bound volumes, imprinted with the FBI seal and J. Edgar Hoover's name on the cover was a summary report dated December 9, 1963, which capsuled what FBI investigations into the assassination had uncovered up until that date: ...." The second FBI document referred to was a supplemental report dated January 16, 1964. Both of these documents directly collided with the final official autopsy conclusions contained in the Warren Report." (pp. 93 - 95)

On pages 105 through 109, the authors discuss the observations of Mrs. Carolyn Walther which suggested a possible conspiracy and Epstein stated that insufficient attention was paid to her observations.

Chapter V deals with Harold Weisberg, a retired journalist who accused the Commission of pursuing a preconceived case against Oswald.

At the bottom of page 125, he states that his book is the one that does not draw upon eye-witnesses; that he is the severest critic of the Commission because he restricts himself to the Commission's information; he states the FBI and the Secret Service framed the whole thing, not the murder part, everything that has happened since. Additional testimony of the FBI photographic expert Shaneyfelt is contained on pages 129 through 131 when he was questioned by Commission counsel Arlen Specter and Commissioner Gerald R. Ford.

Chapter VI is devoted to the "Superbuffs" and the authors state the numbing wreckage wrought by the fourth Presidential assassination within a century has washed up a curious assortment of flotsam and jetsam. It is hard for people who have turned into the category of amateur detectives to believe that one deranged individual could possibly have murdered someone of the stature of the late President.

Chapter VII, beginning on page 163, deals with George C. Thomson of Glendale, California, a consulting civil engineer who peddles the most bizarre assassination theory of them all. "Five people were killed in Dealey Plaza. There were at least twenty-two bullets fired. The suspect is Lyndon B. Johnson. An automatic weapon equipped with a silencer was used. Kennedy was not killed. He was impersonated in the Presidential limousine by Officer J. D. Tippit."

Chapter VIII is titled "The Reasons For Doubt." This is the last chapter of the book and contains the authors' own doubts as to certain phases of the whole investigation they conducted. The authors state on page 170 that the gravest errors committed by this resourceful computer-age investigation were directly attributable to the same human frailties which have existed for centuries. They say "A conspiracy is difficult to prove with the scientific certainty of, say, the tracing of a bullet to a weapon...Instead of employing every conceivable means to establish the possible existence of such an explosive likelihood, as the Commission staff did in the area of ballistics and trajectory, the conspiracy investigations of the FBI and the Secret Service alone were believed implicitly...The Commission did check out the possibility of the FBI and/or the Secret Service being involved in a possible plot. This was done by using the Internal Revenue Service and other Government agencies for investigative reports and conceivably the FBI and Secret Service probes did not dig deep enough into this ticklish area." (p. 171)

M. A. Jones to Wick Memo
RE: "THE SCAVENGERS AND CRITICS
OF THE WARREN REPORT"

The authors mention Garrison's accusation of a conspiracy between Clay Shaw and David Ferrie and others on pages 171 and 172.

On page 173 the authors state "Sloppiness in both the FBI and Secret Service photographic re-enactments of the assassination left the door ajar for the critics." They did not deal with the fact that in the re-enactment at the scene of the crime a Cadillac limousine was substituted for a Lincoln Continental and one would think that the FBI would rephotograph Billy Lovelady to establish irrefutably his resemblance to Oswald and there is no indication that this was done. The authors go on to criticize the FBI and the Secret Service for what they consider discrepancies in the re-enactment on Dealey Plaza and Neely Street which appear in the Warren Report. (pages 174 and 175)

The authors relate that much of the abuse leveled at the Commission protests the manner in which its hearings were conducted; that the Commission has been denounced for the hasty manner in which it arrived at its final conclusions. (p. 178)

You will also note that the information reported on this page is available only through issuance of a subpoena duces tecum directed to J. B. Wadsworth, District Manager, Western Union, Carondelet Street, New Orleans, Louisiana.

In addition to the information set forth above, please be advised that Special Agent Kennedy has investigated both pro-Castro and anti-Castro activity in the New Orleans area for several years. Results of such investigation, unless related to inquiries regarding the assassination of President Kennedy, were not furnished to the Warren Commission nor is such data contained in the files of the National Archives.

Also, since December, 1966, Special Agent Kennedy has received information volunteered to him by a number of individuals concerning the investigation of the assassination being conducted by New Orleans District Attorney James C. Garrison. Included among these individuals are Jack S. Martin, Dr. Carlos Bringuier, Bob Cutman and several established sources of our New Orleans Office. All pertinent data furnished by these individuals has been furnished to the Department. It, of course, is not contained in Warren Commission records at the National Archives nor is it available to the public.

Mr. J. Edgar Hoover
Federal Bureau of Investigation
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Hoover,

Recently, my husband and I attended the Young Men's Business Club meeting held in New Orleans, at the Roosevelt Hotel. Mr. Mark Lane was the speaker. After hearing his informative talk I rushed home to read his book, "Rush To Judgement."

It is time the American people had a few answers to this matter. Therefore, I am writing to you. Isn't your answer as to what happened to the numbering of the frames, "It was a printer's error," a trite one? Why not bring the evidence before the public instead of hiding it away until everyone is dead and gone? Seemingly there are a great many people who do not want to talk about the assessination of President Kennedy. (Incidentally, I am a Republican.) Why???- What is there to hide about the death of a President?

Always I have looked to the FBI for a strong rule over our government and country. I am highly disillusioned! Perhaps "Masters of Deceit" is a rather fitting explanation after all.

I am interested in a reply to my letter,

Sincerely,
Elizabeth Richards (Mrs.)

Dear Mrs. Richards:

Mr. Hoover received your letter of May 4th and asked me to advise you that at the direction of President Johnson, the FBI conducted a prompt, intensive, objective and thorough investigation into the assassination of former President Kennedy. All of the material developed in connection with this investigation was turned over to the Warren Commission for its consideration, and this material was subsequently made available to the National Archives by the Warren Commission. Certain of this material is available for inspection, and you may communicate with the Archivist, National Archives and Records Service, 8th Street and Pennsylvania Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C. 20408, for any data you desire.

The printing error which appears in Volume 18 of the "Hearings Before the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy" is a transposition of two frame numbers; however, this mistake does not exist in the actual Commission exhibit from which the Report was prepared. The National Archives is aware an error was made in printing the material released to the public, but this in no way has any bearing on the accuracy of the source material of the Report.

Regarding your reference to the FBI exerting "a strong rule over our Government and country," Mr. Hoover asked me to inform you that the FBI is strictly an investigative agency of the Federal Government and, as such, reports the results of its investigations directly to the Department of Justice. This Bureau, therefore, exerts no control over any portion of our Government and, in fact, as a matter of long-standing policy, Mr. Hoover has refrained from injecting either himself or the FBI into any matters affecting national policy.

SUBJECT: TERRY ROJIC
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

By letter dated 11/27/66 (attached) Rojic expressed disagreement with the Director's statement concerning the validity of the findings of the Warren Commission in connection with the assassination of the late President John F. Kennedy. Rojic states it is his opinion the Warren Commission Report is an insult to the American people and that it is obvious Lee Harvey Oswald did not act alone. Rojic comments he believes the American public deserves to know the whole truth.

Bufiles disclose Rojic has corresponded with the Bureau on one prior occasion and by outgoing 2/19/65 he was advised of the confidential nature of Bureau files. Our letter to him of 2/19/65 was in response to a communication from him inquiring about one R. J. Havighurst, who was then a subject of a Security Matter-C investigation.

Since it is apparent Rojic is convinced the American public is being misled by the report prepared by the Warren Commission and the Director's recent statement concerning this matter, there appears to be no purpose in answering his letter of 11/27/66.

RECOMMENDATION:

That no acknowledgment be made of the receipt of Rojic's letter of 11/27/66.

Re: WARREN COMMISSION REPORT

Dear Mr. Hoover:

Although there is no man in public office in America for whom I have more respect than you, Mr. Hoover, I find that I must disagree with your recent statement concerning the validity of the Warran Commission "findings".

In my opinion, the Report of the Warren Commission is an insult to the American people. It is obvious that Oswald did NOT act alone. The reason that Oswald was eternally silenced indicates that he was but the visible tool for an invisible group.

I know from your actions and also your writings, such as MASTERS OF DECEIT, that you are deeply dedicated to preserving the freedom of this great nation, and I think it important to America's freedom that the truth be known concerning the roles of Ruby and Oswald in the assassination of John F. Kennedy. The office of the president does not belong to the government, or any select government group, but to all Americans; therefore, the American public deserves to know the WHOLE TRUTH.

Yours truly,

RE: CBS TV NEWS SPECIAL ON WARREN COMMISSION

Re NY phone call to Bureau 6/5/67.

On 6/5/67 Mr. SAMUEL ROBERTS, CBS News, NY, telephonically advised that a CBS TV news special was going to be presented on June 26,27,28, 1967 concerning the Warren Commission. He indicated that this show would be one hour in length on these three consecutive nights, the times of which were not yet set. He indicated that the show would be seen on the entire CBS TV net work.

He inquired if NY had a picture in color of the FBI seal which could from time to time be shown in the background for this special.

On the instruction of the Bureau, NYO advised Mr. Roberts that such a picture was not available.

On 6/6/67 it was discreetly ascertained that the program would be shown from 10:00 pm to 11:00 pm on 6/26,27 and 28/67.

It was also ascertained that a bulletin publicizing this program would be issued shortly. NYO will make every effort to obtain a copy of this bulletin and forward it to the Bureau when it is released.

SUBJECT: ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT
JOHN F. KENNEDY
MISCELLANEOUS INFORMATION CONCERNING

Re Bureau telephone call to New York, 5/29/67.

On 6/6/67, the film, "Rush to Judgment" was reviewed at the Carnegie Hall Cinema, NYC, by SA JOHN J. AHERN, as suggested by the Bureau. "Rush to Judgment" is a documentary type of film based on the book by MARK LANE. "Rush to Judgment" was produced and directed by EMILE DE ANTONIO.

The film begins with newsreel clips depicting LEE HARVEY OSWALD in the Dallas Police Department following his arrest and subsequent scenes showing the shooting of OSWALD by JACK RUBY. Through interviews with various officials of the Dallas Police Department and District Attorney HENRY M. WADE, it is indicated that the investigation of these killings is a joint effort of the Dallas Police Department, the Secret Service and the FBI. It is clear that at this time MARK LANE wishes to impress the fact that any responsibility for the case is to be borne by the FBI as well as any other agency.

MARK LANE immediately gives the audience the purpose of the film. He states that the Warren Commission, from its inception, had the preconceived theory that OSWALD and OSWALD alone was responsible for the killing of President KENNEDY and all its actions were directed to obtain evidence to substantiate this view. The FBI, acting on behalf of the Warren Commission and acting with the same preconceived theory, directed all its efforts to obtain the evidence which would be in keeping with the Commission's views.

LANE also points out at the beginning of this film that the Warren Commission did not offer OSWALD the benefit of counsel which was afforded even to Nazi criminals at the Nuremberg trials.

After this comparatively short introduction, witnesses are introduced and interviewed by LANE. They are the same witnesses as are found in LANE's book and give the same information as they did in the book. The names of these witnesses and the page on which they appear in the book, "Rush to Judgment," are being set out for possible assistance:

RICHARD C. DODD	"	31

- These witnesses deal primarily with the direction of the shots and the possibility of an accomplice on the grassy knoll.

JOSEPH W. JOHNSON	"	199
HAROLD R. WILLIAMS	"	215

These witnesses deal with the killing of Officer J.D. TIPPIT and the participation of JACK RUBY. Information in this regard is also introduced concerning WARREN A. REYNOLDS, page 234, and Mrs. EARLINE ROBERTS, page 142.

TYPERITE
TION

It can be seen that the movie closely follows the book as the so-called witnesses which comprised the greater part of the movie are all set out in the book. It is also obvious that the book has many more witnesses and is a far more complete "case" for LANE's objectives.

At the conclusion of the majority of these interviews in the movie, LANE asks the witness a question such as, "Did you furnish this information to anyone?" or "Were you called before the Warren Commission?" The answers, which had a telling effect, were in general, "Yes, I gave this information to the Dallas Police Department or the Secret Service or the FBI," and "No, I was not called before the Warren Commission."

Some witnesses, who were called before the Warren Commission, stated that the Warren Commission did not appear interested in everything they might know about the matter and which information they had previously furnished to other agencies.

The over-all impression in these interviews and to some extent in the entire movie, is that the main target of LANE is not the Dallas Police Department, the Secret Service or the FBI, but the Warren Commission.

The following comments, which are also found in the book, were noted which were critical of the FBI:

1. The statement by SAC GORDON SHANKLIN that the paraffin test indicated gunpowder on OSWALD's cheeks and hands - page 124

2. The interview of Sergeant NELSON DELGADO, in which he states that FBI Agents were trying to change his statement - page 330

3. Suppression of the NBC Special photograph stolen by the FBI or Warren Commission - page 293

Newspaper clippings concerning this film will be sent to the Bureau at a later date.

A CBS NEWS INQUIRY: "THE WARREN REPORT"

TO BE BROADCAST ON SUCCESSIVE NIGHTS, JUNE 25-26-27

Each Major Point of Controversy Will Be Examined,

New Evidence Presented, and Conclusions Reached

A CBS NEWS INQUIRY: "The Warren Report," an examination of the major questions raised by critics of the Official Report on the Assassination of President John F. Kennedy, will be broadcast on three consecutive evenings at the same hour, Sunday, June 25, Monday, June 26 and Tuesday, June 27 (10:00-11:00 PM, EDT), in color on the CBS Television Network.

CBS News Correspondents Walter Cronkite and Dan Rather, and Eddie Barker, news director of KRLD-TV, Dallas-Fort Worth, are the reporters.

(Note to editors: The CBS NEWS INQUIRY pre-empts regular programming on these three dates.)

The broadcast will review the Warren Commission's findings about events before, during and after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and the murder of Lee Harvey Oswald, and also the criticisms of these findings.

Each point of controversy will be examined by CBS News, including the investigation conducted by District Attorney James Garrison of New Orleans.

A special unit under executive producer Leslie Midgley has been at work for more than six months. The resulting broadcasts will contain filmed interviews, reconstructions of events and the findings of various tests and experiments conducted in many parts of the country.

Five months ago, Richard S. Salant, President of CBS News, announced that CBS News had been intensively re-examining the Warren Report and other information concerning the assassination of President Kennedy, but that no decision would be made concerning the broadcasting of the results of this re-examination unless, as the investigation proceeded, CBS News could determine that "it can contribute to public understanding and enlightenment."

"I did not feel," Salant said today, "that it would be useful simply to pit critics and defenders against each other in a debate, and felt special broadcasts were not justified unless CBS News could clarify the issues and relevant facts, and contribute to public understanding on the basis of an independent journalistic investigation. These broadcasts have now been set because of my conviction that CBS News can accomplish this objective."

"We have allotted three hours to this CBS NEWS INQUIRY because of the subject's size, detail and crucial importance," added Salant. "Each major point of controversy has been examined in great detail; we have uncovered fresh material and we will present the conclusions of CBS News based on our analysis and investigations."

"We needed three hours to present the results of the six-month-long inquiry," Salant continued, "but we feel that a three-hour broadcast in a single evening is too much to ask of the viewer's attention span for so complex and controversial a series of questions and issues."

Salant stated that "for this reason, we will, for the first time in network television history, deal with a subject on three successive prime-time broadcasts at the same hour each night. At the beginning of the second and third broadcasts, we will review briefly what has gone before."

"The Warren Report," June 25-26-27...

ONE ASSASSIN? ONE BULLET? A CONSPIRACY?
"CBS NEWS INQUIRY" WILL EXAMINE "THE QUESTIONS"

Since September 1964, with the appearance of the Report of the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy, there have been questions. A steady stream of books, magazine articles, even plays and motion pictures, have challenged the Report's findings -- offering new theories, new assassins and new reasons.

A CBS NEWS INQUIRY: "The Warren Report" will for three consecutive nights, at the same hour, examine some of the more valid questions that have been raised about the assassination. The broadcasts will be presented Sunday, June 25, Monday, June 26 and Tuesday, June 27 (10:00-11:00 PM, EDT) in color on the CBS Television Network.

CBS News has sifted the same mass of material available to the Warren Commission and its critics. A special unit under executive producer Leslie Midgley has, for more than six months, gone over testimony with witnesses, conducted technical investigations of its own, and answered some of the questions to, at least, its own satisfaction.

Some of the central questions are:

--Did Oswald take his rifle to the Texas School Book Depository?

--How many shots were fired?

(More)

--Where did the shots come from?

--Was there a second assassin?

--Could one bullet have struck Governor Connally and the President?

--Did the autopsy conceal, or fail to establish, the direction of the fatal shots?

--Did Oswald shoot Tippit?

--Did Oswald know Tippit?

--Who was Oswald? (An FBI informant? A CIA undercover man?)

--Was the assassination part of a conspiracy which has been kept from the American people, by design or incompetence?

--Why is the Report not completely accepted by the public?

CBS News Correspondents Walter Cronkite and Dan Rather, and Eddie Barker, news director of KRLD-TV, Dallas-Fort Worth, are the reporters on the broadcast, which will also examine the investigation conducted by District Attorney James Garrison of New Orleans.

Tests, analyses, simulations for June 25-26-27 "Inquiry"...

SAME MAKES, MODELS AS OSWALD RIFLE, ZAPRUDER CAMERA, USED;
PATHOLOGICAL, PSYCHOLOGICAL TESTS ALSO MADE FOR "WARREN REPORT"

The rifle and the camera that took their place in American history on Nov. 22, 1963 will be among the principal subjects of CBS News' intensive re-examination of the factors surrounding the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

The critical aspects of the Official Report on that terrible day and the weekend that followed have been sifted by a special CBS News unit producing a CBS NEWS INQUIRY: "The Warren Report." Its findings will be revealed on three consecutive broadcasts, at the same hour, Sunday, June 25, Monday, June 26 and Tuesday, June 27 (10:00-11:00 PM, EDT) in color on the CBS Television Network.

Crucial to the credibility of the Report are the Mannlicher-Carcano rifle allegedly fired by Lee Harvey Oswald from the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository building, and the 8mm Bell & Howell zoomatic camera which Abraham Zapruder took to Dealey Plaza in Dallas to make "home movies" of the Presidential motorcade.

Through interviews and re-examination and reconstruction of events, the evidence and controversy surrounding the camera and rifle will be probed. Other areas of study include pathological findings connected with the autopsy report, and also psychological factors involved in the tremendous doubts about the Warren Report.

Using 6.5mm Mannlicher-Carcano rifles of Italian manufacture, of the same general date as Oswald's and fitted with the same four-power Japanese telescopic sights, CBS News conducted a number of tests to determine how fast they could be fired with any accuracy.

In addition, CBS News simulated the conditions of the assassination to determine how fast and accurately a marksman could hit a moving target, firing three shots. The CBS News unit also examined the controversial single-bullet theory, the Warren Report theory that President Kennedy and Governor Connally were hit by the same bullet.

Several experts analyzed copies of the Zapruder film of the ride through Dealey Plaza, and their tests included stroboscopic examination of film speed using nine different Bell & Howell cameras of the same model as Zapruder's. The experts checked the speed of cameras similar to Zapruder's to consider whether the findings published in the Warren Report were credible.

The CBS NEWS INQUIRY: "The Warren Report" is produced by a special unit under Leslie Midgley, executive producer.

From Altgens to Zapruder, on "The Warren Report"...

EYEWITNESSES, EXPERTS, INDIVIDUALS TOUCHED BY THE ASSASSINATION AND CRITICS INTERVIEWED ON "CBS NEWS INQUIRY," JUNE 25-26-27

From Altgens to Zapruder -- both of whom recorded the murder of President John F. Kennedy on film -- CBS News has interviewed scores of individuals who were touched by the events in Dallas' Dealey Plaza, or who have become the critics and defenders of the Official Report on the Assassination.

Rifle and camera experts, pathologists and psychologists, eyewitnesses, writers and public officials who have studied the Report and the questions it has raised were among those interviewed by CBS News.

Many of them will be seen during a CBS NEWS INQUIRY: "The Warren Report," the unprecedented broadcasts to be presented on three consecutive nights at the same hour, Sunday, June 25, Monday, June 26 and Tuesday, June 27 (10:00-11:00 PM, EDT), in color on the CBS Television Network.

Among those now scheduled to appear on the broadcasts are:

ALTGENS, JAMES W. -- Associated Press photographer in Dallas. He took pictures at the time of the assassination. The pictures were studied by the Warren Commission, before which Altgens later testified.

ALVAREZ, DR. LUIS -- Professor of Physics at the University of California. Examining the Abraham Zapruder amateur film of the assassination, he discovered evidence that the first shot could have been fired earlier than was estimated by the Warren Commission.

ARMSTRONG, ANDREW, JR. -- Jack Ruby's assistant at the Carousel Club in Dallas at the time of the assassination. He talks about Jack Ruby as he knew him before and after the assassination.

BENAVIDES, DOMINGO -- Automobile repairman in Dallas. He was passing Officer J. D. Tippit's patrol car just before Tippit was killed. He heard the shots, stopped, saw the killer leave the scene, went to Tippit, called police headquarters on the patrol car radio.

BEYER, DR. JAMES C. -- Pathologist who has worked in the field of experimental wound ballistics. Editor of and contributor to the volume on wound ballistics in the historical series for the Army Surgeon General.

BRENNAN, HOWARD L. -- Dallas steamfitter. He was an eyewitness at the assassination site and says he saw the assassin in the sixth floor window of the Texas School Book Depository.

BREWER, JOHNNY C. Shoe store manager in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas where Officer J. D. Tippit was killed. He saw Oswald acting suspiciously in front of his store as a police car passed, followed Oswald to the Texas Theater and talked with the cashier, who called police.

CALLAWAY, TED -- Used car salesman in the Oak Cliff section of Dallas. He saw Oswald rush past his lot with a pistol and called, "What's going on?" Oswald shrugged and went on.

CARR, WAGGONER -- Attorney General of Texas. He was in the motorcade at Dallas and attended President Kennedy's funeral in Washington. He testifies to the confused and rumor-filled atmosphere in Dallas following the assassination.

CONNALLY, GOV. JOHN -- The Texas governor, himself shot in the attack that killed President Kennedy, recalls the shooting and discusses the controversial "single bullet" theory.

CROSSMAN, COL. EDWARD B. -- Retired Army colonel, rifle expert, former director of the National Rifle Matches, writer on the subject of guns. He test-fired the Mannlicher-Carcano rifle for CBS News and discussed it as a weapon.

DEVLIN, LORD JUSTICE PATRICK -- Retired British jurist who has defended the findings and conclusions of the Warren Commission.

ENOS, DR. WILLIAM F. -- Pathologist presently working at the Northern Virginia Doctors Hospital, Arlington. He is knowledgeable in wound ballistics, with army and civilian experience.

EPSTEIN, EDWARD JAY -- Author of "Inquest," a book questioning the performance and conclusions of the Warren Commission.

EUINS, AMOS LEE -- Eyewitness at the site of the assassination who said he saw, from the street, "this pipe thing" sticking out a window of the Texas School Book Depository. At the time, Euins was a 15-year-old ninth grade student.

FISCHER, RONALD B. -- Eyewitness at the assassination site. Fischer told the Warren Commission he saw a man in the sixth floor window of the Texas School Book Depository before the shooting and pointed the man out to a friend with whom Fischer was standing.

FRAZIER, BUELL WESLEY -- A fellow employee of Lee Harvey Oswald at the Texas School Book Depository. He gave Oswald a ride home to Irving, Texas, the evening before the assassination and brought him back to work the next morning. He testified with regard to the package Oswald brought to work.

GARRISON, JAMES -- New Orleans District Attorney who has been conducting his own investigation of the Kennedy assassination since last fall. Garrison questions whether Oswald fired any shots and says he can prove a conspiracy involving several persons. He says the conspiracy was hatched in New Orleans and charges the CIA with withholding the names of persons the CIA knows to have been assassins.

GIVENS, CHARLES D. -- Texas School Book Depository employee who was the last known person to have seen Oswald inside the building before the assassination. Givens said he saw Oswald on the sixth floor between 11:45 AM and Noon.

GREGORY, DR. CHARLES F. -- Chief of Orthopedic Surgery, Parkland Memorial Hospital, Dallas. He operated on the wounds in Governor Connally's right wrist.

HOLLAND, S. M. -- Signal supervisor for the Union Terminal Co., Dallas. On the morning of the assassination, he came to the railroad overpass at Dealey Plaza to identify railroad employees for security agents. He stayed on the bridge for the motorcade and later said he looked to the grassy knoll when shots were fired and saw a puff of smoke come from the bushes.

HUMES, DR. JAMES J. -- Navy commander, senior pathologist and director of laboratories at Bethesda Naval Hospital at the time of the assassination. He was chief surgeon for the autopsy on President Kennedy's body.

JACKS, HURCHEL -- A Texas Highway Patrol member who was driving Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson's car in the motorcade at the time of the assassination.

JACKSON, MURRAY -- Dallas policeman who was police radio dispatcher at the time of the assassination and the murder of Officer J. D. Tippit.

JARMAN, JAMES, JR. -- A wrapper in the shipping department at the Texas School Book Depository. He was one of three employees who were looking out fifth floor windows at the time of the assassination.

LOVELADY, BILLY NOLAN -- The Warren Report, referring to a photo taken by AP photographer James W. Altgens at the time of the assassination, says: "In the background of this picture were several employees watching the parade from the steps of the Depository Building. One of these employees was alleged to resemble Lee Harvey Oswald. The Commission has determined that the employee was in fact Billy Nolan Lovelady, who identified himself in the picture."

NICOL, JOSEPH D. -- Superintendent of the Bureau of Criminal Identification and Investigation, State of Illinois. He is among the experts who have examined the Oswald rifle and bullet.

NIX, ORVILLE O. -- Eyewitness at the site of the assassination. Like Abraham Zapruder, he was operating a home movie camera, and his film of the assassination was studied by the Warren Commission.

NORMAN, HAROLD D. -- Order filler at the Texas School Book Depository at the time of the assassination. He was one of three employees who watched the motorcade from a fifth floor window of the building.

OLIVIER, DR. ALFRED G. -- Army wound ballistics expert. He conducted experiments at Edgewood Arsenal, Md., using the assassination rifle, firing it through a gelatin mass and the carcass of a goat to study the effects in connection with wounds inflicted on President Kennedy.

OSWALD, MARINA -- Lee Harvey Oswald's wife. She confirmed that Oswald owned a rifle and pistol, among other points.

OSWALD, MARGUERITE C. -- Lee Harvey Oswald's mother. She believes her son might have been an agent for the FBI or CIA.

PAINE, MRS. RUTH -- Irving, Texas, housewife who befriended Marina Oswald, and with whom Marina was living at the time of the assassination.

RANDLE, MRS. LINNIE MAE -- Sister of Buell Wesley Frazier, who gave Oswald a ride to work on the morning of the assassination. She testified she saw Oswald with his "heavy brown bag" before he got into Frazier's car that morning.

ROWLAND, ARNOLD -- Eyewitness at the site of the assassination. He said he looked toward the Depository and saw a man with a rifle on the sixth floor and possibly a second man there as well. He complains the Warren Commission discounted his story because, after he mentioned the second man, his wife said he was sometimes prone to exaggerate.

ROWLAND, MRS. ARNOLD -- She was standing with her husband near the Depository but said she could not see anyone in the windows because she did not have her glasses on. She says the Warren Commission took out of context her statement that her husband is prone to exaggerate at times.

SCHILLER, LAWRENCE -- Photographic expert who says, following investigation of the photograph showing Oswald with a rifle and pistol, that it is authentic, contrary to critics' claims.

SENATOR, GEORGE -- Jack Ruby's roommate at the time of the assassination.

SPECTER, ARLEN -- An assistant counsel for the Warren Commission. He figured largely in adoption of the single-bullet theory by the Commission and has defended the conclusion since.

WALTHER, MRS. CAROLYN -- Eyewitness at the site of the assassination. She said she saw two men together -- one with a rifle -- in a Depository window lower than the sixth floor. She also says she heard four shots. The failure of the Warren Commission to take her testimony is deplored by critics of the Commission.

WECHT, DR. CYRIL H. -- Forensic pathologist, Pittsburgh, who participated in a formal review of the Warren Report at the 1966 meeting of the American Academy of Forensic Sciences. A believer then, a doubter now.

WEINSTEIN, BARNEY -- Dallas nightclub operator who was a competitor of Jack Ruby's and who knew Ruby well.

WEITZMAN, SEYMOUR -- Deputy constable in Dallas who, with Deputy Sheriff Eugene Boone, found the rifle on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository.

WILLIAMS, BONNIE RAY -- Warehouseman who was one of three men on the fifth floor of the Depository at the time of the assassination. He had come down from the sixth floor, where he left remains of a chicken lunch at first thought to have been eaten by Lee Harvey Oswald.

WYCKOFF, CHARLES -- Scientist and photography expert who has examined the Abraham Zapruder film of the assassination.

ZAPRUDER, ABRAHAM -- Dallas amateur photographer whose home movie film of the assassination figured prominently in the Warren Commission findings.

INFORMATIVE NOTE

Date June 9, 1967

CBS News will present a three hour television special "The Warren Report" to be shown on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday June 25, 26, and 27, 1967, from 10 p.m. to 11 p.m. CBS advance notices announce this television special will examine the major points of controversy concerning the assassination, and that "fresh material" has been uncovered. For more than six months a team of CBS staff has been preparing the program.

We will monitor the program and a memorandum will be prepared concerning it.

SUBJECT: ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY NOVEMBER 22, 1963, DALLAS, TEXAS

PURPOSE:

This reports on the fourth and last television (TV) program in the series by Columbia Broadcasting System (CBS) on the Warren Commission Report. During the program certain of the old criticisms of the Bureau were again mentioned and, in addition, the Bureau was criticized for not accepting the bullet found on Governor Connally's stretcher in the hospital. CBS concluded the Warren Report is the best account of what happened on 11/22/63.

BACKGROUND:

On 6/28/67, CBS newscaster Walter Cronkite presented the fourth and last TV program on the Warren Report, considering two questions: (1) Should America believe the Warren Report and (2) Could America believe the Report?

In repeating criticisms previously directed at the Bureau Cronkite quoted the Warren Report that the FBI took an "unduly restrictive view" of its dissemination responsibilities. In addition, he questioned why the FBI tests of Oswald's rifle were made at a stationary target (rather than moving) and why the FBI did not accept the bullet found shortly after the assassination on Governor Connally's stretcher when it was offered to a Special Agent by the man who found it. CBS also criticized the Warren Commission for taking the word of the FBI on the question of whether or not Oswald was an FBI informant. Commission Attorney Arlen Specter stated he was completely satisfied with the competence of the FBI.

John McCloy, a member of the Commission, described the charge that the Commission tried to cover up a conspiracy as "silly" and unreasonable. He stated the Commission's conclusions were not rushed.

NOT RECORDED
198 JUL 10 1967

Professor Henry Commager, historian, believed further inquiry into the assassination would add nothing. He said there are some people who have a "conspiracy mentality" and reject the ordinary explanation for the extraordinary one and CBS newsman Eric Sevareid strongly backed Commager, concluding that the notion there was a conspiracy which was being concealed was "idiotic."

RE: ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY

OBSERVATIONS:

The criticism that we took an "unduly restrictive view" of our dissemination responsibilities is the same one the Warren Commission leveled at us. So far as the rifle tests are concerned, we did as prescribed by the Commission, that is, tested the rifle for rapidity of fire and accuracy at a stationary target at ground level. The criticism that several hours after the assassination we did not accept the bullet found in the hospital on Governor Connally's stretcher is completely unfair. We had no jurisdiction of the case when the bullet was found; the Dallas Police Department did. At that time it was gathering all of the evidence against Oswald. On the question of whether or not Oswald was an FBI informant, we did exactly what the Commission requested of us: furnished numerous affidavits that Oswald was not, gave the Commission the full Oswald file for its examination and in direct testimony by the Director and Mr. Belmont flatly denied Oswald was an informant.

ACTION:

None. For information.

ASSASSIN 7/2 WA
NIGHT LD

WASHINGTON (UPI) --JOHN J. MCCLOY, A MEMBER OF THE WARREN COMMISSION, SAID SUNDAY THAT "FOR THE SAKE OF COMPLETENESS," THE OFFICIAL INVESTIGATION OF THE KENNEDY ASSASSINATION SHOULD HAVE INCLUDED A LOOK AT THE LATE PRESIDENT'S AUTOPSY PHOTOGRAPHS AND X-RAYS.

THE COMMISSION HAD THE POWER TO SUBPOENA THE FILMS, HE SAID, BUT CHOSE NOT TO. "WE WERE PERHAPS A LITTLE OVERSENSITIVE TO WHAT WE UNDERSTOOD WAS THE SENSITIVITIES OF THE KENNEDY FAMILY AGAINST THE PRODUCTION OF COLORED PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE BODY, AND SO FORTH," HE SAID.

MCCLOY DISCLOSED IN A TELEVISED INTERVIEW (FACE THE NATION--CBS) THAT CHIEF JUSTICE EARL WARREN, THE COMMISSION CHAIRMAN, DISCUSSED THE PHOTOGRAPHS WITH THE KENNEDY FAMILY, WHICH HAD THEM DURING THE INQUIRY.

"I THOUGHT THAT HE WAS REALLY GOING TO SEE THEM, BUT IT TURNED OUT THAT HE HADN'T," MCCLOY SAID. THE FILMS SUBSEQUENTLY WERE TURNED OVER TO THENATIONAL ARCHIVES WITH STRICT PROVISIONS AGAINST VIEWING BY THE PUBLIC.

"I THINK THERE'S ONE THING I WOULD DO OVER AGAIN," HE SAID. "I WOULD INSIST ON THOSE PHOTOGRAPHS AND THE X-RAYS HAVING BEEN PRODUCED BEFORE US."

MCCLOY, A NEW YORK LAWYER, REPUBLICAN AND FORMER CHIEF U.S. DISARMAMENT ADVISER, SAID THAT EVEN WITHOUT INSPECTING THE FILMS, THE COMMISSION HAD "THE BEST EVIDENCE" ON THE AUTOPSY IN THE SWORN TESTIMONY OF THE DOCTORS WHO PERFORMED IT AT BETHESDA NAVAL HOSPITAL, MD., ON NOV. 23, 1963.

"WE COULDN'T HAVE INTERPRETED THE X-RAYS IF WE'D HAD THEM," HE SAID. "BUT PROBABLY IT WOULD HAVE BEEN BETTER TO HAVE HAD THEM FOR THE SAKE OF COMPLETENESS IN VIEW OF ALL THE TO-DO THAT'S OCCURRED SINCE."

HE WAS REFERRING TO QUESTIONS RAISED ABOUT THE AUTOPSY ON THE BASIS OF AN FBI AGENT'S PRELIMINARY REPORT, LATER OFFICIALLY DISAVOWED, THAT DOCTORS PLACED THE FIRST BULLET WOUND LOWER IN THE BACK THAN WHERE THEY FINALLY ESTABLISHED IT. 62-109090-601

HE WAS NONCOMMITAL ABOUT SUGGESTIONS THAT AN INDEPENDENT MEDICAL EXAMINER VIEW THE X-RAYS AND RECORDS TO CORROBORATE THE AUTOPSY TESTIMONY.

WASHINGTON CAPITAL NEWS SERVICE

"I HAVE NO DOUBT UNDER PROPER ARRANGEMENTS THAT AT ANY TIME THOSE COULD BE EXAMINED," HE SAID, NOTING THAT THE COMMISSION NO LONGER EXISTS AND THAT THE RULES ALWAYS HAD BEEN SET BY THE GOVERNMENT.

MCCLOY STOOD BY THE COMMISSION'S CONCLUSION THAT LEE HARVEY OSWALD KILLED KENNEDY AND WAS NOT PART OF ANY CONSPIRACY. HE SAID HE HAD HEARD OF NO EVIDENCE THAT MIGHT WARRANT REOPENING THE COMMISSION'S INQUIRY.

HE ALSO DISMISSED AS "A LITTLE INCREDIBLE" THE POSSIBILITY OF WHAT HIS QUESTIONER CALLED A "MOST HEINOUS AND MASSIVE CONSPIRACY OF ALL TIME, INVOLVING THE VERY HIGHEST LEVELS OF GOVERNMENT."

MCCLOY SAID SUCH A CONSPIRACY WOULD HAVE HAD TO INVOLVE CABINET MEMBERS, THE FBI AND OTHER FEDERAL AGENCIES AND THE COMMISSION ITSELF, WHOSE MEMBERS "WEREN'T BEHOLDEN TO ANY ADMINISTRATION."

THE IDEA OF A WHITEWASH UNDER THOSE CIRCUMSTANCES, HE SAID, WOULD HAVE BEEN A "CONSPIRACY OF A CHARACTER SO MAMMOTH AND SO VAST THAT IT TRANSCENDS EVEN SOME OF THE DISTORTED CHARGES OF CONSPIRACY ON THE PART OF OSWALD."

Dear Sir:

I would like some information on your investigation of the assassination of president John F. Kennedy.

For the last four nights we have been watching the Warren Report on T. V. It was an investigation given by CBS News and they have been saying the FBI didn't to a thing to help and that half the CIA men were drunk the night before the president arrived in Dallas.

So if the information I want is available I would like to have it to prove to my family that the FBI did a good or maybe better job invesigating the death of the president than the Warren Report.

Thank You for any help you can give me.

SUBJECT: TIMOTHY WALSH-- 254 KENWICK DRIVE
AKRON, OHIO 44313
REQUEST TO INTERVIEW THE DIRECTOR CONCERNING THE WARREN REPORT
SOMETIME IN AUGUST, 1967

A letter was received on 7-3-67, from captioned individual stating he is a student at the University of Akron in Akron, Ohio, and plans to study law at Duke University. He has been working on a report thesis concerning the Warren Report and he has seen numerous newspaper and magazine articles which paint a very bad picture of the FBI. He will be in Washington during the first weeks in August and feels it would be of enormous value if he could ask the Director several questions. Walsh states he has the highest esteem for the FBI and the Director and remembers a letter the Director sent him when he was aged 14. He says he still is very much interested in becoming an agent in the FBI but feels the thesis must come first.

Bufiles reveal the Director wrote Timothy Walsh at his currently indicated address on 2-4-60. Walsh had requested a tour and stated he would like someday to be an agent. In the letter he said he was 12-years old. There is no other identifiable information in Bufiles.

There is, of course, no reason for the Director to use his valuable time in answering this young student's questions; however, it might be beneficial to have someone in your office (Mr. Wick's) talk to him.

RECOMMENDATIONS:

1. That the enclosed letter be approved and sent.

2. That Walsh be referred to your (Mr. Wick's) office if and when he contacts Bureau Headquarters.

Dear Mr. Hoover

I am currently enrolled in the University of Akron, and in the future wish to continue my law major at Duke University.

Since the release of the Warren report, I have been working on a report thesis . In it there is a section which I must donate to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, as well as other government law enforcement agencies. I must add that the information that has come to me in the form of newspapers and magazine articles, have been your critics and paint a very bad picture of the F.B.I.

I will be coming to Washington in the first weeks in August, and here I hope to complete a major portion of my work, I feel that it would be of enormous value to me and my collegues, if I could have an interview.

There are several questions that I would like to ask you and am very anxious to meet you.

I feel that you could answer the questions that I have, best.

Mr. Hoover, have no doubts, I have the most highest esteem for your organization,and you. I can even remember the letter that you sent me when I was only 14. I still am very much interested in becoming an agent for your organization,but feel that this thesis must come first, and then the satisfaction that I know will come with it.

I leave this matter to be disposed with at your convenience, sir.

SUBJECT: The Congressional Record

Pages s10382-s10387. Senator Hartke, (D) Indiana, requested to have printed in the Record part II of a four-part CBS news inquiry entitled The Warren Report which was broadcast in June. This material states Confusion continued at Bethesda, as it had reigned at Parkland. F.B.I. agents submitted a report, later disclosed in Edward J. Epstein's book, 'Inquest,' which said they had heard one pathologist state that he had found a wound in the President's back, and could not find an exit.

INQUIRY RE WARREN COMMISSION DOCUMENT

Attached memorandum of the Director's Office reflects that at 12:25 today, 10/11/67, the above-captioned individual telephoned the Director's Office and requested to speak to the Director. He was advised of the Director's absence and offered my services, which he declined, stating he wished only to talk to Mr. Hoover and asked that the Director return his call. Bureau files contain no information identifiable with Mr. Aldi. The Director has noted on this memorandum, "I do not know him. H."

At 2:55 p.m. today, 10/11/67, Aldi called the Bureau and this time talked to me. He stated that he was interested in securing from the FBI the contents of a memorandum dated May 13, 1964, from Richard Helms, then Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, to the Director entitled "Access of Lee Harvey Oswald to Information on the U-2." He advised that this communication was apparently sent to the Director by Mr. Helms in connection with the Bureau's investigation into the assassination of the President and is presently in the National Archives, is Commission Document #931, although it is not available for inspection by the public.

Bishop advised Mr. Aldi that he could be of no help to him since, as indicated by Aldi, the document in question has not been declassified and, therefore, it is still confidential. Under these circumstances, Bishop explained to Aldi that no information concerning the contents of the document could be made available to Aldi.

DATE: 11-1-67

FROM : M. A. Jones

OCTOBER, 1967, ISSUE

On your memo of 10-30-67 to Mr. DeLoach reporting a request from television station WFIU, Bloomington, Indiana, to cooperate in a documentary program discussing statements by New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison in the October, 1967, issue of "Playboy" magazine relative to the assassination of President Kennedy, the Director has noted "What were these comments? H".

My memorandum of 10-6-67 (a copy of which is attached, along with a copy of the lengthy Garrison interview in the October, 1967, issue of "Playboy" magazine) summarized the wild opinions Garrison has frequently offered concerning the assassination. As my memo pointed out, Garrison propounds a fantastic theory that the Warren Commission findings were completely wrong, that there was a vast conspiracy among many individuals to assassinate President Kennedy, that some of the actual conspirators are still walking the streets, that Lee Harvey Oswald did not shoot the President, that he also did not murder Dallas Police Officer J. D. Tippit and that Oswald was a "patsy" for the actual killers.

This memorandum additionally notes Garrison's extreme criticism of alleged CIA derelictions in this matter and notes further that Garrison, despite some critical references to the FBI, surprisingly praises the Bureau near the end of his long article.

The Domestic Intelligence Division has also carefully reviewed the Garrison interview and has noted no new information of any value not previously known to the Bureau.

Dear Mr. Patterson:

Your letter of November 3rd has been received.

In response to your inquiry, it has always been my policy to refrain from injecting either the FBI or myself into matters relating to legislation. Further, with regard to the Warren Commission, the FBI conducted an objective and thorough investigation of the assassination of President Kennedy at the request of President Johnson. Our investigative reports were turned over to that Commission which subsequently released its report which is now a matter of public record. Therefore, I trust you will understand why I cannot comment as you desire.

The Honorable J. Edgar Hoover
Director-Federal Bureau of Investigation
United States Department of Justice
Washington, 25, D.C.

Dear Mr. Hoover,

I am writing this letter in regard to any possible thoughts that you may have concerning H. Con. Res. 312, as introduced into the House of Represenatives by Represenative Theodore Kupferman of New York.

As you may know, this resolution, if passed into law, would authorize the Congress to further investigate the assissination of the late President John F. Kennedy. Mr. Kupferman states that this type of bill should be passed into law because the President's Commission to Investigate the Death of President John F. Kennedy failed in its mission to inform the American public of all the facts surrounding the assissination. A majority of Americans, as proven by a recent nation wide poll, tend to think along about the same lines as Mr. Kupferman.

Much of the discontent surrounding the so called "Warren Commission" seems to stem directly from the many criticial books and articles published concerning the shortcomings of the Commission's Report to the public. I, myself, have studied both the Commissions volumes of evidence and the works of the critics of the Commission and I can plainly see where the American public could not and would not accept the findings of the Report.

I, therefore, turn to you for your thoughts concerning this most important subject. I feel that you, as the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, are in a position to clearly evelvate this matter. This is in addition to the fact that your agency contributed much to the findings of the Warren Commission.

Parts 1, 2, and 3 were set forth in earlier issues of the Record. References are made to the FBI in connection with the question as to whether or not Oswald was furnishing information to the Bureau, that the FBI did not advise the Secret Service of Oswald's presence in Dallas, and the attitude of FBI Agents at Parkland Hospital. Walter Cronkite, CBS News Correspondent, states 'the Warren Commission seriously compromised itself by allowing the Secret Service, the F.B.I. and the C.I.A. to investigate questions involving their own actions."

Dear Mrs. Mason:

Your letter and its enclosure were received on February 15th.

During November, 1966, I was contacted by a newsman who requested any comments I cared to make regarding an alleged variance of the results of the medical examination of President Kennedy's body as recorded in FBI reports dated December 9, 1963, and January 13, 1964, and the official autopsy report.

In my reply to the newsman on November 23, 1966, I pointed out that the FBI, at the direction of President Johnson, conducted a prompt, intensive, objective and thorough investigation of the assassination of President Kennedy. The results of this investigation were accurately reported to the Warren Commission, and not one shred of evidence has been developed to link any other person in a conspiracy with Lee Harvey Oswald to assassinate President Kennedy. All available evidence and facts point to one conclusion--that Oswald acted alone in his crime.

SUBJECT: The Congressional Record

Pages H1560-H1562. Congressman Willis, (D) Louisiana, spoke concerning critics of the Warren Commission Report pointing out that he wanted to make it clear that his comments should not be construed as having any bearing whatever on the criminal investigation now being conducted by the New Orleans district attorney, Jim Garrison. He stated "That investigation involves matters of law and findings of fact that will be properly left to a judge and jury to evaluate. My purpose at the moment is solely to comment on the leftist and even Communist affiliations of four of the most ardent critics of the Warren Commission Report." Mr. Willis listed these four persons as Mark Lane, Harold Weisberg, Thomas G. Buchanan, and Joachim Joesten and set forth background information on them. Mr. Willis stated "Of particular interest to me is the fact that the Communist press both here at home and abroad have worked so diligently to make it appear that Lee Harvey Oswald - - - - was a patsy or 'fall guy' in the Presidential assassination. Additionally, the Communist propaganda mills have extended his invective against the Warren Commission to include the Chief Executive, the CIA, the FBI, the Secret Service, and in fact the entire Federal Government in an indictment of collusion to pin the assassination on Lee Harvey Oswald."

Attorney General Ramsey Clark
Dept. of Justice
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Clark:

As a college professor who has read the Warren Report and most of the subsequent material on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, I would strongly urge that the case be reopened. Had Oswald lived to stand trial, an adversary procedure would have established by due process his solitary guilt, his innocence, or his complicity in a conspiracy. It would have done so by bringing in all the other evidence we read of that never appears in and is often not mentioned in the Report itself -- e.g., photographs of men being led away by police in Dealey Plaza, other photographic evidence, testimony of witnesses who were never interrogated, Oswald's amazing possibility to get instant passports despite his record, his possible Cuban and CIA associations, and on and on. The bulk and the relevance of this material is too formidable to be ignored.

The assassination of John Kennedy's brother, Senator Robert F. Kennedy and of Dr. Martin Luther King makes a reopening all the more urgent. Contrary to the impression left by the press, not all assassinated presidents were killed by lone psychopaths; over twenty people were involved in the killing of Abraham Lincoln. The people of Western Europe overwhelmingly reject the Warren Report, and now so do a large majority of the American people. We can no longer endure the terrible doubts and suspicions about the shooting of John F. Kennedy. We have doubts enough in other areas. Why compound them in a case which affects our faith in the very political process?

Let me add that I do not agree with those who feel that reopening the case would be an insult to the Warren Commission itself. They are all honorable men and the Chief Justice has forged a magnificent record. But they operated under terrific time pressures in a complicated bureaucracy while trying to carry on their other duties. It is quite understandable that much might have escaped their individual attention and even their knowledge -- as indeed the possible Cuban connections were unearthed only shortly before publication of the Report.

Apropos of the Garrison investigation in New Orleans, I have read that Mr. Shaw's lawyers want the court to accept the Warren Report as the final legal verdict on the case. This sounds incredible. I trust that no extra-legal body's findings will be substituted for those of a court and given legal recognition; that would be tantamount to establishing another legal system. Apropos of Garrison himself -- from what little one can glean from the sparse news -- I would urge that he be allowed to go into court and prove his case or be disproved. What better place is there to decide the truth behind a murder mystery than in a courtroom where an adversary system is used?

I would also urge that Garrison be allowed to call FBI and CIA men as witnesses. I understand that as of now executive privilege is being claimed for them. Well, if raisons d'état are to be invoked as an excuse for secrecy, then we Americans are right back in the old European vices we thought we had thrown out. More harm is done by secrecy than would attend the most dreadful revelations.

If Garrison really has the case that three judges and a grand jury think he has, let him prove it in a courtroom. If he doesn't, let him be shown up in a courtroom. But I see no point at all in the present effort to prevent him from getting into a courtroom. Substantive matters aside, I find this last very disturbing. The court is after all the ultimate embodiment of the law.

Again, Mr. Attorney General, I would urge that the assassination of President John F. Kennedy be reopened for investigation, and that whatever findings are finally arrived at be reached under an adversary procedure -- so that nothing goes unconsidered and nothing goes unanswered. It is late, of course. Many people connected with the case have since died, many violently. But better late than never. Such reopening would be a step toward the restoration of faith.

Sincerely yours,

Roland F. Lee

CORRESPONDENCE

September 23, 1968

Mr. Marion Johnson
c/o Room 201
National Archives Building
National Archives and Records Service
Washington, D.C. 20408

Dear Mr. Johnson:

I thank you again for your trouble and your assistance in my work at the Archives during the week of September 9. Since that time, some questions have arisen in my mind regarding an aspect of the scientific end of the Warren Commission investigation.

Regarding the topic of spectrographic analysis of the various bullet fragments and whole bullet found in the car, the Governor's wrist, etc. I have used these references:

"Accessories After the Fact", pp. 170-174

"Whitewash", pp. 292-293 of the paperback

Volume V, pp.65-74, testimony of Robert Frazier

Volume XV, pp.746-752, testimony of John Gallagher.

Anyone familiar with the case and the evidence realizes that the most relevant spectrographic comparison to be made is that between CE399 (whole bullet) and CE842 (the Governor's wrist fragments), for the purpose of testing the "single-bullet" theory. From what I have read, the results of a test to that effect have not been revealed; in fact, such a test may never have been performed.

On page 69 of Volume V, reference is made to a formal spectrographic report said to be part of the permanent record of the FBI. I have not located any such document in the 26 volumes (although it may be hidden in there somewhere).

The fragment which is the larger one in CE842 is identified as lead (that is, core material of the bullet, not jacket material) on page 72 of Volume V. My memory is faded somewhat, but as I recall, the jacket of CE399 was intact on the body and nose, although it was open at the inside of the base. This seems to imply, if my memory is correct, that the lead would have to have come from the base of the bullet, if the "single-bullet" theory is to hold.

Enclosure

In summation, my questions are these:

1) Is the jacket of CE399 intact except for at the base (and except for the slice where the material was removed for the analysis)? Is there indeed some lead protruding or at least visible at the base, thus making the "single-bullet" theory at least a possible one?

2) To your knowledge, is there among the documents in the Archives any further information on the spectrographic analyses performed on the bullet and fragments, with specific reference to a comparison between CE399 and CE842? Indeed, is the FBI formal report (which would bear the names Frazier or Gallagher) among the documents?

If you are able to answer these questions, please advise me by mail, as I will be asking Senator Cooper (or whomever he might recommend) to have such relevant analyses done now which may have been omitted at the time of the investigation originally; CE 399 and CE 842 are, of course, still around.

I will be writing a letter to the FBI laboratory on this subject also, to see if they have any pertinent records that somehow failed to reach the Archives.

If you are able to find any relevant documents, please have them xeroxed and sent to me at whatever the charge might be. I thank you again for your trouble; I hope that this letter is clear enough - should these questions require any clarification, please let me know.

Dear Sirs:

This letter should receive the attention of Robert Frazier or John Gallagher, if they are still in the department.

I am a senior physics major at Michigan State University and am a serious student of the assassination of President Kennedy. I attach a copy of a letter which I am sending to the man responsible for the records of the Warren Commission in the National Archives.

The questions that I raise in that letter are admittedly quite belated; I feel that they still have some validity, however.

I have noted that on page 69 of Volume V of the Hearings Before the President's Commission (testimony of Robert Frazier) reference is made to a formal spectrographic report, said to be part of the permanent record of the FBI.

I ask you for any pertinent information you may have on the disposition of this spectrographic report (apparently it was done by Mr. Gallagher, although he never refers to it in his testimony of Volume XV).

I raise the following points:

1) Does such a formal spectrographic report exist now in the files of the FBI?

2) Was such a report ever transmitted in its entirety to the files of the Warren Commission?

3) If so, do you know what Commission Document number it may have? Have I somehow missed this document in the 26 volumes of hearings (this is possible, I admit)?

I hope that with the attached letter my questions are clear; let me know if any clarification is required.

I thank you for your trouble; my questions are no doubt easily answerable, but as a physicist I felt that any part of the Warren Commission which relied mainly on scientific analysis should be free of the questions which are bound to crop up in the less objective areas of the investigation - I am writing in the hope of resolving any remaining doubts pertaining to the spectrographic analyses.

WASHINGTON--NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT ATTORNEY JIM GARRISON IS ONE OF SEVEN BOARD MEMBERS OF A NEW NATIONAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE ASSASSINATIONS WHICH IS BEING FORMED HERE.

BERNARD FENSTERWALD, 47, OF ARLINGTON, VA., ANOTHER BOARD MEMBER, SAID THE COMMITTEE'S PURPOSE IS "TO EMBARRASS OR FORCE THE GOVERNMENT TO MAKE INVESTIGATIONS THEY HAVE BEEN PUTTING OFF SINCE NOV. 22, 1963."

THAT WAS THE DATE OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY'S ASSASSINATION IN DALLAS.

FENSTERWALD, WHO SAID HE WAS SETTING UP AN OFFICE WHICH WOULD OPEN IN A WEEK, LEFT THE SENATE EARLIER THIS WEEK AFTER 12 YEARS AS COUNSEL FOR SEVERAL COMMITTEES.

"THE COMMITTEE WILL CONCENTRATE ON THE THREE BEST KNOWN ASSASSINATIONS -- PRESIDENT KENNEDY, SENATOR ROBERT KENNEDY AND DR. MARTIN LUTHER KING -- BUT WILL LEAVE ITS OPTIONS OPEN ON SOME OTHER RATHER MYSTERIOUS DEATHS," HE SAID.

"OUR POSITION IS THERE WAS A CONSPIRACY IN DALLAS, THERE WERE STRONG FOOTPRINTS OF A CONSPIRACY IN MEMPHIS WHERE DR. KING WAS SHOT AND NOBODY REALLY KNOWS MUCH ABOUT WHAT WENT ON IN LOS ANGELES (WHERE SENATOR KENNEDY WAS SLAIN) BUT WE INTEND TO LOOK."

HE SAID THE COMMITTEE HOPED TO FIND PRIVATE FINANCIAL SUPPORT TO HIRE A PROFESSIONAL STAFF FOR ITS INVESTIGATIONS.

OTHER BOARD MEMBERS, SAID FENSTERWALD, INCLUDE BILL TURNER OF SAN FRANCISCO, A FORMER FBI AGENT; RICHARD SPRAGUE OF HARTSDALE, N.Y., A COMPUTER EXPERT; ERLE J. COOK, ENGLEWOOD, N.J., AUTHOR; LLOYD TUPLING, ASSOCIATED WITH THE SIERRA CLUB HERE, AND PARIS FLAMMONDE A NEW YORK WRITER WHO WILL HAVE A BOOK OUT NEXT WEEK ON ASSASSINATIONS.

EIGHT MORE BOARD MEMBERS WILL BE NAMED LATER, FENSTERWALD SAID.

Memorandum

DATE: 1-6-69

FROM : M. A. Jones

SUBJECT: NATIONAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE ASSASSINATIONS

SYNOPSIS:

UPI release of 1-3-69 announced the formation of National Committee to Investigate Assassinations. Board members of the committee include Bernard Fensterwald; Jim Garrison, New Orleans District Attorney; William Turner, former FBI Agent; Fred J. Cook, author; Richard Sprague, a computer expert; Lloyd Tupling, Washington, D. C.; and Paris Flammonde, author of a book on assassinations, soon to be released. The Director has asked for a memorandum on Fensterwald, Sprague, Tupling and Flammonde.

Fensterwald, former Chief Counsel to Senator Long's committee on wiretapping was subject of applicant-type inquiries conducted by Bureau in 1949 and 1959. The names of Fensterwald's mother and sister appeared on a list of delegates and members in 1942 of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, cited by the House Committee on Un-American Activities. While employed by the State Department in 1956, Fensterwald and his mother traveled to the Soviet Union.

We have had considerable contact with Fensterwald over the past four years as Chief Counsel of the United States Senate Committee on the Judiciary; Subcommittee on Administrative Practice and Procedure (the Long committee). In these contacts Fensterwald has clearly shown he is unscrupulous, untrustworthy and anti-FBI. He frequently sought to involve the FBI in wiretapping probes by Long's committee and in January, 1966, in connection with hearings in San Francisco Fensterwald indicated that ex-Agent William Turner would be one of the witnesses he intended to call in connection with FBI wiretapping. Mr. DeLoach briefed Fensterwald and Senator Long as to Turner's unsavory background. Turner is another board member of the assassination committee.

L. A. Jones to Bishop memo
RE: NATIONAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE ASSASSINATIONS

In December, 1965, it was obvious that Fensterwald had sent information to Fred Cook, longtime FBI critic, for article in "The Nation" by Cook dealing with wiretapping by Government agencies. Cook quoted Fensterwald as stating, "The thing that has impressed me most is the ease with which Federal agents can lie under oath."

Mr. DeLoach maintained close personal liaison with Senator Long regarding his committee hearings and it was necessary on occasion to contact him regarding letters written over Long's signature to the Bureau requesting certain information. One such instance was in December, 1967, regarding FBI contacts with credit unions. Long stated we should ignore the letter and he would instruct Fensterwald to "keep hands off" the FBI. On same occasion Senator Long advised Mr. DeLoach that Fensterwald had "shot off his mouth too much" in connection with two articles in "Life" magazine dealing with Senator Long which allegedly had been "planted" by Bobby Kennedy.

Fensterwald, who will be Executive Director of assassination committee, left his post as Chief Counsel for the Long committee last month, apparently when Long resigned as Senator in order to give his successor seniority when the present Senate went into session.

No information in Bufiles concerning Paris Flammonde.

No pertinent information in Bufiles concerning Lloyd Tupling who may be identical with individual who was on staff of Senator Richard L. Neuberger in 1954.

Richard Sprague may be identical with individual who contacted Senator Robert F. Kennedy's office in early 1968 regarding his theory that more than one individual had fired shots at President Kennedy when he was assassinated. Sprague had reportedly assisted other individuals who share his views and who were otherwise critical of the Warren Commission findings.

From the above lineup, including Garrison and Turner, it is obvious that we can expect anti-FBI sentiments from such a group.

RE: NATIONAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE ASSASSINATIONS

DETAILS:

A UPI release on January 3, 1969, announced the formation of a new National Committee to Investigate Assassinations. According to Bernard Fensterwald, 47, of Arlington, Virginia, a board member, the committee's purpose is "to embarrass or force the Government to make investigations they have been putting off since November 22, 1963." According to Fensterwald, the committee will concentrate on the assassinations of President Kennedy, Senator Robert Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King. In addition to Fensterwald, other members were identified as Jim Garrison, New Orleans District Attorney; William Turner, former FBI Agent; Fred J. Cook, author; Richard Sprague, Hartsdale, New York, a computer expert; Lloyd Tupling, associated with the Sierra Club, Washington, D. C.; and Paris Flammonde, a New York writer who is the author of a book on assassinations, which is soon to be released.

The Director has asked for a memorandum on Fensterwald, Sprague, Tupling and Flammonde.

Bernard Fensterwald: Fensterwald was born on August 2, 1921, at Nashville, Tennessee. He received the B. S. degree from Harvard College in 1942 and the LL. B. degree from Harvard Law School in 1949. He received the M. A. degree in 1950 from the School of Advanced International Studies, Washington, D. C.

Fensterwald was the subject of applicant-type inquiries conducted by the Bureau in 1949 and 1959. While generally favorable, the names of Mr. Fensterwald's mother and sister appeared on a list of delegates and members of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, cited by the House Committee on Un-American Activities, at a meeting held on April 19-21, 1942, at Nashville, Tennessee. Fensterwald and his mother traveled to the Soviet Union in June, 1956, for a three-week vacation visit. At that time, Fensterwald was employed as a lawyer by the United States Department of State.

Fensterwald has been employed on the staffs of a number of Senate committees. In 1953 Fensterwald was employed by the Senate Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights (Henning Committee) and was involved in a request to the Bureau from this subcommittee for a list of instances wherein we had furnished information to members of Congress. Senator Henning subsequently advised the Bureau that Fensterwald's requests to the Bureau had been improper. Over the past four years we have had considerable contact with Bernard Fensterwald as Chief Counsel of the United States Senate Committee on the Judiciary; Subcommittee on Administrative Practice and Procedure (the Long Committee). In these contacts with Fensterwald it was clearly evident he was unscrupulous, untrustworthy and anti-FBI. He frequently endeavored to draw the FBI into conflicts around the country by his requests of various telephone companies and other sources who might possibly have information of wiretaps and other technical surveillances by the FBI. In January, 1966, in connection with Fensterwald's hearings in San Francisco he indicated that ex-Agent William Turner would be one of the witnesses he intended to call in connection with the extent of FBI wiretapping. Mr. DeLoach briefed Fensterwald and Senator Long who was present at the time of the discussion with Fensterwald as to Turner's unsavory background. Fensterwald indicated he would take a second look at Turner in view of the information furnished by Mr. DeLoach. (Turner is reportedly another board member of the assassination committee)

"The Nation" magazine in December, 1965, carried an article by Fred J. Cook dealing with wiretapping by Government agencies, including the FBI. It was obvious Cook, a longtime FBI critic, had obtained the information for his article from Fensterwald whom he quoted several times. Typical of many of Fensterwald's utterances in connection with his assignment as Chief Counsel of Senator Long's committee was the statement, in "The Nation" magazine article, "The thing that has impressed me most is the ease with which Federal agents can lie under oath."

Mr. DeLoach maintained close personal liaison with Senator Long concerning the work of the FBI as it might pertain to inquiries conducted by his committee. On occasions letters directed to the FBI requesting certain information were handled orally by Mr. DeLoach with Senator Long who indicated that Fensterwald had prepared the letters. One such instance was in December, 1967, in connection with FBI contacts with credit unions. On that occasion, Senator Long stated we should ignore the letter and he would instruct Fensterwald to "keep hands off" the FBI. On the same occasion

Senator Long told Mr. DeLoach that Fensterwald has "shot off his mouth too much" in connection with two articles in "Life" magazine dealing with Senator Long which allegedly had been "planted" by Bobby Kennedy. According to the "Washington Post" of 1-3-69, Fensterwald will be the Executive Director of captioned committee. It is noted he left his post as Chief Counsel for the Long committee approximately a week ago, apparently when Long resigned as Senator in order to give his successor seniority when the present Senate went into session. Paris Flammonde: Bureau files contain no information identifiable with Paris Flammonde.

Lloyd Tupling: During 1954, W. Lloyd Tupling was appointed the Information Officer of the staff of Richard L. Neuberger, Democratic Senator of Oregon. One Lloyd Tupling, University News Bureau, Eugene, Oregon, was listed as a member of the "Society of America's Friends of the Mexican People" as of 8-13-38. This group is no longer in existence and was not investigated by the FBI, although indications were that the group was sympathetic to the communist cause. During May, 1950, one Lloyd Tupling was the publisher of "The State-Wide Newspaper," a weekly published in Boise, Idaho. (100-179915-23)

Richard Sprague: In a Rosen to Mr. DeLoach memo dated 3-26-68, captioned "Assassination of President John Fitzgerald Kennedy, 11-22-63, Dallas, Texas," it was noted that Richard E. Sprague had written to Joseph F. Dolan, Administrative Assistant to Senator Robert F. Kennedy, enclosing a number of photographs taken at the assassination site, and also stating that he was a proponent of the theory that more than one individual was firing shots at President Kennedy when he was assassinated. Bureau, Dallas and New York files contained no information on Sprague at that time, and New York was instructed to conduct a credit and criminal inquiry on him in an attempt to identify him, and these checks were negative.

A review was made of books written by critics of the Warren Commission to determine if Sprague might have collaborated with them. In Josiah Thompson's book, "Six Seconds in Dallas," he acknowledges assistance from one "Richard Sprague" not further identified. Sylvia Meagher, author of "Accessories After the Fact," a severe critique of the Warren Commission,

FBI, CIA, Secret Service, and Dallas Police Department, acknowledges the assistance of Richard E. Sprague stating, "I am grateful to Richard E. Sprague for making available a list compiled by him of photographs and films which seem to have been overlooked entirely by the Warren Commission and these investigative agencies."

Sprague wrote us on 7-9-68 along the same vein he had written Mr. Dolan, indicating he had important photographs of the assassination which should be reviewed by us, and also enclosed a research monograph relating to the assassination of President Kennedy. By letter of 7-18-68, we advised Mr. Sprague that the information in his monograph, as well as the photographs, were previously furnished the Bureau by the office of former Senator Robert F. Kennedy. Our files reveal no additional pertinent data concerning Sprague. (62-109060-5520)

A review of our files concerning Bernard Fensterwald, Jr., who was mentioned in news media on January 3, 1969, as being a board member of a new National Committee to Investigate Assassinations, disclosed that Fensterwald was born August 2, 1921, in Nashville, Tennessee, the son of Bernard Fensterwald and Blanche Lindauer Fensterwald. Enclosed is a copy of a memorandum dated March 23, 1959, which sets forth considerable background data concerning Fensterwald. (77-44206-34)

During recent years, Fensterwald has served as General Counsel for Senator Edward V. Long's Subcommittee on Administrative Practice and Procedure.

A check of our files also disclosed that we received correspondence from Richard E. Sprague, 37 Harvard Drive, Hartsdale, New York, in July, 1966. On that occasion,

Mr. Sprague furnished a copy of his research monograph describing photographs of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy which he had assembled. Mr. Sprague requested an opportunity to meet with a representative of this Bureau to review and discuss his material. However, we noted in reviewing Mr. Sprague's material that there was nothing new that had not already been fully considered in our examination of the evidence involved in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and, therefore, we informed Mr. Sprague we did not feel it necessary to meet with him to go over his material. (62-109060-6520)

In reviewing some of the books written by critics of the Warren Commission, we noted that Josiah Thompson, in his book entitled "Six Seconds in Dallas," acknowledged assistance from one "Richard Sprague" not further identified.

We also noted that Sylvia Meagher, author of "Accessories After the Fact," acknowledged the assistance of Richard E. Sprague stating "I am grateful to Richard E. Sprague for making available a list compiled by him of photographs and films which seem to have been established entirely by the Warren Commission and these investigative agencies." In her book, Mrs. Meagher was extremely critical concerning the Warren Commission, the FBI, the Central Intelligence Agency, the Secret Service and the Dallas Police Department. (62-109060-6290)

A check of our files also disclosed that during 1954 V. Lloyd Tupling was appointed the Information Officer of the Staff of Richard L. Neuberger, Democratic Senator of Oregon. One Lloyd Tupling, University Home Owners, Eugene, Oregon, was listed as a member of the "Society of America's Friends of the Russian People" as of August 18, 1960. This group is no longer in existence and was not investigated by the FBI, although indications were that the group was sympathetic to the communist cause. During May, 1960, one Lloyd Tupling was the publisher of "The State-Idea Newspaper," a weekly newspaper published in Boise, Idaho. (100-179915-23)

SUBJECT: BERNARD FENSTERWALD
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR
NATIONAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE ASSASSINATIONS

Fensterwald appeared as a guest on a radio program called, "Sunday Dialogue" featured by radio station WAVA 1/12/69. This was a two-hour show. The first hour Fensterwald was interviewed by the narrator regarding the purpose of the National Committee to Investigate Assassinations and the second hour was answering questions telephonically from the inquiring public.

Fensterwald stated that the Warren Commission report is a "fairy story" and that it is false and one of the biggest "snow jobs" ever done. He said the Committee's office will be located at 927 15th Street, Northwest, Washington, D. C., telephone number 347-3337.

Fensterwald mentioned at present he has no staff but does have a Board of Directors which include Jim Garrison, New Orleans District Attorney, William Turner, former FBI Agent, Fred J. Cook, Paris Flammonde, author and others. He hopes to build an investigative staff through funds obtained from private sources and donations. Thereafter, the staff will conduct necessary investigation into the assassinations of President John Fitzgerald Kennedy, Martin Luther King, and Robert F. Kennedy.

Fensterwald intends to link forces with various individuals around the country namely Jim Garrison, Harold Weisberg, Josiah Thompson and others to form an organization so that a large pool of information relating to the assassinations will be available.

When this information becomes available, it is Fensterwald's intention to force, persuade or embarrass the Government to appoint a new Commission or for Congress to reopen the investigation concerning the assassination of President Kennedy. He contends the truth will come out.

Memo Rosen to DeLoach
RE: BERNARD FENSTERWALD

Fensterwald stated he believed there was a definite conspiracy involved in the assassination of President Kennedy and that there was more than one assassin involved. He indicated he doubts very much the Warren Commission's statement that there was no conspiracy involved in the assassination of President Kennedy. Fensterwald wants to have the photographs of President Kennedy's autopsy, currently in the Archives, made available as he believes with others of the group with whom he has become aligned, that shots which were responsible for President Kennedy's death came from the front, rather than from the rear.

Fensterwald briefly discussed his background as being associated with Senator Long's committee on wire tapping and had been involved in investigating the Internal Revenue Service and the Department of Justice. He was asked by the narrator if he intended to investigate the FBI. Fensterwald said he was not "doing an investigation of the FBI as such," however, will have the advantage of having William Turner on the Board of Directors as well as Fred J. Cook, who are knowledgeable about the activities of the FBI and other Government agencies. Fensterwald mentioned Paris Flammonde, whom he described as an author who recently wrote the book "Why President Kennedy Was Killed." Flammonde takes the position in this book that there was a conspiracy involved and analyzes the possibilities of who were involved.

Comments made by Fensterwald regarding the investigation of President Kennedy conducted by the Warren Commission readily revealed that he was not familiar with the full facts or the information contained in the Commission's report. Further he has aligned himself with individuals whom we know to be severe critics of the Warren Commission, the FBI, the CIA and other Government agencies.

He indicated another purpose he has is "to restore some sense of integrity to our Government," as an unsolved murder of a President casts doubt on the Government. Therefore, he will make efforts to bring an honest investigation "by our Government" into the assassination of President Kennedy.

From comments made by Fensterwald and because of the known background of the individuals with whom he is associating, it can be anticipated this group will undoubtedly make unwarranted attacks against the FBI in the future.

FIVE-YEAR REVIEW OF
WARREN COMMISSION FILES

Reference is made to your letter, under the above caption, dated September 4, 1970.

This letter enclosed a letter to the Attorney General from Herbert E. Angel, Acting Archivist of the United States dated August 17, 1970. Referenced letter stated that Mr. Angel advised "it is time for the documents in the Numbered Document File of the Warren Commission which have previously been withheld from public scrutiny to be reviewed for the purpose of determining whether any of those documents may now be released."

Mr. Angel pointed out that documents of the Department in question included FBI reports (concerning the assassination of President John F. Kennedy) and a volume of copies of summaries of FBI interviews with acquaintances of Jack L. Ruby. On September 8, 1970, Special Agent J. Donald Huppert contacted Mr. Steven P. Lockman who is handling this matter for the Department. Arrangements were made for Special Agent Kenneth M. Raupach of this Bureau to meet with Mr. Lockman on September 14, 1970, for discussions concerning the review of the material in question.

1 - Assistant Attorney General
Criminal Division

NOTE: The letter to the Attorney General dated 8/17/70 from the Acting Archivist referred to regulations which require a review every five years of certain files pertaining to the assassination of President Kennedy to determine if information may be made available to the public. It has been five years since the material referred to in instant communications has been reviewed. Bureau Supervisors assisted in the 1965 review and referenced letter requests our assistance in the current review. When contacted 9/8/70, Departmental Attorney Lockman advised it would be convenient to begin this project on 9/14/70.

The Attorney General has referred to me the letter to him of August 17, 1970 from Herbert E. Angel, Acting Archivist of the United States (a copy of which is attached), notifying the Department that it is time for the documents in the Numbered Document File of the Warren Commission which have previously been withheld from public scrutiny to be reviewed for the purpose of determining whether any of those documents may now be released. Mr. Angel points out that the documents of the Department in question include "about four linear feet of reports of the Federal Bureau of Investigation" and "Commission Document 355, a volume (about 2 inches thick) of copies of summaries of FBI interviews with acquaintances of Jack L. Ruby." Mr. Angel states that the Archives will be pleased to make these documents available to those members of the Department selected to review them.

In late 1968, at the request of the Attorney General, this Office made a complete review of all of the documents in the Commission's files and listed those items which appeared to be releasable. We recommended to the Attorney General, however, that no release of documents be made at that time. My predecessor, Mr. Frank Wozencraft, stated in a memorandum to the Attorney General that-

In view of the fact that the Department's documents which are presently being withheld were generated by the Bureau, it is appropriate that the Bureau assist in the present five-year review. GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION

Honorable John N. Mitchell
Attorney General
Washington, D. C. 20530

Dear Mr. Attorney General:

The President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy transferred its records to the National Archives in November 1964 to be "permanently preserved under the rules and regulations of the National Archives and applicable Federal law" (Report of the Commission, p. XV). The records included some documents which are withheld from disclosure by specific statutes, security classified records, investigatory files compiled for law enforcement purposes, and medical and personnel records. It was apparent that the records of the Commission would have to be reviewed on a document-by-document basis in order to identify the relatively few documents of this nature that could not immediately be made available for research.

This review was conducted in 1965 in accordance with "Guidelines for Review of Materials Submitted to the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy," which were prepared by the Department of Justice in consultation with the agencies which furnished records to the Commission (copy enclosed). Under these guidelines (page 2) it is the responsibility of the Archivist of the United States to arrange for successive reviews of the records of the Commission that are withheld from research. Since it is now five years since the review of the Numbered Document File of the Commission in 1965, it is time for the documents that were withheld from research at that time to be reviewed again as indicated in the last paragraph of the guidelines. The National Archives will be pleased to show the documents withheld from research at the request of your Department to any members of your staff who may be selected to review them. The following documents are withheld at the request of the Office of Legal Counsel of the Department of Justice:

1. About four linear feet of reports of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

3. Unclassified material which has not already been disclosed in another form should be made available to the public on a regular basis unless disclosure--

   (A) Would be detrimental to the administration and enforcement of the laws and regulations of the United States and its agencies;

   (B) Might reveal the identity of confidential sources of information and impede or jeopardize future investigations by precluding or limiting the use of the same or similar sources hereafter;

   (C) Would be a source of embarrassment to innocent persons, who are the subject, source, or apparent source of the material in question, because it contains gossip and rumor or details of a personal nature having no significant connection with the assassination of the President;

62-109090-616

~~(b) would reveal material pertinent to the criminal prosecution of Jack Ruby for the murder of Lee Harvey Oswald, prior to the final judicial determination of that case.~~

Whenever one of the above reasons for nondisclosure may apply, your department should, in determining whether or not to authorize disclosure, weigh that reason against the overriding policy of the Executive Branch favoring the fullest possible disclosure.

Unless sooner released to the public, classified and unclassified material which is not now made available to the public shall, as a minimum, be reviewed by the agency concerned five years and ten years after the initial examination has been completed. The criteria applied in the initial examination, outlined above, should be applied to determine whether changed circumstances will permit further disclosure. Similar reviews should be undertaken at ten year intervals until all materials are opened for legitimate research purposes. The Archivist of the United States will arrange for such review at the appropriate time. Whenever possible provision should be made for the automatic declassification of classified material which cannot be declassified at this time.

PURPOSE: To advise the Department requested the Bureau assist in the present five-year review of Warren Commission files contained in the National Archives to determine what material relating to the assassination of President John Fitzgerald Kennedy can now be released. Action has been taken to handle this request.

BACKGROUND: The Attorney General (AG) was advised by letter dated 8/10/65 we completed the project of reviewing past records of the Warren Commission on file in the Archives. This review was conducted in accordance with guidelines approved by the Honorable McGeorge Bundy, Special Assistant to the President on 4/19/65. The guidelines also indicated these records had to be reviewed every five years to determine what other material could be released.

On 9/14/70, Special Agent (SA) Kenneth M. Raupach, General Investigative Division, consulted with Mr. Stephen P. Lockman, who is handling the matter in the Department, concerning the current review. Mr. Lockman advised that he was not too familiar with the material in the Archives or how it was handled in the past. In this respect, Mr. Lochman was referred to the information we previously furnished to the Department regarding our original review.

Accompanying our letter to the AG 8/10/65, was a list of material reviewed setting forth information as to what could be released according to the guidelines and those items which were not to be released. This list was broken down into List A, (items to be released); List B (reports and other data) which could be released, however certain pages from these reports were excised due to their contents falling within the guidelines; List C, Bureau documents which were given Commission Document numbers and were not released; Lists D and E missing documents or transmittal letters that could not be evaluated in light of the guidelines. A supplemental list was furnished to the AG by letter dated 8/25/65 setting forth other material released. These two lists will now be our working guide in connection with the current review. EX-109 REC 85 62 109090-617

Mr. Lockman advised that in 1968, at the request of the AG, the Department made a review of all the Warren Commission documents withheld from the public retained in the Archives; however, no release of the of the documents was made. He furnished a copy listing 41 documents originally prepared by the FBI which in the opinion of the Department could probably be released. These will be reviewed also to determine whether there is any objection to their release.

On 9/15/70, Mr. Lockman, Mr. Marion M. Johnson of the Archives and SA Kenneth M. Raupach met to arrange for working space in the Archives and to determine what material had to be reviewed. There are 12 boxes in Archives containing material furnished by the Bureau to the Warren Commission which has not been released. A spot check of this material revealed it dealt primarily with the investigation of Lee Harvey Oswald, Jack L. Ruby, investigation requested by the Commission regarding Mark Lane subject of a pending Bureau security case, and related material. It is specifically noted that in reviewing those pages which were deleted from reports released to the public (List B) it may be necessary to review a portion of the original report to assist in determining whether those pages can now be released. In this respect a numerical count made determined that there are 1,482 pages involved which were deleted from 108 Bureau reports or letterhead memoranda furnished to the Commission which were given Commission Document numbers. In addition, there are 154 reports in various lengths which were never released to the public (List C) and must now be reviewed to determine whether any of the information can be made public.

It is anticipated that the review will be started on 9/18/70 and will be completed as rapidly as possible consistent with the number of files that have to be reviewed. Since a majority of the material in the Archives deals with the investigation of Lee Harvey Oswald, which was handled by the Domestic Intelligence Division, it was estimated that three supervisors from the Domestic Intelligence Division as well as SAs J. W. Hines and K. M. Raupach of the General Investigative Division would be needed. The General Investigative Division is preparing necessary materia for use in connection with this project. Space has been designated in the Archives in Room 6E.

ACTION: If approved, the Domestic Intelligence Division should designate three supervisors for this project and furnish their names to SA Raupach who will coordinate the project beginning the review on 9/18/70. No request for manpower is being made from the Laboratory at this time until the review is made. If it is determined Laboratory assistance is needed, a request will be made.

ADDENDUM DOMESTIC INTELLIGENCE DIVISION 9-17-70 WAB:lag

In view of the pressure of work presently existing in the Domestic Intelligence Division caused by the rebellious activities of the New Left and the general unrest of the racial situation, together with the potentially explosive situation when the numerous heads of states will arrive for the commemorative session of the United Nations, the Domestic Intelligence Division recommends that only two men from this Division be used for this review.

Well done pt. 2

FIVE-YEAR REVIEW OF

b Warren Commission

Reference is made to your letter under the above caption dated September 4, 1970, and my letter dated September 9, 1970. These communications concerned your request for this Bureau's assistance in reviewing FBI documents in the Numbered Document File of the Warren Commission retained in the National Archives to determine whether any of these documents can now be released.

The current review has been completed and the results of this review are contained in our October 1, 1970, memorandum, the original and one copy of which are enclosed. In connection with this review, you are referred to our memorandum dated August 10, 1965, captioned "Public Disclosure of Warren Commission Records," which was furnished to the Attorney General by letter dated August 10, 1965, and a supplemental memorandum under the same caption dated August 25, 1965, furnished to the Attorney General by letter also dated August 25, 1965. These memoranda contained the results of our original review and were the working guides for our current review. Copies of these communications are in possession of the National Archives.

Since the final decision as to public disclosure of material emanating from this Bureau in connection with our investigations of events concerning the assassination of President John F. Kennedy rests with the Department of Justice, the results of our current review are being furnished to you rather than the National Archives.

PURPOSE: To advise that the project of reviewing past records of the Warren Commission which are on file in the National Archives which was requested by the Department has been completed. This review was conducted in compliance with guidelines applicable to the Warren Commission records. The documents reviewed were only those which we furnished to the Warren Commission and were not heretofore released to the public. Attached is a letter to the Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, enclosing the original and one copy of the results of our review.

BACKGROUND: The Department previously requested that we review FBI documents contained in the National Archives which we furnished to the Warren Commission and were not released to the public to determine what documents can now be released.

This review was conducted in accordance with guidelines approved by the Honorable McGeorge Bundy, Special Assistant to the President on 4/19/65. The guidelines also indicated these records had to be reviewed every five years to determine what material could be released which was previously withheld from the public.

ST-117 REC 8 -619

The current review was made by Special Agents T. N. Goble and H. H. Wallace, Jr. of the Domestic Intelligence Division and Special Agents J. W. Hines and K. M. Raupach of the General Investigative Division. For record purposes color markings were utilized to signify the Agent who made the decision as to whether a particular document should or should not be released. These markings are as follows: Goble, blue; Wallace, green; Hines, red and Raupach, black. A check mark indicated the document could be released and an X mark indicated the document should not be released. The document utilized as the master list which was our current working guide was our memorandum dated 8/10/65 captioned "Public Disclosure of Warren Commission Records."

This was previously furnished to the Department who in turn furnished it to the National Archives. The current master working guide will be filed as an enclosure to this communication for future reference when the next review will have to be made in 1975.

The current review was conducted in accordance with the guidelines which indicated that the Executive Branch of the Government favored the fullest possible disclosure of the Warren Commission documents. In this respect, approximately 890 items have been recommended for release. These deal with the investigation of Jack Ruby, deceased, investigation of Lee Harvey Oswald in Mexico and other information which for the most part was originally withheld because of the close proximity in time to the assassination and it could have been a source of embarrassment to persons who furnished or were mentioned in the material. In view of the elapsed time since the assassination, it is felt this restriction is no longer applicable.

If the Department releases these items, there will remain approximately 748 items. They concern investigation conducted concerning Oswald and his associates which fall within security classifications, or the information contained in them would be detrimental to the administration and enforcement of laws and regulations of the United States and its agencies. Also, some of the retained material contains information concerning confidential sources of information and could impede or jeopardize future investigations by precluding or limiting the use of these or similar sources if released now.

ACTION: Attached for approval is a letter to the Assistant Attorney General, Office of Legal Counsel, enclosing the original and one copy of the results of our current review. It is indicated the final decision concerning the release of Warren Commission documents prepared by the FBI rests with the Department of Justice, therefore, the results of our review have not been furnished to the National Archives.

NOT RECORDED
126 MAY 26 1971

Mr. Richard Kleindienst
Deputy Attorney General
Department of Justice
Washington, D.C. 20530

Dear Mr. Kleindienst:

As you know, one of the most important matters considered by the Warren Commission was the extent to which various federal law enforcement agencies knew of the activities of Lee Harvey Oswald before the assassination of President Kennedy.

In the course of its inquiry in this regard, the Commission obtained from each of the agencies concerned a great deal of information. In the case of the Central Intelligence Agency, the Department of State, the Office of Naval Intelligence, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the Commission was furnished with what was said to be the entire contents of any files maintained by each of these agencies on Oswald prior to November 22, 1963.

The FBI was generally cooperative in furnishing its formal reports on Oswald, and in responding by letter or memorandum to certain questions that arose from time to time. However, as far as I know, the Commission never asked the FBI to provide all of its pre-assassination files relating to Oswald.

I believe that the data available to the public and to historians in this area with respect to the FBI should be as comprehensive as that which was furnished to the Commission by the other federal agencies concerned. Therefore, under the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act, I am requesting access to all FBI files on Oswald through November 22, 1963, whether maintained at headquarters or at any field office. This should include all material in FBI files dealing with Oswald in any way which was not furnished to the Commission (as well as that furnished but presently withheld), including internal memoranda, teletypes and other instructions or communications between FBI activities, internal surveillance reports on any surveillance conducted involving Oswald, internal mail cover reports on Oswald, and the like. To the extent feasible, I intend this request to include access to any other FBI data on or relating to Os ald not contained in his files, as, for example, extracts from the logs of the daily activities of those agents who had any contact with Oswald if such entries are not a part of the Oswald files.

I recognize that a small part of the information requested in this letter might properly be withheld at this time, for example to protect the identity of named sources. In such cases, I feel that the public interest could be served if the material were released with deletions and the complete records were placed in the National Archives, subject to the same restrictions as the files of the Warren Commission. As you know, on October 31, 1966, the Attorney General stated that "I have determined that the national interest requires the entire body of evidence considered by the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy and now in the possession of the United States to be preserved intact." (31 Fed. Reg. 13963)

You have called for a Congressional investigation to clear the air concerning recent charges about FBI activities. May I respectfully suggest that you act to achieve a similar goal in connection with the serious charges and questions that have been raised concerning the FBI's handling of the Oswald case, by allowing maximum disclosure of the requested records?

I note that this request includes some items which I have previously asked for (in my letter of December 9, among others). If this request is denied, I expect to come to ask for individual items of special importance.

In the past, you have sometimes claimed that such records can be withhold under the "investigative files" exemption to the Freedom of Information Act; as you know, I disagree with this interpretation. However, if that is still your position, I am looking forward to a prompt reply. I have received no response at all to my requests of December 9, or to my reminder, addressed to Mr. Bolapp on March 8. May I therefore ask for an immediate acknowledgement of this letter, and your assurances that my requests are not being especially delayed?

Sincerely yours,

Paul L. Hoch

FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT -
REQUEST OF PAUL L. HOCH

Your communication of May 10, 1971, forwarded two copies of a letter from Mr. Paul L. Hoch dated April 9, 1971, and its enclosures.

Mr. Hoch has made numerous requests in the past for documents turned over to National Archives by the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy. His present request goes far beyond Commission documents. He requests access "to all FBI files on Oswald through November 22, 1963, whether maintained at headquarters or at any field office. This should include all material in FBI files dealing with Oswald in any way which was not furnished to the Commission (as well as that furnished but presently withheld), including internal memoranda, teletypes and other instructions or communications between FBI activities, internal surveillance reports on any surveillance conducted involving Oswald, internal mail cover reports on Oswald, and the like." Hoch adds, "To the extent feasible, I intend this request to include access to any other FBI data on or relating to Oswald not contained in his files, as, for example, extracts from the logs of the daily activities of those Agents who had any contact with Oswald if such entries are not a part of the Oswald files."

This would appear to be a deliberate attempt to "rummage" through the files of the FBI, and, on principle, Mr. Hoch's request should be denied. Investigation of Oswald, prior to the assassination, was for law enforcement purposes, and anything pertinent to the assassination was made available to the Commission.

In Volume V of the published hearings before the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy, the testimony of Alan H. Belmont, who was then an Assistant to the Director of the FBI, discussed in detail the FBI interest in Lee Harvey Oswald prior to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. In connection with that testimony, there were certain Commission Exhibits, which were printed elsewhere in the Commission reports, specifically in Volume XVII, Commission Exhibits 821, 822, 823, 824, 826, 829 and 830.

The Commission's specific questions regarding FBI interest in Oswald and the answers thereto are contained in Commission Exhibit 833. A complete listing of the contents of the FBI headquarters file concerning Lee Harvey Oswald up to the time of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy on November 22, 1963, is contained in Commission Exhibit 834. An affidavit by the Director of the FBI that Lee Harvey Oswald was never an informant of the FBI appears in Commission Exhibit 835.

Commission Exhibit 825 contains affidavits by personnel of the FBI, who because of their assignments, would have been responsible for or cognizant of any attempt to develop Lee Harvey Oswald as an informant of the FBI. Each of these individuals denied any knowledge that Oswald was ever an informant of the FBI.

These Commission Exhibits are mentioned because in the past Koch has indicated his suspicion that there was some connection between Lee Harvey Oswald and the FBI and it is possible that his present request is pointed toward discovering evidence of such relationship which, of course, did not exist.

It is noted that Koch states in his letter of April 9, 1971, that he has received no response to his request of December 9, 1970. This Bureau's observations concerning Koch's December 9 request were contained in the letter to you dated January 4, 1971, captioned "Freedom of Information Act: Request of Paul L. Koch."

There are returned herewith the two copies of Mr. Koch's letter with its enclosures. It is recommended that Mr. Koch's request be denied.

NOTE:

Paul L. Koch is a Berkeley, California, "graduate student" who has been making inquiries about the assassination of President Kennedy over the past five years. He is the man who wrote the Attorney General on 9/19/69 alleging "some sort of relationship between" Lee Harvey Oswald and the FBI. The Director has noted "I dislike to humor a character like Koch who is obviously a 'smear' artist."

The Kennedy-Connally Single Bullet Theory

A Feasibility Study

John K. Lattimer, M.D., D.Sc. (Med.), F.A.C.S.,* and Jon Lattimer

New York, New York

One of the specific findings of the Warren Commission Report on the Assassination of President Kennedy, which has been a prime target for critics, has been their conclusion that a single bullet from Oswald's rifle traversed President Kennedy's neck, turned slightly, then pierced Governor Connally's chest below the right scapula. The Commission Report postulated that this same bullet then shattered the Governor's fifth rib, turned completely sideways, emerged below his right nipple, went sideways through his right wrist, turned still further to turn completely around and ended up sticking backwards into the skin of his left thigh. From this position the long narrow bullet was dislodged and was found on a stretcher upon which it was deduced that Governor Connally had lain.[1]

This bullet (Warren Commission Exhibit 399)[2] (Fig. 1, left), if seen only in the side view, which has been widely republished by critics of the Warren Report,[3] appears to be deformed very little. In fact, its apparent lack of deformity has led critics to describe it inaccurately as a "pristine" bullet.[3,4]

Critics have also contended that the four fragments of bullet seen in the preoperative roentgenograms of the wrist and thigh of Governor Connally (Figs. 2A and B) would weigh more than the weight which was estimated to be missing from bullet 399, i.e., 2.2 grains.

Furthermore, they state that the ammunition used by Oswald was "unreliable,"[3] likely to fail to fire and that it did not have the capability required by the "single bullet" theory.

Ballistics tests done by governmental agencies[6,7] to investigate these points have been challenged on various grounds. The critics, however, seem to have done no ballistics experiments of their own.

It seemed appropriate, therefore, that some of these points which are still susceptible to experimentation should be investigated by "uninvolved" research workers to see if these particular allegations of the Warren Commission Report are indeed feasible, or whether discrepancies actually do exist which would make them untenable.

First, an investigation of the ammunition, bullets and bullet fragments involved was undertaken to determine whether their condition, number, weight and reliability made it impossible or even unlikely that the bullets involved could have done what the Warren Commission contends they did. Various laboratory technics were employed with the help of pathologist Dr. Myron Tannenbaum and roentgenologist Dr. Joshua Becker of the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center.

Answers to the following questions were sought:

Question 1.—Was the bullet (399) which the Warren Commission alleges did so much damage actually "undeformed" or "pristine"?

Question 2.—Were the bullet fragments left in Governor Connally indeed too many to have come from bullet 399?

Question 3.—Was the ammunition used by Oswald actually unreliable?

Was Bullet 399 "Pristine" (Undeformed)?

To the question, "Was the bullet (Warren Commission Exhibit 399), which was alleged by the Commission to have penetrated both President Kennedy and Governor Connally, actually "pristine" (undeformed) when found?" the answer was clearly "NO." When actually examined by one of us (J.K.L.), this bullet (399) was found to be flattened as if from a severe blow on one side and to a significant degree (photographs taken from the side view do not show this flattening) (Fig. 1). During the course of the experiments described below, it became obvious that a great deal of force was required to impose this much deformity (flattening) on a "fully-jacketed," very compact, military bullet of this type.

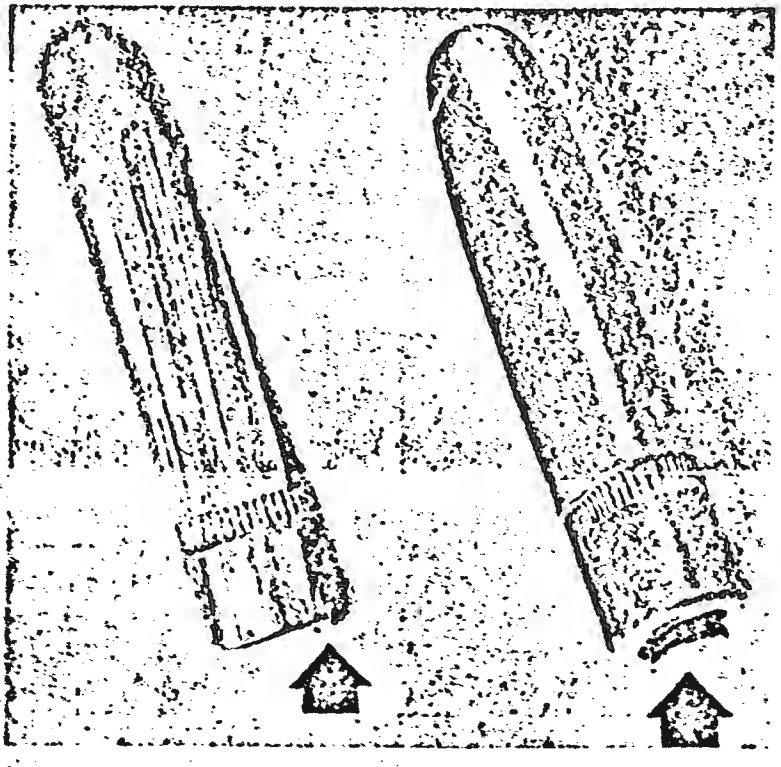

Fig. 1.—Test bullet (right) has been flattened the same amount as bullet 399 (left), even though the flattening of bullet 399 does not show in this view. Note the portion of lead "core" extruded (arrow, right) from rear end of test bullet, caused by this flattening. Only a tiny amount of extruded "core" remains, protruding from the base of bullet 399 (arrow, left). The rest had been scraped off, presumably by its passage through Governor Connally's wrist.

The soft lead at the "base" end of bullet 399 had the appearance of having been "scooped out" to a slight extent, with fine transverse scratch marks across the base in the direction of the scooping effect. Some of the soft lead of the interior of the bullet still projected slightly from the base of the bullet, at the edge towards which the "scooping" effect led (see arrow, Fig. 1, left, lower end). This extruded bit of lead was on the side of the bullet away from the flattened side.

The fact that bullet 399 was fired from Oswald's rifle has been verified by tests done by the F.B.I. laboratory staff who found that the rifling scratches on bullet 399 conformed exactly to the rifling scratches on the test bullets fired from the same gun.[8,9] No one appears to have contested this point.

Were the Bullet Fragments in Governor Connally Excessive?

Could fragments of the bullet of the number and size of those seen in Governor Connally on his preoperative roentgenograms have come from bullet 399, as alleged in the Warren Commission Report? Or is the loss of weight of bullet 399 too small to account for all four fragments? Three were in his wrist and one in his leg (Figs. 2A and B). To examine this question, it was necessary to carefully weigh 100 sample bullets of exactly the same type as the ones fired by Oswald.

First, however, the fragments of the bullets removed from President Kennedy's head, from Governor Connally's wrist and

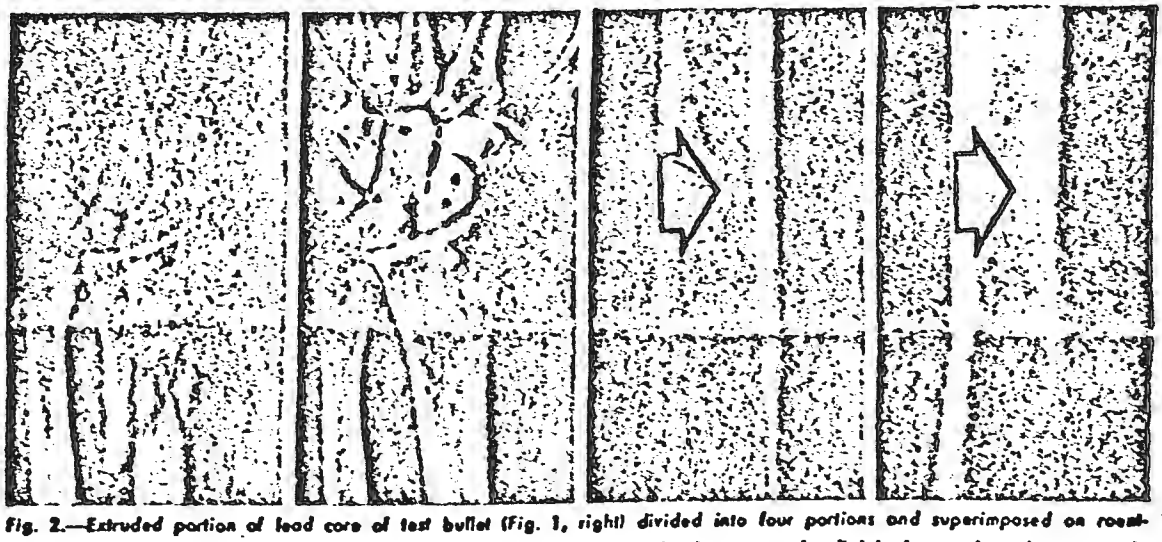

Fig. 2.—Extruded portion of lead core of test bullet (Fig. 1, right) divided into four portions and superimposed on roentgenograms of test wrist (JKL-right-2A) and femur, at arrow (JKL-right-2B). from the automobile were examined closely. The unfired cartridge found in Oswald's rifle was next examined at the National Archives in Washington, D.C. (The officers of the National Archives did not violate any of the requests of President Kennedy's family concerning this evidence.) After considerable difficulty, a substantial supply of exactly the same cartridges was obtained. It was determined that four different lots of these cartridges had been manufactured about 1944 and we were able to procure samples of lots 6001, 6002 and 6003, while the F.B.I. obtained samples from lots 6000 and 6003, all of which proved consistent and reliable.[10] One hundred of these bullets were pulled from cartridges and weighed on a precision balance in the laboratories of the Englewood School for Boys (by J.L.). The weights ranged from 159.80 grains for the lightest bullet to 161.50 grains for the heaviest with an average weight of 160.844 grains and a median weight of 160.80 grains.

This compared fairly closely with the weight range of three sample bullets weighed by the F.B.I. laboratory and reported by firearms expert Robert Frazier. He found them to weigh 160.85 grains, 161.1 grains and 161.5 grains with an average weight of 161.15 grains, whereas our larger sample yielded a mean weight of 160.84 grains.

Since bullet 399 weighed 158.6 grains when found, we have assumed that it had lost between 1.2 grains and 2.9 grains with a mean probability of 2.2 grains.

Next, a bullet like Warren Commission Exhibit 399 was compressed sideways in a special vice until its configuration was as close as possible to that of bullet 399. This required great force because of the high structural density of these bullets, but it did cause the softer lead from the center of the bullet to be extruded from the open rear of the encompassing jacket (which was made of a tougher, copper-colored metal) much as toothpaste is extruded from a tube (see arrow, Fig. 1, right).

The extruded leaden metal was then sliced off flush with the base of the bullet and the cylindrical fragment weighed. It was found to weigh exactly 2.1 grains, so was highly comparable with the 2.2 grains estimated to be missing from the base of bullet 399.

The extruded cylinder of metal (weighing 2.1 grains) (Fig. 3) was first placed on the wrist of one of us (J.K.L.) (Fig. 2A, right) in the same location as the large fragment seen on the roentgenograms of Governor Connally's wrist (Fig. 2A, left). Three additional particles the same size as the other particles in Governor Connally were then removed from the extruded cylinder and arranged in the same configuration as those seen on his roentgenograms of the wrist and thigh and films were taken for comparison (Figs. 2A and B).

It was seen that the largest fragment from our test bullet was slightly larger in area than the largest fragment in Governor Connally (Figs. 2A and B).

Next, the remainder of this extruded cylinder of metal was sliced into the thinnest possible fragments, each approximately the same area (size) as those seen in Governor Connally's roentgenograms to see how many such fragments could be obtained from it.

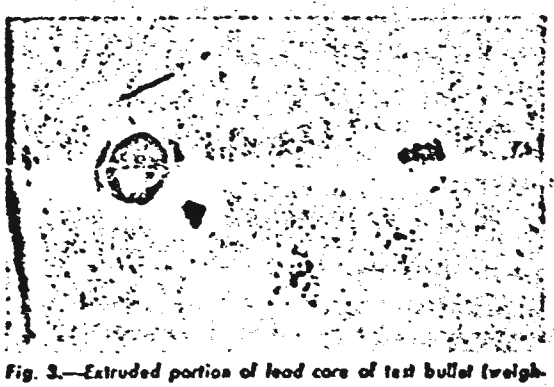

Fig. 3.—Extruded portion of lead core of test bullet (weighing 2.1 grains) was sliced off and divided into four fragments (three shown here).

Fig. 4.—Largest portion of lead core (weighing 2.1 grains) extruded from test bullet could still be sliced into the 41 additional fragments shown here.

A grand total of 41 such fragments (slices) were made from the extruded metal (Fig. 4), as compared with the total of only four fragments seen in Governor Connally's arm (three fragments) and leg (one fragment) roentgenograms (Fig. 2). It should be noted that while one of the fragments in Governor Connally's wrist was about twice the diameter of our test slices, the other three were much smaller than our slices.

For those who might argue that bullet 399 in its unfired state might have weighed only as much as our lightest sample bullet, namely 159.8 grains, we still have the fact that 22 such slices could have been produced from the 1.2 grains of metal which would have been involved.

At the other extreme, if we were to assume that bullet 399 happened to weigh as much as our heaviest sample bullet, namely 161.5 grains, then 53 slices might have been produced from the missing portion.

It must be pointed out that only one of the four Connally fragments was slightly thicker than those from our sample of 41, and that certainly the number of metallic fragments was not a valid criterion for judging how much weight was missing from bullet 399. Using the actual amount of metal (2.1 grains) extruded from our test bullet, the 41 fragments we were able to produce from it are shown in Figure 4.

Next, the fragments extruded from the experimental bullet were examined as to appearance, color and texture and were found to be a similar lead-grey color (containing none of the copper color of the bullet jackets) and to be of the same texture as the fragment removed from Governor Connally's wrist. In both cases the fragments appeared to be extruded soft lead like that from the centers of both the test bullet and bullet 399.

The experiment of compressing bullets to the same extent as bullet 399 was repeated ten times. This was done to rule out possible gross differences in the malleability of the materials in different bullets. The results were closely similar in every sample tested.

Thus the answer to the question, "Are the bullet fragments in Governor Connally excessive?" (to match the lead missing from bullet 399) was also clearly "NO"! His bullet contributed four fragments, but our bullet could contribute any number up to the 41 fragments actually produced (more thinly sliced), while both bullets lost the same amount of weight from the same deformation.

Reliability of the Ammunition

Was the ammunition used by Oswald unreliable? To test this, 100 rounds of the same type of cartridges as those used by Oswald (lots 6001, 6002 and 6003) manufactured by the Western Cartridge Co., a branch of the Winchester Repeating Arms Co., in the same year as that used by Oswald, were procured and used in other experiments which will be reported when completed. None of these rounds has failed to fire even though an additional four years has elapsed since the Kennedy shooting.

making this ammunition 23 years old at the time of testing. Nichols has reported the same degree of dependability[12] and the F.B.I. agents who fired ammunition from lots 6000 and 6003 in Oswald's rifle more than 100 times also reported no failures to fire.[13] These various samples represented every lot manufactured, so must have included the lot from which Oswald's ammunition came. In all, more than 500 rounds of this Western Cartridge Company 6.5 millimeter ammunition have been fired in these tests, without a single failure to fire on the first attempt.

One hundred and eighty complete loaded cartridges of this type were then weighed to see if there were gross differences in powder charges which might thus be detected, but each lot was internally consistent within 0.01 gram. Oswald's unfired round still bore the original lacquer placed on it by the Western Cartridge Co. and bore no traces of tampering, resizing or reloading. The three empty rifle cartridge cases found near his firing location were also inspected by us, under magnification, and showed no signs of reloading or resizing.

It should be pointed out that Oswald used American-made, brass-cased, "Western" cartridges, which should not be confused with imported cartridges which had inferior powder cases, varied more in gross weight and performance and were found to be dangerous because of a tendency of the cases to burst when fired.

The answer to the question, "Was Oswald's ammunition unreliable?" was also clearly "NO"!

Discussion

It should be remembered that bullet 399 is the one which is thought to have hit President Kennedy's neck. It did not hit any bones in President Kennedy and indeed did not hit any vital structures.[13] It should not be confused with the second bullet which struck President Kennedy in the right side of the back of the head, which was severely disrupted (and which proved fatal).

The intensity of the attacks on the veracity of the Warren Commission Report by persons who did not conduct any actual experimentation has been notable. It seemed appropriate, therefore, that some experiments should be conducted to test some of the points made in the Warren Commission Report. Since the preliminary findings presented here at least make the conclusion of the Warren Commission appear tenable insofar as the ammunition and bullet fragments are concerned, it may be of interest for investigators to look further into more complex facets of the matter such as the human capabilities involved, the capability of the rifle and the reactions of these bullets in bones and tissues.

Ability of Bullet to Penetrate Two Persons.—In tests conducted by Dr. John Marshall Nichols of the Department of Pathology, University of Kansas Medical School,[12] military rifle cartridges like those used by Oswald (lot 6002) were fired into a stack of pine boards bound tightly together and were found to have marked penetrating power. Wooden blocks 36 inches thick were easily penetrated. It was necessary to construct a wooden block 48 inches thick before the bullet would stop just inside the wood.

Because of the great penetrating ability, it is the opinion of these investigators that the bullet which struck Governor Connally would have shattered his femur and traversed his thigh completely if it had not been slowed down prior to striking him.

Passing through the soft tissues of the neck of President Kennedy with its two layers of tough skin would have slowed the bullet slightly more than 30% according to the figures of Nichols.[12] The passage through the thorax of Governor Connally with its two additional layers of skin and a glancing (tangential) contact with his fifth rib would have slowed it still more, although less than the passage through President Kennedy. Only the additional fact that it apparently traveled sideways as it traversed the skin and bone of Governor Connally's wrist could have accounted for the loss of so much energy that it did not break his leg bone.

As has often been pointed out by Dr. Milton Helpern, Chief Medical Examiner of the City of New York, human skin is elastic and tough. It is very effective in slowing down pistol bullets, but the penetrating ability of high-speed military rifle bullets is of quite another order of magnitude unless these bullets begin to travel sideways (in the process of "tumbling" or "yawing") as this one apparently did in penetrating Governor Connally's wrist. The sizes and shapes of the various bullet holes in the governor support the view that the bullet turned as described above.

It is our opinion based on the experiments we have done and observed that if the bullet had struck Governor Connally's back as its first point of impact without previously passing through President Kennedy, it surely would have shattered Governor Connally's femur and probably would have traversed his leg completely in addition to his thorax and wrist. In addition it would have made a small punctate wound of entrance on his back rather than an elongated one. The shock of being hit was so great that Governor Connally was not even aware that his wrist and leg had also been hit, even though the large bone in his wrist had been shattered into many fragments (Fig. 2A) by the tangential passage of the bullet. It was only when he awoke from anesthesia and saw the cast on his wrist and the bandage on his leg that he asked what they were for.[14]

The possibility that the first bullet to strike Governor Connally had been underpowered due to a deficient powder charge (as suggested by some) is not credible in our opinion, because the net effect of an under-powered cartridge would have been to make the bullet drop so severely that it would have hit a portion of the automobile behind President Kennedy. We did, moreover, weigh 180 of the rounds to check any sign of "under-charging" and found none, at least in these "factory-loaded" cartridges.

Summary

A series of feasibility studies was conducted to see if any gross inaccuracies could be found in one part of the medical and forensic data frequently attacked by critics of the Warren Commission Report having to do with bullet 399.

This actual bullet (a long, narrow 6.5 millimeter Mannlicher-Carcano, fully-jacketed military "ball" type projectile), which the Warren Commission postulates penetrated both President Kennedy's neck and Governor Connally's thorax, wrist and leg, was carefully examined. It was found to be flattened as if by a heavy blow on one side. Some of the soft lead core of the bullet was found to be missing from the base-end of the bullet which had a slightly "scooped-out" configuration. The weight of the bullet was 2.2 grains less than the mean and median weights of 100 "duplicate" bullets from the same manufacturer weighed by these investigators. Thus on actual inspection this bullet (No. 399) was not truly "pristine" as described by many critics and writers. It was definitely deformed and some of its interior metal had been extruded and then broken off as if by its passage through firm material such as Governor Connally's wrist bone.

A bullet of this type was deformed to a comparable extent by compressing it in a special vise. Great force was required to so deform this bullet. The soft lead which then extruded from its base was compared as to size, color, texture and roentgen ray appearance with the fragments seen by roentgen ray and found at surgery in the wrist and leg of Governor Connally. The samples were compatible in all these respects. Our extruded plug of lead was slightly larger (by roentgen ray) than the largest of the four fragments seen on roentgenograms of Governor Connally, even after slicing off from it three additional fragments the same size as the others seen in Governor Connally's roentgenograms. In fact, by then slicing this largest fragment into extremely thin slices, it was possible for us to slice this 2.1 grain extruded lead core into a maximum of 41 fragments, instead of the four seen in Governor Connally. Thus, the four fragments left by bullet 399 in Governor Connally were by no means "excessive," as contended by some critics. Ten such bullets were similarly deformed, always with similar results.

The reliability of the Western Cartridge Company ammunition used by Oswald was tested by firing 100 rounds in a Mannlicher-Carcano carbine of the exact type used by Oswald. More than 500 additional rounds were fired by these and other investigators, and there was not a single failure to fire.

These experiments were designed to test only the feasibility of some of the allegations and statements about the ammunition and the first bullet and its fragments, which the Warren Commission believed penetrated both President Kennedy and Governor Connally. With regard to the possibility of whether the bullet fragments in Governor Connally could have come from a bullet deformed as was bullet 399, no discrepancies, inconsistencies or incompatibilities were detected between the data as determined in these experiments and the contentions of the Warren Commission. Furthermore, the type of ammunition used by Oswald was found to be highly consistent and reliable in performance. We were left with no doubt that bullet 399 could have penetrated President Kennedy's neck and then Governor Connally as the Warren Commission proposed.

Abstract

The so-called "pristine" bullet (Warren Commission Exhibit 399), which critics have been claiming could not have penetrated both President Kennedy's neck and Governor Connally's thorax and wrist and still remain undeformed, was found by these investigators to be, in fact, deformed (flattened) in a manner which required great force to duplicate on test bullets from the same lots.

The four fragments which the Warren Commission contends bullet 399 left in Governor Connally, while losing 2.2 grains of its weight, are by no means excessive, since these experimenters were able to slice 41 fragments from the 2.1 grain cylinder of lead extruded from their test bullet under parallel conditions.

It is the opinion of these investigators that it is highly probable that bullet 399 was slowed down by traversing President Kennedy's neck before it penetrated Governor Connally. Otherwise, had it hit Governor Connally directly, we believe it would have shattered his femur in addition to his rib and wrist bones. Furthermore, it would have left only a punctate wound of entry on the Governor's body rather than the elongated wound it did leave.

The type of Western Cartridge Company ammunition used by Oswald was found to be highly reliable by these investigators, confirming the finding of other experimenters.

Insofar as the above factors are concerned, it appeared completely feasible that this one bullet could have done all the things which the Warren Commission contended it did.

With regard to the possibility of whether the bullet fragments in Governor Connally could have come from a bullet deformed as was bullet 399, there was no inconsistency nor incompatibility between the facts, as determined by these experiments, and the contentions of the Warren Commission.

Dear Mr. Lewellen:

I have received your letter of August 31st and am pleased that you have enjoyed reading of the efforts of my associates and me in carrying out the responsibilities of this Bureau.

Concerning the findings of the Warren Commission; information in our files or files must be maintained as confidential in accordance with regulations of the Department of Justice and is available for official use only. Our investigative reports concerning the assassination of President Kennedy were turned over to this Commission. Its report is now a matter of public record. Therefore, I trust you will understand why I am not in a position to comment along the lines you have indicated.

Dear Mr. Hoover:

For the past several months I have been on sick leave from an Inspection job at General Motors and have been thrilled to read many books from the Library concerning your work with the F.B.I. and other early crime officers such as Burns and linkerton etc. For the past week or so I have read every book on the tragedy of Pres. Kennedy's assination at Dallas, Texas. Since I have always held you in the highest esteem and my late Father felt the same way about you I am very disturbed at the allegations brought to light in all of these books. I realize that many people can make statements to cast suspicion on men of high purpose but I am left limp at some of the things that are now being laid out for all to question concerning the Warren report. Mr. Specter's role in the report is like a night mare in my view and I'm almost certain that you also must have had many moments of grave misgivings in the 10 months that elasped before the final draft was given to the public to digest. Mr. Liebeler was also very remiss in his duties especially in his contacts with people who had films of the assination; what a shame to treat citizens in such a way. Mr. Zapruder filmed it all and saw what he was filming and then was treated like he didn't know his own film.

I am shocked at some of the disregard for truth and the doubts that have been allowed to form in my mind. I hope and pray that you and others in a high position can someday resolve all the loose ends and give the people the final chapter in all this.

The Archivist of the United States by letter to the FBI dated April 18, 1972, a copy of which is attached, requested our comments relative to the release of captioned document to requesting parties.

A review of this Register of Correspondence discloses it contains references to a limited amount of material which has not been made public. Mr. Marion Johnson, Archivist, has advised that a "List of Basic Source Materials in Possession of the Commission as of 11/9/64" was made available to the public in 1965. This document identifies each Commission document number (CDN) and contains specific references to identifiable material in the Register of Correspondence not previously made public.

The references contained in the Register do not identify the specific CDN to which they pertain. It was not possible to identify each reference in this Register with a specific CDN to determine if that reference has or has not been released to the public. Further, it was not always possible to identify nonnumbered correspondence that has not been made available to the public with specific references in the Register.

Inasmuch as the National Archives, General Services Administration's Office of General Counsel, and the Department of Justice's Committee on the Freedom of Information Act feel it is not feasible to defend the nondisclosure of this particular document in court, the FBI interposes no objection.

The Archivist of the United States by letter dated 4/18/72 (copy attached) advised that captioned Register has been denied the public as falling within the exceptions of the Freedom of Information Act. The General Services Administration (GSA) has had the denial of this record administratively appealed by private citizens who had requested access to it and at a meeting attended by representatives of the National Archives, GSA's Office of General Counsel, and the Justice Department's Committee on the Freedom of Information Act, it was decided it was not feasible to defend the nondisclosure of this record in court. The National Archives is tentatively planning to release this document to requesting parties; however, they requested the FBI's comment on this matter since a high percentage of the correspondence is from the FBI.

The Register has been reviewed and found to contain the chronological list of materials received by the Commission from various contributing agencies during the existence of the Warren Commission investigation of the assassination of President Kennedy. The majority of the material contained in this Register is from the FBI. In addition, the Register was found to contain numerous non-specific references to a limited amount of FBI material which has not been released and made available to the public domain. The reference contained in this Register do not identify the specific Commission document number (CDN) to which they pertain. It was, therefore, not possible to identify each reference in this Register with a specific CDN in order to determine if the item has or has not been released to the public. Further, in some instances it was not possible to identify the nonnumbered correspondence, which has not been made available to the public, with a specific reference in the Register.

Gallagher to Bates Memorandum
Re: Warren Commission
Register of Correspondence

Mr. Marion Johnson, Archivist, advised that a "List of Basic Source Materials in Possession of the Commission as of 11/9/64" was made available to the public in 1965. This document identifies each of the CDNs in numerical sequence as well as the date, place, title, author of communication, the contributing agency, and in many instances a short summary of the information contained in that particular CDN.

Since the "List of Basic Source Materials" has been released to the public in its entirety and which is in effect a compilation of those items in the Register of Correspondence an objection to the Archives release to the public cannot be reasonably justified. Release of this Register does not mean that the individual documents which are still being withheld from the public will likewise be released.

ACTION: If approved, the attached letter will be forwarded to the Department of Justice interposing no objection to the public disclosure of this Register and deferring to their decision in the matter. Also attached is a letter to the Archivist of the United States with copies to the General Counsel, General Services Administration, and the Committee on the Freedom of Information Act, Department of Justice, advising them of the above.

Honorable J. Edgar Hoover

Washington, D. C. 20535

Dear Mr. Hoover:

Among the records of the Warren Commission which have previously been denied the public as falling within the exceptions to the Freedom of Information Act is the register of correspondence received by the Commission. As the successor agency to the Commission, the General Services Administration has recently had its denial of this record administratively appealed by private citizens who had requested access to it. Pursuant to the conclusions reached at a meeting attended by representatives of the National Archives, GSA's Office of General Counsel, and the Justice Department's Committee on the Freedom of Information Act, it was decided that it was not feasible to defend the nondisclosure of this particular record in court; therefore, we are tentatively planning its release to the requesting parties.

However, prior to its release we have decided that it is in the best interests of the Government to solicit the review and comment of the Federal Bureau of Investigation on this matter. We do so because of the high percentage of correspondence from the FBI to the Warren Commission referred to in the register. A copy of the register is enclosed for your convenience.

Should you have any questions on this matter, please contact Steven Garfinkel, Office of General Counsel, Records and Administration Division, telephone code 183-5138 or 343-5138. Thank you for your assistance.

By a recent letter the Archivist of the United States forwarded a register of correspondence of the Warren Commission. This register has been denied the public as falling within the exceptions of the Freedom of Information Act; however, tentative plans call for its release. A considerable amount of the correspondence referred to in this register is from the FBI. They request that it be reviewed and we furnish them a comment as to the disclosure of this record.

Previously, two supervisors from the Domestic Intelligence Division and two from the General Investigative Division reviewed the FBI documents held in the Archives at which time it was determined 748 items remained which were never released for public consumption. The majority of them fell within security-type classifications.

In order to determine the nature of the documents which are yet to be released, the most logical procedure would be to review them in the Archives and make a determination whether they should be released. Thereafter, our evaluation will be submitted to the Department if warranted, and our ultimate decision will be furnished the Archivist.

NOTE:

No derogatory data appears in Bureau files concerning Rhoads. Register consisted of approximately 231 pages of incoming and outgoing correspondence handled by the Warren Commission investigating the assassination of President Kennedy. Many FBI documents are involved and prior to making this register available to the public, our views and comments have been solicited. Inasmuch as this entails considerable review, a letter of acknowledgement is being sent with the results of the review forthcoming as soon as completed.

PRESIDENT'S COMMISSION ON THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY

Reference is made to your letter dated August 2, 1972, with attachments, captioned as above. EX-105

The unnumbered documents of the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy referred to in Mr. James D. Rhoads' letter to Honorable Richard G. Kleindienst, dated May 15, 1972, an attachment to your letter, have been reviewed. These consist of original communications from the FBI to the Honorable J. Lee Rankin, Counsel for the Commission, and Xeroxed copies of FBI communications the originals of which, in some instances, were in containers housing the unnumbered documents. It is recommended that these unnumbered documents continue to be withheld from public scrutiny.

Also reviewed were those numbered documents having security classifications. It is further recommended that these documents not be declassified or downgraded and should continue to be withheld under Guideline 2.

NOTE:

The Department referred to the Bureau a request of the Archivist of the U. S. to review correspondence of the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy which had in 1967 been reviewed by the National Archives and withheld from the public. This was principally correspondence between the FBI and the Commission. The Archivist also requested that the numbered documents being withheld from the public and which contain security classifications be reviewed to determine if these documents can be declassified or downgraded.

This material has been reviewed and it is recommended that it continue to be withheld from the public under the same guidelines in which it was previously withheld. Those documents bearing a security classification, and consistent with national security, should not be downgraded or declassified and should continue to be withheld as they still fall under Guideline 2. The unnumbered documents for the most part are transmittal letters from the Bureau to the Commission and in many instances identify confidential sources, informants, and contain administrative type data. The numbered documents referred to are those documents that were previously given the security classification because of the ~~verified~~ very nature of the information contained therein.

SUBJECT: President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy

Enclosed is a letter from the Archivist of the United States, with attachments, asking the Department of Justice to review certain documents of the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy to determine which of the classified documents might be declassified or downgraded and which unclassified or declassified documents may be made available to researchers.

Frederick Paff (187-2056) and Mary Eastwood (187-2058) of my staff have made a cursory review of these documents, which are contained in 12 boxes at the National Archives. All but one file, which includes Justice Department correspondence from the Department of Defense and the Atomic Energy Commission and part of the Commission transcript (January 27, 1964, meeting), appear to be FBI documents and correspondence. Several of the boxes contain tape recordings (reels).

We would appreciate your designating someone to review these files and reporting your conclusions respecting those which may be released to researchers to this Office so that we can prepare the Department's report to the Archivist.

OFFICE OF LEGAL COUNSEL

Dear Mr. Kleindienst:

Enclosed are copies of our letter of August 17, 1970, to Attorney General Mitchell concerning the review of the Numbered Document File of the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy and of his reply of November 3, 1970. In addition to the Numbered Document File involved in these letters, the records of the Commission include correspondence and internal records of the Commission, some of which relate to the functions of other Government agencies and their part in the investigation of the assassination. These records were reviewed by the National Archives in 1967 at the request of the Department of Justice. Some of them were withheld from research, and it is now time for the five year review of these documents provided for in the guidelines that apply to the records. I would like to ask the Department of Justice to review those documents which relate to its functions. They consist chiefly of correspondence between the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Commission (about two linear inches).

Both the material that we are now asking the Department of Justice to review and the documents withheld from research in the Numbered Document File of the Commission include some security classified documents. The Department may wish to consider these documents under the provisions of Executive Order 11652 of March 10, 1972 (37 F.R. 5209), to determine whether they should be declassified or downgraded, and if they are declassified, whether they should be made available for research or withheld under a different exemption to the "Freedom of Information Act" (5 U.S.C. 552) and a different guideline from Guideline 2.

The following staff members of the National Archives will be pleased to furnish any further information that may be needed: Mr. Mark G. Eckhoff, Chief, Legislative, Judicial, and Fiscal Branch, or Mr. Marion M. Johnson, on Code 13, Extension 23171.

Sincerely,

Keep Freedom in Your Future With U.S. Savings Bonds

August 17, 1970

Honorable John N. Mitchell
Attorney General
Washington, D. C. 20530.

Dear Mr. Attorney General:

The President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy transferred its records to the National Archives in November 1964 to be "permanently preserved under the rules and regulations of the National Archives and applicable Federal law" (Report of the Commission, p. XV). The records included some documents which are withheld from disclosure by specific statutes, security classified records; investigatory files compiled for law enforcement purposes, and medical and personnel records. It was apparent that the records of the Commission would have to be reviewed on a document-by-document basis in order to identify the relatively few documents of this nature that could not immediately be made available for research.

This review was conducted in 1965 in accordance with "Guidelines for Review of Materials Submitted to the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy," which were prepared by the Department of Justice in consultation with the agencies which furnished records to the Commission (copy enclosed). Under these guidelines (page 2) it is the responsibility of the Archivist of the United States to arrange for successive reviews of the records of the Commission that are withheld from research. As it is now five years since the review of the Numbered Document File of the Commission in 1965, it is time for the documents that were withheld from research at that time to be reviewed again as indicated in the last paragraph of the guidelines. The National Archives will be pleased to show the documents withheld from research at the request of your Department to any members of your staff who may be selected to review them. The following documents are withheld at the request of the Office of Legal Counsel of the Department of Justice:

1. About four linear feet of reports of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

2. Commission Document 355, a volume (about two inches thick) of copies of summaries of FBI interviews with acquaintances of Jack L. Ruby which was transmitted to the Commission by a letter dated February 4, 1964, of the Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Criminal Division of the Department. Withheld under Guideline 3C.

The following staff members of the National Archives may be called for any additional information that may be needed: Mr. Mark G. Eckhoff, Director, Legislative, Judicial and Diplomatic Records Division, or Mr. Marion H. Johnson, on Code 13, Extension 23171.

GUIDES FOR REVIEW OF MATERIAL SUBMITTED TO THE PRESIDENT'S COMMISSION ON THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT KENNED

1. Statutory requirements prohibiting disclosure should be observe
2. Security classifications should be respected, but the agency responsible for the classification should carefully re-evaluate the contents of each classified document and determine whether the classification can, consistently with the national security, be eliminated or downgraded.
3. Unclassified material which has not already been disclosed in another form should be made available to the public on a regular basis unless disclosure--
   (A) Would be detrimental to the administration and enforcement of the laws and regulations of the United States and its agencies;
   (B) Might reveal the identity of confidential sources of information and impede or jeopardize future investigations by precluding or limiting the use of the same or similar sources hereafter;
   (C) Would be a source of embarrassment to innocent persons, who are the subject, source, or apparent source of the material in question, because it contains gossip and rumor or details of a personal nature having no significant connection with the assassination of the President;

(5) Would [redacted] material pertinent [redacted] criminal prosecution of Jack Ruby for the murder of Lee Harvey Oswald, prior to the final judicial determination of that case.

Whenever one of the above reasons for nondisclosure may apply, your department should, in determining whether or not to authorize disclosure, weigh that reason against the overriding policy of the Executive Branch favoring the fullest possible disclosure.

Unless sooner released to the public, classified and unclassified material which is not now made available to the public shall, as a minimum, be reviewed by the agency concerned five years and ten years after the initial examination has been completed. The criteria applied in the initial examination, outlined above, should be applied to determine whether changed circumstances will permit further disclosure. Similar reviews should be undertaken at ten-year intervals until all materials are opened for legitimate research purposes. The Archivist of the United States will arrange for such review at the appropriate time. Whenever possible provision should be made for the automatic declassification of classified material which cannot be declassified at this time.

Mr. Herbert E. Angel
Acting Archivist of the United States
National Archives and Records Services
Washington, D. C. 20408

Dear Mr. Angel:

This is in response to your letter of August 17, 1970, in which you notified me that it is time for the documents in the Numbered Document File of the Warren Commission to be reviewed for the purpose of determining whether any of these documents previously withheld may now be released to the public. You noted that the documents furnished the Commission by this Department include "about four linear feet of reports of the Federal Bureau of Investigation" and "Commission Document 355, a volume (about two inches thick) of copies of summaries of FBI interviews with acquaintances of Jack L. Ruby."

At my request, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Office of Legal Counsel conducted a review of those documents. The accompanying memorandum of October 1, 1970, which is entitled "Five-Year Review of Warren Commission Files", contains this Department's recommendation with respect to release of the FBI reports. I believe you will find the memorandum self-explanatory.

As to the other item--Commission Document 355--the Department recommends partial disclosure. As noted, the Document contains copies of summaries of interviews by the FBI of individuals acquainted with Jack Ruby. The full interviews are contained in FBI investigative reports, some of which have been released to the public. The Department has no objection to the release of those summaries in Commission Document 355 relating to interviews which themselves are in public view. However, if the interview being summarized has not been released to the public, we would oppose release of the corresponding summary in Commission Document 355.

If the Department can be of further assistance, please do not hesitate to consult us.

Sincerely,

John N. Mitchell

Attorney General

SUBJECT: WARREN COMMISSION DOCUMENTS IN NATIONAL ARCHIVES

Special Agents Clough, Waldburger, and Whitson have reviewed with representatives of the General Investigative Division numbered documents of the Warren Commission still withheld from public scrutiny and unnumbered documents not previously reviewed by Bureau personnel.

The unnumbered documents consist of original communications from the Bureau to the Honorable J. Lee Rankin, Counsel for the Commission and Xerox copies of Bureau communications the originals of which in some instances were in the containers holding the unnumbered documents, and others of which related to documents in some other part of the Archives.

RECOMMENDATION:

1. It is recommended that all Xerox or other copies of Bureau communications in the unnumbered boxes be destroyed since the original documents are the ones listed on the register of correspondence and the "list of basic source materials." Unattached copies cannot be accounted for and only serve to confuse further an already confused situation.

2. Those numbered documents and excised pages now withheld from the public on the basis of a review by Bureau personnel in the Fall of 1970, should be continued to be withheld, since under the guidelines laid down for the release of material to the public, and which guidelines have not been changed. The next review would not be due until 1975.

JUN 15 1972

3. With regard to the unnumbered documents not heretofore reviewed, it is recommended that they be withheld from public scrutiny unless they are original letters of transmittal of documents which are numbered Commission documents and which have heretofore been released for public scrutiny. Time and facilities did not permit attempts to match transmittal letters with documents elsewhere in the Archives.

Dear Sir:

This is a request for information pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act as amended (5 U.S.C. Sec. 552).

I request access to the following files for purpose of inspection, and if I so choose copying:

1) All data, reports, files, photographs, films, interviews, transcripts, tapes, video tapes, memoranda, computer printouts, drawings, diagrams, and all other information now maintained in the National Archives or elsewhere, under your control or jurisdiction, relative to the work of the President's Commission on the Assassination of President John F. Kennedy including all material prepared for that investigation whether or not it was shown to members of the President's Commission; and all other material arguably relevant to the investigation into the deaths of President Kennedy, Lee Harvey Oswald and police officer J.D. Tippit and the surrounding circumstances.

2) All files, documents and other information made available to any staff member, counsel or member of the President's Commission regarding my own activities.

3) All material relevant to Lee Harvey Oswald maintained in the National Archives or elsewhere, under your control or jurisdiction, in anyway arguably relevant to the study by the President's Commission into Oswald's background including the CIA computer printout consisting, I have been informed, of some twenty-six pages regarding Lee Harvey Oswald.

4) All material relevant to Jack Ruby, a/k/a Jack Rubenstein, maintained in the National Archives or elsewhere, under your control or jurisdiction, in anyway arguably relevant to the study by the President's Commission into Ruby's background.

As you know, the amended Act provides that if some parts of a file are exempt from release that "reasonably segregable" portions shall be provided. I therefore, request that if you determine that any portion of a requested document is exempt you provide me immediately with access to the remainder of the document. I, of course, specifically reserve my right to appeal any decision on your part which denies to me access to any document or to any portion of any document and an examination of a portion of a document may not be taken by you to be a waiver of my right to examine all portions of all of the requested documents.

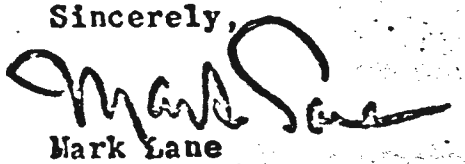
If you determine that some of the documents or any portion of any document is exempt from release I request that you specifically advise me as to which exemption you believe to be applicable and the specific reasons therefor regarding any material you refuse to make available.

I believe that since it is likely that all of the requested material may have been collected and maintained by you in one location there should be no fee charged.

If you determine that a fee might be involved since the Act permits you to reduce or waive the fees if that "is in the public interest because furnishing the information can be considered as primarily benefiting the public" and since it is apparent that this request is made in the public interest I request that you waive any such fee. Should there be any question about fees or in any other area, please telephone me at (202) 544-5380.

I expect to receive a reply to this request within ten working days as required by the amended Act.

Sincerely,



Mark Lane

Dear Mr. Lane:

I am in receipt of your letter dated February 26th and received on February 28th, which requested access to certain information which may be contained in FBI files.

The information you have requested is broad in scope and in some instances will be compiled in files of extensive volume. As you know, the recently amended Freedom of Information Act requires disclosure of material contained in investigatory records of the type maintained by the FBI, but provides for exemption of certain material including that specified in Title 5, United States Code, Section 552 (b)(7). This involves a page-by-page review of our records for a determination of what material is subject to exemption under the Act, and a resolution of what, if any, "reasonably segregable" portion of the record may be made available. We have experienced this is, of necessity, a time consuming task involving determination of many complex legal and factual issues.

We are aware of the time limitations imposed by the Freedom of Information Act with respect to response to requests and the spirit and intent of this legislation in this regard. I can assure you where material can be readily identified as subject to release under the Freedom of Information Act, this will be done.

We are currently experiencing an extremely heavy volume of requests for information, generated by the recent amendments to the Freedom of Information Act, and have added personnel to our staff for the purpose of processing these requests. In view of this backlog of work I am unable to give you a specific date regarding any release of documents, but wish to advise you the matter is being handled as promptly as possible.

Sincerely yours,

SUBJECT: WARREN COMMISSION TRANSCRIPT
DECLASSIFICATION MATTER

This memorandum recommends that the transcript of an Executive Session of the Warren Commission for 1/22/64, now classified Top Secret, be declassified.

By memorandum of 1/30/75 from Mr. Griffith to Mr. Bassett, it was recommended that the Intelligence Division review the Executive Session testimony of the Warren Commission dated 1/22/64 to determine if it could be declassified. A review of the transcript shows this Session included discussion among the members of the Commission concerning the possibility that Lee Harvey Oswald had been a Bureau confidential informant based on information furnished by Wagner Carr, Attorney General of Texas. Carr said he had received the information from District Attorney Wade of Dallas County. The source of information, unnamed, was described as a member of the press who received this information from one of his sources, also unnamed. The discussion reveals that the members of the Commission felt that the Bureau would not admit that Oswald had been an "undercover agent" even if he had been. In discussing the ability of the FBI to operate agents abroad, Allen Dulles stated that the Bureau might have agents in Russia and "they have some people, sometimes American Communists, who go to Russia under their guidance and so forth and so on under their control."

It is not believed that any of the information reported in this transcript merits classification. The statement concerning our dispatching of American Communists to Russia is quite general and does not pinpoint any particular operation.

Honorable William B. Saxbe

Dear Mr. Attorney General:

We have received a request for a mandatory review under Executive Order 11652, Sections 5(D) and 11, of certain security classified records of the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy (the Warren Commission) that are now 10 years old. These records consist of pages 23-35 of Commission Document 651 (Report of Special Agent James F. Norrisey, Washington, D.C., March 11, 1964; FBI File No. 105-82555) and a letter addressed to Director J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation by J. Lee Rankin, General Counsel of the Commission, on April 24, 1964.

Enclosed are copies of the guidelines prepared by the Department of Justice in 1965 for the review of the Commission's records and a letter of August 17, 1966, from Assistant Attorney General Wozencraft of the Office of Legal Counsel authorizing the National Archives to conduct reviews of the records created by the Commission. I shall appreciate it if you will review pages 23-35 of Commission Document 651 and the letter from Mr. Rankin to Mr. Hoover, which we will make available to you upon the request of your action officer, in accordance with the terms of E.O. 11652 and inform me of any objection you may have to the declassification of these records or any part of them. If you feel that the records or any part of them should retain a security classification, please inform me of the level of classification required and the relevant basis for the classification listed in Section 5(B) of E.O. 11652. If you think the records should be declassified but withheld from research as a whole or in part under an exemption from mandatory disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act (5 U.S.C. 552) other than subsection (b) (1), please inform me of that exemption and of any relevant guideline.

Attached is a letter from the Archivist of the United States addressed to the Attorney General, requesting the opinion of the Department of Justice as to declassification of certain Warren Commission records, classified "Secret" and "Confidential", respectively. Because these documents relate primarily to the activities of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, I am attaching a copy for your consideration and request your views on the questions posed by the Archivist. After receipt of your response, this Office will prepare a reply on behalf of the Attorney General.

Because this matter arises from a request for mandatory review under Sections 5(D) and 11 of Executive Order 11652, applicable time limits necessitate a reply as soon as possible.

Please return the attached letter and documents with your response.

The Department has referred to us a request of the U. S. Archivist relating to the possible declassification of certain classified documents of the Warren Commission which are now over ten years old. These include:

1. A letter dated 4/24/64 addressed to the FBI by J. Lee Rankin, General Counsel of the Commission, which requests that certain specific inquiries be conducted in Mexico. These inquiries related chiefly to determining Oswald's activities and expenses while in Mexico and ascertaining the availability of a fellow bus passenger, one Albert A. Osborne. Rankin's letter is currently classified "Secret," but it contains nothing we would presently consider as sensitive and we would have no grounds to object to its declassification or release for research purposes.

Reference is made to your letter of August 14, 1974, requesting advice as to the possible declassification of two documents maintained in the records of the Warren Commission.

We interpose no objection to the declassification of the letter dated April 24, 1964, addressed to the FBI by Mr. J. Lee Rankin, General Counsel of the Commission.

After consulting with the Central Intelligence Agency, which has an interest in the matter, it has been determined that the portions of the report of Special Agent James F. Merrisey dated March 11, 1964, at Washington, D. C., in question (pages 23-35) should remain classified "Confidential" under exemption category 4 of Section 5 (E) of Executive Order 11652.

The transcript of the Executive Session of the Warren Commission has been reviewed and it reveals that the Session included a discussion among members of the Commission of the possibility that Lee Harvey Oswald had been a Bureau confidential informant based on information furnished by the Attorney General of Texas. The discussion shows that members of the Commission felt the Bureau would not admit that Oswald had been an undercover agent, and in discussing the ability of the FBI to operate agents abroad, Allen Dulles remarked that the Bureau does have some people who go to Russia under their guidance. The final report of the Warren Commission on page 327 contained a statement that all FBI officials who testified declared Oswald was not an informant or agent of the FBI, and Director Hoover stated Oswald "was never an informant of the FBI, and never assigned a symbol number in that capacity, and was never paid any amount of money by the FBI in any regard." The paragraph concluded "this testimony is corroborated by the Commission's independent review of the Bureau files dealing with the Oswald investigation."

Dear Mr. Kelley:

I have received several inquiries from my constituents as a result of their recent viewing of the so-called Zapruder film dealing with the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. My constituents inform me that the film was aired on a recent program entitled "Good Night America," produced by the American Broadcasting Company.

In each case, my constituents have raised questions relating to the cause of death of the late President, particularly in regard to the "single assassin" explanation of the Warren Commission's final report. Furthermore, my constituents tell me that during the program which carried the film, allegations were made to the effect of official Government agencies withholding and/or suppressing information pertaining to the assassination.

Although I did not view the program myself, I suspect your agency has received numerous inquiries pertaining to the program, the allegations about Government handling of the assassination investigation, and about the actual meaning of the film.

Inasmuch as I expect more inquiries to be directed to me, I will appreciate your expeditious attention to this letter, believing that you will wish

Dear Senator Allen:

Reference is made to your letter of March 13, 1975, regarding the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Your suspicions are indeed correct about the FBI receiving numerous inquiries relating to the recent showing of the Zapruder film on the television program "Good Night America."

As I am sure you are aware, at the direction of President Johnson the FBI conducted a prompt, intensive, objective and thorough investigation of the assassination of President Kennedy. The results of this investigation were fully and accurately reported and furnished to the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy (Warren Commission).

You may rest assured that the FBI has not withheld or suppressed information pertaining to the assassination at any time.

The Zapruder film was one of the many items considered by the Warren Commission. After a review of all available evidence, it was the conclusion of the Commission that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in committing this crime.

I trust this reply will be of assistance to you.

Sincerely yours,

C. M. Kelley

Honorable James B. Allen

NOTE: In letter of 3/13/75 Senator Allen (D - Alabama) advised he had received several inquiries from constituents regarding the recent showing of the Zapruder film on ABC-TV. The Zapruder film is the amateur movie made by Abraham Zapruder, a Dallas, Texas, dressmaker, of the assassination of President Kennedy. He stated his constituents had raised questions regarding the cause of death explanation of the Warren Commission. The constituents also raise the point of allegations in the TV program to the effect that official Government agencies withheld or suppressed information pertaining to the assassination. No specific questions are asked in the letter. Mr. Kelley wrote, "Ack. pls., K" on the letter. This was referred to the General Investigative Division by Office of Legal Counsel for response. This letter to the Senator advises him that the FBI conducted a thorough investigation of the assassination and made a full report to the Warren Commission which reached a conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone. The Senator is assured that the FBI has not suppressed any information. This has been coordinated with SA Richard C. Dennis, Jr., of the Office of Legal Counsel.

Kennedy Conspiracy Discounted

BY W. DAVID SLAWSON and RICHARD M. MOSK

assassinate President Kennedy, and many of these persons brushed aside the report of the Warren Commission which found no evidence to support the conspiracy theory and concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone.

Recently, talk of plots to assassinate foreign leaders, and investigations into what role, if any, the American CIA may have had in such plots, has revived speculation over the Kennedy assassination.

David Slawson is a professor of law at USC. Richard Mosk is a Los Angeles attorney. Both were attorneys on the staff of the Warren Commission.

The conspiracy theory persists partly because some persons find it difficult to believe that such a momentous act could be done so capriciously, and by such an insignificant, hapless man as Lee Harvey Oswald.

Few persons not familiar with the Warren Report realize the large number of chance occurrences underlying the assassination. It is very unlikely that Oswald would ever have killed Kennedy had the President not gone to Dallas when he did and passed the building in which Oswald was working. At the time Oswald took his job, there was no way of knowing that the presidential parade route would go right by the building in which he worked, or that there would be a presidential parade at all in the foreseeable future in Dallas.

age. Kennedy might be alive today had Marina relented.

Allegations concerning CIA activities in the late 1950s and the 1960s have created added doubts, because the CIA assisted the commission in its investigation. However, the CIA was only one such outside source of assistance, and it was not the most important one. (The most important was the FBI.) Moreover, the commission double-checked and cross-checked all significant information among a variety of sources—governmental and private.

The principal reason for the criticisms and conspiracy theories, however, is the breadth of the Warren Report. The published materials comprise 27 volumes. The National Archives contain additional material, which has for the most part been [illegible]. Critics of the report, by [illegible] have turned this vast amount of material against the commission.

The commission took testimony from over 500 people. Thousands more were interviewed or gave affidavits. The FBI alone conducted approximately 25,000 interviews. As is true with even the simplest accident case, some people's reactions, memories, observations and actions were imperfect.

For example, critics have claimed that one of the doctors who worked to save the President's life said the wound on the President's throat was an entry wound, which if true would prove that there was a second gunman since Oswald was behind the President.

What these critics fail to disclose is that the doctor, at a raucous news conference right after the President died, said that it was possible that a bullet had entered the throat. He later testified that at the time he made the remark, he had not seen the wounds on the back of the President. Although the throat wound could not thereafter be definitely analyzed, because of a tracheotomy which this doctor, among others, had performed, other doctors later said the wound probably was an exit wound.

before the shooting, [illegible] located in the part of the room wher the rifle and spent cartridges wer found and from which witnesses sa the rifle protruding at the time of th assassination; X rays, photograp and the autopsy show that the bull came from the area where Oswal was located; after the shooting, O waid promptly left the premises an resisted apprehension by killing a p liceman. Finally, he lied about number of facts during his interrog tion.

Thus, the claims that the rifle w inaccurate, that the shot was dif cult, that Oswald was a poor shot a that stress analysis tests of Oswal voice allegedly show him to ha been telling the truth when he d nied his guilt are all unpersuasive light of so much uncontroverte evidence. These claims, even in iso tion, are misleading: Oswald was former Marine and hunter. He pr [illegible] rifle when he was a Julian. Tests showed that his ri was sufficiently accurate. The sh was not particularly difficult. It w from a stable, prepared position at target moving 11 m.p.h. alon straight away at a range of 177 206 feet. The rifle had a telescop sight. The voice stress analysis h not achieved general acceptance as reliable lie detector test.

Most critical commentaries focus suggestions that there had to be least two gunmen.

One of the oldest claims is that O wald could not have fired three sho in the time he had and have two them hit the President. The commi sion utilized the film of the event Abraham Zapruder to determine th the interval between the two h was between 4.8 and 5.6 seconds (t exact time is not determinable sin the first shot hit the President whi a road sign was between him an Zapruder's camera).

Some have said that 4.8 to 5.6 se onds is too short a time for thre shots to be fired and two of them hit. But the time interval is betwee two shots—the two that hit—n three. The commission found th evidence inconclusive as to whether of the three shots fired, it was th first, second or third that missed Since the time interval is that b tween the two shots which hit, O wald had all the time he needed a fire the first shot. A period of 4.8 5.6 seconds is ample time for aim and firing one shot, the second that hit.

The evidence concerning the wounds conclusively dispels the idea of shots from the front, another part of the conspiracy theory. The wounds both slanted downward from Kennedy's back. This is clear beyond doubt from the autopsy and from the photographs and X rays of the body. The photographs and X rays are still not open to public view, because of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis' wishes, but to doubt the evidence of the wounds is to label as liars the doctors who examined the body, the pictures and the X rays for the commission.

The inward pointing of the threads of the back of Kennedy's clothing and the outward pointing of the threads in the front of his clothing demonstrate that the bullet which first hit him entered from the rear and exited from the front. Since the car was in a low underpass, a bullet from any direction would have to have been going downward, and would have hit the car after leaving Kennedy. All the bullet damage to the car was in front of Kennedy, which is consistent with a bullet entering from the rear.

A great deal of publicity has been given recently to the claim that Kennedy must have been hit from the front because the Zapruder film shows his head jerking back.

In fact, the head jerks back not when the bullet hits it but slightly later. Actually, at the time of the hit, the President's head appears to move slightly forward and the sprayed flesh also moves forward. The jerk, therefore, cannot have been a momentum reaction. It must have been a neural or muscular reaction caused by either bullet or by a reaction to some other stimulus.

Many critics have pointed to a rough sketch of the location of the neck wound and to the location of the bullet hole in the President's shirt and suit jacket as proving that the rear wound was lower on the President's body than the wound in front. From this it follows, supposedly, that some other gunman must have been firing in a downward direction from the front.

But the best evidence of the wound's location are the autopsy records and the photos and X-rays of the body itself. These unambiguously show the rear wounds higher than the wound at the front. The rough sketch was just that: rough. The holes in the shirt and jacket seem to indicate a low wound on the body only because the clothing, when photographed, was laid flat and because, presumably, when the President was sitting in the car his clothing was slightly bunched up his back.

Critics have criticized the "single-bullet theory," which is the commission's conclusion that the first bullet passed through the President and also hit, and eventually came to a stop in, Gov. Connally. Why anyone should think it unlikely that a rifle bullet should go through one man and hit another, when the men were sitting close together, escapes us.

Of course, it was difficult for the commission to reconstruct exactly what the path through both men was, but a reconstruction proved possible, and the conclusion that it was a single bullet which hit both men makes, by far, the most sense in the context of all the other evidence. No bullet was left inside the President; the nature of the President's wound shows that the bullet that made it was hardly slowed down and so must have been stopped by something else, but there was no appreciable damage to the car in front of the President; the films show Connally to have been hit at or near the same time as the President; the nature of Connally's wounds show that he, too, was hit from the rear.

The fact that the recovered bullet that apparently went through both Kennedy and Connally was not greatly distorted itself actually supports the single-bullet theory. In order that a bullet be recovered without being greatly distorted, it must be brought to a slow and gentle stop. By going through two men, and by tumbling end over end through flesh and muscle and by glancing off, rather than penetrating, large bones, the bullet was brought to a slow and gentle stop and so was able to emerge in a relatively unscathed condition.

ing shadowy outlines of gunmen in the bushes or trees actually show this only to someone with a wild imagination. What they really show are only shadows such as can be seen on almost any photograph taken from a distance of trees or shrubbery.

There has been speculation recently that various people masqueraded before the assassination as Oswald and, thus, there must have been a conspiracy.

Just as thousands of people claim to have seen Patty Hearst in various places at the same time, many people reported seeing Oswald. The Oswald "identifications" were even more doubtful because many of them allegedly took place months and years before the assassination. If there was a conspiracy, what possible purpose would have been served by sending fake "Oswalds" around the country?

THE CRITICISMS OF THE WARREN REPORT --
THE REASONS AND SOME ANSWERS --

W. DAVID SLAWSON AND RICHARD H. MOSK

The criticisms of the Warren Commission began before its Report was published. President Kennedy was murdered on November 22, 1963. The Warren Report was issued in the fall of 1964. By the spring of 1964 books had already been published in Europe which attributed the President's death to a variety of conspiracies. Many blamed the Warren Commission, in advance, for what they expected would be an inadequacy of its investigation for failing either to expose or to affirmatively disprove the conspiracies which they had supposedly already detected.

After investigating all reasonable (and even some not so reasonable) hypotheses and clues, the Warren Commission reported its conclusions that Lee Harvey Oswald was the assassin and that it could find no credible evidence of a conspiracy.

Nevertheless, criticisms and conspiracy theories have continued for a decade and now seem to be increasing. Why?

Reasons for Criticisms

Certainly a major reason is that people have difficulty believing that such a momentous act could be accomplished by such an insignificant, hapless person and in such a capricious manner. Few people not familiar with the Report realize the great number of chance occurrences underlying the assassination.

It is very unlikely that Oswald would ever have killed the President had the President not come to Dallas when he did and had he not passed the building in which Oswald was working. At the time Oswald took his job, there was no way of knowing that the presidential parade route would go right by the building in which he worked, or that there would be a presidential parade at all in the foreseeable future in Dallas. The night before the assassination, Oswald hitched a ride with a friend out to a suburb to see his wife, Marina, from whom he was then separated. He begged her to come back and live with him. He offered to rent an apartment in Dallas for the two of them the next day. She refused. The next morning Oswald left his wedding ring and almost all his money on the dresser, and departed with the same friend for work, with the rifle dismantled and concealed in a package. President Kennedy might be alive today had Marina relented.

Some people seem to feel that this is just not the material of which momentous events are made. They, therefore, conclude that there must be more to it.

The reason for the recent increase in criticisms and conspiracy theories is that the revelations about government lying and criminality arising out of Watergate and the controversies surrounding the C.I.A. and the F.B.I. have resulted in people becoming more suspicious of government. The Warren Commission unavoidably has become a target of some of this suspicion.

Allegations concerning C.I.A. activities in the late fifties and sixties have created added doubts, because the C.I.A. assisted the Commission in its investigation. However, the C.I.A. was only one such outside source of assistance, and it was not the most important one. (The most important was the F.B.I.) Moreover, the Commission double-checked and cross-checked all significant information among a variety of sources -- governmental and private.

The principal reason for the continuation of the criticism and conspiracy theories, however, is the breadth and thoroughness of the Warren Report and the materials produced by the investigation which supported it. The published materials comprise 27 volumes. The National Archives contains additional material, which has for the most part been made public. The critics of the Report, by selective and inaccurate citations, have turned this vast amount of readily available material against the Commission.

The Commission took testimony from over 500 people. Thousands more were interviewed or gave affidavits. The F.B.I. alone conducted approximately 25,000 interviews. As is true with even the simplest accident case, some people's reactions, memories, observations and actions were imperfect. For example, critics have claimed that one of the doctors who worked to save the President's life said the wound on the President's throat was an entry wound, which if true would prove that there was a second gunman since Oswald was behind the President. What these critics fail to disclose is that the doctor, at a raucous news conference right after the President died, said only that it was possible that a bullet had entered the throat. He later testified that at the time he made the remark, he had not seen the wounds on the back of the President. Although the throat wound could not thereafter be definitely analyzed, because of a tracheotomy which this doctor, among others, had performed, other doctors later said the wound was probably an exit wound. The Commission, on the basis of this and other expert testimony, fiber analysis of the clothes, the location of bullets and other evidence, concluded that the hole in the throat was an exit wound, which would demonstrate that the bullet came from the rear where Oswald was located. Under the circumstances, it should not be surprising that a doctor who had just been involved in the overwhelmingly more important task of trying to save the President's life, should have proferred a misunderstood speculation about a matter seemingly unimportant at the time. Yet the critics continue to point to his statement as "proof" of a front entry.

Among the thousands of statements, some were inaccurate because people were asked to recollect events which had occurred months, sometimes years, earlier. The events when they happened generally had nothing like the significance which the assassination was later to attach to them. For example, of the hundreds of people who testified after the assassination that they saw or might have seen Oswald someplace, or doing something, months or years before the assassination, almost all had no particular reason to take note of what they saw when they saw it.

Among a mass of facts of this size and nature there should be some which are conflicting. No conflicts at all would be a highly suspicious circumstance. But the critics of the Report have almost all relied upon one or a few facts which conflict with the rest and either ignore the rest or imply that the rest were deliberately fabricated.

The critics have been able to exploit the wealth of material supplied by the Commission with especially great effect, because very few members of the public are closely familiar even with the Report itself, let alone with the 26 volumes of additional published evidence and the National Archives material. Each bit of evidence which a critic offers is seen alone or with only the other information supplied by the critic. The public is understandably misled unless and until some defender of the Report comes forward to point out that there is other evidence which has to be considered. Also, frequently, the media have not been interested in giving the defenders' arguments equal exposure.

The piecemeal consideration of evidence in which the critics engage is also misleading for a more subtle reason. It distorts the meaning of probabilities. In any complicated event, encompassing a large number of constituent occurrences, a few of the occurrences are almost sure to be unlikely considered individually. This result in itself is dictated by the laws of probability. Odd as it may seem, if there are a large number of occurrences, it is likely that some of them will be individually unlikely. The real question is whether a whole series of occurrences, considered altogether, is more or less likely than any other series of occurrences, even though either or both may contain one or more particular occurrences which, in isolation, seem unlikely. That a single bullet went through both Kennedy and Connolly without suffering much damage itself is individually unlikely, for example. But the whole series of events of which the single bullet theory is a part is much more likely than any other possible series which anyone has yet offered as an explanation.

Oswald's Guilt

Quite apart from eyewitnesses, the evidence supporting Oswald's guilt is overwhelming. Ballistics evidence demonstrated that Oswald's rifle was the murder weapon; Oswald's prints were on the rifle; handwriting analysis of order forms and pictures of Oswald with the rifle demonstrated that the rifle was his; the rifle was found in the building where Oswald worked and where Oswald was seen shortly before the shooting; his prints were located in the part of the room where the rifle and spent cartridges were found and from which witnesses saw the rifle protruding at the time of the assassination; X-rays, photographs and the autopsy show that the bullet came from the area where Oswald was located; after the shooting, Oswald promptly left the premises and resisted apprehension by killing a policeman. Finally, he lied about a number of facts during his interrogation.

Thus, the claims that the rifle was inaccurate, that the shot was difficult, that Oswald was a poor shot and that stress analysis tests of Oswald's voice allegedly show him to have been telling the truth when he denied his guilt are all unpersuasive in light of so much uncontroverted evidence. These claims, even in isolation, are misleading: Oswald was a former Marine and hunter. He practiced with the rifle when he was a civilian. Tests showed that his rifle was sufficiently accurate. The shot was not particularly difficult. It was from a stable, prepared position at a target moving 11 m.p.h. almost straight away at a range of 177 to 266 feet. The rifle had a telescopic sight. The voice stress analysis has not achieved general acceptance as a reliable lie detector test.

Conspiracy

Most critical commentaries focus on suggestions that there had to be at least two gunmen.

One of the oldest claims is that Oswald could not have fired three shots in the time he had and have two of them hit the President. The Commission utilized the film of the event by Abraham Zapruder to determine that the interval between the two hits was between 4.8 and 5.6 seconds (the exact time is not determinable since the first shot hit the President while a road sign was between him and Zapruder's camera). Some have said that 4.8 to 5.6 seconds is too short a time for three shots to be fired and two of them to hit. But the time interval is between two shots -- the two that hit -- no three. The Commission found the evidence inconclusive as to whether of the three shots fired, it was the first, second or third that missed. Moreover, the time interval is really only the time for firing one shot. Since the time interval is that between the two shots which hit, Oswald had all the time he needed to fire the first shot. 4.8 to 5.6 seconds is ample time for aiming and firing one shot. Remember, the weapon was semi-automatic, the target was moving essentially straight away and Oswald had prepared a secure shooting position beforehand.

F.B.I. tests demonstrated that the maximum rate for accurate fire from the same type rifle Oswald used was one shot every 2.2 seconds. Years later, the British Broadcasting Company ran similar tests for a television series on the assassination and concluded that the maximum rate was one shot in less than every two seconds. But there is some question as to whether the B.B.C. test adequately considered the need to fire accurately.

The claim is also made that shots were heard to come from the front, so that there must have been a gunman or gunmen in addition to, or instead of, Oswald, who was located to the rear of the President.

When Kennedy was hit, the car was entering an underpass. The street at this point had tall buildings on several sides. Rifle shots created echoes which could have and presumably did confuse some people as to the direction of the shots' origin.

But the evidence concerning the wounds conclusively dispels the notion of shots from the front. The wounds both slanted downward from Kennedy's back. This is clear beyond doubt from the autopsy and from the photographs and X-rays of the body. The photographs and X-rays are still not open to public view, because of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis' wishes, but to doubt the evidence of the wounds is to label as liars the doctors who examined the body, the pictures and the X-rays for the Commission. The inward pointing of the threads of the back of Kennedy's clothing and the outward pointing of the threads in the front of his clothing demonstrate that the bullet which first hit him entered from the rear and exited from the front. Since the car was in a low underpass, a bullet from anywhere would have hit the car after exiting Kennedy. Yet all the damage to the car was found in front of Kennedy.

Recently, a great deal of publicity has been given to the claim that Kennedy must have been hit from the front because the Zapruder film shows his head jerking back.

If you want to be convinced by this claim, it is important that you see only a blurred version of the Zapruder film or that you see the film on television, that you take care not to analyze the individual frames of which the film is composed, and, as usual, that you ignore all the other evidence.

In fact, the head jerks back not when the bullet hits it but slightly later. Actually, at the time of the hit, the President head appears to move slightly forward and the sprayed flesh also mov forward. The jerk, therefore, cannot have been a momentum reaction. It must have been a neural or muscular reaction caused by either bul or by a reaction to some other stimulus.

Many critics have pointed to a rough sketch of the location of the neck wound and to the location of the bullet hole in the President's shirt and suit jacket as proving that the rear wound was lower on the President's body than the wound in front. From this it follows, supposedly, that some other gunman must have been firing in a downward direction from the front.

But the best evidence of the wound's location are the autopsy records and the photos and x-rays of the body itself. These unambiguously show the rear wounds higher than the wound at the front. The rough sketch was just that: rough. The holes in the shirt and jacket only seem to indicate a low wound on the body because the clothing, when photographed, was laid flat and, because presumably, when the President was sitting in the car his clothing was slightly bunched up his back.

Critics have criticized the "single bullet theory" which is the Commission's conclusion that the first bullet passed through the President and also hit, and eventually came to a stop in, Governor Connally. Why anyone should think it unlikely that a rifle bullet should go through one man and hit another, when the men were sitting close together, escapes us. Of course, it was difficult for the Commission to reconstruct exactly what the path through both men was, but a reconstruction proved possible, and the conclusion that it was a single bullet which hit both men makes, by far, the most sense in the context of all the other evidence including: no bullet was left inside the President; the nature of the President's wound shows that the bullet that made it was hardly slowed down and so must have been stopped by something else, but there was no appreciable damage to the car in front of the President; the films show Connally to have been hit at or near the same time as the President; the nature of Connally's wounds show that he, too, was hit from the rear.

The fact that the recovered bullet that apparently went through both Kennedy and Conally was not greatly distorted itself actually supports the single bullet theory. In order that a bullet be recovered without being greatly distorted, it must be brought to a slow and gentle stop. By going through two men, and by tumbling end over end through flesh and muscle and by glancing off, rather than penetrating, large bones, the bullet was brought to a slow and gentle stop and so was able to emerge in a relatively unscathed condition.

While it may be unlikely that a bullet would go through two men's bodies in this way, so that it could emerge almost unscath as we said earlier the likelihood of a single fact cannot logically be assessed in isolation. The whole series of events of which the single bullet theory is a necessary part provides the most likely explanation of all the events together of any which has been offered.

The claim that the weight loss of the bullet was less than the total weight of the bullet fragments found in Kennedy and Connel is simply fallacious. Critics have relied on a supposed probable weight loss of the bullet and a subtraction error by an F.B.I. agent which was obvious and which he corrected in the same testimony. In fact, the probable weight loss of the bullet is amply more than the total weight of the fragments found in the bodies.

The photographs supposedly showing shadowy outlines of gunmen in the bushes or trees actually show this only to someone with a wild imagination. What they really show are only shadows such as can be seen on almost any photograph taken from a distance of trees or shrubbery. The shadowy outlines make a good Rorschach test. If you see gunmen, you suffer from delusions of conspiracy.

Recently, there has been speculation that various people masqueraded before the assassination as Oswald and, thus, there must have been a conspiracy.

This is the "three Oswards", "five Oswalds", or, in one instance, the "seven Oswalds" theory. (There is also a "no Oswald" theory -- that all the Oswalds were false -- which should come as a surprise to his mother.) These theories are supported by many reports which the Commission gathered and published of people who reported to the Commission that they thought they saw or might have seen someone like Oswald someplace before the assassination.

Just as thousands of people claim to have seen Patty Hearst in various places at the same time, many people reported seeing Oswald. The Oswald "identifications" were even more doubtful because many of them allegedly took place months and years before the assassination. If there was a conspiracy, what possible purpose would have been served by sending fake "oswalds" around the country?

Alleged Agency Links

The recent surge in speculation about purported C.I.A. or F.B.I. connections with, or coverup of, the assassination is not a result of any newly discovered link between those agencies and the assassination. It is a result of the revelations of alleged unsavory practices in other matters by these agencies.

The Commission did investigate rumors that Oswald may have had some connection with a governmental agency. Following the interrogation of F.B.I. and C.I.A. officials, a review of agency files (including cross-checking whenever possible), and an examination of Oswald's finances, movements and background, the Commission concluded that Oswald had no relationship with any United States governmental agency.

In October 1963, the C.I.A.'s Mexican department sent a message and a photograph to the F.B.I. saying, in effect, that the man in the photograph was thought to be Lee Harvey Oswald. The photograph was not of Oswald, but it was not until shortly after the assassination that this fact was established. These events have led to the speculation that either the man in the photograph was a C.I.A. agent masquerading as Oswald or that Oswald was a C.I.A. agent.

These events occurred because the C.I.A. had several secret sources of information operating in Mexico and, as is frequently the case in this kind of work, the central headquarters had difficulty in putting the bits of information from the different sources together properly. One source reported that a man calling himself Oswald had visited the Soviet Embassy in Mexico City. Another source obtained a photograph of a man who probably visited the same Embassy about the same time. No source was able to get a photograph of Oswald in Mexico City, and no source was able to obtain the name of the man in the photograph who visited the Embassy. Someone in the C.I.A. who was responsible for putting bits of information together guessed, mistakenly it turned out, that the two men were the same.

A New Investigation?

We think that the time has come for everything on the assassination in the National Archives to be made available to the public, unless its disclosure can be shown to be definitely detrimental to the national security. In particular, the autopsy photographs and X-rays ought to be disclosed to any qualified person who asks to see them. Out of deference to the Kennedy family and common decency, however, no one should be permitted to make duplicates. The photographs show the President's naked, mutilated body lifesize and in full color.

We do not believe that a reopening of the inquiry in the sense of establishing a new commission to carry on its own investigation or to hear argument from private investigators would serve any useful purpose. There is no reason to believe that the people who disbelieve the Warren Commission would have any more faith in the findings of a new commission. No new physical evidence has been unearthed and people's recollections or observations are not going to be any fresher now than ten years ago.

It is inconceivable that a new investigation could conclude that Oswald did not participate in the assassination. The conclusion that Oswald was not involved could only be based upon an assumption that literally hundreds of people from all walks of life, who assisted in the investigation, joined in and have maintained a massive conspiracy of fabrication and coverups. It is equally unlikely that these people were deceived by a smaller group, since most of those who assisted in the investigation worked with the evidence firsthand.

One cannot be so categorical about the non-existence of a conspiracy, because it is virtually impossible to prove a negative. The Commission concluded that there was no conspiracy because there was no credible evidence that there was one. Despite rumors and speculations, we have not seen any new, credible evidence that there was a conspiracy. Accordingly, we do not believe any new investigation is necessary with respect to a conspiracy either.

The legitimate interest of the American people in knowing as surely as possible that they have found out the whole truth can be served, we think, by the creation of special, limited new investigations if and when a need for one of them arises. Currently, for example, the news media has reported that the White House C.I.A. Commission is investigating the allegation that the C.I.A. may not have fully disclosed all relevant information to the Warren Commission in an effort to cover up its own involvement with an assassination attempt on Castro. Such an issue should be investigated and apparently it is.

NOTE: Richard M. Mosk, who is an attorney in Los Angeles, California, by letter of 5/14/75, sent the Director copies of a manuscript and newspaper article which were written by Mosk and David Slawson, a Professor of Law at University of Southern California. Both were staff attorneys for the Warren Commission. The material sets forth many of the current criticisms regarding the Warren Commission Report and points out the fallacies of each. The only references to Mosk and Slawson in Bureau files relate to their serving on the Warren Commission staff. This letter acknowledges receipt of the material and expresses appreciation.

Note: Revised Guidelines are set forth below. No language has been deleted. Additional language is underscored.

GUIDELINES FOR REVIEW OF MATERIALS SUBMITTED TO THE PRESIDENT'S COMMISSION ON THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY

(as reviewed and revised in light of 1974 Amendments to Freedom of Information Act)

1. Statutory requirements prohibiting disclosure should be observed.

2. Security classifications should be respected, but the agency responsible for the classification should carefully re-evaluate the contents of each classified document and determine whether the classification can, consistently with the national security, be eliminated or downgraded. See Attorney General's Memorandum on 1974 Amendments, pp. 1-4.

3. Unclassified material which has not already been disclosed in another form should be made available to the public on a regular basis or upon request under the Freedom of Information Act unless such material is exempt under the Act and its disclosure --

(A) Would be detrimental to the administration and enforcement of the laws and regulations of the United States and its agencies;

(B) Might reveal the identity of confidential sources of information and impede or jeopardize future investigations by precluding or limiting the use of the same or similar sources hereafter;

(C) Would be a source of embarrassment to innocent persons, who are the subject, source, or apparent source of the material in question, because it contains gossip and rumor or details of a personal nature having no significant connection with the assassination of the President.

Whenever one of the above reasons for nondisclosure may apply, your department should, in determining whether or not to authorize disclosure, weigh that reason against the overriding policy of the Executive Branch favoring the fullest possible disclosure.

Unless sooner released to the public, classified and unclassified material which is not now made available to the public shall, as a minimum, be reviewed by the agency concerned five years and ten years after the initial examination has been completed, and in addition must be reviewed whenever necessary to the prompt and proper processing of a Freedom of Information request. The criteria applied in the initial examination, outlined above, should be applied to determine whether changed circumstances will permit further disclosure. Similar reviews should be undertaken at ten-year intervals until all materials are opened for legitimate research purposes. The Archivist of the United States will arrange for such review at the appropriate time. Whenever possible provision should be made for the automatic declassification of classified material which cannot be declassified at this time.

PURPOSE: To request authority to maintain those files relating to the assassinations of Martin Luther King, Jr., and John F. Kennedy in Room 4436, JEH, in order to respond to access requests from the House Select Committee on Assassinations as approved by the Office of Legislative Affairs, U. S. Department of Justice.

RECOMMENDATION: That authority be granted to maintain pertinent Kennedy - King files as set out below in Room 4436.

DETAILS: The Congressional Inquiry Unit was formed to respond to the anticipated requests from the House Select Committee on Assassinations. In order to respond expeditiously to these requests and to prepare cleared material for access to this committee, it is necessary that files pertinent to the inquiries of the House Select Committee be maintained in Room 4436, JEH. These files are identified as follows:

44-38661 "Berlin"

62-109090 "Assassinations of JFK"

62-109090 "Liaison with Warren Commission"

105-82555 "Lee Harvey Oswald"

The retention of these files would be temporary until such time as the requirements of the House Select Committee are met, at which time the files would be returned to the Records Management Division.

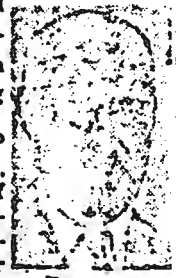
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

One Man Report on Assassination

By Drew Pearson

Rep. John R. Pillion (R-N.Y.) recently tried to beat the Warren Commission to the punch by releasing his own findings on who killed President Kennedy. It's an interesting document.



Pearson

The GOP Congressman, neighbor of vice presidential aspirant Bill Miller in the Buffalo area, is certain his fellow Republicans on the Warren Commission are all wet and that Lee Oswald was part of a Moscow-hatched conspiracy. He accuses the Warren Commission and high officials of a conspiracy of silence" to protect Communists.

In view of the imminence of the Warren report, and Pillion's attempt to undermine it, a look at the Congressman's background may be significant. Here is part of it:

He predicted, 1953, that four Soviet agents would sit in the U.S. Senate if Hawaii and Alaska were admitted to the Union."

He introduced a resolution, [illegible] to have the State Department abolished.

He attacked the Antarctic Treaty of President Eisenhower, 1963, and personally visited the South Pole looking for live Communists.

He failed to join former President Eisenhower and other Republican leaders in attending President Kennedy's funeral.

It should be noted that Pillion is the darling of the Buffalo emigres from Hungary, the Ukraine, Poland, Lithuania, etc., who inspired John Foster Dulles to deliver his much-regretted 1952 pledge implying that Gen. Eisenhower would deliver Poland, Hungary and other countries from behind the Iron Curtain. Pillion, himself a Hungarian, changed his name, but is extremely close to the exiles who have been feeding alarmist reports through Ed O'Connor, formerly of Buffalo, to Rep. Mike Feighan, the rabble-rousing Congressman from Cleveland.

Perhaps the most important backstage factor in Pillion's attempt to undermine the Warren Commission, however, is the fact that he himself faces a tough re-election battle from a live-wire young Democrat, Richard McCarthy.

Republicans on the Warren Commission are: Chief Justice Earl Warren, Sen. John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky, Allen Dulles, John J. McCloy and Rep. Glenn R. Ford of Michigan, all men of integrity.

Fooling the Voter

Goldwater workers in California are disguising themselves as "nonprofit" poll takers in a secret move to switch conservative Democrats without the latter catching on. The operation has the lofty name "Opinion Analysis," but the questions asked aren't nearly as interesting as the confidential instructions given the workers.

"Introduce yourself as an opinion analysis survey worker. Not a Republican precinct worker. Read the instructions. Casual clothes are best, no suits or ties. If anyone asks, you are going to 'selected' or 'random households, not Democratic households. Do not reveal you know their name. Do not show your walking (instruction) sheet to anyone."

The project has been launched on an ambitous scale in Los Angeles in an effort to help the Goldwater-Miller ticket and defeat Rep. James Corman and other Democrats. Idea is to compile a big list of conservative Democrats — from questions asked—then to work on them with anti-Johnson literature and personal calls.

Questions include loaded ones against foreign aid and the Supreme Court. Another is: "Do you think the Communist Party is a bigger threat to our Democracy than the John. Birch Society?"

Two others are: "Do you think the size of the Federal Government is a threat to your freedoms?" and "Do you think an owner should have the right to refuse to sell or do business with a Negro, because he is a Negro?"

"Please remember, these questions are not designed to be fair questions, nor are they designed to make people think like Republicans," says the instruction kit. "They are designed to ferret out the hard-core conservative Democrats . . . This operation is not a sample or guide to a campaign. It is the campaign. Every voter you find is pure gold."

LBJ—All the Way

Clare Boothe Luce, blond former ambassadress and wife of the Time-Life-Fortune magnate, was talking to Premier Papandreou of Greece at the royal wedding reception when she spied Boston businessman Tom Pappas, one-time GOP finance chairman for New England.

"I want you to know one of the best Republicans in America," Mrs. Luce introduced Pappas.

"Was," corrected Pappas, "But not now. Now I am for Johnson."

Chief Justice Earl Warren presents report to President

By CHARLES MOHR
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24—President Johnson received from the hands of Chief Justice Earl Warren today a presentation copy of the Warren Commission's report on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. In a letter of thanks released later the President told the Chief Justice: "The commission, I know, has been guided throughout by a determination to find and tell the whole truth of these terrible events. This is our obligation to the good name of the United States of America and to all men everywhere who respect our nation—and above all to the memory of President Kennedy." Those words reflected one major hope—that the Warren Commission report would minimize, if not end, the belief that is widespread in foreign countries, that the full truth of the assassination has been withheld.

The report will be made public in Monday morning's newspapers. Since it is for automatic release at 6:30 P.M. Sunday, reports on it will be heard on television and radio that night.

The New York Times plans to print the text of the report in Monday's issue.

The President will probably dip deeply into the report at the LBJ Ranch at Johnson City, Tex., over the weekend.

Tomorrow he travels to El Paso, Tex., for a joint appearance with President Lopez Mateos of Mexico at ceremonies marking the transfer of the once-disputed Chamizal zone to Mexico.

Mr. Johnson will then fly to dedication ceremonies for the Eufaula Dam near Muskogee, Okla., and to the Oklahoma State Fair at Oklahoma City for a speech. From there he will go to Texarkana to dedicate the "John F. Kennedy" Square on the Texas-Arkansas border. He will spend Friday and Saturday nights at his ranch.

The seven-man Warren Commission, and its counsel, J. Lee Rankin, brought the report to Mr. Johnson in the Cabinet room.

"It's pretty heavy," said Mr. Johnson as the boxed, Navy blue, four-inch-thick volume—about the size of "Who's Who"—was handed to him by Mr. Warren. Those were the only clear words reporters could overhear.

The report is expected to find that Lee Harvey Oswald was the lone assassin of Mr. Kennedy and that Jack Ruby was acting alone when he murdered Oswald.

One victim of the assassin's rifle was in the White House today as Mr. Johnson's guest. He was Gov. John S. Connally Jr. of Texas, who arrived this week to talk politics with his old friend.

This afternoon Governor Connally, who was wounded in the chest, wrist and leg by one of the assassin's bullets last Nov. 22, spoke to reporters in the White House lobby, and the subject of the report came up.

Mr. Connally had not seen it, but said, "I don't think there will be any surprises."

"It's a hard question to answer," he added. "I don't know what you expect; there may be some surprises—we'll have to wait and see."

The tall, gray Governor said he was pretty much recovered from his wounds and felt "wonderful," although his wrist was still a bit stiff and there was "a little deadness there, still."

Question on Bullet

One question about the assassination is whether Governor Connally, who was riding with Mr. Kennedy, was hit by a second bullet or the first one that struck the President.

"I have some pretty strong feelings on that subject and I testified about them to the Warren Commission," the Governor said when asked about this. "I have always felt that there was a second shot that hit me."

Only one word was said by members of the Warren Commission to the press. When the Chief Justice was asked if today's presentation ended the commission's job, he answered with an emphatic "yes."

The atmosphere on the occasion was businesslike, but not grim.

A little later music from the Air Force Band was filling the Rose Garden and the President was in smiling good spirits as he presented the nation's top aviation award, the Collier trophy, to Clarence L. Johnson, who designed the U-2 reconnaissance plane and the new A-11 interceptor.

He is vice president of the Advance Projects Department of the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, and his highly classified workshop has a distinctive name to which the President referred with a grin.

He called Mr. Johnson "the most distinguished citizen of that most unique and distinguished corner of our land, the 'skunk works.'"

The President said he could give a testimonial to Mr. Johnson at a "satisfied customer" because he was so fond of the "Jetstar" executive aircraft, which Mr. Johnson designed and which, the President noted, the "newspapermen call 'Air Force one-half.'"

The President also signed a bill today authorizing the appropriation of $5 million to investigate a site for construction of a sea level canal connecting the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, as a possible supplement to the Panama Canal.

Networks Ready for Warren Report

Reporting From The World Of Television and Radio

By Richard K. Doan
TV and Radio Editor

The Warren Commission report on the assassination of President Kennedy is to be released publicly next Sunday at 6:30 p. m. (EDT). It will get immediate, simultaneous attention on all three national TV networks.

To enable the networks to digest the report and have time to prepare special telecasts about it, the commission will put the text of the report in the networks' hands sometime tomorrow. It will be marked "confidential," of course. Some fears were expressed in TV circles that the findings might leak out in the 48-hour waiting period and become general knowledge long before the release time.

CBS will make a bid to grab most of the TV audience by opening up its "November 22 and the Warren Report" special with a 90-minute review of the case beginning at 5 p. m.

Exclusive filmed interviews . . . will bring out facts about the assassination . . . heretofore known only to the commission," the network promised. The interviews are with 26 key witnesses and deal with "key questions" the commission had to decide.

Some of those CBS has interviewed: Marina Oswald, the accused assassin's widow; Texas Gov. John Connally; Mrs. Linnie Mae Randle, a neighbor of the Oswalds; Garland Slack, a rifle-range companion of Oswald.

At 6:30 the telecast will turn to the report itself, its findings and recommendations. Thirty minutes will be devoted to this. At that hour, ABC and NBC also will come on with televised reviews of the report, ABC for 30 minutes, NBC for a full hour.

Allen Successor

Steve Allen's successor on the late-evening TV show syndicated by Westinghouse Broadcasting will be 31-year-old Regis Philbin, described as a "bright new television personality" who has been doing a two-hour variety show in San Diego, Calif.

He will be introduced on the syndicated circuit on Oct. 26, the Monday following Allen's last show. WPIX in New York, which carries the Allen series, has not decided whether to pick up the replacement program.

Allen's series reportedly lost recently about seven or eight of the 47 stations which had been carrying the show. Some others were said to have served notice they would be discontinuing the program next month in favor of ABC's new Les Crane show, starting Nov. 9 against NBC's "Tonight."

Westinghouse and Allen, however, attributed the decision to drop his late-evening show to the "heavy burden" of his doing this series as well as emceeing CBS's "I've Got A Secret," starting this week.

WPIX already had a partial replacement for Allen scheduled to begin Oct. 6. It's a twice-weekly entry, for Tues-day and Thursday nights at 11:15, called "Hot Line" and featuring author Gore Vidal and celebrity guests taking phone calls from viewers.

Retired showman Billy Rose and Fulton Lewis 3d will be Vidal's premiere guests.

Channel 11 officials are excited over the prospects of a gimmick they will introduce: the "picture phone" booth at Grand Central Terminal will be utilized to take calls to the show, so the callers can be seen on the TV screen. So far as is known, it's the first time the talk-see phone has been employed on TV.

CBS on Editorials

Dr. Frank Stanton, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, suggested yesterday that the CBS radio and TV networks may undertake on-the-air editorializing on world and national issues.

Addressing a luncheon session on the CBS Radio Affiliates Association at the New York Hilton, the network official said:

"As you know, CBS has occasionally editorialized over the radio and television networks on matters of importance to the (broadcasting) industry after first clearing the editorial with the affiliates. I expect that we will continue to do so, and we may well extend this policy to subjects of national and international importance."

He added, however, that the responsibility for broadcast editorializing rested mainly on local stations, and he urged them "to go all out," even to endorsing candidates for public office.

Double Lives

David Levy, producer of the new "Addams Family" comedy series on ABC and author of the new inside-TV novel, "The Chameleons," is an identical twin (brother Charles is vice-dean of the University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg School of Communication) who is leading a twin life himself.

As a TV producer, he has several new irons in the fire. One is a new hour drama, "The Politician," a story something in the manner of CBS's new "Slattery's People." Another is a half-hour comedy adapted from the book, "House Party," written by "Virginia Rowans," pseudonym for Patrick Dennis (alias Edward Tanner III), author of the Broadway hit comedy "Auntie Mame."

As a writer, Levy has already "synopsized" a new novel. "But it isn't a sequel to 'The Chameleons,'" he reports. "If there is any TV in it, it'll be well, out in the periphery." He said he'd rather not disclose the theme.

"The Chameleons" is a story of the machinations in a fictitious TV network involved in a Congressional inquiry. Levy was sacked as vice-president in charge of programming for NBC-TV a couple of years ago after he testified before Sen. Thomas J. Dodd's juvenile delinquency sub-committee investigating TV sex and violence.

Back briefly in New York this week—he now lives in Beverly Hills—Levy reports there is a strong possibility his novel will become a movie

Warren Unit Findings Go To LBJ Soon

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (UPI)—The Warren Commission's report on the assassination of President Kennedy will be sent to the White House "in a matter of days," Chief Justice Earl Warren said today.

The report is expected to be made public by the White House by Sept. 28.

to be that Lee Harvey Oswald acted as an individual, not as

Its major finding is expected part of a conspiracy, when he fired the shots which took the President's life in Dallas, Texas, last Nov. 22.

It also is expected to conclude that Dallas nightclub owner Jack Ruby acted alone when he took revenge on the accused assassin by shooting him to death in the basement of the Dallas police station.

LENGTHY REPORT

When completed, the report will consist of about 700 pages, printed in standard type on sheets nine inches high and 5¾ inches wide. Including the hard covers, it will be about 1¾ inches thick.

The printing office is expected to sell the report for about $2.25 in paperbck with an additional charge for hard cover versions.

Bantam Books and Popular library are expected to have pperbacks of the repoirt available about a week after the government version. These will be sold for $1.

Warren Report Will Be Aired In Two Weeks

Washington, Sept. 12 (UPI)—The Warren Commission's report on the assassination of President Kennedy will be sent to the White House "in a matter of days," Chief Justice Earl Warren said today.

The report is aimed at ending rumors and speculation about the assassination. It is expected to be made public by the White House by Sept. 28.

Its major finding is expected to be that Lee Harvey Oswald acted as an individual, not as part of a conspiracy, when he fired the shots which killed Kennedy in Dallas, Texas, last Nov. 22.

Ruby Was Loner

It also is expected to conclude that Dallas nightclub owner Jack Ruby acted alone when he took revenge on Oswald by shooting him to death in the basement of the Dallas Police Station.

The report will deal extensively with numerous rumors that both Oswald and Ruby were acting as part of a conspiracy, variously attributed to extreme right wingers, extreme leftists and the Dallas police.

In each case, the rumor will be coupled with a report of a commission investigation ~~which seeks~~ to answer it.

Blue-Bound Volume

The hard-covered volume to be presented to President Johnson will be bound in navy blue buckram with the Presidential seal embossed in bright gold on the front.

Warren said that he and other commission members have been working late to check proofs from the Government Printing Office. He added that the commission staff is checking "thousands of footnotes" against the record of 9½ months of investigation.

"I can't assume that the report will be at the White House next week," Warren said. "But it would be a good bet. It will be up to the President to determine what use should be made of the report for the public."

Big Editing Problem

The principal obstacle to publication at this point appears to be editing. The report probably will run to about 700 pages. It will be printed on semi-glossy paper to improve the quality of photographs, line drawnings and charts that wil lbe included.

There is expected to be a llmited number of the hard cover volumes such a sthe one presented to the President. Paperbacks will be ~~available~~ also for the general public.

J-A Exclusive Heard 'Round the World

Important newspapers all over the nation—and abroad—printed in bold Page One display The New York Journal-American's exclusive disclosure of the full testimony of Jack Ruby before the President's (Warren) Commission on the assassination of President Kennedy last November.

To name a few, in addition to Hearst newspapers, there were the Philadelphia Inquirer, the Houston Chronicle and Chicago's American (the Chicago Tribune's afternoon newspaper). One editor's reaction to The Journal-American's exclusive: "Great work."

The testimony of Ruby, who shot and killed Lee Oswald, named by police as President Kennedy's assassin, was printed in full. The transcript was obtained by Journal-American Reporter Dorothy Kilgallen, also famous as a columnist, from "sources close to the Warren Commission."

The report of the Commission has been long delayed. The best guess now is that it won't be available for publication until mid-September months after all testimony was in.

Recently, word got out that the Warren report would be "sold" to certain media to give them an edge on others. The Commission was bombarded with protests over any such commercial peddling of an official report involving one of the century's most tragic events.

There were quick, strong demands that all media be treated equally in the release of the report. The American Society of Newspaper Editors and the Association of Newspaper Editors and the Associated Press —of which The Journal-American is a member— took the lead.

No definite, official denial of the reports that the Warren report would be "sold" to privileged media has come from Washington all questions about such a 'sale' have been referred by the Warren Commission to the press secretary at the White House.

This made it clear to The Journal-American that Miss Kilgallen's exclusive on at least one vital part of the Warren report should be rushed into print— and it was.

The strange Ruby testimony, referring at one point to a "plot" against President Kennedy's life, was printed over three days—Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday. Miss Kilgallen's story and the full Ruby Q. and A. consumed nearly 60 columns. (Incidentally and and contrary to statements, while Miss Kilgallen's stories were copyrighted, the testimony, of course, was not.

No Hint of Conclusions

The Warren Commission was represented as being "distressed" by the appearance of the Ruby testimony in this and other newspapers. The testimony, of course, might bear on the Commission's final conclusions, but no hint of these quasi-judicial conclusions appeared in The Journal-American or any other associated newspaper.

That was where matters stood until yesterday. Then, Malcolm Epley, executive editor of the Independent Press-Telegram of Long Beach, Calif., which competes with one of the newspapers printing Miss Kilgallen's stories and the text, complained to Chief Justice Warren, Chairman of the Commission.

Without noting the competitive position of Mr. Epley's newspaper, Commission Counsel J. Lee Rankin told the editor:

"The commission has released no testimony whatsoever and all statements released to the press by the Commission have been available to all news media.

"It intends to abide by this policy until delivery of its final report to the president. Federal investigation has been undertaken to determine the source of the release to which you objected."

Immutable Mr. Warren

Chief Justice EARL WARREN of the Supreme Court, and also head of the special presidential commission investigating the Nov. 22 assassination of JOHN F. KENNEDY, is an immutable and unchangeable man.

For many months he has ignored the uproar caused by the hiring of NORMAN REDLICH, a man whose past is a patchwork of associations with Communist-front groups, as a $100-a-day consultant by the Warren Commission. Public protests from such men as Representatives RALPH F. BEERMAN (R., Neb.) and EDWARD J GURNEY (R., Fla.) have bounced off the back of Chief Justice WARREN like 22-caliber bullets off a "Walker Bulldog" tank.

REDLICH has been working since last Dec. 20 for the Warren Commission, which among other things was set up to learn the significance of the Communist background of LEE HARVEY OSWALD, Mr. KENNEDY's killer. Back in the spring, REDLICH's own "colorful" history came to light. But, inasmuch as the Warren group's job was supposed to have been concluded by late June, the issue was brushed aside.

For reasons not apparent, the Warren Commission is still investigating the Kennedy assassination, almost nine months after it happened, and a report is not expected now until September.

Meanwhile, REDLICH remains on the commission's pay roll. This is a man who lent his signature to leaflets defying the State Department's ban on travel to Communist Cuba. He has been a councilman of the Emergency Civil Liberties Committee which was pronounced Communist controlled by the House Un-American Activities Committee and the Senate Internal Security Subcommittee. He has signed newspaper advertisements condemning the House Un-American Activities Committee, and has made speeches of the same ilk. He once signed a statement disagreeing with a Supreme Court decision requiring the Communist Party U.S.A. to register with the Subversive Activities Control Board.

REDLICH has a right to his opinions, and he can speak his mind, of course. But has he an advisory place in the Warren Commission?

Our bureau chief in Washington, MORRIS CUNNINGHAM, asked REDLICH point-blank this week if he intended to remain with the Warren group. He replied: "I do, yes."

It would appear there is no one to say him nay. And Mr. Chief Justice WARREN is as immutable as ever.

WARREN REPORT RELEASE MAY NOT BE SIMULTANEOUS

Pres... Comm...

By Dom Bonafede
Herald Tribune News Service

The White House is working on a plan under which the Government would enter into "special contracts" with newspapers requesting advance copies of the Warren Commission report so they may publish the complete, voluminous study on the assassination of President Kennedy.

In making the disclosure Tuesday, J. Lee Rankin, chief counsel for the blue-ribbon panel, said that discussions between George Reedy, White House press secretary, and representatives of newspapers and wire services interested in the proposal will be held soon.

After being informed of the plan, Paul Miller, head of the Gannett Newspapers and president of the Associated Press, issued the following statement:

"The Associated Press is opposed and will continue to be opposed to anything other than simultaneous distribution and release of the report to all."

Prior Release

Under the tentative White House plan, Rankin said, the press organizations participating in the arrangement would receive a copy of the lengthy report prior to the official distribution of the document. This would allow them valuable time to set it in type in preparation for the general release date when other newspapers would get it.

Rankin reported that under the contractual agreement the participating newspapers must abide by two stipulations: (1) They will print the full text of the Commission report, expected to run about 500 pages, and (2) they will guarantee security measures so that the report will remain exclusively within the confines of the printing departments and not be used by editorial staff members for the writing of stories in advance of the general release time.

To Appear as Book

The report is also being sought by several publishing houses which plan to print it in book form.

Rankin said book publishers would not be invited to enter into the special contracts. He said it was unlikely that the report would be released until after the Democratic National convention. Speculation has been widespread that the report will be released Sept. 14, but this has not been confirmed.

The Commission counsel said the panel met Tuesday to work on the final report. Although the investigative phase of their mission is completed, Rankin said the Commission members "are not going to close their books until the report is released."

Warren Report Plan Queried

By the Associated Press

The Warren Commission, meeting in secret to consider how it will release the text of its Kennedy assassination report, considered a plan whereby contracts would be signed between the Government and some information media.

These media would be supplied the text of the report somewhat in advance of other media on the condition that they "observe security" — not publish the report before the specified release date and then publish it in full.

The commission's chief counsel, J. Lee Rankin, briefed newsmen after the secret session yesterday. The commission, headed by Chief Justice Warren, is nearing the end of its long investigation into the assassination last November 22 of President Kennedy.

There have been reports that certain paperback book companies have had negotiations with the commission. With this in mind, a reporter asked: "How can a Government commission, engaged on such a project of grave national import, engage in contractual negotiations with private concerns?"

Said Mr. Rankin: "You will have to take this up with Mr. George Reedy at the White House."

Mr Reedy is the White House press secretary.

Mr. Rankin's response was the same when asked if the report shouldn't be released to everyone simultaneously, perhaps three or four days in advance, so everyone could get a chance to read the document before writing about it.

At the White House, Mr. Reedy told a newsman: "As far as the White House is concerned, no plans have been made for the release of the report. We will give consideration to this matter at an appropriate time." In Rochester, N. Y., Paul Miller, president of the Associated Press and president of the Gannett Newspapers, said when asked for comment: "The Associated Press is opposed and will continue to be opposed to anything other than simultaneous release of the report to all."

A similar stand was taken by Miles H. Wolff, president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors and executive editor of the Record-News at Greensboro, N.C.

He said he could speak only as an individual, but asserted: "If the Government plans to release this report in advance to one group, it is shocking. It is perfectly ridiculous to try to figure how the Government can do this with a report paid for by all the taxpayers."

BOOK HOUSES RACE U. S. PRINTERS

TO GET WARREN REPORT

By Dom Bonafede
Of The Herald Tribune Staff

WASHINGTON.

A race to publish the Warren Commission's summary report on the assassination on President Kennedy—now due to be released in mid-September — is being waged among several commercial publishers to the reported displeasure of the government.

So far, two hard-cover publishers — Doubleday and the Book-of-the-Month Club —and two paperback houses —Bantam and Popular Library—plan crash programs to get their editions on the stands as soon as the commission's findings are released, in order to capitalize on early sales.

But, as one publisher noted, "there may be a number of others in the bushes coming out with the report."

Private publishers, all of whom say they will be able to print and distribute their editions within days to weeks after the report is out, will have an advantage over the Government Printing Office, which will publish and sell the official report.

A spokesman for the printing office said no special facilities are being set up for the sale of the report and that anyone wanting to buy it from the government must purchase it over the counter from the Superintendent of Documents or through the mail, like any other Federal paper. This means an indefinite delay unless the purchaser is in Washington.

Both Bantam and Popular Library announced plans to [illegible] days after it is released. Doubleday and the Book-of-the-Month Club estimate three to four weeks for the hard-cover editions.

The paperback books are expected to sell for less than the edition published by the Government Printing Office. Bantam reported a dollar price and Popular Library, 95 cents.

The printing office has not yet set a price on the report, but an official estimated it would be about $2.

Published editions will essentially consist of the commission's verbatim summation of the events surrounding the Nov. 22 assassination.

Executives for two of the commercial publishers, reported that U. S. officials were chargined.

"The government is not too happy about people commercializing on the report," a spokesman for one publishing house commented. He added the commission was "not terribly co-operative" concerning illustrations and had rejected a request for a formal picture of the seven-man, blue-ribbon panel.

James Bryans, vice-president and editor-in-chief for Popular Library, remarked the government "seems to be inclined not to make any special dispensations."

Secrecy surrounding the publishing of the report is such that the public information section of the printing office reported it knew nothing about it.

However, J. Lee Rankin, chief counsel for the commission, acknowledged that the Federal printers had been given the job.

It was further learned that although the review is not yet completed, the Government Printing Office has already started preliminary work on the complete multi-volume report concerning the assassination, the investigations which followed, the security arrangements, the interrogation of witnesses, the jailhouse murder of Lee Harvey Oswald, the probable assassin, and the trial of his convicted slayer, Jack Ruby.

One volume—that which will be put in book form—will consist of the commission's findings. It is expected to run to about 500 pages and include a condensation of matters relative to the assassination.

Bantam, which will publish its edition in conjunction with The New York Times, announced its first printing at between 300,000 to 500,000 books. The Book-of-the-Month Club will base its hard-cover book on the Bantam edition and distribute it as a dividend to subscribers. An official said the company may later offer the book to the public at about $4.95. Harrison Salisbury, New York Times director of [illegible] correspondence, will write an introduction.

Doubleday, the first to announce plans to publish the report, said it will sell its edition for $3.95.

Popular Library, a specialist in what is called in the trade as "headline" books, last year published the Lord Denning report on England's Christine Keeler-John Profumo case in about a week after it was released in the U. S.

Mr. B ryans said that Robert Donovan, Washington bureau chief for the Los Angeles Times, will write the introduction for the Popular Library's paperback book. He said the company will publish "several hundred thousands."

Earlier, there had been reports that some of the publishers had attempted to persuade the Warren Commission to release the report to them in advance of the general release date, so they could get it in print. Presumably, the request was turned down. The four publishing houses yesterday indicated they would publish their editions after the commission's report is publicly released.

Nonetheless, speculation persists that efforts are made by some publishers to buy proofs or "reproducables" from the government. Reproducables are described as any kind of material that can be converted to printing plates.

None of the publishers would confirm the reports. One publishing executive said his firm's negotiations with the government are "top secret."

The commission, headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, was appointed by President Johnson on Nov. 29 to conduct a comprehensive review of the assassination of President Kennedy.

When completed, the commission's final report will be turned over to the President, who will decide what portions may be made available to the public and when it will be released.

FBI Requested to Investigate Leak of Portions of Oswald's Diary

A-3

By John P. MacKenzie
Staff Reporter

The Warren Commission asked the FBI last night to investigate the newspaper publication of portions of Lee Harvey Oswald's diary.

Chief Counsel J. Lee Rankin said the Commission, which is investigating the murder of President Kennedy, wants to know "how the diary was obtained and whom it was obtained from."

Excerpts from the diary of Oswald's stay in the Soviet Union were quoted in copyright stories in the Dallas Morning News over the weekend. Included was Oswald's assertion that in 1961 he received money from Russian secret police as payment for statements denouncing the United States.

The Commission is expected to confirm FBI findings that Oswald, himself shot to death two days after the Kennedy assassination, acted alone rather than with conspirators in shooting the President.

Rankin declined to say specifically when the Commission report would be finished, but he said it would be after the Republican National Convention, which opens July 13.

Asked why an FBI investigation of the news story was necessary, Rankin replied that the Commission was concerned about piecemeal, and possibly misleading, disclosure of evidence in advance of the report.

An investigation was demanded by William A. MacKenzie, attorney for Oswald's widow, into "leaks" prejudicial to her property and publishing rights. Rankin said he did not think any leak came from the Commission or the FBI.

The Commission received the original diary from the FBI. The FBI obtained the diary and other Oswald belongings from the Dallas police after the police made copies of all material turned over to Federal authorities.

Asked if there would be anything improper about release of the diary by, say, the Dallas police, Rankin said, "Of course. They are supposed to be cooperating with us."

[In Dallas, United Press International reported that Jack Krueger, managing editor of the Dallas Morning News, defended his newspaper's publication of the Oswald diary.

["The Warren Commission has every right to make this request of the FBI and the FBI has a right to ask us what it will, under the proper conditions," Krueger said.

["There are other rights involved. The American people have a right to know, particularly any facet of an assassination of a President of the United States. The American press, large and small, has an obligation to tell them . . . .

["The Dallas News is going to report every important piece of news to its readers, to the limit of its ability."]

AFTERMATH OF DALLAS STORY

Leaks in Oswald Diary Face Study by Probers

The Warren Commission investigating President Kennedy's assassination was expected today to look into the publication of portions of the diary of Lee Harvey Oswald, accused of the crime.

The diary's contents, in the Commission's hands, were described in a copyright story over the week-end by the Dallas Morning News, touching off complaints about the document's release.

Rep. Gerald R. Ford, (R., Mich.), member of the panel headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, said he expected the matter to be brought up at the Commission's meeting today. He said he was "disturbed" over publication of parts of the diary dealing with Oswald's life in the Soviet Union.

References to the diary are expected to be included in the Commission's report, due in a week or two.

William A. McKenzie, attorney for Oswald's widow, Marina, asked Commission Counsel J. Lee Rankin to investigate leaks of information, including the diary, to the press.

Mr. Rankin said he had been able to assure Mr. McKenzie no one of the Commission had been responsible.

"The release and printing of the diary prior to the Commission's report by anyone else is an invasion of privacy including personal property and publication rights that belong to Marina Oswald and her children," Mr. McKenzie said.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Warren Report Won't Satisfy All

By Drew Pearson

The Warren Commission will soon issue its report on the assassination of President Kennedy and it will disappoint a lot of people. It will find that one man and one man alone was responsible for John F. Kennedy's tragic death. That man was Lee Harvey Oswald.

Pearson

Unfortunately the report will not satisfy a lot of people, even though it is issued by the Chief Justice of the United States and some of the most distinguished citizens of the Nation.

In Europe and the Near East recently, I found a universal belief that President Kennedy was murdered by a fascist conspiracy. This belief was confided to me by none other than Nikita Khrushchev and was shared by high officials in allied governments.

Khrushchev's Opinion

Khrushchev expressed high regard for Chief Justice Warren, but said that Warren would bring in a political report that would not tell the facts of the alleged conspiracy.

Regardless of this, the Warren Commission has concluded that no one aided Oswald, that he was a strange introvert who found fault with everything, and, brooding over these faults, had plotted singlehanded to kill President Kennedy.

When Mrs. Oswald testified before the Commission, she said in her faltering English:

"My husband no like United States. When he go to Russia he no like Russia. He come back to the United States and he like Cuba. Then he go to Mexico to try to get into Cuba and he decide he doesn't like Cuba. He no like anyone—except he like to live on moon."

'Fascist Conspiracy'?

Three factors have led to the widespread impression in Europe that Mr. Kennedy was murdered by a fascist conspiracy:

1. The fact that Oswald was killed in the Dallas Police Station. No European can understand how anyone can be killed in a police station unless it's a deliberate police plot.

2. The book, "Who Killed Kennedy?" by Thomas G. Buchanan, which has been widely quoted in Europe.

3. The remark of Chief Justice Warren that some of the testimony taken by the Commission might not be made public "in your lifetime" has led to speculation that the Commission was suppressing certain facts.

Remark Explained

However, here is the inside story of how the Chief Justice happened to make this remark:

On Feb. 3, Mrs. Oswald was testifying before the Commission, and about 25 newspapermen were waiting to find out what she said. The Chief Justice, not wanting to be rude, stopped to answer their questions. He explained, in reply to questions, that all the communications, letters, and raw material used for the final findings of the Commission would be sent to the Archives Office for posterity so the public could have the material later.

He had in mind the fact that much of the raw material of the probe of Abraham Lincoln's assassination was destroyed, and the country still does not entirely know what happened. The material on which the Warren Commission report is based is not to be destroyed, and the Chief Justice explained that it would be sent to the Archives Office.

However, some of this material includes reports from the Central Intelligence Agency, the Pentagon, and the State Department that are marked "classified." A newspaperman asked whether this material would be made public and Warren responded:

"Yes, there will come a time. But it might not be in your lifetime. I am not referring to anything especially. But there may be some things that would involve security. These would be preserved but not made public."

The Chief Justice was not referring to the facts surrounding the assassination but to the State Department and CIA documents marked "classified" which take some time to declassify. His remark was not published in proper context and was widely misconstrued.

"I could have kicked myself afterward for saying that," Warren later confided to a friend.

Ike's Sister-in-Law

A significant byplay took place at the Republican Convention in Washington State the other day that indicates how strong the Northwest is for Goldwater. Mrs. Edgar Eisenhower, sister-in-law of the former President, got up and moved that the Republican platform be adopted without being read.

She didn't want anyone to know what was in the platform, just wanted it adopted.

Edgar Eisenhower, older by two years than the 74-year-old former President, follows a political philosophy that makes Barry Goldwater a liberal. In contrast, Edgar's younger brother, Milton, would look like a Bolshevik. Milton has told friends privately that if Goldwater is the nominee he, Milton, will support Johnson.

Warren Report Delayed

There's not a chance the Warren Commission will hand President Johnson its report on the Kennedy assassination by June 30. Testimony of 400 witnesses still has to be printed and proofread.

Commission has talked to all known credible witnesses, but it expects some people remotely aware of past movements of the central figures will volunteer testimony when report is published. If so, their depositions will be taken.

Warren Report: No Shortcuts

By BOB CONSIDINE

A CLOSE ASSOCIATE of Chief Justice Earl Warren read some recent criticism here about the delays in issuing the Warren Commission's report on the assassination of President Kennedy. He took me aside.

CONSIDINE

"You're on the wrong track," he advised. "The Chief Justice is determined to have every scrap of evidence, every bit of testimony, that can be pulled together. That's why he took that trip to Dallas, met Jack Ruby, stood in the Schoolbook Depository window from which the shots were fired, and why he visited the place where Officer Tippet was killed, the movie house in which Oswald was caught, Oswald's homes, and other places.

"Sure, a lot of crackpot books and articles are appearing. But more would if the Report had been hastily released. When it appears, there will be no question about Oswald's guilt, his 'loner' role, and exactly how the President met death."

IN A RECENT interview, Gov. William Warren Scranton told us his party never got itself bogged down in as much internecine warfare as the Democratic Party. Then, a week later, he pulled the rug from under his statement by entering the race for the GOP nomination at a point where it seemed all but over.

His entry has created within the Republican Party as much chaos as immersed the Democrats in 1948 when there were, in effect, three Democratic Parties: Those of Harry Truman, Henry Wallace and Strom Thurmond.

Sen. Goldwater was stunned by the heat of his friend Gov. Scranton's hat-in-the-ring speech. Dick Nixon, who liked everybody up to a point, blasts Scranton, but that does not necessarily endear Dick to Goldwater, who refers to him as a latter-day Stassen.

Stassen likes Christian Herter, who likes Dwight D. Eisenhower, whose likes and dislikes are, like the price of refrigerators west of the Rockies, subject to change without notice. Cab Lodge still is winning personal popularity polls, and Gov. Romney is making sounds like a late starter. Rocky now proposes to give Scranton the wealth of advice he showered on Nixon four years ago.

On the other side of the political fence, which W.W.S. pictured as Babel, there is only LBJ—which stands for Let's Be Jubilant.

BASEBALL, the grand old monopoly, is missing a good bet by not shipping some of its Cooperstown (N. Y.) Hall of Fame treasures to the New York pavilion of the Federal Building at the World's Fair. If the Vatican can spare "Pieta" and the Spanish government some of its El Grecos and Goyas, Baseball should be able to temporarily yield a few of its own treasures. The Fair will be seen by 70,000,000 over the two seasons. That's a few more than will find their way to Cooperstown, as fine a little city as it is.

Among the Hall of Fame's mementoes are a baseball used by Abner Doubleday just 125 years ago this month, Ty Cobb's first contract ($50 a month), Willie Mays' $105,000 contract for last season, Ted Williams' last uniform, and some of the personal possessions of Babe Ruth, Walter Johnson, Christy Mathewson, John McGraw, Frank Frisch, Grover Alexander, Carl Hubbell and so forth.

They'd constitute a real hit at the Fair, and maybe even give the old game the shot in arm it badly needs.

Widow Recalled by Probers

Did Oswald Gun for Nixon?

Marina Oswald, widow of the accused assassin of President Kennedy, testified before the Warren Commission here yesterday about reports she once locked up her husband to prevent him from killing former Vice President Richard Nixon.

The incident was reported to have taken place Nov. 21—the day before the President was shot in Dallas—while Mr. Nixon was visiting there. Allen W. Dulles, a member of the commission, said: "We have learned a great deal about the case since she was here before."

Asked if Mrs. Oswald had changed her previous testimony, Mr. Dulles said: "No, there was no change. She added rather than changed."

The Dallas Morning News had reported that she locked up Lee Harvey Oswald in April or May of 1963 after he brandished a pistol and told her: "I'm going to see Richard Nixon." Mr. Nixon was not in Dallas then. His only visit was on Nov. 20-21.

Sources confirmed yesterday that Mrs. Oswald was questioned about the report but these sources refused to say whether she confirmed the story.

Meanwhile, in Dallas it was learned that Jack Ruby's defense team has lost a psychiatrist. Dr. William Beavers quit, saying he no longer was necessary. He was hired to develop evidence showing that the condemned slayer was insane. (UPI) congressional attacks in recent weeks. The motion to dismiss him was offered by Rep. Gerald Ford, a commission member.

Redlich went on the commission payroll at $100 a day in late December. On his application for employment, the balding New York lawyer admitted membership in the Emergency Civil Liberties Committee, a group cited as a Communist front by two committees of Congress.

Subsequent investigation by members of Congress revealed that Redlich has been associated with other leftist causes. Since joining the commission staff he has signed an ad soliciting funds for the defense of three young men now under federal indictment for "illegal conspiracy to organize and promote a trip to Cuba in violation of U.S. travel laws."

Members of the Warren Commission for months were unaware of Redlich's background.

Senators and Congressmen began teeing off on Redlich a month ago. Sen. Karl Mundt and Reps. Ed Gurney and Ralph Beermann were among the first to blast the appointment. But when Rep. Ford moved in commission session that Redlich be fired, his suggestion was defeated.

As a vote of confidence in Redlich, commission members granted him access to classified material. The commission move was meaningless because Redlich has been handling classified information since the day he was hired.

A commission spokesman says Redlich was cleared because "there is no reason to believe he is a Communist."

Rep. August Johansen, a member of the House UnAmerican Activities Committee, says the "commission laxity makes a mockery of security. By its hiring and retaining Norman Redlich, the commission has shown about as much concern for public confidence as a clumsy and careless baggageman does for the handle-with-care labels. Blundering is not treason, by any stretch of the imagination. But it can be just as fatal -- both to public confidence and to national security."

xx asunder.

Key chapters in Southern California have withdrawn from the state YD federation, charging the organization does not speak for its membership. Now Alan Robbins, chairman of the Los Angeles County YDS, has resigned as a member of the state YD steering committee.

He cited the "extremist platform of the organization and the totalitarian tactics" of its leaders. Robbins charged Josiah Beeman, state YD chairman, had forced through a "platform containing unbelievable and immoral planks at the YD convention in Fresno."

Robbins pointed to platform planks which, he said, advocated "abortions without any legal restrictions; a new code of sexual conduct...which would allow abnormal and offensive acts free of legal restraint, and irresponsible stands on foreign policy which would have us embrace Castro and Red China and generally follow a course of surrender throughout the world."

Robbins charged that YD leaders were working for the Senate nomination of State Controller Alan Cranston, an ultra-liberal disarmament buff. Cranston was asked to repudiate YD stands demanding trade with Cuba and recognition of Red China. While Cranston said he did not agree with the YDS on those issues he refused even to give them a verbal wrist-slap.

Oswalds' Widow Faces 2d Quiz

DALLAS, June 10 (UPI)—Marina Oswald plans to fly to Washington tonight for her second appearance before the Warren Commission.

Lee Harvey Oswald's 22-year-old widow, will be accompanied by her lawyer, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Robert Oswald, and will take along the older of her two children, June Lee, 3.

She has already testified before the commission, shortly after it was set up to investigate President Kennedy's assassination. Unlike her mother-in-law, Marguerite Oswald, she has accepted the charge that her husband killed the President.

Meanwhile, Jack Ruby, who assassinated her husband, has his ~~4th chief~~ defense lawyer, Clayton (Red) Fowler, a trial lawyer, who has saved at least a dozen men from the electric chair, and is president of the Dallas Criminal Bar Association.

CHIEF JUSTICE FLIES TO DALLAS

Warren Aims Rifle Out of Depository Window, Talks to Ruby

DALLAS, June 8 (UPI)—The Chief Justice of the U. S. set out in an assassin's footsteps yesterday, then talked for more than three hours with Jack Ruby, the presumed assassin's killer.

Chief Justice Earl Warren visited the Texas schoolbook depository. It was reported he aimed a rifle from the sixth floor death window toward the spot in the street outside where two shots struck President Kennedy.

Then he interviewed Ruby in the county jail across the street. Ruby was reported "wild-eyed and staring" during the meeting.

Justice Warren, head of the commission investigating the President's death, flew to Dallas. He spent about two hours in the schoolbook depository, from where the fatal shots were fired.

Then he and his aides met with Ruby in a small conference room only steps away from the sixth-floor cell where the former striptease club operator is being held during his legal fight to escape the electric chair.

Afterward, Justice Warren made brief stops at the apartment house where Ruby lived; at the rooming house where Lee Harvey Oswald had been living and at the movie house where Oswald was captured.

He did not go in any of the places.

What the Justice and the commission learned in the long meeting with Ruby was not revealed. Justice Warren, who left the jail smiling, declined to comment.

Joe H. Tonahill, one of the two defense lawyers who sat in on the conference, said later he doubted Justice Warren was able to get satisfactory answers to his questions because "Jack was in bad shape today. . ."

Ruby is taking medication in his cell for treatment of a mental condition doctors said he has developed since he was sentenced to death March 14. Medication was ordered to see whether the mental condition can be controlled sufficiently to avoid the necessity of calling a formal sanity trial. A show-cause hearing has been set for June 19 to determine if a sanity trial is needed.

Warren Visits City And Talks to Ruby

By JOHN GEDDIE

Heavily guarded Chief Justice Earl Warren made a surprise trip to Dallas Sunday for a 3½-hour interview with Jack Ruby and a 3-hour tour of the Texas School Book Depository.

Joe Tonnahill, a Ruby attorney, said the condemned killer was "very humble" during the interview but his mental condition was "bad, in my opinion."

Warren, the head of the commission now investigating the assassination of President Kennedy and subsequent events, was accompanied by Rep. Gerald Ford of Michigan, a commission member, and J. Lee Rankin, the commission's chief counsel.

The officials, accompanied by Sheriff Bill Decker, a stenographer, Tonnahill, Assistant Dist. Atty. Jim Bowie and former SMU Dean Robert Storey of Dallas, entered the county jail about 11:30 a.m. and left at 3 p.m.

The interview was held in a conference room at the jail rather than in Ruby's cell, Decker said.

Tonnahill said Ruby, known as a Warren admirer, shook hands with the chief justice and attempted to answer questions.

"The interview was as thorough as the situation was capable," the attorney said, "but Jack's mental state is bad."

Tonnahill called the visit "a very historical meeting."

It had been reported that Warren would visit Dallas during the week, but the Sunday interview was unannounced. A Secret Service agent showed surprise at the number of news media men on the scene.

Officials at the Dallas Police Department said they were not notified. No city officers were on duty at the crowded assassination site.

The group arrived at the Texas School Book Depository—apparently direct from the airport—about 9:30 a.m. A long, covered object—believed to be the rifle allegedly used by Lee Harvey Oswald—was carried into the building. Agents also carried books or bound volumes of testimony into the building.

When Warren emerged from the building at 11:30 a.m., he ignored questions and climbed into a Secret Service car for a short, quick trip to the rear of the county jail.

At approximately the same time, Ruby's two brothers and sister arrived at the jail. They said they did not know of the federal interview. Earl Ruby of Detroit was accompanied by Dr. Emanuel Tanay, a professor of psychiatry at Wayne University at Detroit, and Sol Dann, Earl Ruby's attorney.

Sam Ruby appeared before the commission Tuesday, he said.

He added that his brother was "in bad shape" Saturday.

When the group left under guard at 3 p.m., Warren again ignored questioners — this time with a tight smile. Rankin paused to say that "we took the testimony of Jack Ruby."

The group then went to the 3525 Turtle Creek apartment of Dr. Storey, former dean of the Southern Methodist University Law School and now a member of Texas Atty. Gen. Waggoner Carr's panel on the investigation.

After leaving North Dallas, the agents drove Warren through the Oak Cliff area where Oswald and Ruby lived, and where Oswald was captured. They then went to Hensley Field where they reportedly left for Washington.

Warren Unit May Hit Secret Service

By ROBERT E. THOMPSON
Special to The N. Y. Journal-American

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The American people and their elected leaders are about to be confronted with a grave issue which one day could determine the survival of the Republic.

It is this: how can the government improve the method of protecting the life of the President of the United States?

The Warren Commission will raise the question in its report on President Kennedy's assassination.

The report is expected to register sharp criticism of the manner in which the Secret Service handled security on Mr. Kennedy's tragic journey to Dallas.

The commission, headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, also is expected to suggest in its report that stringent action be taken to safeguard the lives of Presidents.

A VITAL MATTER

This is a matter which strikes at the heart of the continuity of the Republic in the nuclear age.

America came through the torturous events of last November as a strong and unified nation. But, it may not always be thus.

Had Mr. Johnson also been struck down by Mr. Kennedy's assailant, had the assassination occurred at a moment of grave international crisis, had a plot been afoot to kill other government leaders, the nation could have faced a dire situation.

Mr. Johnson is acutely aware of the problems involved in safeguarding his life when he appears in public. But he also compounds the dilemma of his protectors because of his impetuous mingling with crowds and his somewhat cavalier approval of security safeguards.

The problem simply is that Mr. Johnson—and other Presidents—are politicians as well as national leaders. They do not want to endanger their lives, but they also do not wish to be cut from the lifeblood of their political existence—the people.

Mr. Johnson, therefore, has been involved in occasional disputes with Secret Service agents who attempt to shield him from outstretched hands and masses of well wishers.

NEW MEASURES

Some measures already have been taken by the Secret Service to provide additional protection for the President, including construction of a car with a bullet-proof transparent bubble top.

There is talk within the government about the urgent need for additional security action.

Mr. Johnson has discussed the question with J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and other officials.

The rumor has spread that the FBI may be asked to take over the tasks now performed by the Secret Service. But Mr. Hoover is reported opposed to having this burden shifted to his agency.

In fact, when Mr. Hoover appeared before the Warren Commission he suggested that the way to improve protection of Mr. Johnson is to add more Secret Service agents to the White House contingent.

There have been some suggestions that the FBI and the Secret Service share the job of safeguarding the President.

But there is no foolproof way of preventing the President from being felled by a maniac or a plotter.

REPORTER APPEARS BEFORE JFK ASSASSINATION PROBERS

Warren Commission Quizzing Is 'Intense'

By SETH KANTOR
Scripps-Howard Staff Writer

The President's commission on the assassination of President Kennedy operates on the undistinguished fourth floor of the Veterans of Foreign Wars building, two blocks from the Capitol.

Witnesses, more than 400 of them so far, still are coming. Of the three who testified yesterday, I was one.

I was summoned for two basic reasons. I accompanied the President to Texas as a reporter last Nov. 21. I spoke with Jack Ruby in Parkland Hospital within 90 minutes after Mr. Kennedy was shot.

KNEW RUBY

As a reporter in Dallas before moving to Washington, I had been acquainted with Ruby. He had steered me into leads on Dallas "characters" for the feature stories I wrote.

Mainly questioning me was Burt W. Griffin. He has one of the toughest jobs in American legal history—a key role in trying to solve the crimes committed more than six months ago against Mr. Kennedy and his alleged killer, Lee Harvey Oswald.

An attorney from Cleveland, Mr. Griffin has been an investigator on the Commission headed by Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren since late last autumn.

"Is your work harder now?" I asked Mr. Griffin after he swore me in. "Isn't it tougher for people to remember now the minute details you need of that week-end last November than it would have been a half-year ago?"

"After a couple of months passed," said Mr. Griffin, "it began to make no real difference. It has been hard for four months."

Here and in Dallas, Mr. Griffin has questioned many witnesses to the murders; has interrogated police; has talked with many who knew Oswald and Ruby.

INTENSIVE

Mr. Griffin's questioning was thoro. It was intensive. It required two hours.

Previously, I had been interrogated by the Dallas Police, superficially, about what I had seen thru the nightmarish week-end.

Twice I had been questioned by three FBI men—professionals in their work.

But Mr. Griffin is a craftsman. He exacted from me the look and smell of the murder settings. I drew a diagram for him of my routes thru Parkland Hospital—nearly two hours' time reconstructed. I filled in for him my movements in the Dallas City Jail basement, before and after Oswald was shot.

REASSURED

Toward the end of the questioning, Mr. Griffin was joined by Leon D. Hubert Jr., a New Orleans attorney who is another chief investigator serving the Commission. They worked on my memory like two surgeons drilling for delicate particles of a human brain. And I feel reassured about the way the Commission is digging into the crime of the century.

One thing I hope they clear up. Ruby has denied to the FBI that he went to the hospital on the day of the Kennedy shooting. But I was there too, and Ruby stopped me to talk about the slain President and tell me he was shutting down his strip joint as a token of respect. There is no doubt about his being there.

But why would he deny it?

Strange Silence

Prof. NORMAN REDLICH, the controversial $100-a-day legal consultant of the Warren Commission, has not been discharged or forced to retire, and members of the commission adamantly refuse to discuss the matter.

The Warren Commission, of course, is the official body which has spent six months investigating the assassination of President JOHN F. KENNEDY by LEE HARVEY OSWALD. Since OSWALD was murdered before he could be tried in court, this study takes the place of a trial that would establish guilt on the basis of all evidence available.

OSWALD was pro-Communist. He had at one time defected to the Soviet Union and lived there. He married a Russian girl and then brought her back to the United States to live. He wound up in Dallas, where Mr. KENNEDY was slain on Nov. 22, 1963.

As for REDLICH, a New York college professor, his association with leftist and pro-Communist causes has put him in a wholly untenable position as a consultant to the Warren Commission in this sensitive effort to meet the demands of American justice.

Chief Justice EARL WARREN of the Supreme Court, head of the investigative commission, has refused to be questioned about REDLICH.

So has J. LEE RANKIN, the commission's director.

On down the line, through the members of the group, there is no comment.

Apparently the Warren Commission has decided that the easiest way out of a tight situation is to allow REDLICH's contract to expire quietly in June, without renewal. This is rather meaningless, since the report of the commission is expected in June anyway.

The line of thought behind this wall of silence seems to be that the commission fears that firing REDLICH would cast doubt over the authenticity of the entire investigation of the Dallas assassination.

But the doubts are there even so, and in fact are magnified by the peculiar reluctance of the Warren Commission to discuss the hiring and continued employment of a man who had no business being involved in a case that points to a killer whose own political and philosophical ideas were so closely allied to those of one of his investigators.

WASHINGTON--FBI DIRECTOR J. EDGAR HOOVER TESTIFIED BEFORE THE WARREN COMMISSION TODAY ON THE SECURITY PROTECTION GIVEN PRESIDENT KENNEDY BOTH DURING AND BEFORE HIS VISIT TO DALLAS.

THE COMMISSION ALSO TOOK TESTIMONY FROM JOHN A. MCCONE, HEAD OF THE CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY.

THE PANEL, HEADED BY CHIEF JUSTICE EARL WARREN, GAVE NO REASON FOR CALLING EITHER OF THE OFFICIALS. HOWEVER, THERE HAVE BEEN REPORTS THAT THE COMMISSION WAS PLANNING TO ISSUE A STATEMENT CRITICAL OF THE SECURITY ARRANGEMENTS FOR KENNEDY AT THE TIME OF HIS ASSASSINATION.

IN EARLIER TESTIMONY, THE MOTHER OF ACCUSED ASSASSIN LEE HARVEY OSWALD, TOLD THE COMMISSION THAT SHE BELIEVED HER SON WAS AN INFORMER FOR THE FBI OR THE CIA. BOTH HOOVER AND MCCONE HAVE DENIED THIS.

HOOVER SAID HE FELT HE WAS CALLED BY THE COMMISSION BECAUSE IT IS NORMAL PROCEDURE TO CALL THE HEAD OF ANY AGENCY WHICH PLAYED A ROLE SUCH AS THE FBI DID IN KENNEDY'S ASSASSINATION.

HE SAID HE FELT SOME PEOPLE WOULD HAVE CRITICIZED THE COMMISSION IF THEY HADN'T CALLED THE HEAD OF THE AGENCY TO SEE IF HE HAD ANYTHING TO ADD TO WHAT HIS MEN HAD TOLD THE COMMISSION EARLIER.

THE FBI DIRECTOR SAID HE FELT THE COMMISSION WAS VERY THOROUGH IN ITS QUESTIONING. HE SAID THE COMMISSION HAD GONE INTO MANY AREAS WHICH A REASONABLE MAN MIGHT NOT EVEN EXPECT THEM TO.

"ALL REASONABLE PEOPLE WILL BE IMPRESSED BY THE THOROUGHNESS WITH WHICH THE COMMISSION IS CONDUCTING ITS INVESTIGATION," HOOVER SAID.

THERE HAVE BEEN NO CHANGES IN THE PROCEDURES OF COMMUNICATION BETWEEN THE FBI AND THE SECRET SERVICE SINCE KENNEDY'S ASSASSINATION, HOOVER SAID. HE SAID THE FBI HAS ALWAYS HAD STANDING ORDERS TO INFORM THE SECRET SERVICE IMMEDIATELY OF ANY INFORMATION IT HAD PERTAINING TO THE SECURITY OF THE PRESIDENT.

THE FBI DIRECTOR REVEALED FOR THE FIRST TIME THAT HIS AGENCY HAD SUPPLIED 43 AGENTS TO HELP THE SECRET SERVICE DURING PRESIDENT KENNEDY'S FUNERAL. HE SAID THE FBI AGENTS WERE ASSIGNED TO COVER THE CATHERDRAL WHERE SERVICES WERE HELD FOR THE ASSASSINATED PRESIDENT.

Assassination Report . . . By Roscoe Drummond

Danger of Partisanship

THERE is growing uneasiness in Washington over the timing of the Warren Commission report on the assassination of President Kennedy.

Drummond

Within the Commission itself, headed by the forceful Chief Justice, very earnest consideration is being given to finding some way to postpone publication until after the presidential election.

The feeling of some members of the Commission is that, if the final report is as sternly critical of the security agencies of the Government as they would like it to be, it may be misused in the campaign and its detachment marred by the partisanship.

The membership of the Warren panel is diverse and bipartisan. Besides the Chief Justice it includes two Senators, two Congressmen, a former director of the CIA and another Republican who has served many Presidents.

These men have all been in public life many years. They are steeped in the Washington atmosphere and it is understandable that they should begin wondering, now that their findings are taking shape, how they can avoid entangling their report with the presidential campaign.

WHAT THE Commission is overlooking is that the national atmosphere is not a replica of the Washington atmosphere. I believe American public opinion, which responded to the horrible event of Nov. 22 with such calmness, balance and unity, will not misread or misjudge the Commission's report.

The best way for the Warren Commission to avoid getting its report entangled in the presidential campaign is to cease trying to keep it out; that is, to complete its exhaustive investigation as promptly as possible.

The worst thing to do would be to drag out the investigation and then drag out writing the report in the hope that this will innocently stave it off until after next November.

NO AMERICAN can look back at the circumstances which surrounded and followed the assassination of President Kennedy without feeling that there was laxity in security provisions and that some very important lessons need to be drawn from this experience.

I suspect that those who will be most disappointed in the Commission's report will be the Europeans who still seem intent upon believing that the assassination just had to be "some kind of a plot," a conspiracy in which Lee Harvey Oswald was used and then silenced by Jack Ruby's bullet.

Apart from the fact of there being no evidence of conspiracy, Americans find it even harder to believe that the Communists would use such an obvious and unreliable agent as Oswald.

It is clear that the American people will ponder the Warren Commission report calmly and attentively. It should not be held back.

Washington Atmosphere

Politics Holding Back Assassination Report

By Roscoe Drummond

WASHINGTON.

There is growing uneasiness in Washington over the timing of the Warren Commission report on the assassination of President Kennedy.

Within the commission itself, headed by the forceful Chief Justice, very earnest consideration is being given to finding some way to postpone publication until after the Presidential election.

The feeling of some members of the commission is that, if the final report is as sternly critical of the security agencies of the government as they would like it to be, it may be misused in the campaign and its detachment marred by partisanship.

The membership of the Warren panel is diverse and bipartisaan. Besides the Chief Justice, it includes two Senators, two Representatives, a former director of the CIA and another Republican who has served many Presidents. These men have all been in public life many years. They are steeped in the Washington atmosphere, and it is understandable that they should begin wondering, now that their findings are taking shape, how they can avoid entangling their report with the Presidential campaign.

What the commission is overlooking is that the national atmosphere is not a replica of the Washington atmosphere. I believe American public opinion, which responded to the horrible event of Nov. 22 with such calmness, balance and unity, will not misread or misjudge the commission's report even if some politicians tempt the public to do so.

The best way for the Warren Commission to avoid getting its report entangled in the Presidential campaign is to cease trying to keep it out; that is, to complete its exhaustive investigation as promptly as possible and to issue its report as soon as possible.

It is evident, I think, that the country wants and deserves to have the conclusions and judgments of the commission just as soon as they can be made ready. To use any artificial devices to hold up the report in an effort to avoid politics would, in my judgment, enmesh the report in politics.

No American can look back at the circumstances which surrounded and followed the assassination of President Kennedy without feeling that there was laxity in security provisions and that some very important lessons need to be drawn from this experience.

I suspect that those who will be most disappointed in the commission's report will be the Europeans, who still seem intent upon believing that the assassination just had to be "some kind of a plot," a conspiracy in which Lee Harvey Oswald was used and then silenced by Jack Ruby's bullet.

Much of the French and British press still favor the "conspiracy" theory and they will have a hard time accepting the Warren Commission version that there was no plot. Perhaps one reason so many Europeans are wedded to the conspiracy theory is that they can't quite believe in the coincidence of two psychotics—Oswald and Ruby—in one place at the same time.

Apart from the fact of there being no evidence of conspiracy, Americans find it even harder to believe that the Communists would use such an obvious and unreliable agent as Oswald or that extremists on the Right would enlist or trust a pro-Communist agent to do their work.

There is no evidence that Ruby was a tool of anybody but himself. He had no conspiratorial ties with extremists of either end. There could be no assurance that he would ever be in a position to do what he did.

It is clear that the American people will ponder the Warren Commission report calmly and attentively. It should not be held back.

Warren Commission Still at Its Big Job: Every Tiny Detail of Kennedy Assassination

By Dom Bonafede
Of The Herald Tribune Staff

WASHINGTON.

With painstaking detail, the Warren Commission investigating President Kennedy's assassination, is sifting every shred of evidence, aware that its final report will be an important page of history.

An estimated 45 witnesses ranging from Marina Oswald, Russian-born widow of suspect Lee Harvey Oswald, to FBI experts on hair and fibers have been heard by the commission at its Washington headquarters.

In Dallas, scene of the Nov. 22 assassination, a five-man team of attorneys have questioned more than 100 persons. These include witnesses to the shooting of Police officer J. D. Tippit, others who knew Oswald well and some whose lives only fleetingly touched his.

Transcripts of testimony are sent by special courier to Washington for perusal by a staff of investigators led by J. Lee Rankin, prominent New York attorney.

Following a mandate by the chairman of the blue-ribbon panel of inquiry, Chief Justice Earl Warren, most of the activities of the Commission and its staff are secret.

RUBY TO GIVE STORY

Nonetheless, it has been learned that Jack Ruby, convicted slayer of Oswald, may soon give a sworn deposition to investigators. The commission has been faced with the problem of how to question him without jeopardizing appeals that are pending or that may be filed in his case.

Unless there is a final adjudication in the Ruby case, it is likely his statements will not be included in the commission's public report.

Chief Justice Warren already has reported that some of the findings may not be released "for generations."

He has since retracted the statement, apparently under the pressure of an American public which demands the full story.

Although evidence compiled by the commission is under rigid security, a spokesman has clearly indicated that nothing has been uncovered to deflate the theory, proposed earlier by the FBI, that President Kennedy's killer was acting alone in obedience to a frenzied compulsion.

No clue, no matter how slight, which might suggest the assassin was the triggerman in an ideological conspiracy is overlooked. So far, however, the commission has found no evidence to support the possibility.

The Russians have been co-operative, the spokesman said, in providing data on Oswald during his stay in the Soviet Union.

He noted that Oswald was a brooder, a drifter and a loner, who confused undisciplined Marxist tendencies with breast-beating chauvinism.

CONCLUSIVE EVIDENCE

Witnesses before the commission have testified that Oswald tried to kill Right-wing extremist former Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker and once talked on killing former Vice-President Nixon. In each instance, he played a solitary role.

Allen Dulles, former CIA director and a commission member, noted that the Italian-made, mail-order rifle found on the sixth floor of the Dallas book depository "bore among others, fingerprints of Lee Harvey Oswald."

FBI specialists on hairs and fibers have told the panel that scientific deductions point to Oswald as the gunman.

Actually, the purpose of the commission is not to point a finger of guilt, but to assemble all the facts and present a cohesive picture of the background and events surrounding the assassination. In line with President Johnson's directives, the commission's report will be publicly released, excluding sections dealing with national security, to help dispel doubts which continue to nag many Americans.

It is unlikely the report will satisfy all Americans, or placate the romantics and the skeptics, or even answer all the questions concerning the assassination.

But it is the commission's intention to set the record straight as fas as it is humanly possible.

At least another month of testimony is scheduled. The writing of a comprehensive report is expected to take several more weeks.

When President Johnson appointed the seven-member commission Nov. 29 it was forecast the investigation would take about three months.

The commission, however, appears mindful that its work will be studied by future generations and is not simply a bit of contemporary history.

Warren Commission Staff May Question Jack Ruby

Deposition To Be Taken Within Next Few Days

By JIM LEHRER, Staff Writer

Preliminary arrangements have been made for Jack Ruby to give a sworn deposition in Dallas to a member of the Warren Commission and its general counsel, J. Lee Rankin, The Times Herald learned Friday.

The formal question-and-answer session will be held—probably within the next few days—in the Dallas County jail or at the Federal Building.

It could not be learned which of the seven members of the top-level commission will accompany Mr. Rankin from Washington for the questioning session.

Commission officials reportedly contacted Ruby's lawyers and Dist. Atty. Henry Wade to determine if either side had any objection to Ruby's talking to the commission.

Authoritative sources told The Times Herald that both the defense and the state have given permission.

If past procedures on depositions are used for the Ruby interview, a court reporter would be present to take down verbatim both the questions from the commission officials and Ruby's answers.

The session can be expected to take several hours.

The commission already has at its disposal a 40-page report of an interview with Ruby which was conducted by two agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation several weeks ago.

Still to be worked out is exactly where the commission-Ruby talks will be held in Dallas.

A security problem would develop if the defendant, now under a death sentence for the shooting of accused assassin Lee Harvey Oswald on Nov. 24, had to be taken from the jail to the federal building at Bryan and Ervay—eight blocks away.

For this reason, local authorities favor the jail itself as the site for the session.

Authoritative sources point out that the Ruby interview is not expected to preclude a later inspection trip to Dallas by the entire commission.

The Times Herald reported in an exclusive story two weeks ago that the full commission may come to Dallas for a look at the various sites involved in the assassination of President Kennedy and the subsequent deaths of Oswald and Officer J. D. Tippit.

Leaks From Warren Probe Arouse Public Speculation

By JOHN GEDDIE

The first week of the Warren Commission investigation in Dallas provided little more than speculation to the public.

A few facts, however, leaked through closed doors of the commission rooms.

And many of the facts have contributed to more speculation.

When the team of attorneys arrived, they indicated that investigation would primarily concern the assassination of President Kennedy and the murder of Patrolman J. D. Tippit. They did not mention the murder of Lee Oswald, which was witnessed by millions on television.

But the majority of witnesses interviewed have been Dallas policemen who witnessed the Oswald slaying. Many of these officers were previously interviewed by trained investigators — members of the FBI, the Secret Service and fellow officers.

They also have filed reports to the district attorney and a few testified at the Jack Ruby murder trial.

When asked about "duplication," persons close to the investigation reply that the Warren Commission agents—attorneys picked from private practice—are compiling trial-like testimony as opposed to written statements.

This is necessary, they say, to provide a complete history of the three days in November. And they add, although Oswald is dead, the finished Washington report will provide a trial-of-sorts, complete with a question-and-answer transcript.

Heavy interest in the Oswald shooting also is indicated by the City Hall basement mockup set up behind locked doors at the Federal Building. The replica of the shooting scene, flown in from Washington, is used by officers when they give testimony.

The City Hall shooting site is only a few blocks from the Federal Building. But the mockup, owned by the FBI, apparently is used to allow interviews in private.

The number of persons interviewed indicates the investigation may end well before the estimated "three or four weeks." If not, many more than the estimated "40 or 50" persons likely will be interviewed. Almost that number already have given sworn testimony.

Thus far the other half of the heavy emphasis of interviewing has been at Parkland Hospital. Dozens of doctors, nurses, orderlies and other employes have been interviewed.

The attorneys, who work at the office of U.S. Dist. Atty. Barefoot Sanders, toiled until almost midnight Thursday. During the day they meet witnesses in private. The daily list of persons interviewed is issued by Sanders.

Many of the names are well known as murder trial witnesses or police officers. Others turn out to be parking lot attendants or hospital workers. Others cannot be checked.

It is these unknown witnesses who may provide the only new evidence in the much-investigated events.

Friday's single witness was Huey Reeves. Reserve officers H. B. Holly, A. M. Criss, G. E. Worley, K. G. Croy and A. R. Breck made statements Thursday night.

ON THE RIGHT:

Trying to Guess Warren's Secret

By WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY JR.

I MAKE IT a point to ask those I meet who are concerned with the investigation by the Warren Commission into the death of President Kennedy: What can Mr. Warren have had in mind when he uttered those resonant words a month ago, that in our lifetime we shall not know some of the things the Commission has learned about the assassination?

BUCKLEY

There is no common guess. Different people give widely different guesses. The Chief Justice has given no satisfactory explanation for his enigmatic and provocative statement. But what an effect it has had! In Europe, it serves as the cornerstone of the belief which holds that the assassination was not simply the aberrational act of a lone killer, but rather a collective endeavor.

I have heard many versions of what Warren might have had in mind, as you undoubtedly have. Some are inherently preposterous (e.g., "It was a plot of the Dallas Police Department, and America is trying to save face by burying the story"); some heavily technical ("The security arrangements were loused up. The Secret Service knew all about Oswald, but neglected to run him in, and we dare not confess to this terrible act of negligence"); some churlish ("Warren had in mind disgraceful behavior by members of the Presidential party in the motorcade").

One answer I had from a former member of the Central Intelligence Agency strikes me as plausible enough to wish to share with you. My friend, intensively schooled in espionage, reasons as follows:

Oswald had spent many months in the Soviet Union, not because he liked the landscape there, but because he had declared himself in essential sympathy with communism. Granted that he tired of life in Minsk; but he never renounced his fidelity to communism. It is clear from his behavior on his return to this country, where he espoused the cause of Castro's Cuba, that his political allegiance had not changed away from communism.

That being the case, my friend said, the chances are overwhelming that before he left Russia the Soviet Union had recruited him as an agent.

It is important to understand just what this means. The recruitment of agents does not presuppose that one has in mind the execution of any particular act by that agent. It is often a purely routine matter.

A secret service, spotting a man sympathetic to one's government who is about to emigrate to the enemy country, will enter into a loose arrangement with him, redeemable at some future moment, when and if a suitable occasion should arise.

The Soviet Union might very well have recruited Oswald as an agent—in the sense of arriving at an understanding with him that if he might be found especially useful, the secret service would get in touch with him.

There are thousands of such persons in America, who have come in from behind the Iron Curtan, my friend advises me; and there are a number of such who have left the United States to live in Russia.

Consider, now, the event of Nov. 22, 1963. Kennedy shot dead and Oswald apprehended. Assume that the Soviet Secret Police search their records and find Oswald had been recruited as a secret agent. Suppose, further, that the Soviet government knew that United States counter-spies had penetrated the arrangement, and knew Oswald had been formally recruited; or that, if the U.S. government did not know it might find out about it imminently.

If we assume, as I most decidedly do, that the Soviet Secret Service did not give Oswald orders to kill the President, one can imagine the consternation in the Kremlin on the afternoon of Nov. 22.

Suppose their routine arrangement with Oswald were to become public knowledge! Imagine the public uproar in the United States!

Might not Khrushchev have communicated immediately with the new President to say: We confess we had Oswald as a stringer, but so help us, we gave him no order to assassinate the President of the United States. Johnson, almost surely, would have responded gratefully (why should he initiate his tenure with an apocalyptic confrontation with the Soviet Union as defendant in an act of magnicide)—and nervously (how profoundly important to keep away from the inflammable imagination of the American people, details of the formal connection between Oswald and the Kremlin).

That, the hypothesis suggests, is what Warren had in mind, when he spoke of the necessity that the American people wait a generation or so before they are told the background of the assassination.

ON THE RIGHT:

European Hysteria Over Dallas 'Plot'

By WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY JR.

SWITZERLAND: At Geneva yesterday a very famous Englishman was expatiating at some length on all the reasons why it is impossible to believe Lee Harvey Oswald killed Kennedy, or that the assassination was other than the work of a conspiracy of at least several persons.

BUCKLEY

Since the gentleman is a renowned Liberal, I thought to twit him by saying, "Your mode of reasoning is very much like that of the John Birch Society."

Without dropping a conversation semi-quaver (I should add that his timing is world-famous), he replied darkly, "Yes, I have no doubt the John Birch Society had something to do with it."

The obsession, in other words, was so much in command of him that he simply could not understand my point: that the thinking he was indulging is the kind one indulges when writing books like "The Politician," whose denouement is that Eisenhower was a member of the Communist Party.

Seemingly all of Europe has, as they say, gone ape on the theory that what actually happened at Dallas is very different from what the world is being led to believe; that Earl Warren has been selected to preserve the Establishment's script, and that almost certainly what lies behind it all is the existence of an anarchic-fascist conspiracy.

L'Express, for instance, which is a sort of semi-sick Leftist weekly in Paris, is halfway through the serialization of a most elaborate treatment of the Dallas story. After the third instalment, it says it is already established that (a) JFK was not shot by Oswald, but by someone lying under the overpass towards which the Presidential car was headed; (b) someone in the Dallas police force was in cahoots with Oswald, who was merely an accomplice, and let him slip out of the building even after the police cordon was tight; (c) someone in the Dallas police force then released a description of Oswald, which was a signal to accomplice Tippit to shoot down Oswald, in the process of which he inadvertently got shot himself; and (d) Ruby, another accomplice, was told to rub out Oswald before he talked. The assassination, then, according to this story, was principally an operation of Dallas policemen.

I give you an example of the ease with which stories spread in this sophisticated corner of the world, where so much fun is had at the expense of American provincialism.

Mark Lane is a New York attorney and Leftist who has adopted the Oswald cause as his very own. He finally talked the Warren Commission into granting him a hearing last week, at the end of which the president of the American Bar Association, designated to defend Oswald's interests before the Warren Commission, told Lane that all he had told the court was in effect a bunch of drivel that had already been in the newspapers."

One of the things Lane had said was that he had been "informed" that eight days before the assassination, Tippit, Oswald and Weissman (who had taken out the anti-Kennedy ad in the Dallas News on Nov. 22) had been seen together at Ruby's night club.

There is not a shred of evidence that any such meeting took place. But behold how the item is treated in Le Figaro, a respected Paris daily which has long been wondering how Tippit spotted Oswald in the first place:

"Here, then, is a piece of news that gives plausibility to a rumor, already old, but which last night was officialized on television. CBS has stated that a witness has just now declared to the Warren Commission that eight days before the assassination of the President, a mysterious reunion took place at the Carousel, one of Ruby's cabarets. Three men took part in it: Oswald, Tippit and Weissman."

And so an unsubstantiated rumor, put forward by a self-promoting Leftist, becomes an official statement on the basis of which Europe continues to build its fantasies. It is especially appalling, under the circumstances, that Warren should have made those remarks to the effect that not in our lifetime would we know some of the things Warren has found out. It is that kind of melodramatic pish-posh that encourages the mania that is overcoming Europe, beginning, as always, with the intellectuals.

WASHINGTON--THE WARREN COMMISSION INVESTIGATION INTO THE DEATH OF PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY STILL "IS LESS THAN HALF WAY THROUGH" MORE THAN THREE MONTHS AFTER THE INQUIRY BEGAN.

THE COMMISSION, HEADED BY CHIEF JUSTICE EARL WARREN, WAS SET UP SHORTLY AFTER THE ASSASSINATION OF KENNEDY ON NOV. 22, 1963 IN DALLAS.

THUS FAR THE BULK OF THE TESTIMONY HAS BEEN TAKEN FROM RELATIVES OF LEE HARVEY OSWALD, THE ACCUSED ASSASSIN WHO IN TURN WAS SHOT TO DEATH BY DALLAS STRIP-JOINT OPERATOR JACK RUBY.

A SPOKESMAN FOR THE COMMISSION SAID TODAY THAT MANY MORE WITNESSES WOULD BE CALLED AND THAT THE INVESTIGATION HAD NOT YET REACHED THE HALF WAY MARK.

Warren Probers Half Way Through, Plod Ahead Seeking to Get All Details

By the Associated Press

After three and a half months, the presidential commission appears to be half way through its investigation of the assassination of President Kennedy.

It has assembled hundreds of exhibits, including the rifle from which police say the fatal shots were fired and the windshield of the limousine in which Mr. Kennedy was riding in downtown Dallas when he was slain November 22.

It has talked to 17 witnesses, including the widow, mother, and brother of Lee Harvey Oswald, 24, the ex-Marine charged with Mr. Kennedy's death.

Oswald was shot to death in the Dallas jail two days after the President's assassination.

Will the commission call in those who were riding with the President when the shots rang out? They include his young widow, who held her wounded husband in her arms; Gov. John Connally of Texas, who also was wounded, and Mrs. Connally.

Johnson Nearby

Lyndon B. Johnson, then Vice President, and his wife were riding in the second linousine behind the President's.

Depositions or affidavits could be taken from those close to Mr. Kennedy. But commission members have declined to say what they will do.

The commission, created by President Johnson five days after Mr. Kennedy's death, has no deadline on its report.

~~It was~~ charged ~~to find~~ the truth as far as possible on the assassination and also the fatal shooting of Oswald.

Oswald's death, is now on trial in Dallar.

Chief Justice Warren, commission chairman, has said the timing of the report will be governed only by "whether we have ascertained all that can be learned."

Report Due

One member estimated the commission was a little less than half way through in gathering information. Another estimated it was a little more than half way.

After the evidence will come the careful process of writing the report. Some speculate it might come a year after the assassination; others say this summer.

The commission has the unreleased five-volume report of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. The FBI report is understood to indicate that Oswald was the hidden rifleman who killed Kennedy and to dismiss, any thory that he had help or accomplices.

One member has described recent days of testimony as tedious in detail.

The commission has photographs and charts and maps drawn to scale on which it pinpoints exact locations as witnesses testify.

Wants All Details

It obviously is trying to get everything into the record.

"For the future," one member said.

Its methods vary with the witnesses. For some, it lets them sit and talk as ~~long as~~ they wish — as they did with Mrs. Marguerite Oswald, mother of Lee Harvey Oswald.

Taking testimony from Mark Lane, New York attorney who says he represents the interests of Oswald, the commission interrupted Mr. Lane only occasionally.

The hearing with Mr. Lane was thrown open to the public at Lane's request. All other meetings have been behind closed doors.

20 to 25 on Staff

The commission has about 20 or 25 lawyers and secretaries on its staff, headed by J. Lee Rankin, a former solicitor general of the United States.

Its first meeting was December 5. The first witness was Mrs. Marina Oswald, 22, the girl whom Oswald married in Russia. She appeared for four days in February.

Commission members with Mr. Warren are: Senators Russell, Democrat of Georgia, and Cooper, Republican of Kentucky; Representatives Boggs, Democrat of Louisiana, and Ford, Republican of Michigan; Allen Dulles, former Agency, and John J. McCoy, head of the Central Intelligence New York banker.

When President Johnson created it, the White House said he was instructing the commission "to satisfy itself that the truth is known as far as it can be discovered and to report its findings and conclusions to him, to the American people and to the world."

WERE OSWALD AND HIS SLAYER LINKED?

President's panel turns to Ruby

Trotter

By Jack A. Smith

THE PRESIDENT's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy is expected to turn its attention to Jack Ruby now that the former nightclub operator has been convicted of slaying Lee Harry Oswald, the man accused of killing the President. The commission had refrained from openly investigating Ruby because of a possible conflict with his trial, which terminated March 14 when a Dallas jury sentenced him to death in the electric chair.

Among the commission's major points of inquiry will be the meeting that is said to have taken place in Ruby's Carousel Club two weeks before the assassination. Attorney Mark Lane, unofficial defense counsel for Oswald, informed the seven-member panel March 4 that three persons attended the meeting: patrolman J. D. Tippit, allegedly killed by Oswald an hour after Kennedy was shot on Nov. 22; Bernard Weissman, an ultra-conservative from New York who purchased an advertisement in a Dallas paper the morning of the assassination accusing Kennedy of being "soft on Communism," and a third person whose name was divulged to the commission in private. Weissman has denied being present.

The commission is also expected to inquire into speculation that Ruby and Oswald were acquainted—a persistent rumor in Dallas, even among some police officials, despite denials by District Attorney Henry Wade and the Federal Bureau of Investigation. A New York Times reporter noted March 15: "Some law enforcement officials in Dallas continue to believe that a connection was possible, but if so that it was personal and did not necessarily involve the assassination."

THE TRIAL: Ruby's trial did little to clarify the many contradictions resulting from the assassination. It is still unexplained why security precautions were so lax that Ruby was able to enter police headquarters to slay Oswald during his transfer to another prison. The murdered suspect himself was rarely mentioned during the trial, save for a rather belated reference to Oswald's civil rights by Assistant Prosecutor William Alexander:

"Oswald was a living, breathing American citizen," Alexander said March 13. "He was entitled to be tried by an American jury just as you, Jack Ruby." Oswald ceased being a living, breathing citizen exactly one day after Wade announced that his chief suspect was guilty, without benefit of trial, and the Dallas police chief said the case was closed. Ruby has insisted that he would not have shot Oswald had not Wade pronounced him guilty.

The commission took testimony March 16 from three military physicians who performed an autopsy on the President at Bethesda Navy Hospital the evening of the assassination. The still-secret report was leaked to the press a month after the murder, when it became apparent that an original report by doctors who treated the slain President in Dallas tended to destroy the FBI's hypothesis that Oswald was the "lone and unaided" killer. The Dallas report indicated that one bullet fired at Kennedy entered the throat, impossible under the police assertion that Oswald fired three shots at the Presidential motorcade from the Texas Schoolbook Depository, behind the President's car. The Bethesda report said all bullets entered from behind the President.

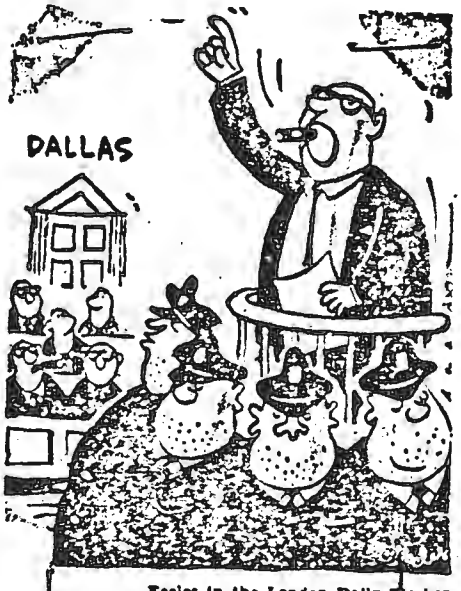
On March 10, the panel heard James Worrell, an eyewitness to the shooting, declare that he is convinced that four shots were fired, not three. "I don't care what anybody says," he told newsmen March 8, "I heard four shots." Worrell is one of several persons who were near Kennedy at the time who said they heard more than three shots. If more than three shots were fired, it would have been virtually impossible for Oswald to have been a lone gunman, considering the five-second sequence during which the action took place. Worrell also said he saw a man running near the building just after the shots were fired. During this time Oswald was observed on the second floor of the Depository with a soft drink in his hands.

Another witness, 14-year-old Amos Euins, previously told reporters that he also saw a man running near the building. Just before the hearing, however, he told newsmen he could not talk to them because "a Secret Service man said I'd be in real trouble if I talked."

NINE WITNESSES: Lane, speaking in San Francisco, revealed March 15 that he had collected statements from nine witnesses to the assassination indicating that the shots were fired from a knoll to the right and in front of Kennedy's auto. The Depository is to the right and behind. The hill is close to the railroad overpass from where, according to private investigators, the shots may have come. Among the witnesses was Rep. Henry Gonzalez (D-Texas), who later denied having made such a statement.

It is apparent that the Kennedy-Oswald-Ruby case is no more closed today than it was when Wade first proclaimed it so Nov. 23. Several journalists and other persons are conducing independent inquiries into the mystery. Thomas Buchanan, an American resident of Paris, is writing a series appearing in the French weekly, l'Express. The series will appear soon as a book. Buchanan postulates that the assassination may have been a plot which included members of the Dallas police force.



Eccles in the London Daily Worker

"And according to our experts, one man with two rifles fired three bullets four times with five bangs . . ."

An interesting sidelight to the articles has been the disappearance of l'Express from newsstands in New York and other cities. According to dealers in foreign publications, the issues of March 5 and March 12, containing the second and third Buchanan articles, never arrived. The dealers told the GUARDIAN they suspected that the newspaper had been confiscated. Checking with Paris, it was learned that the publisher had decided to withhold copies of the paper destined for newsstand distribution in the U.S., but had mailed copies to American subscribers as usual. Official reason for the action was said to be fear of libel, but libel would obtain—if such were the case—from the issues mailed to subscribers as well as newsstand copies. It is believed the publisher's decision represents a compromise with the French government, possibly after consultation with the U.S. government, intended to inhibit dissemination of the articles.

SOME DOUBTS: Another journalist, Leo Sauvage, New York correspondent for the French newspaper Le Figaro, has uncovered evidence tending to discredit some official aspects of the assassination. Writing in the March Commentary, Sauvage stated: "To the unbiased, critical mind, the case against him [Oswald] is a tissue of improbabilities, contradictions, and outright falsifications."

In Dallas, Sauvage questioned Roy Truly, director of the Depository, about how long it took for the first policeman to enter the building after the assassination. Truly answered: "It was as soon as the last shot was fired when I saw the officer come running. As a matter of fact, it was so soon afterward that I don't believe he was riding in the motorcade. He must have been off his motorcycle, standing nearby. Anyway, it was right away after the shots. I knew they were shots, but had no idea they were fired from the building. I thought the officer wanted to get to the roof for a better look and I immediately offered to show him how. We ran to the freight elevators in the back of the building because the front elevators do not go beyond the fourth floor, but the two freight cars had both been left somewhere on the top floors and we took the stairs, the officer ahead of me. When I reached the second-floor landing, the officer was already at the door of the lunchroom, some twenty or twenty-five feet away. No, I couldn't tell you exactly how much time it took, all this, but it wasn't long . . ."

DISTRICT ATTORNEY HENRY WADE
Still in Dallas limelight

Sauvage commented: "The obvious question, then, is whether there was enough time for Oswald—if he fired the shots from the front window on the sixth floor—to run to the staircase in the back (that is, on the opposite side of the building), hide the gun, and go down four flights of stairs to the lunchroom before the motorcycle policeman and Truly saw him there, not panting, not looking suspicious, and probably sipping a Coke, which means additional time for getting it out of the vending machine and opening it." In addition, of course, how did the policeman dismount from his cycle and enter so quickly?

The French correspondent also challenged another of the statements attributed to Oswald. Shortly before the shooting, according to police, a fellow worker asked Oswald whether he was going downstairs to watch the President pass by. Oswald is said to have responded, "I'll go down later; send the elevator back up to me." While in the Depository Sauvage discovered that the elevator was hand-operated and "could not be sent anywhere without an operator in it."

CLUES PLANTED? Sauvage interviewed Dial Ryder, the Irving, Texas, gunsmith who declared Nov. 28 that he mounted a telescopic sight on a rifle for a customer named Oswald. It later turned out that the rifle Oswald is said to have used was ordered from a Chicago mail order house, the owner of which stated that the rifle was outfitted with a sight when it was sent. Sauvage did not discount Ryder's claim, however. He wrote:

"Unlike other witnesses, Ryder did not say that he recognized or remembered Oswald, but only that he had come across a repair ticket with Oswald's name on it in his records . . . If Oswald was not Lee Harvey, and if there was some other Oswald in Irving or nearby in October, 1963, the police should find and produce him. If they cannot, and if it develops that someone who was neither Lee Harvey nor any real Oswald used the name of Oswald to get a telescopic sight mounted on a rifle by a gunsmith in Irving one month before the assassination of President Kennedy, a startling possibility would present itself—the possibility that clues leading to Lee Harvey Oswald were planted well in advance of the assassination."

Sauvage concludes: "I believe that the most important consequence of Oswald's death was not to close his mouth but to close his trial. For if Lee Harvey Oswald had ever had his day in court, with a good defense lawyer answering District Attorney Wade, cross-examining the Dallas police officers, and raking their witnesses over the coals, what might not have emerged?"

WASHINGTON--THE WARREN COMMISSION TODAY EXAMINED THE WINDSHIELD OF THE LIMOUSINE IN WHICH THE LATE PRESIDENT KENNEDY WAS ASSASSINATED.

THE WINDSHIELD WAS BROUGHT INTO THE COMMISSION'S HEARING ROOM WRAPPED IN A BLANKET. IT COULD NOT BE DETERMINED WHETHER THE WINDSHIELD HAD BEEN DAMAGED.

REP. GERALD FORD, R-MICH., CONFIRMED THAT THE WINDSHIELD HAD BEEN INTRODUCED AS EVIDENCE. BOTH HE AND SEN. JOHN SHERMAN COOPER, R-KY., DECLINED TO SAY, HOWEVER, WHAT THE COMMMISSION LEARNED FROM THE WINDSHIELD.

COOPER SAID SECRET SERVICE AGENT ROY H. KELLERMAN, WHO WAS RIDING IN THE FRONT SEAT OF THE KENNEDY LIMOUSINE WHEN THE PRESIDENT WAS SHOT IN DALLAS NOV. 22, WAS TELLING THE COMMISSION OF THE "EVENTS THAT WERE OCCURRING THAT DAY."

COOPER SAID HE DID NOT ANTICIPATE THAT THE COMMISSION WOULD COMPLETE THE TESTIMONY OF KELLERMAN'S FELLOW AGENTS, WILLIAM R. GREER, RUFUS J. YOUNGBLOOD AND CLINTON J. HILL, IN TODAY'S TESTIMONY.

GREER WAS THE DRIVER OF THE LIMOUSINE IN WHICH KENNEDY WAS SHOT. HILL, WHO HAD BEEN RIDING IN A CAR BEHIND THE PRESIDENTIAL LIMOUSINE, JUMPED ON THE BACK OF THE KENNEDY CAR AND SHOVED MRS. KENNEDY TO THE FLOOR TO PROTECT HER FROM THE ASSASSIN'S BULLETS.

YOUNGBLOOD WAS IN A CAR WITH THEN VICE PRESIDENT LYNDON B. JOHNSON, SEVERAL LENGTHS BEHIND THE PRESIDENTIAL CAR IN THE PROCESSION. HE COVERED JOHNSON WITH HIS BODY TO PROTECT HIM FROM THE ASSASSIN.

WASHINGTON--MARK LANE, A NEW YORK ATTORNEY, TOLD THE WARREN COMMISSION TODAY THAT HE HAD HEARD OF A MYSTERIOUS MEETING IN JACK RUBY'S DALLAS NIGHT CLUB EIGHT DAYS BEFORE PRESIDENT KENNEDY WAS ASSASSINATED LAST NOV. 22.
LANE, WHO CLAIMS TO REPRESENT KENNEDY'S ACCUSED ASSASSIN, LEE HARVEY OSWALD, SAID THAT HE WAS INFORMED THAT J. D. TIPPITT, THE DALLAS PATROLMAN SLAIN WHILE TRYING TO ARREST OSWALD, WAS ONE OF THREE PERSONS AT THE MEETING.
THE OTHER TWO, HE SAID, WERE A NEW YORK MAN WHO PLACED AN ANTI-KENNEDY ADVERTISEMENT IN A DALLAS NEWSPAPER THE DAY THE PRESIDENT WAS SHOT THERE, AND AN UNIDENTIFIED THIRD PERSON.
LANE'S TESTIMONY CAME AT THE FIRST PUBLIC HEARINGS HELD BY THE WARREN COMMISSION SINCE IT BEGAN, ON ORDERS OF PRESIDENT JOHNSON TO INVESTIGATE THE CIRCUMSTANCES SURROUNDING KENNEDY'S DEATH, AND OSWALD'S SUBSEQUENT SLAYING BY RUBY.

HE ALSO SAID HE WAS TOLD THAT A THIRD PERSON WAS PRESENT BUT SAID HE WOULD RATHER FURNISH THAT NAME TO THE WARREN COMMISSION IN CLOSED SESSION.
CHIEF JUSTICE EARL WARREN, WHO HEADS THE BLUE-RIBBON INVESTIGATING GROUP, SAID LANE COULD DO THAT AND HE CLEARED THE PUBLIC HEARING OF REPORTERS AND SPECTATORS TO RECEIVE THE EVIDENCE.
ASKED WHAT THE PURPOSE OF THE MEETING WAS, LANE REPLIED: "THEY WERE THERE FOR MORE THAN TWO HOURS, CONFERRING."
WARREN ASKED HIM IF HIS INFORMATION INDICATED WHAT THE MEN WERE TALKING ABOUT. LANE SAID IT DID NOT.
THE QUESTION OF THE MEETING WAS RAISED BY COMMISSION GENERAL COUNSEL J. LEE RANKIN FOLLOWING ABOUT TWO AND A HALF HOURS OF PUBLIC TESTIMONY BY LANE.
WARREN REJECTED LANE'S REQUEST TO SERVE AS OSWALD'S DEFENSE ATTORNEY BEFORE THE COMMISSION WITH THE RIGHT TO CROSS EXAMINE WITNESSES, PRESENT HIS OWN WITNESSES AND HAVE ACCESS TO THE COMMISSION'S DOCUMENTS.

Warren Commission Names Attorney to Represent Oswald

By GEORGE MORRIS

THE WARREN COMMISSION, reversing its position and apparently recognizing the widespread doubt in its handling of the Lee Harvey Oswald case, announced the appointment of Walter E. Craig, president of the American Bar Association, to protect the interests of the murdered man accused of assassinating President Kennedy.

In taking this action, the commission ignored Mark Lane, retained by Oswald's mother to represent her son. The commission had earlier informed Lane that Oswald was not on trial and that it would not be "useful or desirable to permit an attorney representing Lee Harvey Oswald to have access to the investigative material" in the commission's hands.

In making the announcement, Justice Warren said two months of the probe have "not caused the commission to doubt the reasonableness of the action of the authorities in charging Oswald."

Noting that Oswald having been killed is in no position to defend himself (precisely the basis upon which Lane sought to represent the accused man) the commission chose Craig for the task of "examining every facet of the case pointing toward the involvement of Lee H. Oswald, in his absence, and in fairness to his family advise the commission in that regard."

Apparently seeking to reassure many skeptical people, the commission promised it will leave "no stone unturned in faithfully reporting all the facts surrounding the assassination." Warren had earlier told newsmen some of the facts may not be known "in your lifetime."

The appointment of Craig and by-passing of Lane, raised the question whether the aim of getting a prominent juror for Oswald didn't correspond to the tactics of Justice Warren to front for a commission report that is expected generally to approve the FBI's and Dallas Police conclusions.

Lane insisting that evidence he has collected, strengthened doubts on Oswald's guilt, said the appointment of Craig "president of the ultra-conservative American Bar Association may raise more questions than it resolves." Lane asked if the naming of Craig means the commission will begin prodeedings "anew" now that the need for representation of Oswald is recognized. He also wondered whether the commission and Craig "developed an interest in evidence in my possession."

Lane renewed his earlier offer to cooperate with the commission and said his material is available to Craig.

The commission, in naming Craig (who is to assume a federal judgeship in the Arizona district) also by-passed Percy Foreman, of Houston, Tex., president of the National Association of Defense Attorneys, who was among the earliest to suggest that a defense counsel for Oswald is necessary to get to the truth.

The Warren Commission and Lee Oswald

The Warren commission's appointment of the president of the American Bar Assn. to represent the interests of Lee H. Oswald, President Kennedy's accused assassin, is a welcome development.

We are unimpressed by the criticism voiced in some quarters that Mr. Craig's presidency of the "ultra-conservative" ABA disqualifies him for this role.

His willingness to undertake the assignment is consistent with a long legal tradition in which men of conservative backgrounds have entered the arena of controversy and undertaken to defend the least popular causes.

If there are any large holes in the widely accepted thesis of Oswald's guilt, Mr. Craig's history will make his arguments especially impressive. We are sure he will perform his duties diligently.

The only question that may be properly raised is whether the commission should have initially refused to assign counsel to the accused dead man.

But its readiness to admit and rectify an apparent error is another sign that Justice Warren will vindicate the country's confidence. We believe the inquiry he is conducting will unfold as much of the truth as conscientious men can obtain in circumstances of almost unprecedented complexity.

For A Fair Probe

It has been discovered that the special assistant to the chief counsel to the Warren commission, which is investigating the assassination of President Kennedy, is a member of the Communist-front Emergency Civil Liberties Committee.

The legal adviser, New York University law professor Norman Redlich, freely concedes his membership on the ECLC, and says that he listed his affiliation on the form he completed when he joined the Warren commission. But whereas his affiliation with the Communist-front organization would seem to have crippled his effectiveness, or atleast called his objectivity into question, Redlich continued on the commission.

The ECLC was established in 1951. Although it represents itself as a non-Communist group, the House Committee on Un-American Activities charges that it "actually operates as a front for the Communist party . . .One of its chief activities has been and still is the dissemination of voluminous Communist propaganda material."

THE SENATE Internal Security subcommittee said, "To defend the cases of Communist lawbreakers, fronts have been devised making special appeals in behalf of civil liberties and reaching out far beyond the confines of the Communist party itself. Among these organizations are the .... Emergency Civil Liberties Committee. When the Communist party itself is under fire, these fronts offer a bulwark of protection."

Among the many reasons contributing to the ECLC's pro-Red designation:

One of its representatives was Frank Wilkinson, identified as a Communist party member by a former FBI undercover agent. Wilkinson was convicted of contempt of Congress and sentenced to one year in jail.

More than half of the 61 persons serving on ECLC's national council in 1957 had records of Communist party or Communist front affiliation.

Featured speakers at an ECLC Carnegie Hall rally in 1957, called to press for abolition of HUAC, were identified Communists Harvey O'Connor (chairman of ECLC) and Dalton Trumbo, a member of the Hollywood Ten, who had served prison terms for contempt of Congress.

The ECLC in 1958 placed an ad in a magazine, Monthly Review, announcing a contest in which a prize was offered to the writer of the best slogan in support of the abolition campaign. The prize was an original oil painting by identified Communist party member Rockwell Kent, who later made an extended visit to Russia, where he was made an honorary member of the Soviet Academy of Arts and where his paintings were exhibited in Sverdlovsk.

CONRAD J. LYNN, a member of the National Executive Commitee of the ECLC, served as defense counsel for Robert F. Williams, a member of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee, who fled to Cuba to avoid prosecution on kidnapping charges. Lynn also represented Carl Braden, an identified member of the Communist party.

Another ECLC member, Leonard B. Boudin, represented Waldo Frank when the latter petitioned the Supreme Court for a writ of certiorari in his suit against the secretary of state, who refused him a passport to lecture in Red China. Frank, chairman of the original organizers of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee, has a long history of association with Communist causes. He signed a contract in 1961 with Raul Roa, Cuban minister of foreign relations, to write a book on Cuba, for which he received $25,000 from the Castro government.

The book was published by the New York publishing firm of Marzani and Munsell. Both partners of the firm, Carl Marzani and Alexander E. O. Munsell, invoked the Fifth Amendment in 1956 in refusing to tell a congressional committee if they were members of the Communist party.

TRUE, NONE OF THIS proves that Redlich is Communist, or even a Communist sympathizer. But it does demonstrate a serious inability to recognize the character and purposes of persons with whom he is closely associated. Furthermore, the ECLC's intimate association with the Fair Play for Cuba Committee, to which Lee Harvey Oswald belonged, would seem to be reason enough to disqualify Redlich.

A good many Americans already believe that the choice of Earl Warren to head the commission was less the brilliant move it is said to be in some circles, in view of Warren's injudicious denunciation of "far right extremists" as the late President's assassin, even though by then it had been reasonably established that the assassin was a left wing extremist. We believe the presence on the commission of a member of the pro-Communist ECLC will further undermine public confidence in a probe whose integrity should leave not a scintilla of doubt in the minds of the American public.

He blamed American "right-wing extremists..."

He has never retracted that patently false accusation.

The hatred which assassinated our President was smuggled into the United States from Russia.

It is the Communists who preach and teach and practice hate.

Our government requires respect for the rights of others. Our Constitution shelters even the dissenters. Our whole philosophy of government under law is intended to implement "Do unto others..."

"Let us do all in our power to eradicate hate," says President Johnson.

All right, let's seek out its roots.

It is Communists who are schooled in hate.

Communists are taught to hate -- to hate God, to hate capitalism, to hate the United States, to hate you.

All available evidence tends to confirm that it was a Communist hater who killed our President.

Oswald was not taught to hate in the United States. He learned from the experts in hate -- in Russia.

So the President of the United States, if he would indeed "eradicate hate," must learn to recognize its breeding place.

Then he might wish to reconsider those policies which tend to strengthen the haters.

Certainly he will not want to hide our eyes from reality.

Surely it is not in our best interest to close our ears to truth.

Chief Justice Earl Warren heads the commission investigating the Kennedy assassination, but some of his commissioners are considering quitting; perhaps because it's being dragged on so long.

Or possibly they, as I, were made anxious by Mr. Warren's recent remark that some of the testimony may be sealed "in your lifetime."

All I can imagine this means is that Oswald may have been in the pay of the Russians but that, in the interest of United States foreign policy, you must not be told.

When an American U-2 was downed over Russia the plane was displayed and the pilot was paraded around the Soviet Union and torrents of propaganda issued forth from the government controlled red press fomenting hatred against the United States.

Is our press to be similarly controlled -- in reverse?

Are you and I to be told only what's good for the Communists?

While the world is methodically mesmerized by Communist lies, are we now going to hide the whole truth?

Does the chiefest jurist on our highest court intend to conceal evidence?

PRESIDENT'S COMMISSION

Brother of Oswald Testifies For Probers, Is 'Co-operative'

By MIRIAM OTTENBERG
Star Staff Writer

Robert L. Oswald, older brother of Lee Harvey Oswald, President Kennedy's accused assassin, was "very co-operative" today with the presidential commission investigating the assassination.

Allen Dulles, former CIA chief and member of the commission, told newsmen at the end of a three-hour questioning session that Mr. Oswald was co-operating in going through the story of his life with his brother.

Robert Oswald, 29, his brother's senior by five years, was less co-operative when he faced a crowd of newsmen. Looking apprehensive, he simply shook his head and said nothing.

His resemblance to his brother is strong. He is slight, sandy-haired and nearly six feet tall. His hands were plunged deep into the pockets of his short raincoat as he hastened away from the Veterans of Foreign Wars Building, where the commission has its quarters.

Accompanied by Lawyer

An attorney from Dallas accompanied him and every time the attorney left his side, Mr. Oswald looked lost.

Chief Justice Earl Warren, the commission chairman, opened the hearing and swore in the witness before hurrying away to open today's session of the Supreme Court.

The Chief Justice said he expected to take part in the commission's afternoon session after court recessed today.

Mr. Oswald, un-like his mother and his brother's widow, has not publicly expressed an opinion on whether his brother shot President Kennedy.

The closest he has come was in a comment soon after the commission was established.

At the time, he said only, "I'll let the official record say whatever it wants when it comes out. That will be my statement. Whatever it says will be the same as if I were saying it."

Women Here Previously

His mother, Mrs. Marguerite Oswald, has insisted on Lee's innocence while the accuesd assassin's widow has stated that she is forced by the facts to believe that Lee shot the President.

Both women preceded Robert Oswald before the Commission.

Today's witness came voluntarily at the commission's request and was not subpoenaed, Mr. Warren said.

Robert Oswald is associated with the Acme Brick Co. in Denton, Tex., near Fort Worth.

He and his older half-brother, Air Force Sergt. John Pic, 32, spent their boyhood in a Lutheran home for children from the time that Lee Oswald was a baby. Lee was with them in the home for two years but otherwise was with his mother until he enlisted in the Marines at the age of 17.

MRS. OSWALD SAYS SON IS SCAPEGOAT

Thinks He Was C.I.A. Agent 'Set Up to Take Blame'

By WILLIAM M. BLAIR
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12—The mother of Lee H. Oswald said today that she believed her son was a United States "intelligence agent" and that he was "set up to take the blame" for the assassination of President Kennedy.

She made the statement to newsmen as she finished three days of testimony before the Presidential commission investigating the assassination. She said she had told the same thing to the commission.

Chief Justice Earl Warren, commission chairman, said the 56-year-old mother had presented no evidence to support her belief that Oswald was an agent for the Central Intelligence Agency.

"She offered no evidence to that effect except her story and correspondence that she presented, taken together, leads her to the speculation—I use the word speculation, as she used it—that he was an agent."

"She has not given us any facts that would change the picture as we know it up to the time she testified," Mr. Warren said. "She did not profess to give us any facts that would prove anything in connection with the assassination.

"She did contend that the correspondence [with Oswald] that she presented and her own testimony taken together in their entirety present a much different picture than has been given to the public up to the present time. She says she believes her son is innocent, that it is possible that he committed the crime but that it also is possible that other people could have committed it."

The plump, matronly appearing woman, when asked for a statement, moved readily to microphones set before cameras in the lobby of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Building on Capitol Hill, where the commission met.

She had declined to make a statement until today on the advice of [illegible] John F. Dyer, who was appointed by the District of Columbia Bar Associatoin at her request.

"I still believe my son, Lee Harvey Oswald, is innocent," she began. She vowed she would "continue public appearances and an investigation" to clear her son "if it takes another year to do so."

The assassin, she contended, "is still at large."

"I realize that as a human being he [Oswald] could be guilty," she said, but added that she had given the commission "evidence" that her son was innocent. Some of the documents she said she gave the commission were of a nature "the commission did not know before."

She said she and Mark Lane, the New York lawyer whom she has said she retained without fee to defend her son, had "investigators all over." She also said that she had received 1,500 letters with information on the assassination, including some from foreigners, and that she would not pass on "any tips" to the commission.

'Set Up to Take the Blame'

Asked whether she had contradicted before the commission the testimony of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Marina Oswald, who told the panel she believed her husband had shot the President, the mother asserted:

"My daughter-in-law has the privilege of making her own statements and I have the same privilege of making mine."

"Lee Harvey Oswald was not the killer of President Kennedy and he was set up to take the blame," she went on.

In most references to her son, Mrs. Oswald used the present tense, such as "I believe Lee is an intelligence agent."

"My son was a scrapgoat," she said at one point.

"Who can prove he is not a C.I.A. agent?" she said. "He isn't going to say he's a C.I.A. agent, and the Government isn't going to say he is. Lee, being an agent, would not say so to anyone."

Chief Justice Warren said photographs that Mrs. Oswald had sought to present to the commission were of her family in "early life" and had no bearing on the assassination. She wanted the commission to accept them on the condition that the panel "not show them to anyone," Mr. Warren said, but the commission would not accept this limitation. She then said she would not introduce them because "they were valuable to her for use in articles or books that she might write."

Mr. Warren indicated that other witnesses would be called soon. But he said this would depend on when "certain witnesses can get here and when certain members of the commission can be here."

Asked about a report that a janitor in the Texas Book Depository Building in Dallas would be the next witness, Mr. Warren said: "Maybe they know. I don't know."

Oswald is alleged to have fired the shots that killed President Kennedy from a sixth-floor window of the building.

FIRST DEFENSE WITNESS

Oswald panel hears mother

LEE HARVEY OSWALD, the man accused of assassinating President Kennedy, was defended Feb. 10 for the first time before the Presidential commission investigating the murder. His mother, Mrs. Marguerite Oswald, appeared before the seven-member panel in an effort to prove her son was innocent.

Chief Justice Earl Warren, commission head, said after the first day that Mrs. Oswald's testimony was "helpful," but that it contained "nothing that would change the picture as I see it." The picture, presumably, is that drawn by the FBI in a still-secret report, though portions have been leaked to the press, alleging that Oswald was the "lone and unaided gunman" who assassinated the President.

Mrs. Oswald, appearing with a court-appointed lawyer, spent the first day discussing her son's history and their personal relationship. She promised to return with information that would contradict the official belief that Oswald was guilty.

LANE PRESENT: On Feb. 11 Mrs. Oswald again presented evidence after discussing it with the commission counsel and attorney Mark Lane. Lane had flown to Washington from San Francisco, where he had been on a speaking tour under auspices of the GUARDIAN and other groups.

Since Mrs. Oswald was represented by John F. Doyle of Washington, Lane did not appear officially before the commission, but submitted in writing two questions which she answered.

One concerned the nature of her confinement at a motel in Texas. At one point, she said, she sought to leave the motel and was escorted back to her room, with a Secret Service man holding her by each arm.

THE GUN: The second question concerned her discussion with Marina about Marina's questioning by the Dallas police Nov. 22 soon after Lee Oswald's arrest. She said Marina told her she was asked whether her husband had a gun. She answered in the affirmative. Then, when shown the alleged murder weapon, she was asked whether this was her husband's gun. Marina said, according to Mrs. Oswald: "I do not think that that is Lee's gun."

After his quick trip to Washington, Lane flew to Los Angeles for a meeting. He had spoken to 900 persons at a San Francisco meeting sponsored by the GUARDIAN Feb. 8 and to 1,000 students at an assembly at the University of California at Berkeley Feb. 10. Further speaking arrangements were scheduled for San Diego, Detroit, Cleveland, Milwaukee and Madison, Wis. His speaking tour will conclude with a Town Hall meeting in New York the night of Feb. 18.

CENSORSHIP HINT: The commission heard Marina Oswald testify the week before. If the wife's testimony, as described by Warren, provided no great surprises," statements by the Chief Justice himself certainly did. Warren's unexpected declaration that some facts about the crime "may not be released in your lifetime"—though later qualified—served to excite the very speculation that the commission was created to dispel.

Mrs. Oswald's four-day testimony confirmed earlier reports leaked to the press by the Secret Service: "She stated that while she did not like to believe her husband killed President Kennedy, the facts presented to her since the assassination would not permit her to reach any other conclusion," Warren said Feb. 6. The widow was first said to be convinced of her husband's guilt on Jan. 7, six weeks during which she was held incommunicado by federal agents.

According to Warren, the 22-year-old widow identified 145 exhibits, including the alleged murder rifle, during about 20 hours of questioning before the commission. She was accompanied by her lawyer and the Secret Service agents who have been her constant companions since Oswald was arrested a few hours after Kennedy was shot in Dallas Nov. 22.

The commission is charged with evaluating evidence submitted by the FBI and other police agencies indicating that the 24-year-old ex-Marine was the "lone and unaided assassin" of President Kennedy, and allegedly fired three shots at the Presidential motorcade from the sixth floor of the Texas Book Depository where he was employed. Following its investigation, which probably will last several more months, the seven-member panel is to "report its findings and conclusions" to the public. Warren's statement after the second day of Marina Oswald's testimony, however, indicates that certain of the commission's findings may be withheld if they concern matters of national security. Asked by reporters when the testimony would be made public, Warren said:

"Yes, there will come a time (when it is released). But it might not be in your lifetime. I am not referring to anything especially, but there may be some things that would involve security. This would be preserved but not made public."

MELVIN BELLI
A fair trial in Dallas?

He further emphasized his statement by adding, "And I mean that seriously."

On Feb. 5, Warren qualified his stand by stating he had been a little "facetious." He said his remark applied to only highly classified information and that "nothing of this nature has appeared."

LINK TO CIA? It is not known, of course, exactly what aspects of "national security" are involved in the Oswald case, though it is being increasingly speculated in responsible circles that Oswald was being trained as an undercover operative for the FBI or Central Intelligence Agency. If this were true and made public, it would generate widespread national distrust of America's "security" apparatus.

The trial of Jack Ruby, the nightclub operator who killed Oswald in Dallas two days after Kennedy was shot, is scheduled for Feb. 17. He will plead insanity. Defense lawyer Melvin Belli began calling witnesses Feb. 11 in a pretrial hearing in an effort to prove that Ruby would not receive a fair trial in Dallas.

In the last of a series of syndicated articles by Ruby, written with the assistance of reporter William Read Woodfield, the admitted executioner concluded: "Oswald was a dead man before I shot him." Ruby said he murdered Oswald after Dallas District Attorney Henry Wade stated that Oswald was guilty of killing Kennedy, indicating that he would not have done so had Wade not made his accusation.

'NATIONAL SECURITY' VS. THE FACTS ABOUT OSWALD

Presidential Commission: The men and the job

By Jack A. Smith

CHIEF JUSTICE Earl Warren's statement about withholding certain evidence gathered by the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy may have been an unintended disclosure. But his remark, which he himself excused as "facetious," may have revealed more about the approach of the seven-member panel than many of the official pronouncements issued by the commission since it was created by President Johnson Nov. 29.

Warren's statement did two things: (1) it strengthened the belief that matters of "national security" are indeed involved in the investigation of Kennedy's death, centering on the person of Lee H. Oswald; (2) it created further doubts that the story of the events in Dallas on the week end of Nov. 22 ever will be fully revealed.

President Johnson instructed the commission to "satisfy itself that the truth is known . . and report its findings" to the world. His ability to induce Warren to head the panel was a strategic move that overshadowed the nature of his other six choices—five conservatives and one liberal Republican.

CONFIDENCE: Moderate and liberal circles, usually wary of such a right-wing disproportion, immediately expressed confidence in the commission based on the Warren leadership and the selection of outstanding staff members (many of them with liberal reputations) to assist the conservative group. The Nation said Jan. 27:

"The confidence which we previously expressed in the Warren Commission has been strengthened by the announcement that J. Lee Rankin has been selected as counsel and that Norman Redlich, of the New York University Law School, will serve as Mr. Rankin's personal assistant."

King in the New York Daily News
Weird starting position

The same issue contained a recapitulation of reports that have appeared in several publications, including the GUARDIAN, concerning Oswald's possible connection with the FBI or Central Intelligence Agency. The article said, the commission "must tell us if the FBI or any other government intelligence agency was in any way connected with the alleged assassin."

QUESTION OF GUILT: Is the commission prepared to make public such information? In view of Warren's statement, it would appear that the panel would consider this against the national interest. It also seemed to feel that its job was not to find the assassin.

"The commission is not engaged in determining the guilt of anybody," said Rankin in rejecting a plea by Mrs. Marguerite Oswald that lawyer Mark Lane be allowed to defend her late son during panel hearings. But there is little doubt that when the commission issues a final report—as is expected, in basic agreement with FBI allegations — Oswald's guilt will have been stated.

After nearly three months, it appears that the commission's primary function is the formidable task of dispelling world-wide uneasiness about the circumstances surrounding the violent death of America's 35th President, rather than a disinterested exploration and exposure of the myriad circumstances that abound in the "crime of the century."

Earl Warren is but one of seven men —one of eight, actually, if President Johnson is included. These are the other six members of the Presidential panel:

• Sen. Richard Russell (D-Ga.), an arch-segregationist. Considered the most powerful man in Congress, he has the distinction of being personally responsible for delaying more civil rights legislation than any other senator. He is a close friend of Johnson. Soon after the Cuban missile crisis of 1962, Russell told a television audience:

"If we ever can completely assure peace in this hemisphere, we are going to have to get rid of Castro. I would be in favor of doing it now . . ."

Oswald is said to have been pro-Castro (though he attempted to contact an anti-Castro group in New Orleans and lied about his conection with Fair Play for Cuba). Would Russell be anxious to dispel the charge that the person accused of killing Kennedy had pro-Cuban sympathies?

Soon after Kennedy's impressive civil rights speech last June, Russell said:

"I hope that the American people will not be swept further down the road to socialism by the present unprecedented wave of propaganda [for civil rights]. To me, the President's legislative proposals are clearly destructive of the American system and the constitutional rights of American citizens."

Oswald is said to have been a socialist and an integrationist. Would it serve Russell's interests to doubt this?

• Allen Dulles, former director of the CIA, known as the "Master Spy." "Those who feel we can buy peace by compromise with Khrushchev are sadly deluded. Each concession we give him merely strengthens his position and prestige and the ability of the Soviet regime to dominate the Russian people." Dulles, brother of the late Secretary of State, has said nothing in the last five years that would alter this statement made in April 8, 1959.

Rabid foe of the "international Communist conspiracy," he has been described as "resolute, ruthless, ambitious and clever" by Bob Edwards, M.P., and Kenneth Dunne, English authors of A Study of a Master Spy.

Dulles is in a particularly sensitive position on the panel. One year after Oswald returned from the Soviet Union (he defected for two-and-a-half years, during the latter portion of which he said the Russians were holding him "captive" against his will) he applied for a passport to revisit the Soviet Union. He received his papers one day later. The swift State Department action, considering Oswald's past, and other evidence indicating that the former Marine's renewed interest in the Soviet Union was far less than sympathetic, have led many persons to conclude that he was preparing to return to the U.S.S.R. as a U.S. agent. If this were so, would Dulles not feel it his duty to suppress such information in the "national interest"? Even if one of his own colleagues desired to investigate this possibility, Dulles probably could succeed in quashing the move.

• Rep. Gerald R. Ford (R-Mich.), a major Republican voice in the House and friend of the FBI. Shortly after his nomination to the panel he said: "Congress should thoroughly investigate the Oswald types, the Communists, the Marxists, leftists and the pro-Castro elements in our country." Of all the members of the commission, Ford would appear least interested in establishing that Oswald may not have been a leftist. His statement also indicates a conviction that Oswald is guilty, a prejudgment other members managed to contain, at least publicly. Ford, "a certain FBI defender," according to columnist Doris Fleeson, will undoubtedly see to it that the FBI is criticized as little as possible in the commission report.

Several newspapers—and even Dallas police officials—have said that Oswald may have been approached by the FBI to work as a counter-agent. The agency has denied the charge, though it has left unanswered questions seeming to contradict its denial.

"McCloy feels his first task [as disarmament chief] is to find ways to make the balance of terror more stable," wrote Business Week (March 18, 1961). "Insofar as they can control the situation," McCloy has said, "the Soviet leaders wish to avoid general nuclear war, if only for selfish reasons." In order to reduce tension between the U.S. and U.S.S.R., he has written, the U.S. must build stronger alliances with NATO powers, politically, economically and militarily. He is considered a power in the Republican party.

• Rep. Thomas Hale Boggs (D-La.), the Democratic whip in the House and a segregationist. In 1954, the Louisiana Democrat signed an affidavit stating that he "was not and never had been a Communist." He was not asked to do this. Boggs said at the time that though he and others were aware that his patriotism was above question, he decided to sign the affidavit in case an opponent in a future election might attempt to smear him.

Boggs has consistently opposed civil rights legislation. In 1956 he was one of 83 representatives who signed the Southern Manifesto pledging "unqualified opposition to this iniquitous [civil rights] legislation." He is a leading advocate of a proposed constitutional amendment that would affirm that control of schools is a state rather than federal responsibility.

JOHN J. McCLOY

ALLEN W. DULLES

SEN. RICHARD RUSSELL

Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R-Ky.), who, with Warren, appears to be Johnson's concession to the liberals. Though once described as the archetype of the Eisenhower Republican during the early days of the former President's administration, Cooper soon gravitated toward support of progressive legislation far in excess of his party's leadership.

Warren, of course has shown himself to be a strong liberal during his decade on the Supreme Court. His decisions favoring civil rights for Negroes have earned him the enmity of segregationist groups. Immediately after Kennedy's assassination Warren noted that "such acts are commonly stimulated by forces of hatred and malevolence, such as today are eating their ways into the bloodstream of American life."

In attempting to define Warren's position on the panel, however, it must be remembered that Johnson was able to overcome the Chief Justice's reluctance to head the commission only when, as a final maneuver, he appealed to Warren's sense of patriotism. It is in this setting that Warren is in charge of the Presidential panel, not as the Chief Justice of the United States. In this sense it is easier to comprehend his remark about national security. Warren's court decisions lean toward individual rights in cases where these are balanced against national security. At the commission, he is wearing a different robe.

Immediate questions are whether these men are willing to question the motives and the competence of the FBI and the CIA in determining the guilt of Lee Oswald; whether they are willing to explore the political and psychological nuances that motivated the killer or killers; whether they are willing, if serious evidence is uncovered, to follow through with a meaningful, independent investigation, sparing no sacroscant interest in an effort to present the truth.

Oswald Is Not on Trial, Warren Tells Lawyer

By Robert E. Thompson
The Los Angeles Times

Chief Justice Earl Warren declared yesterday that Lee Harvey Oswald is not on trial before the Commission which is investigating President Kennedy's assassination.

Warren made the comment after rejecting New York attorney Mark Lane's bid to participate in the Commission's hearings as counsel for the late Oswald.

Lane, who contends that no evidence has been produced to prove Oswald the assassin, also made an unsuccessful attempt to represent Oswald's mother, Marguerite Oswald, during her second day of testimony before the Commission.

Warren permitted Mrs. Oswald to choose between Lane and Washington attorney John Doyle. After a prviate chat with Lane, Mrs. Oswald decided to stick with Doyle, who was appointed by the Washington Bar Association to represent her.

Lane then asked permission to sit in on the hearings as counsel for Oswald, the 24-year-old Marxist who was killed laast Nov. 24 while in police custody on a charge of assassinating the President.

The attorney's move was turned down, Warren told newsmen, because "this Commission is not prosecuting Lee Oswald, and Mr. Lane does not represent even the legal representative of Lee Oswald, who is his widow."

Oswald's Russian-born widow, Marina, proved highly cooperative during four days of testimony before the panel last week. She appeared with her own attorney, John Thorne of Grand Prairie, Tex.

As Lane left Commission headquarters, he told reporters he had instructed Marguerite Oswald to stress that:

• Marina Oswald had informed Dallas police a few hours after the assassination that the rifle that killed Mr. Kennedy "did not look like" the weapon owned by her husband.

• Marina was "brainwashed" by the Secret Service and FBI during the period that she was held in protective custody after the Nov. 22 murder of the President.

When asked about Mrs. Oswald's testimony yesterday, Warren suggested that reporters ask her directly, but Doyle advised her to make no comment until her part in the hearings is concluded.

Lane, however, reported the version he said Marguerite Oswald had given of events in Dallas within the chaotic hours after Oswald was arrested.

He said that after Marina's interrogation by Dallas police she told her mother-in-law: "Mama, they asked me if Lee owned a gun and I told them, yes."

When Marguerite Oswald asked Marina if the weapon was Lee's, Lane said the widow replied: "Mama, I told them I did not think so, because it did not look like Lee's gun."

On her final day of testimony last week, Marina Oswald identified the gun as the one owned by her husband.

But Lane insinuated that this testimony was the result of "a classic example of brainwashing" conducted by Federal agents during the period Marina was in their custody.

Oswald Commission

THE WIDOW OF THE ACCUSED ASSASSIN HAS BEEN IN SECRET SERVICE CUSTODY SINCE HER HUSBAND WAS SLAIN BY DALLAS NIGHT CLUB OWNER JACK RUBY.

"THIS TESTIMONY TENDS TO WEAKEN THE ONLY VALID INFORMATION GIVEN TO THE COMMISSION BY MARINA OSWALD," LANE SAID.

IN FACT, HE SAID, THE ONLY SUBSTANTIAL EVIDENCE DEVELOPED IN THE CASE TO DATE INDICATES OSWALD WAS NOT THE ASSASSIN.

TO SUPPORT THIS CLAIM, LANE CITED A MEDICAL REPORT BY THREE DOCTORS WHO TREATED PRESIDENT KENNEDY JUST BEFORE HIS DEATH AT PARKLAND HOSPITAL IN DALLAS.

HE SAID THE DOCTORS REPORTED THAT THEY INSERTED A TUBE INTO THE PRESIDENT'S THROAT THROUGH AHOLE CREATED BY A BULLET WHICH HAD STRUCK HIM FROM THE FRONT.

EYE WITNESSES TO THE ASSASSINATION SIGNED AFFADAVITS, LANE SAID, SAYING THEY BELIEVED THE FATAL SHOTS WERE FIRED FROM AN OVERPASS AHEAD OF THE PRESIDENTIAL CARAVAN, NOT FROM BEHIND WHERE OSWALD WORKED IN THE TEXAS BOOK DEPOSITORY.

IN ADDITION, LANE SAID, THERE IS A REPORT IN THE DALLAS POLICE FILES THAT NO NITRATE WAS FOUND ON OSWALD'S FACE AFTER HE WAS ARRESTED. THE NITRATE WOULD HAVE BEEN THERE, LANE SAID, IF OSWALD HAD FIRED A RIFLE.

HE SAID THE REPORT SHOWED NITRATE WAS FOUND ON OSWALD'S HANDS BUT THIS ONLY INDICATED HE HAD FIRED A HAND GUN.

THE FIERY ATTORNEY COMPLAINED TO THE COMMISSION THAT THE SECRET SERVICE STILL IS OPENING THE MAIL OF OSWALD'S MOTHER DESPITE HER OBJECTIONS. HE DID NOT ELABORATE ON THIS POINT.

ADD 1 MRS OSWALD, WASHINGTON (UPI-125)

IN ANSWER TO ONE OF THE QUESTIONS, LANE SAID MRS. OSWALD TOLD THE COMMISSION SHE SOUGHT TO ESCAPE THE PROTECTIVE CUSTODY OF THE SECRET SERVICE.

"TWO AGENTS WENT AFTER HER AND EACH TOOK ONE OF HER ARMS AND TURNED HER AROUND," LANE SAID. "SHE SAID ONE OF THE AGENTS DICTATED A REPORT OF THE INCIDENT TO A TAPE RECORDING MACHINE AFTER THEY RETURNED TO THE MOTEL ROOM WHERE SHE WAS HELD," LANE ADDED.

IN REPLY TO THE SECOND QUESTION, LANE SAID, MRS. OSWALD RELATED A CONVERSATION SHE HAD WITH HER DAUGHTER-IN-LAW, MRS. MARINA OSWALD, ON THE NIGHT OF THE PRESIDENT'S ASSASSINATION.

HE QUOTED THE YOUNGER MRS. OSWALD AS SAYING, AFTER AN APPEARANCE AT THE DALLAS POLICE STATION, "MA, THEY ASKED ME IF LEE HAD A RIFLE AND I TOLD THEM THE TRUTH. I TOLD THEM YES.

"THEN THEY ASKED ME IF I COULD RECOGNIZE THE RIFLE THEY HAD THERE. MAMA, I TOLD THEM I DONT THINK SO BECAUSE IT DIDN'T LOOK LIKE LEE'S GUN."

THE YOUNGER MRS. OSWALD APPEARED BEFORE THE COMMISSION LAST WEEK TO TELL WHY SHE IS NOW CONVINCED THAT HER HUSBAND SHOT PRESIDENT KENNEDY.

LANE SAID THE CONVERSATION SHE HAD WITH HER MOTHER-IN-LAW AT THE DALLAS POLICE STATION SHOWED THAT MARINA OSWALD HAD BEEN BRAINWASHED BY SECRET SERVICE AGENTS WHEN SHE APPEARED BEFORE THE COMMISSION.

Oswald's Mother To Resume Talk

WASHINGTON BUREAU

WASHINGTON—The Warren Commission members are most dubious of Mrs. Marguerite Oswald's attempt "to product evidence" of her son's innocence of the assassination of President Kennedy, The Times Herald learned Tuesday.

Chief Justice Earl Warren, who heads the presidential commission, has announced that Mrs. Oswald's testimony shows "nothing new that would change the picture as I see it."

The chief justice even added that the commission has learned Mrs. Oswald had no contact with her son, Lee Harvey Oswald, for "around a year" prior to the Nov. 22 assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

The stout, grey-haired mother flew into Washington Sunday night proclaiming she would produce evidence for the commission to prove her son's innocence.

She tried to speak to the press Monday after testifying before the commission but demurred after her lawyer, John Doyle of Washington, recommended against any statements.

Mrs. Oswald has told the commission about her son's life from his Russian stay until his death, Chief Justice Warren said.

But, we haven't discussed that," he said, when asked if Mrs. Oswald had claimed her son innocent of the assassination.

Oswald's Mother Flies to Capital

By KENT BIFFLE

Mrs. Marguerite Oswald—one of the few persons who don't believe her son killed President Kennedy—left for Washington Sunday to tell the Warren Commission why she thinks Lee Oswald didn't do it.

As cameramen and reporters crowded around her at Dallas Love Field, the 56-year-old Fort Worth woman made mysterious allusions to hopes of meeting with "someone at the White House." She wouldn't elaborate.

Mrs. Oswald was escorted to the airplane by four Secret Service agents.

Forrest Sorrels, special agent-in-charge of the Dallas Secret Service office, supervised as Mrs. Oswald boarded the plane.

One agent, identified as J. J. Hallett, accompanied her on the flight. An unidentified woman who boarded the flight was also thought to be a part of security precautions.

Mrs. Oswald in the past has often been critical of the jobs performed by federal agents, both before and after President John F. Kennedy's assassination here Nov. 22.

She had asked to testify before the Warren Commission. Last Thursday, the commission agreed to hear her. Since that time the Secret Service has maintained a vigil.

Mark Lane, the New York attorney who is representing the dead suspect, will meet with the mother in Washington, Mrs. Oswald indicated.

She said she hasn't worked since her son's arrest following the assassination. She said she has received $900 in gifts.

She has complained that she is barred from talking with her daughter-in-law. "I haven't seen Marina (Lee Oswald's Russian-born widow) since Thanksgiving."

Planning a book about her dead son, Mrs. Oswald said Sunday she would also "love to do a movie." But she said she hadn't been approached about this.

Mrs. Oswald said thus far she has never been questioned by the Secret Service or the Federal Bureau of Investigation. She said she has evidence the Warren Commission doesn't know about.

She indicated she was taking to Washington letters from and about her son. They will show "a different side of the boy," she said.

Mrs. Oswald said she planned to spend "several days" in Washington but would return to Fort Worth and continue to make her home there.

Why Is Inquiry Hushed?

One of the first pledges by President Johnson, after taking office, was that there would be a thorough investigation into all circumstances surrounding the assassination of President Kennedy, and the public would be given "all the facts."

A little more than two months later, Chief Justice Earl Warren, named by President Johnson to head a high-level investigation, has said that results of his inquiry "may not be released in your lifetime." Expanding, he said that the material might be kept secret "for decades."

Warren and his commission have been questioning Mrs. Harvey Lee Oswald about her husband's connection with the assassination. Little has been reported, beyond the indication that Mrs. Oswald has been "cooperative."

In addition to clamping a lid of secrecy not only on the investigation but also on eventual release of the findings, Warren has said the commission intends also to probe activities of the so-called "right-wing extremists" to discover possible "relationships" with events of last Nov. 22.

These are disturbing developments. A thorough investigation of the assassination and Oswald's movements has been conducted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, an organization known to leave no stone unturned. Results of the FBI investigation have generally been made public.

We thought the purpose of the Warren commission was to go beyond the FBI investigation so the greatest skeptic could be convinced beyond reason of doubt who assassinated President Kennedy.

Now the Warren commission has in the name of "security" refused to give the public the information it must and is entitled to have. If it does not release the testimony of Mrs. Oswald for a lifetime, the issue will be clouded for a lifetime. It also will tend to undermine public confidence in the FBI. Should, for example, the FBI continue to investigate?

And why is the Warren group investigating the so-called "right-wing extremists" in connection with the assassination? The FBI report definitely ties Oswald to the Marxist socialists. It proves his unquestioned connections with Russia.

Only genuine reasons of intelligence or security necessary to protect the American position can be reasons for keeping facts about Oswald from the public. If these facts include involvement with Russians, these, too, are public property, necessary for full understanding of motives.

It is hard to understand what real security reasons the commission could have for concealing facts about the assassination. Are Oswald's movements in the United States or his connection with radical leftist crackpots "security"?

Lee Oswald and his act on Nov. 22 are public domain. The public is entitled to know all about him.

Official Sources Deny Story Of Assassination 'Witness'

By HUGH AYNESWORTH

No substantiation could be found Sunday night for a newspaper story claiming that a witness was being held in protective custody and could identify Lee Harvey Oswald as the slayer of President Kennedy.

The Fort Worth Star Telegram said an informed source identified the witness as a Negro porter employed at the Texas School Book Depository on Nov. 22.

In its first edition, the newspaper claimed a janitor was at the next window to Oswald, watching the Nov. 22 parade, when he heard a shot "loud and close."

After publication of the story in its first edition for Monday morning, the source telephoned to offer several revisions in his original story.

One revision, the newspaper said, was that the man described as a witness was actually on the fifth floor at the time of the shooting which he heard and did not see.

In the revised statement he said that after the shots were fired he heard footsteps coming down the stairs and hid behind crates. The article claimed the janitor was "scared to death," and that he fled the building and surrendered to police, who charged him with vagrancy so they would have a reason to hold him. He reportedly was jailed in Dallas, then transferred elsewhere.

He reportedly will appear before the Warren Commission in Washington to tell his story.

Roy S. Truly, superintendent of the depository, said Sunday night, "The only janitor we have is still working there. I know nothing about all this."

After the newspaper's first edition story, Dallas Police Chief Jesse Curry said he felt there was no such witness.

"I've talked to the FBI and the Secret Service and they know nothing about it," he added. "I know for sure we didn't arrest anybody like this and Sheriff Bill Decker's office says the same thing.

"I feel sure we would have known something about it if there was a witness like this," Curry said.

"I've talked to them over there (Fort Worth) and they won't tell me their source—only that they believe it's reliable," he added.

Truly said only one person had left the employ of the depository since the assassination. He was a Negro order filler, who told The Dallas News that day that he was on the fifth floor looking out the window.

Three other employes told police they were with this man—on the fifth floor.

The Fort Worth story, appearing in Monday's paper, said the janitor was a man in his 30s. The one janitor at the depository is well past 50 and is still on the job.

A Justice Department spokesman, Edwin O. Guthman, said simply, "There is no truth to the story at all and no such witness exists."

WASHINGTON--TWO INDIANA REPUBLICANS TODAY CRITICIZED THE SECRET OPERATIONS OF THE COMMISSION INVESTIGATING THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY. D.C.

IN SEPARATE STATEMENTS, REPS. RICHARD L. ROUDEBUSH AND EARL WILSON TOOK VEHEMENT EXCEPTION TO A RECENT STATEMENT BY CHIEF JUSTICE EARL WARREN, CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMISSION. WARREN TOLD NEWSMEN SOME OF THE TESTIMONY MIGHT NOT BE RELEASED IN THEIR LIFETIME BECAUSE OF SECURITY REASONS.

"IF A PRESIDENT CAN BE MURDERED BY A COMMUNIST, THE ACCUSED ASSASSIN HIMSELF KILLED IN FRONT OF A NATIONWIDE TELEVISION AUDIENCE, THE AMERICAN PUBLIC IS ENTITLED TO AN OPEN HEARING UPON THE CIRCUMSTANCES SURROUNDING THESE EVENTS," ROUDEBUSH SAID.

"IT SEEMS A BIT LATE TO WORRY ABOUT 'SECURITY' WHEN THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE OF THE COUNTRY HAS BEEN KILLED IN BROAD DAYLIGHT IN FRONT OF THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE BY A KNOWN COMMUNIST AGITATOR AND CUBAN SYMPATHIZER."

WILSON CONTENDED NO CASE HAS BEEN MADE FOR THE SECRECY WARREN MENTIONED.

"IS THE REAL FORCE BEHIND THE ASSASSINATION THUS BEING PROTECTED?" HE DEMANDED. "WAS WORLD COMMUNIST ENGAGED IN A MASTER PLOT TO KILL OUR LEADER?

"THE AMERICAN PEOPLE ARE ENTITLED TO KNOW THE REAL FACTS OF THIS CASE AS SOON AS THEY CAN BE ASSEMBLED."

WASHINGTON--A NERVOUS MARINA OSWALD SUBMITTED TODAY TO A TELEVISED NEWS CONFERENCE AND SAID SHE STILL HAS NO IDEA WHY HER HUSBAND WOULD HAVE KILLED PRESIDENT KENNEDY.

"I AM SORRY BUT I DON'T KNOW WHY," SAID THE YOUNG RUSSIAN MOTHER, WIDOW OF ALLEGED KENNEDY ASSASSIN LEE HARVEY OSWALD.

MRS. OSWALD'S ATTORNEY, JOHN M. THORNE OF GRAND PRAIRIE, TEX., SAID THE PURPOSE OF THE BRIEF NEWS CONFERENCE WAS TO EXPRESS APPRECIATION FOR PRESS COOPERATION DURING HER APPEARANCE BEFORE THE WARREN COMMISSION THIS WEEK, AND TO MAKE CLEAR THAT SHE WAS A WITNESS AND NOT "A DEFENDANT" DURING THE FOUR DAYS OF TESTIMONY.

MRS. OSWALD COMPLETED HER APPEARANCE YESTERDAY BEFORE THE BLUE-RIBBON COMMISSION INVESTIGATING THE KENNEDY ASSASSINATION AND HER HUSBAND'S MOTHER WILL APPEAR MONDAY FOR QUESTIONING.

MARINA WORE NO LIPSTICK AND ALMOST NO MAKEUP.

REPORTERS ASKED THE YOUNG WOMAN MANY QUESTIONS ABOUT HOW HER HUSBAND ACTED PRIOR TO THE ASSASSINATION, WHAT HE SAID TO HER ABOUT PRESIDENT KENNEDY AND TEXAS GOV. JOHN CONNALLY, CRITICALLY WOUNDED IN THE NOV. 22 SHOOTING.

MRS. OSWALD'S MEAGER KNOWLEDGE OF ENGLISH WAS AN OBVIOUS HANDICAP TO HER. SHE SAID HER HUSBAND HAD NEVER SAID "ANYTHING BAD" ABOUT PRESIDENT KENNEDY OR MADE ANY REMARK TO INDICATE THAT HE WAS ANGRY WITH THE PRESIDENT.

EARLIER THORNE TOLD REPORTERS THAT OSWALD HAD READ HIS WIFE FAVORABLE ARTICLES ABOUT KENNEDY AND APPEARED TO REGARD HIM HIGHLY.

SHE SAID IN SEPTEMBER AND OCTOBER OF LAST YEAR HER LATE HUSBAND TALKED TO HER ABOUT GOING TO MEXICO BECAUSE HE WAS INTERESTED IN GOING TO CUBA TO LIVE. LATER, SHE SAID, THE IDEA WAS THAT HE MIGHT GO TO RUSSIA.

ASKED HOW SHE FEELS NOW ABOUT HER HUSBAND, SHE REPLIED:
"I AM VERY SORRY FOR LEE OSWALD. HE WAS MY HUSBAND."
ASKED ABOUT PRACTICE SHOOTING BY HER HUSBAND, SHE SAID, "HE DON'T TELL ME WHY."

SHE INDICATED THAT OSWALD DID NOT DO VERY MUCH PRACTICING. SHE SAID IT IS HER BELIEF THAT HER HUSBAND DID SHOOT AT GEN. EDWIN WALKER BECAUSE OSWALD TOLD HER HE DID.

ASKED WHY SHE DID NOT TELL POLICE AT THE TIME, SHE SAID SOFTLY: "BECAUSE I AM A WIFE."

SHE SAID OSWALD APPEARED NORMAL TO HER DURING THEIR LIFE IN THE SOVIET UNION BUT CHANGED WHEN HE CAME BACK TO THE UNITED STATES.

"I DON'T KNOW WHY," SHE SAID.

SHE SAID SHE WOULD LIKE TO BECOME AN AMERICAN CITIZEN, ALTHOUGH SHE DOES NOT KNOW EXACTLY HOW LONG SHE WILL HAVE TO WAIT. EARLIER THORNE EXPLAINED THAT THE WAITING PERIOD UNDER THE LAW WILL BE ABOUT THREE MORE YEARS. BUT HE SAID THERE IS HOPE THAT A PRIVATE BILL CAN BE CLEARED THROUGH CONGREESS GIVING HER CITIZENSHIP AT AN EARLIER TIME.

HE NOTED THAT REP. BRUCE ALGER, R-TEX., IS THE CONGRESSMAN REPRESENTING THE DALLAS AREA WHERE MRS. OSWALD LIVES. THORNE SAID HE HAD TALKED TO ALGER ON THE PHONE ABOUT THE MATTER, AND "THE IDEA DOESN'T FRIGHTEN HIM."

THORNE SAID THE $35,000 OR MORE" OF DONATIONS TO MRS. OSWALD AND HER TWO CHILDREN, AGED TWO YEARS, AND THREE MONTHS, HAS BEEN PLACED IN A BANK TRUST FUND WITH THE BANK AS TRUSTEE. THE YOUNGER CHILD, BORN IN THE UNITED STATES, IS A CITIZEN. THE OLDER ONE, JUNE, MAY DERIVE CITIZENSHIP FROM HER MOTHER IF SHE IS NATURALIZED BEFORE THE CHILD IS 16.

MRS. OSWALD EXPRESSED GRATIFICATION AT THE WAY SHE WAS TREATED BY CHIEF JUSTICE EARL WARREN'S INVESTIGATING COMMISSION. SHE SAID WARREN WAS "JUST LIKE MY GRANDFATHER."

MARINA ALSO SAID SHE KNEW OF NO ONE THAT COULD HAVE BEEN HELPING OSWALD ON NOV. 22.

THORNE SAID MRS. OSWALD IS INTERESTED IN HAVING A BOOK WRITTEN ABOUT HER EXPERIENCES IN ORDER TO INCREASE HER INCOME.

RIFLE IDENTIFIED BY MRS. OSWALD

She Says Husband Owned Assassination Weapon

By WILLIAM M. BLAIR
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6 — A rifle that authorities believe was used to kill President Kennedy was identified today by Mrs. Marina Oswald as the one that her husband had kept in their Texas home.

Chief Justice Earl Warren, chairman of the Presidential commission investigating the Nov. 22 assassination, disclosed the identification of the Italian-made weapon by the widow of Lee H. Owsald.

He also said that Mrs. Oswald, who was born in the Soviet Union, testified that her husband had used the fictitious name of "A. Hidell" in some activities when they lived in New Orleans last summer, before moving to Dallas.

That was the name under which the rifle had been purchased by mail from a Chicago sporting goods store.

"I did not like to believe her husband killed President Kennedy, the facts presented to her since the assassination would not permit her to reach any other conclusion," the Chief Justice said in a statement.

He added that Mrs. Marguerite Oswald, mother of the accused assassin, would testify Monday at her request. She has challenged the widow's statement that Oswals shot Mr. Kennedy.

The Chief Justice siad she had been invited to bring "with her such evidence as she has," and could have counsel.

In a Dallas radio interview Jan. 28, Oswald's mother said she felt sorry for the widow. She said she believed that the information on which Marina Oswald had concluded her husband was guilty had come from Secret Service agents guarding her.

"For a long time I have believed that a profound effort has been made to change her belief in Lee's innocence," Oswald's mother said then.

Calls Her Brave

Chief Justice Warren read a statement after the commission had wound up four days of questioning the 22-year-old Mrs. Oswald.

He said she had also identified about 145 exhibits gathered by Federal authorities, including some of her husband's clothing, letters and memorandums.

Asked if she had been upset or had broken down during the long identification process, the Chief Justice replied:

"She was very composed to ward the whole investigation. She is very tired. She is a very brave little woman."

In answer to questions, he said the commission had finishe with her testimony and had told her "she was free to go."

He said she had indicated she was "willing to come back" if the commission needed her.

He repeated that she had been "very cooperative" and had appeared voluntarily with her lawyer, John M. Thorne of Grand Prairie, a suburb of Dallas.

Weapon Described

The rifle found on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository Building in Dallas after Mr. Kennedy had been shot was brought to the commission by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

It is a 6.5-millmeter Mannlicher-Carcano equipped with a telescopic sight. A rifle of that description was ordered by Oswald, under the name of 'A. Hidell" from Kelin Sporting Goods of Chicago last March. The total cost was $19.95. There was a shipping charge of $1.50.

Mrs.Oswald previously had told authorities that a rifle matching a description of the alleged murder weapon had been kept by her husband in the garage of their suburban Irving home. It was there on Nov. 21, she said, but was gone the next morning.

Oswald was seen carrying a paper-wrapped package into the book warehouse, where he had been employed, the morning of Nov. 21. Authorities believe it contained the rifle.

Two days after Mr. Kennedy' assassination Oswald was shot to death in a Dallas jail house by Jack Ruby, a night-club operator now awaiting trial for murder.

Mrs. Oswald was questioned more than 20 hours by the commission's chief counsel, H. Lee Rankin of New York, former Solicior General. Chief Justice Warren said today that her counsel, Mr. Thorne, had participated in the questioning.

She "told of her life with Lee Oswald from the time she met him (in Russia) through the assassination, and also the events up to the present time," the Chief Justice said.

"She told about her childhood and her schooling, and life in the Soviet Union up to the time she met Lee Oswald," he continued. "She has filled in and elaborated on many things which she had previously described in interviews."

Mrs. Oswald, who appeared worn yesterday, seemed refreshed today. She posed for photographers as she left the commission offices in the Veterans of Foreign Wars Building near the Capitol.

She may remain here with her daughter, June Lee, 2, over the weekend. Another daughter, Rachel, 3 months is in Texas.

Mrs. Oswald has been escorted constantly by Secret Service agents, who accompanied her from Dallas. Mr. Warren has said that she is free to travel as she wishes, is not in protective custody and that she and her lawyer have asked that she be guarded.

She arrived for this morning's session almost simultaneously with Mr. Warren. The tall Chief Justice smiled at the slender, brown-haired widow and asked as they entered the elevator: "How is the baby this morning?"

"Fine," she replied with a smile.

All but one of the seven members of the commission have been present at the interrogation of Mrs. Oswald. Senator Richard B. Russell, Democrat of Georgia, has been occupied with meetings of the House and Senate Armed Services Committees. He is chairman of the Senate panel.

The text of Chief Justice Warren's remarks folow:

Mrs. Marina Oswald has appeared and testified voluntarily for four days before the commission. Her attorney, Mr. John M. Thorne of Grand Prairie, Tex., has sat with her and been available to her for advice at all times. He was offered an opportunity to ask any questions he desired of Mrs. Oswald. On occasions he did participate in the questioning. He has fully cooperated with the commission.

Mrs. Oswald has fully cooperated and with Lee Oswald.
she met him through to the present time. She about her childhood and schooling, and life in the Sovie

Union up to the time she met
Lee Oswald. She has filled in and elaborated on many things which she had previously described in interviews.

Mrs. Oswald has identified the rifle that was found on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository Building in Dallas immediately after the assassination as the one which her husband kept at their home prior to the assassination. She also testified that while they lived in New Orleans, during the summer of 1963, in some of his activities he used the fictitious name of A. Hidell, which was the same as that under which the rifle was purchased from a mail-order house in Chicago.

She stated that while she did not like to believe her husband killed President Kennedy, the facts presented to her since the assassination would not permit her to reach any other conclusion.

The commission announces that Mrs. Marguerite Oswald, the mother of Lee Oswald, has requested that she be allowed to testify before the commission and produce evidence that she has.

She has been invited to appear here and testify on Monday Feb. 10, 1964, at 10 A.M., and bring with her such evidence as she has. She agreed to testify at that time. She has also been informed that she may have her counsel present and that he may interrogate her.

Oswald's Widow Tells How Husband Changed

By the Associated Press

Mrs. Marina Oswald said today her husband became "abnormal" after returning from Russia in 1962 and practiced sighting his rifle in the months preceding the assassination of President Kennedy on November 22.

In an interview with a small group of reporters, the widow of Lee Harvey Oswald said she realized his abnormality after an attempt on the life of former Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker in Dallas on April 10.

Questioned as to why she did not immediately tell police about the sniper attack on Mr. Walker—which she said Oswald described to her—the slim Russian-born widow said:

"Because I am his wife."

Speaking in low-pitched, halting English, Mrs. Oswald said she did not know why her husband fired the rifle shots in Dallas that killed Mr. Kennedy and wounded Texas Gov. John Connally.

MARINA OSWALD

Practiced Sighting

She made it plain she believed Oswald did do the shooting.

Before the assassination, she said, Oswald had never spoken against Mr. Kennedy to her. As to whether he might have been aiming at Gov. Connally, she said, "I don't know."

Though Mrs. Oswald spoke of her husband's practicing with the rifle, her attorney told reporters later that she had not fully understood the question.

He said she did not know actually about any target shooting practice but had seen Oswald sighting the rifle, aiming it, adjusting the sights and otherwise familiarizing himself with the weapon.

The 22-year-old mother of two said she hopes to become an American citizen, improve her knowledge of English and history, educate her children—but not remarry.

When asked whether she had been treated fairly by the presidential investigating commission headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, she failed to understand the word "fairly."

plained that the question meant whether she felt the interrogators treated her well, whether she liked Justice Warren.

Her face lit up in a smile, and she said: "Oh, yes—just like my grandfather."

Mrs. Oswald said her husband, a 24-year-old ex-Marine sharpshooter, went to Mexico City on September 26—less than a month before the assassination — because he wanted to get a visa to live in Cuba.

He also had planned, she indicated, to go to Russia after Cuba. Oswald had met her in Russia, where he went in October, 1959, and tried unsuccessfully to become a Soviet citizen.

She said that she knew after he brought her to this country, that Oswald practiced rifle-shooting—not very often, but "sometimes."

"Was your husband an angry, a violent man?" a reporter asked.

"He was a normal man," she replied.

"Did you feel that it was normal to shoot at Gen. Walker?"

"That was not normal . . . to shoot at anybody."

And when a reporter inquired whether she felt it was abnormal to have shot at the Texas conservative leader, she agreed that it was abnormal.

Oswald was normal when she met and married him in Russia, the widow said, but he changed after they came back to the United States—"I don't know why."

She said she has no wish to talk to Oswald's mother, Mrs. Marguerite Oswald of Fort Worth, who on Monday will be the second witness before the Warren commission.

As for why she does not want to talk to her mother-in-law, the young woman said with a gesture of helplessness: "It is too much bad for me."

The 56-year-old mother of Oswald has described the charges that her son killed Mr. Kennedy as "trumped up."

The young widow, however, said she was "sorry" for Oswald, did not understand why he shot the President but is convinced he did.

Mrs. Oswald, who yesterday completed four days of testimony before the commission investigating the assassination, faced reporters at a televised news conference.

She seemed weary but was poised and friendly. She wore a white blouse and a chartreuse jumper dress, and before the interview began she smoked a cigarette nervously.

She sat at a table in front of reporters, flanked by Mr. Thorne, and her business adviser, Jim Martin, a Dallas man who is helping her with her financial affairs.

Occasionally she could not understand a question, because of her limited knowledge of English. Then her advisers would explain it to her and she would answer. Her answers were brief and came, generally, without hesitation.

As to her future plans, she said she had no plans to move to another State.

"I love Texas," she said.

She hopes she may be able to resume the pharmacy profession she had practiced in Russia.

"I love my profession," she said.

After the interview was over, she chatted for a few minutes with the reporters.

Then, with something like a sigh of relief, she said, "Now I go to church."

Chief Justice Warren announced late yesetrday that Mrs. Marguerite Oswald has asked to appear before the commission. The senior Mrs. Oswald has insisted that her daughter-in-law has, in effect, been brainwashed by the Secret Service during the months they have protected her since the assassination on November 22.

The younger Mrs. Oswald's four days before the commission ended at 5:40 p.m. yesterday. A short time later, Chief Justice Warren told the press some of the details of Marina's appearance.

"Mrs. Oswald," said the chief justice, "has fully co-operated and told of her life with Lee Oswald from the time she met him, through the assassination and also the events up to the present time. She told about her childhood and her schooling and life in the Soviet Union up to the time she met Lee Oswald. She has filled in and elaborated on many things which she had previously described in interviews."

The chief justice said that Mrs. Oswald had identified the rifle found on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository in Dallas immediately after the assassination as the one which her husband kept at their home prior to the death of President Kennedy.

Oswald's Widow, Tired by the Inquiry, Confirms Statements She Made

By WILLIAM M. BLAIR
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5 The Presidential commission investigating the assassination of President Kennedy has found the testimony of Mrs. Lee H. Oswald "consistent with her earlier stories" but in greater detail.

Chief Justice Earl Warren, the commission chairman, told of this consistency at the end of the third day of intensive questioning of the widow of the man accused of killing the President.

The 22-year-old widow appeared worn and tired as she emerged late this afternoon fro the commission headquarters in the Veterans of Foreign Wars Building near the Capitol. Mr. Warren confirmed that she was tired, saying he had made that observation to her as she left.

He said Mrs. Oswald had explained that her 2-year-old daughter, June Lee, whom she brought with her, slept in the daytime and then would not sleep at night. He said Mrs. Oswald was not able to get to sleep beofre 2 o'clock this morning.

Mrs. Oswald has not yet begun identifying exhibits, including the rifle that killed President Kennedy.

Hopes to Complete Testimony

The rifle and other exhibits were carried into the commission offices and taken out again this afternoon by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Mr. Warren said he expected that the exhibits would be identified tomorrow, when he hopes to complete the intrerrogation of Mrs. Oswald.

"We've practically completed everything from her birth up to the present time except for a few tag ends," he said.

No other witnesses have been scheduled to appear, he said, although there may be a dozen or more in the weeks ahead. He declined to say whether Jack Ruby, the Dallas night club operator who shot Oswald in a Dallas jail would be called.

"We haven't touched anything of the Ruby thing," he said, "because of the trial." He confirmed that he discussed the Ruby situation in "general terms with the Dallas authorities two weeks ago.

Ruby is charged with murder under Texas law and is awaiting trial. He shot Oswald two days after the assassination of President Kennedy last Nov. 22.

Mr. Warren also declined to discuss whether the commission had gone into any possible political indoctrination Oswald might have been given by the Russians in a stay in the Soviet Union from 1959 to 1962.

Questioned on Diary

Asked for more information on the Oswald diary he had mentioned yesterday, the Chief Justice said that the little book was "more of a handbook." It contained, he said, some names, memorandums and a telephone number "here and there."

He was also asked if he was satisfied with the progress of the inquiry. He replied that he was and that "the staff is assembling material in a workable fashion and we're moving right along."

Twelve lawyers have been sifting a mass of material including Secret Service and F.B.I. reports. Mr. Warren has declined to estimate when the commission would complete the inquiry.

He said again today that, as far as he was concerned, all testimony would be made public at the time the commission made its report. However, he said that the commission had not discussed this matter as yet.

The matter arose again today because of confusion over his remark on Monday to newsmen that some testimony might not be released "in our lifetime" if it involved national security. So far, he said, the commission has found nothing of a security nature.

Open the Assassination Hearings

THE Constitution guarantees public trial for anyone accused of crime. The inquiry into the assassination of President Kennedy, headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, is as close to a trial as the late Lee Harvey Oswald is going to have. For this reason, if for no other, the inquiry should come out from behind closed doors.

There are other reasons of even more practical importance. Rumors and gossip persist as to the manner and motive for the assassination—even rumors that others were involved and have not been brought to justice.

In our opinion, these rumors are without foundation. The basic facts of guilt seem well established; but the public shouldn't be left in any doubt. Always, perhaps, there will be those who believe what they believe and aren't much interested in facts, but these should be kept to a minimum.

For the persistence of baseless legend think back to the assassination of Lincoln and the secrecy which surrounded prosecution of the suspects. For going on a century, even after John Wilkes Booth might have been assumed to have died a natural death, many believed him still alive, even reported seeing him in various parts of the country. Such rumors are divisive, encouraging irresponsible gossip of wrongdoing in high places.

The Warren Commission proposes hearing witnesses in secret, withholding findings until it is ready with a final report. In essence, this means the public will have to take the commission's word for many developments. Distinguished men who are high in the public confidence make up the commission but, in our opinion, they are taking on a needless responsibility. In requiring the public to depend on their summary, they ask too much.

Obviously it will not be practical to conduct all their deliberations and study of documents in public. But at least the principal witnesses should testify in public, so that the nation's legitimate interest in this great national tragedy be satisfied to the fullest extent possible. This public testimony, of course, should be timed to avoid influencing the trial of Jack Ruby for the killing of Oswald.

We respectfully suggest, the commission should reconsider its closed-door decision.

President's Protection Within Scope of Probe

By MIRIAM OTTENBERG
Star Staff Writer

The President's commission investigating the assassination of President Kennedy expects to make firm recommendations dealing with the future protection of Presidents along with its findings on the tragedy in Dallas.

The broad authority granted in the executive order establishing the seven-man commission is considered sufficient to allow the bipartisan group to take what it considers a constructive approach.

The recommendations dealing with the future will be based on the commission's analysis of the past. Thus, the commission wants to know in detail what happened in Dallas —the events leading up to the assassination as well as the subsequent slaying of the suspected assassin—before it gets around to making recommendations for preventive measures.

Painstaking Care Shown

Then, the commission will be able to tell the public that, after carefully considering what is already thousands of pages of data, it has arrived at certain suggestions.

These suggestions could range from improved physical protection to improved communication among Federal agencies.

The very considerable prestige of the commission members and the painstaking care shown in reaching their findings are regarded as sufficient to win backing for what it recommends.

President Johnson's apparent care in selecting the commission members is being acknowledged as the commission settles down to the long job of analysis and evaluation.

The commission is not only carefully balanced as to Democrats and Republicans but as to experience in local, national and international spheres. The four legislators are all highly respected on both sides of the aisle and the three others— including the chairman, Chief Justice Warren are internationally known.

Their varied background already are emerging in the areas of investigation they want to pinpoint.

Although they have a growing staff to study the mass of data, the individual commissioners are playing an active role in reviewing much of the material themselves.

Both affected Government agencies and the Dallas police have now submitted not only their reports but also a tremendous amount of the raw materials on which the reports are based — statements from witnesses, laboratory analyses and documents dealing with the Russian and Mexican visits of Lee Harvey Oswald, the accused assassin later slain.

Close to a dozen lawyers, working under the direction of former Solicitor General J. Lee Rankin, are now in the process of examining this material — what it tells and what it doesn't tell. Their role at this point is similar to that of the prosecutor preparing for trial who finds gaps in an investigator's report and sends him back for more answers.

The commission has no investigators assigned to it. Instead, the procedure is to request additional data from the agency concerned.

Some Overseas Work

Some work will be done overseas in the process of eliminating some of the theories that have been voiced since the assassination.

Hearings will be held to develop specific points but, as of now, the commission intends to work behind closed doors. Unless future developments necessitate a change, there will be no public hearings.

No target date has been set for the commission's final report, but it is not expected to be ready for at least four and probably six months.

President's Commission on Kennedy Assassination Will Hear Jack Ruby; Also Hold Hearings across Country

By Victor Riesel

Washington, D.C.: -- Despite the public's belief that the security reports on the assassination of John Kennedy are virtually all completed, the case of the double killing still appears wide open.

Special FBI agents are tracking down every one of jaunty Jack Ruby's connections in many cities. They are not satisfied that they have them all. Federal men in the Bureau and Secret Service, working with the Central Intelligence Agency and State Department "security" people, are retracing the movements and background of Lee Harvey Oswald and his widow.

Another investigatory force will be the President's Commission on the Assassination of John F. Kennedy. It has not yet swung into action in its 12-room headquarters covering the entire fourth floor of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Building at 200 Maryland Av., N.E., which is sort of cater-cornered from the Supreme Court.

When it does so, early in the year, under the direction of the Nebraska-born, 56-year-old legal scientist J. Lee Rankin, it will conduct investigations of its own on several levels. It will not have an investigation division, but will draw on government agencies as it wishes.

The Commission already has established a permanent liaison with the Justice Dept. This is maintained by Assistant U.S. Attorney General Howard Willens, who is second in charge of the Criminal Division of the department. He has been peeled off from "Justice" and is spending full time at the Commission headquarters.

Commission members themselves will probe into the assassination instead of doing an armchair research job. They will go into the field singly and in groups and it is fully expected that the entire commission will eventually sit in Dallas. There appears to be no doubt that they will talk at great length with Ruby, the cocky killer of the alleged assassin.

That will come after the trial, it can be presumed. Some insiders expect a swift court session for Ruby. Then, Ruby will be placed under oath by the commission and will testify as a regular witness. The commission has the power to issue subpoenas.

Digging into Oswald's "fuzzy Marxism," (a State Dept. description) will hardly be difficult for either former CIA director Allen Dulles, or for the commission's chief counsel J. Lee Rankin. The latter, while solicitor-general, argued for the U.S. in the Supreme Court on the Communist passport and Communist Party membership cases under the Smith Act.

Back in April 1955 Rankin wrote a scholarly treatise on the question of trading in surplus agricultural commodities with Soviet bloc countries.

All sides, including the highest bar association circles, consider him one of the finest and most objective legal minds in the land.

Aiding him and the commission will be two groups of lawyers. One set will consist of six or eight senior attorneys. They are being chosen geographically, as well as for their legal accomplishments and erudition. They will sift and analyze all federal agency reports -- and whatever is found under the commission's own direction.

"These will be mature men," I was told, "with large experience in trials and investigation and evaluation. They cannot yet be identified. During the early stages they will be fulfilling their obligations to their own clients. They will interrupt their personal work, however, to cooperate with the commission.

"In later stages [redacted] will be at commission headquarters a good deal of the time.

"They are chosen not only geographically but for their varied experience. They have trial experience in criminal cases. They will attempt to evaluate evidence and discover additional areas of inquiry. There is great detail of information in certain areas. This always indicates to trained legal people possible additional questions and situations where doubts could arise which need to be examined.

"We need to see if this evidence and these details support what has been reported, or are incorrect.

"Sometimes such evaluation leads to entirely new facets."

There will also be a junior group of six or seven lawyers. They will spend full time and will devote themselves to the preliminary analyses and collating of the vast amount of information and documents already pouring in. There also will be the necessary stenographic help.

There is no timetable. President Johnson did not fix any deadline. The commission will function as long as it believes there is a single new fact to be found and an elusive nuance to be interpreted.

The Report On Oswald: A Question

By Dom Bonafede
Of the Herald Tribune Staff

WASHINGTON.

The blue-ribbon panel of inquiry appointed by President Johnson to investigate the assassination of President Kennedy is deeply concerned lest its findings become politically explosive.

It was learned yesterday that a priority item in discussions held by the seven-man commission, headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, involves the timing of the final report, principally whether to release it before or after the political conventions this summer.

The commission reportedly is aware that findings critical of various U. S. agencies in the preparation and handling of President Kennedy's fatal trip to Dallas Nov. 22 and the investigation of his assassination could serve a purpose beyond the original objectives.

Conceivably, such a report could provide fuel for Republican assaults against the Administration, and it could prove troublesome for President Johnson.

Also, any impasse among commission members or disagreement between the commission and the governmental agencies involved in the case, such as the FBI and Secret Service, would reflect upon the administration.

The decision as to when the report will be publicly released will be up to the President. He appointed the commission Nov. 29 with instructions to "satisfy itself that the truth is known as far as it can be discovered."

The White House press announcement state the panel was "to report its findings and conclusions to him (the President), to the American people and to the world."

The executive order sent to the commission, however, directs the panel only to report to the President.

Since the commission is operating under the executive order, the report would be handed directly to the President and left to his discretion as to when it would be publicly released.

The four bipartisan Congressional members of the panel are said to favor release of the report before the conventions. The Republican national convention is scheduled July 13, and the Democratic convention Aug. 25.

It was further learned that some members of the commission, especially those from Congress, have indicated a preference for operating in secrecy without issuing interim reports or press releases. The press ban includes granting interviews and answering questions concerning the commission's work.

Chief Justice Warren reputedly has taken a less vigorous stand on the issue than that of the Congressional representatives but has agreed to go along with the majority. Arguments that the commission's work was in the public interest failed to carry.

After the FBI last month released to the commission its confidential report on the investigation, it was believed that the commission would release an abridged version to the public. That is highly unlikely now.

The commission's staff, headed by chief counsel, J. Lee Rankin, New York attorney and former U.S. solicitor general, has the huge task of evaluating the work of numerous agencies that participated in the investigation at local, state and Federal levels.

The staff, including a dozen or so prominent attorneys recruited by Mr. Rankin, will not attempt to conduct an investigation on its own in the recognized police style.

But witnesses will be interviewed and reports studied and checked against others to determine the accuracy of each. The first duty of each staff member is to read an estimated 8,000 pages of data.

The staff will further attempt to measure the efficiency of the FBI and Secret Service in the case.

Generally, the commission hopes to determine the facts but will not judge Lee Harvey Oswald, the probable assassin.

It is now certain the panel's mission will take considerably longer than expected.

For its first three meetings, the commission went to the National Archives Building. Since then it has acquired its own headquarters, comprising one floor of the Veterans of Foreign Wars building located near the Supreme Court. The commission tentatively plans

Besides Chief Justice Warren, members are Sen. Richard B. Russell, D., Ga.; Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R., Ky.; Rep. Hale Boggs, D., La.; Rep. Gerald Ford, R., Mich.; Allen W. Dulles, fromer director of the Central Intelligence Agency, and John J. McCloy, former disarmament adviser to President Kennedy.

Mr. Warren Tries His Hardest Case

By Marquis Childs

IN A decade tumultuous if not revolutionary, as old faiths and old creeds have been shaken everywhere in the world, there has been at least one constant. It is the solid, resolute figure of the Chief Justice of the United States, Earl Warren of California.

During his 10 years of service as the head of the third and coordinate branch of Government the court has been at the center of the racial storm. Time and again new ground was broken in a period when the executive branch hesitated or evaded in the face of fierce pressures for change from every part of the country.

In December of 1953, when he had been on the Court only two months, arguments were heard in the case of Brown vs. the Board of Education. On May 17, 1954, a unanimous Court under the leadership of the new Chief Justice handed down one of the most momentous decisions in its history. The ancient doctrine of "separate but equal" for Negro schools was rejected and integration of the public school system of the Nation ordered with "all deliberate speed."

Underscoring the decade on the Court, and the vilification it has earned the Chief Justice in some quarters, is the new and onerous task he has reluctantly taken on. Two distinguished emissaries came to see the Chief Justice shortly after John F. Kennedy's assassination. They brought word the new President believed it was imperative that he be chairman of a commission to investigate every aspect of the crime.

THE argument was that only an independent tribunal of the highest standing could dispel the ugly rumors current around the world about the assassination and the murder of Lee Harvey Oswald. The Chief Justice heard them out. He then told them that with profound regret he must decline the assignment, citing the deep feeling, going back to the origins of the Court when a Chief Justice and an Associate Justice took diplomatic assignments in Europe, against outside activity by members of the Court.

Less than an hour later the President himself was on the phone and shortly after that the Chief Justice sat across from Mr. Johnson in the office to which the new President was still so unaccustomed. Chief Justice Warren went again over the reasons he could not and should not head the commission of inquiry.

"You've worn the uniform of your country, haven't you?" the President asked. "If I were to ask you to put it on again you would do it, wouldn't you? That's what I'm asking you to do now."

There was, of course, no refusing a request put that way and the Chief Justice agreed to head the panel of first-rank citizens examining all the facts of the tragedy. While it includes once again highly controversial issues, involving sit-down demonstrators in the South, the case load of the Court this term is fortunately normal. After next week the Court will not hear arguments for a full month and the Chief Justice expects to devote his full time to the work of the commission.

ABLE lawyers of high repute from around the country have been recruited to sift the voluminous reports that have come from the FBI, the Secret Service and many other sources. They will present what will be in effect briefs on various aspects of the case. No consideration had been given, despite reports to the contrary, to holding public hearings, since sensation and publicity are the last things the commission seeks.

Warren's acceptance of the chairmanship has brought on new attacks from the rabid right and even from certain mass circulation newspapers. The line is that since the Court has been "soft on communism" no honest report can be expected. This comes from the same groups that have called for his impeachment. When he appeared in New York in October to receive a legal honor pickets lunged at him and Mrs. Warren with their placards.

But the solid citizen from California, who has taken a workmanlike view of the law with no pretensions to legal flourishes during his decade on the Court, is outwardly unperturbed. Rarely has any man coming to Washington in high office shown so few signs of Potomac fever. He has not been afraid to side with the minority as in the civil liberties cases decided by five to four against a number of individuals. His armor is apparently a sense of duty done in taking decisions, however unpopular, in an era of unprecedented change.

President's Commission on Kennedy Assassination
Will Hear Jack Ruby; Also Hold Hearings across Country

By Victor Riesel

Washington, D.C.: -- Despite the public's belief that the security reports on the assassination of John Kennedy are virtually all completed, the case of the double killing still appears wide open.

Special FBI agents are tracking down every one of jaunty Jack Ruby's connections in many cities. They are not satisfied that they have them all. Federal men in the Bureau and Secret Service, working with the Central Intelligence Agency and State Department "security" people, are retracing the movements and background of Lee Harvey Oswald and his widow.

Another investigatory force will be the President's Commission on the Assassination of John F. Kennedy. It has not yet swung into action in its 12-room headquarters covering the entire fourth floor of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Building at 200 Maryland Av., N.E., which is sort of cater-cornered from the Supreme Court.

When it does so, early in the year, under the direction of the Nebraska-born, 56-year-old legal scientist J. Lee Rankin, it will conduct investigations of its own on several levels. It will not have an investigation division, but will draw on government agencies as it wishes.

The Commission already has established a permanent liaison with the Justice Dept. This is maintained by Assistant U.S. Attorney General Howard Willens, who is second in charge of the Criminal Division of the department. He has been peeled off from "Justice" and is spending full time at the Commission headquarters.

Commission members themselves will probe into the assassination instead of doing an armchair research job. They will go into the field singly and in groups and it is fully expected that the entire commission will eventually sit in Dallas. There appears to be no doubt that they will talk at great length with Ruby, the cocky killer of the alleged assassin.

That will come after the trial, it can be presumed. Some insiders expect a swift court session for Ruby. Then, Ruby will be placed under oath by the commission and will testify as a regular witness. The commission has the power to issue subpoenas.

Digging into Oswald's "fuzzy Marxism," (a State Dept. description) will hardly be difficult for either former CIA director Allen Dulles, or for the commission's chief counsel J. Lee Rankin. The latter, while solicitor-general, argued for the U.S. in the Supreme Court on the Communist passport and Communist Party membership cases under the Smith Act.

Back in April 1955 Rankin wrote a scholarly treatise on the question of trading in surplus agricultural commodities with Soviet bloc countries.

All sides, including the highest bar association circles, consider him one of the finest and most objective legal minds in the land.

Aiding him and the commission will be two groups of lawyers. One set will consist of six or eight senior attorneys. They are being chosen geographically, as well as for their legal accomplishments and erudition. They will sift and analyze all federal agency reports -- and whatever is found under the commission's own direction.

"These will be mature men," I was told, "with large experience in trials and investigation and evaluation. They cannot yet be identified. During the early stages they will be fulfilling their obligations to their own clients. They will interrupt their personal work, however, to cooperate with the commission.

"In later stages they will be at commission headquarters a good deal of the time.

"They are chosen not only geographically but for their varied experience. They have trial experience in criminal cases. They will attempt to evaluate evidence and discover additional areas of inquiry. There is great detail of information in certain areas. This always indicates to trained legal people possible additional questions and situations where doubts could arise which need to be examined.

"We need to see if this evidence and these details support what has been reported, or are incorrect.

"Sometimes such evaluation leads to entirely new facets."

There will also be a junior group of six or seven lawyers. They will spend full time and will devote themselves to the preliminary analyses and collating of the vast amount of information and documents already pouring in. There also will be the necessary stenographic help.

There is no timetable. President Johnson did not fix any deadline. The commission will function as long as it believes there is a single new fact to be found and an elusive nuance to be interpreted.

JFK Inquiry To Be Divided Into 6 Parts

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (AP) The staff of the Federal Commission probing President Kennedy's assassination will divide its work into six areas of inquiry, The New York Times reported today.

A group of lawyers from around the country has been gathered to handle five of the six inquiry subjects, the newspaper reported. The commission's counsel, J. Lee Rankin, who outlined the plan in an interview, said he will have charge of one topic.

The inquiry subjects, according to the story, are:

1. Details of the late Lee Harvey Oswald's activities on the day of the assassination. Oswald had been charged with the crime before he was slain in a Dallas police station by nightspot operator Jack Ruby.

2. Ruby's activities and background.

3. Oswald's life and background, with the exception of . . .

4. Oswald's career in the Marine Corps and his stay in the Soviet Union.

5. Oswald's murder, including the controversy over how it was allowed to happen.

6. The procedures used to protect President Kennedy. This will involve a scrutiny of the Secret Service, the FBI and the Dallas Police, and the influence, if any, of Dallas hate movements, if any.

Holds Rep. Ford Disqualified Self as Oswald Case Prober

The following letter was sent to the Detroit Free Press on Dec. 12. It has not yet been published

Editor, DETROIT FREE PRESS:

If Congressman Gerald R. Ford (R., Grand Rapids, Mich.) was correctly reported from Washington to have linked "Oswald types, the Communists, Marxists, leftists, and the pro-Castro elements in our country" with the dastardly assassination of President Kennedy, he has certainly disqualified himself from serving on the presidential investigative commission. (See Detroit Free Press dispatch in Dec. 9, 1963 issue.)

When President Johnson appointed him a member of this body, despite his notorious support of ultra-Rightist views and causes, the nation had a right to expect Congressman Ford to withhold any judgments until all the evidence had been assembled and thoroughly analyzed. His new position as investigator should have imposed some judicial self-restraint upon him. Instead, he hastened to vent his political prejudices in public — before any official examination got under way — and proposed to "get on the record all possible background information on these individuals and groups," in a manner reminiscent of Hitler's outlawry of those he chose to brand as "dangerous persons."

Unless challenged by democratic-minded Americans, such arbitrary actions and attitudes can only discredit and undermine assurances of liberty for all our people. An example of this pernicious influence was displayed in Detroit recently when the city police arrested, and held in "protective custody" for several hours, four Negro pickets at the Thanksgiving Day parade. No offense was even charged, other than carrying civil rights signs which the authorities claimed might displease some onlookers.

Freedom not only permits, but requires, that an alert citizenry speak out in protest against these violations of the democratic process.

Warren Panel to Consider Brief in Oswald's Defense

The Warren Commission has promised to give "appropriate consideration" to a New York lawyer's brief raising points in behalf of Lee H. Oswald, the accused assassin of President Kennedy.

The lawyer, former Assemblyman Mark Lane, said yesterday that he was pleased with this response. He added it was "likely that I will be in contact with the Warren Commission within the next week or 10 days in relation to additional information which I recently gathered in Dallas," site of the assassination.

President Johnson created the commission, headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, to investigate the slayings of both President Kennedy and Oswald. The panel's reply to Mr. Lane was written by its general counsel, J. Lee Rankin.

Warren Commission . . . By Roscoe Drummond

The Task Is Broadened

THE WARREN COMMISSION to investigate the assassination of President Kennedy is undertaking a far more wide-ranging and independent inquiry than most Washington observers expected.

Drummond

It would naturally take as its point of departure the exhaustive and competent report of the FBI, which held that Lee Harvey Oswald committed the crime and was not a part of any conspiracy.

But the Commission is not accepting any set of premises and is not embracing even tentative conclusions until it makes its own additional investigations.

This means that the panel:

- Will be sending its own counsel and staff to interview sources already questioned by the FBI and the police.
- Will follow up any fresh leads with its own investigation in addition to using the FBI.
- Will take testimony from witnesses who will be brought to Washington for questioning by the Commission.

ALL OF this emerges as a more formidable task than most members of the Commission thought when they accepted President Johnson's appointment. Some expected it would take two months, nobody figured more than six. Now those close to the group are saying it will be a year before a report can be rendered.

This lengthened timetable shows how thoroughly the Commission intends to do its work. Mr. Johnson gave it a very broad charter and the members are giving the charter a broad interpertation.

Neither Chief Justice Warren nor Chief Counsel J. Lee Rankin have publicly laid out the boundaries of the inquiry. But in light of the months the the Commission plans to devote to its job, it is logical that the questions to which it will seek answers will include these:

Who was the assassin and what was his motive? Is the evidence conclusive beyond a reasonable doubt?

Did the assassin act by himself or was he assisted by others? Was there any evidence of a collective plot?

Could the assassination have been prevented? Was the Secret Service in any way at fault?

Wherein did the Dallas police do well and wherein did they do badly — before and after the assassination?

Is there evidence to support the "seeds of hate" theory? That is, that political controversy in the United States has so long been overburdened by violence and name-calling (a kind of mental assassination) that the very climate was conducive to actual assassination? Is there any evidence to suggest that the assassin was influenced by this climate?

What are the constructive lessons to be drawn for the whole Nation from the factual findings of the commission?

THERE IS no doubt in my mind that the Commission is going to do an outstandingly good job. I have only one reservation on an aspect of procedure. The report is that the panel plans to take some testimony in public hearings.

I venture to suggest that a better investigation will be conducted if it is held entirely in private until the final report is issued.

This is not a trial. It is an extra-legal inquiry to obtain and assess evidence in a case which cannot go to trial. It seems to me that it would be misleading and harmful to have the information which the Commission will be collecting coming out piecemeal at periodic public sessions.

All of the evidence on which the Commission bases its findings should be made public in the end—but not in bits and pieces. The value of this investigation will be only incidentally in the evidence it produces; its value will primarily be the assessment of all the evidence by the Commission — whose members have the highest credentials.

Focus on FBI

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is for the first time in its long career itself under investigation.

This is the net effect of the manner in which the Warren Commission is conducting its investigation of the assassination of President Kennedy.

The commission is not simply accepting the FBI's report at face value but is demanding the material upon which it is based. It intends obviously to go behind the report.

It is significant in this regard that the Justice Department has expressed privately its "disappointment" with the FBI report, fearing that it has "left too many questions unanswered."

Mark Lane, a prominent New York defense attorney, has submitted to the Warren Commission a brief on the Lee Harvey Oswald case in which he says the investigation that put the blame for the assassination on Oswald was either "so poor as to be incredible" or was based on a "particular conclusion" (Oswald's guilt) at the time it began.

"The FBI," says Lane, "having completed its investigation, has submitted what amounts to its findings and conclusions as well. The verdict, deftly and covertly divulged to the press, then blared forth throughout the world, is impressively simple: 'Oswald is the assassin. He acted alone'. This remarkable law enforcement and investigatory agency, unable to solve a single one of the more than 40 Birmingham bombings, is now able to function as investigator, prosecutor, judge and jury. No other American agency has presumed to occupy so many positions of trust at one time."

The essential problem, says Lane, is that ". . . no investigating agency can fairly evaluate the fruits of its own work." The commission would appear to agree.

Lane goes on to note:

"The FBI investment in a Warren Commission finding identical with its own cannot be emphasized too boldly. Should the Warren Commission reach and publish a conclusion substantially different from the one submitted publicly by the FBI, public confidence in the FBI would be so shaken as, in all likelihood, to render the FBI as it is now constituted, almost absolutely useless. One can assume that the FBI wishes to avoid that result."

Indeed, the vast efforts of the FBI to achieve a solo solution of the Sinatra kidnaping would indicate a frantic effort to rehabilitate a national image already tarnished by the ghastly events of Dallas.

Chief Justice Earl Warren, whom Lane describes as "a fair and great American," faces a difficult job in guiding his commission through what the attorney describes as a "sea of hatred and malice . . . in its search for the truth."

It does indeed. And its task has not been made any easier by the FBI — which fosters an image of tight-mouthed secrecy but still is not above "leaking" its views and thus engaging in trial-by-headline. And, as the record in many cases shows, the agency is capable of out-and-out falsehood — its version of the events in connection with a demonstration against the House un-American Committee in San Francisco on May 13, 1960, being a case in point.

It is hoped that the Warren Commission will be zealous and uncompromising in its search for truth. If that truth is adverse to the FBI, then there is hope that — as a by-product of this tragedy — the nation may be delivered from the tyranny of this secret police force that seeks to be investigator, prosecutor, judge and jury.

KENNEDY ASSASSINATION

Attorney Slawson to Join Probe Unit

By TOM GAVIN
Denver Post Staff Writer

David Slawson, a Denver attorney active in Colorado politics, has been selected as one of six young lawyers who will work with the special commission named by President Johnson to investigate the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Slawson, 32, left for Washington Friday to undertake duties expected to last from three to six months.

ALL ASPECTS

The seven-member panel inquiring into all aspects of the assassination, and the slaying of the presumed assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald, is headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren.

Slawson will work on one of six phases of the inquiry as a member of a staff headed by J. Lee Rankin, solicitor general in the Administration of former President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The six younger staff members, each selected on basis of scholastic excellence in their respective law schools, will each work with an older attorney on a single phase of the massive investigation.

Slawson said Thursday he still does not know to which phase he will be assigned. One will cover every detail of Oswald's activities on the day of the assassination, Nov. 22. Another will be into Oswald's background generally. Still another will cover the accused killer's Marine Corps service and stay in Russia.

Other separate phases of the investigation: Oswald's murder in Dallas. The background of Jack Ruby, who shot Oswald in the Dallas police station. Procedures used to protect the murdered president, which will include an inquiry into actions of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Secret Service, and the Dallas police.

Slawson, who was just made a partner in the Denver law firm of Davis, Graham and Stubbs (formerly known as Lewis, Grant and Davis), emphasized that his assignment is temporary and that he will return to Denver upon its completion.

Although Slawson was active in the slain president's pre-convention campaign for delegate support in 1960 here, he said his selection had no political basis. He was recommended to Rankin, he said, by a former associate on the Harvard Law Review.

"A" AVERAGE

Slawson earned an "A" average and was graduated from Harvard's School of Law magna cum laude in 1959. He also earned summa cum laude honors from Amherst College in 1953, when he was graduated with a bachelors degree in mathematics, and studied theoretical physics at Princeton University under a National Science Foundation fellowship.

The Denver lawyer will be paid $75 a day while working with the special commission.

Other panel members, in addition to Chief Justice Warren, are Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga.; Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky.; Rep. Hale Boggs, D-La.; Rep. Gerald Ford, R-Mich.; John J. McCloy, former high commissioner for Germany, and Allen Dulles, former Central Intelligence Agency director.

NEW YORK--LEE HARVEY OSWALD, ACCUSED ASSASSIN OF THE LATE PRESIDENT KENNEDY, SHOULD BE DEFENDED BEFORE THE WARREN COMMISSION "IN THE INTEREST OF THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES," A LEADING TEXAS CRIMINAL ATTORNEY DECLARED TODAY.
PERCY FOREMAN OF HOUSTON, PRESIDENT OF THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF DEFENSE ATTORNEYS, SAID, "THERE'S NO OTHER WAY, IN MY OPINION, THAT THE EVIDENCE IN THIS CASE CAN BE PROPERLY EVALUATED."
HE PARTICIPATED IN A TELEVISION PANEL SHOW ("THE LAW AND LEE OSWALD"--CBS) WITH PROFESSOR PAUL FREUND OF HARVARD LAW SCHOOL; LEON DOUGLAS, STATE PROSECUTING ATTORNEY BEFORE THE COURT OF CRIMINAL APPEALS IN TEXAS; AND NEWTON N. MINOW, FORMER CHAIRMAN OF THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION (FCC).
OSWALD WAS KILLED BY JACK RUBY, DALLAS NIGHTCLUB OWNER, ON NOV. 24, TWO DAYS AFTER HE ALLEGEDLY SHOT TO DEATH KENNEDY AND SERIOUSLY WOUNDED TEXAS GOV. JOHN CONNALLY IN A MOTORCADE IN DALLAS. A COMMISSION TO FULLY INVESTIGATE THE ASSASSINATION WAS FORMED BY PRESIDENT JOHNSON AND IS HEADED BY CHIEF JUSTICE EARL WARREN.
OSWALD'S WIDOW, MARINA, WILL GO TO WASHINGTON NEXT MONTH TO TESTIFY BEFORE THE COMMISSION, ACCORDING TO A SOURCE CLOSE TO HER IN FORT WORTH. SHE REMAINED IN SECLUSION IN THE DALLAS-FORT WORTH AREA UNDER SECRET SERVICE PROTECTION.
OTHER SOURCES SAID SHE MIGHT GIVE TESTIMONY BEFORE MEMBERS OF THE COMMISSION WHO WOULD TRAVEL TO DALLAS TO SEE HER.

Penetrating Probe of the Kennedy Assassination

By Dom Bonafede
Of The Herald Tribune Staff

WASHINGTON.

James Lee Rankin, chief counsel for the inquiry into President Kennedy's assassination, leaves the clear impression that the investigation will be a penetrating analysis worthy of historical record.

"We must study and explore the evidence beyond the raw material we have now," he remarked during a discussion with this newspaper.

With that objective in mind, the blue-ribbon investigating panel appointed by President Johnson will soon announce the addition of about a dozen lawyers to Mr. Rankin's staff.

The lawyers, all of whom are being selected on Mr. Rankin's recommendation, will be used primarily for "analyzing evidence," he said. With the inclusion of stenographic and clerical help, he will command a sizable force whose mammoth job will be to fill in the unanswered questions surrounding the case.

Since its appointment one week after the Nov. 22 assassination of President Kennedy, the seven-member commission headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren has spent most of its time in preliminary paper work and finding an office.

Now, the commission and its staff is ready to get to the meat of the problem. Very shortly, a press liaison officer will be announced to keep the public informed of the commission's progress.

Above all, Mr. Rankin indicates by word and tone of speech that the commission and investigating staff will not be content merely to ponder upon reports handed them in neatly-bound folders by the various Federal agencies and then edit a high-blown summary.

"We plan to go wherever necessary to get the facts," he declares.

Unfortunately, in print this carries a dum-de-dum-dum ring. Actually Mr. Rankin speaks with an affable mildness. He eschews the flamboyant for the sudued. His personal demeanor is that of an alert professor. He prefers being painstaking to being colorful.

General won him the respect of both the court and his opposition.

"When Mr. Rankin handles a case it is handled with complete professionalism," declared a former Washington associate.

The imprint was not lost on Chief Justice Warren, who summoned him from his New York law practice to take over as the commission's chief counsel.

The commission has received the assurance of the attorney of Mrs. Lee Harvey Oswald, Russian-born widow of the accused assassin of President Kennedy, that she will appear before the panel voluntarily.

"I assume there will be other witnesses," says the chief counsel. He noted that prospective witnesses who decline to appear voluntarily may be subpoenaed under powers granted the commission by Congress.

Mrs. Oswald, he said, will be heard some time next month.

Mr. Rankin said that "at least one member of the commission and someone from the staff, probably myself," would go on trips when the investigation compels traveling outside Washington.

He said that a tentative budget has been set for the investigation, but declined to state the amount. The money is being appropriated from the President's emergency fund.

The FBI and Secret Service, he reported, have been "very co-operative" with the commission. Reports from the agencies are still being studied, he said, and added, "We have all kinds of statements and documents to go through."

As yet, he said, the commission has not decided whether to release a shortened version of the FBI's report on the assassination.

Earlier, Chief Justice Warren had implied that an abridgement would be released.

Just when the commission will finish its mission is still a matter of guesswork, even to Mr. Rankin.

He reported that a preliminary report may be issued within a couple of months.

Since the slaying of Oswald falls within the investigating province of the commission, it must wait for the trial of Jack Ruby to end before that facet of the case can become part of the record. Ruby, a Dallas strip joint impresario, is scheduled to go on trial in February.

WARREN COMMISSION FINDS THE FBI REPORT INADEQUATE

News 'leaks' don't end Oswald mystery

By Jack A. Smith

AFTER BEING ON the receiving end of several leaks to the press by the Federal Bureau of Investigation indicating that Lee Harvey Oswald was "beyond a doubt the lone assassin of President John F. Kennedy," the Warren Commission—in primary charge of the investigation—reversed roles and delivered a news leak of its own: the FBI report on the case was inadequate.

The commission, headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, announced that it was dissatisfied with the FBI's five-volume version of the bizarre slaying and has ordered the agency to submit background material and other data omitted from the official report. Warren and his colleagues were reported to be disturbed by the FBI leaks, motivated as they apparently were by a desire to grab publicity from the Presidential panel by being first to name the killer and secondarily to reduce the possibility that the actions of the FBI would come under committee perusal.

The seven-member panel is obviously not yet satisfied that the case against Oswald is conclusive, despite the FBI findings. During the month since Kennedy was shot to death in Dallas Nov. 22, few facts have emerged to strengthen the highly circumstantial evidence implicating the 24-year-old ex-Marine as the killer. Many factors, indeed, have tended to weaken the case, not the least of which was lawyer Mark Lane's lengthy defense of the suspected assassin (NATIONAL GUARDIAN, Dec. 19) which has been forwarded to the panel.

Confusing the situation—though it dealt with the most startling inconsistency in the assassination mystery so far—was the unofficial report of an autopsy performed on the President by pathologists at Bethesda Naval Hospital. The autopsy, contradicting reports from doctors in Dallas that one of the ~~two~~ bullets which killed Kennedy entered from the front, upheld the FBI version that both bullets actually entered from behind the President.

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS: In other aspects of the case:

● The Secret Service has announced that Mrs. Marina Oswald, widow of the accused slayer, will probably be held incommunicado several more months. The young Russian-born mother has been sequestered since the assassination. She is considered to hold the key to several puzzling elements of her late husband's background, including his apparent hostility toward the Soviet Union which he once championed.

● Russell McLarry, 21-year-old Dallas machinist who admitted having threatened to kill Kennedy the day before the assassination, was released from county jail on $2,500 bond. McLarry was arrested Dec. 19, three weeks after the two women to whom he allegedly made the threat reported it to the Secret Service. The agency said it did not track down McLarry immediately because "there had been more pressing things ~~to do.~~"

● Two defense psychiatrists have begun mental examinations of nightclub owner Jack Ruby, who murdered Oswald two days after Kennedy was shot. Chief defense lawyer Melvin Belli will attempt to prove that his client was temporarily insane when he shot Oswald at police headquarters. Trial is scheduled in Dallas Feb. 3.

SOME OMISSIONS: According to sources close to the Warren Commission, the FBI report—contained in two typewritten volumes of 127 pages and three booklets of documents and photographs—is deficient in what it omits rather than in the evidence it does include. The New York Times reports that even the FBI acknowledges that the "report did not answer all the questions . . . [or] demonstrate that various theories advanced are untrue."

Newsweek said the report contained

"some disappointments for Justice Department officials who screened it before passing it on to the Commission—not in what it says but in what it leaves unsaid. It was 'very readable—remarkably well written,' one insider said, solid on physical evidence and on Oswald's erratic psyche. But what about all the rumors that the assassination was a conspiracy? The report leaves too many questions unasked or unanswered beyond the recurring phrase, 'There is no evidence.' In light of widespread speculation that Oswald wasn't alone, those were precisely the questions that needed to be raised and explored."

The first volume of the report contains an account of the assassination and of Oswald's capture one hour later in a movie theater. It does not, according to sources, prove him guilty beyond a doubt, as has previously been said in the press.

The report is said to state that only three bullets were fired at the Presidential auto, although other reports have put the number as high as five. In an article in the Dec. 21 New Republic, two writers argue that the actual number of bullets was four—one found on Kennedy's stretcher and another that did not exit from his body; one bullet found fragmented in the car and one removed from the leg of Texas Governor Connally, who was riding with the President. The reported fifth bullet was thought to be embedded in a traffic island near the spot where Kennedy was shot.

The report, according to Newsweek, did not mention the existence of a bullet hole in the windshield of Kennedy's limousine, as indicated by St. Louis Post-Dispatch writer Richard Dudman, who said he saw the hole when he examined the auto outside the Parkland Memorial Hospital where the President was being treated. Dudman also mentions the possibility of a fourth or fifth bullet.

QUESTION OF TIME: If more than three bullets were fired it would have been impossible for Oswald, as alleged, to have been the "lone assassin" who fired at the President from the sixth floor of the Texas Book Depository, as the entire shooting sequence is said to have taken place in less than five and a half seconds. As it is, the accurate firing of three shots at a moving target 75 to 100 yards away, especially with the bolt-action rifle said to have been used, is a virtual impossibility in that time save for the most expert marksman.

The FBI official report disputed the original contention by the three attending doctors at the Parkland Hospital that the wound in Kennedy's throat was from the entry of a bullet. According to Dudman, one of the doctors, Dr. Robert McClelland, told Dudman after it had been reported that Kennedy was shot from behind "that they still believed it to be an entry wound . . ."

Twenty-five days after the original report of an entry wound in the throat, and almost simultaneous with the FBI leak that both bullets entered from the back, "a reliable source familiar with the autopsy findings" reported that "the first shot struck Mr. Kennedy in the back and did not hit any vital organ . . . and the second hit him in the back of the skull, proving fatal." The autopsy was conducted at the Naval Hospital the night Kennedy's body was brought back to Washington and is now in possession of the Secret Service.

According to the source, a fragment from the second bullet which tore into the President's skull may have emerged at the throat. The doctors at Parkland —who initially reported two wounds, one in the back of the head and the other in the throat—did not notice the hole in the President's upper back because, said the Associated Press, "Mr. Kennedy was lying on his back on an emergency-room table during the entire time they were attending him."

DELAY OF MONTH: Considering the nature of the information leaked to the press so far, it seems incomprehensible that the proper authorities would wait almost one month to reveal that the original report of an entry wound in the throat—so relevant because it would demolish the theory that a murderer was acting alone—was incorrect.

The official report, according to Washington sources, is remiss in several other categories including: 1) whether there was, as has been alleged, a second rifleman (the point is not raised); 2) whether there is substance to the rumor that Oswald was in possession of several thousand dollars around the time he went to Mexico in an unsuccessful effort to obtain Soviet and Cuban visas (the FBI denied this but would not elaborate).

It also seems highly doubtful that the report comments on charges that the FBI attempted to recruit Oswald as a counter-agent or that it discloses the reason Oswald, who defected to the Soviet Union for two and a half years, was granted a new passport last June after less than a day of consideration.

Volume two of the official report, according to Newsweek, devotes 39 pages to Ruby's slaying of Oswald and "tells in exhaustive detail how he slipped past a guard at the west entrance—but doesn't name the guard."

PROBE OF FBI? In ordering the FBI to submit new data and in making it known that he was disturbed by the piecemeal relevations about the case leaked by the FBI, Commission chairman Warren was apparently attempting to establish the panel's independence from the agency whose conduct has increasingly come into question.

Columnist Drew Pearson charged that J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, "wanted to publish the report immediately . . . to get the first jump on a commission which actually is investigating the FBI. It's also investigating the Secret Service, the reported failure of the two to cooperate at Dallas, and any inefficiency by either."

HOOVER DOESN'T RELISH FBI ITSELF BEING INVESTIGATED; JOHNSON HAD TOUGH JOB GETTING WARREN TO SERVE ON INVESTIGATING COMMISSION.

WASHINGTON--THERE WAS A VERY IMPORTANT BACKSTAGE BYPLAY WHEN THE FBI SUBMITTED ITS REPORT TO THE PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION INVESTIGATING THE ASSASSINATION OF JOHN F. KENNEDY.

REAL FACT WAS THAT J. EDGAR HOOVER, 69-YEAR-OLD DIRECTOR OF THE FBI, WANTED TO PUBLISH THE REPORT IMMEDIATELY. THIS WOULD HAVE GOT THE FIRST JUMP ON A COMMISSION WHICH ACTUALLY IS INVESTIGATING THE FBI. IT'S ALSO INVESTIGATING THE SECRET SERVICE, REPORTED FAILURE TO COOPERATE BETWEEN THE TWO AT DALLAS, AND ANY INEFFICIENCY BY EITHER.

WHAT THE PUBLIC DOESN'T REALIZE IS THAT FOR THE FIRST TIME SINCE THE DAYS OF WARREN HARDING THE FBI ITSELF IS UNDER INVESTIGATION. THE FBI IS NOT ACCUSTOMED TO BEING INVESTIGATED. IT'S ACCUSTOMED TO DO THE INVESTIGATING ITSELF AND HAS BECOME ONE OF THE MOST POWERFUL AND FEARED AGENCIES OF GOVERNMENT. MOST NEWSPAPERMEN AND MOST CONGRESSMEN DO NOT CRITICIZE THE FBI.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON KNEW THE FBI WOULD BE IN FOR INVESTIGATION AND ALSO KNEW THE SACROSANCT POSITION OF THE FBI WHEN HE WENT TO GREAT PAINS TO PICK A PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION OF UNIMPEACHABLE INTEGRITY TO PROBE THE DALLAS TRAGEDY.

WHAT THE WHITE HOUSE KNEW, JUST FROM READING THE NEWSPAPER ACCOUNTS, WAS THAT THE FBI HAD EITHER FALLEN DOWN ON ITS PART OF THE JOB IN DALLAS OR ELSE WAS NOT COOPERATING WITH THE SECRET SERVICE. THERE HAS LONG BEEN A CERTAIN AMOUNT OF FRICTION BETWEEN THESE TWO AGENCIES, ONE OF WHICH GETS THE MAJOR HEADLINES; THE OTHER, THE SECRET SERVICE, WHICH GOES ABOUT ITS BUSINESS WITHOUT SEEKING PUBLICITY.

--FBI CHECKED OSWALD--

BUT IN THE TRAIN OF TRAGIC EVENTS LEADING UP TO THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY, IT IS AN INDISPUTABLE FACT THAT THE FBI DID INTERVIEW LEE OSWALD, THE SUSPECTED ASSASSIN, IN ADVANCE. DESPITE THIS, IT DID NOT REPORT HIM TO THE SECRET SERVICE.

THE DATE ON WHICH THE FBI INTERVIEWED OSWALD AT FIRST WAS REPORTED TO HAVE BEEN NOV. 16, JUST SIX DAYS BEFORE THE TRAGEDY. LATER REPORTS INDICATE THE DATE MAY HAVE BEEN OCT. 16.

HOWEVER, WHAT IS CERTAIN IS THAT THE FBI AT FIRST TRIED TO COVER UP THE FACT THAT IT HAD INTERVIEWED OSWALD AT ALL AND ASKED ONE OF OSWALD'S FRIENDS NOT TO ADMIT TO THE PRESS THAT THE FBI HAD BEEN AROUND TO SEE HIM.

IT WOULD APPEAR TO HAVE BEEN A SHOCKING OVERSIGHT TO PERMIT AN UNSTABLE, IRRATIONAL YOUNG MAN WHO HAD LIVED IN RUSSIA, HAD PASSED OUT CIRCULARS FAVORING FIDEL CASTRO, AND QUITE RECENTLY HAD TAKEN A TRIP TO MEXICO TO CONTACT THE CUBAN EMBASSY, TO REMAIN BOTH UNWATCHED AND UNREPORTED TO THE SECRET SERVICE WHEN THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES PASSED THROUGH THE CITY IN WHICH HE LIVED AND PAST THE BUILDING IN WHICH HE WORKED.

IT'S NOW ESTABLISHED THAT THE FBI HAD KEPT TABS ON OSWALD AFTER HE CAME BACK FROM RUSSIA LAST YEAR, INTERVIEWED HIM LAST AUGUST WHEN HE WAS PASSING OUT PRO-CASTRO LEAFLETS IN NEW ORLEANS, AND CHECKED ON HIM AGAIN WHEN HE RETURNED TO DALLAS. THEY EVEN CHECKED TWICE WITH MRS. RUTH PAINE, THE LADY WHO WAS LOOKING OUT FOR MRS. OSWALD WHILE PREGNANT, OSWALD BEING AWAY MOST OF THE TIME.

THE FBI LEARNED FROM MRS. PAINE EVEN THAT OSWALD WAS WORKING AT THE TEXAS SCHOOL BOOK REPOSITORY, A STATE AGENCY LOCATED ALONG THE USUAL PARADE ROUTE THROUGH DALLAS.

DESPITE THIS, THE FBI NEITHER KEPT OSWALD UNDER SCRUTINY WHEN PRESIDENT KENNEDY PASSED THROUGH DALLAS, NOR DID IT GIVE HIS NAME TO THE SECRET SERVICE. THESE ARE SOME OF THE AMAZING FACTS ABOUT THE PRELIMINARY PROBE OF THE DALLAS TRAGEDY WHICH EXPLAIN WHY THE FBI WANTED TO GET ITS VERSION OF THE STORY OUT TO THE NEWSPAPERS AHEAD OF THE STUDY BY THE PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION.

NOTE--WHEN THE PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION STEPPED IN TO PREVENT PUBLICATION, AN OFFICIAL FBI LEAK LET CERTAIN CONCLUSIONS OUT TO THE PRESS.

--WARREN GETS REBUFFED--

WHEN CHIEF JUSTICE EARL WARREN REPORTED TO HIS EIGHT COLLEAGUES ON THE SUPREME COURT THAT HE WAS HEADING A COMMISSION TO PROBE THE DALLAS TRAGEDY, HE CAUGHT JURIDICAL HELL.

ALL OF HIS FELLOW JUSTICES UPBRAIDED HIM, EXCEPT JUSTICE ARTHUR GOLDBERG, WHO WAS RECENTLY SECRETARY OF LABOR.

MORE

HOWEVER, JUSTICE HUGO BLACK, OLDEST MEMBER OF THE COURT IN BOTH YEARS AND SERVICE, SCOLDED HIS CHIEF FOR NOT FOLLOWING OUT THE AGREED POLICY OF KEEPING OUT OF NON-COURT ACTIVITIES. OTHERS JOINED IN THE CRITICISM.

THE CHIEF JUSTICE, DEFENDING HIMSELF, TOLD IN DETAIL OF THE ALMOST PLEADING SCENE BETWEEN HIM AND PRESIDENT JOHNSON. WHEN THE PRESIDENT FIRST STARTED TALKING, WARREN STARTED SHAKING HIS HEAD.

"I SEE YOU SHAKING YOUR HEAD," SAID THE PRESIDENT. "AND I KNOW WHAT YOU'RE THINKING. I ALSO KNOW WHAT YOU DID AS A YOUNG LIEUTENANT IN WORLD WAR I WHEN YOUR COUNTRY DRAFTED YOU. I'M NOT GOING TO DRAFT YOU. BUT I WANT YOU TO BE JUST AS GOOD A SOLDIER NOW WHEN YOUR COUNTRY NEEDS YOU JUST AS MUCH AS IT DID THEN."

WARREN FINALLY YIELDED. HAVING DONE SO, AND HAVING BRAVED THE CRITICAL FIRE OF HIS OWN COLLEAGUES, HE WAS NOT ABOUT TO LET J. EDGAR HOOVER DECIDE THE FACTS IN THE TRAGEDY OF DALLAS EVEN BEFORE THE PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION COULD START WORK.

HERE'S YOUR HAT, EARL

The 30-day moratorium on politics, declared by the Republicans after President Kennedy's assassination, expires today.

President Johnson and most of his fellow Democratic politicos have been playing politics throughout the 30 days, as was to have been expected; but the Republicans ought to be able to make up for lost time if they are smart enough to do so.

Earl Warren

We think one of their first moves could well be an all-out attack on Chief Justice Earl Warren's commission to investigate the Kennedy murder, plus a drive to persuade Congress to give Warren & Co. the heave on this matter and set up a full-dress investigation by a joint Congressional committee.

The Warren outfit, appointed by President Johnson, consists of Warren as chairman, Rep. Hale Boggs (D.-La.), Sen. John S. Cooper (R-Ky.), ex-Central Intelligence Agency chief Allen W. Dulles, Rep. Gerald R. Ford (R-Mich.), John J. McCloy and Sen. Richard Russell (D-Ga.).

Their appointment came—surely by coincidence—shortly after the Communist publication The Worker urged formation of such a commission with Warren as chairman.

The appointment, further, was cheered by virtually all the professional "liberals" and anti-anti-Communists in the land—a highly dubious crew at best.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation long since put together a five-volume report of its own painstaking probe of the Kennedy murder.

This report is reliably stated to tag Lee Harvey Oswald, Communist and Castroite, as the lone killer without accomplices. It is a safe bet that the FBI buttoned up its findings so tightly that not a loophole could be discovered.

Arrogant Attitude

It is not a bet but a certainty that the FBI is far better qualified to sift the evidence in such a case than is anybody on the Warren commission with the possible exception of Allen Dulles.

Yet the Warren crowd has now set up an elaborate office in Washington, hired an attorney, and put word around that it intends to take its own good time about filing its verdict and about releasing the FBI report.

This delay, plus the Warren commission's arrogant attitude toward the FBI, is giving professional "liberals" and Communists a golden chance to cloud the question of who murdered the President, and to spread the impression that Commie Oswald was somehow inspired to commit this crime by members of the John Birch Society and other right-wing extremists.

In view of the Earl Warren Supreme Court's long-standing tenderness toward Communists, any report this commission may at long last give birth to will be open to suspicion of pro-Communist and anti-conservative bias.

The object of any investigation into this vicious crime should be to get the whole truth about it, and nothing but the truth, and to let the American people have that truth as fast as it is confirmed by competent investigators.

Let Congress Take It Over

There seems to be little likelihood that the Warren commission can come up with an unbiased verdict. And the commission's actions to date indicate strongly that it won't come up with any verdict at all for perhaps a year.

So it looks to us as if the Republicans in Congress would be wise to start agitating, right after the new session begins next month, for a fast dismissal of the whole Warren commission and the setting up of a joint Congressional investigation of the Kennedy murder.

We believe public opinion would strongly favor such a probe, and the sooner the better.

Warren Will Try To Link Oswald With Conspiracy

THE FBI, WHICH SURELY is one of the finest investigative bodies in the world, has concluded that Lee Oswald was the villian of November 22nd in Dallas; that he operated alone; that he was a turncoat and a self-appointed communist; that he was something of a pathological case; that there is no reason to link Oswald to any political or ideological group either "left" or "right."

We are not, therefore, overly sympathetic to views which today come from both "left" and "right" organizations which seek somehow, in spite of the evidence or the lack of evidence to tie Oswald into some kind of a conspiracy.

Admitting that the FBI hires only human beings and that humans are subject to error, does not cause us to condemn the findings of the organization. We concede that all political organizations, including the FBI, are prone to adopt political motivation. In the instant case, however, the only discernible political motivation the FBI can have, we believe, is to report the truth as they found it. We believe their report in the Oswald case. We think he operated alone as did the assassins of Garfield and McKinley and as did the minor claque which snuffed out the life of Abraham Lincoln.

But now the head of the Supreme Court of the United States, Earl Warren, is asking and getting plenipotentiary powers so that a more extensive investigation can be conducted. Among these powers will be the power to override the Fifth Amendment, which Mr. Warren assiduously supported when various persons were accused heretofore of communist participation.

THERE IS ONLY ONE conceivable reason for the Warren inquiry. That will be to try, regardless of the evidence, to show that Oswald was linked up somewhere with some kind of conspiracy.

If this cannot be shown, and we suspect that it cannot, then the effort will obviously be made to deduce a collective guilt, to find persons who didn't like Mr. Kennedy or his policies, somehow responsible for his demise, and it appears likely that the nation is to experience a further emotional orgy amidst a welter of political self-serving accusations.

Quite frankly, we think this is losing sight of the target. If we are going to wallow in a morbid re-living of that tragic hour for weeks and weeks, we are giving some pretty good evidence that we haven't yet grown up.

Certainly, murder ~~is always~~ reprehensible, tragic, immoral and vicious. The murder of Mr. Kennedy is not the first one that has occurred in this country and it will certainly not be the last, unfortunately.

But must we immerse ourselves in this event and conduct a witch hunt, either "left" or "right," in an effort to unearth persons who perhaps didn't approve of Mr. Kennedy's policies? To what end? The FBI says the job was done by one, lone man.

ARE WE SO BEMUSED by emphasis upon group activity that we can't accept that?

Must every action taken be the product of committee effort?

Are we so far gone in our ability to reason, that everything is tied in to some kind of group conspiracy?

Or is Mr. Warren going to conduct a monstrous psychoanalysis upon the body politic of the nation in an effort to establish some kind of subliminal psychosis capable of gripping the consciousness of Lee Oswald thus making him a puppet in the hands of a gigantic group id? We'll be practicing voodoo blood rites and examining entrails of goats if we're not careful.

How about cutting out this nonsense? We are all of us deeply shocked and grieved. And we've all said so. An investigation has turned up the facts. We all know what they are. Suppose we get back on course, realize that we have a life to live, freedom to preserve, a future to prepare for, and one whale of a lot of jobs to do and problems to ~~solve~~.

Dallas Data Sought by Warren Unit

Associated Press

Chief Justice Earl Warren announced yesterday that his Commission investigating the assassination of President John F. Kennedy is asking the FBI for the investigative materials on which its still-secret report of the assassination was based.

Warren gave reporters this word after a 2½-hour meeting of the bipartisan commission and its new general counsel, J. Lee Rankin, former Solicitor General of the United States.

The Commission is asking to see all the documents and other materials on which the FBI report was based, as well as similar material from each of the half-dozen other Federal agencies involved in the inquiry, Warren said.

The only report so far received, other than that of the FBI, was one from the State Department. It presumably bears on the visit of Lee Harvey Oswald, 24, to Russia, and official Russian files on Oswald, the man accused of firing the fatal shots in Dallas Nov. 22. The Russian files were voluntarily given to the United States by Soviet authorities.

"We decided it would be essential to have the materials on which the reports we are receiving are based," Warren said.

"We are formally requesting the agencies to supply that material to us."

Warren told questioners that the Commission does not expect to call for the physical evidence in the case—for instance, the Italian-made carbine with which the shots were fired, or the recovered rifle bullets.

Although Warren previously had spoken of issuing a "preliminary statement" in behalf of the Commission appointed by President Johnson, after its members had studied the FBI report, he said today that no statement, even of a preliminary nature, is now planned.

This does not rule out the possibility that the FBI report would be made public at some time before the commission completes its investigation. He said he could not state when the next meeting of the full Commission would be held. It will not be within the next 10 days, he said.

The Commission obviously was settling in for a long mission. Warren announced that it has ararnged to take a floor in the Veterans of Foreign Wars building, close by the Supreme Court building.

Rankin, called from his New York law practice to serve the commission, is setting up shop there and assembling a legal staff, and other assistants.

Warrren said the Commission has not yet discussed the question of whether to hold public hearings and call witnesses.

The Commission obviously was settling in for a long mission. Warren announced that it has ararnged to take a floor in the Veterans of Foreign Wars building, close by the Supreme Court building.

Rankin, called from his New York law practice to serve the commission, is setting up shop there and assembling a legal staff, and other assistants.

Warrren said the Commission has not yet discussed the question of whether to hold public hearings and call witnesses.

The Assassination Probe: Choice of Warren Praised

By David Lawrence

WASHINGTON

President Johnson made a wise decision when he designated Earl Warren, Chief Justice of the United States, to serve as head of a commission to investigate all the circumstances surrounding the assassination of the late President Kennedy. There has been some criticism expressed that a member of the Supreme Court should be asked to perform duties outside the scope of the court itself, but in this case the advantages far outweigh the disadvantages. For in Europe —especially in England, where the pronouncements of a chief justice are looked upon as almost sacrosanct—the selection of America's Chief Justice has already created a feeling of confidence that no party or faction will control the final summation of the facts.

All over the world there have, for instance, been questions raised as to whether Lee Harvey Oswald, the accused assassin, was tied up with some group inside or outside this country and whether all the facts have been revealed. In Europe, some absurd theories have been advanced that Oswald himself was promptly killed in order to suppress his connections with various groups.

Under these circumstances, it is fortunate that not only is the investigating commission to be presided over by the highest judicial officer in the land but also that representatives of both parties in Congress have been appointed to the commission. It will be noted, too, that J. Lee Rankin, who served as Solicitor General during the Eisenhower administration, was appointed chief counsel of the investigating group. He is an able lawyer and is known for his objectivity in dealing with controversial cases.

What can the report of the commission do for America and the world? It can assemble the facts on which there is clear proof. Obviously, nothing will be gained by indulging in speculation as to the impact of national politics or factional strife on the disordered mind of an assassin. This doesn't come under the head of proof.

The evidence that has been published thus far shows plainly that Oswald was a psychopathic case from early youth. He was in trouble in school at the age of 13, and psychiatric treatment was recommended then but not carried out. It will do no good to attempt to blame society as a whole for failing to have every psychopathic individual put behind bars or otherwise incarcerated.

It is unfortunate that there has been speculation in the press concerning the reasons why Oswald wasn't locked up after the FBI interviewed him last September. But there happen to be on file in the hospitals and institutions in the Dallas area the names of at least 4,000 persons who have been treated for mental troubles. Could the FBI have imprisoned them all for a few days? What then becomes of the legal rule that suspects cannot be held without arraignment?

Nor will it serve any good purpose to lay part of the blame to the fact that Mrs. Kennedy himself permitted the parade route to be changed four days before the tragedy so that the procession would pass through an area of which the FBI and the Secret Service didn't approve because of dangers from persons in high buildings. The fact is that the President gives the final orders, and Chief Executives have always taken such changes. Only ten days ago many a member of the government services charged with protecting Mr. Johnson on his trip to the funeral of Herbert Lehman in New York City would have been greatly relieved if the President had decided not to go.

An assassination happens so rarely that world-wide interest has naturally arisen concerning the motives of the assassin. Some superficial-minded persons in the clergy and in political life promptly accused the "extreme right" of having fomented the crime. The Russian press was quick to grab the idea and broadcast the charge that American "reactionaries" had plotted the deed. But in a day or so it became known that Oswald had been to Russia and had once been anxious to embrace communism. This afforded an opportunity for those on the "Right" to turn the tables and accuse the "Left," especially when it was disclosed that Oswald had actually tried to kill General Edwin A. Walker, who has been aligned with Right-Wing causes.

Some members of Congress, along with prominent clergymen, have unwisely insisted that hate waves produced the assassination. But it is hard to accept such a thesis about someone who has been on both sides—one day for Russia and the next day against. Such a person apparently didn't really know what he was doing. The more evidence comes in, the more it appears that a mentally unbalanced man with a fascination for markmanship, bought a rifle by mail, began practicing with it and eventually decided to kill someone riding by in an automobile in the vanguard of a street procession.

Government agencies here have collected all the facts available. They will be made public in due time by the Warren Commission. This will give the world the thruth for the sake of history. The report will be intensively read by governments and by peoples everywhere. It is fitting, therefore, that the document should bear the signature of the Chief Justice of the United States.

FBI Uneasy About Dallas Report

By Drew Pearson

There was a very important backstage byplay when the FBI submitted its report to the Presidential Commission investigating the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

Pearson

Real fact was that J. Edgar Hoover, 69-year-old director of the FBI, wanted to publish the report immediately. This would have got the first jump on a Commission which actually is investigating the FBI. It's also investigating the Secret Service, reported failure to cooperate between the two at Dallas, and any inefficiency by either.

What the public doesn't realize is that for the first time since the days of Warren Harding the FBI itself is under investigation. The FBI is not accustomed to being investigated. It's accustomed to do the investigating itself and has become one of the most powerful and feared agencies of Government. Most newspapermen and most Congressmen do not criticize the FBI.

President Johnson knew the FBI would be in for investigation and also knew the sacrosanct position of the FBI when he went to great pains to pick a Presidential Commission of unimpeachable integrity to probe the Dallas tragedy.

What the White House knew, just from reading the newspaper accounts, was that the FBI had either fallen down on its part of the job in Dallas or else was not cooperating with the Secret Service. There has long been a certain amount of friction between these two agencies, one of which gets the major headlines; the other, the Secret Service, which goes about its business without seeking publicity.

FBI Checked Oswald

But in the train of tragic events leading up to the assassination of President Kennedy, it is an indisputable fact that the FBI did interview Lee Oswald, the suspected assassin, in advance. Despite this, it did not report him to the Secret Service.

The date on which the FBI interviewed Oswald at first was reported to have been Nov. 16, just six days before the tragedy. Later reports indicate the date may have been Oct. 16.

However, what is certain is that the FBI at first tried to cover up the fact that it had interviewed Oswald at all and asked one of Oswald's friends not to admit to the press that the FBI had been around to see him.

It would appear to have been a shocking oversight to permit an unstable, irrational young man who had lived in Russia, had passed out circulars favoring Fidel Castro, and quite recently had taken a trip to Mexico to contact the Cuban Embassy, to remain both unwatched and unreported to the Secret Service when the President of the United States passed through the city in which he lived and past the building in which he worked.

It's now established that the FBI had kept tabs on Oswald after he came back from Russia last year, interviewed him last August when he was passing out pro-Castro leaflets in New Orleans, and checked on him again when he returned to Dallas. They even checked twice with Mrs. Ruth Paine, the lady who was looking out for Mrs. Oswald while pregnant, Oswald being away most of the time.

The FBI learned from Mrs. Paine even that Oswald was working at the Texas School Book Repository, a state agency located along the usual parade route through Dallas.

Despite this, the FBI neither kept Oswald under scrutiny when President Kennedy passed through Dallas, nor did it give his name to the Secret Service. These are some of the amazing facts about the preliminary probe of the Dallas tragedy which explain why the FBI wanted to get its version of the story out to the newspapers ahead of the study by the Presidential Commission.

Warren Gets Rebuffed

When Chief Justice Earl Warren reported to his eight colleagues on the Supreme Court that he was heading a Commission to probe the Dallas tragedy, he caught juridical hell.

All of his fellow justices upbraided him, except Justice Arthur Goldberg, who was recently Secretary of Labor.

The Chief Justice, defending himself, told in detail of the almost pleading scene between him and President Johnson. When the President first started talking, Warren started shaking his head.

"I see you shaking your head," said the President. "And I know what you're thinking. I also know what you did as a young lieutenant in World War I when your country drafted you. I'm not going to draft you. But I want you to be just as good a soldier now when your country needs you just as much as it did then."

Warren finally yielded. Having done so, and having braved the critical fire of his own colleagues, he was not about to let J. Edgar Hoover decide the facts in the tragedy of Dallas even before the Presidential Commission could start work.

JFK Death Probe May Take Year

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 (AP).—Some officials predicted privately today that it may be a year before Chief Justice Earl Warren's commission finishes investigating the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

The predictions followed disclosure by government sources that threads from the shirt of Lee Harvey Oswald, the accused assassin, were found snagged on the rifle which authorities say was used to kill Mr. Kennedy as he rode in a Dallas motorcade Nov. 22.

The government sources also reported yesterday that Oswald's palm print was found on the rifle. And they said some latent fingerprints—identified as Oswald's—were lifted by FBI technicians from wrapping paper which hid the rifle when it was carried into the Dallas text book depository building where Oswald worked.

THOROUGH JOB

As the Warren commission continued its study of a five-volume FBI report on the assassination, a friend of the Chief Justice predicted the commission's work will not be completed for "a good many months at least. Warren moves with all deliberate speed, but he doesn't cut a single corner."

Another official said it won't bother the White House if the commission takes a year, adding:

"Nobody wants a quickie job. President Johnson made that clear in creating the commission."

There was evidence from Chief Justice Warren that the commission considers the massive FBI report, delivered to the seven commission members Monday night, just the starting point for its task. Within 24 hours The Chief Justice announced the appointment of a general counsel, former U. S. solicitor General J. Lee Rankin, as the commission with a staff.

Merely evaluating the FBI report appeared likely to be a big job. When this and other information has been evaluated, the commission is empowered to "conduct any further investigation it deems desirable."

The FBI report, moreover, is itself not complete. Officials said supplemental reports will be sent to Chief Justice Warren "from time to time" as teams of agents still at work check out leads and information.

Members of Assassination Probe

Makeup Conveys Idea Johnson Seeks Widest Possible Acceptance of Verdict

A-6

Chief Justice Warren did not immediately accept President Johnson's invitation to head a special commission to investigate the assassination of President Kennedy.

The Chief Justice asked and received time to reflect upon the task in all its aspects, including his duty to the Supreme Court. He was mindful of his position as the chief target of what he called at the slain President's bier the "forces of hatred and malevolence such as today are eating their way into the bloodstream of American life."

Now he has put his hand to the plow and those long in close association with him regard it as unthinkable that he should turn back. It is equally unthinkable that he would set down aught in malice, whatever his personal position.

Washington has speculated furiously about the commission since it was announced Friday night. It quickly noted that five of its seven members are Republicans, three are Southerners. One, banker John J. McCloy, has been called head of the American Establishment, a phrase used to denote the powerful and more or less permanent business and economic interests of the country.

Justice Warren still sits at the head of the commission table, armed with the dignity of his great office, his matchless experience of men and conflicting social forces learned in 33 years in public office in great and growing California. He is also almost uniquely free. What person or interest now can hurt or help him?

President Johnson is specially qualified to appreciate the powers of a chairman, a fact which gives great importance to his choice of Warren. It amounts virtually to a declaration that the investigation will be what Warren chooses to make of it.

The choice also puts the President squarely behind the Chief Justice at this troubled point in the fight for racial justice. This will not be lost upon another commission member, Senator Russell of Georgia, who will lead the South's effort to veto the Kennedy-Johnson civil rights bill in Congress.

The FBI and CIA are widely criticized here for seeming lapses in keeping tabs on the Kennedy assassin, former Marine Lee Oswald, a one-time defector to the Soviet Union and self-appointed agent for "Fair Play for Cuba."

The Johnson panel includes Representative Gerald Ford, Michigan Republican and certain FBI defender, as well as Republican Allen Dulles, until lately head of the CIA. This is a typical operation of Lyndon Johnson, the Senate leader who strove for balance and public acceptance of his moves.

The overriding impression given by the panel is that the new President was seeking the widest popular acceptance of its verdict, whatever turn the effort might take. It is a hard and grave responsibility for the panel members.

Chief Justice Warren made his own strong feeling clear at the Kennedy bier that the extremists in this country bear a heavy weight of guilt when he spoke of those "who would themselves recoil from assassination but who do not shrink from spreading the venom which kindles thoughts of it in others."

FBI Keeps Silent on Contents As Dallas File Goes to Warren

By Laurence Stern
Staff Reporter

At President Johnson's order, an exhaustive FBI report on the assassination of President Kennedy was turned over yesterday to Chief Justice Earl Warren, chairman of a special panel investigating the Dallas tragedy.

The report will not be made public immediately, contrary to earlier indications.

Deputy Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach transmitted the report directly to the Presidential Commission late yesterday afternoon after intensive Justice Department screening of its contents.

The lengthy report essentially confirms already-published accounts of both the assassination of President Kennedy and the ensuing murder of suspected assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald.

Certain on Oswald

It reportedly names Oswald beyond doubt as the sniper who killed the President and wounded Texas Governor John B. Connally with three shots from his mail order rifle.

It also concludes that neither Oswald nor his accused murderer, Dallas night club proprietor Jack Ruby, acted as part of a conspiracy. Both murders were individual crimes, the FBI report is understood to say.

Originally the Justice Department hoped to make public, either in full or in summary form, the principal findings in the FBI report. The intention was to clear away the swarm of rumors and suspicions, most of them groundless, that had formed in the aftermath of the assassination and the subsequent murder of Oswald in a Dallas police station before a television audience of millions.

Panel Asked Delay

But a Justice Department spokesman said yesterday the Warren Commission asked that the report "not be made public until the Commission has reviewed it and taken whatever other action it may feel appropriate."

In addition, it was announced that the FBI inquiry is continuing and new facts will be reported to the Commission.

The FBI report is also understood to have gone into evidence that Oswald may have attempted to assassinate former Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker, vociferous apostle of the right wing, in his Dallas home last April 10.

A sniper fired a shot from a reported range of 50 yards that came within an inch of Walker's head. The retired general was sitting at his desk working on tax returns.

Fail to Link Rifle

Dallas police recovered the bullet but FBI ballistics tests last week failed to establish conclusively that it was fired from Oswald's carbine-type rifle.

However, investigators have reportedly found written material among Oswald's effects that implicated him in the attempt on Walker's life.

In another development, the Senate yesterday quickly passed and sent to the House a resolution giving the War-

Commission broad powers to carry out its fact-finding mission.

Offers Immunity

The measure empowers the Commission to subpoena witnesses and to obtain testimony from reluctant witnesses by granting them immunity from prosecution.

Two Senate members of the Commission, Sens. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.) and John Sherman Cooper (R-Ky.) sponsored the Senate resolution. An identical proposal was offered in the House by Democratic Whip Hale Boggs (D-La.) and Rep. Gerald R. Ford (R-Mich.), House members of the Warren panel.

Kennedy Assassination

The Momentous Probe

Of Warren Commission

Begins

By Dom Bonafede
Of The Herald Tribune Staff

WASHINGTON.

The American public may have to wait six months or longer before receiving a blue-ribbon report on President Kennedy's assassination from a Presidential panel of inquiry.

Behind closed doors and a heavy security guard, the seven-member commission, headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, held its first meeting yesterday at the National Archives Building.

After a 2½-hour session, devoted mainly to organizational and procedural matters, the Chief Justice reported the commission will ask Congress for subpoena powers to thoroughly pursue its top-echelon investigation. This would indicate that the commission plans to hold hearings and summon witnesses to testify under oath.

"The commission has a sad and solumn duty to perform, one of great importance to the country," said Mr. Warren.

He conceded that the panel is starting with a clean slate. "We are deliberating somewhat in the dark," he commented, "because we have no reports from any agency of the government. The information we have now is little more than what we have learned through the news media."

Another meeting was scheduled for today at 3 p. m.

President Johnson appointed the bipartisan commission Nov. 29 and directed it to "study and report upon all facts and circumstances relating to the assassination of the late President John F. Kennedy and the subsequent violent death of a man (Lee Harvey Oswald) charged with the assassination."

Commission members declined to estimate for the record how long the investigation would continue. However, one official noted that to conduct a complete investigation, in compliance with President Johnson's order, the commission will have to wait for the results of the February trial of Jack Ruby, Dallas strip joint operator, charged with Oswald's murder.

"And then it will probably take a couple of more months, if not more, before we are through," he said.

Present at yesterday's meeting was Deputy Attorney General Nicholas de B. Katzenbach. It is believed he was there to advise the commission concerning an FBI investigative report on the assassination.

The report was given by the FBI to Mr. Katzenbach late yesterday. He is expected to forward it on behalf of Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy to President Johnson, who in turn will hand it to the commission.

Whether it will then be publicly released or included

CARR PUT OFF THE PLANNED STATE HEARING WITH PRAISE FOR THE BLUE-RIBBON GROUP UNDER CHIEF JUSTICE EARL WARREN WHICH PRESIDENT JOHNSON ESTABLISHED ONE WEEK AGO TODAY TO LOOK INTO ALL DETAILS OF THE ASSASSINATION AND THE EVIDENCE GATHERED AGAINST LEE HARVEY OSWALD, THE ACCUSED ASSASSIN.

CARR SAID HE WAS SURE THE "INVESTIGATIVE AUTHORITY OF THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT IS BEING USED TO THE FULLEST."

CARR HAD ANNOUNCED THE TEXAS COURT A FEW MINUTES AFTER THE PRESIDENT'S FUNERAL IN WASHINGTON. HE SAID ORIGINALLY IT WOULD BE HELD IN DALLAS WITHIN A MONTH.

ON HIS RETURN TO TEXAS, THE ATTORNEY GENERAL SAID THE EXACT SITE AND TIME HAD NOT BEEN SET. THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT PROMISED FULLEST COOPERATION IN THE STATE INQUIRY.

UNDER TEXAS LAW, A COURT OF INQUIRY IS HELD UNDER A JUSTICE OF THE PEACE--WHO NEED NOT BE A LAWYER--AND WITNESSES MAY BE SUBPOENAED. THE FINDINGS OF THE COURT ARE NOT LEGALLY BINDING AND ITS STATEMENTS ARE NOT PRIVILEGED AGAINST THE LAWS OF LIBEL.

THE COURT WAS TO HAVE TAKEN UP BOTH THE ASSASSINATION AND THE SUBSEQUENT SHOOTING OF OSWALD BY JACK RUBY IN DALLAS.

ALL EVIDENCE GATHERED BY POLICE INDALLAS HAS BEEN TURNED OVER TO THE FBI.

"THE INVESTIGATION IS BEING CONDUCTED VIGOROUSLY, REACHING ACROSS THE BOUNDARIES OF MANY STATES AND SEVERAL NATIONS TO DATE," CARR SAID OF THE WASHINGTON INQUIRY.

"...IT IS OUR CONSIDERED JUDGMENT AHT THE TEXAS COURT OF INQUIRY, IF HELD AT THIS TIME OR IN THE IMMEDIATE FUTURE, MIGHT BRING ABOUT AN INTERRUPTION IN THE CONTINUITY OF THE NATIONWIDE INVESTIGATION."

CARR ALREADY HAD APPOINTED LEON JAWORSKI OF HOUSTON, A FORMER WAR CRIMES PROSECUTOR, AS SPECIAL COUNSEL FOR THE PLANNED STATE INQUIRY.

HE SAID THE PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION UNDER CHIEF JUSTICE WARREN HAD ASKED HIM AND JAWORSKI TO WORK WITH THE COMMISSION AND ATTEND ITS HEARINGS.

CARR SAID HE AND JAWORSKI HAVE BEEN CONFERRING IN WASHINGTON FOR THREE DAYS WITH FEDERAL OFFICIALS, INCLUDING WARREN, FBI CHIEF J. EDGAR HOOVER AND NICHOLAS KATZENBACH, DEPUTY U.S. ATTORNEY GENERAL.

Probers Seek To Clear Air on Assassination

By the Associated Press

A member of the presidential commission investigating President Kennedy's assassination said today the bipartisan body should leave "a detailed record for the people behind us."

The commission, headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, holds its first meeting today to set up machinery and procedures for its top-level inquiry.

Representative Boggs, Democrat of Louisiana, one of four members of Congress named to the commission by President Johnson, told a reporter:

"I don't want the same situation that we have now, with a play running on Broadway with the theme: who shot Abraham Lincoln?"

To Get FBI Report

Mr. Boggs said he could not say whether the commission should hold public hearings. This presumably was among the questions on the agenda of the meeting.

A presidential order empowers the commission to "evaluate all available information" on the shooting in Dallas and to conduct "any further investigation it deems desirable." Mr. Johnson is expected to turn over to the group the exhaustive report now being prepared by the FBI.

Although this report was understood to be close to completion, FBI agents in Dallas were still seeking evidence on the accused assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald, and the subsequent slaying of Oswald by Jack Ruby, owner of Dallas strip-tease clubs. Ruby goes to trial February 3.

The Justice Department reported that Leon Jaworski, Houston attorney who has been named to head the Texas State investigation of the assassination, conferred at the department yesterday.

Mr. Jaworski, talked for an hour with Deputy Attorney General Nicholas Katzenbach. The nature of the exchange was not disclosed.

The State court of inquiry into the assassination may begin late this month, according to Texas Attorney General Waggoner Carr.

The Senate Judiciary Committee deferred action yesterday on a bill to make it a Federal crime to assassinate, or to attempt or conspire to assassinate, the President.

Sen. Everett M. Dirksen (R-Ill.) told newsmen the Committee decided to await the recommendations of the commission appointed by President Johnson to investigate the assassination of President Kennedy.

The bill was introduced by Chairman James O. Eastland (D-Miss.) and other members of the Judiciary Committee shortly after Mr. Kennedy was killed by a sniper's bullets while riding in a motorcade in Dallas on Nov. 22.

The Committee also took no action on a proposed constitutional amendment to deal with the problem of a President's inability to perform his duties.

The amendment, approved by a subcommittee in June, would empower Congress to write legislation specifying the method for determining when a President is too disabled physically or mentally to discharge his responsibilities.

The legislation also could spell out whether a Vice President, in case of presidential inability, assumes the office of the President or just takes over the duties, and whether a President gets his job back if he recovers before the expiration of his term.

Bill Is Delayed On Assassination As Federal Crime

By the Associated Press

The Senate Judiciary Committee has deferred action on a bill to make it a Federal crime to assassinate or to attempt or conspire to assassinate the President.

Senator Dirksen, Republican of Illinois, told reporters the committee decided yesterday to await the recommendations of the commission appointed by President Johnson to investigate the assassination of President Kennedy.

The bill was introduced by Chairman Eastland, Democrat of Mississippi, and other members of the Judiciary Committee shortly after Mr. Kennedy was killed.

The committee also took no action on a proposed constitutional amendment to deal with the problem of a President's inability to perform his duties.

Special Panel on Assassination Due to Meet Tomorrow

By the Associated Press

Chief Justice Earl Warren will set up the machinery tomorrow for the high-level investigation ordered by President Johnson into the assassination of President Kennedy.

But Government sources said they doubt that the basic material of the probe—a long and apparently still growing report by the FBI—will be ready for the seven-member Warren commission by then.

The Chief Justice sent messages to the other six members yesterday calling them to a Thursday morning meeting in the National Archives Building, to organize the commission's work.

Justice Warren told reporters that much but said no further details would be disclosed now. And there was no indication whether the White House, upon receiving the FBI report from the Justice Department, will make it public before forwarding it to the Warren group.

No Oswald-Ruby Link Seen

Official sources report that the FBI account will indicate that Lee Harvey Oswald, 24-year-old former Marine who once sought Soviet citizenship, planned and executed alone the shooting of President Kennedy in Dallas November 22.

The report also is said to indicate no link between Oswald and Jack Ruby, the Dallas striptease joint owner who shot Oswald to death two days later. The FBI reportedly was still checking out belated tips and possible new leads.

In Dallas, meanwhile, Rudy's trial has been rescheduled for February 3.

Judge Joe B. Brown reset the trial, originally scheduled for Monday, by agreement with District Attorney Henry Wade and Ruby's attorney, Tom Howard, who said they had not completed their cases.

It was also learned in Dallas that the Internal Revenue Service is trying to collect $20,880 from Ruby through four liens filed with the county clerk. The Government claims he failed to pay all the taxes he owed and the liens cloud title to any property he holds until they are paid.

Texas Attorney General Waggoner Carr has put his staff to work in drawing the groundwork for the State investigation of the assassination. He said his investigation will supplement those of the special presidential committee and the FBI.

Mr. Carr plans to hold a court of inquiry, a legal means to obtain sworn testimony without taking a case to trial. He has named Leon Jaworski of Houston as special counsel to assist the probe. Mr. Jaworski helped prosecute war criminals at Nuremberg after World War II.

There had been earlier predictions the FBI report would reach the White House shortly, but Goverment sources now say they doubt it will be completed by the time the Warren group convenes—and perhaps not even this week.

Members Listed

The special investigating commission was authorized by a presidential order issued last Friday to evaluate "all available information" and to conduct "any further investigation it deems desirable."

By creating it, President Johnson apparently has quieted most of the demands of Congress members for separate and possibly overlapping Senate and House investigations.

Members of the special commission, besides Justice Warren, are Allen W. Dulles, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, John J. McCloy, former president of the World Bank and high commissioner to Germany, and four members of Congress — Senators Cooper, Republican of Kentucky, and Russell, Democrat of Georgia, House majority whip Boggs, Democratic of Louisana, and Representative Ford, Republican of Michigan.

Assassination Probers Meet Thursday

The first meeting of the Presidential Commission that will investigate the assassination of President Kennedy will be held Thursday morning.

Chief Justice Earl Warren, chairman of the Commission, announced late yesterday that the group will meet in closed session at 10 a.m. in the conference room of the National Archives.

The Chief Justice said Commission members will discuss organizational plans and study the manner in which the investigation should proceed.

The Commission was established by President Johnson last Friday to look into the circumstances around both the assassination of Mr. Kennedy and the death of his suspected assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald, two days later.

Justice Department Report

In addition to the Chief Justice, the Commission members are Sens. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.) and John Sherman Cooper (R-Ky.), Reps. Hale Boggs (D-La.) and Gerald R. Ford (R-Mich.), former CIA director Allen W. Dulles and New York banker John J. McCloy.

Presumably, the Commission will receive later this week the report the Justice Department is preparing on the assassination. The Department, which is assembling that report from the investigations of the FBI and other government agencies, will present it first to President Johnson. He may make some of the factual material public or he may turn the entire document over to the Commission.

News dispatches from Dallas reported that Texas Attorney General Waggoner Carr said the state Court of Inquiry into the assassination may begin late this month. He has named Dallas District Attorney Henry Wade and Houston attorney Leon Jaworski to assist him in interrogating witnesses. Jaworski, who participated as a prosecutor in the Nuremburg trials after World War II, is scheduled to prosecute the Federal Government's contempt case against Mississippi Governor Ross Barnett if it goes to trial.

To Call Witnesses

Carr said witnesses will be subpoenaed and questioned under oath in the state inquiry, which will be held either in Dallas or in Austin, the state capitol. Carr said he had been told the Presidential Commission will not call witnesses, United Press International reported.

It now appears that both investigations may have completed most of their work before Jack Ruby is tried on a charge of murdering Oswald.

Judge Joe B. Brown of the State District Court in Dallas yesterday postponed Ruby's trial from Dec. 9 to Feb. 3. Both Wade, who will prosecute Ruby, and Tom Howard, who will defend him, told the Judge they need more time to prepare their cases. Howard said he plans to request a pre-trial sanity hearing for Ruby.

Meanwhile, Federal investigators are trying to wind up their fact-finding missions.

Soviet Material No Help

It was learned yesterday that the material supplied by the Soviet Embassy to the State Department last week contained almost nothing helpful in establishing the motives of Oswald.

The material, turned over at the initiative of the Soviet government, contained such things as the formal documents Oswald completed for his entry into the Soviet Union, his stay there and his return to the United States.

It was also learned that the FBI is trying to interview every person who stayed in the Dallas YMCA during two days in early October. Oswald checked into the YMCA on October 2. Ruby frequented the same YMCA.

Warren Heads Panel to Probe Assassination

President Names 7-Man Group to Report to Nation

A special commission headed by Chief Justice Warren has been appointed by President Johnson to investigate "all facts and circumstances" relating to the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

Under the President's directive, the investigation also will include the circumstances of the slaying of the accused assassin of the late President by a Dallas night club operator.

Mr. Johnson last night announced the appointment of the seven-member top-level commission with bipartisan congressional representation. In a statement the White House said:

"The President is instructing the special commission to satisfy itself that the truth is known as far as can be discovered, and to report its findings and conclusions to him, to the American people and to the world."

Other Members Named

Other members of the commission are:

Senators Russell, Democrat of Georgia, and Cooper, Republican of Kentucky.

Representatives Boggs, Democrat of Louisiana, and Ford, Republican of Michigan.

Allen Dulles, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, and John J. McCloy, New York banker, who has served in many top-level government positions.

As the White House announcement was being made in the early evening, the President, in his office, was signing an executive order formally creating the commission. The order was to be made public today.

It [illegible] the commission was given subpoena and all other "necessary powers" to carry out the investigation. The President ordered all Federal agencies and offices to cooperate and provide services for the commission and empowered the commission to conduct any further investigation that it deems necessary.

Prompt Start Expected

Under an earlier directive, the FBI has been making an all-out inquiry. The Presidential order directs that all evidence it has uncovered be turned over to the commission.

In addition, the White House said the findings of a Texas court of inquiry, ordered by Texas Attorney General Waggoner Carr, will be made available to the commission.

The White House said the President had talked personally by telephone with each member of the commission before the announcement was made.

There was no time limit set on the commission's making its report. But the commission is expected to begin work at once, with the Chief Justice setting the time and place for the first meeting and the circumstances under which its work would be carried out.

The White House said the President had consulted with Democratic and Republican leaders of the Senate and House with respect to the special commission.

Its creation is expected to head off congressional probes into the assassination.

Forecast by Boggs

Before the announcement was made, the Senate Judiciary Committee had said it would conduct an inquiry. But Senator Eastland, Democrat of Mississippi, who heads the committee, said at his home in Mississippi he would not pursue the matter.

The announcement was forecast by Representative Boggs after several House members demanded an investigation. Early in the day, Mr. Boggs told the House he was sure the President would name a commisison to conduct the investigation.

What, effect, if any, the special inquiry would have on the prospective trial of Jack Rubinstein, alias Jack Ruby, the Dallas night club operator, was not indicated.

Ruby already has been indicted on charges of killing Lee Harvey Oswald, the accused assassin, as he was about to be removed from the Dallas police headquarters to the jail there.

All members of the special commission have legal backgrounds, but most of them have not ben active in the field in many years.

Assassination to Be Probed By Presidential Commission

By MIRIAM OTTENBERG
Star Staff Writer

Representative Boggs of Louisiana disclosed today that a presidential commission will make the formal investigation of the facts surrounding the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Mr. Boggs, who is assistant House Democratic leader, said he had learned "on the highest authority" that a special commission, which will include members of Congress, would be named by President Johnson.

He said the members of the commission would be appointed by Mr. Johnson at the earliest possible moment, probably by the end of the week.

Parallels Pearl Harbor

Mr. Boggs declined to say directly that he had been informed of the projected investigation by the White House, but said he had it on the highest authority.

He had suggested earlier this week that the investigation should be handled at the highest level and be conducted by "a blue ribbon panel."

Mr. Boggs said he favored an inquiry by a presidential commission over hearings conducted by any one committee of Congress.

He compared what he has in mind—and what presumably now has White House backing—to the type of committee that conducted the investigation of the Pearl Harbor disaster.

"Obviously," he added, "that's the way it's going to be done."

Earlier today, Chairman Eastland of the Senate Judiciary Committee said his committee would decide next Wednesday whether to conduct its own investigation.

Reached at his home in Mississippi, Senator Eastland was less definite on the investigation than Senate Republican Leader Dirksen, who is the ranking Republican on the committee.

Senator Dirksen had told the Senate Wednesday that an investigation by the Judiciary Committee has been approved by Senate leaders of both parties. He later told newsmen that he expects public hearings before the Christmas recess.

Favors One Probe

Senator Eastland said that he favors a congressional investigation but he doesn't think there should be more than one. He indicated that he wants to make sure that there is general agreement that the Judiciary Committee investigation will not be duplicated by hearings on the House side.

Despite reports that the Justice Department has agreed to co-operate with the Senate Judiciary Committee, Senator Eastland said he had not checked with Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover nor any other Justice officials.

The entire membership of the Judiciary Committee has sponsored legislation to make assassination of the President and other top Federal officials a Federal crime. The investigation was regarded by committee members as a possible part of the hearings on that bill.

Protecting Presidents

THE WHOLE broad area of the protection provided the President of the United States is in need of the most searching inquiry in light of what happened a week ago today at Dallas.

To begin with the long-time custom of placing the security of the President under the Treasury Department with its limited detail of Secret Service men assigned to such duty is cause for thorough study.

It may be argued that it is traditional for the Secret Service to look out for the safety of the President but can we stand on tradition when the life of our chief executive is placed in serious danger?

There are so many ramifications to this security task that it involves far more than merely posting guards in strategic locations at all times to prevent physical violence on the President. Subversion is an ever-growing menace in this country and such activity requires constant, professional investigation.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation today maintains a vast system of investigatory procedure for keeping an eye on subversives. Because of the FBI's long experience in this type of work it must be said that the Bureau is the most qualified to continue the activity. With its offices and agents strung out in cities all over the country the FBI is in a position to do the best possible job of protecting the Nation from subversive elements. It is known that the FBI maintains a constant file on persons believed to be a threat to the United States whether they be in Washington, D. C. or Wheeling, W. Va.

Because of the FBI's operation in this whole field of national security it would seem only sensible that the agency be directed to take on the added duties of protecting the President of the United States. There would be less chance of a slip-up in preparing local protection when the President must stray from Washington. As it stands now security precautions must be coordinated on such occasions between the FBI and the Secret Service. With both agencies involved there always is the chance of a slip-up or misunderstanding which might pave the way for a serious breach of security.

There is no place for jealousy in this attempt to protect our Presidents. At the earliest possible date the Congress should undertake a thorough investigation of security measures with the intention of doing all that can be done to guard against a repeat of the horrible event of last week.

Besides revamping the responsibility for providing protection for the President there is need also to examine the practice of allowing the President to take such dangerous risks as riding in public parades through the streets of our cities.

There is no possible way of assuring complete protection of the President from a madman when he is exposed to thousands of persons lining a parade route with tall, over - hanging buildings on both sides. Even the bubble - top sometimes used on the Presidential limousine is not bullet - proof. No matter what the President's personal feelings might be on exposing himself to the people the welfare of the Nation cannot allow him this freedom of movement.

We have learned a bitter lesson through a most tragic experience and it is hoped that now we will have the sense to take proper steps to safeguard against ever again going through such an awful agony.

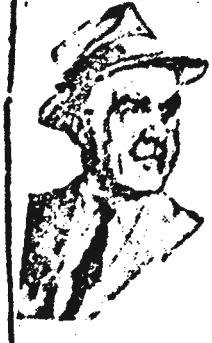
THE WARREN REPORT (in the first paperback version) gives less than one line to assassin Oswald's probable murder-motive . . . It abbreviates (to a few words) Oswald's complaint to Gov. Connally (when he was Navy Secy) about Oswald's Marine Corps discharge being changed from "General" to "Undesirable" . . . The paperback version reports the letter said he would "take all means," etc . . . Oswald's angry letter was actually a threat: "My mother forwarded the letter notifying that my discharge was changed from General to Undesirable. This is a terrible thing to do to me and my family and unless it is changed back I will one day return and DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT!"



The Warren probers shrugged off Oswald's probable motive with this "likely story" . . . "His wife said her husband had nothing against Gov. Connally. He knew the Governor had nothing to do with changing his discharge papers. My husband liked President Kennedy because of his fight for civil rights."

THE CHARGE OF NEGLIGENCE against the Secret Servicemen in Dallas was unwarranted, in our opinion . . . Mrs. JFK's half-brother (in Atlantic City) told us: "The President ordered his bodyguards to stay in the second car, saying: 'I don't want the people's view obstructed. I want them to see us!' " . . . The young man said Jackie had so told him . . . We recently reported that LBJ's protection included an agent (in the same limousine) who had a rifle in his lap at all times . . . It is not a rifle, we are now informed . . . In every car accompanying the President one agent has his trigger-finger on a machine gun.

THE FOREIGN PRESS is "disappointed" with the Warren report. It continues to confuse readers with: "Oswald was part of a conspiracy," etc . . . They repeat the argument that wealthy Texas oil people plotted to have the President slain because he planned to lower their income; that JFK once said of big businessmen: "My father once told me they were all SOB's!" . . . Some of the foreign press also suspect that Russian leaders were behind the slaying . . . Why would Khrushchev or his chiefs want JFK dead? . . . Khrushchev was getting along just fine with the administration . . . He agreed to the "Hot Line" setup suggested by JFK; he sent puppies and other gifts to the Kennedy children; he won a pledge that Cuba would not be invaded; his son-in-law and daughter were entertained at the White House; Washington could be counted on to do nothing—except "object"—about Russia's repeated refusal to pay its UN bills and its long-overdue debts to the U.S. . . . Why would Russia want Mr. Kennedy replaced when Mr. Khrushchev knew the President was a man of peace—a man with whom Khrushchev "could reason things out"?

WHY DID TEXAS SENATOR John Tower arrange Oswald's fare to return to the country the mental cripple repudiated "because I am a Marxist!"? . . . The Warren Report revealed that Oswald paid back the money . . . Who gave or loaned that sum to repay? . . . Considering he was "usually jobless and broke"? . . . Why would he slay the President, the father of little children, when Oswald loved his own tots so much he changed and washed their diapers?

Why the nonsense by the uninformed about the rifle (found in the Texas Repository Bldg.) "not proved to be Oswald's"? . . . When the FBI proved beyond doubt that Oswald's palm print was on the weapon—and that a receipt (found in his effects at his home) proved it was for the murder rifle purchased from a mail-order gun firm?

WHY HASN'T ANY LAW ENFORCEMENT GROUP (or any newspaper) found out the source for the expensive page advertisement that ran in a Dallas newspaper the morning the President died? The person who signatured the hate-inciting ad reportedly could not afford the fee. A newsmag currently names the nephew of a rich anti-Kennedy Texan as allegedly "putting up part of the money" in a brief gossip item . . . What did Melvin Belli, one of the lawyers dropped by the Jack Ruby family (but who is preparing Ruby's appeal brief gratis) mean when he told me in an interview the other middle-of-the-night: "Did you know Ruby confessed to me?" "Confessed to Whattt!?" we exploded . . . "Read my book 'Dallas Justice' due Oct. 19th and find out!" he replied, sighing that he had to get some sleep.

WHAT IDIOT LEGISLATORS wrote the law that it is a Federal offense to threaten a President, but not a Federal violation to kill one? . . . Why hasn't the government decorated Secret Service Agent Clinton Hill (who raced on foot to catch up to the accelerated car on which Mrs. Kennedy frantically climbed in panic) considering Agent Youngblood was medal'd for protecting LBJ? . . . Why is Oswald's grave protected day and night?

Why does his mother keep saying: "They haven't proved my son did it," when she must know what a psychopathic liar he was? . . . Why do people pay for stupid books (and lectures) by persons discredited as fakers—some of whom cannot deny being "former" Reds?

WHY DIDN'T THE WARREN REPORT mention the name of the "newspaper columnist" (wrist-spanked along with other news media) for repeating the bunk started by a German magazine: That Oswald and Jack Ruby were co-plotters against JFK?

FROM THE SEPT. 28 WARREN REPORT: "Rumor: Ruby and Oswald were seen together at the Carousel Club" . . . Finding: "All assertions that Oswald was seen in the company of Ruby or anyone else at the Carousel Club have been investigated. None of them merits credence."

From the Winchell Report of Sept. 21: "The commy doubt-spreaders and other punks who started the baseless report that assassin Oswald and assassin Jack Ruby 'knew each other' did not impress any of the members of the Warren Comm. It will be fully covered in their any-edition-due-report."

ERROR ACKNOWLEDGED

Sentence in Report Is Phrased Wrongly

Several members of the Warren Commission acknowledged today that a key sentence of the mammoth report—one over which they labored long—didn't say what they intended to say.

The sentence followed a series of statements that the commission had found no evidence of a conspiracy. Here's how the sentence was phrased in the report:

"Because of the difficulty of proving negatives to a certainty the possibility of others being involved with either Oswald or Ruby cannot be established categorically, but if there is any such evidence it has been beyond the reach of all the investigative agencies and resources of the United States and has not come to the attention of this commission."

Members of the commission, asked about the sentence, agreed that it should have read either that the possibility of others being involved cannot be disproved categorically—or that the impossibility of others being involved cannot be established categorically.

These Days . . . . . By John Chamberlain

Pity the Poor FBI

PITY the poor FBI. In the past, it has gotten it in the neck for taking too severe a view of the Communist menace. Its chief, J. Edgar Hoover, has been criticized for seeing Reds under the bed. The Reuther brothers, Walter and Victor, in their famous memo to Robert F. Kennedy (then the Attorney General), insisted that the danger from the left was not in it in comparison to the danger from the right, and called upon the Department of Justice to put a stop to Red witch-hunting by Federal sleuths.

Chamberlain

That, of course, was almost three years before John F. Kennedy was killed in Dallas. The Warren Commission report makes it plain that the assassination was the act of Lee Harvey Oswald, a loner whose Marxist background was well known to the FBI. The "get J. Edgar Hoover" faction is now echoing the Warren Commission's criticism of the FBI for its "unduly restrictive view of its responsibilities in preventive intelligence work."

"The argument is that the Dallas police should have been tipped off by the FBI about Oswald's history of dalliance in the Soviet Union, his attempt to forswear his American citizenship, and his work for the Fair Play for Cuba Committee, in time to have him taken into detention before Mr. Kennedy made the trip to Texas.

THE WARREN Commission report admits that criticism of the FBI on this score is "tinged with hindsight." As, indeed, it is. Moreover, it comes with exceedingly bad grace from a commission headed by the Chief Justice of the United States, for the Warren Court has been most zealous in its insistence that Communists have civil rights must not be invaded.

The Court has also been oversolicitous of the rights of alleged criminals. In the Mallory case, for example, the Court insisted that a Negro who had been convicted in a lower court of choking and raping a woman should be freed simply because he had been held for some 11 hours for questioning before arraignment. The same man later choked and raped another woman and was jailed for it.

Always, up to the present, the liberals have insisted that "raw and unprocessed" material in the FBI files should not be used as the basis for proceeding against any person. But now we are suddenly offered the proposition that, before a President visits a given town, every suspected Red or psychotic whose "raw" record is known to FBI agents should be forcibly detained for a safe period.

This is idiotic on the face of it. For instance, on one of President Johnson's trips to New York City, his itinerary took him past the dwelling places or hangouts of 3700 persons who might legitimately be suspected of subversive, psychotic or crackpot tendencies. Imagine the uproar from the civil libertarians if 3700 persons were put under police surveillance at one time. The FBI would be accused of making its "raw" data the basis of wholesale invasion of private rights.

THE POINT is that Lee Harvey Oswald, before the Kennedy murder, had not been known for violent tendencies. He was merely one of thousands of persons in America who are known to the FBI for having had relations with the Reds of one sort or another.

If the Government couldn't even apply the Smith Act to control Communist subversion in a manner satisfactory to the Supreme Court, how could a big city police force justify the detention of every suspected Red or psychopath who might turn up to watch a presidential motorcade go past a big building?

The police force that did that would be denounced from one end of the country to the other. The leftist Nation magazine's Fred J. Cook, perennial critic of the FBI, would devote a whole magazine issue to it; liberal law school professors would debate it endlessly, and even some conservatives might legitimately observe that Americans are entitled to their freedom until they have been duly convicted of breaking a law.

Time to Ease Up

THE SECRET SERVICE and the Federal Bureau of Investigation have taken a terrific beating for ineptness in their preparations to safeguard President Kennedy in Dallas. Censure was coming to them. The Warren Commission gave it to them.

Nevertheless, both organizations through the many years have had brilliant records of intrepidity, zeal and achievement. It has to be remembered that a Secret Service man risked his life in shielding Mrs. Kennedy and that another, with equal spontaneity, acted similarly to protect Lyndon B. Johnson.

Might-have-beens are futile. Now, in consequence of the Commission's report, a special presidential committee will seek to devise a plan to pinpoint and improve the functions of the Secret Service and the FBI. The forthcoming plan is likely to be drastic.

Meanwhile, no policing organization, however skilled and determined, can provide infallible protection for a President if he persists in riding in cars from which the "bubble-tops" have been discarded. Or if he scorns safeguards by thrusting himself, hand extended, into the curbstone crowd.

Mr. Johnson, Presidents do not grow on trees.

Under The Stone Lifted In Dallas

IF THE WARREN REPORT, all 888 pages of it with the 16 appendices, doesn't resolve the myths, detective conceits, and fictive creativeness that the who-killed-Kennedy troubadours have spawned, then there is nothing for them to do but to spin around in their self-contained fantasy circle until the end of time.

It is a memorable and—in its unadorned fact-minded way—a moving document. In it the most tragic single event of our time finds the kind of chronicle that would be possible only in an age of high technology from which the sense of tragedy has not yet been squeezed out.

LERNER

President Johnson's prudent foresight in appointing the kind of committee he did, with the chief justice at its head, is now amply justified. All the precision and resources of modern technology have been lavished on every phase of the episode, but beyond technology the report shows judgment and wisdom.

It is not only the historian who will quarry in it and in the volumes of testimony and exhibits still to come. The psychologist, the political thinker, the social theorist, the legal scholar, the dramatist and novelist, the poet, the student of folklore and myth; all of them will keep coming back to this body of facts and judgment.

Some will come to it to achieve clarity on the inevitable puzzling gaps and contradictions of the case, others to nourish that imaginative grasp of reality which every artist cherishes and which is so different from the sickly axe-grinding "plot" theories.

Despite the commission's findings, that it was neither a left-wing plot nor a right-wing plot, that Oswald acted as a loner in killing President Kennedy and that Ruby acted as a loner in killing Oswald, the plot theories will die hard. The ghosts will still stalk the graveyard.

Messrs. Thomas Buchanan, Joachim Joesen and Mark Lane, to name the three commanders of the conspiracy-theory battalions, will continue to remain unconvinced—because they are unconvincible. They will continue to have followers, if only because of the stubborn human view that nothing so dark and sinister as the Kennedy killing could have been done except by a linked band of assassins and accomplices.

It may be argued quite reasonably, of course, that there is a haunting improbability about the whole action. Too many things had to fit in with too many things — wild chance inter-locking with wild chance—before an embittered brooding young man, his self-image crumbling into fragments around him, could conceive and carry out his private plan to kill the President, and before another confused man, playing the self-assumed role of avenger for a whole people, could manage to kill the killer.

Yet it may be exactly this grand chain of little linked events, any one of which might have turned out differently and doomed the whole linkage and left Kennedy alive, which gives a stamp of the authentic to the whole thing.

The Kennedy assassination story is crammed with lethal "ifs": if Oswald had not been allowed to return from Russia; if he had in fact gone to Cuba as he wished; if he had not suffered a wounding rebuff to his male ego from his wife before the killing; if the bubble-top on the President's car had been up; if Secret Service men had been riding with him; if the sixth floor had not been deserted by everyone except Oswald—then death would not have been the victor. All the heartbreaking "ifs" of the case march through the pages of the report in a melancholy file.

Yet it was Hegel who spoke of "the ruses of history." Like history, Death has its ruses too. True, in order to reach a glittering target like Kennedy and humble him, Death had to manage a number of unlikely linked events, against highly adverse probabilities. But that is how it was, the skull was ripped open by one of the bullets, the blood spilt out, the brain was stilled.

The Report pulls no punches on how badly the President was protected against the procession of improbable "ifs." The Secret Service itself comes out pretty bedraggled from the inquiry, and the FBI even worse. This isn't a question of any plot, but of a lose performance of a job, or routineering, of the failure to co-ordinate the many diverse parts of the operation of guarding the President of the U. S.

On one score I felt the report let us down; in its treatment of the "right wing climate" in Dallas and in the South generally. It is true that logically the atmosphere in Dallas was not connected with Oswald's act, which was not the act of a right-winger. But psychologically the climate of extremist violence, whether political or non-political, was very much connected with it.

The black-bordered anti-Kennedy advertisement in the Dallas paper, the "Wanted for Treason" handbills, the schemings and maneuverings to get national publicity for this or that crummy outfit: all of it was there as part of the climate. The report has lifted a stone—and the things crawling under it are not pretty to see.

FBI's boss urges caution in presidential protection

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2—FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover has cautioned against establishment of Gestapo tactics in efforts to safeguard the President, The Evening Star reported today.

He spoke out in testifying before the Warren Commission investigating the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, The Star said in a copyrighted article.

"We don't want a Gestapo.

"We have to, I think, maintain an even balance," Hoover is quoted as saying.

He testified also, The Star said, about a State Department document which it said indicated that Lee Harvey Oswald, Kennedy's assassin, was a thoroughly safe risk.

Hoover's testimony has not been made public by the Warren Commission. It referred to his testimony in its report on the assassination, published Monday.

In that report, the commission criticized the FBI for "an unduly restrictive view of its role in preventive intelligence work prior to the assassination." The commission indicated the FBI was remiss in not reporting to the Secret Service Oswald's presence in Dallas.

The Star, in a story by Jerry O'Leary—a long-time friend of Hoover—said a transcript of his May 14 testimony was made available to The Star today.

The FBI so far has made no comment on the commission's finding, but officials have indicated that the report was taken bitterly by high FBI officials.

Hoover's testimony also included recommendations for protective measures that he thought might be more successful than those employed by the Secret Service [illegible] Kennedy was killed.

"I don't think you can get absolute security without almost establishing a police state, and we don't want that," Hoover told the commission.

THE FBI CHIEF said he is "not very happy with the criteria expansion"—measures affecting the lists of names of subversives and extremists being furnished by the FBI to the Secret Service as a new security measure since the assassination.

Hoover estimated that, with the new criteria for furnishing names of potential risks, some 10,000 subversives and extremists will have been culled by the FBI. He said:

"Then you come to the problem of what you are going to do when the Secret Service gets those names. They have to call upon the local authorities.

"Just recently, in the city of Chicago, when the President was there, the local authorities were asked to give assistance as they usually do to the Secret Service and they went to the homes of some of these people, and it resulted really almost in house arrest.

"Now, I don't think there is any place in this country for that kind of thing, but these people who belonged to extreme subversive organizations . . . were told that they couldn't leave their house or if they did they would be accompanied by a police officer."

In New York City alone, Hoover said, there are up to 4,000 such individuals in subversive groups.

HOOVER TOLD the Warren Commission that the FBI received a State Department report "that indicated this man (Oswald) was a thoroughly safe risk here, he had changed his views, he was a loyal [illegible] and had seen the light of day, so to speak."

The document, he said, was based on an interview with Oswald by the American Embassy in Moscow before he returned to the United States. Hoover said there is no doubt in his mind that Oswald was a dedicated Communist.

Hoover emphasized that none of the FBI's information on Oswald indicated any tendency toward violence. While many persons read the Communist party organ, The Worker, they can't be branded as potential assassins or hazards to the security of the country, he said.

"It is in that area that I am particularly concerned that we don't become hysterical and go too far in restricting the citizens of our country from exercising their civil and constitutional rights. The mere fact that a person disagrees with you on communism doesn't mean he should be arrested," Hoover said.

At another point, Hoover told the commission, "I think the extreme right is just as much a danger to the freedom of this country as the extreme left."

HOOVER TOLD the Warren panel he believes Kennedy would be alive today had he been riding in a specially armored car with bullet-proof glass—like Hoover's, now on loan to President Johnson.

He gave the commission these recommendations that he said he had passed on to President Johnson and the Secret Service for future presidential security:

"First regarding travel, advise the Secret Service as far in advance as possible of the president's travel plans and proposed itinerary. There have been presidents who suddenly decide they are going somewhere and the Secret Service does not have the chance always to cover the area . . ."

"Second, avoid publicizing exact routes of travel as long as possible. In Dallas, the route was publicized at least 24 hours before so everybody knew where he would be driving."

Two Views of the Warren Report

By Murray Kempton

IT REMAINS our duty, I am afraid, to look at the Warren Commission report with as cold an eye as we can. We are all the only appellate court Lee Oswald is ever likely to have."

The commission's report seems to me a compilation of evidence so massive as to make unreasonable any doubt that Oswald killed President Kennedy and that he acted alone.

Even so, there remain certain doubts.

The Warren Commission has decided that Lee Oswald shot President Kennedy twice, once in the neck at 175-or-so feet and once in the head at 265 feet. Oswald missed one of three shots. If the first shot hit the President's neck, and the second missed and the third hit his head, Oswald would have had at most 5.6 seconds. If either the first or the third shot missed, he would have had as many as eight seconds.

The problem is whether Oswald was capable of firing accurately at that speed with a bolt-action rifle. He had been an average marksman as a Marine; he had fired for record only twice. No witness acceptable to the commission gave any evidence that Oswald had fired the murder weapon often, altho Marina Oswald remembered that she had seen him working the bolt back and forth, a practice which could have improved his firing speed.

The Commission accepts Marina Oswald's story that her husband shot at Gen. Edward Walker in April of 1963. Gen. Walker was reported to be sitting at an open window; Oswald would then have fired into a lighted room at a stationary target with his rifle at rest on a fence at a range barely a quarter of the distance traveled by the bullet which killed President Kennedy. And Oswald missed the shot.

His performance that afternoon in Dallas can only be explained as one of those days when a golfer cuts 10 strokes off his normal score. The Commission ran a series of test with three marksmen using Oswald's weapon and firing at successive targets placed at the range where President Kennedy appeared three times under Oswald's sights.

The test firers were rated master marksmen by the National Rifle Association; that is the highest of NRA's five gradations of skill. The Commission might as well have been testing the probable performance of a man who shoots in the mid-80s by testing the course with scratch golfers. Even so, these masters missed the target on five of their 18 shots, which is not too far above Oswald's presumed average. One master missed two of his three shots, an average worse than Oswald's. These masters shot as fast as they could. Even so, if Oswald had had only 5.6 seconds to fire three shots at President Kennedy, he was faster than these masters in four cases and slower only in two.

If he had had eight seconds, the Commission's maximum, he must still have got off his shots faster than one of these masters was able to.

Still and all, when the masters had finished, Ronald Simmons, who ran their tests, told the Commission "that on the basis of these results the probability of hitting the target . . . was relatively high."

The results would indicate that the probability of Oswald's hitting the target two times out of three was, on the contrary, rather low. On the weight of all the evidence, it would be unreasonable not to concede that he probably shot above capacity. But it is hardly fair to his ghost for his judges to attempt to raise the implausible to the relatively probable.

That is the sort of thing prosecutors do.

By William F. Buckley Jr.

THE Warren Report is, so far as one can judge, a highly responsible public document, which shows that the Commission seriously examined alternative hypotheses seeking to explain the assassination of President Kennedy.

The Commission showed a commendable restaraint in resisting the temptation to account for things that are simply unknowable (with Oswald dead)—such as, for instance, why did Oswald, leaving the scene of the assassination, walk a few blocks only to catch a bus that headed him right back in the direction he had come from?

It is interesting to speculate on why he did that, but it is none of the Commission's business unless such movements tend to confirm a construction of the events at variance with what is manifest. The Commission simply reports what apparently happened —not why it happened—and does so with an authoritative thoroness.

Nor, incidentally, does the Commission's Report rule out the possibility that Oswald received training in the Soviet Union as an agent. This could have been the case and the Commission's Report would still be substantially correct. Because there is no evidence to support the conclusion that Oswald was acting under the orders of anything but his own deranged mind when he squeezed the trigger.

A cautionary note is in order. The investigation of the assassination of Mr. Kennedy was an investigation of an historical episode. It was not an investigation of the evil potential of any organized group of human beings. We know the lengths to which an individual can go—Oswald traveled those lengths. Having established that he did, we must not go on to draw logically false conclusions and deduce that the communist organization is incapable of any such act. History argues quite the other way; it argues that the communists are capable of everything short of willful self-destruction in order to accomplish their ends.

As a general rule, political assassinations are frowned upon by the communists because it is difficult to gauge or control their aftermath.

It is, as a rule, only in situations that call for utter chaos that the Nechayevite tocsin is sounded, calling for wanton, undifferentiated violence. Such a situation does not exist in the relatively stable United States.

It is necessary to bear in mind that the Warren Commission absolved the Soviet Union from any complicity in this assassination, but did not do so by adducing any latent purity in the Soviet soul.

Finally, there remains the idiot fringe, which will not be satisfied until a commission comes along that proves President Kennedy was struck down by Gen. Walker while H. L. Hunt was passing him the ammunition.

Before he had even laid eyes on it, Bertrand Russell, the author of Summa Mathematicae, deduced that the Report "is a sorrily incompetent document (which) covers its authors in shame."

There is the complementary lunacy on the right, suggested by Professor Revilo Oliver's conclusion that Kennedy was done in by Oswald acting under orders of either the Soviet Union or the CIA —"I am not sure which, but after all the difference is only a book-keeping one."

At least Professor Oliver is amusing, while Bertrand Russell never is, nowadays. There is a serious obligation, when expressing outrageous points of view, to amuse one's audience, lest they think to take you seriously.

PUBLISHERS RUSH WARREN REPORT

6 Editions of Findings Meet Large Public Demand

By HARRY GILROY

Release of the Warren Commission report on the assassination of President Kennedy has set six publishers off in a race against time. Two paperback editions of the report are already on sale on newsstands and in book stores and four hardcover editions will be shipped in the next four weeks.

The publishers received copies versions of the report the afternoon of the report in Washington last Friday, along with major news agencies. They were free to publish the report because there was no copyright on it. Release time was set for 6:30 P.M. Sunday.

The publishers had to face a financial risk in printing the report when the Government Printing Office was ready with the book in a hardcover version for $3.25 and in paperbound form for $2.50.

Popular Library got out 350,000 copies of a 640-page paperback version of the summary of the report in time to start sale in New York City at 6:31 P.M. Sunday.

Bantam Books put out on Tuesday an 800-page paperbound book with the summary, appendix and index of the report and with explanatory articles by four New York Times staff members. Priced at $1, it went on sale in Chicago, Boston, Washington and Baltimore Tuesday and in New York and London yesterday.

AP Plans An Edition

The Associated Press is striving to bring out on Friday a 400-page hardcover edition priced at $1.50, which will contain the summary and most of the appendix as well as interpretive material. This edition will be distributed through newspapers that are members of The Associated Press.

Doubleday & Co. counts on shipping a $4.95 hardcover edition by Oct. 5. This book will contain 976 pages and will include interpretive material as well as the summary, appendix and index.

The Book-of-the-Month Club and the McGraw-Hill Book Company are getting out 800-page hardcover editions of the Bantam book with New York Times material. Copies are to be ready on Oct. 19. The book will be priced at $3.95 by McGraw-Hill. The Book-of-the-Month Club will sell the book by mail at the same price but will also [illegible] to members of the club who buy another book during October.

[illegible]ualdi, publisher of [illegible]y, said yesterday [illegible] to put out the [illegible] form. "I've been in lots of races, but never as hectic a one, and never have we been this successful."

Two Popular Library editors got copies of the report at 9 A.M. Friday at the White House. One flew to Boston and drove 35 miles to Clinton, Mass., where the Colonial Press had mobilized its staff to put the report into book form while the other editor brought a copy to New York for editorial and production decisions.

One Day Early

The final hours of an intensive production effort had Mr. Lualdi and other executives involved in typing shipping labels and driving light trucks to circulate the book to news stands. Colonial Press had turned out the book a day faster than anticipated.

Bantam, with a bigger production job because of the complete nature of the book it produced, got out an 800-page volume in 80 hours of work. The book includes 32 pages of illustrations. Harrison E. Salisbury, an assistant managing editor of The New York Times, wrote an introduction. James Reston an associate editor, and Anthony Lewis, a member of the Washington staff, did interpretive articles and Tom Wicker, chief Washington correspondent, wrote a prologue.

The Bantam book was produced by the W. F. Hall Company in Chicago. It was sent by air to American cities and to Europe. A Chicago bookstore sold 1,000 copies in five hours, and a Chicago wholesaler ordered 45,000 copies one day after placing his first order of 38,000 copies.

The Bantam print order for the book took 1,000,000 copies yesterday and an increase is contemplated within this week. Popular Library has ordered 300,000 copies from Colonial Press.

The Associated Press has ordered 500,000 copies. Doubleday is running off a first printing of 35,000 of its edition, which includes an introduction by Louis Nizer. The Book-of-the-Month Club is planning an edition of 200,000 to 250,000. McGraw-Hill has ordered 25,000.

The Police and the Press in Dallas

"It seemed like there was a great demand by the general public to know what was going on."—Chief Jesse E. Curry of the Dallas Police Department.

WHILE exercising admirable restraint in dealing with errors and omissions leading up to the assassination of President Kennedy, the Warren Commission takes a curiously accusing attitude as to the way news of that tragedy was handled—by the general news media and by the police of Dallas.

Here was a catastrophe involving the stability of the United States Government and even the welfare of the whole free world. The air immediately was thick with rumors of plots involving foreign governments and domestic conspirators. Mob action against suspects was to be feared. Even war was not out of the question, should belief spread that an enemy country had a hand in the assassination.

It was a time when the national interest demanded facts with the utmost speed. It is a matter of record that the combined efforts of newspapers, radio, and TV furnished the facts which reassured a shocked nation.

How thoroly and how accurately this information job was done is indicated by the Warren report. After 10 months of work, with the power to call witnesses and with all the Government's investigative facilities at their command, these distinguished and able commissioners were unable to develop a single new fact of substance. The people had been told the truth and, with the exception of some minor details, the whole truth, within hours of the event.

News coverage and police work after the assassination were jobs done under explosive emotional tension. And yet the Warren report faults it on the, to us, hair-splitting grounds that a throretical jury in a theoretical trial of Lee Harvey Oswald might have been prejudiced by some of the news reports.

We submit that the barest bones of evidence in this case—which certainly couldn't have been withheld even in deference to legalistic squeamishness—would have caused any citizen to form an opinion. In the sense that a juror should enter the box without intimate prior knowledge of the case, it would have been hard to find a wholly unprejudiced jury as far away as South Viet Nam, if there.

And the commission adds, in building up the case against press and police: "The erroneous disclosures became the basis for distorted reconstructions and interpretations." What were these errors? A policeman looked at the gun and thought it was of German make. Actually it was Italian. The chicken bones found on the sixth floor of the schoolbook building weren't the remains of Oswald's lunch. Another man had eaten there. The map found in Oswald's room was not, as first concluded, an outline of the President's route. The name of the taxi driver who picked up Oswald was misunderstood.

None of these errors had any substantial bearing on the main story or confused anyone for long.

Leadership of the Dallas Police Department obviously is in the hands of decent men; pretty competent men too, as is evidenced by their prompt arrest of the assassin.

Over the years, they had established a relationship of mutual respect and confidence with the newsmen. Aghast at the enormity of the crime which had been committed in their city, they didn't stop to think that a system which had worked with maybe half a dozen reporters wouldn't work with the 300 or so who descended upon them.

This was a serious error, which no one now denies. It caused the inexcusable attempt to make public the transfer of Oswald to another jail which resulted in his death. But it was an error committed in a tense, unreal atmosphere by men who lacked experience with crime of that enormity. And even tho it was a terrible blunder, it did develop from good intentions.

The Dallas police believed that the people had a right to know what was being done. They were anxious to avoid suspicion they had fabricated a suspect and were trying to pin something on him. They were careful to stop rumors of brutality. As one police official said, they didn't want to be accused of "Gestapo" tactics.

If they had it to do over, we are certain they would do many things differently—as who among all those involved would not?—but in our opinion the Dallas Police Department has borne far more than its just share of the blame in connection with the assassination.

As to the press—newspapers, TV and radio—Warren Commission comment as to "regrettable lack of self discipline," in a way may be justified. But this was no $100 liquor store holdup. The newsmen, too, were under unprecedented pressures.

A principal fault among the news media, it seems to us, was and is failure to realize that new techniques of news gathering are compelled by the coming of radio and TV, particularly TV.

Formerly, the pack of newsmen would not have been a fraction of the size of that which gathered in Dallas. Nor would it have been encumbered with great cameras, cables, kleig lights, microphones and the army of technicians necessary to operate them.

All this caused great confusion in Dallas but the fact remains that in the case of the brutal tragedy in Dallas the newsmen, with all their obvious faults, did get the essential facts out to the country and got them out fast enough to head off the ugly rumors that develop automatically when news is suppressed or carelessly reported.

The transition in government was accomplished in orderly fashion. There were no mobs, no foreign complications.

Like all agencies involved, the news media made their mistakes and should profit from this experience and correct them. But the free, if imperfect, press did its appointed job in Dallas and for this, the main, the only important feature of its performance, we offer no apologies.

Report Poses Hard Security Questions

By RICHARD WILSON
Chief of the Tribune Washington Bureau

Washington.

A BETTER AND BIGGER U.S. Secret Service is the main recommendation of the Warren Commission for protecting presidents from assassination.

What the Warren Commission is talking about is a far greater surveillance of what the police have always called "suspicious characters" on a national and international scale. It would be unusual if this could be done without some injustices. Certainly, in the present national atmosphere, persecution and the infringement of civil rights would be charged by some who felt the cold eye of the Secret Service upon them.

Wilson

Lee Harvey Oswald, as a Marxist, might have himself raised the persecution outcry had he been isolated during President Kennedy's trip to Dallas. It must be concluded from the Warren Commission report that the members of the commission believe in retrospect that Oswald should have been isolated from the proximity of President Kennedy.

THE REPORT STATES that the FBI had information on Oswald but had no responsibility to turn this information over to the Secret Service and "took an unduly restrictive view of its role in preventive intelligence work prior to the assassination."

If that was true, why was it true? Most likely because political conditions, and, in fact, Supreme Court decisions, have made it imperative for the FBI to exercise the utmost caution in the use of raw files, or any information, to avoid wrongful accusation or detention.

This does not entirely excuse the FBI and it may be true, as the commission states, "a more carefully coordinated treatment of the Oswald case by the FBI might well have resulted in bringing Oswald's activities to the attention of Secret Service." Presumably, therefore, the presence of this agitator in Dallas was unknown to the Secret Service.

SUPPOSE it had been otherwise. Just what would have been the procedure? Following again the findings and recommendations of the Warren Commission, it must be assumed that the name of every known malcontent or dangerous character running at large in Dallas, particularly if he had ever been a defector, would have been supplied to the Secret Service by the maximum number of law enforcement agencies. The Secret Service would have co-ordinated local and federal law enforcement to take into account all risks to the President from such persons. To have done something about Oswald prior to Nov. 22, 1963, might have meant, in any comparable situation, doing something about scores of other individuals who fall within the police and FBI terminology of "bad actors." Areas of presidential visits would be thus "sanitized."

PERHAPS this is an exaggerated projection of what would have been necessary to carry out the Warren Commission recommendations. But even if it is, it cannot be denied that any future procedures would be much more stringent than those at Dallas. Imagine what would be necessary in New York, Chicago or Los Angeles.

The recommendations of the Warren Commission—and they may be the right ones—thus illustrate the nature of a severe internal problem: How to maintain respect for order, and order itself, in a society where the rights of the individual are prized higher than procedures of law?

What are the limits of what the Warren Commission calls "preventive intelligence?" Had the Secret Service known of Oswald in Dallas, should it have demanded that the Dallas police arrest him or move him out of there during President Kennedy's visit when there was no known lawful charge against him?

THESE ARE hard questions which go to the heart of confidence in the processes of enforcing the law and maintaining order in this troubled period. It is not hard to agree with the Warren Commission, particularly since its chairman is the chief justice of the United States, that the processes of law and order must be more meticulous and more effective in protecting the life of a president. We permit much in the name of freedom but such permissiveness brings troubles.

President Johnson has approved a special committee to provide guidance in defining the general nature of domestic and foreign dangers to presidential security, and seeing that the maximum of federal resources are used in protecting his security. Perhaps in doing so they can find the even larger answer of how to create an atmosphere of safety in this country.

FBI AGENT HERE GIVES NO REPLY

Report Two Disciplined Prompts Questions

Harry G. Maynor, special agent in charge of the local office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, refused comment Tuesday on a report that an agent stationed here was disciplined in connection with handling the Lee Harvey Oswald case when the accused Presidential assassin was in New Orleans.

The Dallas Times-Herald, in a copyrighted story, said "unimpeachable sources revealed two FBI agents, one from New Orleans, were called down for their roles in the case."

The Dallas newspaper did not name the agents, but said the New Orleans agent was ordered transferred. He refused to accept the transfer, retired, and became a private investigator in New Orleans, said the Dallas newspaper.

The other agent, the Times-Herald said, was third in command of the Dallas FBI office. He was demoted, had his salary reduced by $1,000 annually and now investigates routine out-of-the-office assignments.

Both reprimanded agents put in better than 20 years of government service, and each was considered expert on subversives, added The Times-Herald.

When asked to name the New Orleans agent who was disciplined, Maynor answered. "I didn't say one was."

When asked if he were acquainted with the reported Dallas Times-Herald story, Maynor said he was but that he had no comment.

A representative for J. Gordon Shanklin, in charge of the Dallas FBI office, said Shanklin was not in Dallas Tuesday but that the FBI would have no comment.

Warren Report Notable For Its Literary Merit

No eyewitness could positively identify Lee Harvey Oswald as the man who murdered President Kennedy from a sniper's nest in Dallas. And because the 24-year-old ex-Marine insisted on his innocence to the moment of his own violent death, Oswald's guilt as the President's assassin had to be established through circumstantial evidence alone.

Even in routine criminal cases coming daily to the courts, handling such evidence poses the toughest of challenges to the prosecution's crime detection resources and the judicial system's capacity for fairness and responsibility. The challenge is infinitely greater when a crime has gripped the emotions of the nation and the world.

Meeting this legal test was only one of the Warren Commission's tasks in convicting the President's killer. The posthumous conviction of Oswald is itself handicapped by being a non-event, deprived of the movement and drama of a courtroom trial. The conviction exists only in the language and illustrations assembled in the commission's 888-page report published this week.

The case against Oswald thus rests solely on the commission's skill in researching and writing a believable detective story—a tale told not to entertain but to persuade. The story's basic plot has little to offer in the way of literary suspense; the crime's essential solution was known to the public within hours of its occurrence. Yet in the course of backing up that solution with a fascinating array of scientific proofs and exhaustive character studies of Oswald and Jack Ruby, the commission has produced a work of considerable literary merit. The quality of its narrative prose alone gives the report a unique place on the drab shelves of official Government documents.

The direct, vigorous language of the report is all the more remarkable considering that it's a committee product. The actual writing was done by "a substantial number of people" on the commission's staff, according to Dr. Alfred Goldberg, a staff historian. The writing team was weighted heavily with lawyers, but the report is mainly free of legal circumlocution. Somehow the writers resisted any temptation to be ponderously official in describing such incidents as the brave act of Secret Service agent Rufus Youngblood, who was riding with Vice President Johnson in the motorcade. The report captures a vivid scene, as Mr. Youngblood "vaulted into the rear seat and sat on the Vice President in order to protect him."

The writers, indeed, are not afraid to wring the most from moments of intrinsic drama: "At about 8 p.m. the police arrived . . . and asked Marina Oswald whether her husband owned a rifle. She said that he did and then led them into the garage and pointed to the rolled-up blanket. As a police officer lifted it, the blanket hung limply over the [illegible] of the rifle. The rifle was not there."

This narrative style keeps the well-known story of that November weekend from souring stale. More important, the clarity of writing allows the commission's mass of scientific evidence to strike the skeptical reader with maximum effect. Even for those who never seriously questioned Oswald's guilt, the commission's survey of its findings provides a fascinating cram course in modern crime detection methods.

Perhaps the key link in the chain of circumstantial evidence surrounding Oswald is the commission's finding that he owned the murder weapon. Development of the proof required the efforts of experts in several fields. Handwriting specialists from the Treasury and FBI identified Oswald as the man who ordered the Italian carbine from a Chicago sporting goods company, even though he used a fake name. FBI men discovered Oswald's right palm print on the weapon; photographic experts disputed Oswald's claim that a picture of him with the rifle was a phony composite; fiber experts traced the rifle from the blanket in which it was hidden to the paper bag used to carry it to the Texas School Book Depository; ballistics tests linked the rifle to fragments of the bullets fired at the President's car.

It is the commission's detailed analysis of this evidence, contained mostly in the report's appendix, that would dazzle even Sherlock Holmes. For its audience of laymen, there is a concise introduction to each of the criminologist's tools: "Fingerprints and palmprints are made by the ridges which cover the surface of the fingers and palms. These ridges first appear two or three months before birth and remain unchanged until death." Treasury expert Alwyn Cole explains the step-by-step procedure for comparing handwriting specimens. The FBI's Lyndal Shaneyfelt tells how a photograph can be traced back to the camera that took it, by examining microscopic nicks in the lens aperture.

No less interesting is the commission's attempt to pinpoint the motives of its story's leading characters. It is not hesitant about ascribing President Kennedy's trip to Texas to political purposes, which are best served by motorcades in open cars. Oswald was "smitten" at the first sight of Marina Prusakova in Russia, but her nagging after their marriage may have sharpened his "feelings of hostility and aggression." (The commission, however, could find no single, simple motive for the assassination.)

Despite its willingness to explore dark corners of the human mind, the commission's report maintains a tone of objective restraint which enhances its credibility. The spotlight never swings away from Oswald in search of a scapegoat for the President's death. The Secret Service men who stayed up late drinking beer the night before broke the rules, but are not blamed for the tragedy. As for the U.S. Government officials who in 1962 approved a $435.71 loan to help Oswald return from Russia, the commission absolves them in one of the report's most poignant passages:

"The officers of the Department of State and the Immigration and Naturalization Service, acting within the proper limits of their discretion, concluded that Oswald's return to the United States was in the best interests of the country; it is only from the vantage of the present that the tragic irony of their conclusion emerges."

Presidential Security

The extensive changes which the Warren Commission has recommended in the system for protection of the President cannot be brought about in a day. The Commission's probing into the inadequacies of the measures taken in Dallas last November has been thorough and thoughtful. It found many rather glaring deficiencies. But it also recognized that protection of the President is a highly complex and difficult task. Improvement in the system will require a substantial expansion of the Secret Service as well as better supervision and further study of various aspects of the problem.

We think the Commission was wise to recommend, and the President to appoint, a Cabinet-level committee to formulate a specific program. Pointed and detailed though some of its findings and recommendations are, the Commission could not be expected to devise a new presidential security system. No doubt the President's Committee will perform this task and it might well then supervise the new system, as the Warren Commission suggested.

The great service which the Commission has rendered in this regard is to show how inadequate the system was in November, 1963. Its Protective Research Section, consisting of 12 specialists and three clerks, was much concerned with "crank" threats but made little effort to identify and warn against other sources of danger to the President. When its special file was reviewed on November 8, it contained the names of no dangerous persons in the Dallas-Fort Worth area. The FBI had a substantial file on Lee Harvey Oswald, but it did not reach the Secret Service.

"While the Secret Service bears the principal responsibility for this failure," says the report, "the FBI instructions did not reflect fully the Secret Service's need for information regarding potential threats." The liaison with other agencies was also poor.

No check had been made on the Texas School Book Depository Building from which the fatal shots were fired or upon the employes there, of whom Oswald was one. President Kennedy had mentioned that very morning the danger from a concealed sniper. But the chief safeguard against this danger was the presence of Secret Service agents scanning the buildings and the crowds. The local police captain in the area had not been instructed to have his men watch buildings along the route of the motorcade. There seems to be no escape from the Commission's conclusion that "both the FBI and the Secret Service have too narrowly construed their respective responsibilities."

Fortunately, the Secret Service is already well advanced with "a complete overhaul of its research activities." The process of its transformation ought to be supervised, as the Commission recommends, by a special assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury as well as by the Cabinet-level committee. The latter body may recommend a more sweeping reorganization, but in any kind of set-up difficult problems of liaison would remain.

It is plainly apparent that under the best system that may be devised the President will still be exposed to numerous risks. This lies in the nature of the office. The President's "very position as representative of the people," the Commission says, "prevents him from effectively shielding himself from the people." He cannot be protected as if he were dictator of a garrisoned state. The private rights of individuals who might be suspected of plotting against him must be maintained. But the difficulties of the task assigned to the Secret Service only emphasize the vast importance of going as far as skill, vigilance and resourcefulness will permit in averting any repetition of the Dallas tragedy.

WARREN COMMISSION REPORT SERVES A GOOD PURPOSE

A good purpose was served by the investigation into the assassination of former President John F. Kennedy by a Commission headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren. The thorough examination of all phases of the tragic incident was covered in the recently submitted report.

It should put an end to many rumors both here and abroad. The Commission found "no evidence that either Lee Harvey Oswald or Jack Ruby was part of any conspiracy, domestic or foreign, to assassinate President Kennedy."

There was no indication that rumors to the effect that the murder resulted from an extremist right conspiracy concocted in Dallas had any basis of fact. Groundless also were rumors that attributed the slaying to a Communist plot.

The mystery remains as to why Oswald committed the heinous crime. The question of "why" remains unanswered. The same is true to a lesser degree as to why Ruby killed Oswald.

The Commission recommended legislation that would make such a crime a federal offense that would be prosecuted in the federal courts. Since there is no such law at this time the local courts have jurisdiction. We have no doubt that this specific proposal will be followed by Congress.

It was proper that the F. B. I. be criticized. It had in its files full information on the background of Oswald, including his defection to Communist Russia and return to the United States, yet did not inform the Secret Service that this weird character was in Dallas.

The Secret Service was criticized for laxity in protecting the President, for failure to inspect the tall buildings along the route. Greater care in protecting whoever is President was recommended.

It is difficult to see how increased protection can be assured unless the President isolates himself. President Johnson constantly exposed himself as he was acclaimed by an estimated quarter of million people on a recent trip to New England. This problem is to be studied by a committee of four.

The Warren report does provide in the most minute detail the complete history of the dastardly crime and refutes the many rumors surrounding the incident. To that extent it served the purpose for which the Commission was created by President Johnson.

It'll take a long time to digest the 300,000 word Warren Commission report on the assassination of President Kennedy. We have more digesting to do but so far have seen no recommendation covering what a President should do to help in protecting his own life.

The Commission censured the Secret Service for not checking more thoroughly the motorcade route in Dallas and the FBI for not informing the Secret Service that Lee Harvey Oswald was in town. But nowhere have we found any comment on the necessity of a President himself to use every precaution possible and cooperate fully with the agency designated to protect him from any injury, violence or even death.

We are particularly thinking now about President Johnson's penchant for leaving his protectors flat-footed, dashing into the midst of a crowd and begin shanking hands and conversing with the multitude.

It is natural for a down-to-earth President to want to mix with the people, hear their viewpoints, get their reactions and as by-product pick up some votes. This would be perfectly legitimate if not for the great danger involved. Always some crazed would-be-assassin can be lurking amongst the spectators.

Even more dangerous is the open-car motorcade. As President Kennedy himself commented a few hours before he was shot down — It would be easy to shoot a President from a high building with a telescopic rifle. So easy, we think, that no President should ever ride in an open car in a motorcade or elsewhere. Only a President can make this decision.

The Warren Commission suggested that a study be given to the possibility of relieving the Secret Service of the responsibility for some or all of the job of protecting the President with a Cabinet committee assuming that responsibility. It is not clear just how such a duty could be taken over by the Cabinet.

But obviously some type of legislation comes under the emergency classification and the Congress should quickly heed the Warren report's urge for such action. The Dallas tragedy laid bare the utter inefficiency of the present protective system.

A part of the foreign press is not yet convinced that the Warren report is correct or honest in holding the assassination was free of any international conspiracy.

Anti-Communist papers in some instances abroad still speculate that Communists were linked with the murder while such Red papers as the London Communist Party organ, still contend the Warren report is a whitewash and the assassination a plot by right-wing reactionaries.

But these foreign papers are merely reflecting what they wanted the report to say. Most of the world will accept the Warren findings as the truth. The evidence is all-conclusive that the fanatic Marxist Oswald was on his own and that likewise the emotionally crazed Jack Ruby was on his own when he shot down Oswald in the Dallas police station.

Secret Service Due For Major Overhaul

THE U.S. SECRET SERVICE, whose job is protecting presidents, didn't come out of the Warren Commission's investigation smelling like a rose. Anything but.

After it got through investigating the assassination of President John F. Kennedy in Dallas, the seven-man commission headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren blamed the Secret Service for a number of shortcomings.

This agency has had the task of protecting presidents since at least 1902. The picture of it which emerges from the commission's report makes it look unimaginative, understaffed and out-of-date.

It's no wonder, after reading the commission's criticism, that the Warren group raised this question: Should the Secret Service be further entrusted with protecting presidents or should some other agency be given the job?

THE COMMISSION called the service "inadequate" — which seems like a mild word under the circumstances — in its advance preparations for Kennedy's trip to Dallas; its plans for identifying and protecting against persons considered threats to a president; its rules for even determining who such persons are; and its plans for detecting an assassin in buildings a presidential motorcade passes.

At the time of Kennedy's trip to Dallas, the commission said, the Secret Service "as a matter of practice" did not investigate or cause to be checked any building along the motorcade route taken by the President.

Lee Harvey Oswald, who worked in the Texas School Book Depository which the Kennedy motorcade passed, shot the President from the building's sixth-story window.

The commission report stated that the Secret Service's precautions were "too largely directed at the 'crank' threat" and not enough toward other individuals or groups which could be considered a source of danger.

Oswald is an example.

ALTHOUGH HE HAD defected to the Soviet Union, then returned, distributed pro-Castro pamphlets, then tried to leave for Cuba and the Soviet Union again, and was investigated by the FBI, the Secret Service had no record of him in Dallas.

How did this happen?

Because the Secret Service's main interest has been in persons making direct threats against the president, the FBI did not send it information on Oswald.

The commission criticized the FBI for not doing so although it seems an unfair criticism, and the commission itself said its conclusion may be "tinged with hindsight."

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the FBI, testified before the commission and after summarizing the bureau's investigative interest in Oswald prior to the assassination, he concluded that:

"THERE WAS NOTHING up to the time of the assassination that gave any indication that this man was a dangerous character who might do harm to the president or vice president."

Oswald had tried to kill former Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker — by shooting at him through his window — months before he killed the President, but no one knew of this until after the assassination except Oswald's wife.

It was only after the Warren Commission had made its broad investigation into friends, relatives, neighbors and old acquaintances of Oswald that the information came about his inclination toward violence in childhood, such as chasing his brother with a knife and throwing it at him.

The commission thinks the FBI should have told the Secret Service about Oswald and said it thought both agencies took too narrow a view of their separate responsibilities.

It's questionable that if the Secret Service had learned of Oswald from the FBI — since he had made no threat against Kennedy— it would have thought him dangerous enough, because of its limited manpower to investigate him.

The commission has called for an overhaul of the Secret Service and more cooperation between investigative government agencies.

CHARLES BARTLETT

The Need to Remind Brave Men

One of the felicitous conclusions of the Warren Commission is that no official or agency of the Federal Government was significantly responsible, by misjudgment or oversight, for the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

The report makes it obvious that the tragedy might not have occurred if the State Department had prohibited Lee Oswald's return from Russia, if the FBI had conveyed its knowledge of Oswald to the Secret Service, and if the Secret Service had enforced elaborate measures against snipers in tall buildings.

But these eventualities seem no more crucial, in following the dark sequence of events, than many others. If Oswald had been more adjusted in youth and in marriage. . . . If he had been able to fly to Cuba in October. . . . If his job in Dallas had taken him to another part of the city. . . .

The excellence of the Warren report is that it explores all the details of the assassination with such completeness that it reveals the many hinges of the fate that closed in on President Kennedy. The deed emerges as a weird stroke, bereft of logic and meaning but seemingly predestined by a rambling chain of circumstance.

The commission could have destroyed, or badly damaged, the Secret Service by focusing heavily upon the precautions that might, in retrospect, have been taken. This would have been totally unfair to this splendid group of men whose professional devotion, personal quality and daily discomforts are unique in Federal service.

President Kennedy made the key decisions that permitted his murder by exposing himself in an open car and asking his guards to stay off the rear bumper. This was the calculated risk of a man who keenly sensed the dangers of his role but also knew the value of allowing himself to be seen by the people.

The political logic that induced President Kennedy to ride bareheaded into Dallas is sound enough to retain its appeal for future Presidents who face the challenge of an election. As the lesson of last Nov. 22 fades, Presidents again will be tempted to weigh the advantages of risky exposure more heavily than the perils.

The Warren Commission answers this future problem with a proposal to create a "Committee of Cabinet Officers" who would be charged with studying and discussing the protection of the President. The theory is that in urging precautions upon a President, these top officials would speak with more directness and influence than the Secret Service agents, who function as staff members.

In the final deliberations of the Warren Commission, a minority argued that the protection of the President should be taken away from the Secret Service and accorded to the FBI, a younger and larger agency. The chief purpose of this shift would be closer coordination between the research on dangerous individuals and the protection of the President.

But ex-President Hoover asserted the key argument against this change in his reorganization study of 1949. He made the point that a President would be less comfortable in intimate relations with agents of the FBI, a huge apparatus involved on many fronts, than he is now with the Secret Service, a smaller unit that meets its assignment with a tradition of discretion and personal loyalty.

The Dallas tragedy will mean more elaborate protection for the President. But the Warren report makes a valuable point in suggesting that a President needs more guards less than he needs men who can constantly pressure him to be cautious in his campaigns and travels.

John Kennedy gave every sign of being sensitive to the threat of assassination. But a brave man does not give instinctive thought to his own safety. He needs to be reminded.

Security Agents Not To Blame

The long-awaited report of the presidential commission on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy brought no real surprises. Though some will never be satisfied with certain of the report's conclusions, one has no alternative, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, but to accept most of the commission's findings.

One of the conclusions, however, was more of an evaluative nature than an evidentiary one, and our judgment does not coincide with the commission's in that instance.

The one we refer to accuses the Secret Service and the FBI of inadequate precautions for protection of the President.

It is clear, of course, that the precautions were inadequate, since the assassin succeeded in killing the President. But it is not at all certain that the two agencies are to blame.

It is well-known that presidents are notoriously careless of their own welfare and that they often disregard the advice of their bodyguards relative to personal security. President Kennedy reportedly was among those most heedless of these measures, often exposing himself to potential danger and causing Secret Servicemen many anxious moments.

Moreover, several security experts pointed out long before last November's tragedy that some potential situations were virtually impossible to guard against. An attempt by long-range rifle from an upper floor of a building along a presidential parade route, especially with the president riding in an open car, was the most frequent situation mentioned as posing the most serious threat. Considering this, President Kennedy's situation that fateful day last year was made to order for the likes of Lee Harvey Oswald.

In addition, it is probably impossible to prevent an attempt on the president's life in countless situations if the would-be-assassin is determined to strike regardless of the consequences.

Under the circumstances — President Kennedy's insistence upon "close contact with the public" and his disregard of maximum security measures — we fail to see how the Secret Service or the FBI can be held culpable.

We should also mention in passing that the commission's conclusion that Oswald acted alone, for personal reasons, and was not an agent of conspiracy, lifts the onus of collective guilt that some reckless observers tried to foist upon the city of Dallas. It was a heinous crime which could have occurred anywhere, as we said from the beginning.

The Warren Judgment

It will not satisfy some, in this country and abroad. Too many people have spent the past 10 months promoting their own pet theories, ranging from the potentially credible to the wildly ludicrous, on the assassination of John F. Kennedy. Too many questions cannot be answered. Answers died with Lee Harvey Oswald.

But most reasonable people will accept the just-published report of the investigation by the Warren Commission for what it is: The most exhaustive, comprehensive documentation of the facts available.

Those facts indicate that Oswald was the assassin; that he acted alone and not as a part of any foreign or domestic conspiracy; that Oswald and Jack Ruby were not associated in any way.

On the basis of its findings the commission made a number of recommendations, basically involving greater security precautions for American Presidents and closer cooperation of federal agencies.

Most of these are self-evident and will be supported, even if they involve an increase in personnel and expense. The urgent nature of the need more than justifies it.

President Johnson has named a four-man group—Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon, acting Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach, CIA Director John McCone and special presidential assistant McGeorge Bundy—to oversee the implementation of the commission's recommendations. We presume this committee will be called upon by the President for frequent progress reports to insure that tightening of presidential security proceeds apace.

And not just incidentally, President Johnson should take it upon himself to use greater restraint in public appearances than he sometimes has shown. While obviously it is not in his nature to isolate himself from people, nor should he be expected to do so totally, he does have an obligation to the nation and its highest office not to expose himself to danger unnecessarily.

While Secret Service men say that a spontaneous public appearance by the President is less dangerous than one carefully calculated and known in advance—like the motorcade in which President Kennedy was riding when slain—there is always the risk in the crush of a crowd of accidental or deliberate injury or worse.

The Warren Commission's criticism of the Dallas police department for allowing the conditions to develop which made it possible for Jack Ruby to shoot Lee Harvey Oswald is understandable. So is its criticism of the news media for their performance.

It would be unfair to let such criticisms stand without pointing out that each—the Dallas police and the newsmen—performed competently, even brilliantly in certain individual cases, under the most trying circumstances imaginable. We well may remember the people's desire to know just what happened. But it would be equally misleading to deny the commission's conclusion that both were guilty of serious lapses in professional judgment. Both police and press did contribute to confusion and hasty comment.

Some failures can be put down to the emotion of the event—the same emotion which led Chief Justice Warren to condemn, before the facts were established, an "atmosphere of hate" which he said was responsible for President Kennedy's murder, the implication being that a right-wing extremist was guilty.

The commission's official report said that "the commission has found no evidence that the extreme views expressed toward President Kennedy

FBI and Secret Service Tighten Security

By Alfred E. Lewis
Staff Reporter

A14

The Secret Service and the FBI already have instituted many procedures recommended by the Warren Commission to increase the protection of the President.

The Commission criticized both agencies Sunday in its report on the assassination of President Kennedy.

Neither the FBI nor the Secret Service would comment on the report. Some time ago, however, both agencies reviewed their procedures and took steps to tighten the President's security.

For example, the Lincoln limousine in which President Kennedy was shot has been completely rearmored. Jump seats were installed so that agents face the President, enabling them to look to the rear —a deficiency noted by the Warren Commission in its study of the assassination of Mr. Kennedy.

A followup car in presidential motorcades now is provided for agents whose main task is to look up to survey high buildings.

The Warren Commission recommended that the President's physician be near him at all times. Now, two physicians are available—at least one with the President at all times — and both have their own medical bags and oxygen supplies.

The Secret Service now surveys buildings along a presidential route, also recommended by the Commission. During a recent three-block trip to the Statler Hotel by President Joohnson, agents inspected nearly every building on 16th st. for several blocks.

The Warren Commission criticized the lack of adequate exchange of information between the FBI and the Secret Service before the assassination. But the Commission report also cited the vastly increased flow of information from the FBI to the Secret Service since then.

By mid-June, 1964, the FBI had sent 9000 reports on Communist Party members to the Secret Service. In December, 1963, the FBI expanded the list of persons on which information should be sent to the Service — including "subversives, ultrarightists, racists and fascists." In the first four months of 1964, the FBI sent the Service the names of 5000 persons.

The Secret Service also has increased its manpower, ordered modern data processing equipment, improved in detail its directives to local police departments upon which it depends so much, all of which were recommended by the Warren Commission.

The Commission also recommended a committee of Cabinet officers to review and oversee programs of the Secret Service and the appointment of a special assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury to supervise the Service.

Senate Minority Leader Everett M. Dirksen (Ill.) said yesterday that he is not sure that the Warren Commission's "sharp criticisms of the Secret Service and the FBI were well taken." The two agencies themselves, however, did not seem overly disturbed, primarily because they anticipated criticsm and had taken steps to correct procedures.

But agents of the FBI concerned with the protection of the President questioned whether they had the legal authority to keep the thousands of persons listed as "threats" in their files away from presidential parades and motorcades. The modern mobility of the President where he can travel coast to coast in a day also complicates security, they said.

The Warren report—II

To the everlasting credit of the Warren Commission, its massive and meticulous report does more than provide reasonable readers with convincing documentation that a maladjusted, anti-social misfit, Lee Harvey Oswald, acting alone and not as trigger man for any group of conspirators, was solely responsible for the wanton slaying of President Kennedy.

Utilizing the abundant collection of facts surrounding the calamitous assassination, the Warren Commission set forth a series of important recommendations to improve the protection of future Presidents.

Without fixing blame for tragedy in Dallas, the report urges that a committee of Cabinet members or the National Security Council be assigned responsibility to review and oversee "the protective activities of the Secret Service and the other federal agencies that assist in safeguarding the President."

SUCH a committee, the report says, "would insure that the maximum resources of the Federal Government are fully engaged in the task of protecting the President, and would provide guidance in defining the general nature of domestic and foreign dangers to Presidential security."

The report suggests that the committee study the desirability of transferring the task of protecting the President from the Secret Service to some other department or agency, with a final decision to be made by the Chief Executive and Congress.

While this study is in progress, the report urges that a special assistant with experience in law enforcement be placed in charge of daily supervision of the Secret Service, and that he give immediate attention to the current effort by that agency to "revise and modernize its basic operating procedures."

SPECIFICALLY, the Warren Commission recommended that the Secret Service "completely overhaul its facilities devoted to the advance detection of potential threats against the President," that it improve the protective measures followed in the planning and conducting of Presidential motorcades, that it improve its relations with local police departments in areas to be visited by the President, and that the agency be given sufficient personnel ~~to do the~~ job.

Further, the report urges the complete cooperation of other federal agencies, and particularly the FBI, in providing maximum protection to the President.

Additionally, the Commission calls upon Congress to adopt legislation that would make the assassination of the President and Vice President a federal crime to expedite investigation by U.S. authorities.

PRESIDENT Johnson acted swiftly to appoint a four-man committee to advise him on the Warren Commission recommendations. It is to be hoped that the members will act with like speed in carrying out and completing their assignment.

The bitter lesson of the tragedy at Dallas is the knowledge that the apparatus for safeguarding the life of the President is less than adequate.

The Warren Commission has provided specific ways in which greater protection can be provided in the immediate present and for the long range.

For these specifics, the American people owe a permanent debt of gratitude to the Warren Commission. And with this debt goes the obligation to implement the carefully considered recommendations without delay. The life of the President must not be jeopardized by second-best security measures.

ON THE LINE:

Blunt . . . Brutal . . . Brilliant

By BOB CONSIDINE

WASHINGTON: The Warren Commission Report rates high among the greatest documents of its kind ever compiled.

Though the parallel may be obscure, it ranks with the Biblical account of the Crucifixion, Emile Zola's dissertation on the Dreyfus case and all other efforts by man to put down on paper an impassive and objective record of horrendous and emotionally moving events.

CONSIDINE

It never intended to be a literary work, this 888-page report that was dumped into the lap of the world Sunday night. Its prose is bare-boned and couched in basic English. Its simply stated notes add up in the end to a towering symphony of man's inhumanity, his essential senselessness. No single piece of fiction that comes readily to mind can touch the blow-after-blow after-blow impact of this blunt and sometimes brutal account of how a man met death in Dallas last November 22 and what happened after that.

If there is any lyrical editorializing it, it is swiftly done with. Chapter I of what the Government Printing Office knows as "730-900-0-6402," begins, "The Assassination of John Fitzgerald Kennedy on November 22, 1963, was a cruel and shocking act of violence directed against a man, a family, a nation, and against all mankind. A young and vigorous leader whose years of public and private life stretched before him was the victim of the fourth Presidential assassination in the history of a country dedicated to the concepts of reasoned argument and peaceful political change."

Thereafter, the commission lets the story unpeel by itself without a single note of righteous indignation. It leaves that emotion up to the reader.

It must disappoint those persons who were sure that when it appeared, after 10 months in preparation, it would somehow confirm every wild conjecture they had heard or dreamed up. Some of the brethren who fed like jackals on these false and sometimes vicious dreams were crushed under the weight of 300,000 words of fact, never, let's hope, to rise again.

Oswald did it alone. Nobody directed him. He had been wanting to kill since the age of 15, when he expressed a desire to assassinate President Eisenhower for "exploiting the working class."

He had no accomplices, needed no ideological urging. He never saw Jack Ruby until the man pumped a .38 into his belly. Ruby never heard of him, until the day of the assassination.

Rumor, myth, legend, fake, all dissolve under the acid of the truth flowing at flood tide from this report.

We learn for the first time of the struggle Jacqueline Kennedy had to put up to stay with her dead husband in Dallas and save the body from an autopsy there. We wince for her as she scrambles across the trunk of the car —of which agony she has no memory. We turn away from her, "I love you, Jack," as she cradled his blasted head in her lap.

We live with Oswald and his wife and neighbors in this report, enter the strange world of Jack Ruby, don white coat and go into bloody operating rooms, sit by while JFK casually talks of the danger of being President a couple of hours before a portion of his head was blown away.

Not even Lincoln's tragedy had a cast of characters anywhere comparable to this one. No master of the mystery novel, no author of a British White Paper, no titan of biography could come up with quite the likes of the precedents involved in the Warren Report, nor with police people who range from J. Edgar Hoover to a cop named Tippit, its noblemen and knaves, dignitaries and dames.

In the end, I kept thinking of three of the 300,000 words. They were the entire text of that portion of John Fitzgerald Kennedy's autopsy which titled "Pathological Diagnosis."

The words were, "Gunshot wound, head."

One Less Proof of the Warren Report

Thousands of Lee Oswalds may be living undetected and unnoticed in America today, and the records show that many a murder and many an assault on innocent persons has already been perpetrated by deranged individuals in innumerable instances of crime over the years.

If there is one lesson which the Warren Commission report plainly teaches, it is that the American people—through their Federal, state and city governments—have not given the attention that the problem of the criminally insane deserves. It requires not merely punishment and watchfulness thereafter, once the crime has been committed, but prevention, and this is a responsibility of organized society today.

Just a few days after President Kennedy was assassinated, this correspondent wrote in these dispatches:

"Oswald was a confused man, and neither American nor foreign political issues produced that confusion in the first place. He was the victim of an unhappy life. He was a man deserted and isolated. It's a familiar story of what brings on mental depression. Friends can be helpful, as the medical books tell us. But in our self-centered lives, where time is so precious, there is a tendency to pass by the broken-down human beings who need every day the warmth of human love and understanding, and finally, if all else fails, the benefits of psychiatric treatment and even hospital care.

"The stories of the tragic end of disordered minds have been told many times. Similar incidents are happening all around us every day, even within families, as husbands or wives commit murder and sons or daughters resort to the weapons of death."

The Warren report confirms these early impressions. It tells of how Oswald's mother, who had been twice married, placed her children in an orphans' home due to lack of funds. It tells how a remarriage resulted in divorce, after several separations and reunions.

The report tells of a "gradually deteriorating school record" and of how young Oswald alledgedly pulled out a pocket knife during an argument and threatened to use it on the wife of his half-brother. It tells how Lee, when he was 13, was "remanded for psychiatric observation to Youth House, an institution in which children are kept for psychiatric observation or for detention pending court appearance or commitment to a child-caring or custodial institution such as a training school." He was examined by the chief psychiatrist and interviewed and observed by various members of the staff.

Young Oswald's mother told the commission of her visit to the home and how her pocketbook was searched "because the children in this home were such criminals, dope fiends, and had been in criminal offenses, that anybody entering this home had to be searched in case the parents were bringing cigarettes or narcotics or anything." Mrs. Oswald recalled that her son cried and said, "Mother, I want to get out of here. There are children in here who have killed people and smoke. I want to get out."

The official report of the psychiatrist in 1953 said:

"Lee has to be seen as an emotionally, quite disturbed youngster who suffers under the impact of really existing emotional isolation and deprivation, lack of affection, absence of family life and rejection by a self-involved and conflicted mother."

In one of the reports in 1953, Mrs. Evelyn S. Siegel, a social worker who had interviewed both Lee and his mother when the boy was confined to the youth house, reported that, while Oswald had suffered serious personality damage, "if he can receive help quickly, this might be repaired to some extent."

But Lee Oswald never received that help, says the Warren Commission report, and adds:

"Few social agencies even in New York were equipped to provide the kind of intensive treatment that he needed, and when one of the city's clinics did find room to handle him, for some reason the record does not show, advantage was never taken of the chance afforded to Oswald."

It is no answer to the whole problem to say that the Secret Service should have been more vigilant in Dallas, or that the FBI should have been able to transmit more information about Oswald's record to the Secret Service. The records of thousands upon thousands of "crackpots" are constantly being filed in Government agencies, and it is virtually impossible to find out where these individuals are at a given moment—least of all, to discover that one is hidden on the sixth floor of a big building, where it is easy to conceal a weapon and fire a shot unobserved by a motorcade containing Secret Service men.

The tragic fact remains that crimes like these will happen, and there is no sure way to prevent them. But there is a way to reduce their number and possibly prevent individuals from resorting to crime if their personal lives can be aided early enough and before criminal tendencies really take root. Society as a whole has a responsibility to face up to the enormity of this grave problem.

(COMMITTEE)
EN ROUTE WITH PRESIDENT JOHNSON--PRESIDENT JOHNSON WILL REQUEST AN IMMEDIATE REVIEW OF THE WARREN COMMISSION'S RECOMMENDATIONS BY A FOUR-MEMBER COMMITTEE SO THAT PROMPT CORRECTIVE ACTIONS IN THE FIELD OF PRESIDENTIAL SECURITY CAN BE TAKEN, IT WAS LEARNED TODAY.

THE PRESIDENT, OFFICIAL SOURCES SAID, PLANS TO MEET WITHIN THE NEXT FEW DAYS WITH THE COMMITTEE WHICH IS COMPOSED OF TREASURY SECRETARY DOUGLAS DILLON; ACTING ATTY. GEN. NICHOLAS KATZENBACH; CIA CHIEF JOHN A. MCCONE, AND MCGEORGE BUNDY, THE PRESIDENT'S SPECIAL ASSISTANT FOR NATIONAL SECURITY AFFAIRS.

JOHNSON NAMED THE COMMITTEE YESTERDAY IN CONJUNCTION WITH ISSUANCE OF THE WARREN COMMISSION REPORT. THE DOCUMENT RECOMMENDED A SERIES OF STEPS TO IMPROVE PRESIDENTIAL PROTECTION, INCLUDING BETTER COORDINATION BETWEEN THE SECRET SERVICE, FBI AND CIA.

DILLON, AS TREASURY SECRETARY, HAS OVER-ALL SUPERVISION OF THE SECRET SERVICE. THE FBI IS A PART OF THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT WHICH KATZENBACH HEADS.

THE PRESIDENT, WHITE HOUSE SOURCES SAID, PLANS TO REVIEW WITH HIS PANEL, THE HIGH POINTS OF THE WARREN COMMISSION REPORT.

HE WILL DIRECT THEM TO ACT IMMEDIATELY TO EXAMINE THE RECOMMENDATIONS THOROUGHLY AND THEN MAKE THEIR OWN RECOMMENDATIONS TO HIM. HE THEN WILL DECIDE WHAT STEPS HE CAN TAKE ON HIS OWN AND DRAFT RECOMMENDATIONS, IF NECESSARY, TO BE SUBMITTED TO CONGRESS.

BEFORE TAKING THIS FINAL STEP, SOURCES SAID, THE PRESIDENT PROBABLY WILL ALSO SEEK ADVICE FROM WASHINGTON ATTORNEY CLARK CLIFFORD, WHO IS CHAIRMAN OF HIS FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE REVIEW BOARD.

CLIFFORD IS A FORMER WHITE HOUSE SPECIAL COUNSEL WHO HAS BEEN ASSOCIATED WITH EXECUTIVE MATTERS SINCE FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT'S ADMINISTRATION.

IT WAS INDICATED THAT THERE WILL BE RECOMMENDATIONS MADE TO CONGRESS BY JOHNSON NEXT YEAR ON THE BASIS OF THE WARREN COMMISSION REPORT. BUT THE EXACT NATURE OF THOSE PROPOSALS WILL AWAIT THE PENDING REVIEW.

(UNNECESSARY DANGER)

WASHINGTON--LYNDON JOHNSON SHOULD -- AND MUST -- MINGLE WITH THE AMERICAN PEOPLE SIMPLY BECAUSE HE IS THEIR PRESIDENT. BUT THERE IS AN "UNNECESSARY DANGER" WHEN HE MAKES IMPROMPTU STOPS, AND CERTAIN STEPS MUST BE TAKEN TO PROTECT HIS LIFE.

THIS, IN ESSENCE, IS THE BURDEN OF THE WARREN COMMISSION'S WARNING TO PRESIDENT JOHNSON, A GREGARIOUS MAN WHO LOVES TO PLUNGE INTO A CROWD AND SHAKE HANDS -- AND WHO LAST FRIDAY MOUNTED A PALOMINO HORSE AND GALLOPED ALONE IN FRONT OF THE CROWD AT THE OKLAHOMA STATE FAIR.

JOHNSON IS NOT MENTIONED BY NAME IN THE REPORT ON JOHN F. KENNEDY'S ASSASSINATION. BUT ITS RECOMMENDATIONS ARE MEANT TO APPLY TO ANYONE WHO OCCUPIES THE WHITE HOUSE. AND THE MESSAGE SEEMS CLEAR THAT JOHNSON HIMSELF SHOULD PAY MORE ATTENTION TO SECURITY RESTRICTIONS.

AS ONE SPECIFIC EXAMPLE, THE COMMISSION RECOMMENDED THAT "THE PRESIDENT'S PHYSICIAN ALWAYS ACCOMPANY HIM DURING HIS TRAVELS AND OCCUPY A POSITION NEAR THE PRESIDENT WHERE HE CAN BE IMMEDIATELY AVAILABLE IN CASE OF ANY EMERGENCY."

WHEN JOHNSON RETURNED TO WASHINGTON FROM THE LABOR DAY SPEECH IN DETROIT THAT OPENED HIS CAMPAIGN FOR ELECTION, HE LOADED IS 12-PASSENGER JETSTAR PLANE WITH POLITICIANS AND OTHER GUESTS. DR. GEORGE BURKLEY, HIS PHYSICIAN, HAD TO TAKE ANOTHER AIRPLANE.

AS WAS THE CASE WITH KENNEDY, JOHNSON LOVES CROWDS. HE CANNOT RESIST MOVING AMONG THE PEOPLE AND SHAKING HANDS. ON THAT FATAL DAY IN DALLAS LAST NOVEMBER, KENNEDY STOPPED HIS MOTORCADE TWICE TO DO JUST THAT.

THE WARREN REPORT SAID: "THE COMMISSION REGARDS SUCH IMPROMPTU STOPS AS PRESENTING AN UNNECESSARY DANGER, BUT FINDS THAT THE SECRET SERVICE AGENTS DID ALL THAT COULD HAVE BEEN DONE TO TAKE PROTECTIVE MEASURES." THE SENTENCE WAS BOTH A COMMENTARY ON THE KENNEDY MOTORCADE AND A WARNING TO JOHNSON.

THE COMMISSION, IN ITS ANXIETY TO PREVENT A REPETITION OF WHAT HAPPENED IN DALLAS, DID NOT SUGGEST THAT A PROTECTIVE WALL BE BUILT AROUND THE PRESIDENT.

"...THE PRESIDENT MUST GO TO THE PEOPLE," IT SAID. "EXPOSURE OF THE PRESIDENT TO PUBLIC VIEW THROUGH TRAVEL AMONG THE PEOPLE OF THIS COUNTRY IS A GREAT AND HISTORIC TRADITION OF AMERICAN LIFE. DESIRED BY BOTH THE PRESIDENT AND THE PUBLIC, IT IS AN INDISPENSABLE MEANS OF COMMUNICATION BETWEEN THE TWO.

"UNDER OUR SYSTEM, MEASURES MUST BE SOUGHT TO AFFORD SECURITY WITHOUT IMPEDING THE PRESIDENT'S PERFORMANCE OF HIS MANY FUNCTIONS. THE PROTECTION OF THE PRESIDENT MUST BE THOROUGHLY BUT INCONSPICUOUS TO AVOID EVEN THE SUGGESTION OF A GARRISON STATE."

THE COMMISSION, IN A 44-PAGE CHAPTER TITLED "THE PROTECTION OF THE PRESIDENT," MADE CLEAR ITS VIEW THAT BOTH THE SECRET SERVICE AND THE FBI SHOULD HAVE PERFORMED BETTER IN THEIR SECURITY TASKS PRIOR TO NOV. 22. IT SAID THESE TASKS COULD BE CARRIED OUT WITHOUT HINDERING THE PRESSIDENT, AND WITHOUT CREATING A "GARRISON STATE."

The Warren Commission Report

In the report of the Warren Commission on the assassination of President Kennedy there is no new fact of substance, but an infinite amount of detail which could have been gathered only by months of intensive investigation.

The report is a model of thoroughness. It is objective, meticulous and conclusive.

And it is written simply, directly and movingly, as though the commission and its staff had relived the tragedy throughout the 10 months it devoted to its task. As they must have done.

It is, without doubt, a remarkable job, accomplished without flourish. Despite the enormously emotional nature of such an event, the commission has managed to carry on its inquiry and write its report in a dispassionate manner, without at the same time dulling any of the sensation. The findings and recommendations are crisp and clean.

The report, of course, does not restrict itself to the events of Nov. 22, 1963. Nor even to what happened immediately before and after the assassination, nor to how these things happened. It probes to the limit into the life and mind of Lee Oswald, and of Jack Ruby; it includes expert analyses of the gun, the bullets; it tracks down all the rumors, and refutes most of them.

This is a work which will be read the world around. Its value to scholars, historians and, we should think, to police and psychiatrists is beyond estimate. No layman can read it, even years hence, without being stirred.

no vital information to the public knowledge of the momentous crime is evidence, for one thing, of the thoroughness and accuracy of the news reporting at the time. But this in no sense detracts from the worth of the commission's work.

It is fair to ask, however, why the commission did not maintain the dignified secrecy originally planned for its proceedings. The series of undisciplined leaks were unfortunate and inexcusable.

There was no mystery in the shooting, except the mystery of the wrenched mind which could perpetrate such a tragedy. It is this mystery which baffles science—and which can defeat the most exacting preventive work by those charged with a President's security.

The commission pinpointed some of the omissions in the procedures of the Secret Service and the F.B.I. Without these omissions, the tragedy might have been averted. But hindsight, equipped with facts not earlier known, is better than foresight. And in any event, there are no procedures which will guarantee absolute security for a President publicly exposing himself.

Nonetheless, the safety of a President demands that no step, however minor in appearance, be overlooked—and the commission has recommended a number to be taken.

In addition, the history related by the report itself offers a graduate course in the problems of Presidential security and what it takes to meet them. The Warren Commission has done a superlative job—and all Americans are in its debt.

Warren Report Blames Oswald Alone; Roles of FBI, Secret Service Criticized

Foreign or Domestic Conspiracy to Murder President Ruled Out

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Staff Reporter

Lee Harvey Oswald, and he alone, assassinated President John F. Kennedy.

He was not involved in any conspiracy, foreign or domestic, to murder the President.

These are the central conclusions of the President's Commission on the Assassination of President John F. Kennedy, headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren. The unanimous report of the seven-man group, the result of nearly ten months of investigation, was made public last night in a 912-page document

The massive and exhaustive report by one of the most distinguished groups in American history also:

• Criticized the Federal Bureau of Investigation for taking "an unduly restrictive view of its responsibilities in preventive intelligence work prior to the assassination" and for lack of alertness in considering Oswald "a potential threat to the safety of the President."

• Criticized the Secret Service for having insufficient trained personnel in its protective research work, for failing to recognize the necessity of identifying sources of danger to the President other than direct threats, for "deficient" advance preparations for the President's fatal trip to Dallas and for other shortcomings.

• Criticized the Secret Service for "insufficient liaison and coordination of information" with the FBI and other Federal agencies.

• Said the State Department followed the law in its relations with Oswald but should have procedures "for the better dissemination of information" about such defectors as Oswald returning to the United States from the Soviet Union.

• Criticized the Dallas Police Department for publicizing unchecked information which "provided much of the basis for the myths and rumors" about the assassination, for failing to control the swarm of newsmen and for failing to move Oswald in secret from one cell to another. These two latter failures were "the major causes" leading to Oswald's murder by night club owner Jack Ruby.

• Declared that press, radio and television "must share responsibility for the failure of law enforcement" in Oswald's murder by their ignoring of police orders. The Commission found "a regrettable lack of self-discipline by the newsmen."

The Warren Commission made recommendations that the President promptly acted to implement. Last night in Austin, Mr. Johnson appointed to advise him on the matter the Secretary of the Treasury, the acting Attorney General, the Director of the CIA, and the Special Assistant to the President on National Security Affairs.

The major recommendations made by the Warren Commission called for a "complete overhaul" of Secret Service facilities devoted to the advance detection of potential threats against the President, creation of a Cabinet committee to oversee such activities by the Secret Service and other agencies, appointment of a special assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury to supervise the Secret Service, better intergovernmental liaison, legislation to make assassination of a President or Vice President a Federal crime and a rule that the President's physician closely accompany him at all times. Many of these changes have already been made.

The central effort of the Commission was to sift fact from fiction; to determine whether Oswald was part of any conspiracy and whether he knew Ruby (he did not, the report stated); to examine the failure in protecting the 46-year-old President from the 24-year-old assassin who took his life at 12:30 p.m. CST last Nov. 22, and to investigate the subsequent failure to protect Oswald so he could be brought to trial.

In its effort to do all this, and much more, the Commission had the benefit of some 25,000 FBI interviews and reinterviews, of 1550 Secret Service interviews, of thousands of pages of reports and of testimony before its staff and members of 552 witnesses.

But much more was done. Phone calls were traced, bank accounts checked, ballistics tests made, television films analyzed, key incidents reenacted with stop watch precision, non-Federal experts employed to check FBI and Secret Service findings. Even Oswald's letters were checked to see if they contained any hidden codes.

Documents From Russia

Documents submitted by the Soviet government were checked. The Mexican government exhaustively canvassed the details of Oswald's trip to that country. Even a mysterious young Latin American secret agent, described in the report only as "D," was investigated and given a polygraph test before it was concluded that he was lying about seeing Oswald receive money in Mexico to kill the President.

Finally, the gruesome details of the assassination were examined; even reconstructed human skulls were subjected to rifle bullet tests.

From all the facts, rumors and surmises, the Commission emerged convinced that Lee Harvey Oswald had killed the President and wounded Texas Gov. John Connally as the presidential limousine passed the Texas School Book Depository building where Oswald worked.

There was no sign, from the Commission's evidence, that Oswald had intended to kill the Governor rather than the President. Indeed, on one occasion during his 29-month stay in the Soviet Union as a self-proclaimed defector, Oswald told his wife he would vote for the Governor on his return home.

One Shot Missed

Furthermore, the Commission found that Oswald's line of fire put the President's head between his and the Governor so that it was impossible to aim at Connally alone.

The Commission concluded beyond doubt that Oswald fired the fatal shots from the Italian-made mail-order rifle with a telescopic sight, shooting from a sixth-floor window.

It is probable, the Commission found, that three shots were fired; that one missed but which one is not certain; that the first one hit both the President and the Governor but was not fatal; that the second to hit the President left a "large, gaping wound in the right rear part of the head," splattering brain tissue over the interior of the car, and was fatal although the President was still alive when he reached Parkland Hospital about five minutes later.

When the first shot hit the President, he said: "My God, I am hit." After the second and fatal shot, Mrs. Kennedy cried out: "Oh, my God, they have shot my husband. I love you, Jack."

The car in which the President was riding was determined to have been moving at an average speed of 11.2 miles per hour for about 136 feet immediately before the shot that struck Mr. Kennedy in the head. Oswald's range was measured at from 177 to 266 feet. The 3 per cent downward slope of Elm st. made it easier for Oswald to fire several shots because it eliminated some of the necessary adjustment in sighting between shots.

The fatal shot sped 265.3 feet from Oswald's rifle to the President's head at a 15 degree 21 minute angle of declination.

Oswald's marksmanship record in the Marines was rated fully sufficient for what one of a number of experts testified was, with the aid of the telescopic sight, a "not . . . particularly difficult" feat.

The story of Oswald's escape from the building, of his murder 45 minutes later of Dallas Policeman J. D. Tippit, his arrest in a movie theater and his murder by Ruby paralleled the story quickly revealed last November. Here there are no surprises, only a mass of corroborative detail through re-enactment and the testimony of many witnesses.

The question of a possible conspiracy involving Oswald with others, either Americans or foreigners, was part of the Commission's most difficult assignment, the report said.

This was done in many areas of the massive report and by means of a special 31-page section in which 127 different forms of "speculation" are set forth and answered. Among these was the rumor that Oswald was or had been a secret agent of the United States Government. This is categorically denied in all its forms. Likewise denied is the possibility that he might have been a Soviet or Cuban agent.

In this regard, the Commission quoted testimony by Secretary of State Dean Rusk that he had "not seen or heard any scrap of evidence indicating that the Soviet Union had any desire to eliminate President Kennedy nor in any way participated in any such event."

Rusk also testified that "despite the great ideological differences between our two great systems, I can't see how it would be to the interest of the Soviet Union to make any such effort."

'Discovered No Evidence'

For itself, the Commission said that it had "discovered no evidence that the Soviet Union or Cuba were involved in the assassination . . ." The report pointed out that the conclusion that there had been no conspiracy—of any kind—"was also reached independently . . . on the basis of the information available to each of them," by the following:

Secretary of State Rusk, Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, Secretary of the Treasury C. Douglas Dillon, Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, CIA Director John A. McCone, and Secret Service Chief James J. Rowley.

But of all the issues raised, perhaps the most difficult to answer, the Commission found, was the question of Oswald's motive in killing the President.

The report said that "the Commission could not make any definitive determination of Oswald's motives," though it did conclude that he "acted alone." But after an exhaustive section about the man and his life history, the bulk of it already well known, the Commission said this in conclusion:

"Many factors were undoubtedly involved in Oswald's motivation for the assassination, and the Commission does not believe that it can ascribe to him any one motive or group of motives.

"It is apparent, however, that Oswald was moved by an overriding hostility to his environment. He does not appear to have been able to establish meaningful relationships with other people. He was perpetually discontented with the world around him. Long before the assassination he expressed his hatred for American society and acted in protest against it.

"Oswald's search for what he conceived to be the perfect society was doomed from the start. He sought for himself a place in history—a role as the 'great man' who would be recognized as having been in advance of his times. His commitment to Marxism and communism appears to have been another important factor in his motivation.

"Out of these and the many other factors which may have molded the character of Lee Harvey Oswald there emerged a man capable of assassinating President Kennedy."

Part of the evidence of that "capacity to act decisively" was the story of Oswald's attempt April 10, 1963, to murder former Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker, an ultraconservative whom Oswald had heard speak.

The Commission not only confirmed that Marina Oswald, his Russian-born wife, said that Oswald told him of the attempt (but he and she told no one else and so the FBI did not know), but it disclosed that Oswald had carefully prepared the attempt. He had taken photographs of Gen. Walker's house with the same camera that Mrs. Oswald had once used to take the pictures of Oswald holding the rifle and revolver which killed the President and Policeman Tippit.

Furthermore, the Commission report included the text of an undated note written in Russian by Oswald and left behind for his wife in case he was arrested after his effort to kill the General.

"Confused" About Nixon

The Commission also delved into the report, also from Mrs. Oswald, that Oswald had indicated he intended to kill former Vice President Richard M. Nixon during a visit to Dallas in April, 1963. The Commission concluded that she was confused; that Oswald "was not actually planning to shoot Mr. Nixon."

But it noted that whereas Nixon had had no plan to visit Dallas at that time, then Vice President Johnson was in fact in that city April 23. The implication of this fact appeared to be that if Oswald had in mind shooting anyone at that time, the more likely target was Mr. Johnson.

The Commission also considered the possibility that there may have been some connection between Oswald and those right-wing groups in Dallas "which had bitterly denounced President Kennedy and his policies prior to the time of the President's trip to Dallas."

In this connection, the Commission looked into the origins of a full-page, black-bordered anti-Kennedy advertisement which appeared the morning of the assassination in the Dallas News and of a "Wanted for Treason" handbill showing FBI-style full-face and profile photographs of the President.

The former was the product of men connected with the John Birch Society and the latter the work of a printing salesman "closely associated" with Gen. Walker, the Commission found. The advertisement was paid for by three Dallas businessmen. But none of these people had any connection with Oswald or Ruby.

The Ruby story is substantially that already well known. The Commission attempted to reconstruct minute-by-minute his movements during the period of Nov. 21-24 to see if it could find any evidence of a conspiracy.

But the Commission reported "no sign of any conduct which suggests that he was involved in the assassination" and no report worthy credence that he was in any way acquainted with Oswald or had any association "with any Communist or radical causes." The report added:

"Rumors of a connection between Ruby and Oswald have proved groundless while examination of Ruby's background and associations, his behavior prior to the assassination and his activities during the Nov. 22-24 weekend has yielded no evidence that Ruby conspired with anyone in planning or executing the killing of Lee Harvey Oswald.

"Whatever the legal culpability of Jack Ruby for his act of Nov. 24, the evidence is persuasive that he acted independently in shooting Oswald."

Officials Overriden

In reaching its conclusions, the commission came up with such varied items as these:

• Two unnamed Dallas officials told presidential staff members that Mr. Kennedy's body could not be removed from Dallas until after an autopsy. Despite their protests, the body was flown to Washington at once.

• Noticeable detailed differences in the photographs of Oswald with the rifle and gun, as published in magazines and newspapers, were not caused by tampering but by inadvertent alteration in retouching the photo for publication.

• The speedy issuance of a passport to Oswald to go to Cuba was not a result of any intercession on his behalf. All 23 other persons on the same application list forwarded from New Orleans to Washington were equally treated with dispatch. The Passport Office had no instructions to deny or delay a passport to Oswald.

• An employe of the Soviet Embassy in Mexico City to whom Oswald talked was reported to be not only a consular employe but, according to the Central Intelligence Agency, "one of the KGB (secret police) officers stationed at the Embassy." He was named.

• Despite three FBI interrogations of Oswald after his return from Russia, his name was never given to the Secret Service and no information about him from any other source was in the Secret Service files.

• Oswald's turn toward Cuba, his work for the Fair Play for Cuba Committee and his effort go to that island, including his talk to his wife of hijacking a plane to fly there, "may well have been Oswald's last escape hatch" after his disappointments with life in both the United States and the Soviet Union.

• Although Dallas police interrogated Oswald for about 12 hours in all, they kept no transcript and made no tape recording. Oswald was not physically harmed by police. He "repeatedly and blatantly lied to the police."

The problem of protecting a President who, in the American scheme of things, the Commission agreed, must appear in public all across the Nation, was perhaps best expressed in the testimony of Mr. Kennedy's close friend and White House aide, Kenneth O'Donnell.

According to O'Donnell, President Kennedy commented before leaving his hotel on the morning of the assassination that "if anybody really wanted to shoot the President of the United States, it was not a very difficult job; all one had to do was get a high building someday with a telescopic rifle, and there was nothing anybody could do to defend against such an attempt."

Warning and Advice

How to Protect a President

By Roscoe Drummond

WASHINGTON.

The most valuable part of the Warren Commission report is not its look at the past but its stern warning and recommendations as to what must be done better to protect the President in the future.

Obviously there can be no security measures which can avert every potential threat on the life of the President unless he is going to cease being President in the American tradition.

That kind of security would require him to discharge his office in a vacuum, work in isolation, travel in secret and make public appearances only behind bulletproof glass.

Beginning with George Washington, no American President has operated this way—nor would he.

This means that the people of the United States and the Presidents of the United States are going to have to live with the perpetual danger of Presidential assassination.

How great is that danger? This is how great: There has been attempted assassination—not just threatening letters, but actual gunfire—against the lives of one out of every three Presidents from 1865 to 1963. These include Lincoln, Garfield, McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, Franklin Roosevelt, Truman and John F. Kennedy; in the case of one out of five Presidents during this period, the attempted assassination was successful.

It is well to have the Warren Commission render such a unanimous and documented judgment that "the shots which killed President Kennedy . . . were fired by Lee Harvey Oswald," that it found no evidence "that anyone assisted Oswald" or that he was "involved with any other person or group in a conspiracy to assassinate the President."

The distinguished bi-partisan membership of the commission gives this judgment the highest credentials. It won't instantly end the plot-minded theories of political conspiracy, which have circulated, some in the U. S. and some in Europe. But the commission report — written with clarity and directness—provides conclusive answers to these rumors.

The commission's best service concerns what can be learned from the ugly events of Nov. 22, 1963.

Theconsidered conclusion of the entire commission is that, while the dangers of assassination have increased, the Secret Service has not sought and Congress has not provided the resources of personnel and facilities to do its job and that there have been "serious shortcomings" in operation.

The commission is not pointing a smug finger of blame at the Secret Service, the FBI or any other agency. It states frankly that its criticisms are "tinged with hindsight."

But this is the time to marshal very bit of wisdom after the event and to call on the President and the Congress and the country to join in supporting what needs to be done.

The report's central findings in this area show what needs to be done. The commission found:

1—The "preventive intelligence" work of the Secret Service was "seriously deficient," its concept of threats to the President much too limited.

2—The FBI should have been more alert and creative in providing leads to the Secret Service. (Oswald's name was never forwarded.)

3—Overlapping and lack of alert exchange of information between the intelligence agencies. (State didn't tell Secret Service, CIA didn't tell FBI, FBI didn't tell Secret Service, nobody told FBI about the motorcade route, FBI didn't see any reason to check its "pending cases" to see if any of them worked in buildings along the way—as Oswald did.)

Obviously, this is all wisdom after the event. But it is sound wisdom and it should be put to use by the President and Congress to carry through needed reforms.

The Warren Achievement

MARQUIS CHILDS

Washington.

The Warren Report on President Kennedy's assassination is a monument to patient sifting and analysis of fact, rumor, suspicion and wild conjecture

It will not answer those at home and abroad who must have a conspiracy. On the extreme left, Lee Harvey Oswald is seen as the pawn of the Fascist-minded right wing. On the right, nothing will do but a Communist plot cooked up in Moscow or Havana.

Honest doubters unable to believe a lone assassin could carry out such a monstrous deed should be convinced by the thorough examination and refutation with fact of the mass of rumor and conjecture.

Ten months have passed since the assassination. No one has come forward with any solid evidence that others participated with Oswald in the crime. Members of the commission and the staff heard hundreds of witnesses—everyone who could conceivably offer any crumb of information—and they found nothing to support the plot theory.

Nor has anyone come forward in public to claim possession of facts which the commission ignored. Even a hasty review of the report shows how painstaking was the examination of those who wanted to exonerate Oswald or prove him merely a tool of conspirators.

For the Chief Justice and the six other members of the commission, it was a grim chore. It meant reviewing not once, but again and again the horror of those November days.

Restrained though the report is, it brings out the shocking laxity with which the President's Texas visit was planned. The Secret Service was operating in the casual manner of another day. The presence in Dallas of Oswald, a former defector and a known Communist-eccentric, was never checked. Nor was any attention given to whom might occupy windows along the parade route, as Oswald was able to do because of his employment by the Texas Schoolbook Depository.

Deeply disturbing, too, is the failure of government agencies—the Secret Service and the FBI—to coordinate their joint responsibility for the President's safety. Washington has long heard reports of the rivalry between the two services. As reflected in the report, they seem to have gone their separate ways, with the consequence that Oswald was free to proceed calmly to plot the assassination without surveillance of any kind.

The Dallas police also come in for the same restrained criticism. Their incredible bungling, on the order of the Mack Sennett cops, gave Jack Ruby the opportunity to kill Oswald, thereby compounding the tragedy and creating an area of doubt and dark suspicion. But the commission puts a sizable share of the blame on the newspapermen at the scene who by their insistent demands and their unceasing clamor made the work of an overwhelmed police force all the more difficult.

The commission proposes a series of recommendations for strengthening the safeguards around a President. One is to make the assassination of a Chief Executive a federal crime. This would permit the FBI and the Secret Service to take direct part in detection of the crime and preparing the evidence. Even more important are the proposals to modernize the Secret Service.

Nothing can be done in the waning days of this Congress to carry out these recommendations. But they should be the first order of business in the new Congress. With no Vice President to succeed President Johnson, this is a time of extreme hazard. An atmosphere already inflamed with charges of treason and corruption coming from the extreme right is being further warmed up by the epithets hurled in the campaign. We will be lucky if we come safely through the next five weeks.

Each assassination, as the report notes, has brought a harvest of myths. Lloyd Lewis' book, "Myths After Lincoln," shows how wild the rumor crop grew when Lincoln was shot by John Wilkes Booth. The commission report is a solid achievement set against the winds of rumor and calumny.

Warren Commission Combined

A-26

Men of Diverse Talents and Views

By Morton Mintz
Staff Reporter

President Johnson created the Warren Commission Nov. 29, 1963, seven days after the assassination of John F. Kennedy in Dallas and five days after the killing of Lee Harvey Oswald, who had been charged with the President's murder.

"The purposes of the Commission," Mr. Johnson said in his Executive order, "are to examine the evidence developed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and any additional evidence that may hereafter come to light or be uncovered by Federal or state authorities; to make such further investigation as the Commission finds desirable; to evaluate all the facts and circumstances surrounding such assassination, including the subsequent violent death of the man charged with the assassination, and to report to me its findings and conclusions.

"The Commission is empowered to prescribe its own procedures and to employ such assistants as it deems necessary . . . All Executive departments and agencies are directed to furnish the Commission with such facilities, services and cooperation as it may request from time to time."

At first, Mr. Johnson is said to have regarded the appointment of a Commission as unnecessary: the evidence pointing to Oswald was massive and the killing of Oswald before the television cameras had been the most public slaying of all time.

But other considerations rapidly came to assume decisive importance. The report of the Warren Commission deals with them as follows:

"After Lee Harvey Oswald was shot by Jack Ruby, it was no longer possible to arrive at the complete story of the assassination through normal judicial procedures during a trial of the alleged assassin. Alternative means for instituting a complete investigation were widely discussed.

A Lincoln Precedent

"Federal and state officials conferred on the possibility of initiating a court of inquiry before a state magistrate in Texas. An investigation by the grand jury of Dallas County also was considered. As speculation about the existence of a foreign or domestic conspiracy became widespread, committees in both Houses of Congress weighed the desirability of congressional hearings to discover all the facts relating to the assassination.

"By his order of Nov. 29 establishing the Commission, President Johnson sought to avoid parallel investigations . . ."

The United States has no continuing equivalent of the impartial, prestigious royal commissions commonly convened in Britain and other Commonwealth countries, but in appointing the Commission, Mr. Johnson evoked American precedents for such high-level inquiries.

After the assassination of President Lincoln in 1865, Congress established a commission of inquiry whose members included five Supreme Court Justices, five Senators and five Representatives.

After the Pearl Harbor disaster, President Roosevelt appointed an investigatory tribunal headed by then Supreme Court Justice Owen Roberts. The four members were military officers.

A Reluctant Chairman

Once President Johnson made the decision to appoint a commission the immediate question was its membership. Certain qualifications were so obvious as to go almost without saying.

The Commission as a whole had to be one that would have the confidence of the Nation and Congress, even if one member or another lacked the support of one or another group in the population and in Congress. Every member had to be a man of outstanding accomplishment, reputation and stature.

Among them there had to be a large pool of legal and investigative experience. The Commission had to be of such impressiveness that it would be accorded an overwhelming presumption of balance, competence and integrity.

In Chief Justice Earl Warren, the President found a chairman who was at the pinnacle of the judicial branch, who had spent 20 years as a California prosecutor, four years as State Attorney General and ten as Governor before being appointed to the Court by President Eisenhower.

On the bench, he had won the respect and affection of liberals and almost incredible hatred and vituperation from right-wing groups. Abroad, he is perhaps the most beloved of living Americans.

In Warren, Mr. Johnson also encountered the most adamant resistance to taking on the job, and not merely because it would superimpose onerous burdens onto his already great responsibilities as Chief Justice.

Back in Uniform

When the initial approach was made by two emissaries of the President—Deputy Attorney General Nicholas B. Katzenbach and Solicitor General Archibald Cox—Warren refused appointment. He cited the always strong feelings, going back to the origins of the Court, against outside activities by a member. Further, there was no apparent precedent for the participation of a Chief Justice on a commission.

"Less than an hour later," Marquis Childs reported, "the President was on the phone and shortly after that the Chief Justice sat across from Mr. Johnson in the office to which the new President was still unaccustomed. Chief Justice Warren went again over the reasons why he could not and should not head the commission of inquiry.

"'You've worn the uniform of your country, haven't you?' the President asked. 'If I were to ask you to put it on again, you would do it, wouldn't you? That's what I'm asking you to do now.'"

With this the 73-year-old Chief Justice accepted. That he had done so out of a sense of duty did not shield him,

Childs wrote, from "new attacks from the rabid right and even from certain mass circulation newspapers."

Protective Coloring

But many of those who attacked Warren held in high regard the man whose name appeared second in the President's Executive Order: Sen. Richard B. Russell of Georgia. A conservative Democrat, Russell has been in the Senate for 31 years and is its second senior member. His evenhanded investigation of the removal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur as commander of American forces in the Far East won widespread acclaim.

As long as Russell served on the Commission, that body as a whole was insulated against attacks that might have been launched against it because of the dislike of the Chief Justice by some Southerners and conservatives.

Each of the other three members of Congress selected for the Commission brought to it unusual talent. In addition their diverse political views helped insulate the Commission against attacks from other sources. Republican Sen. John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky is widely respected by the liberals in Congress. Rep. Hale Boggs is a moderate Democrat from the South. Rep. Gerald R. Ford of Michigan is a leader of conservative Republicans in the House.

The two nongovernmental members brought to the Commission their wide experience in the intelligence and military fields. Allen W. Dulles, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, had been in intelligence work on and off for many years. John J. McCloy was an assistant Secretary of War in World War II and the military governor of Germany after the war.

The Warren Commission's chief counsel was J. Lee Rankin, who in the Eisenhower Administration was Solicitor General — the Government's lawyer before the Supreme Court. Ranklin, 57, had 14 assistant counsels and 12 top-level aides from Government departments.

Non-Communist Papers Praise Warren Report

LONDON (AP)—Non-Communist newspapers in Britain and on the European continent generally praised the Warren report today. Communist and leftist newspapers said it failed to dissipate all doubt.

"An impressive document," said a typical British comment, in The Guardian. "Only the most skeptical will continue to harbor doubts in the face of this massive ... memorable report."

Tass, the Soviet news agency, said in a dispatch from Washington: "The Warren report fails to dissipate all doubts and suspicions about the assassination." It didn't mention that Lee Harvey Oswald had spent time in the Soviet Union but said:

"The reactionary American press tried to picture Oswald as a Marxist."

A Soviet newspaper charged that Mr. Kennedy's assassination "was the result of a conspiracy by the most reactionary forces" in the United States in which "Texas oil barons played a fatal role."

The Moscow newspaper Komsomolskaya Pravda made the charge under the headline "Secret Move of the Oil Barons." The article, however, reviewed only disputes between Mr. Kennedy and oil company interests over proposed changes in oil depletion allowances for tax purposes. The paper made no attempt to document its charges.

Rome's independent Il Tempo Sera said in a front-page headline that the report "raises more doubts than it settles."

Rome's independent IL Tempo emphasized that the report "indicates the cause of the crime was the Marxist convictions of the killer."

Said London's conservative Daily Telegraph:

"The assassination was a tragedy, personal, national and international; but any suspicions of a conspiracy behind it are now set at rest."

The independent Times of London said:

"It is thorough, painstaking, voluminously frank, and above all truly scrupulously careful in its analysis and conclusions."

While approving the report, London's conservative Daily Mail expressed "incredulous amazement at the catastrophic negligence of those responsible for the President's safety. The precautions broke down at nearly every point through sheer incompetence."

Report Decries Handling of Oswald, Sharply Criticizes Police and Press

By DANA BULLEN
Star Staff Writer

Premature disclosure and discussion of the evidence against Lee Harvey Oswald might have made it impossible for him to have had a fair trial, the Warren Commission has concluded.

"The courtroom, not the newspaper or television screen, is the appropriate forum in our system for the trial of a man accused of crime," the presidential commission's report says.

A special 47-page section devoted to the detention and death of the accused assassin of President Kennedy is critical of both the Dallas police and the press on a number of scores.

The report calls for a joint effort by the bar, police and news media to establish ethical standards for news gathering that preserve the right of individuals to a fair trial.

In addition to stating that Oswald's right to an impartial jury "would have been seriously jeopardized," the commission said police and press share responsibility in his death.

Conclusions

The commission reached these conclusions:

1. Oswald was not subjected to any physical coercion by police following arrest. He was advised that he need not speak, that any statements could be used against him and of his right to counsel.

2. The access afforded news media subjected Oswald to harassment and created "chaotic conditions" that were not conducive to orderly interrogation or the protection of his rights.

3. Numerous statements, sometimes erroneous, made by officials "during this period of confusion and disorder . . . would have presented serious obstacles to the obtaining of a fair trial."

"Neither the press nor the public had a right to be contemporaneously informed by the police or prosecuting authorities of the details of the evidence being accumulated," the commission said.

"Undoubtedly," it said, "the public was interested in these disclosures, but its curiosity should not have been satisfied at the expense of the accused's right to a trial by an impartial jury."

"The disclosure of evidence encouraged the public, from which a jury would ultimately be impaneled, to prejudge the raised at trial," the report said. mccallam

Flood of Newsmen

The main problems, the commission report indicated, resulted from the flood of newsmen on the Dallas police headquarters and from police officials' efforts to accommodate them.

Many of the newsmen crowded into a narraw corridor on the third floor of the police headquarters near where Oswald was being questioned. "It was a bedlam of confusion," a police official testified.

"The corridor became so jammed that policemen and newsmen had to push and shove if they wanted to get through, stepping over cables, wires and tripods," the commission report said.

Oswald, usually escorted by three to six detectives, traversed 20 feet of this corridor between the homicide office and an elevator at least 15 times during his stay at headquarters.

Close proximity to "the milling mass of insistent newsmen" and failure of police to authenticate press credentials "subjected the prisoner to a serious security risk," the report said.

Meanwhile, it said, law enforcement officials were keeping the press informed of the gathering case against Oswald. Some of the material that came out later turned out to be erroneous.

A non-existent taxicab driver, "Darryl Click," came into being when a section of Dallas, "Oak Cliff," was misunderstood. An innocent Dallas man somehow became identified as a "second suspect."

"Myths and Rumors"

"The publicizing of unchecked information provided much of the basis for the myths and rumors that came into being soon after the President's death," the commission report said.

The disclosure of evidence, the report said, was "seriously aggravated" by the statements of numerous officials that they were "certain of Oswald's guilt."

Despite police warnings that he had a right to counsel, Oswald, who denied all guilt, did not have counsel during his interrogation. He declined offered counsel and could not reach the lawyer he wanted.

Some of the sharpest criticism in the report's section on Oswald's detention deals with the conduct of the police and press during the period leading up to his death.

"The shooting of Lee Harvey Oswald obviously resulted from the failure of the security precautions which the Dallas Police Department had taken to protect their prisoner," the commission said.

"The acceptance of inadequate press credentials posed a clear avenue for a one-man assault," the report said. However, it said there was no evidence Oswald's slayer had used press credentials.

Too Much Publicity

The commission said making public the plans for Oswald's transfer to the county jail attracted many persons to the city jail who otherwise might not have learned of the move until it was completed.

"The swarm of newspeople in the basement also substantially limited the ability of the police to detect an unauthorized person once he had entered the basement," the report said.

"Regardless of whether the press should have been allowed to witness the transfer," it said, "security measures in the basement for Oswald's protection could and should have been better organized."

"The failure of the police to remove Oswald secretly or to control the crowd in the basement . . . were the major causes of the security breakdown which led to Oswald's death," the report said.

"Primary responsibility for having failed to control the press and to check the flow of undigested evidence to the public must be borne by the police department," the commission said.

News Media Blamed

Nevertheless, the report continued, "the commission believes, however, that a part of the responsibility for the unfortunate circumstances . . . must be borne by the news media."

"The crowd of newsmen generally failed to respond properly to the demands of police," the report said. "Police efforts to preserve order and to clear passageways in the corridor were usually unsuccessful."

"Moreover, by constantly pursuing public officials, the news representatives placed an insistent pressure upon them to disclose information," the commission report said.

A number of details of the handling of Oswald were geared to accommodate the press, the report indicated. For example, reporters were told the night before the approximate time of the transfer.

"The general disorder in the Police and Court Building during November 22-24 reveals a regrettable lack of self-discipline by the newsmen," the commission report said.

The report said the American Society of Newspaper Editors last April held discussions that revealed "strong misgivings" among the editors themselves about the role the press had played.

"To prevent a recurrence of the unfortunate events which followed the assassination, however, more than general concern will be needed," the commission said in concluding this section of its report.

"The promulgation of a code of professional conduct governing representatives of all news media would be a welcome evidence that the press has profited by the lesson of Dallas," the commission said.

Each Fact Checked in Exhaustive Detail

Experts Conducted an Unparalleled Investigation

By Alfred E. Lewis
Staff Reporter

At Edgewood Arsenal, Md., a bullet was fired from Lee Harvey Oswald's rifle into a human skull filled with a gelatin compound and draped with simulated hair. It shattered the right side in a manner very similar to the head wound that killed President Kennedy last Nov. 22.

In Dallas, a Western Union employe who had claimed he saw Oswald collecting money sent to him by telegraph admitted to investigators that he couldn't really say whether the man he saw was the President's assassin.

In Washington, a FBI laboratory expert found that the tiny fibers surrounding the bullet hole in the back of Mr. Kennedy's shirt were pressed inward, further evidence that the shot was fired from behind.

Those fragments from the massive whole of the Warren Commission report illustrate the blend of science and shoe leather that may make its study of the assassination the classic handbook of modern investigative technique.

The Commission and its staff of lawyers interviewed or accepted affidavits or statements from 552 witnesses, ranging from President Johnson to a porter at Dallas Police Headquarters.

tography, handwriting and other relevant fields probably without equal in the annals of criminology.

All of Oswald's known writings or other possessions that might have been used for code or other espionage purposes were examined by the FBI or the National Security Agency (or both). The findings were negative.

The major findings that emerged from this painstaking inquiry spring no surprises. Now, however, the evidence against Oswald (and against all the theories of conspiracy) is buttressed by volumes of testimony and scientific expertise.

A Weighty Foundation

The Commission started its work last December with a five-volume report from the FBI, a summary from the Secret Service and a report from the State Department on Oswald's defection to Russia.

Texas Attorney General Waggoner Carr delivered another set of investigative materials, largely Dallas police reports, in January. (In the ensuing months, the Commission took testimony from nearly 100 Dallas policemen and other local law officials.)

The Commission went far beyond those original reports to satisfy its "unequivocal presidential mandate to conduct a thorough and independent investigation," its report said. The investigation included elaborate re-enactments of Oswald's movements after the assassination and of the presidential motorcade.

Movie films taken by three spectators during the fleeting seconds of the assassination provided a precise guide to the movement of the presidential limousine as it passed the Texas School Book Depository. Used in conjunction with a camera mounted on Oswald's rifle, those films helped provide a second-by-second repetition of the assassin's view through his telescopic sight.

The amateur movies also depicted the precise instant that the fatal second bullet struck Mr. Kennedy.

"That impact was evident from the explosion of the President's brain tissues from the right side of his head," the Commission report said.

This pinpoint determination showed the position of the President's body when he was struck and the exact distance (265.3 feet) and angle from the Depository window from which the rifle was fired.

Extensive tests by Dr. Alfred G. Olivier at the Army's Wound Ballistics Branch at Edgewood Arsenal demonstrated that bullets fired from Oswald's rifle could cause the wounds received by Mr. Kennedy and Texas Gov. John Connally.

Own Claims Refuted

In addition to the test shots previously described, Olivier used fabricated models of other parts of the human body to obtain further evidence that the bullet which passed through President Kennedy's neck caused Connally's wounds.

Other tests by experts on ballistics, fingerprints and handwriting piled up further incriminating evidence against Oswald. During his brief detention, Oswald denied owning a rifle and accused the police of faking two photographs found at his home showing him holding a gun resembling the assassination weapon.

Although Oswald's wife Marina testified that she had taken the photos with her husband's camera, the Commission also called a photography expert, who testified that the pictures were not composites as Oswald had claimed.

Further tests demonstrated that negatives of pictures taken with the camera bore the same characteristics as a negative of the rifle photo.

No Plot Discovered In Assassination; Security Setup Hit

A frustrated malcontent, driven by an urge to find a place in history, slipped thorugh an inadequate security net to assassinate President John F. Kennedy last November 22.

With that conclusion, backed by 912 evidence-packed pages, a seven-man presidential commission has sought to lay to rest the speculation surrounding the assasination of the 35th President of the United States.

The commission, headed by Chief Justic Earl Warren, concluded:

- The assassin acted alone and his name was Lee Harvey Oswald.
- There was no evidence of any conspiracy—right or left-wing, foreign or domestic that Oswald was the hireling of a foreign power; no evidence that his attempts to ally himself with American left-wing groups had anything to do with the assassination.
- There was no evidence of any relationship between Oswald and Jack Ruby, who killed Oswald in the basement of Dallas police headquarters 48 hours after the President's death. Nothing more than an accident of history brought them together.

In its report, made public last night, the commission took a critical look at the Federal agencies, Dallas police and the press.

Outmoded Procedures

The Secret Service was criticized because of outmoded and inadequate procedures to identify potential threats against the President's life, because no check was made of any buildings along the route of the Dallas motorcade and because off-duty agents took drinks in the early hours of November 22.

Secret Service agents on the scene, however, were praised for their courage and prompt responses to the emergency.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation, which had kept track of Oswald since he tried to renounce his American citizenship in 1959 and knew he was employed in the Texas School Book Depository, was criticized for not alerting the Secret Service. The President's announced route passed the book depository.

Aided Oswald's Killer

The Dallas Police Department was criticized for its "unsound" decision to transfer Oswald to the county jail in full public view, for failing to exclude newsmen from the basement even after threats had been made on Oswald's life and for its "inadequate arrangements" for the transfer. These deficiencies, said the commission, contributed to Oswald's death.

The press was criticized for "creating chaotic conditions," printing unverified stories and jeopardizing Oswald's right to a fail trial, if he had lived.

The commission's recommendations, all stemming directly from its findings, called for substantial improvements to strengthen presidential protection and President Johnson last night appointed a four-man committee to advise him "on the execution" of the commission's recommendations. The members are Secretary of the Treasury C. Douglas Dillon, Acting Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach, Director John McCone of the Central Intelligence Agency,and McGeorge Bundy, special assistant to Johnson for national security affairs.

Commission Recommendations

Among the commission's recommendations:

A Cabinet committee or the National Security Council to oversee protective activities.

- A law making it a Federal crime to kill the President.
- More men and up-to-date facilities for the Secret Service.
- A special assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury responsible for supervising the Secret Service.
- Closer liaison between the Secret Service and other Federal agencies as well as with local police agencies.
- Provision for the President's physician to ride in the same car with him when he travels.
- "Great care" by the State Department in the return to this country of defectors and others who tried to renounce American citizenship and arrangements to intelligence agencies to be alerted on their return.
- Development of "ethical standards" by the bar, news media and law enforcement agencies to insure the right of fair trial and non-interference with criminal investigations.

10-Month Investigation

The commission spent close to 10 months investigating what it termed "a cruel and shocking act of violence directed against a man, a family, a Nation and all mankind."

On the basis of eyewitness testimony, ballistics, reconstruction and a variety of expert analyses, the commission concluded that Oswald fired three shots—two of which struck President Kennedy—from a sniper's nest on the sixth floor of the Book Depository.

Eye-witness testimony and the revolver taken from Oswald himself established for the commission that Oswald killed Police Patrolman J. D. Tippit approximately 45 minutes after President Kennedy met his death.

From foreign intelligence gathering as well as confidential sources at home, the commission satisfied itself that no conspiracy was involved in either the Kennedy assassination or the murder of Oswald—a conclusion shared by Cabinet officers and intelligence chiefs.

"Because of the difficulty of proving negatives to a certainty, the possibility of others being involved with either Oswald or Ruby cannot be categorically established," the commission acknowledged, "but if there is any such evidence it has been beyond the reach of all the investigative agencies and resources of the United States and has not come to the attention of this commission."

Convinced that the deed was the work of one man alone, the commission studied his possible motives but did not make a definite determination.

Instead, the commission dug deeply into all the background that might shed light on motivation so that "others may study Lee Oswald's life and arrive at their own conclusions as to his possible motives."

Boost for Civic Pride

Dallas Is Cleared

By WILLIAM STEIF
Scripps-Howard Staff Writer

The Warren Commission cleared Dallas of civic "guilt" in the assassination of President Kennedy.

It "found no evidence that the extreme views expressed toward President Kennedy by some right-wing groups centered in Dallas or any other general atmosphere of hate or right-wing extremism which may have existed in the city had any connection" with Lee Harvey Oswald's actions last Nov. 22.

But the Commission said there was "no way to judge what the effect of the general political ferment might have been" and cited a letter Oswald wrote last Nov. 1 to communist functionary Arnold Johnson which said:

"On Oct. 23 I had attended an ultra-right meeting headed by (Maj.) Gen. Edwin A. Walker, who lives in Dallas.

The meeting preceded by one day the attack on A(dlai) E. Stevenson at the United Nations day meeting at which he spoke. As you can see, political friction between 'left' and 'right' is very great here."

The mood of Dallas before the Kennedy visit was testy.

Two days after the Stevenson incident, Police Chief Jesse Curry reported he would call in 100 extra off-duty policemen to protect President Kennedy on his visit, and in the next weeks the papers were filled with "plans for protecting the President, stressing thoroness."

Panel Named On Protection Of President

President Johnson has named a high-level committee to advise him in carrying out the recommendations of the Warren Commission's report on the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

The committee was announced by White House Press Secretary George Reedy in Austin, Tex., last night before the President returned to Washington.

Named to the committee were:

C. Douglas Dillion, secretary of the Treasury, Nicholus Katzenbach, acting Attorney General; John A. McCone, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, and McGeorge Bundy, the President's special assistant for national security affairs.

Review Recommended

The Warren Commission's report, released last night, recommended a review by top government officials of measures for protecting the life of the President.

Hohnson spent a quiet weekend at his LBJ ranch before returning to Washington last night. A part of the time was spent, his aides said, in reading the Warren report.

The President named no chairman for the committee. However, it was understood that Dillon, as the ranking member of the panel, would have general supervision over the group.

To Canvass Need

The panel he selected presumably will canvass the possible need for further measures to be taken to increase protection for the President.

It was possible that the committee would explore the key question, raised by the commission, as to whether all or part of the protective functions of the Secret Service should be turned over to some other agency.

Dillon, as secretary of the Treasury, exercises general supervision over the Secret Service, an arm of his cabinet department.

WARREN COMMISSION

UPI-

ADD REACTION, WASHINGTON

DIRKSEN TOLD NEWSMEN THE WARREN REPORT WAS "CERTAINLY A THOROUGH-GOING JOB AND "THE CONCLUSIONS WERE ABOUT WHAT I EXPECTED." HOWEVER, HE SAID, "THE SUMMARY WAS ENTIRELY TOO LONG. THERE SHOULD HAVE BEEN A SECOND BOILED DOWN SUMMARY" WITH THE REPORT.

THE SENATE GOP LEADER ALSO SAID THE COMMISSION'S STAFF SHOULD HAVE RECEIVED MORE CREDIT. "IT WAS ONE OF THE MOST COMPETENT THAT ANY GROUP EVER HAS," DIRKSEN SAID.

AS FOR MAKING THE ASSASSINATION OF A PRESIDENT OR VICE PRESIDENT A FEDERAL OFFENSE, DIRKSEN SAID "IT SHOULD HAVE BEEN A FEDERAL CRIME LONG BEFORE NOW."

HE AGREED WITH MANSFIELD THAT CONGRESS PROBABLY WOULD ACT QUICKLY ON ANY LEGISLATIVE RECOMMENDATIONS BUT SAID HE DID NOT KNOW HOW MUCH ACTION WOULD BE POSSIBLE THIS YEAR.

WHILE PRAISING THE REPORT GENERALLY, DIRKSEN VOICED SOME MISGIVINGS ABOUT THE BROAD CRITICISMS OF THE FBI AND SECRET SERVICE. "I AM NOT SURE HOW WELL TAKEN THAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN," HE SAID. FOR ONE THING, HE SAID, THERE WERE NO CHARGES AGAINST OSWALD AND NO GROUNDS ON WHICH TO HOLD HIM BEFORE THE ASSASSINATION EVEN IF THE SECRET SERVICE HAD KNOWN OF HIS RECORD.

SEN. GEORGE D. AIKEN, R-VT., THE SENIOR GOP SENATOR IN LENGTH OF SERVICE, SAID "IT MIGHT BE A GOOD IDEA" TO MAKE PRESIDENTIAL OR VICE PRESIDENTIAL ASSASSINATIONS A FEDERAL CRIME. AIKEN SAID HE FOUND NO REAL SURPRISES IN THE REPORT.

AS FOR RECOMMENDATIONS THAT THE PRESIDENT BE MORE TIGHTLY GUARDED, AIKEN SAID "IT IS ONE THING TO MAKE RECOMMENDATIONS AND ANOTHER TO ENFORCE THEM."

GUARD GOT ON CAR SECONDS TOO LATE

More Time Between Shots, and JFK Might Have Lived

By JOHN TROAN
Scripps-Howard Science Writer

Fewer than four seconds may have spelled the difference between life and death.

The Warren Commission's report disclosed that a heroic Secret Service agent clambered aboard the White House limousine 3.7 seconds too late.

Tho he "leaped to the President's rescue" the instant Mr. Kennedy was wounded by a rifle bullet, the report noted it was not "humanly possible" for Agent Clinton J. Hill to reach the President in time to intercept the lethal shot that followed.

'CRATERED' SKULL

The report declared Mr. Kennedy "could have survived" the first bullet—which pierced the back of his neck and came out just below his Adam's apple after bruising a lung and ripping his windpipe.

But, it said, nobody could have survived the second bullet—which struck him in the rear of the head with such staggering force it "cratered" the skull and "shredded" the brain.

Indeed, the Commission re-laed, the impact was so violent an amateur photographer filmed an actual "explosion of the President's brain tissues," and fragments of the skull were recovered from the street as well as the car.

On the basis of motion pictures taken by a spectator, the Commission timed at 4.8 to 5.6 seconds the interval between the two shots that struck Mr. Kennedy.

During those fleeting seconds, Agent Hill—who had been riding on a car behind the President's limousine—was racing to reach Mr. Kennedy.

But the second bullet hit the President 1.6 seconds before Mr. Hill laid a hand on the limousine—and 3.7 seconds before he could climb aboard.

Nevertheless, former White House aide David Powers credited Mr. Hill with saving Mrs. Kennedy's life by "pushing her back into the Presidential auto" as she was about to topple to the street from the limousine.

The White House physician, Admiral George G. Burkley, was assigned to a car so far behind the President the doctor didn't even know what had happened.

BEYOND HELP

On arrival at the hospital, the President already looked dead. His eyes were fixed in a glassy "death stare," and he had "no palpable pulse."

But doctors detected "a few chest sounds which were thought to be heart beats" so they concluded Mr. Kennedy "was still alive"—and thereupon launched a vain 25-minute effort to pull him thru.

First, they put an air tube thru his mouth into his windpipe and hooked him to an artificial respirator to reverse the "death rattle" that was gripping his lungs.

This didn't work too well. So they substituted a pure-oxygen machine for the respirator and inserted an artificial air tube directly thru the neck.

TRANSFUSION

Into one leg they began transfusing blood — to replace the three pints the President lost in the emergency room alone.

Into an arm they started feeding a salt-and-sugar mixture that serves as a general tonic. Also, a dose of supercortisone—to bolster Mr. Kennedy's weak adrenal glands.

Tubes were inserted into the chest cavity to pipe off the air and blood which had leaked in. Then chest message was undertaken, in an effort to restart the heart which had seemed to quit.

This produced a flicker of a pulse in Mr. Kennedy's thigh and "some electrical activity" on a television-like screen which had been wired to the President to monitor his heart.

Despite all this, Mr. Kennedy's nerves and muscles never twitched. And finally his heart went completely silent—tho "it was impossible to determine the precise moment when life left the President."

Secret Service and FBI Protection Is Criticized

Commission Says Too Narrow A View Was Taken of Duties

By Edward T. Folliard
Staff Reporter

Both the Secret Service and the FBI viewed "too narrowly" their responsibilities as Presidential bodyguards when President Kennedy was assassinated, the Warren Commission report concluded.

The report blamed neither agency, but saw a "need for a more imaginative and less narrow interpretation of their responsibilities" for Presidential protection.

To this end, it recommended a $3 million budget increase for the Secret Service, which would enable it to employ more than 200 additional agents. It also recommended that the Secret Service be empowered to call as needed on the FBI and other Federal agencies for investigative and protective help.

And it said that the Secret Service should improve the protective measures used in presidential motorcades and increase the precautionary attention given to buildings around parade routes.

Legislation Sought

The Commission also called on Congress for legislation making the murder or kidnaping of a President or Vice President or any official in the Presidential line of succession a Federal crime and suggested that a Special Assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury supervise the Secret Service.

The report pointed out that since the assassination "many changes have already been made and others are contemplated" in the standard provisions for Presidential protection.

The Commission tempered its recomendations for procedural improvements with the observation that it could "recommend no procedures for the future protection of our Presidents which will guarantee security."

The demands on the person who holds the office are so complex and varied, and "the traditions of the office in a democracy such as ours are so deepseated as to preclude absolute security," the report said.

Shared Responsibility

The Secret Service has the primary responsibility for the protection of the President. However, the Warren Commission points out that the FBI also has some duties in this area. Since 1910, the FBI appropriation has included an item for the "protection of the person of the President of the United States."

The Secret Service has what is called a Protective Research Section. Its job is to collect and evaluate information about individuals and groups who might be a danger to the President. It depends on other agencies, Federal and local, for part of its information, but it had none on Oswald.

Said the report:

"The Commission has concluded that at the time of the assassination the arrangements relied upon by the Secret Service to perform this function were not adequate."

But the Commission acknowledges that at the time, the Protective Research Section was very small: 12 specialists and three clerks. The PRS would be much enlarged if the recommended money were authorized by Congress.

A Finding of "Arrogance"

The FBI began a file on Lee Harvey Oswald, assassin of President Kennedy, in October, 1959, after reports that he had defected to the Soviet Union. FBI agents first interviewed him in June, 1962, at Fort Worth and found him "arrogant."

The report says that FBI agent James P. Hosty Jr. knew that Oswald was in Dallas in November and knew that he was working in the Texas School Book Depository Building, from which Mr. Kennedy was ambushed, but did not—and was not required to—pass on this information to the Secret Service.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover defended Hosty before the Warren Commission, saying: "There was nothing up to the time of the assassination that gave any indication that this man (Oswald) was a dangerous character who might do harm to the President or the Vice President."

Hoover said that the first indication of Oswald's capacity for violence was his attempt on the life of former Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker, the right-wing leader. That was in April, 1963, but Hoover said the FBI did not learn that Oswald was the sniper until after the Kennedy assassination.

Should the FBI have told the Secret Service about Oswald's presence in Dallas before the arrival of President Kennedy on Nov. 22?

Criteria for Trouble

Robert I. Bouck, in charge of the Protective Research Section of the Secret Service, gave his testimony to the Warren Commission:

"I would think his (Oswald's) continued association with the Russian Embassy after his return, his association with the Castro groups, would have been of concern to us; a knowledge that he had, I believe, been courtmartialed for illegal possession of a gun, of a hand gun in the Marines; that he had owned a weapon and did a good deal of hunting or use of it, perhaps in Russia, plus a number of items about his disposition and unreliability of character. I think all of those, if we had them altogether, would have added up pointing out a pretty bad individual; and I think that, together, had we known that he had a vantage point would have seemed somewhat serious to us, even though I must admit that none of these in themselves would be—would meet our specific criteria, none of them alone.

"But it is when you begin adding them up to some degree that you begin to get criteria that are meaningful."

The report went on to say that Bouck acknowledged that he had no reason to believe that any one Federal agency had access to all this information, including the significant fact that Oswald worked in a building which overlooked the motorcade route.

After agreeing with the FBI's contention that Oswald had not shown any potential for violence (except the attempt on the life of Gen. Walker, which the FBI knew nothing about until after Nov. 22), the report said:

"The Commission believes, however, that the FBI took an unduly restrictive view of its responsibilities in preventive intelligence work, prior to the assassination.

"The Commission appreciates the large volume of cases handled by the FBI (636,371 investigative matters during fiscal year 1963). There were no Secret Service criteria which specifically required the referral of Oswald's case to the Secret Service; nor was there any requirement to report the names of defectors.

"However, there was much material in the hands of the FBI about Oswald: the knowledge of his defection, his arrogance and hostility to the United States, his pro-Castro tendencies, his lies when interrogated by the FBI, his trip to Mexico where he was in contact with Soviet authorities, his presence in the School Book Depository job and its location along the route of the motorcade.

"All this does seem to amount to enough to have induced an alert agency such as the FBI, possessed of this information, to list Oswald as a potential threat to the safety of the President."

The report noted that the FBI Director testified he did not believe his agency, under an operating directive, was required to give the Secret Service what information it has about Oswald. And it recalled the testimony of Secret Service Special Agent Bouck that the accumulation of facts known to the FBI should have constituted a sufficient basis to warn the Secret Service of the Oswald risk. The Commission then said:

"The Commission believes that both the FBI and the Secret Service have too narrowly construed thier respective responsibilities. The Commission has the impression that too much emphasis is placed by both on the investigation of specific threats by individuals and not enough on danger from other sources. . . .

Cooperation Needed

The Commission recommended that the Secret Service "completely overhaul" its advance detection facilities and develop "more useful and precise criteria" for defining potential threats to the President. It added that other agencies of government should tell the Secret Service about "all returned defectors."

In addition, the Commission said the Secret Service should enter into agreements with other agencies to insure that it gets all the information it needs and that it should expedite plans to use data-processing techniques.

The Commission noted also that both the FBI and Secret Service had conducted investigations of the assassination on their own immediately following the tragedy and had turned over to the Commission the results of those inquiries.

Commenting on the liaison (and lack of it) between the two agencies just prior to the crime, the Commission observed:

"Most important, notwithstanding that both agencies have professed to the Commission that the liaison between them was close and fully sufficient, the Commission does not believe that the liaison between the FBI and the Secret Service . . . was as effective as it should have been."

The Commission also looked into reports that some Secret Service agents travelling with President Kennedy did some drinking at the Fort Worth Press Club and remained up late in the Cellar Coffee House on the night of Nov. 21.

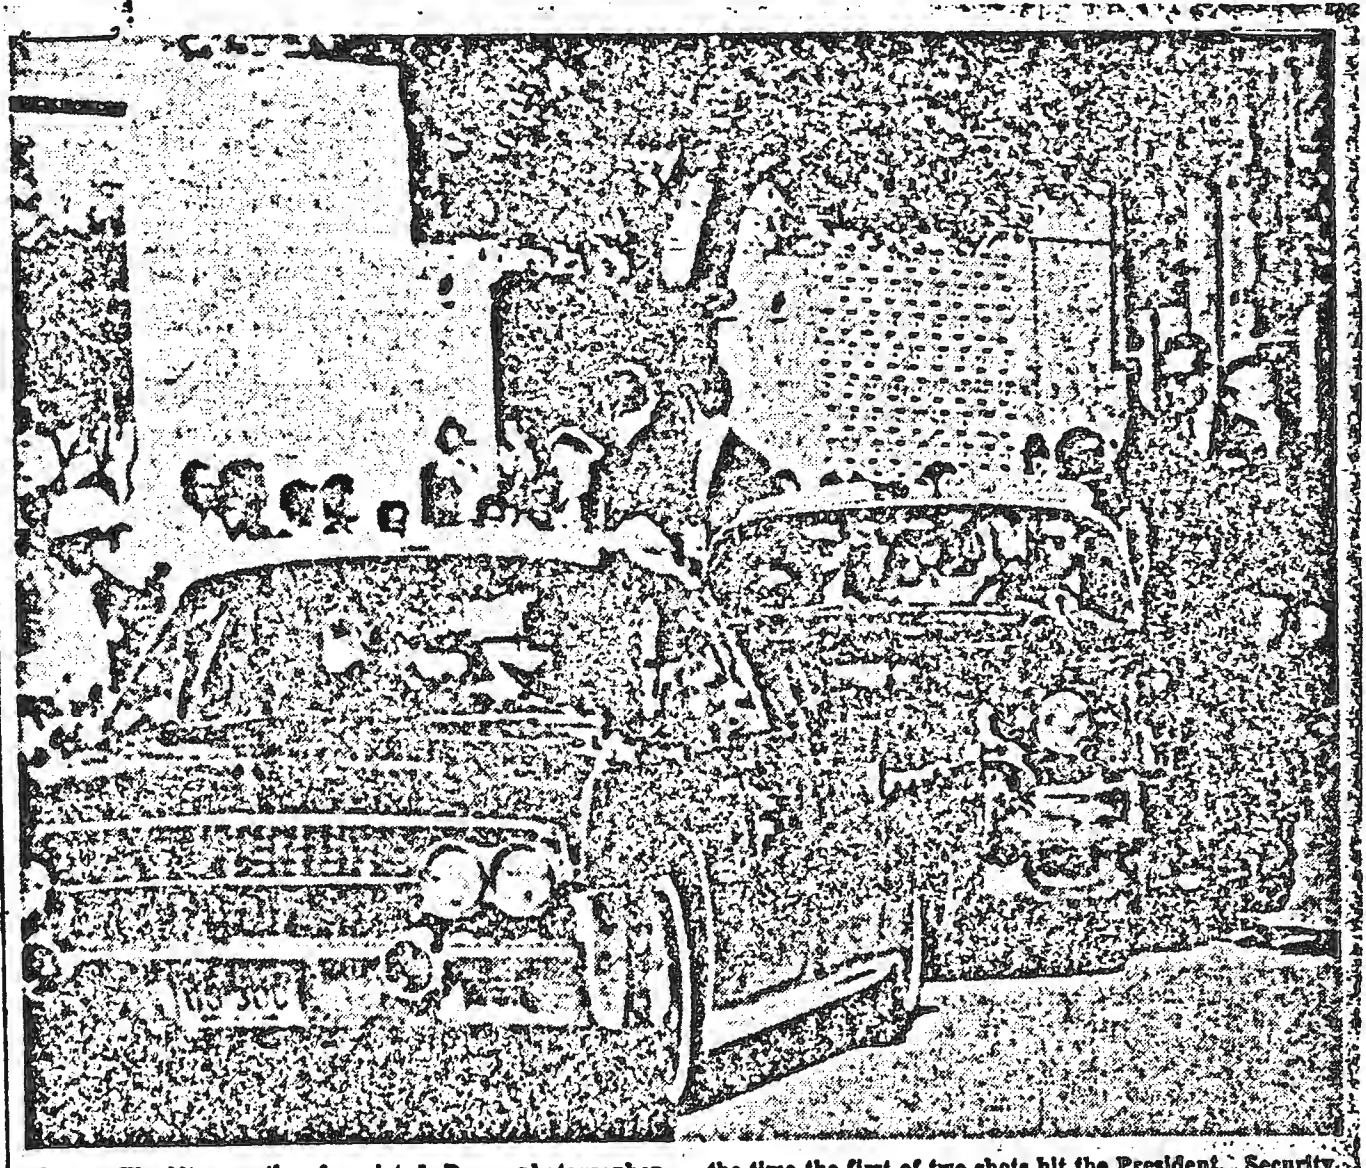
The report said that Secret Service Chief James J. Rowley did not condone this behavior, but was satisfied that all the agents carried out their duties satisfactorily. Indeed, the report said that the conduct of the agents at the time of the assassination was "in the finest tradition of Government service."

Presidential Risks Discussed by JFK

In Fort Worth on the morning of the day he was to die in Dallas, President Kennedy was talking to P. Kenneth O'Donnell, a White House assistant, about the risks inherent in the office of Chief Executive.

O'Donnell, testifying before the Warren Commission, recalling what Mr. Kennedy had told him, said "if anybody really wanted to shoot the President of the United States, it was not a very difficult job—all one had to do was get a high building some day with a telescopic rifle, and there was nothing anybody could do to defend against such an attempt."

The Warren Commission, in Appendix VII of its report, includes "A Brief History of Presidential Protection," and it is sober reading. In less than a century, four Presidents have been assassinated. Attempts were made to kill two other Presidents, one former President.



James W. Altgens, the Associated Press photographer who took this picture, believes it was snapped just about the time the first of two shots hit the President. Security men look toward shot's source.

The Warren Panel's Report

Ten months of exhaustive investigation, which included tedious study of mountains of evidence and testimony, have produced a very thorough and extraordinarily detailed report on the assassination of President Kennedy, the subsequent slaying of Lee Oswald and every conceivable related event.

The commission headed by Chief Justice Warren left no stone unturned in its search for the undiluted truth of what happened on that tragic day in Dallas last November.

As the commission emphasizes, it may never be possible to know all the facts and motives positively and in their entirety. Nevertheless, the volume of evidence presented in the report should be sufficient to puncture most reckless rumors.

The Warren commission concludes logically and reasonably, on the basis of evidence accumulated, that Oswald was the assassin of President Kennedy, that there were no accomplices to the crime and that neither Oswald nor Jack Ruby, the killer of Oswald, were part of any conspiracy.

Among the most important findings and recommendations of the commission are those concerned with inadequacies in safeguarding the President. The U. S. Secret Service is said to lack sufficient personnel and other resources to protect the Chief Executive properly. Moreover, the commission says there is not enough cooperative effort between the Secret Service and the Federal Bureau of Investigation—nor between the Secret Service and local police.

The failure of those entrusted with protecting President Kennedy to undertake basic precautions of search and security in buildings along the route of the Presidential motorcade in Dallas is as shocking as it is tragic. Inevitably the question arises as to how adequate is the security for President Johnson.

We concur vigorously with the commission's recommendation that the whole matter of Presidential safety and security be given a complete review. We believe this should be done without delay and, moreover, there should be immediate steps taken to provide the Secret Service with whatever additional manpower, equipment and reorganization are required.

Criticism of the State Department by the Warren commission is surprisingly mild and should have been much stronger. It is not only ironic but absolutely inexcusable that the State Department was so cooperative in facilitating Oswald's return from Russia to the United States, even to the point of lending him money for the fateful journey.

Dallas police came in for stiff criticism for their mishandling of security arrangements after Oswald was taken into custody. It would be a good idea, as the commission suggests, for assassination of a President to be made a Federal offense so that persons arrested in connection with any such plot, even if unsuccessful, could be held by Federal authorities rather than by police where the arrest occurs.

The Warren commission's report is not only a major historic document of our times but contains recommendations that, if carried out, could help prevent repetition of the kind of tragedy which struck swiftly and horribly on that autumn day in Dallas.

'The Commander'

Oswald Hated the World

By JOHN TROAN
By Scripps-Howard Newspapers

President Kennedy's killer was a mental misfit who fancied himself as a "great leader" and hated the world for failing to give him the recognition he craved.

This is the picture of Lee Harvey Oswald drawn by the Warren Comission's report.

Tho the Commission stressed it could not determine whether Oswald was legally sane when he shot Mr. Kennedy, its report is studded with evidence indicating he had a sick mind and was suffering from what is often called a "split personality."

COMMANDER

"While Oswald appeared to most of those who knew him as a meek and harmless person," the report stated, "he sometimes imagined himself as 'the commander' and, apparently seriously, as a political prophet . . .

"His wife testified that he compared himself with great leaders of history. Such ideas of grandeur were apparently accompanied by notions of oppression.

"He had a great hostility toward his environment, whatever it happened to be, which he expressed in striking and sometimes violent acts long before the assassination."

BROKEN HOME

The Commission said Oswald was emotionally starved, a poorly educated product of a "disorganized" home. But while Jack Ruby grew up with an inferiority complex, Oswald developed a persecution complex.

Oswald was more intelligent but Ruby was a better promoter.

An introvert, Oswald preferred to drape a veil over his surroundings and withdraw into a shell.

First serious trouble developed when his mother moved from Ft. Worth, Tex., to New York City in 1952.

Oswald, then 12, played hooky so often he was referred to Youth House, an institution where children receive psychiatric observation.

Tho no "psychotic mental changes"—actual symptoms of insanity—were found, a psychiatrist diagnosed a "personality pattern disturbance with schizoid features and passive-aggressive tendencies."

In short, behavior resembling a person with a split personality.

Shortly afterward, a social workers concluded: "There are indications that (Oswald) has suffered serious personality damage but if he can receive help quickly this might be repaired to some extent."

NO HELP

However, the commission said, "Lee Oswald never received that help."

"Few social agencies even in New York were equipped to provide the kind of intensive treatment that he needed," the Commission related, "and when one of the city's clinics did find room to handle him, for some reason the record does not show, advantage was never taken of the chance afforded to Oswald."

Despite the fact young Oswald had threatened to stab his half-brother's wife and "admitted to fantasies about being powerful and sometimes hurting and killing people," nobody then regarded him "a potential assassin."

His killer instinct became unmistakably evident, however, on April 10, 1963, when he fired a rifle bullet at Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker, a controversial right-wing leader, as the retired Army officer sat in his home in Dallas.

A NOTE

Oswald's wife learned of this attempt when she discovered a note her husband had left her—a note that indicated Oswald intended to be caught so he would be assured "his place in history."

"The Walker incident," the Commission declared, "indicates that . . . Oswald did not lack the determination and other traits required to carry out a carefully planned killing of another human being."

But Mrs. Oswald did not reveal her husband's abortive attempt on Gen. Walker's life until he succeeded in killing Mr. Kennedy.

And why would Oswald have wanted to murder the President? Nobody will ever know for sure, the Commission said.

However, it concluded, Oswald's "deep-rooted resentment of all authority . . . hostility to every society in which he lived . . . inability to enter into meaningful relationships with people . . . continuous rejection of his environment . . . urge to try to find a place in history . . . despair at failures . . . capacity for violence (and) avowed commitment to Marxism and communism" all contributed to "his capacity to risk all in cruel and irresponsible actions."

—UPI Telephoto

Mrs. Marguerite Oswald said yesterday in Ft. Worth that a reading of the Warren Commission report failed to convince her that her son assassinated President Kennedy. Mrs. Oswald said she spent the night reading the report, but refused to say how she's obtained it in advance of its general release.

News Media and Police Are Blamed for Chaos

By Paul A. Schuette
Staff Reporter

Night club owner Jack Ruby had chaos as his accomplice when he shot down Lee Harvey Oswald in the basement of the Dallas Police and Courts Building last Nov. 24.

In its report, the Warren Commission bluntly criticized both the Dallas Police Department and the news media for the almost unbelievable confusion that marked Oswald's 46 hours in jail.

Both must share responsibility for the "security breakdown" that led to Oswald's death two days after he had slain President Kennedy, the Commission declared.

The Commission noted that editors later revealed strong misgivings about the role of the press at Dallas but added that "more than general concern will be needed."

Ethical Standards

The Commission recommended that representatives of the bar, law-enforcement associations and news media jointly develop ethical standards on collecting and presenting information to the public "so that there will be no interference with pending criminal investigations, court proceedings or the right of individuals to a fair trial."

The Commission report includes a 47-page account of Oswald's last hours as a prisoner in the gray stone building in downtown Dallas that houses police headquarters and the city jail.

". . . the occurrences within the Police and Courts Building between Nov. 22 and 24 raise . . . important issues concerning the conduct of law-enforcement officials, the responsibilities of the press, the rights of accused persons and the administration of criminal justice in the United States," the Commission said.

Oswald was led into the building about 2 p.m. on Nov. 22 and hustled to the third floor offices of the homicide and robbery bureau headed by Capt. J. Will Fritz.

Bedlam of Confusion

"Reporters and cameramen flooded into the building and congregated in the corridor of the third floor, joining those few who had been present when Oswald first arrived," the report said.

Police Chief Jesse E. Curry said that when he arrived at headquarters in mid-afternoon "there was just pandemonium on the third floor . . . it was a bedlam of confusion."

An FBI agent said conditions at the police station were "not too much unlike Grand Central Station at rush hour, maybe like the Yankee Stadium during the World Series games . . ."

Oswald was exposed to this corridor crush at least 15 times during trips between Fritz's office and the elevator to the cell block two floors above, the Commission said.

He also was put on display at a press conference about midnight Friday that "was unrelated to any phase of the investigation and was motivated primarily by the desire to satisfy the demands of the news media to see the prisoner." Ruby and other unauthorized persons were present at the news conference, too, the Commission said.

Curry told the Commission later he never considered clearing the crowd from the building because he "saw no particular harm in allowing the media to observe the prisoner."

More Chaos

Curry pursued the same policy in giving public notice that Oswald would be transferred to the county jail on Sunday morning, Nov. 24.

The Commission said two police officers suggested taking Oswald out through another exit, leaving the press waiting in the basement.

Capt. Fritz, however, replied that Curry would not agree because he had promised that newsmen could take pictures, the report said.

The basement, where Oswald was to be placed in a car, was cleared and searched on Sunday morning.

But newsmen and television crews then swarmed into the basement and some told the Commission they were not required to show credentials. Ruby entered too, apparently walking by a guard at a ramp entrance, the report said.

Security Breakdown

". . . the failure of the police to remove Oswald secretly or to control the crowd in the basement at the time of the transfer were the major causes of the security breakdown which led to Oswald's death," the Commission concluded.

Had Oswald lived, the Commission questioned whether an impartial jury could have been found to try him because of the free flow of information—and misinformation — which Curry, Fritz, District Attorney Henry Wade and other officials provided for the press. Much of the information these officials gave out involved early assumptions or was based on incomplete investigations and some of this turned out to be erroneous. But, the Commission said:

"The publicizing of unchecked information provided much of the basis for the myths and rumors that came into being soon after the President's death."

The report noted that the Police Department was following its standing policy of allowing newsmen free access to police offices and providing full information on the progress of an investigation.

"In retrospect, most members of the department believed that the general rule allowing admittance of the press to the police quarters should not have been followed after the assassination," the Commission said. "Few, if any, thought this at the time.

"As a result, from Friday afternoon until after the killing of Oswald on Sunday, the press was able to publicize virtually all of the information about the case which had been gathered until that time."

Most of the information was disclosed at impromptu and clamorous press conferences in the crowded third floor corridor, the Commission reported.

Lawyers Complain

Chief Curry appeared in interviews on television and radio at least a dozen times during Oswald's detention, the report said. Fritz and Wade also gave interviews, although there were complaints from lawyers as early as Saturday morning about the amount of information going out.

"A fundamental objection to the news policy pursued by Dallas police . . . is the extent to which it endangered Oswald's constitutional right to a trial by an impartial jury," the Commission said. "The disclosure of evidence encouraged the public, from which a jury would ultimately be impaneled, to prejudge the very questions that would be raised at the trial."

The news media also must share the responsibility for the "unfortunate circumstances" following the President's death, the Commission said.

Newsmen generally failed to comply with police demands and they completely ignored Curry's injunctions against asking Oswald questions, the report said.

Police officials told the Commission that one or two reporters reinforced demands to see Oswald by suggesting that police had been brutalizing him and intimating that these reports would be publicized.

". . . the right of the public to know does not give the press license to interfere with the efficient operation of law-enforcement agencies," the Commission said.

Prelude to Murder

I. Oswald's Purchase of Rifle Began Fateful Events of 1963

By Jean White
Staff Reporter

On March 12, 1963, a slight, dark-haired young man purchased a postal money order for $21.45 and mailed an order for an Italian rifle to a Chicago sporting goods store.

The order coupon, clipped from the American Rifleman magazine, was signed, in hand-printing, "A. Hidell, P.O. Box 2915, Dallas, Texas." P.O.B. 2915 was rented by Lee Harvey Oswald.

One 6.5-mm. Italian carbine with a four-power scope, serial number C2766, was shipped parcel post on March 20 to the Dallas address. Eight months later, it was the weapon used to assassinate President John F. Kennedy.

The rifle order begins a chain of events that conspired to give a bitter, frustrated little man with dreams of power the opportunity to strike down a figure as great as the President of the United States.

Lee Harvey Oswald now had the weapon to commit the crime. Out of his life came the shadowy motives. And the chance of circumstances was to place him in the window of the Texas School Book Depository building at 12:30 p.m. on Nov. 22 as the President's car passed below.

When Oswald picked up his mail-order rifle in March, 1963, he and his Russian wife, Marina, were living in a $60-a-month upstairs apartment on Neely st. in Dallas. Oswald kept the rifle in a storeroom, where he spent long periods of time.

Marina saw her husband leave the apartment with the rifle once. She also saw him clean it several times.

Then, one Sunday, probably in early April, as Marina was hanging up diapers in the backyard, Lee asked her to take some pictures of him. He posed, proudly holding his recently-acquired rifle and copies of two newspapers called the Worker and the Militant. A mail-order revolver was strapped to his belt.

Over the weekend of March 9-10, Oswald had been taking some pictures of his own. He had carefully photographed the alley behind the home of former Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker. In the days following, he studied bus routes to Walker's neighborhood. He sketched his plot to shoot Walker in a notebook, wrote out a note to Marina . . . and ordered a rifle by mail.

About this time, Oswald stopped going to his regular typing classes on Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday evenings.

On Wednesday, April 10, Lee left the Neely st. apartment shortly after dinner. When he came back, it was very late, and he was very pale. He told his wife he had shot at Gen. Walker. The next day, learning the bullet had missed, Lee told Marina he was "very sorry" that he hadn't hit Walker.

Failure Before Success

Oswald's first assassination attempt had failed.

Just four days before the attempt on Walker's life, Oswald was fired from his job at a Dallas photographic firm. His work wasn't accurate, and Lee didn't get along with the other employes. He had brought a Russian language newspaper to work, and this didn't go over too well with his employer and co-workers.

When a friend, Ruth Paine, visited the Oswalds at their apartment on April 24, she found Oswald was packed and ready to leave for New Orleans by bus. He hadn't been able to find a job around Dallas, he explained, and was going to try his luck somewhere else.

Mrs. Paine offered to take Marina into her home in Irving, about 15 miles from downtown Dallas. Lee helped pack the family belongings into the back of the Paine car.

In New Orleans, Lee had his chronic trouble in finding employment. He spent some of his free time in looking up his father's elderly relatives and visiting the cemetery where his father was buried. It was one of the few times that he tried to learn something about his family background.

Early in May, Oswald finally landed a job and called Marina to bring the baby to New Orleans to rejoin him. At first, things seemed to look up for the Oswalds. Lee delighted in showing his family the town where he was born.

But the peaceful interlude didn't last long. Within two months, on July 19, Lee lost his $1.50-an-hour job as a greaser and oiler in a coffee processing plant. He was spending too much time away from the job, loitering at the nearby Crescent City garage. There he read hunting and rifle magazines and talked about guns with one of the owners.

Lee also had other activities to keep him busy.

He organized a fictitious "organization" called "Fair Play for Cuba Committee" handing out handbills on New Orleans streets. He identified the president of the non-existent group as "A. J. Hidell"—the name that he had used to purchase the assassination weapon.

Oswald's "Fair Play for Cuba" ploy did pay off with some limited notoriety. On Aug. 21, shortly after two street scuffles with anti-Castro Cuban exiles, he had made enough of a public mark to be invited to join a radio debate over a local station.

Oswald was asked during the debate whether he agreed with Castro that President Kennedy was a "ruffian and thief." He replied that he "would not agree with that particular wording."

But this brief moment of glory didn't last long.

By the end of August, 1963, after three months in New Orleans, everything seemed to be going wrong again. He had not found another job. The Fair Play for Cuba Committee had failed to win any support and had given him only a moment of public attention. There was renewed bickering with his wife, who was expecting their second child.

Thoughts of Cuba

Even before August, Oswald had been thinking about leaving the United States once more. On June 24, he had applied for a new passport. He talked to Marina about returning to Russia. But it appears that what Oswald really wanted was to go to Cuba.

Finally, Oswald agreed the best thing was for his family to return to Irving to live with Mrs. Paine. On Sept. 23, Mrs. Paine came through New Orleans on the return leg of her trip from the East Coast. She picked up Marina and baby June with most of the Oswald family possessions.

Two days later Oswald boarded a Continental Trailways bus in Houston and began a 20-hour ride to Mexico City.

He went to the Cuban Embassy and applied for a visa to visit Cuba on his way to Russia. Cuban officials turned down the request until Oswald got a Russian visa. Oswald erupted in rage.

When he left Mexico City Oct. 2, Oswald must have been bitter, frustrated, and disillu-

He had been rebuffed by both the Cuban and Russian embassies.

On the return from Mexico, Oswald went back to the Dallas area to go through the discouraging task of job-hunting again. A neighbor told Mrs. Paine that her younger brother, Buell Wesley Frazier, thought there might be a job opening at the Texas School Book Depository, where Frazier worked. Mrs. Paine called the Depository, and the superintendent said he would talk to Oswald.

Oswald was hired as a $1.25-an-hour order-filler and began work on Oct. 16. His job often took him to the sixth-floor, where he was later to have his sniper's nest.

A few days earlier, in an ironic twist of events, Oswald had failed to get one job because his previous employer at the photographic firm had given him a bad reference. Oswald, the employer said, was "a troublemaker . . . Has Communistic tendencies."

During October and November, Oswald lived at a Dallas rooming house during the week. On Friday afternoons, he hitched a ride with Frazier to spend the weekends with Marina at the Paine home in Irving.

The rebuffs in Mexico seemed to drive Oswald to seek closer ties with his family. He usually called Marina twice a day. He seemed genuinely happy about the second child, due shortly.

But on Nov. 15—one week before President Kennedy was due to make his Dallas visit—Lee and Marina started a bitter quarrel.

Marina asked her husband not to come to Irving that weekend because Michael Paine, who was separated from Mrs. Paine, would be there to celebrate his daughter's birthday. She also hinted that ~~Lee~~ might be abusing Mrs. Paine's hospitality.

The Alias

On Sunday, Nov. 17, Ruth Paine and Marina decided to call Oswald at his rooming-house. They did not know he was registered under the assumed name of O. H. Lee. They were told that no one by the name of Lee Oswald lived there.

The next day Oswald called his wife. He was angry she had called him at the number he had given her to use only in an emergency. She was angry that he had used an alias.

Oswald argued that he had to use an alias to keep the FBI from bothering him and causing him to lose jobs.

Marina asked her husband: "After all, when will all your footlights come to an end? All of these comedies."

Oswald called several times on Nov. 18. Finally Marina hung up on him. He didn't make his usual calls the next day.

By Nov. 19, newspaper stories clearly indicated the Presidential motorcade would be passing the Texas School Book Depository.

On Thursday, Nov. 21, Oswald asked Frazier, his fellow employe and weekend chauffeur, for a ride home that evening. Frazier, surprised, asked why Oswald was going to Irving on Thursday night rather than Friday for the weekend.

"I'm going home to get some curtain rods . . . to put in the apartment," Oswald explained.

The curtain rod story provided Oswald with a plausible excuse for carrying a long, bulky package to Dallas the next morning.

Both Marina and Mrs. Paine thought Oswald had returned to patch up things with his wife after the telephone quarrel.

Assassination Eve

Oswald acted his part. He was lonely, he told Marina, and asked her to come to Dallas to live with him. But Marina was still angry. She refused to talk to Oswald throughout the evening.

Before dinner, Oswald played on the lawn with his small daughter. After supper was over, he watched television while the women cleared off the table and prepared the children for bed.

Mrs. Paine and Marina were busy from 8 to 9 p.m. in the children's bedrooms located at the extreme east end of the house. On the west end of the house is the attached garage, which held most of the Oswald family belongings.

Among these, as the evidence was to show, was the mail-order rifle, wrapped in an old brown and green blanket.

Around 9 p.m., Mrs. Paine went to the garage to paint some children's blocks. She noticed the light was on. Later she was certain that she had not left it on after dinner.

That night, also around 9 p.m., Oswald went to bed before his wife was ready to retire. When she came in later, she thought he was awake but did not speak and left Oswald to his thoughts.

II.

By George Lardner Jr.
Staff Reporter

Marina Oswald was still in bed when her husband got up for work, but she was awake before he left.

Wear a jacket, Lee, she reminded him. It looked like a rainy day.

There was little more to say after the bickering of the night before. The young husband left his wedding ring in a cup atop the dresser and walked off.

It was 7:15 a.m., Nov. 22, 1963.

John F. Kennedy got up early that morning, too. It was drizzling outside his Fort Worth hotel. He had a busy day ahead.

Danger in open-air politics and parades? Mr. Kennedy shrugged it off.

Killing a President of the United States wouldn't be too difficult, he told an aide. There was nothing you could do about high buildings and telescopic rifles. Besides, he liked crowds.

In Irving, Tex., Lee Harvey Oswald strolled half a block to pick up a ride. He had a blue jacket over his worn brown sports shirt.

Buell Wesley Frazier met him at the kitchen door. They got in the car together for the 15-mile trip to the Texas School Book Depository building in Dallas where both worked.

'Curtain Rods'

Frazier glanced at the back seat. He noticed a long, brown paper bag Oswald had put there.

"What's the package, Lee?"

"Curtain rods," Oswald replied.

There had been some curtain rods in the garage of Ruth Paine's nearby home where Marina was staying. They were still there. But a rolled-up green and brown blanket where Marina had seen a rifle stock was empty.

At the company parking lot, Oswald took his bag and headed for the Depository building two blocks away. He usually waited for Frazier. This time he didn't.

Outside the seven-story Depository building at Houston and Elm sts., crowds built up all morning. President Kennedy was scheduled to pass by in a motorcade, the papers had said. Sunshine broke through the gloomy skies.

On the sixth floor as it got close to lunchtime, a crew laying a new plywood floor on the west side went down the two freight elevators.

On the way down, one of them, Charles Givens, spotted Oswald on the fifth floor, then remembered he'd forgotten his cigarettes.

Givens went back up alone. He saw Oswald near the southeast corner of the sixth floor as he got off.

"Boy, are you going downstairs?" Givens asked. "It's geting near lunchtime."

"No, sir," the slender ex-Marine said. "When you get downstairs, close the door to the elevator."

"Okay," Givens said. He rode down in the east elevator, but when he got to the first floor again, he noticed that the west elevator, the one with the gate, was gone. It was close to 11:55 a.m.

About five minutes later, Bonnie Ray Williams, another floor-layer, returned to the sixth floor to eat his chicken lunch and watch the motorcade.

Cartons of books his crew had stacked blocked his view of the southeast corner a few yards away. He saw no one.

Williams finished eating and took the east elevator to the fifth floor, looking for company. He found two fellow workers, James Jarman Jr., and Harold Norman, who had come up in the west elevator.

They all poked their heads out to watch. It was about 12:20 p.m.

Man at the Window

Across the street, Howard L. Brennan, a 45-year-old steamfitter, perched on a retaining wall beside a small pool. Several times he noticed a slender man at the southeast window on the sixth floor 120 feet away.

The President had his right arm raised as his 1961 Lincoln convertible turned left off Houston st. and moved down Elm past the depository.

From the sixth floor window, the leafy branches of a big oak tree hid him from view for a moment.

Howard Brennan heard what sounded like a motorcycle backfiring. Dallas motorcycle Patrolman Marrion L. Baker looked up toward the Book Depository. Pigeons fluttered upward.

In the Presidential limousine, a high-powered bullet smashed into John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

"My God," he said, "I am hit!"

Howard Brennan looked at the sixth floor window.

"And this man that I saw previous was aiming for his last shot," he said later. It was, he swore, Lee Harvey Oswald. ". . . and he shot again."

Another bullet tore into the back of the President's head. His wife, Jacqueline, cried out "Oh, my God, they have shot my husband!" Cradling him in her arms, she said, "I love you, Jack."

It was 12:30 p.m.

First Confrontation

Patrolman Baker raced his motorcycle to the Book Depository. He found Roy Truly, the building superintendent, in the lobby. They trotted to the northwest corner of the building, but the elevators weren't there.

"Let's take the stairs," Baker said.

Rounding the second floor landing, the patrolman caught a glimpse of a man in the vestibule of the lunchroom through a small glass window in the vestibule door.

". . . This door might have been, you know, closing and almost shut at that time," he said.

Gun drawn, Baker ran into the vestibule and spotted a man walking into the lunchroom, empty-handed.

"Come here," he said. Lee Harvey Oswald did what he was told. Baker's revolver was almost touching his belly, but he remained calm.

By now Truly, who had kept going up the stairs, had come in. "Do you know this man, does he work here?" Baker asked.

"Yes," Truly said. They let Oswald go and continued upstairs.

On the fifth floor, they found the east elevator, but not the west one because Jack Dougherty, an employe who had been working on that floor, was taking it down.

Baker and Truly decided to ride the rest of the way.

Heard Cartridges Bounce

As the two moved toward the east elevator, Norman, Jarman and Williams spotted the patrolman's white helmet. They had been milling around on the fifth floor since they heard the shots. Norman said he heard the used cartridges from the assassin's rifle bouncing on the floor over their heads.

Baker and Truly took the elevator to the seventh floor, then searched the roof.

Norman, Jarman and Williams raced downstairs to find a policeman.

Outside, they saw Brennan reporting what he had seen. The man was white, slender, in his early 30's, the steamfitter told police.

Meanwhile, within a minute after officer Baker met Oswald going into the lunchroom, Mrs. R. A. Reid, clerical supervisor for the Book Depository, saw Oswald walk by her on the second floor, a full bottle of Coke in his hand. He was heading toward the front stairway at the southeast corner of the building.

"Oh, the President has been shot, but maybe they didn't hit him," she said.

Oswald muttered something and kept going. He was wearing a T-shirt but no jacket, she said.

It was about 12:32 p.m. Police sealed off the building about five minutes later.

Evidence Is Found

On the sixth floor, they found a long, brown bag that had been made with Depository wrapping paper, the spent cartridges, and the assassination rifle stuffed between two rows of boxes. Oswald's blue jacket was found on the same floor later.

Fibers that could have come from the blanket in the Paine garage were found in the paper bag. Fibers similar to those in Oswald's sports shirt were found on the rifle.

Whatever he may have been wearing when he left the Depository, Oswald had his sports shirt on when he pounded on the door of a westbound Dallas Transit Co. bus on Elm st., seven blocks east of the building.

Mary Bledsoe was sure about that. She had rented a room to Oswald the month before, then tossed him out because "I didn't like his attitude."

Mrs. Bledsoe was sitting on the bus when Oswald hopped on around 12:40 p.m.

"He looks like a maniac," she said. "His shirt was undone . . . was a hole in it, hole, and he was dirty and I didn't look at him. I didn't want to know I even seen him."

A passing motorist told the bus driver, Cecil J. McWatters, that the President had just been shot. Word spread through the bus.

Oswald asked for a transfer and got off. The bus had gone about two blocks.

At the Greyhound bus station nearby, taxi driver William Whaley was getting out of his cab to buy a pack of cigarettes. Oswald asked for the cab and got in the front seat.

Just then an elderly lady put her head in the door past Oswald and asked Whaley to call a taxi for her. Oswald offered to get out, but she said, "No, the driver can call me one." It was close to 12:48.

Three minutes earlier, police radios had begun broadcasting a description of the assassin Brennan described: "white male, approximately 30, slender build, height 5 foot 10 inches, weight 165 pounds."

Officer Tippit

Patrolman J. D. Tippit in car 78 must have heard the message as he was cruising the residential section. He was told to stand by.

Whaley let Oswald off about five blocks south of his roominghouse in Oak Cliff where he stayed alone in an $8-a-week cubicle on workdays. On foot, it was about five minutes away.

Earlene Roberts, the housekeeper, was watching television when the tenant she knew as "O. H. Lee" rushed in around 1 p.m.

At Parkland Memorial Hospital, physicians were pronouncing President Kennedy dead.

Oswald rushed out, zipping up his light grey jacket. Patrolman Tippit stopped him around 1:15 p.m. at 10th st. and Patton ave., nine-tenths of a mile from the roominghouse.

They exchanged a few words, Tippit in the driver's seat of the police car, Oswald leaning his arms on the car outside of the right front window.

Tippit was killed instantly.

Cutting across a lawn, Oswald emptied his gun of the used cartridges. "Poor damn cop" or maybe, "poor dumb cop," taxi driver William Scoggins heard him mutter. Scoggins had seen the shooting and was now crouched behind his cab. Domingo Benavides, an auto repairman, also was on the scene and used Tippit's radio to report the shooting.

It was 1:16 p.m. Oswald fled down Patton ave. Ted Callaway, a used car salesman, saw him coming.

"Hey, man," Callaway shouted, "what the hell is going on?" Callaway had heard shots.

Across the street, Oswald stopped short, then kept going. He turned right onto Jefferson blvd., then ducked out of sight behind a service station to toss his jacket under a car.

Police sirens were getting closer. Six blocks farther down Jefferson, Johnny Calvin Brewer, a shoe store manager, saw a man stop by his shop windows until the sound of sirens grew faint.

"His hair was sort of messed up," Brewer said, "and looked like he had been running, and he looked scared and he looked funny."

Into the Theater

Oswald hustled off to duck into the Texas Theater a few doors away. He didn't pay. Prompted by Brewer, Julia Postal in the box office called police.

The call went out on police radios at 1:45 p.m. Oswald was sitting alone near the center aisle in the back of the theater when they turned on the lights. Brewer pointed him out.

Patrolman M. N. McDonald made a show of questioning two other patrons before he stopped by Oswald and ordered him on his feet. He started to search Oswald's waist for a gun.

"Well, it's all over now," the fugitive said. He punched McDonald between the eyes with his left fist. With his right hand, he drew the Smith & Wesson from his waist.

In the scuffle, McDonald thought he heard a click just after he grabbed the gun, but it didn't go off. It took four or five officers to put Oswald in handcuffs.

"Cursing a little bit and hollering police brutality," he was led out and taken to police headquarters at 2 p.m.

Fifteen minutes later, Dallas Police Capt. Will J. Fritz walked into Homicide and told detectives to go out to Irving to pick up a missing Book Depository employe named Lee Oswald.

"Captain," said Sgt. Gerald L. Hill, "we will save you a trip . . . there he sits."

Highlights of the Warren Report

In finding that Oswald and Ruby acted alone, the Warren Commission gave this opening to those who have insisted, despite the lack of proof, that the assassination was the work of a conspiracy.

"Because of the difficulty of proving negatives to a certainty, the possibility of others being involved with either Oswald or Ruby cannot be established categorically, but if there is any such evidence it has been beyond the reach of all the investigative agencies and resources of the United States and has not come to the attention of this Commission.

According to presidential aide, Kenneth O'Donnell, the President commented in a Ft. Worth hotel the day of the assassination that "if anybody really wanted to shoot the President it was not a very difficult job—all one had to do was get a high building someday with a telescopic rifle, and there was nothing anybody could do to defend against such an attempt.

Secret Service Breach of Discipline

"In the early morning hours on Nov. 22, 1963, in Ft. Worth there occurred a breach of discipline by some members of the Secret Service who were officially traveling with the President.

"After the President had retired at his hotel, nine agents who were off duty went to the nearby Ft. Worth Press Club at midnight expecting to obtain food; they had little opportunity to eat during the day.

"No food was available. All of the agents stayed for a drink of beer, or in several cases, a mixed drink. According to their affidavits, the drinking in no case amounted to more than three glasses of beer or 1½ mixed drinks, and others who were present say that no agent was inebriated or acted improperly . . . The last agent left the Club by 2 a. m.

"Two of the nine agents returned to their rooms.

"The seven others proceeded to the Cellar Coffee House described by some as a beatnik place and by its manager as 'a unique show place with continuous light entertainment (serving) only coffee, fruit juices and no hard liquor or beer.'

"Most agents were there from about 1:30 or 1:45 a. m. to about 2:45 or 3 a. m.; one agent was there from 2 until 5 a. m.

"Their role of protecting the President is so important that it is reasonable to expect them to meet very high standards of personal conduct.

"It is conceivable that those men who had so little sleep and who had consumed alcoholic beverages, even in limited quantities, might have been more alert in the Dallas motorcade if they had retired promptly in Ft. Worth.

"However, there is no evidence that these men failed to take any action in Dallas within their power that would have averted the tragedy."

"The exact time of the assassination was fixed (at 12:30 p. m.) testimony of four witnesses. Special Agent Rufus W. Youngblood observed that the large electric sign clock atop the Depository Building showed the numerals '12:30' a few seconds before the shots were fired. The Dallas police radio log reflects that Chief Curry reported the shooting and issued his initial orders at 12:30 p. m."

The Warren Commission:

Took testimony from 552 witnesses, of whom 94 appeared before the Commission. Another 395 were questioned by members of the Commission's legal staff: 61 supplied sworn affidavits, and two gave statements.

Considered the results of approximately 25,000 FBI interviews and re-interviews of persons "having information of possible relevance." The FBI submitted more than 2300 reports totaling 24,500 pages.

Considered 800 reports totaling 4600 pages submitted by the Secret Service. That agency conducted approximately 1550 interviews.

Received information from 10 major Federal departments, 14 of its independent agencies or commissions, four congressional committees and got "investigative analyses of particular significance and sensitivity in the foreign areas were contributed by the Central Intelligence Agency."

At one point the report mentions "medical records furnished to the Commission by the Russian government" about Oswald's stay in the Soveit Union.

"Oswald once struck his wife," the Warren report said, "because of a letter which she wrote to a former boy friend in Russia. In the letter, Marina Oswald stated that her husband had changed a great deal and that she was very lonely in the U. S.

"She was sorry she had not married him (the Russian boy friend) instead. The letter fell into Oswald's hands . . ."

The Demohrenschildts testified that "right in front of Oswald" Marina complained about his "inadequacy as a husband."

The report said Mrs. Oswald told another of her friends that Oswald was very cold to her, that they very seldom had sexual relations and that Oswald "was not a man."

The report continues: "That night Oswald went to bed before his wife retired. She did not speak to him when she joined them there, altho she thought that he was still awake. The next morning he left for work before anyone else arose. For the first time he left his wedding ring in a cup on the dresser in his room."

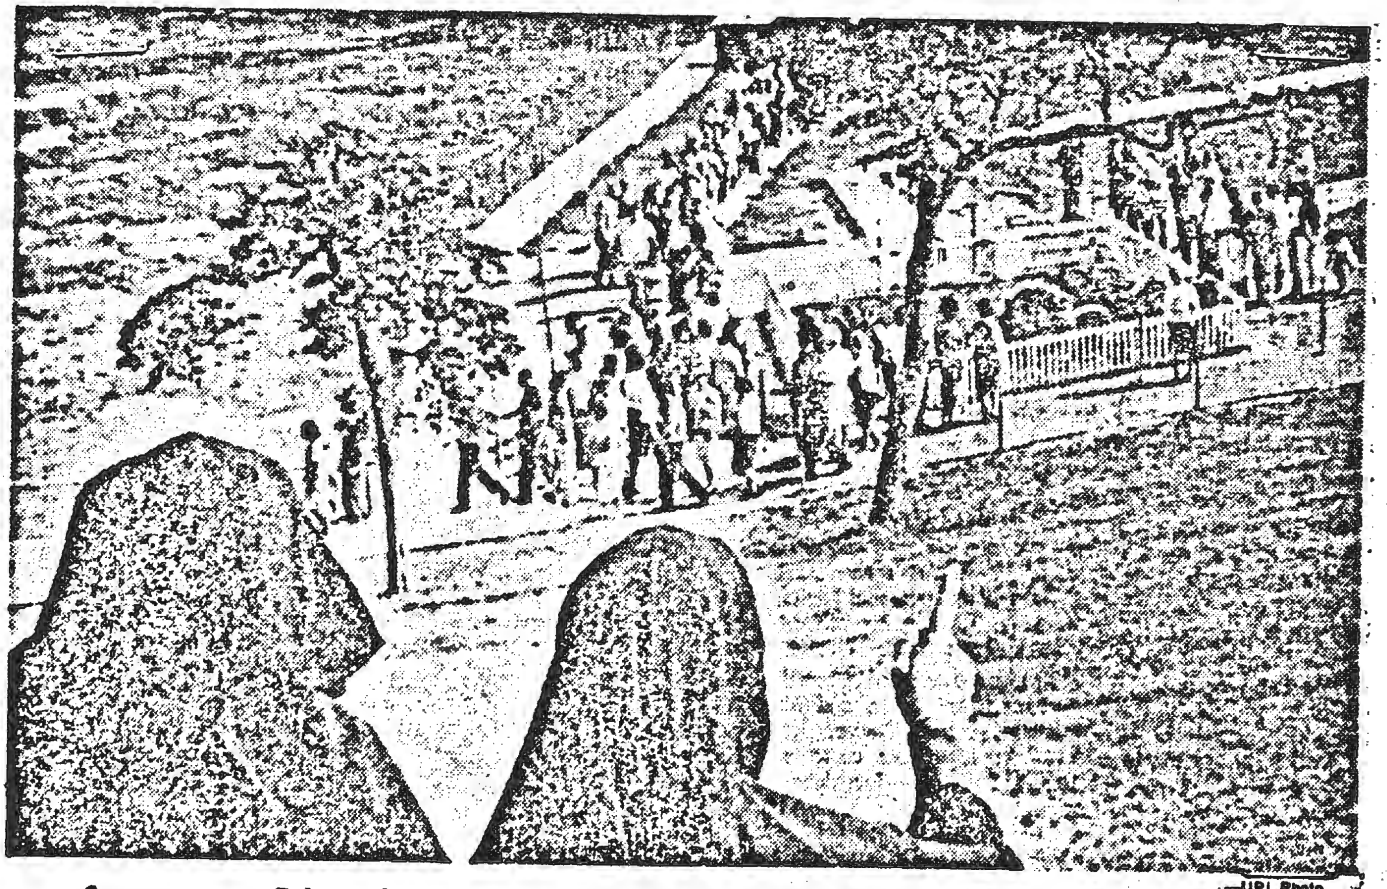
The Warren Commission gave the State Department at least a slap on the wrist for its handling of the return of Lee Oswald to the United States after his defection to Russia.

The State Department advanced Oswald $435.71 without interest for his return home. Oswald repaid it in seven installments within eight months.

Part of the commission criticism was based on the department's failure to prepare a "lookout card" on Oswald.

This is a form designed to call special attention to individuals whose applications for a passport should receive more than routine attention.

Owing the U. S. government money—as Oswald did when he returned — is one of the grounds for its use.



Today—and almost any day—President Kennedy's grave is surrounded by visitors.

Secret Service and FBI Are Censured

Warren Probe Finds Oswald 'Acted Alone'

By MILTON BERLINER

Lee Harvey Oswald today stands convicted of the assassination of President John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

The Warren Commission reported to President Johnson that the shots which killed Mr. Kennedy and wounded Gov. John B. Connally of Texas were fired by Oswald—"acting alone"—from the sixth floor window of the Texas School Depository in Dallas.

'NO CONSPIRACY'

The Commission, headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, found "no evidence that either Oswald or Jack Ruby (slayer of Oswald) was part of any conspiracy, domestic or foreign, to assassinate President Kennedy."

The seven-man group also concluded, after an "unceasing appraisal of the evidence" beginning last Dec. 5, that:

✔ "Procedures relied upon by Secret Service" for detecting the presence of an assassin located in a building along a motorcade route were inadequate."

✔ There was insufficient coordination of Presidential protection information between the Secret Service and other Federal agencies, particularly the FBI.

dence" that Oswald and Ruby knew each other.

✔ Oswald killed Dallas Police Patrolman J. D. Tippit approximately 45 minutes after the assassination.

✔ Within 80 minutes of the assassination and 35 minutes of the Tippit killing Oswald resisted arrest by attempting to shoot another Dallas police officer.

✔ There is no indication that Ruby acted with any other person in killing Oswald, or that Ruby and Officer Tippit knew each other.

✔ There is no evidence of conspiracy, subversion, or disloyalty to the U. S. government by any Federal, state or local official.

The 88-page, 300,000-word report, which was accompanied by 165 photographs, diagrams and photostats of pertinent documents, contained full citation of the evidence on which the Commission based its conclusions.

THE EVIDENCE

Its finding that Oswald fired the shots was derived from the following:

• The Mannlicher-Carcano 6.5 millimeter Italian rifle from which the shots were fired was owned by and in the possession of Oswald.

• Oswald carried his rifle into the Depository Building on the morning of Nov. 22, 1963, the day of the assassination.

• Oswald, at the time of the assassination, was present at the sixth-floor window from which the shots were fired.

• Shortly after the assassination, the Mannlicher-Carcano rifle was found partially hidden between some cartons on the sixth floor, and the improvised paper bag in which Oswald brought the rifle to the Depository Building from which the shots were fired.

• Expert testimony that Oswald (a former Marine) possessed the capability with a rifle which enabled him to commit the assassination.

• Oswald lied to police after his arrest concerning important substantive matters.

• Oswald had attempted to kill Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker on April 10, 1963, thereby demonstrating his disposition to take human life.

STEP BY STEP

On the question of conspiracy the Commission said it "thoroly investigated" the planning of the motorcade route, the hiring of Oswald by the Book Depository Co., the method by which the rifle was brought into the building, the placing of the cartons at the window, Oswald's escape from the building and eyewitness testimony on the shooting.

It also checked out all facets of Oswald's associations, finances and personal habits, particularly after his return from the Soviet Union in June, 1962.

It reviewed, too, Oswald's defection to Russia and his life there from October, 1959, to June, 1962; his contacts with the Fair Play for Cuba Committee, his visits to the Cuban and Soviet Embassies in Mexico City in the fall of 1963 and his contacts with the Soviet Embassy in Washington.

The Commission further "explored all attempts of Oswald to identify himself with the Communist Party, U. S. A.; the Cuba Committee and the Socialist Workers Party, and his relationship prior to the assassination with all U. S. government agencies."

Nowhere, said the Warren report, was any evidence of conspiracy found.

If any such evidence exists, the Commission said, "it has been beyond the reach of all the investigative agencies and resources of the United States."

MOTIVES?

Having determined that Oswald acted alone, the Commission attempted to fathom his motives:

"Clues can be found in his family history, his education or lack of it, his acts, his writing and the recollections of those who had close contacts with him thruout his life.

"The Commission could not make any definitive determination of Oswald's motives.

"It has endeavored to isolate factors which contributed to his character and which might have influenced his decision to assassinate President Kennedy. These factors were:

"(a) Deep-rooted resentment of all authority,

"(b) Inability to enter into meaningful relationships with people, and a continuous pattern of rejecting his enrionment in favor of new surroundings;

"(c) His urge to find a place in history, and despair at times over failures in various undertakings;

"(d) His capacity for violence;

"(e) His avowed commitment to Marxism and communism as he understood the terms, expressed by his antagonism to the United States, his defection, his failure to be reconciled with life in the U. S. even after his disenchantment with the Soviet Union, and by his efforts to go to Cuba."

The Commission is convinced that Oswald fired three shots from the Depository window. Three used cartridges were found on the sixth floor near the window.

They matched up with the nearly whole bullet found on Gov. Connally's stretcher and two bullet fragments found in the front seat of the presidential limousine.

"President Kennedy," said the report, "was first struck by a bullet which entered at the back of his neck and exited thru the lower front portion of his neck, causing a wound which would not necessarily have been lethal.

"The President was struck a second time by a bullet which entered the right-rear portion of his head, causing a massive and fatal wound.

'IDENTIFIED'

The report said the first bullet fired passed thru the President and hit Gov. Connally. One of the three bullets fired missed completely.

Oswald's killing of Officer Tippit is cited in substantiation of the conclusion that he was President Kennedy's assassin:

"Two eyewitnesses saw the Tippit shooting and seven heard the shots and saw the gunman leave the scene with revolver in hand. These nine eyewitnesses positively identified Oswald as the man they saw.

"The cartridge cases found at the scene were fired from the revolver in Oswald's posession at the time of his arrest to the exclusion of all other weapons.

"The revolver in Oswald's possession at the time of his arrest was purchased by and belonged to Oswald.

"Oswald's jacket was found along the path of flight taken by the gunman as he fled from the scene of the killing."

The Warren Commission, whose membership includes Sens. Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) and John Sherman Cooper (R., Ky.) Reps. Hale Boggs (D., La.) and Gerald R. Ford (R., Mich.), Allen W. Dulles and John J. McCloy, found that Dallas police advised Oswald of all his legal rights.

'CHAOTIC'

But it criticized them for allowing newspaper, radio and television reporters "uninhibited access" to the area thru which Oswald had to pass.

This, said the report, created "chaotic conditions not conducive to orderly interrogation or protection of the rights of the prisoner."

It said that statements, "sometimes erroneous," made to the press by local law enforcement officials "during this period of confusion and disorder in the police station would have presented serious obstacles to the obtaining of a fair trial for Oswald."

And it called "unsound" the decision to transfer Oswald to the county jail in full public view.

The Commission found no evidence that Ruby had been assisted in killing Oswald by members of the Dallas police department.

The report cited "a regrettable lack of self-discipline by reporters, press, radio and television.

"The Commission believes that the news media, as well as the police authorities, who failed to impose conditions more in keeping with the orderly process of justice, must share responsibility for the failure of law enforcement which occurred in connection with Oswald," the report said.

"The President can never be protected from every potential threat," said the Commission but it nevertheless felt compelled by its investigation to recommend improvements in Secret Service procedures "to identify and protect against persons considered threats to the President."

"Altho the FBI had secured considerable information about Oswald," the report said, "It had no official responsibility under Secret Service criteria existing at the time of the trip to Dallas to refer to the Secret Service the information it had about Oswald.

"The Commission has concluded that the FBI took an unduly restrictive view of its role in preventive intelligence work prior to the assassination.

"A more carefully co-ordinated treatment of the Oswald case might well have resulted in bringing Oswald's activities to the attention of the Secret Service."

The Commission praised the Secret Service for its advance preparations at Love Field and the Trade Mart in Dallas.

But it complained that "altho Secret Service is compelled to rely to a great extent on local law enforcement officials, its Dallas trip did not call for well-defined instructions as to respective responsibilities of police and others assisting in protection of the President.

"At the time of the trip to Dallas, the Secret Service as a matter of practice did not investigate, or cause to be checked, any building located along the motorcade route to be taken by the President.

"The responsibility for observing windows in these buildings during the motorcade was divided between local police personnel stationed on the streets to regulate crowds and Secret Service agents riding in the motorcade.

"Based on its investigation the Commission has concluded that these arrangements were clearly not sufficient."

The Commission found that the shape of the open car the President was riding and the seating of Secret Service agents did not afford the agents the chance they should have had to help the President at the first sign of danger.

"Within these limitations, however, the Commission finds that the agents most immediately responsible for the President's safety reacted promptly at the time the shots were fired," said the report.

IMPROVEMENTS

The Secret Service on Aug. 27 submitted a plan for improving its techniques and enlarging its resources.

The Commission said it was encouraged by the proposals but that it also recommended that:

• A committee of Cabinet members be given the responsibility for "reviewing and overseeing the protective activities of the Secret Service."

• The Treasury Secretary appoint a special assistant to supervise the Secret Service.

• The Secret Service completely overhaul its facilities devoted to advance detection of potential threats to the President. For one thing, it should get "prompt notice" of all returned defectors.

• The President's physician always accompany him on travels and stay near the President.

• Assassination of the President and Vice President be made a Federal crime.

• The State Department "exercise great care" in the return of defectors who have evidenced disloyalty or hostility to this country or who have expressed a desire to reounounce American citizenship.

• The news media, bar and Government set up ethical and presentation of information to the public so that there will be no interference with pending criminal proceedings.

Who's Who of Warren Panel

By VINCENT J. BURKE
Special to The N. Y. Journal-American

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26. — Seven days after the tragic event, seven men were assigned the task of determining "the truth" of the circumstances surrounding President Kennedy's assassination.

President Johnson on Nov. 29, 1963, established a commission to conduct a thorough investigation and lay to rest all false and conflicting rumors.

OVERCAME RELUCTANCE

All seven men named to the commission have had distinguished careers in public service.

But Mr. Johnson's success in overcoming the reluctance of Chief Justice Earl Warren to head the commission was regarded by many as a master stroke.

Here is a rundown on the members of the commission:

WARREN, 73, Chief Justice of the United States. Administered oath of office to President Kennedy in January, 1961. Republican vice-presidential nominee in 1948. Served 11 years as Governor of California.

ALLEN WELSH DULLES, 71, lawyer and one-time "chief spy" of the United States. Entered diplomatic service at 23, appointed Deputy Director of Central Intelligence Agency in 1951 and served as CIA Director in the Eisenhower era.

JOHN J. McCLOY, 69, lawyer, banker, statesman. Was Assistant Secretary of War during World War II.

Ruby Went From Generosity To Murder in 4 Minutes

By Robert E. Baker
Staff Reporter

Jack L. Ruby stopped at the Western Union office on Main Street in Dallas to send a $25 money order to one of his nightclub entertainers who was behind in her rent and needed groceries.

The time was 11:17 a.m., Sunday, Nov. 24, 1963.

Exactly four minutes later, Ruby darted from a line of newsmen in the basement of the city jail nearby. As millions of Americans watched on television, he fired a single shot from a .38 caliber revolver into the abdomen of Lee Harvey Oswald, the assassin of President Kennedy.

And thus Ruby, a sentimentally generous, violent and volatile man, thrust himself into the pages of history.

The Warren Commission investigated Ruby's life thoroughly to find this evidence of the stop at Western Union as well as to determine whether there was a conspiracy involving Ruby and Oswald. Its answer is that there wasn't.

Because Ruby has appealed his conviction and death sentence for the Oswald killing, the Commission came to no conclusions on the legal issues or motives in the case. Nor did the Commission attempt to come to any conclusions about Ruby's mental state. It reported only that a psychiatrist who previously diagnosed Ruby as a "psychotic depressive" was present for a lie detector test offered Ruby by the Commission in July, 1964, at Ruby's insistence.

Picture of Ruby

Ruby was born Jacob Rubenstein in Chicago sometime in 1911. The exact date has never been settled. His parents were Polish Jewish immigrants; he was the fifth of eight children.

The Rubenstein household was in constant strife. Ruby's father Joseph drank excessively. His mother had an uncontrollable temper and once spent a while in a mental institution.

A psychiatric examination of 11-year-old Jacob, made because of truancy and incorrigibility, showed him to be quick tempered, disobedient and greatly interested in sex. "He also claims that he can lick everyone and anybody in anything he wants to do," the psychiatrist said.

As he grew up in the poor Jewish neighborhood, he "scalped" tickets to sporting events and sold novelties on the streets. At 16, he finished the eighth grade. ~~He was~~ called "Sparky" by his acquaintances. Some called him that because of his volatility, others after a slow-moving horse in a contemporary comic strip.

His idol, former middleweight boxing champion Barney Ross, remembers young Ruby as well-behaved.

Early Career

From 1933-37, Ruby sold tip sheets at race tracks in California. He returned to Chicago to "scalp" tickets again and sell watches. He was also a union organizer, but quit when the president of the local shot and killed the financial secretary, Ruby's friend.

During early years of World War II, he designed and sold "Remember Pearl Harbor" plaques and sold busts of President Roosevelt.

Frequently, he and his friends tried to disrupt rallies of the German-American Bund; Ruby was ready to fight anyone suspected of pro-Nazi or anti-Semitic sentiments.

In those days, he was described as a "health nut" who earnestly contended that he could hit harder than Joe Louis.

His war service was spent mostly with the U.S. Army Air Force in the South and he was honorably discharged as a private first class with excellent character and efficiency ratings and a good conduct medal.

Ruby's service buddies recall that he frequently expressed high regard for President Roosevelt and wept openly when informed of his death.

Dallas and Turmoil

Ruby joined three brothers in a business venture in Chicago after the war. But in 1947, he went to Dallas to help manage a nightclub leased by his sister, Eva Grant.

It was in Dallas that Ruby changed his name legally because, he said, the name Rubenstein was too long and frequently misunderstood.

During the next 16 years, Ruby operated various night clubs and dancehalls; his bank was his wallet and the trunk of his car. At the time he killed Oswald, Ruby owned the Carousel Club, a downtown striptease place, and the Vegas Club, specializing in rock 'n roll. He owed $44,000 back taxes to the Federal government.

There is no doubt about Ruby's volatility. A finger tip was bitten off in a struggle with his guitarist after he kicked the man in the groin. He beat another musician with brass knuckles.

"In about 1958," the Warren Commission reported, "Ruby disarmed a man who had drawn a gun on him at the Vegas, beat him almost to death, put the gun back in the man's pocket, and then threw him down the stairs."

Many witnesses said Ruby used more force than necessary on unruly patrons, "particularly because he ended a fracas by throwing his victim down the stairs of the Carousel."

Ruby got into contract disputes with "Jada," a stripper he brought from New Orleans in June, 1963.

"Ruby thought Jada had deliberately exceeded even the Carousel's liberal standards of decency in order to cause him to lose his license or to obtain publicity for herself," the Warren Commission reported. "On several occasions Ruby excitedly turned off the spotlight during her act."

A Generous Man

Yet Ruby was often extremely generous.

"Ruby's unusual generosity may be explained in part by his extremely emotional reaction to persons in distress, which may have resulted from his first-hand familiarity with poverty, and by his unusual craving to be recognized and relied upon," said the Commission.

Ruby, a non-drinker, enjoyed card-playing and horse racing and was friendly with underworld characters, visiting Cuba in 1959 at the invitation of a professional gambler.

He also was interested in policemen and their work, giving them reduced rates and free coffee at his clubs.

But the Commission found no evidence that Ruby was linked with organized crime or that he attempted to bribe policemen. Speculation had been raised that some of Ruby's police acquaintances may have eased his way into the jail basement where he shot Oswald, but the Commission found no such evidence.

The Commission also discounted allegations that Ruby was a homosexual. Ruby, unmarried, sought and enjoyed feminine company.

Emotional Reaction

When Oswald fired the shots that struck President Kennedy at 12:30 p.m. Friday, Ruby was in the advertising office of the Dallas Morning News. He talked with an employe until 12:25, when the employe left. Ruby talked with another employe about 12:40 in the office. At 12:45, another employe brought word of the shooting of the President. Ruby showed "stunned disbelief" at the news.

Ruby began making the first of many telephone calls to friends near and far. He cried. He closed down his nightclubs.

"I never felt so bad in my life, even when Ma and Pa died," he told his sister.

He attended a midnight news conference at the police department.

He told one person that Oswald was a "little weasel of a guy" and he was concerned about the President's wife and children.

At 4:30 a.m. Saturday, Ruby roused his roommate and, with a Carousel employe, went to the "Impeach Earl Warren" sign in Dallas. Ruby took photographs of it. He went to the Post Office where he unsuccessfully tried to find out who rented the box number listed on the sign. He seemed obsessed with the sign and an advertisement critical of President Kennedy that had appeared in a newspaper.

Later he talked incoherently to a businessman about the sign and advertisement which he laid to the "work of Commies or Birchers" to discredit Jews.

He cried during a eulogy delivered on television by a rabbi. He continued his flood of telephone calls. He asked a radio announcer friend when Oswald would be transferred from city jail.

He talked of sparing Mrs. Kennedy the ordeal of returning to Dallas to testify at Oswald's trial—and he later told the Warren Commission that was his reason for shooting Oswald.

On Sunday morning, Ruby watched television and made coffee and scrambled eggs. At 10:19 a.m., the telephone rang. It was Karen Carlin, the entertainer who asked Ruby to send her $25.

Shortly before 11 a.m., the sentimentally generous, violent and volatile Jack L. Ruby, carrying his dachshund, Sheba, a portable radio and his revolver, left his apartment and drove to the Western Union office.

Lee Oswald's World Was a Fantasy With Himself as 'The Commander'

By Eve Edstrom
Staff Reporter

Lee Harvey Oswald imagined that he was "the Commander."

In his fantasy world, he was more than a match for the great leaders of the past and present; he was a political prophet far ahead of his times.

But in the real world he was a cipher. To his mother, he was a burden. To his wife, he was "not a man." To his fellow Marines, he was meek "Ozzie Rabbit." And to an acquaintance, he was the "dog that everybody kicked."

He had no friends and he had no country. His hatred of the United States led him to defect to the Soviet Union before he was 20. His disillusionment with Russia drove him back here.

He had "a strong concern for his place in history" and he found it—as the slayer of John Fitzgerald Kennedy, 35th President of the United States.

This is the psychological profile of the assassin that emerges from the Warren Commission report.

Oswald's act, the Warren Commission concludes, was the result of his all-consuming hatred for America; his total alienation from the world in which he lived. His commitment to Marxism was an expression of his hostility.

Frustration and failure were the marks of Oswald's life.

He waited impatiently for one entire year to get into the Marine Corps. And when he did, he hated it.

He schemed, studied and scrimped to get to the Soviet Union. And when he did, he hated it.

He returned home and soon decided upon a new escape route. He would go to Cuba, but that country didn't want him.

And then, the night before the President was killed, he learned his wife didn't want him either. She refused to return to Dallas with him to live.

In his brief life of 24 years, Oswald had proven, before the assassination, that he was capable of acting dramatically, decisively and with disregard for the consequences when such action furthered his aims of the moment.

When the Russians at first told him that he could not remain in their country, he slashed his wrist in a suicide attempt. When he wanted to go to Cuba, he considered hijacking a plane. And when he thought Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker (Resigned, U.S.

Army) was a "bad man," he took a shot at him.

Story of Assassin

Thus, as the Commission points out, the story of President Kennedy's assassination is actually the story of the assassin and it began two months before Oswald was born in New Orleans on Oct. 18, 1939.

Osward's father died then and Oswald's subsequent life at his mother's side turned him into a seriously withdrawn boy.

He slept in the same bed with his mother until he was almost 11. She taught him not to play with other children but to come directly home from school to an empty house. She constantly fretted about her lot as a working widow.

By the time she and Oswald moved to New York just before his 13th birthday, the boy was living a vivid fantasy life in which he was all-powerful and sometimes hurt and killed people.

First Trouble

Oswald first got into trouble with school authorities at a junior high school in the Bronx. He began to stay away from school, preferring to read magazines and watch television at home by himself. Truancy charges were brought against him and he was remanded to a children's psychiatric institution for study.

The study, contrary to reports after the assassination, did not indicate that Oswald was a potential assassin, nor that his outlook on life had strongly paranoid overtones, nor that he should be institutionalized.

He was found to be of superior mental ability, but emotionally disturbed because of lack of affection, absence of family life and rejection by a mother who, he felt, "never gave a damn for him."

His mother, the psychiatrist said, did not understand that Oswald's withdrawal was a form of "violent but silent protest against his neglect by her." It also was stated that he favored a solitary existence "where he did as he wanted and he didn't have to live by any rules or come into contact with people."

Oswald was quoted as saying: "I don't want a friend and I don't like to talk to people" and "I dislike everybody."

It was recommended that Oswald be placed on probation and that both Oswald and his mother receive psychotherapeutic guidance.

But that help never was obtained, principally because agencies were not equipped to provide the intensive treatment required. When Oswald again got into difficulty with school authorities for refusing to salute the Flag and for sailing paper planes around the class room, consideration was given to placing him in a home for boys.

Before the court took action, however, the Oswalds left New York—in January, 1954—and returned to New Orleans. Oswald finished the ninth grade there before leaving school to work for a year as a messenger boy.

Enter Communism

It was when he returned to New Orleans that he started to read Marx and Engels. He expounded the Communist doctrine and once told a fellow employe that he wanted to kill President Eisenhower for exploiting the working class.

While he was professing to be a Marxist, Oswald also was expressing an intense interest in joining the Marines. Both of these interests were believed to be tied to his rejection of his home life.

When he became 17 in October, 1956, he joined the Marines. His service career was not helped by his attitude that he was a man of great ability while his superiors were not sufficiently competent to give him orders. He did not rise above the rank of private first class, nor did he make any friends.

When his unit went to Japan, it is believed that Oswald finally acquired a girl friend, thus becoming in his eyes "Oswald the man rather than Oswald the rabbit."

In Japan also, Oswald made up his mind to go to Russia to see how a Marxist society operates. He studied the Russian language, read a Russian newspaper, even played the red pieces in chess because, as he said humorously, he preferred the "Red Army." While in the Marines, he saved the money for his trip to Russia.

In September, 1959, Oswald was transferred from active duty to the Marine Corps Reserve under honorable conditions and at his own request. He stated he wanted to care for his mother who had been injured in an accident.

Instead, he left for the Soviet Union where he attempted to renounce his citizenship. Thus at age 19, the Warren Commission emphasizes, Oswald gave a striking indication of his willingness to act on his beliefs in extraordinary ways.

In a letter to his brother Robert after arriving in the Soviet Union, Oswald told how he had gone there "only to find freedom," that he would "never return to the United States which is a country I hate," that in the event of war he would kill any American who defended the American Government.

"Ask me and I will tell you I fight for communism," he wrote.

Enter Disillusionment

Eventually, the Soviets allowed Oswald to go to Minsk to work in a radio and television factory. He was disappointed with the job and soon became disillusioned with Soviet life.

Although he received better pay and housing than most Russians, he was envious of special privileges given to Communist Party officials. He subsequently concluded that the Soviets had "fat stinking politicians."

He began to feel "uneasy inside" as he became increasingly aware of the compulsory society in which he was living. Within 15 months after his defection, he wrote in his "Historic Diary" that he had "had enough," that "the work is drab; the money I get has nowhere to be spent."

It was shortly after this that he opened negotiations with the United States Embassy in Moscow to return home. This was possible because he had never become a Soviet citizen and had not followed through on renouncing his American citizenship.

After he began these negotiations, he met Marina Prusakova, 19, at a trade union dance. Less than two months later they were married. Previously, Oswald had been rejected by another Russian girl. He noted in his diary that although "I married Marina to hurt Ella I found myself in love with Marina."

Before the Oswalds were permitted to leave Russia in May, 1962, their first daughter, June Lee, was born.

Going Home

During the voyage home, Oswald prepared two sets of identical questions which he thought he might be asked at a press conference. He indicated what may be assumed to be his true feelings in his answers to the first set. But to the second set of questions, he gave answers which would be least harmful to him as he resumed life in the United States. He ended that fictional transcript by quoting newspaper reporters as saying: "Thank you sir; you are a real patriot."

His writings at that time showed he believed there was no choice between capitalism and communism because one system offered oppression and the other poverty. But his writings also revealed that he was consumed with hatred for more than just the capitalistic and communistic systems.

"I wonder what would happen," he wrote, "if somebody was to stand up and say he was utterly opposed not only to the governments, but to the people, to the entire land and complete foundations of his (society)."

Immediately after the Oswalds' arrival in Fort Worth, Tex., where they lived at first with Oswald's brother, Marina reported that "Lee changed—I did not know him as such a man in Russia." She said he became more of a recluse, that he was "very irritable, sometimes for a trifle," and that he was "very unrestrained and very explosive."

Soon after his arrival in the United States, Oswald subscribed to the Communist Daily Worker and wrote to the Communist Party asking for pamphlets. He received the pamphlets and also attempted to initiate other dealings with the Party, the Warren report said, but the Communists were "not especially responsive."

Domestic Relations

He was extremely hostile to the members of the Russian community who tried to befriend him and his wife. One of these friends said:

"Marina had a hundred dresses given to her . . . (and) he objected to that lavish help because Marina was throwing it into his face. He was offensive with the people and I can understand why . . . because that hurt him. He could never give her what the people were showering on her . . . no matter how hard he worked —and he worked very hard."

This same friend testified that "right in front" of Oswald, Marina complained about Oswald's inadequacy as a husband. Marina was quoted by other friends as saying that Oswald was very cold to her, that they very seldom had sexual relations and she was not satisfied with her sexual relations with Oswald.

As a witness related she also tore him down by ridiculing his political views and by constantly asking " 'why don't you make some money?'—poor guy was going out of his mind."

On the other hand, Oswald was overbearing with his wife. He apparently attempted to be "the Commander and did not want her to wear cosmetics, drink, smoke, learn English or have friends. He treated her with a lack of respect in the presence of others. On occasion, and sometimes with provocation, he struck her.

During this time, Oswald had difficulty finding and keeping jobs. He moved from Fort Worth to Dallas to New Orleans and back to Dallas. And his efforts to obtain widespread publicity for himself through his Fair Play for Cuba Committee activities failed.

Last Escape Hatch

In September, 1963, he left for Mexico City and went to the Cuban Embassy to apply for a visa to Cuba in transit to Russia, and to the Soviet Embassy to obtain a Soviet visa. He became greatly agitated when he was turned down.

"In retrospect his attempt to go to Cuba or return to the Soviet Union may well have been Oswald's last escape hatch, his last gambit to extricate himself from the mediocrity and defeat which plagued him throughout most of his life," the Commission observes.

From the time Oswald returned home from Mexico City early in October until the weekend of Nov. 16-17, the Oswalds apparently got along well. Oswald was very attentive to his wife and they spent every weekend at the Irving, Tex., home of Ruth Paine.

During the week, Oswald lived in a roominghouse in Dallas where he worked at the Texas School Book Depository building. But he always telephoned Marina twice a day.

This routine was followed until Nov. 16, when Marina asked Oswald not to come to Irving. Marina thought Oswald would inconvenience Mrs. Paine, who was planning a birthday party that weekend. Oswald wanted to come anyway but he finally consented to his wife's wishes.

On Sunday, Nov. 17, Marina decided to telephone Oswald. She discovered that he was known at the roominghouse by an alias. She was so angry that when Oswald called several times on Monday, she hung up on him.

He didn't telephone again. Instead, he arrived unexpectedly at the Paine home Thursday night. Marina quoted him as saying that "he was lonely because he hadn't come the preceding weekend, and he wanted to make his peace with me."

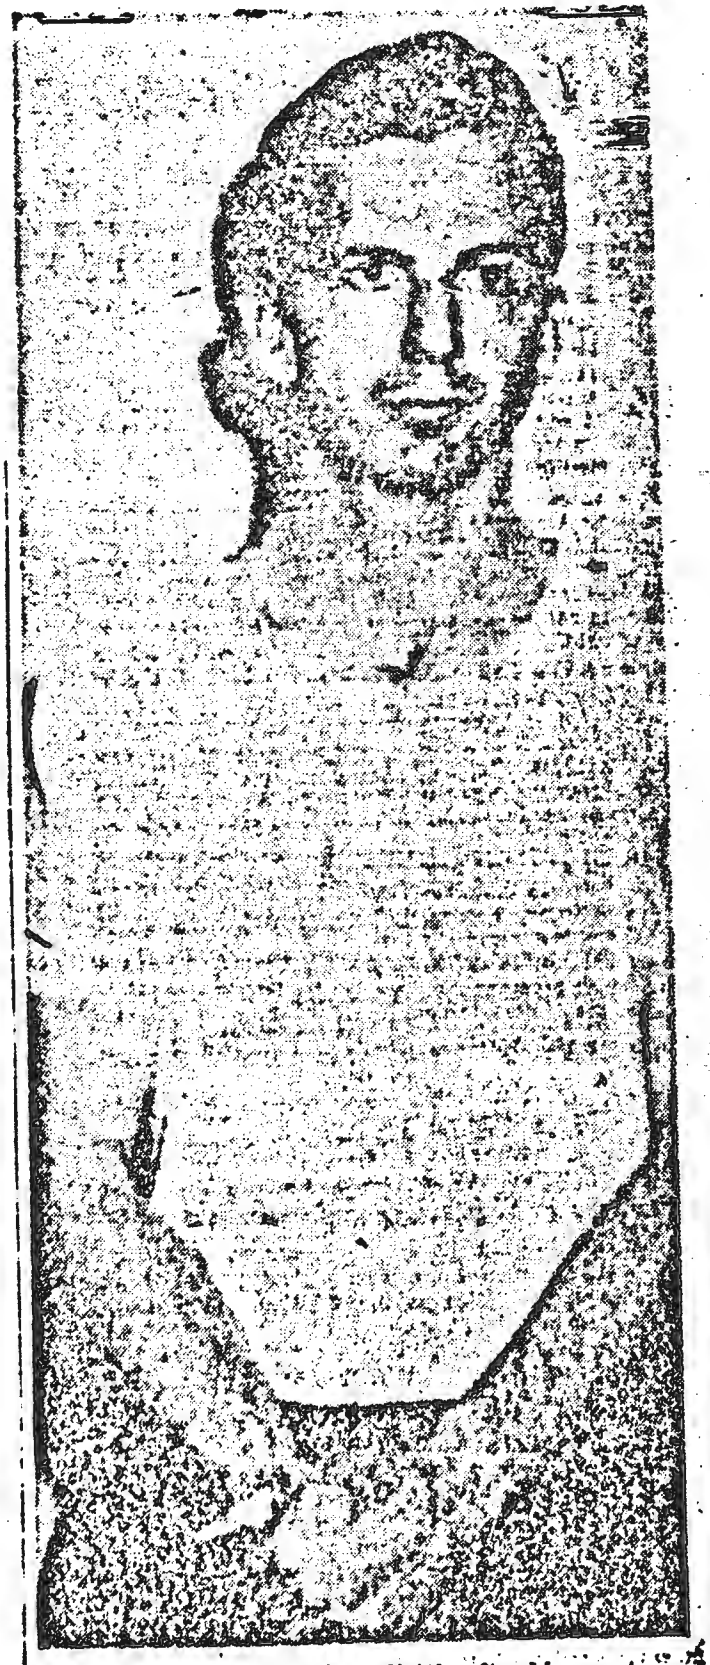
Oswald tried to please his wife by putting away diapers and playing with the children. But everytime he tried to speak to her, she failed to answer. When he pleaded with her to come to live with him in Dallas, she refused.

"And he said that once again I was preferring my friends to him and that I didn't need him," she testified.

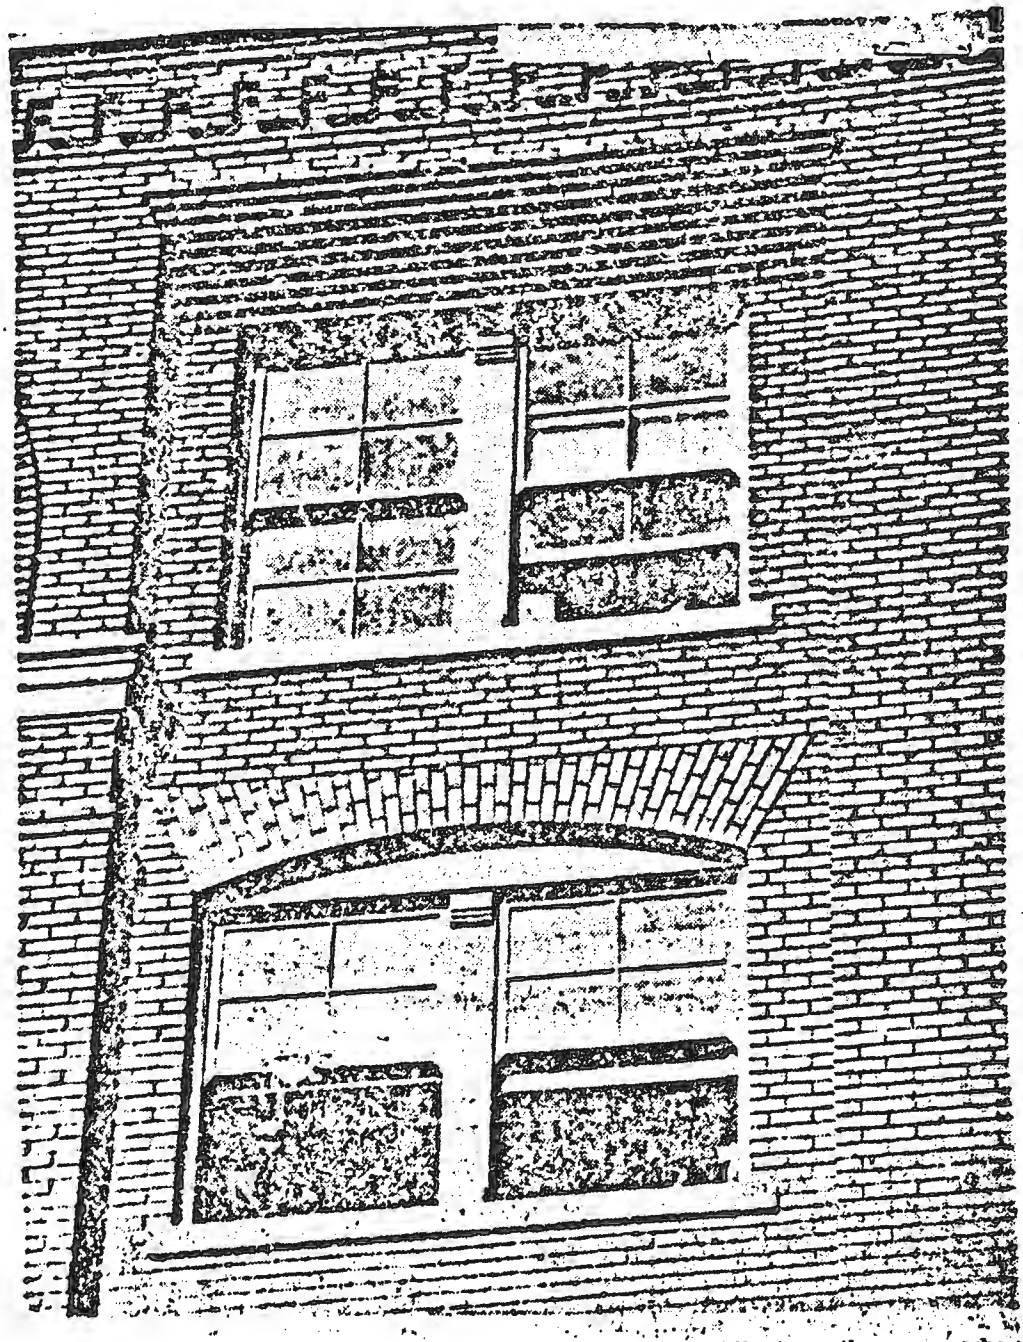
That night, Oswald went to bed before his wife did. She did not speak to him when she joined him, although she thought he was still awake.

The next morning, Nov. 22, he left for work before anyone else arose. He took with him $13.87 and the long brown package which he was to carry into the School Book Depository building.

Left behind was a wallet with $170. And for the first time, he left his wedding ring behind. He put it in a cup on the dresser.



Lee Harvey Oswald immediately after his arrest.



This photo showing the window from which President Kennedy was assassinated was made seconds after the shots were fired and is included in the report of the Warren Commission. The rifle was aimed by Lee Harvey Oswald from the upper right window while two other men, who appear in the lower windows, were watching the Presidential procession. The photo was made by Thomas Dillard of the Dallas Morning News immediately after an associate located the source of the shots.

Dallas Was Trying to Polish Image Tarnished by Rightists

By Robert E. Baker
Staff Reporter

Dallas officials and newspapers were determined that the city give President Kennedy a congenial welcome last Nov. 22. They wanted to show that Dallas was not a center of hate.

And so it was that the city's leaders and its press tried to prepare the way for a dignified and courteous reception of the President. Their concern was the ultaright-wing elements of the population.

But on Nov. 20 and 21, an anonymous handbill vilifying President Kennedy—"Wanted for Treason"—appeared on the streets of Dallas. In the Nov. 22 issue of the Dallas Morning News, on the day of the President's arrival and death, a full-page advertisement criticized him.

No Connection Found

The Warren Commission meticulously examined the mood of Dallas before President Kennedy's visit to determine if there was any connection between the assassination and ultraright-wing activity, anti-Kennedy feeling, the sources behind the handbill and the newspaper advertisement or the attempted murder of Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker (USA-Ret.) several months earlier.

The Commission concluded: "The Commission has found no evidence that the extreme views expressed toward President Kennedy by some right-wing groups centered in Dallas or any other general atmosphere of hate or right-wing extremism which may have existed in the city of Dallas had any connections with Oswald's actions on Nov. 22, 1963."

The Commission report noted that on Sept. 17 the Dallas Times-Herald asked the people of Dallas to be "congenial hosts" and on Oct. 3 the Dallas Morning News reported the hope of Rep. Joe Pool (D-Tex.) that President Kennedy would not face demonstrations like those encountered by Vice President Johnson in the 1960 campaign.

The Stevenson Relapse

But increased concern about Mr. Kennedy's visit was aroused Oct. 24 when U.N. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson was jeered, jostled and spat upon by hostile demonstrators after addressing a meeting in Memorial Auditorium.

"The local, national and international reaction to this incident evoked from Dallas officials and newspapers strong condemnations of the demonstrators," the Commission report said.

Mayor Earle Cabell called on the city to redeem itself during Mr. Kennedy's visit, asserting that Dallas had shed its reputation of the '20s as the "Southwest hate capital of Dixie."

As the day of the visit approached, the Commission said the president of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce predicted that the city would greet the President with its world-famous "warmth and pride." A local Republican leader called for a "civilized, nonpartisan" welcome, saying that "in many respects Dallas County has isolated itself from the mainstream of life in the world in this decade."

And the Dallas police, the Commission pointed out, told of plans for protecting the President and warned that improper conduct would not be tolerated.

A Hotbed to Oswald

Lee Harvey Oswald, the assassin of Mr. Kennedy, saw Dallas as a city of political ferment. In a letter to Arnold Johnson of the Communist Party of the U.S.A., Oswald said he attended an ultra-right-wing meeting headed by Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker on Oct. 23, the day before the Stevenson incident. Oswald wrote:

"As you can see, political friction between 'left' and 'right' is very great here."

Jack Ruby, Oswald's killer, seemed obsessed immediately after the assassination that there was a connection between a billboard sign, "Impeach Earl Warren," near Hall ave. and the Central Expressway and the advertisement in the morning paper.

There certainly was an element of fear in Dallas. Howard L. Brennan was an eyewitness to the shooting of President Kennedy but he did not make a positive identification of Oswald in the police lineup because, the Warren Commission quoted him, he felt that the assassination was a "Communist activity."

"And I felt like there hadn't been more than one eyewitness, and if it got to be a known fact that I was an eyewitness, my family or I, either one, might not be safe," he testified.

An Ad Hoc Group

The newspaper advertisement was signed by Bernard Weissman as chairman of the "American Factfinding Committee." The Warren Commission investigation showed that the organization was a paper one, formed for the occasion.

It was the outgrowth of plans by three former Army buddies — William B. Burley III, Larrie H. Schmidt and Weissman—to infiltrate right-wing groups and unite them into two conservative organizations. They were joined in Dallas, the Commission said, by Joseph P. Grinnan, an oil man and coordinator there for the John Birch Society.

Weissman told the Commission that Schmidt boasted that he was the only organizer of the anti-Stevenson demonstration to identify himself publicly and that he had become the "fearless leader" of the right wing in Dallas.

The $1465 cost of the advertisement was met mostly from contributions by three wealthy Dallas businessmen: Edgar R. Crissey, Nelson Bunker Hunt and H. R. Bright.

Weissman testified that the advertisement was placed primarily to "build up the morale of the conservative element," which had been downtrodden and oppressed by local liberals after the Stevenson incident.

Printed 'On the Side'

The Warren Commission had trouble getting to the source of the "Wanted for Treason" handbill. The investigation showed eventually that the author was Robert A. Surrey, printing salesman, closely associated with Gen. Walker in political and business activities.

Surrey induced Robert G. Klause to print the handbill "on the side" with the equipment of his unknowing employer, the Lettercraft Printing Co. Some 5000 copies were run off.

That was the picture of Dallas at the time of the assassination, a city trying to improve an image that had been tarnished by the ultra-right wing. It looked as though it was succeeding. As the presidential motorcade moved through welcoming crowds lining the city's streets, Mrs. John Connally, wife of the Texas Governor, turned to Mr. Kennedy and said:

"Mr. President, you can't say Dallas doesn't love you."

"That is very obvious," said Mr. Kennedy.

Later, Weissman told the Warren Commission that the responses to his advertisement — 50 to 60 in all — that were postmarked before the assassination were favorable. Those postmarked immediately after the assassination were violently unfavorable, he said.

His colleague Schmidt told the Commission that, after several weeks had passed, the responses were favorable again.

Agents Lacked Access to President

The assassination of President Kennedy suggests that it is "of prime importance" for a Secret Service agent to have immediate access to the President at the first sign of danger, the Warren Commission said.

It was impossible in the car in which Mr. Kennedy was riding in Dallas for an agent to leap quickly from the front into the back because of a metal bar behind the front seat (which the President grasped when he stood to wave) and passengers in the jump seats.

The Vice President's car that day lacked those obstructions. This difference, the Commission noted, allowed Agent Rufus W. Youngblood to place himself on top of Mr. Johnson before the third shot was fired and, perhaps, even before the second was fired.

Ask Security Reform

Washington, Sept. 27 (NEWS Bureau) — Secret Service procedures and the number of agents available to protect President Kennedy, no matter how great their "courage and devotion to duty," were inadequate when he was slain, the Warren Commission found today.

Since then, the commission noted with satisfaction, major reforms have greatly improved the service's ability to do its major job—guarding the President. But the probers said much remained to be done.

To protect the President without "any impairment of our fundamental liberties" the commission made a series of recommendations. It coupled these with sharp though understated criticism of bureaucratic muddling and paradoxes in the nation's laws as they relate to the Presidency.

The commission proposed that:

- A committee of Cabinet

members, including the Treasury Secretary and Attorney General, or the National Security Council, should get the assignment of reviewing and overseeing the way the Secret Service and other agencies protect the President. This group would "insure that the maximum resources of the federal government are fully engaged in the task of protecting the President."

● The Treasury Secretary should name a special assistant to supervise the Secret Service. He should have "sufficient stature and experience in law enforcement, intelligence and allied fields to provide effective supervision" and oversee the service's current program of revising and modernizing operating procedures.

● The Secret Service should overhaul its setup for advance detection of potential threats against the President. To do this it should develop "as quickly as possible more useful and precise criteria defining those potential threats . . . which should be brought to its attention by other agencies," including prompt notice of all returned defectors. It also should speed current plans to use the most efficient data processing techniques, instead of the present "obsolete" manual filing system.

● The Secret Service should improve precautionary measures used in Presidential motorcades, especially by intensifying present efforts to inspect buildings along the route. And it should continue current efforts at closer cooperation with local police departments in areas the President will visit.

● The Secret Service should get more money and manpower, since its agents were overworked and relatively underpaid at the time of the Kennedy assassination—and still are.

● The present practice of the FBI and other similar agencies to lend the Secret Service men or other help should be continued, and closer liaison should be maintained between the agencies.

Warning Justified

The commission found that the FBI had enough information on Oswald to justify warning the Secret Service that a "potential threat to the President" was working in the book depository. It did not do so because there was "no Secret Service criteria which specifically required the referral of Oswald's case to the Secret Service."

"This conclusion may be tinged with hindsight, but it is stated primarily to direct the thought of those responsible for the future safety of our Presidents to the need for a more imaginative and less narrow interpretation of their responsibilities."

● The President's physician should always accompany him and be "immediately available."

● Congress should make assassination of the President and Vice President a federal crime because the present peculiar state of affairs leaves U.S. authorities with no clearly defined jurisdiction to investigate such a slaying.

Walker Shot Related to Assassination

The Warren Commission's conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald assassinated President Kennedy is related to its finding that Oswald tried to kill former Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker 7½ months earlier.

The Commission said the attempt on Walker—with the same rifle that later killed the President—"deserves close attention in any consideration of Oswald's motive for the assassination."

The Commission recounted evidence that on the night of April 10, 1963, Oswald fired at Walker as he sat at a desk in his Dallas home. The bullet passed near his head.

After taking a Dallas city bus home, the report said, Oswald disclosed to his wife that he had been planning the attempt for two months.

"I asked him what had happened," she testified. "He was very pale . . . And he told me not to ask him any questions. He only told me he had shot at General Walker."

Marxist Commitment

The Commission reported that he also told her "that he did not know whether he had hit Walker; according to Marina Oswald when he learned on the radio and in the newspapers the next day that he had missed, he said that he 'was very sorry that he had not hit him.'"

What was Oswald's motive? At various points in the report these comments appear:

- "Oswald's writings and his reading habits indicate that he had an extreme dislike of the right wing, an attitude most clearly reflected by his attempt to shoot General Walker."
- ". . . his commitment to Marxism . . . probably influenced his decision to shoot at General Walker."
- "Some idea of what he (Oswald) thought was sufficient reason for such an act may be found in the nature of the motive that he stated for his attack on General Walker. Marina Oswald indicated that her husband had compared General Walker to Adolph Hitler. She testified that Oswald said that General Walker 'was a very bad man, that he was a fascist, that he was the leader of a fascist organization, and when I said that even though all of that might be true, just the same he had no right to take his life, he said if someone had killed Hitler in time it would have saved many lives.'"

The report said Oswald's commitment to a Marxist doctrine he did not fully understand "might have influenced his decision to assassinate President Kennedy," in addition to probably influencing him to fire at Walker.

Other Connections

The Commission found other connections between the two acts.

"He (Oswald) had a great hostility toward his environment, whatever it happened to be," the report said. He "expressed [it] in striking and sometimes violent acts long before the assassination. There was some quality about him that led him to act with an apparent disregard for possible consequences."

The Commission acknowledged differences in Oswald's actions and planning for the Walker attempt and the assassination, but said that "there are also similarities that should be considered." The report went on:

"The items which Oswald left at home when he made his attack on Walker suggest a strong concern for his place in history. If the attack had succeeded and Oswald had been caught, the pictures showing him with his rifle and his Communist and Socialist Worker's Party newspapers would probably have appeared on the front pages of newspapers or magazines all over the country, as, in fact, one of them did appear after the assassination.

"The circumstances of the attack on Walker coupled with other indications that Oswald was concerned about his place in history and with the circumstances surrounding the assassination, have led the Commission to believe that such concern is an important factor to consider in assessing possible motivation for the assassination."

In addition to a note found in Oswald's apartment, the Commission evaluated the following evidence in reaching its conclusion that Oswald fired the rifle shot at Walker:

- Three photographs, found among Oswald's possessions that were identified by his wife—and confirmed by Commission investigation—as pictures of Walker's house.
- The "badly mutilated bullet" found in Walker's house could not positively be identified as coming from the rifle used to kill the President but firearms experts thought it might well have.

Commission Is Thanked By President

President Johnson has told the members of the Warren Commission that they have "heartfelt thanks."

In a letter to Chief Justice Earl Warren, Mr. Johnson said that "nothing has impressed me more than the readiness of outstanding Americans to respond to calls for service to their country. There has been no more striking example of this great American strength than the service of the seven extraordinarily distinguished members of your Commission."

The President said the Commission was "guided throughout by a determination to find and to tell the whole truth . . . this is our obligation to the good name of the United States . . . to all men everywhere who respect our Nation—and above all to the memory of President Kennedy."

Warren Report Swiftly Draws Mixture of Praise, Criticism

From News Dispatches

Reaction to the Warren Report came rapidly from around the Nation and the world, in some cases jumping the gun on the official release time.

New York Attorney Mark Lane, a principal challenger of official accounts of the assassination of President Kennedy and a leader of the dissenting view here and abroad, said yesterday that he still does not believe Lee Harvey Oswald shot the President.

The Warren Report, Lane said, "raises more questions than it answers." Lane was retained by Oswald's mother last January to defend him before the Warren Commission. She ended the arrangement in April.

He said the report "will rank in history with the finding that Dreyfuss was guilty of treason and with the trial of the Trotskyites in the Soviet Union."

Oswald's Mother

Oswald's mother, Marguerite Oswald, slammed her fist down on a copy of the Warren Report in Fort Worth yesterday and declared: "I can break this whole thing apart. I am going to make fools of them." She had received the advance copy from Washington.

She called the report's findings "ridiculous."

Oswald's widow, Marina, was not available for comment. A spokesman at her home in Dallas said she was out of town "working with a writer on her book."

The vanguard of Congressional reaction to the Report was expressed by Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont.), who called for immediate Congressional consideration of Warren Commission's recommendations to shore up the protection of Presidents. He said Congress should stay in session to act on the recommendations and to make killing a President a Federal crime.

Belli's Comment

Attorney Melvin Belli, who defended Jack Ruby on the charge of murdering Oswald, said in San Francisco yesterday that the Warren Report confirmed his claim that Ruby did not get a fair trial in Dallas.

Robert F. Kennedy said he had not read the Warren Report, nor did he intend to, but that he had been briefed on it and "I am completely satisfied that the Commission investigated every lead and examined every piece of evidence." He repeated his belief that Oswald was solely responsible.

Questioned by Connally

Texas Gov. John B. Connally, who was gravely wounded by the President's assassin, said yesterday that he agrees basically with the report's conclusions, but disagreed on the sequence of shots.

He said he was hit by the second shot—not the first—and heard the third shot hit the President.

Dallas civic leaders said yesterday that the report was Dallas's answer to "City of Hate" charges and cleared it of any blame in the assassination.

Robert Oswald, 30, the accused man's brother, said yesterday after reading the report that there is now no doubt in his mind that his brother was the assassin.

Joe Tonahill, of Jasper, Tex., one of Ruby's attorneys, said the Warren Commission had done "a great job," and that the report had "cleared the air once and for all" of ideas about a conspiracy.

Former Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker denounced the Warren report as a whitewash concealing "some sort of conspiracy."

"There's bound to have been a plot," he said. "It's perfectly obvious that there was enough relationship between Rubenstein (Ruby) and Oswald to prove there was a conspiracy."

Overseas, the conservative French newspaper Le Figare carried a story doubting the report's validity under the headline, "Unsurprising Conclusions, But Not Entirely Convincing." It said there was "no decisive refutation of the serious criticisms made, up to the present, of the official theory."

The Soviet Union's Young Communist League paper, Komsomol Pravda, said before the report was released Sunday that the assassination was the result of a right-wing reactionary coup in which oil interests played a fatal role.

After claiming that "world opinion is convinced the assassination was the result of a coup of the most reactionary forces in the United States," the paper presented no evidence connecting them with the assassination. It only painted a picture of the American oil business battling President Kennedy for retention of its current depletion allowance.

Hit as "Incompetent"

British philosopher Lord Bertrand Russell said yesterday in London that the report was "a sorrily incompetent document and covers its authors in shame."

The 92-year-old philosopher, whose statement was issued 4½ hours before the official release time, said he had not read the report but was given an account of it by Mark Lane via telephone from New York.

British editorials gave general acceptance to the report as a competent and honest document, holding dire lessons for the free world. The only criticism came from the Communist Daily Worker, which described the report as a "whitewash."

German, Dutch and Austrian papers gave the report front page coverage, with general approval.

Same Shot Hit JFK, Connally

A-14

By Marshall Andrews

The same bullet wounded President Kennedy and Gov. John B. Connally last Nov. 22, the Warren Commission has concluded on the basis of "very persuasive evidence."

The Commission also found a "preponderance of evidence" that three shots were fired, one of which missed its target. In an effort to establish the time within which the shots were fired, the Commission could be no more precise than "approximately 4.8 to in excess of 7 seconds." It was not learned where the stray bullet went.

Bullet Was 'Yawing'

Exhaustive tests satisfied the Commission that the two rounds that struck President Kennedy were fired from behind and above. These same tests led to the conclusion that the bullet which passed through Connally's body and right wrist and struck his left thigh would have caused more damage had it struck with full force. Some of the damage actually inflicted was attributed to the possibility that the bullet was "yawing" after striking some other object.

A deformed bullet found at the hospital on Connally's stretcher was indicated by ballistic evidence to have been the one that struck both victims. Two fragments of 6.5mm. bullet also were found on the floor of the presidential car. Tests with special models not only resulted in damage comparable to that inflicted on Mr. Kennedy's skull but caused fragmentation of similar bullets fired from the murder gun very closely resembling those found in the car.

The fact that three empty cartridge cases were found at the sniper's post indicated three shots

That the murder weapon was the property of suspect Lee Harvey Oswald was established to the Commission's full satisfaction. Evidence of its purchase by him was clear and Oswald's palm print was found on a portion of the barrel normally protected by the wooden stock, indicating he had handled it while disassembled. The stock itself was too rough to retain prints.

Paraffin Tests Failed

Paraffin tests made immediately after Oswald's arrest were termed "completely unreliable" in ascertaining whether he had or had not fired the rifle.

The weapon was an Italian Mannlicher-Carcano bolt action rifle made in 1940 and bearing an exclusive serial number. Originally designed for a 7.35-mm. (.30-in.) barrel, it had been refitted with one of 6.5-mm. (.257-in.) caliber. Its resemblance to the German Mauser led to its premature identification as such by a detective who had not closely inspected it.

As used in the assassination, it was fitted with a four-power Japanese telescopic sight and an improvised sling. It fired a bullet weighing 160 grains with a muzzle velocity of about 2165 feet per second.

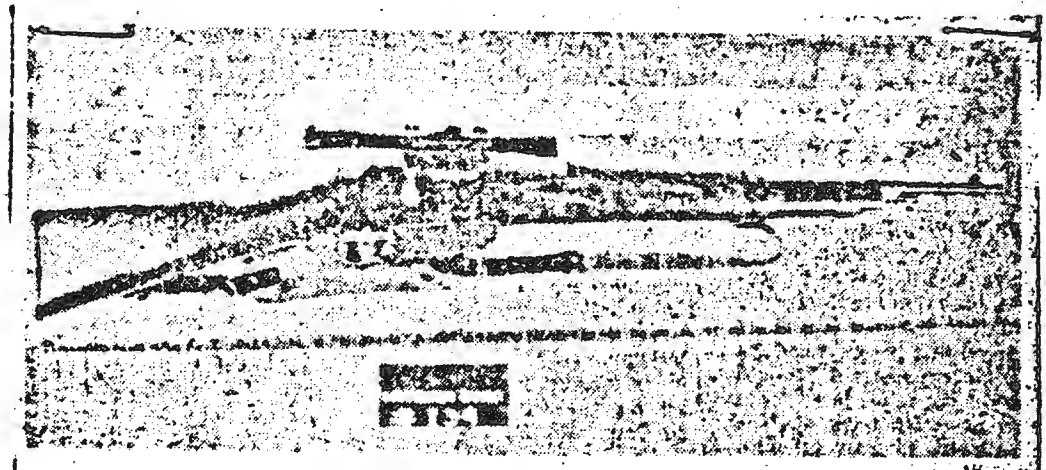
Several expert witnesses testified that the two hits on the President from 60 to 90 yards with a telescopic sight required no greater proficiency than Oswald had demonstrated on Marine Corps rifle ranges. On expert termed it "an easy shot."

The inherent accuracy of the rifle was found in controlled firing tests to be excellent. And further tests indicated that three aimed shots could readily be fired from it in the time taken by the President's assassin.

The pistol with which Dallas Patrolman J. D. Tippit was killed after the assassination was taken from Oswald when he was captured. Evidence indicated that it had not misfired when aimed at a detective, as first reported, since none of the rounds in the cylinder had been marked by the firing pin.

It was identified as a Smith and Wesson .38-caliber Special revolver with its 5-inch barrel cut down to 2 inches in length.

The assassination rifle could not be positively identified as that with which an attempt had been made to shoot Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker in his



One of the Commission's photos of a C-2766 Mannlicher-Carcano rifle.

Dallas home the night of April 10, 1963. The bullet that narrowly missed Walker was, however, of 6.5-mm. caliber and had been fired from a weapon with the same rifling as that which killed the President. Other evidence convinced the Commission that Oswald actually did fire the shot at Walker.

The attempt on Walker suggests a question that the Commission did not investigate: How could a rifleman who twice hit a moving target miss a sitting target with the same weapon?

The anomaly in marksmanship is not susceptible of solution by any evidence likely to be available. Its answer would depend on such speculative factors as the influence of different lighting, the presence or absence of a rest for the rifle, a maladjustment of the sight which could have been corrected, an ammunition defect, deflection of the round by a window pane or screen or the relative cleanness of the rifle bore.

None of these factors could have been demonstrated. Although the Commission did not mention it, Walker once said he turned his head just as the shot was fired.

Second Bullet Almost Instantly Fatal, Warren Report Confirms

By Nate Haseltine
Staff Reporter

The Warren Commission report on the autopsy of President Kennedy said the second bullet that hit him was almost instantly fatal.

The first wound, from a bullet that struck him high in the back, traced a non-fatal course through the neck and shoulder muscles and out through the low front of the throat.

Striking no bony structures, the bullet emerged at only slightly reduced speed. It is now believed, according to the Commission report, that this bullet continued on to pass through the body of Texas Gov. John B. Connally.

The autopsy report said the fatal second missile pierced the top right side of the back of the head, blowing out a large portion—including brain tissues and scalp.

Early in the course of the autopsy performed at Bethesda National Naval Medical Center, the doctors believed the President's strong shoulder and neck muscles had stopped the first bullet, and that it was squeezed out of its entry hole by the strenuous efforts by doctors in Dallas to massage the heart.

That theory was rejected after further exploration. The examining surgeons found that the bullet had passed between two large, strap-like muscles and bruised them without leaving any channel.

The hole in the throat, described as neither clean nor jagged, was first believed to be an entry hole for the fatal bullet. It was enlarged by Dr. Malcolm O. Perry at Parkland Hospital, Dallas, Texas, to get into the patient's windpipe with oxygen for his lungs.

At the time, the wound in the President's back had not been observed. He was on his back, and his head wound was too severe to warrant turning him over.

When the Commission asked Dr. Charles J. Carrico why the President's back was not inspected in Dallas after the death, Carrico replied, "I suppose nobody really had the heart to do it." The throat wound led to speculation that the President had been shot from both the front and the back, indicating erroneously that more than one sniper was involved.

According to the autopsy description of the relatively little damage done by the bullet in its pathway through the neck, the tracheotomy (cutting into the windpipe) might have saved the President's life—if there had been no second bullet.

The brain damage from the second bullet, however, was so smashing that it tore through the major portion of the right hemisphere of the brain. The President was beyond medical help even as the doctors worked to restore breathing and circulation.

Three pieces of bone from the President's skull were eventually recovered from the street at the scene of the slaying and from the Presidential automobile.

The Commission report also described the emergency treatment of Gov. Connally, which another medical team was performing at the same time and in the same hospital.

The Governor, seated directly in front of Mr. Kennedy in the Presidential limousine, was hit in the back. The bullet coursed through his right chest, and opened up a large sucking wound below the nipple. It emerged to smash his right wrist, and deflected to enter his left thigh where it caused a superficial wound.

The sucking wound in the front of the chest caused extreme pain and difficulty in breathing, the Parkland Hospital doctors reported. Rubber tubes were surgically inserted between the second and third ribs to re-expand the right lung, which had collapsed because of the hole in the chest wall.

A first operation consisted of cutting away the edges of the chest wound and sewing up the damaged lung and lacerated muscles.

Two additional operations were performed on the Governor the next day. The wounded wrist at the back was left partially open for drainage. The wound on the palm side was enlarged, cleansed and closed. The fracture was set, a cast was applied and some traction (pull) was utilized.

Finally, a small metallic fragment was removed from the front thigh about five inches above the left knee. That puncture wound was then cleansed and closed. The Governor's wounds mended well.

Commission Fair To Oswald, Family

In its attempt to be fair to Lee Harvey Oswald and his family, the Warren Commission requested Walter E. Craig, president of the American Bar Association, to participate in the investigation and to advise the Commission "Whether in his opinion the proceedings conformed to the basic principles of American justice."

The report notes that Craig participated fully and was allowed to cross-examine witnesses and to suggest other witnesses for the Commission to hear.

(ASSASSINATION)

WASHINGTON--THE JUDGMENT FOR HISTORY IS THAT LEE HARVEY OSWALD, A REBELLIOUS, FRUSTRATED MARXIST FANATIC, MURDERED JOHN F. KENNEDY IN DALLAS 10 MONTHS AND 5 DAYS AGO "ACTING ALONE AND WITHOUT ADVICE OR ASSISTANCE."

THERE IS NO EVIDENCE THAT HE WAS PART OF ANY CONSPIRACY, EITHER FOREIGN OR DOMESTIC. THERE ALSO IS NO EVIDENCE THAT THE EMOTIONAL CLIMATE IN THE TEXAS CITY HAD ANYTHING TO DO WITH HIS IRRATIONAL ACT.

THE MOTIVES OF THE 24-YEAR-OLD OSWALD, WHO PUMPED THREE SHOTS AT THE YOUNG PRESIDENT FROM THE SIXTH FLOOR OF A DALLAS OFFICE BUILDING, ARE OBSCURE. BUT THEY APPEAR LINKED TO A BROKEN HOME, AN INDIFFERENT MOTHER AND AN UNSATISFACTORY MARRIAGE.

ONE CONSEQUENCE OF THE DAY OF HORROR HAS BEEN A TIGHTENING OF PRESIDENTIAL SECURITY PROCEDURES. BUT MUCH MORE NEEDS TO BE DONE TO PROTECT LYNDON B. JOHNSON AND FUTURE OCCUPANTS OF THE WHITE HOUSE FROM POTENTIAL ASSASSINS.

THESE ARE THE CONCLUSIONS OF "THE PRESIDENT'S COMMISSION ON THE ASSASSINATION OF JOHN F. KENNEDY, OTHERWISE KNOWN AS THE WARREN COMMISSION.

THE 888-PAGE REPORT WAS MADE PUBLIC LAST NIGHT AFTER PAINSTAKING INVESTIGATION. THE INQUIRY INVOLVED MOST BRANCHES OF GOVERNMENT AND EVEN REACHED OVERSEAS INTO RUSSIA WHERE OSWALD LIVED FOR A WHILE AND WHERE HE MET THE GIRL WHO WAS TO BECOME HIS WIFE.

THE REPORT CONCEDED THAT IN VIEW OF OSWALD'S SUBSEQUENT DEATH AT THE HANDS OF DALLAS NIGHTCLUB OWNER JACK RUBY IT WAS IMPOSSIBLE TO SAY CATEGORICALLY THAT NO ONE ELSE WAS INVOLVED IN THE ASSASSINATION. BUT IT ADDED:

"IF THERE IS ANY SUCH EVIDENCE IT HAS BEEN BEYOND THE REACH OF ALL THE INVESTIGATIVE AGENCIES AND RESOURCES OF THE UNITED STATES AND HAS NOT COME TO THE ATTENTION OF THIS COMMISSION."

THE COMMISSION CONCEDED IT COULD RECOMMEND NO FOOL-PROOF SYSTEM FOR PROTECTING A PRESIDENT IN VIEW OF THE HISTORIC NEED FOR THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE TO MINGLE WITH THE PEOPLE. BUT IT ADDED:

"THE COMMISSION HAS, HOWEVER, FROM ITS EXAMINATION OF THE FACTS OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY'S ASSASSINATION MADE CERTAIN RECOMMENDATIONS WHICH IT BELIEVES WOULD, IF ADOPTED, MATERIALLY IMPROVE ON THE PROCEDURES IN EFFECT AT THE TIME OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY'S ASSASSINATION AND RESULT IN A SUBSTANTIAL LESSENING OF THE DANGER."

(WARREN COMMISSION)

EDITOR'S NOTE: THE AUTHOR OF THE FOLLOWING DISPATCH MERRIMAN SMITH, WAS IN THE PRESIDENTIAL MOTORCADE WHEN JOHN F. KENNEDY WAS ASSASSINATED. HE LATER RECEIVED THE PULITZER PRIZE FOR NATIONAL REPORTING FOR HIS STORY.

WASHINGTON--LEE HARVEY OSWALD, A MENTAL MISFIT CONFUSED BY MARXISM AND WRACKED BY HATREED OF AUTHORITY, WAS JUDGED TODAY TO HAVE ASSASSINATED JOHN F. KENNEDY "ACTING ALONE AND WITHOUT ADVICE OR ASSISTANCE."

THE FINDING WAS ISSUED BY THE WARREN COMMISSION SET UP BY PRESIDENT JOHNSON 10 MONTHS AGO TO INVESTIGATE THE MURDER OF THE YOUNG LEADER IN DALLAS LAST NOV. 22 WITH A $21.45 MAIL-ORDER RIFLE.

THE COMMISSION RAPPED SECRET SERVICE, FBI AND STATE DEPARTMENT PROCEDURES WHICH ALLOWED OSWALD TO BE AT THE RIGHT PLACE AT THE RIGHT TIME TO KILL KENNEDY. AND WHILE IT DID NOT SAY FLATLY THAT THE ASSASSINATION MIGHT HAVE BEEN AVERTED, IT CALLED FOR TIGHTER SAFE-GUARDS AGAINST A REPETITION OF THE TRAGEDY.

AFTER A PAINSTAKING STUDY OF TESTIMONY FROM 552 WITNESSES AND COUNTLESS EXHIBITS, THE BIPARTISAN PANEL HEADED BY CHIEF JUSTICE EARL WARREN FOUND THAT THE 24-YEAR-OLD OSWALD PLANNED AND EXECUTED THE KENNEDY ASSASSINATION ENTIRELY ON HIS OWN.

IT FOUND NO EVIDENCE OF ANY CONSPIRACY FOREIGN OR DOMESTIC, TO KILL KENNEDY. THE COMMISSION ALSO CONCLUDED THAT THE ATMOSPHERE IN DALLAS, LATER DESCRIBED BY SOME AS A CITY OF HATE, DID NOT CONTRIBUTE TO THE 46-YEAR-OLD PRESIDENT'S MURDER.

BUT IN A STATEMENT SURE TO STIR DISCUSSION AND CONTROVERSY FOR YEARS TO COME, THE COMMISSION ADDED:

"BECAUSE OF THE DIFFICULTY OF PROVING NEGATIVES TO A CERTAINTY THE POSSIBILITY OF OTHERS BEING INVOLVED...CANNOT BE ESTABLISHED CATEGORICALLY, BUT IF THERE IS ANY SUCH EVIDENCE IT HAS BEEN BEYOND THE REACH OF ALL THE INVESTIGATIVE AGENCIES AND RESOURCES OF THE UNITED STATES AND HAS NOT COME TO THE ATTENTION OF THIS COMMISSION."

OSWALD HIMSELF WAS KILLED IN THE DALLAS CITY JAIL NOV. 24 BY JACK RUBY, A SQUAT, FAST-TALKING NIGHT CLUB OPERATOR WHO SINCE HAS BEEN SENTENCED TO DEATH PENDING APPEAL.

THE COMMISSION FOUND NO DIRECT OR INDIRECT RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN OSWALD AND RUBY AND NOTHING TO SUPPORT RUMORS THAT THEY KNEW EACH OTHER. IT LIKEWISE FOUND NO LINK BETWEEN THEM AND DALLAS PATROLMAN J. D. TIPPIT, SLAIN TRYING TO APPREHEND OSWALD.

IN ITS TRENCHANT CRITICISM OF THE SECURITY GIVEN KENNEDY, THE COMMISSION SAID THERE WAS INSUFFICIENT LIAISON AND COORDINATION BETWEEN THE FBI AND THE SECRET SERVICE. IT SAID THERE WAS INADEQUATE ADVANCE PLANNING FOR THE LATE PRESIDENT'S TRIP AND THAT DALLAS POLICE FAILED TO PROTECT OSWALD PROPERLY AS THEIR PRISONER.

64 OCT 5 1964

AGAINST THIS BACKGROUND, THE COMMISSION CALLED FOR AN IMMEDIATE AND SUBSTANTIAL INCREASE IN PROTECTION OF THE PRESIDENT AND A COMPLETE OVERHAUL OF SECRET SERVICE FACILITIES FOR ADVANCE DETECTION OF POTENTIAL THREATS AGAINST THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE.

IT URGED APPOINTMENT OF A CABINET COMMITTEE TO OVERSEE ALL PRESIDENTIAL PROTECTION AND LEGISLATION TO MAKE ASSASSINATION OF A PRESIDENT AND VICE PRESIDENT A FEDERAL CRIME.

KENNEDY, RIDING THROUGH THE STREETS OF DALLAS, WAS SHOT AT 12:30 P.M. CST FRIDAY, NOV. 22. IN THE OPEN WHITE HOUSE CAR WITH HIM WERE HIS WIFE JACQUELINE AND GOV. AND MRS. JOHN CONNALLY OF TEXAS. CONNALLY WAS SERIOUSLY WOUNDED, BUT HAS SINCE RECOVERED. THE WOMEN WERE UNHARMED.

OSWALD, FIRING FROM THE SIXTH FLOOR OF THE TEXAS SCHOOL BOOK DEPOSITORY BUILDING, GOT OFF THREE SHOTS IN LESS THAN SEVEN SECONDS WITH A 6.5-MILLIMETER ITALIAN RIFLE EQUIPPED WITH A CHEAP BUT EFFECTIVE FOUR-POWER TELESCOPIC SIGHT.

THE COMMISSION ACCEPTED PREPONDERANT EVIDENCE THAT THE FIRST SHOT ENTERED THE UPPER PART OF THE PRESIDENT'S BACK, EXITING FROM THE FRONT OF THE THROAT. IT THEN PASSED THROUGH CONNALLY'S CHEST INTO HIS RIGHT WRIST AND ON INTO HIS LEFT THIGH.

THERE WAS STRONG EVIDENCE THAT KENNEDY COULD HAVE SURVIVED THE FIRST SHOT. THE SECOND SHOT MADE DEATH INEVITABLE. IT TORE AWAY A FIVE-INCH SECTION OF THE PRESIDENT'S SKULL AND BRAIN. THE THIRD SHOT APPARENTLY MISSED THE CAR WHICH WAS MOVING AT A SPEED OF 11.2 MILES PER HOUR.

JOHNSON, THEN VICE PRESIDENT, WAS IN THE SAME PROCESSION, RIDING IN THE SECOND CAR BEHIND KENNEDY. A SECRET SERVICE FOLLOW-UP CAR INTERVENED.

CIVILIAN AND MILITARY RIFLE EXPERTS TESTIFIED THAT WITH A FOUR-POWER TELESCOPE MOUNTED ON THE RIFLE AND CONSIDERING OSWALD'S MARKSMANSHIP IN THE MARINE CORPS FROM WHICH HE RECEIVED A DISHONORABLE DISCHARGE, THE FIRST TWO SHOTS WERE "EASY."

THERE WAS ONLY ONE KNOWN EYEWITNESS WHO SAW OSWALD IN THE WINDOW AS HE FIRED, AND EVEN HIS TESTIMONY HAD QUALIFICATIONS. THIS WAS HOWARD L. BRENNAN, 45, DALLAS STEAMFITTER, WHO WATCHED THE MOTORCADE FROM A WALL FACING THE BOOK DEPOSITORY.

HE SPOTTED OSWALD AND MINUTES LATER GAVE POLICE A ROUGH PHYSICAL DESCRIPTION OF THE GUNMAN. ON THE BASIS OF THIS DESCRIPTION, PATROLMAN TIPPIT TRIED TO APPREHEND OSWALD IN A SUBURB AND WAS KILLED BY A .38 CALIBER REVOLVER. OSWALD WAS ARRESTED A SHORT TIME LATER WHEN HE TOOK REFUGE IN A NEIGHBORHOOD MOVIE. HE TRIED TO KILL ONE OF THE ARRESTING OFFICERS, BUT HIS REVOLVER MISFIRED.

THE REPORT SAID: "OSWALD WAS QUESTIONED INTERMITTENTLY FOR APPROXIMATELY 12 HOURS BETWEEN 2:30 P.M. ON NOV. 22 AND 11 A.M. ON NOV. 24. THROUGHOUT THIS INTERROGATION, HE DENIED THAT HE HAD ANYTHING TO DO EITHER WITH THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY OR THE MURDER OF PATROLMAN TIPPIT."

THE COMMISSION TOOK COGNIZANCE OF MANY RUMORS SURROUNDING THE KENNEDY ASSASSINATION AND THE WOUNDING OF CONNALLY. AFTER EXTENSIVE STUDY, HOWEVER, THE COMMISSION FOUND OSWALD GUILTY BEYOND DOUBT:

"ON THE BASIS OF THE EVIDENCE...THE COMMISSION HAS FOUND THAT LEE HARVEY OSWALD (1) OWNED AND POSSESSED THE RIFLE (A 6.5 MILLIMETER ITALIAN RIFLE KNOWN AS THE MANNLICHER-CARCANO MODEL 91/38) USED TO KILL PRESIDENT KENNEDY AND WOUND GOVERNOR CONNALLY, (2) BROUGHT THIS RIFLE INTO THE (TEXAS BOOK) DEPOSITORY BUILDING ON THE MORNING OF THE ASSASSINATION, (3) WAS PRESENT, AT THE TIME OF THE ASSASSINATION, AT THE WINDOW FROM WHICH THE SHOTS WERE FIRED, (4) KILLED DALLAS POLICE OFFICER J. D. TIPPIT IN AN APPARENT EFFORT TO ESCAPE, (5) RESISTED ARREST BY DRAWING A FULLY LOADED PISTOL AND ATTEMPTING TO SHOOT ANOTHER POLICE OFFICER, (6) LIED TO POLICE AFTER HIS ARREST CONCERNING IMPORTANT SUBSTANTIVE MATTERS, (7) ATTEMPTED IN APRIL, 1963, TO KILL MAJ. GEN. EDWIN A. WALKER, AND (8) POSSESSED THE CAPABILITY WITH A RIFLE WHICH WOULD HAVE ENABLED HIM TO COMMIT THE ASSASSINATION. ON THE BASIS OF THESE FINDINGS THE COMMISSION HAS CONCLUDED THAT LEE HARVEY OSWALD WAS THE ASSASSIN OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY."

THIS LEGALISTIC APPROACH WAS DESIGNED TO ELIMINATE ALL POSSIBLE DOUBT ABOUT THE ASSASSIN'S IDENTITY, A PROCESS THAT WOULD HAVE BEEN CARRIED OUT IN A COURT TRIAL HAD OSWALD LIVED.

THE ASSASSIN HAD SPENT TWO AND A HALF YEARS IN RUSSIA WHERE HE TRIED TO RENOUNCE HIS U.S. CITIZENSHIP, MARRIED A RUSSIAN GIRL, MARINA, AND THEN RECLAIMED AMERICAN CITIZENSHIP. AS A RESULT THE SHOOTING LED TO PERSISTENT RUMORS THAT OSWALD WAS A GUNMAN FOR RUSSIA OR AT LEAST COMMUNISM.

THE COMMISSION NEGATED SUCH RUMORS. IT CITED TESTIMONY FROM SECRETARY OF STATE DEAN RUSK WHO SAID IN PART:

"I HAVE NOT SEEN OR HEARD OF ANY SCRAP OF EVIDENCE INDICATING THAT THE SOVIET UNION HAD ANY DESIRE TO ELIMINATE PRESIDENT KENNEDY NOR IN ANY WAY PARTICIPATED IN ANY SUCH EVENT.

"NOW, STANDING BACK AND TRYING TO LOOK AT THAT QUESTION OBJECTIVELY DESPITE THE IDEOLOGICAL DIFFERENCES BETWEEN OUR TWO GREAT SYSTEMS, I CAN'T SEE HOW IT COULD BE TO THE INTEREST OF THE SOVIET UNION TO MAKE ANY SUCH EFFORT."

THE PANEL ALSO EXPLORED RUMORS OF SHADOWY CONNECTIONS BETWEEN OSWALD AND COMMUNISM, THE CASTRO GOVERNMENT IN CUBA, JACK RUBY AND CERTAIN MYSTERIOUS STRANGERS.

"THE COMMISSION DISCOVERED NO EVIDENCE THAT THE SOVIET UNION OR CUBA WERE INVOLVED IN THE ASSASSINATION...NOR DID THE COMMISSION'S INVESTIGATION OF JACK RUBY PRODUCE ANY GROUNDS FOR BELIEVING THAT RUBY'S KILLING OF OSWALD WAS PART OF A CONSPIRACY."

THIS CONCLUSION ALSO WAS REACHED INDEPENDENTLY BY DEFENSE SECRETARY ROBERT S. MCNAMARA, TREASURY SECRETARY DOUGLAS DILLON, ATTORNEY GENERAL ROBERT F. KENNEDY, F.B.I. DIRECTOR J. EDGAR HOOVER, SECRET SERVICE CHIEF JAMES J. ROWLEY AND JOHN A. MCCONE, DIRECTOR OF THE CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY.

IN A LENGTHY SET OF CONCLUSIONS, THE REPORT FOCUSED CRITICISM MORE ON SINS OF OMISSION THAN OF COMMISSION. THE REPORT ALSO WAS HIGHLY CRITICAL OF NEWSPAPER, RADIO AND TELEVISION REPRESENTATIVES FOR OVER-CROWDING THE DALLAS JAIL AFTER THE ARREST OF OSWALD AND THEREBY MAKING POLICE WORK MORE DIFFICULT.

THE CRITICISM CENTERED IN THESE AREAS:

DALLAS POLICE--THE DECISION TO TRANSFER OSWALD NOV. 24 FROM THE CITY TO THE COUNTY JAIL IN FULL PUBLIC VIEW WAS "UNSOUND." IF OSWALD HAD LIVED, HE WOULD HAVE HAD DIFFICULTY IN OBTAINING A FAIR TRIAL BECAUSE OF "THE NUMEROUS STATEMENTS, SOMEI

OF "THE NUMEROUS STATEMENTS, SOMETIMES ERRONEOUS, MADE TO THE PRESS BY VARIOUS LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICIALS DURING THIS PERIOD OF CONFUSION AND DISORDER IN THE POLICE STATION." THE COMMISSION CONCLUDED THAT PROTECTION OF OSWALD WAS INADEQUATE EVEN AFTER LOCAL POLICE WERE NOTIFIED OF THREATS TO HIS LIFE.

FBI--WHILE THIS AGENCY HAD EXTENSIVE INFORMATION ABOUT OSWALD, IT HAD NOT TRANSMITTED IT TO THE SECRET SERVICE. "A MORE CAREFULLY COORDINATED TREATMENT OF THE OSWALD CASE BY THE FBI MIGHT WELL HAVE RESULTED IN BRINGING OSWALD'S ACTIVITIES TO THE ATTENTION OF THE SECRET SERVICE."

SECRET SERVICE--ADVANCE PLANNING AND ARRANGEMENTS FOR KENNEDY'S BRIEF STAY IN DALLAS, CLEARLY THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE SECRET SERVICE, WERE "CLEARLY NOT SUFFICIENT." WITHIN THEIR LIMITATIONS, AGENTS ASSIGNED TO THE PRESIDENT'S PROTECTION ACTED COURAGEOUSLY AND EFFECTIVELY. BUT THERE REMAINED DANGEROUS HOLES IN PLANNING AND EXECUTION OF THIS PROTECTION.

THE REPORT SPECIFICALLY CITED "A BREACH OF DISCIPLINE BY SOME MEMBERS OF THE SECRET SERVICE WHO WERE OFFICIALLY TRAVELING WITH THE PRESIDENT."

THIS REFERRED TO THE NIGHT OF NOV. 21 WHEN NINE OFF-DUTY AGENTS WENT TO A PARTY GIVEN BY THE FORT WORTH PRESS CLUB. NO FOOD WAS AVAILABLE, BUT THE REPORT SAID ALL OF THE AGENTS HAD EITHER BEER OR A MIXED DRINK. WHILE "NO AGENT WAS INEBRIATED OR ACTED IMPROPERLY" THERE, THEY CONTINUED ON TO THE CELLAR COFFEE HOUSE. ONE AGENT REMAINED AT THE CLUB UNTIL 5 A.M.

SIX OF THE NINE AGENTS HAD TO BE ON DUTY AT 8 A.M. EACH AGENT, ACCORDING TO A SECRET SERVICE INVESTIGATION, REPORTED ON TIME AND IN FULL POSSESSION OF HIS MENTAL AND PHYSICAL CAPABILITIES.

WHAT BOTHERED THE COMMISSION, HOWEVER, WAS VIOLATIONOF A SECRET SERVICE REGULATION, WHICH "ABSOLUTELY FORBIDS DRINKING BY ANY AGENT ACCOMPANYING THE PRESIDENT ON A TRIP."

"IT IS CONCEIVABLE," THE REPORT SAID, "THAT THOSE MEN WHO HAD LITTLE SLEEP, AND WHO HAD CONSUMED ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES, EVEN IN LIMITED QUANTITIES, MIGHT HAVE BEEN MORE ALERT IN THE DALLAS MOTORCADE IF THEY HAD RETIRED PROMPTLY IN FORT WORTH (WHERE KENNEDY SPENT THE NIGHT OF NOV. 21)."

THE COMMISSION ADDED, HOWEVER, THAT "THE INSTANTANEOUS AND HEROIC RESPONSE BY SOME OF THE AGENTS CONCERNED WAS IN THE FINEST TRADITION OF GOVERNMENT SERVICE."

IN ITS RECOMMENDATIONS, THE COMMISSION COMMENDED THE SECRET SERVICE FOR SINCE REVAMPING ITS PROTECTIVE OPERATIONS AND DRAFTING PROGRAMS TO IMPROVE ITS TECHNIQUES AND RESOURCES.

IN BRIEF, THE RECOMMENDATIONS:

1. ASSIGNMENT TO A SPECIAL CABINET COMMITTEE OR THE NATIONAL SECURITY COUNCIL RESPONSIBILITY FOR REVIEWING AND OVERSEEING PROTECTIVE ACTIVITIES OF THE SECRET SERVICE AND OTHER FEDERAL AGENCIES.

2. SHOULD IT BE DESIRABLE TO FOLLOW UP ON SUGGESTIONS THAT PRESIDENTIAL PROTECTION BE TAKEN FROM THE SECRET SERVICE AND ASSIGNED TO ANOTHER DEPARTMENT OR AGENCY, THE COMMISSION THOUGHT THIS DETERMINATION SHOULD BE MADE BY THE PRESIDENT AND CONGRESS.

3. THE SECRET SERVICE IS PART OF THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT. THE COMMISSION SUGGESTED THAT THE SECRETARY APPOINT A SPECIAL ASSISTANT RESPONSIBLE SPECIFICALLY FOR "DAILY SUPERVISION" OF THE SECRET SERVICE, PARTICULARLY IN ITS CURRENT EFFORT TO REVISE AND MODERNIZE BASIC OPERATING PROCEDURES.

4. COMPLETE OVERHAUL OF SECRET SERVICE FACILITIES FOR PRE-DETECTION OF POTENTIAL THREATS AGAINST THE PRESIDENT; SPEEDY DEVELOPMENT OF PRECISE CRITERIA DEFINING POTENTIAL THREATS WHICH SHOULD BE BROUGHT TO THE ATTENTION OF OTHER AGENCIES WITH A PROVISION THAT THE SERVICE IS NOTIFIED PROMPTLY OF ALL RETURNED DEFECTORS.

5. IMPROVED SECRET SERVICE PROTECTIVE MEASURES IN PLANNING AND CONDUCTING PRESIDENTIAL MOTORCADES WITH ACCELERATED EFFORTS "TO INCREASE THE PRECAUTIONARY ATTENTION GIVEN TO BUILDINGS ALONG THE MOTORCADE ROUTE."

6. IMPROVE AND FORMALIZE SECRET SERVICE RELATIONSHIPS WITH LOCAL POLICE DEPARTMENTS IN AREAS TO BE VISITED BY A PRESIDENT.

7. SUBSTANTIALLY INCREASED SECRET SERVICE PERSONNEL AND FACILITIES. (THE SERVICE HAS ASKED FOR MORE THAN 200 ADDITIONAL AGENTS.)

8. "CLOSER ASSOCIATION AND LIAISON BETWEEN THE SECRET SERVICE AND ALL FEDERAL AGENCIES," PARTICULARLY THE F.B.I.

9. THAT THE PRESIDENT'S PHYSICIAN ALWAYS ACCOMPANY THE PRESIDENT ON TRIPS AND REMAIN SUFFICIENTLY NEAR HIM TO BE IMMEDIATELY AVAILABLE IN EVENT OF EMERGENCY. REAR ADM. GEORGE BURKLEY, THE WHITE HOUSE DOCTOR, WAS IN THE NOV. 22 MOTORCADE BUT CONSIDERABLY REMOVED FROM THE PRESIDENTIAL CAR. HIS DRIVER WAS CAUGHT AND CONFUSED IN TRAFFIC AFTER THE SHOOTING AND THE WHITE HOUSE PHYSICIAN DID NOT REACH PARKLAND HOSPITAL IN DALLAS UNTIL THE PRESIDENT HAD BEEN UNDER TREATMENT BY OTHER DOCTORS FOR SOME MINUTES.

10. IN RECOMMENDING LEGISLATION TO MAKE ASSASSINATION OF A PRESIDENT AND VICE PRESIDENT A FEDERAL CRIME, THE COMMISSION SAID "A STATE OF AFFAIRS WHERE U.S. AUTHORITIES HAVE NO CLEARLY DEFINED JURISDICTION TO INVESTIGATE THE ASSASSINATION OF A PRESIDENT IS ANOMALOUS."

(TWO DALLAS CITY OFFICIALS TRIED TO STOP THE WHITE HOUSE FROM TAKING KENNEDY'S BODY FROM THE HOSPITAL TO THE PRESIDENTIAL JET PLANE BECAUSE OF A CITY REGULATION REQUIRING AN AUTOPSY PRIOR TO REMOVAL FROM CITY JURISDICTION. THE OFFICIALS WERE SHOVED ASIDE AND THE CASKET TAKEN TO LOVE FIELD, THE DALLAS MUNICIPAL AIRPORT.)

11. DEVELOPMENT OF BETTER PROCEDURES BY THE STATE DEPARTMENT FOR ADVISING ALL FEDERAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCIES OF DEFECTORS WHO HAVE SHOWN DISLOYALTY OR HOSTILITY OR WHO HAVE EXPRESSED A DESIRE TO RENOUNCE U.S. CITIZENSHIP AND THEN RETURN TO THIS COUNTRY.

12. REPRESENTATIVES OF THE BAR, LAW ENFORCEMENT ASSOCIATIONS AND NEWS MEDIA SHOULD COOPERATIVELY ESTABLISH ETHICAL STANDARDS CONCERNING COLLECTION AND PRESENTATION OF INFORMATION TO THE PUBLIC ON PENDING CRIMINAL INVESTIGATIONS.

FOR ALL OF ITS CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS, HOWEVER, THE COMMISSION CAME UP AGAINST AND ACCEPTED A HARD FACT: WITH THE BEST POSSIBLE PRECAUTIONS, TECHNIQUES, MANPOWER AND EQUIPMENT, EFFECTIVENESS OF PRESIDENTIAL PROTECTION IS IN LARGE MEASURE UP TO THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE HIMSELF.

"THE COMMISSION RECOGNIZES," THE REPORT SAID, "THAT THE VARIED RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE PRESIDENT REQUIRE THAT HE MAKE FREQUENT TRIPS TO ALL PARTS OF THE UNITED STATES AND ABROAD. CONSISTENT WITH THEIR HIGH RESPONSIBILITIES, PRESIDENTS CAN NEVER BE PROTECTED FROM EVERY POTENTIAL THREAT. THE SECRET SERVICE'S DIFFICULTY IN MEETING ITS PROTECTIVE RESPONSIBILITY VARIES WITH THE ACTIVITIES AND THE NATURE OF THE OCCUPANT OF THE OFFICE OF PRESIDENT AND HIS WILLINGNESS TO CONFORM TO PLANS FOR HIS SAFETY. IN APPRAISING THE PERFORMANCE OF THE SECRET SERVICE IT SHOULD BE UNDERSTOOD THAT IT HAS TO DO ITS WORK WITHIN SUCH LIMITATIONS."

(RUMORS-ASSASSINATON)

WASHINGTON--WAS LEE HARVEY OSWALD TRAINED IN MINSK AS A SOVIET UNDERCOVER AGENT? DID HE STOP OFF IN HAVANA ON HIS WAY TO RUSSIA IN 1959? DID HE MAKE IT TO CUBA BY WAY OF MEXICO CITY EIGHT WEEKS BEFORE THE ASSASSINATION?

THESE AND HUNDREDS OF OTHER QUESTIONS WERE ASKED HERE AND ABROAD IN THE WEEKS FOLLOWING PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY'S DEATH LAST NOV. 22. MOST OF THE SPECULATION AND RUMORS CENTERED AROUND THE IDEA THAT OSWALD ACTED AS PART OF A CONSPIRACY.

ONE BY ONE, THE WARREN COMMISSION CHECKED OUT THE RUMORS UNTIL IT CONCLUDED IN TODAY'S REPORT THAT HE WAS NOT INVOLVED IN A WIDER PLOT, DOMESTIC OR FOREIGN.

U.S. AGENTS IN THE SOVIET UNION, FOR EXAMPLE, FOUND THERE WAS NO ESPIONAGE TRAINING SCHOOL AT MINSK, WHERE OSWALD LIVED. FURTHER INQUIRIES SHOWED THAT HIS OPEN COMMITMENT TO MARXIST IDEOLOGY MADE HIM AN UNDESIRABLE PROSPECT TO THE RUSSIANS FOR UNDERCOVER WORK.

THE SECOND RUMOR, WHEN CHECKED OUT, DISCLOSED THAT THE SHIP OSWALD BOARDED AT NEW ORLEANS FOR RUSSIA MADE ITS FIRST STOP IN FRANCE.

AS FOR THE OSWALD'S ALLEGED MEXICO-TO-CUBA TRIP, "CONFIDENTIAL SOURCES OF EXTREMELY HIGH RELIABILITY" CONFIRMED THAT OSWALD'S REQUEST FOR A VISA WAS REJECTED BY THE CUBAN EMBASSY AND THAT HE RETURNED TO THE UNITED STATES IN DISGUST.

SO IT WENT. SIMILAR REPORTS THAT JACK RUBY AND DALLAS POLICEMAN J. D. TIPPIT WERE INVOLVED CONSPIRATORIALLY IN THE DALLAS TRAGEDY LIKEWISE WERE PROVED UNFOUNDED ON INVESTIGATION.

THE COMMISSION TICKED OFF THESE OTHER FINDINGS TODAY:

RUMOR---PREMIER FIDEL CASTRO, IN A SLIP OF THE TONGUE, REFERRED IN A SPEECH TO "THE FIRST TIME OSWALD WAS IN CUBA."

FINDING---A TAPE RECORDING OF CASTRO'S SPEECH SHOWED NO SUCH REFERENCE.

RUMOR---THE SHOTS THAT KILLED KENNEDY CAME FROM THE RAILROAD OVER-PASS AHEAD OF HIS CAR.

FINDING---THE SHOTS CAME FROM BEHIND AND ABOVE. THERE IS NO EVIDENCE THAT ANY SHOTS WERE FIRED AT THE PRESIDENT FROM ANY PLACE OTHER THAN THE TEXAS SCHOOL BOOK DEPOSITORY. NO WITNESSES HAVE BEEN LOCATED WHO SAW SHOTS FIRED FROM THE OVERPASS; SEVERAL TESTIFIED THEY SAW THE SHOTS FIRED FROM THE DEPOSITORY.

RUMOR---MORE THAN THREE SHOTS, PERHAPS AS MANY AS FIVE OR SIX, WERE FIRED.

FINDING---THE WEIGHT OF EVIDENCE INDICATES THREE SHOTS WERE FIRED, OF WHICH TWO STRUCK KENNEDY, ONE PASSING THROUGH KENNEDY'S BODY AND STRIKING CONNALLY.

RUMOR---KENNEDY'S CAR STOPPED, OR ALMOST STOPPED, AFTER THE FIRST SHOT, INDICATING THE DRIVER HAD THE IMPRESSION THE SHOT CAME FROM THE FRONT.

FINDING---MOTION PICTURES SHOW THE CAR SLOWED MOMENTARILY AFTER THE SHOT THAT STRUCK KENNEDY IN THE HEAD (THE SECOND SHOT) AND THEN SPEEDED UP RAPIDLY.

-0-

RUMOR---A SMALL ROUND HOLE IN THE WINDSHIELD OF THE CAR SHOWED AT LEAST ONE SHOT WAS FIRED FROM THE FRONT.

FINDING---NO BULLET WENT THROUGH THE WINDSHIELD. A SMALL RESIDUE OF LEAD WAS FOUND INSIDE THE WINDSHIELD AND A PATTERN OF CRACKS ON THE OUTSIDE. THE LEAD PROBABLY CAME FROM A BULLET THAT STRUCK KENNEDY FROM BEHIND. EXPERTS ESTABLISHED THAT THE IMPACT ON THE WINDSHIELD CAME FROM THE INSIDE.

RUMOR---KENNEDY'S THROAT WOUND RESULTED FROM A SHOT FIRED FROM THE FRONT, ACCORDING TO PARKLAND HOSPITAL DOCTORS.

FINDING---DOCTORS FIRST BELIEVED, WITHOUT AN EXAMINATION, THAT THE WOUND COULD HAVE BEEN EITHER AN ENTRY OR EXIT WOUND. AFTER THE AUTOPSY, THEY AGREED IT WAS CAUSED BY A BULLET LEAVING KENNEDY'S THROAT.

RUMOR---OSWALD COULD NOT HAVE KNOWN THE MOTORCADE ROUTE BEFORE HE ARRIVED AT WORK NOV. 22.

FINDING---THE MOTORCADE ROUTE WAS PUBLISHED IN BOTH DALLAS NEWSPAPERS ON NOV. 19.

RUMOR---REMAINS OF A CHICKEN LUNCH ON THE SIXTH FLOOR OF THE DEPOSITORY BUILDING INDICATED OSWALD HAD AN ACCOMPLICE.

FINDING---THE LUNCH HAD BEEN EATEN SHORTLY AFTER NOON NOV. 22 BY BONNIE RAY WILLIAMS, AN EMPLOYE IN THE BUILDING WHO WATCHED THE KENNEDY MOTORCADE FROM THE FIFTH FLOOR AFTER HE FINISHED EATING.

RUMOR---A WIDELY PUBLISHED PICTURE SHOWED OSWALD STANDING ON THE FRONT STEPS OF THE BOOK DEPOSITORY BUILDING SHORTLY BEFORE THE MOTORCADE PASSED.

FINDING---THE PHOTOGRAPH SHOWED BILLY LOVELADY, A FELLOW EMPLOYE WHO RESEMBLES OSWALD SLIGHTLY. LOVELADY WAS IDENTIFIED IN THE PICTURE BY OTHERS WHO WERE STANDING WITH HIM.

-0-

RUMOR---KENNEDY'S CAR WAS ROING BETWEEN 12 AND 20 MILES PER HOUR, PRESENTING A TARGET COMPARABLE TO THE MOST DIFFICULT A SOLDIER WOULD ENCOUNTER ON A BATTLEFIELD.

FINDING---THE CAR WAS TRAVELING AT 11.2 MILES PER HOUR. EXPERT WITNESSES TESTIFIED KENNEDY WAS A FAVORABLE TARGET BECAUSE THE CAR WAS GOING AWAY FROM THE ASSASSIN IN A STRAIGHT LINE.

RUMOR---OSWALD COULD NOT HAVE FIRED THREE SHOTS FROM HIS RIFLE IN 5-1/2 SECONDS.

FINDING---EXPERT WITNESSES TESTIFIED IT WAS POSSIBLE TO FIRE THREE SHOTS WITHIN 5-1/2 SECONDS. IT SHOULD BE NOTED THE FIRST LOADED SHELL WAS IN THE CHAMBER READY FOR FIRING, MEANING THE BOLT HAD TO BE WORKED ONLY TWICE. OSWALD MAY HAVE HAD UP TO 7 SECONDS TO FIRE THE THREE SHOTS.

RUMOR---THE FBI TOLD NEWSMEN IN AN OFF-THE-RECORD BRIEFING THAT THERE WAS NO PALM PRINT ON OSWALD'S RIFLE.

FINDING---THE FBI SAID NONE OF ITS AGENTS DISCUSSED A PALM PRINT IN A PRESS BRIEFING. IT CONFIRMED A PALM PRINT TAKEN FROM THE RIFLE BY THE DALLAS POLICE WAS OSWALD'S PALM PRINT.

RUMOR---A PICTURE OF OSWALD TAKEN BY HIS WIFE IN MARCH OR APRIL, 1963, AND SHOWING HIM WITH A RIFLE AND A PISTOL WAS "DOCTORED" WHEN IT APPEARED IN NEWSPAPERS AND MAGAZINES IN FEBRUARY.

FINDING---LIFE MAGAZINE, NEWSWEEK AND THE NEW YORK TIMES SAID THEY RETOUCHED THE PICTURE AND INADVERTENTLY ALTERED THE APPEARANCE OF THE RIFLE. THE ORIGIN PRINTS OF THE PICTURE WERE EXAMINED BY PHOTOGRAPHIC EXPERTS WHO IDENTIFIED THE RIFLE AS THE SAME KIND OSWALD USED TO SHOOT KENNEDY. FBI EXPERTS SAID THE PICTURE WAS TAKEN WITH OSWALD'S CAMERA.

RUMOR---AFTER FIRING THE SHOTS, OSWALD COULD NOT HAVE DISPOSED OF THE RIFLE, GONE DOWNSTAIRS AND GOTTEN A SOFT DRINK BY THE TIME HE WAS SEEN THERE BY A DALLAS POLICEMAN.

FINDING---TIME TESTS SHOW HE HAD TIME TO HIDE THE RIFLE AND GET DOWN TO THE LUNCHROOM. HE WAS NOT DRINKING A SOFT DRINK WHEN THE POLICEMAN SPOTTED HIM, HE WAS JUST ENTERING THE LUNCHROOM.

RUMOR---POLICE WERE SEALING OFF ALL EXITS BY THE TIME OSWALD REACHED THE SECOND FLOOR.

FINDING---OSWALD WAS SEEN HEADING FOR AN EXIT AT 12:33 P.M. POLICE MAY HAVE STARTED TO TAKE STATIONS AT THE DOOR AT THAT TIME BUT IT IS UNLIKELY THEY HAD BLOCKED THEM OFF COMPLETELY UNTIL 12:37 P.M. OSWALD PROBABLY HAD AT LEAST 7 MINUTES TO GET OUT OF THE BUILDING WITHOUT BEING STOPPED.

RUMOR---OSWALD DID NOT HAVE TIME FOR ALL THE MOVEMENTS ATTRIBUTED TO HIM BETWEEN LEAVING THE DEPOSITORY AND ENCOUNTERING PATROLMAN TIPPIT.

FINDING---TIME TESTS SHOW HE DID.

RUMOR---THE LOG OF CABDRIVER WILLIAM W. WHALEY SHOWS OSWALD ENTERED HIS CAB AT 12:30 P.M. SINCE HE ENTERED THE CAB SOME DISTANCE FROM THE DEPOSITORY, HE COULD NOT HAVE KILLED KENNEDY, WHO WAS SHOT AT THAT MOMENT.

FINDING---THERE IS SUCH AN ENTRY IN WHALEY'S LOG BUT HE TOLD THE COMMISSION HE MAKES ENTRIES AT 15-MINUTE INTERVALS. A BUS TRANSFER OSWALD OBTAINED BEFORE ENTERING THE CAB WAS ISSUED AFTER 12:36 P.M. THE COMMISSION DETERMINED OSWALD PROBABLY ENTERED WHALEY'S CAB ABOUT 12:47 OR 12:48 P.M.

-0-

RUMOR---OSWALD WAS ON HIS WAY TO JACK RUBY'S APARTMENT WHEN HE WAS STOPPED BY TIPPIT.

FINDING---THERE IS NO EVIDENCE THAT OSWALD KNEW RUBY OR WHERE HE LIVED NOR ANY REASON TO BELIEVE HE WAS ON HIS WAY TO THE APARTMENT.

RUMOR---TIPPIT VIOLATED ORDERS BECAUSE HE WAS DRIVING ALONE AND BECAUSE HE WAS OUTSIDE HIS ASSIGNED AREA WHEN HE ENCOUNTERED OSWALD.

FINDING---DALLAS POLICE POLICY REQUIRES ABOUT 80 PER CENT OF THE PATROLMEN ON THE DAY SHIFT TO WORK ALONE AND TIPPIT HAD BEEN ASSIGNED TO WORK ALONE NOV. 22. HE WAS ORDERED TO THE AREA WHERE HE WAS PATROLLING AND TO BE AVAILABLE FOR ANY EMERGENCY.

RUMOR---OSWALD COULD NOT HAVE RECEIVED AN AMERICAN PASSPORT TO GO TO MEXICO WITHIN 24 HOURS WITHOUT SPECIAL INTERVENTION ON HIS BEHALF.

FINDING---THE PASSPORTS OF 24 OTHER PERSONS, ON THE SAME LIST SENT TO WASHINGTON FROM NEW ORLEANS, WERE AUTHORIZED AT THE SAME TIME.

RUMOR---OSWALD WAS AN INFORMANT FOR EITHER THE FBI OR THE CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY (CIA).

FINDING---MRS. MARGUERITE OSWALD SAID SHE THOUGHT HER SON WAS AN AGENT BUT TOLD THE COMMISSION, "I CANNOT PROVE LEE IS AN AGENT." DIRECTORS OF BOTH THE FBI AND CIA TESTIFIED THAT NEITHER HAD USED OSWALD IN ANY CAPACITY.

RUMOR---IT HAS BEEN FBI POLICY FOR 20 YEARS TO INFORM EMPLOYERS OF COMMUNISTS OR SUSPECTED COMMUNISTS HIRED BY THEM. IT IS A MYSTERY, THEREFORE, THAT OSWALD RETAINED HIS JOB AT THE BOOK DEPOSITORY.

FINDING---THE FBI SAID IT DOES NOT DISSEMINATE INTERNAL SECURITY INFORMATION TO ANYONE OUTSIDE THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT.

RUMOR---THE FBI SURVEILLED OSWALD FOR SOME TIME BUT DID NOT CONSIDER HIM A KILLER.

FINDING---THE FBI KNEW OSWALD WAS IN DALLAS BUT HAD NOT INTERVIEWED HIM THERE AND DID NOT REGARD HIM AS A POTENTIAL KILLER.

-0-

RUMOR--JUST BEFORE RUBY SHOT OSWALD, OSWALD LOOKED DIRECTLY AT HIS ASSASSIN IN APPARENT RECOGNITION.

FINDING---TELEVISION TAPES AND MOTION PICTURE FILMS DO NOT SHOW ANY FACIAL EXPRESSION THAT COULD BE INTERPRETED TO SIGNIFY RECOGNITION.

RUMOR---DALLAS POLICE WERE PLANNING TO ARREST OSWALD AND RUBY AS SUSPECTS IN THE ATTACK ON MAJ. GEN. EDWIN A. WALKER BUT THE FBI INTERVENED AT THE REQUEST OF THEN- ATTY. GEN. ROBERT F. KENNEDY.

FINDING---THE ALLEGATION WAS FIRST PUBLISHED IN A GERMAN WEEKLY NEWSPAPER WITHIN DAYS OF THE SHOOTING OF OSWALD. DALLAS POLICE SAID THEY UNCOVERED NO SUSPECTS IN THE WALKER CASE AND PLANNED NO ARRESTS. OSWALD'S ROLE IN THE ATTACK WAS NOT KNOWN TO AUTHORITIES UNTIL DEC. 3, 1963, WHEN HIS WIFE TOLD THE FBI ABOUT IT.

RUMOR---TIPPIT AND RUBY MET IN RUBY'S NIGHT CLUB WITH BERNARD WEISSMAN, WHO PLACED AN ANTI-KENNEDY ADVERTISEMENT IN A DALLAS NEWSPAPER NOV. 22.

FINDING---NO EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT THIS ALLEGATION CAN BE FOUND.

RUMOR---OSWALD COULD DRIVE A CAR AND WAS SEEN IN CARS AT VARIOUS PLACES.

FINDING---OSWALD DID NOT HAVE A DRIVER'S LICENSE. HIS WIFE AND A FRIEND TESTIFIED HE COULD NOT DRIVE, ALTHOUGH HE HAD TAKEN SOME LESSONS FROM THE FRIEND AND DROVE SHORT DISTANCES DURING THE LESSONS. THERE ARE INDICATIONS HE USED A BUS AFTER FIRING A SHOT AT WALKER.

-0-

RUMOR--OSWALD'S MOTHER WAS SHOWN A PHOTOGRAPH OF RUBY BY AN FBI AGENT THE NIGHT BEFORE HER SON WAS KILLED BY THE DALLAS NIGHTCLUB OWNER.

FINDING---THE PHOTOGRAPH SHOWN TO MRS. OSWALD BY FBI AGENT BARDWELL D. ODUM WAS NOT A PICTURE OF RUBY.

RUMOR---THE HEADQUARTERS DETACHMENT OF THE U.S. ARMY, UNDER ORDERS FROM THE SECRETARY OF DEFENSE, BEGAN TO REHEARSE FOR KENNEDY'S FUNERAL MORE THAN A WEEK BEFORE THE ASSASSINATION.

FINDING---IN AN INTERVIEW WITH THE JACKSON, MISS., CLARION-LEDGER IN FEBRUARY, ARMY CAPT. RICHARD C. CLOY, A MEMBER OF THE UNIT THAT PREPARES FUNERAL CEREMONIALS FOR DECEASED CHIEFS OF STATE, SAID "WE WERE IN A STATE OF READINESS AND HAD JUST FINISHED A FUNERAL REHEARSAL BECAUSE THERE WAS GRAVE CONCERN FOR PRESIDENT HOOVER'S HEALTH. BUT WE NEVER EXPECTED THAT OUR PRACTICE WAS PREPARING US FOR PRESIDENT KENNEDY." THE RUMOR APPARENTLY IS A DISTORTION OF THIS INTERVIEW.

(EVIDENCE-ASSASSINATION)

WASHINGTON--HAD LEE HARVEY OSWALD LIVED, A COURT OF LAW WOULD HAVE BEEN THE ARBITER OF HIS GUILT OR INNOCENCE IN THE ASSASSINATION OF JOHN F. KENNEDY.

BECAUSE HE DIED THERE COULD BE NO TRIAL. IT BECAME A FUNCTION OF THE WARREN COMMISSION TO ISSUE FOR HISTORY A FINDING IN THE MURDER OF THE YOUNG PRESIDENT.

THE COMMISSION DEVOTED SOME 78 PAGES OF ITS 888-WORD REPORT TO THE EVIDENCE AGAINST OSWALD, MUCH AS IT WOULD HAVE BEEN PRESENTED AT A TRIAL AND WITH SOME OF THE DRAMA. ARGUMENTS FOR THE DEFENSE ARE THERE AS WELL AS FOR THE PROSECUTION.

OSWALD WAS SUFFICIENTLY TRAINED IN MARKSMANSHIP TO HAVE FIRED THE FATAL SHOTS AND THAT THE WEAPON INVOLVED WAS CAPABLE OF THE DEED.

FROM BALLISTICS TESTS THE COMMISSION CONCLUDED THAT THE ITALIAN-MADE MANNLICHER-CARCANO RIFLE FOUND ON THE SIXTH FLOOR OF THE DEPOSITORY BUILDING AFTER THE ASSASSINATION WAS THE FATAL WEAPON.

IT THEN LINKED OSWALD TO THE GUN THROUGH THIS CHAIN OF EVIDENCE:

THE RIFLE HAD BEEN ORDERED FROM A CHICAGO MAIL ORDER FIRM BY ONE "A. HIDELL." THE HANDWRITING ON THE ORDER COUPON WAS IDENTIFIED AS OSWALD'S. THE DALLAS POST OFFICE BOX TO WHICH IT WAS SENT WAS LINKED TO HIM. OSWALD HAD USED THE ALIAS "HIDELL" BEFORE. VARIOUS CARDS BEARING THAT NAME WERE FOUND IN HIS POSSESSION.

OSWALD'S PALMPRINT WAS FOUND ON THE WEAPON. IRONICALLY, THE FBI WAS AT FIRST UNABLE TO FIND THIS PRINT. IT TURNED OUT THE DALLAS POLICE HAD TAKEN IT OFF THE RIFLE BY A TECHNIQUE KNOWN AS "LIFTING" WHICH THE PRINT IS TRANSFERRED TO AN ADHESIVE MATERIAL.

FIBERS FOUND ON THE RIFLE "MOST PROBABLY" CAME FROM THE SHIRT OSWALD WAS WEARING THAT DAY.

A PHOTOGRAPH TAKEN EARLIER IN THE YARD OF OSWALD'S APARTMENT SHOWED HIM HOLDING THE RIFLE. A DISPUTE OVER IDENTIFICATION OF THE WEAPON AROSE AFTER COPIES OF THIS PICTURE WERE PUBLISHED SHORTLY AFTER THE ASSASSINATION. THE COMMISSION SAID THIS APPARENTLY WAS BECAUSE THE COPIES WERE ROUTINELY RETOUCHED FOR PUBLICATION AND IDENTIFYING PARTS OF THE GUN WERE OBSCURED.

OSWALD'S WIFE, MARINA, TESTIFIED THAT THE RIFLE WAS STORED IN A GREEN AND BROWN BLANKET AMONG OSWALD'S POSSESSIONS.

AN EYEWITNESS, HOWARD L. BRENNAN, PICKED OSWALD OUT OF A POLICE LINEUP AS THE MAN HE HAD SEEN FIRE SHOTS FROM THE SIXTH-FLOOR WINDOW. BRENNAN LATER WAS LESS SURE. BUT THE COMMISSION WAS SATISFIED HE AT LEAST SAW A MAN WHO "CLOSELY RESEMBLED" OSWALD.

THE COMMISSION WENT TO GREAT LENGTHS TO ESTABLISH THAT THE RIFLE IN QUESTION WAS CAPABLE OF ACCURATELY FIRING THE SHOTS IN THE TIME INTERVAL FIXED BY WITNESSES WHO HEARD THE EXPLOSIONS.

THE FBI FIRED OVER 100 ROUNDS OF AMMUNITION WITH THE RIFLE AND THE U.S. ARMY TESTED IT FROM A TOWER AT SILHOUETTE TARGETS.

BASED ON OSWALD'S MARINE CORPS RIFLE PRACTICE RECORDS PLUS THE FACT THAT HE HAD HUNTED FOR A HOBBY THE COMMISSION SAID HE HAD "AMPLE CAPABILITY" TO HAVE KILLED THE PRESIDENT.

(FACTS-ASSASSINATION)

WASHINGTON--MAJOR POINTS IN THE WARREN COMMISSION'S REPORT:

CONCLUSIONS

--LEE HARVEY OSWALD KILLED PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY AND WOUNDED TEXAS GOV. JOHN B. CONNALLY IN DALLAS ON NOV. 22, 1963. HE ALSO KILLED POLICEMAN J. D. TIPPIT AFTER THE ASSASSINATION.

--JACK RUBY KILLED OSWALD TWO DAYS LATER. NEITHER RUBY, OSWALD NOR TIPPIT KNEW EACH OTHER.

NEITHER OSWALD NOR RUBY WAS PART OF OF ANY CONSPIRACY, DOMESTIC OR FOREIGN, TO ASSASSINAT KENNEDY.

--OSWALD'S EXACT MOTIVES CANNOT BE DETERMINED.

THE SECRET SERVICE'S WAYS OF IDENTIFYING AND PROTECTING AGAINST POTENTIAL THREATS TO A PRESIDENT WERE INADEQUATE BEFORE THE ASSASSINATION. ITS ADVANCE PLANNING FOR THE DALLAS TRIP WAS DEFICIENT.

--THE FBI SHOULD HAVE COOPERATED MORE CLOSELY WITH THE SECRET SERVICE.

RECOMMENDATIONS

--A STUDY OF SUGGESTIONS THAT ALL OR PARTS OF RESPONSIBILITY FOR PRESIDENTIAL PROTECTION BE SHIFTED FROM THE SECRET SERVICE TO ANOTHER DEPARTMENT OR AGENCY.

--REVISION AND MODERNIZATION OF SECRET SERVICE OPERATING PROCEDURES, WITH MORE PERSONNEL AND FACILITIES.

--COMPLETE OVERHAUL OF METHODS FOR ADVANCE DETECTION OF POTENTIAL THREATS AGAINST A PRESIDENT. BETTER PROTECTION OF PRESIDENTIAL MOTORCADES, WITH EMPHASIS ON BUILDINGS ALONG THE ROUTE.

--CONGRESS SHOULD MAKE ASSASSINATION OF A PRESIDENT OR VICE PRESIDENT A FEDERAL CRIME.

--THE STATE DEPARTMENT SHOULD WATCH CLOSER AMERICAN DEFECTORS WHO RETURN FROM COMMUNIST COUNTRIES.

WARREN COMMISSION

SECTION A3

COPY 2

Some Doubts Remain

THE sobering fact is that the Warren Commission has not conspicuously succeeded in fulfilling the great historical tasks to which it was called.

For good or ill, the Commission has concluded its work. It has published its findings, it has released the voluminous transcript containing most of the testimony and exhibits it received, and, finally, it has adopted a resolution putting itself out of business.

If the Commission is to be judged by traditional bureaucratic criteria involving bulk of its product or time consumed in reaching its conclusions, then it will be judged a success.

But the reality is that the Commission will be judged by a far harsher yardstick.

President Johnson assigned the Warren Commission two tasks of great historical magnitude. The stated function of the Commission was to learn all that could be learned about the facts of the assassination of John F. Kennedy, and to report its findings to the President. The second, unstated, function of the Commission was to restore the confidence of the American people in their institutions.

The Commission concluded, of course, that no conspiracy existed, and that Lee Oswald and Jack Ruby each had acted alone. But largely ignored was a considerable loophole the Commission left for itself:

"Because of the difficulty of proving negatives," the Commission wrote in its report, "the possibility of others being involved with either Oswald or Ruby cannot be established categorically, but if there is any such evidence it has been beyond the reach of all the investigative agencies and resources of the United States and has not come to the attention of this Commission."

That is a necessarily large caveat. It means that Oswald an Ruby may both have been pawns in a huge conspiracy, but if this is true the conspiracy was so subtle and skillful that it escaped detection.

The case, as FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover testified to the Warren Commission, will never be closed.

Thus the credibility of the Warren Commission hinges on a necessarily imperfect foundation. It could never learn all the facts, it could never prove Oswald acted alone, it could never say with certainty that Ruby was not a part of a conspiracy. It could only weigh such evidence as was available and offer history its best guess as to what really took place. No human agency could do any more, and it is no reflection on the Warren Commission that questions remain unanswered and doubts remain undispelled.

But there is a large area in which the Warren Commission did fail to do all that it might have done to insure that its findings could win the widest possible acceptance. It made a sorry record of its own internal integrity. Washington is a place where secret-keeping is essential to the operation of government. Yet the Warren Commission was as leaky an instrument of high policy as has ever been seen in the Capital. To the very last, its conclusions and choice morsels of transcript were shamelessly leaked for a variety of self-serving purposes. Even the final release of the transcript was clouded by premature publication of Mrs. Lyndon Johnson's testimony, and the reporter who obtained the transcript said it had come from sources "within the Warren Commission." Earlier, Jack Ruby's testimony was printed by a female journalist on New York's saloon beat, and before that the gist of the FBI Director's testimony found its way into print by mysterious means.

These are not parochial concerns of the newspaper business. The Warren Commission's integrity was its only stock in trade, and it will be cast in the balance when future generations try to decide whether its findings are really the last word on the death of President Kennedy.

PI-4: O commission
(WARREN REPORT)

WASHINGTON--CHIEF JUSTICE EARL WARREN TOLD A NEW YORK ATTORNEY HE CONTENDS THAT LEE HARVEY OSWALD DID NOT MURDER JOHN F. KENNEDY THAT HIS SECRETIVENESS WAS "GREATLY HANDICAPPING" EFFORTS TO LEARN THE TRUTH.

WARREN, CHAIRMAN OF THE INVESTIGATING COMMISSION WHICH BEARS HIS NAME, LEVELED THE CHARGE AT MARK LANE WHO ONCE REPRESENTED OSWALD'S MOTHER, MRS. MARGUERITE OSWALD. LANE NOW APPEARS REGULARLY AT A NEW YORK THEATER TO DISCUSS HIS V

YORK THEATER TO DISCUSS HIS XXXX VIEWS.

TESTIMONY JUST MADE PUBLIC BY THE COMMISSION SHOWED THAT WARREN AND OTHER COMMISSION MEMBERS WERE EXASPERATED BY LANE'S REFUSAL TO DISCLOSE SOURCES OF HIS INFORMATION.

AT ONE POINT, LANE TOLD THE COMMISSION HE KNEW A PERSON WHO HAD SEEN OSWALD'S SLAYER, JACK RUBY; DALLAS POLICE OFFICER J.D. TIPPIT AND BERNARD WEISSMAN MEETING TOGETHER IN RUBY'S CLUB CAROUSEL BEFORE THE KENNEDY ASSASSINATION. BUT LANE REFUSED TO IDENTIFY HIS INFORMANT. WEISSMAN PAID FOR A NEWSPAPER AD PUBLISHED IN DALLAS NOV. 22 WHICH WAS CRITICAL OF KENNEDY.

ANOTHER POINT OF CONTENTION WAS LANE'S REPORT OF AN INTERVIEW WITH A WITNESS TO THE TIPPIT SLAYING. LANE SAID THE WITNESS, MRS. HELEN MARKHAM OF DALLAS, TOLD HIM TIPPIT'S KILLER "WAS SHORT, A LITTLE ON THE HEAVY SIDE AND HIS HAIR WAS SOMEWHAT BUSHY. I THINK IT WOULD BE FAIR TO STATE THAT OSWALD WOULD BE AVERAGE HEIGHT, QUITE SLENDER, WITH THIN TO RECEDING HAIR."

LANE SAID MRS. MARKHAM ALSO TOLD HIM SHE PICKED OSWALD OUT OF A POLICE LINEUP BECAUSE OF THE CLOTHES HE WAS WEARING.

MRS. MARKHAM SUBSEQUENTLY DENIED THAT SHE HAD TALKED TO LANE. BUT SHE ADMITTED SHE HAD DONE SO WHEN A TAPE RECORDING OF HER TELEPHONE CONVERSATION WITH LANE WAS INTRODUCED BY A COMMISSION ATTORNEY. THE TAPE, HOWEVER, HAD MRS. MARKHAM DENYING THAT TIPPIT'S KILLER WAS SHORT, STOCKY WITH BUSHY HAIR.

IN HER OWN TESTIMONY BEFORE THE COMMISSION, MRS. MARKHAM SAID SHE IDENTIFIED OSWALD AS TIPPIT'S KILLER BECAUSE SHE REMEMBERED HIS FACE.

AFTER HER TESTIMONY CONFLICTED WITH LANE'S, THE COMMISSION RECALLED LANE TO EXPLAIN. HE REFUSED TO ELABORATE, STATING THAT MRS. OSWALD TOLD HIM IN CONFIDENCE. HE SAID IT WOULD BE A VIOLATION OF CLIENT-LAWYER RELATIONSHIP TO SPEAK.

LANE KEPT REFUSING TO ANSWER COMMISSION QUESTIONS ABOUT THE TWO WITNESSES AND ACCUSED THE MEMBERS OF "HARASSMENT."

WARREN FINALLY TOLD LANE:

"IT IS A MATTER OF GREAT CONCERN TO THE COMMISSION THAT YOU ARE WILLING TO TELL US ABOUT THOSE THINGS THAT YOU CONSIDERED BEAR UPON THE GUILT OR INNOCENCE OF LEE HARVEY OSWALD.

"AND IT HANDICAPS US GREATLY IN WHAT WE ARE TRYING TO DO BECAUSE THE THINGS THAT YOU DO SAY WHEN YOU ARE AWAY FROM THE COMMISSION, THEN WHEN YOU REFUSE TO TESTIFY BEFORE US AS TO THOSE VERY THINGS THAT YOU DISCUSS IN PUBLIC."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Mrs. LBJ Tells of Kennedy's Death

C-15

By Jack Anderson

Millions of words have been written about the terrible and tragic events in Dallas a year ago. But probably none are more moving than those spoken into a scratchy tape recorder by Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson less than 24 hours after the murder of President Kennedy.

Anderson

The historic transcript was turned over to the Warren Commission, which will publish it in a few days. Mrs. Johnson's account, which this column is now able to reveal for the first time, not only is a contribution to history but gives probably the clearest insight into the agony and anger of the woman she succeeded as First Lady, Jacqueline Kennedy.

Although Mrs. Johnson's heart was aching for the young widow she had tried to comfort, although she herself was in a daze, she felt an obligation to record her impressions of what had taken place. Her account begins quite simply:

"It all began so beautifully. After a drizzle in the morning, the sun came out bright and beautiful. We are going into Dallas . . . The streets were lined with people, lots and lots of people, the children all smiling, placards, confetti, people waving from windows. One last happy moment I had was looking up and seeing Mary Griffith (a friend) leaning out of a window waving at me . . ."

Then came the shots that shook the world, and a hair-raising drive to the Dallas Hospital. Rufus Youngblood, the Vice President's personal Secret Service bodyguard, vaulted over the front seat and flung himself on Lyndon Johnson, forcing him to the floor of the limousine, crying. "Get down!"

Still nobody knew what had happened. Mrs. Johnson's account continues: "We pulled up to a building. I looked up and saw it said hospital . . .

"Secret Service men began to pull, lead, guide and hustle us out. I cast a last look over my shoulder and saw a bundle of pink just like a drift of blossoms lying on the back seat (of the President's car). I think it was Mrs. Kennedy lying over the President's body. (She was wearing a pink suit.)"

Inside the hospital, Mrs. Johnson asked to be taken to Mrs. Kennedy: "Suddenly I found myself face to face with Jackie in a small hall. I think it was outside the operating room. You always think of her as being insulated, protected—she was quite alone. I don't think I ever saw anyone so much alone in my life.

Comforts Mrs. Kennedy

"I went up to her, put my arms around her and said something to her. I'm sure it was something like 'God help us all,' because my feelings for her were too tumultuous to put into words.

"Then I went in to see Nellie (wife of Texas Gov. John Connally). There it was different; because Nellie and I have gone through so many things together since 1938. I hugged her tight, and we both cried, and I said, 'Nellie, it's going to be all right.'

Not until she returned to her husband did Mrs. Johnson learn that President Kennedy was dead and for the first time hear Lyndon Johnson addressed as "Mr. President." On the return flight to Washington, the new First Lady had a dramatic encounter with the former First Lady.

"Although it was a very hard thing to do, she made it as easy as possible," continues Mrs. Johnson. "She said things like, 'Oh, Lady Bird, it's good that we've always liked you two so much.' She said, 'Oh, what if I had not been there! I'm so glad I was there.'

Blood-Stained Dress

"I looked at her. Mrs. Kennedy's dress was stained with blood. One leg was almost entirely covered with it, and her right glove was caked—that immaculate woman—it was caked with blood, her husband's blood. Somehow that was one of the most poignant sights—exquisitely dressed and caked in blood.

"I asked her if I could get someone in to help her change, and she said, 'Oh, no, perhaps I'll ask Mary Gallagher. But not right now.'

"And then with something—if you can say a person that gentle, that dignified, you can say had an element of fierceness—she said, 'I want them to see what they have done to Jack.'

"I wanted to help her, but there was nothing I could do to help her."

With those words from the heart, Lady Bird Johnson has preserved a stirring moment of history.

Brezhnev's Heart

This column has solved the mystery of the top-secret cable from Moscow reporting that Communist Party boss Leonid Brezhnev may have suffered a heart attack.

It turns out that American intelligence was not misinformed but had misinterpreted a report that heart trouble had forced Brezhnev suddenly to cancel all appointments and appearances.

Apparently, it was an old heart ailment, not a new seizure, that caused the cancellations.

Warren Report Explained By Joseph Ball

"The Warren Commission staff was the ablest I have ever been associated with," said Joseph A. Ball, Long Beach attorney and senior trial counsel for the President's Commission on the Association of President Kennedy, at a meeting of the Beverly Hills Bar Association yesterday.

"What does a lawyer do when he is called to Washington to take part in such an investigation? he queried. "We had no organization when I arrived on Jan. 6, 1964, no secretaries, no files. It was like starting your first law office. Yet, in a few weeks, we had a staff working hard."

"I am asked was it worthwhile," he told the Beverly Bar and guests. "It cost a million dollars provided by the President's office. Time Magazine told the story from FBI and police reports. But Time (or any magazine) doesn't carry weight in Europe and around the world, as Chief Justice Earl Warren does."

World Press

"We had a fine press service and received press clippings from all over the U.S. and the world. There were rumors everywhere. Many wondered if the magazines had the truth. Rumors of conspiracies ranged from that of Texas oil men to gangland schemes. There were hints that Lyndon Johnson had lured Kennedy to Texas to have him killed."

"I talked with a man from Ecuador who believed that. He said 'That's the way we do it down there'," noted Ball. "In France, Denmark and Germany the newspapers said why believe the FBI? They tell a story to cover up their own failure."

"People had to know what was true," said the past president of the State Bar Association, a member of Ball, Hunt & Hart.

"President Johnson appointed a bipartisan commission, but when he asked Justice Warren to be chairman, Warren refused. There was a precedent for his refusal. Justice Roberts had made the Pearl Harbor investigation and Justice Jackson had gone to the Nuremburg trials. Both had been criticized for it. Earl Warren felt the judiciary should not be involved. However, President Johnson convinced him by saying that his word and his word alone would be believed throughout the world."

Appointments

Mr. Ball said that to his knowledge the appointment of the staff which consisted of 15 investigative lawyers plus other lawyers acting as clerks was made by Justice Warren with the assistance of Lee Rankin, chief counsel.

"We were sent over three or four girls from Justice an dthe Pentagon. Usually, however, a department sends the staff it wants to get rid of. So it took us a week or so to develop our own legal secretarial staff which finally was a top group. equal to the staff in any legal office in this city or any other."

been told about the assassination of the President," he said. "I know the facts have been told. I was one who investigated them."

"The staff never met with the Commission," he went on. "It met alone. It never gave advice. We were never told to go out and investigate anything.

"We were as independent as lawyers who try a civil law suit," he continued. He noted that the staff made up a scheme or plan for the investigation which was presented to the Commission and approved. Then the FBI was asked to make a series of investigations. All rumors were investigated, 2,000 in all. They were people who had said they had seen Ruby and Oswald after the shooting.

"In every instance," Ball said, "it was proven that they had not seen them."

Reads Reports

"When I sat down with Rankin at the beginning, he said, 'read the FBI report'. It was three volumes. Then Rankin instructed me not to accept any report but investigate it myself. I sent for the basic documents of the FBI reports and received 10,000 of them.

"The FBI reports are like a stream of consciousness novel. A pair goes out and talks to witnesses and puts down what was said. David Bellin, my assistant from Des Moines, and I worked out a card file with key numbers from the FBI reports to double check everything reported."

"By mid-February, 1964 we presented the first evidence to the Commission. Marina Oswald, Mrs. Oswald and Robert Oswald. Texas had told us to keep out of the state until after the trial of Ruby. On March 13 we went to Texas where we took depositions and reenacted the assassination."

Ball said the FBI refused to assist in Dallas and developed endless red tape for communicating with their lab and other experts. The Secret Service gave them aid in Texas. FBI field agents and lab men were not allowed to contact the lawyers.

Ball detailed the kinds of split second analysis of movements of Oswald and the car in Texas, problems with Congress attacking the staff and the "magnificent fashion" which Earl Warren handled many of the problems that arose.

Regarding the investigation of one of their lawyers, Ball said, "Through the halls of government still stalks the ghost of Joe McCarthy."

"The Commission left the writing of the report to the staff disagreeing only a few minutes," he said.

"No reasonable person can come to any other conclusion than the report makes," he concluded.

William R. Jarnagin, president of the association, introduced him.

Ruby Sought to Tell All in Lie Test

By HERMAN SCHADEN
Star Staff Writer

For a capsule drama within the framework of an immense tragedy, few episodes were more gripping than the lie detector test which Jack L. Ruby insisted on taking over the protests of attorneys, family and friends.

Eighty-five pages of testimony from the Warren Commission hearings tell the story of the convicted Ruby's determination to make public his answers to any questions put to him about his slaying of Lee Harvey Oswald.

Except for a two-hour break, the wrangling and questioning went on for 10 hours in the Dallas County Jail last July 18.

The rough-and-ready Ruby, the hustler who went from Chicago's streets to Dallas' night-club district, emerged from the controversial interrogation with as good marks as anyone could expect under the circumstances.

Wasn't Dissuaded

He asked for the polygraph test, was granted it by Commission Chairman Earl Warren and neither his attorneys, Clayton Fowler and Joe Tonahill, nor his closest advisers could dissaude him.

In fact, Ruby nearly drove his legal counsel to distraction by insisting, before and during the test, that it must be released to the public as soon as possible and by insisting that William F. Alexander, representing the District Attorney's office, should be let in on the quiz.

Fowler repeatedly tried to convince Ruby that by divulging information to the district attorney he might be destroying his last chance in the event he won a new trial.

"I've got the monkey on my back now," said Ruby.

"Well, you've got more than a monkey on your back, Jack," answered Fowler. "This is your decision."

10 Series of Questions

The FBI polygraph expert, Bell P. Herndon, went to great lengths to explain the operation to Ruby and to put him at ease. The test was given in 10 series of questions, each series lasting 3 minutes or less with breaks in between.

It finally was agreed that Alexander would be permitted to hear the preliminary questions, but would leave the room when Herndon directed them for a response on the polygraph.

Most of the questioning went smoothly with Ruby apparently in a cooperative, chatty and amiable mood. But on occasion he tried to help Herndon rephrase long questions. Once this lead to the ludicrous situation of Alexander horning in with a suggestion about how a question should be shaped.

This was during a series dealing with the question of premeditated murder, which Fowler warned was the very crux of Ruby's hope for eventual reversal or clemency.

Negative Answer

To the question: "Aside from anything you said to George Senator (Ruby's roommate) Sunday morning, did you ever tell anyone else you intended to shoot Oswald?" Ruby answered "No."

But even after the questioning began, Ruby was not satisfied that the district attorney's office was not getting his answers first hand.

"I've already told it to the Warren Commission," Ruby pleaded with Fowler.

"Listen, Jack," the attorney begged, "will you please listen to me? This man got up down there and asked the jury to send you to the electric chair."

"I know it," Ruby answered.

Mrs. Connally: 'Can't Say Dallas Doesn't Love You'

14

Following are excerpts from the testimony of Mrs. John B. Connally jr., wife of the Governor of Texas, taken by the commission in Washington on April 21, 1964. The Connallys were in the Presidential car at the time of the assassination.

Mrs. Connally: The receptions had been so good every place that I had showed much restraint by not mentioning something about it before.

I could resist no longer. When we got past this area I did turn to the President and said, "Mr. President, you can't say Dallas doesn't love you."

Then I don't know how soon, it seems to me it was very soon, that I heard a noise, and not being an expert rifleman, I was not aware that it was a rifle. It was just a frightening noise, and it came from the right.

I turned over my right shoulder and looked back, and saw the President as he had both hands at his neck.

Mr. Specter: And you are indicating with your own hands, two hands crossing over gripping your own neck?

Mrs. Connally: Yes; and it seemed to me there was—he made no utterance, no cry. I saw no blood, no anything. It was just sort of nothing, the expression on his face, and he just sort of slumped down.

Then very soon there was the second shot that hit John. As the first shot hit, and I turned to look at the same time, I recall John saying, "Oh, no, no, no." Then there was a second shot, and it hit John, and as he recoiled to the right, just crumpled like a wounded animal to the right, he said, 'My God...they are going to kill us all."

I never again—

Mr. Dulles: To the right was into your arms more or less?

Mrs. Connally: No, he turned away from me. I was pretending that I was him. I never again looked in the back seat of the car after my husband was shot. My concern was for him, and I remember that he turned to the right and then just slumped down into the seat, so that I reached over to pull him toward me. I was trying to get him down and me down. The jump seats were not very roomy, so that there were reports that he slid into the seat of the car, which he did not; that he fell over into my lap, which he did not.

I just pulled him over into my arms because it would have been impossible to get us really both down with me sitting and me holding him. So that I looked out, I mean as he was in my arms, I put my head down over his head so that his head and my head were right together, and all I could see, too, were the people flashing by. I didn't look back any more.

The third shot that I heard I felt, it felt like spent buckshot falling all over us, and then, of course, I, too, could see that it was the matter, just human matter, all over the car and both of us.

I though John had been killed, and then there was some inperceptible movement, just some little something that let me know that there was still some life, and that is when I started saying to him, 'It's all right. Be still."

Now, I did hear the Secret Service man say, "Pull out of the motorcade. Take us to the nearest hospital," and then we took out very rapidly to the hospital.

Just before we got to Parkland, we made a right-hand turn, he must have been going very fast, because as he turned the weight of my husband's body almost toppled us both.

Mr. Specter How fast do you think he was going?

Mrs. Connally: I don't know; very rapidly. The people I could see going by were just rushing. We were just rushing by very fast.

We arrived at the hospital and sat there what seemed to me like an interminable time, and from what I know was just a few minutes, but the thoughts that went through my mind were how long must I sit here with this dying man in my arms while everybody is swarming over the President whom I felt very sure was dead, and just when I thought I could sit and wait no longer, John just sort of heaved himself up. He did not rise up in the car, he just sort of heaved himself up, and then collapsed down into the seat.

Mr. Specter: At that time you and Gov. Connally were still on the jump seats of the car?

Mrs. Connally: Yes, and they had not—the President was still—and Mrs. Kennedy were still in the back. I still had not ever looked back at the back seat after the second shot. I could hear, you know, hear them talking about how sad, and lamenting the fact that the President was in such poor shape and, of course, they didn't know whether he was—I guess they didn't know whether he was alive or dead.

Mr. Specter: Did President Kennedy say anything at all after the shooting?

Mrs. Connally: He did not say anything. Mrs. Kennedy said, the first thing I recall her saying was, after the first shot, and I heard her say, "Jack, they have killed my husband," and then there was the second shot, and then after the third shot she said, "They have killed my husband. I have his brains in my hand," and she repeated that several times, and that was all the conversation. . . .

Mrs. Oswald: 'I . . . Cried'

Mr. Rankin: On Nov. 21, the day before the assassination—was there any discussion between you and your husband about President Kennedy's trip or proposed trip to Texas, Dallas and the Fort Worth area?

Mrs. Oswald: I asked Lee whether he knew where the President would speak, and told him that I would very much like to hear him and to see him. I asked him how this could be done.

But he said he didn't know how to do that, and didn't enlarge any further on that subject. This was also somewhat unusual—his lack of desire to talk about that subject any further—I think about it more now. At the time, I didn't pay any attention.

Mr. Rankin: How did you think it was unusual? Could you explain that?

Mrs. Oswald: The fact that he didn't talk a lot about it. He merely gave me—said something as an answer, and did not have any further comments.

Mr. Rankin: Do you mean by that usually he would discuss a matter of that kind and show considerable interest?

Mrs. Oswald: Yes, of course, he would have told who would be there and where this would take place.

Mr. Rankin: Did your husband make any comments about President Kennedy on that evening, of the 21st?

Mrs. Oswald: No.

Mr. Rankin: Had your husband at any time that you can recall said anything against President Kennedy?

Mrs. Oswald: I don't remember any—ever having said that. I don't know. He never told me that.

Mr Rankin: Did he ever say anything good about President Kennedy?

Mrs. Oswald: Usually he would translate magazine articles. They were generally good. And he did not say that this contracted his opinion. I just remembered that he talked about Kennedy's father, who made his fortune by a not very—in a not very good manner. Disposing of such funds, of course, it was easier for his sons to obtain an education and to obtain a government position, and it was easier to make a name for themselves. . . .

Mr. Rankin: When he read these articles to you, did he comment favorably upon President Kennedy?

Mrs. Oswald: I have already said that he would translate articles which were good, but he would not comment on them.

Mr. Rankin: Can you recall - - -

Mrs. Oswald: Excuse me. At least when I found out that Lee had shot at the President, for me this was surprising. And I didn't believe it. I didn't believe for a long time that Lee had done that. That he had wanted to kill him.

Mr. Rankin: Why did you not believe this?

Mrs. Oswald: Because I had never heard anything bad about Kennedy from Lee. And he never had anything against him. . . .

Mr. Rankin: So apparently he didn't indicate any approval or disapproval as far as he was concerned, of President Kennedy?

Mrs. Oswald: Yes, that is correct. The President is the President. In my opinion, he never wanted to overthrow him. At least he never showed me that. He never indicated that he didn't want that President. . . .

Mr. Rankin: With regard to the Walker incident, you said that your husband seemed disturbed for several weeks. Did you notice anything of that kind with regard to the day prior to the assassination?

Mrs. Oswald: No.

Mr. Rankin: On Nov. 22. . . . you said your husband got up and got his breakfast. Did you get up at all before he left?

Mrs. Oswald: No. I woke up before him, and I then went to the kitchen to see whether he had had breakfast or not—whether he had already left for work. But the coffee pot was cold and Lee was not there. . . .

Mr. Rankin: Then did he say anything to you that morning at all, or did he get up and go without speaking to you?

Mrs. Oswald: He told me to take as much money as I needed and to buy everything, and said goodbye, and that is all.

After the police had already come, I noticed that Lee had left his wedding ring.

Mr. Rankin: You didn't observe that that morning when your husband had left, did you?

Mrs. Oswald: No. . . .

Mr. Rankin: Had your husband ever left his wedding ring at home that way before?

Mrs. Oswald: At one time while he was still at Fort Worth, it was inconvenient for him to work with his wedding ring on and he would remove it, but at work —he would not leave it at home. . . .

Mr. Rankin: Then this is the first time during your married life that he had ever left it at home where you live?

Mrs. Oswald: Yes. . . .

Mr. Rankin: What did you do the rest of the morning, after you got up on Nov. 22?

Mrs. Oswald: When I got up the television set was on, and I knew that Kennedy was coming. Ruth had gone to the the doctor with her children and she left the television set on for me. And I watched television all morning, even without havinb dressed. . . .

Mr. Rankin: Before the assaassination, did you ever see your husband examining the route of the parade as it was published in the paper?

Mrss. Oswald: No.

Mr. Rankin: Did you ever see him looking at a map of Dallas like he did in connection with the Walker shooting?

Mrs. Oswald: No.

Mr. Rankin: How did you learn of the shooting of President Kennedy?

Mrs. Oswald: I was watching television, and Ruth (Mrs. Paine) by that time was already with me, and she said someone had shot at the President.

Mr. Rankin: What did you say?

Mrs. Oswald: It was hard for me to say anything. We both turned pale. I went to my room and cried.

Mr. Rankin: Did you think immediately that your husband might have been involved?

Mrs. Oswald: No.

Mr. Rankin: Did Mrs. Paine say anything about the possibility of your husband being involved?

Mrs. Oswald: No, but she only said that "By the way, they fired from the building in which Lee is working."

My heart dropped. I then went to the garage to see whether the rifle was there, and I saw that the blanket was still there, and I said, "Thank God." I thought, "Can there really be such a stupid man in the world that could do something like that?" But I was already rather upset at that time—I don't know why. Perhaps my intuition.

I didn't know what I was doing.

Mr. Rankin: Did you look in the blanket to see if the rifle was there?

Mrs. Oswald: I didn't unroll the blanket. It was in its usual position, and it appeared to have something inside.

Mr. Rankin: Did you at any time open the blanket to see if the rifle was there?

Mrs. Oswald: No. . . .

Mr. Rankin: And what Mrs. Paine? Did she look in the blanket to see if the rifle was there?

Mrs. Oswald: She didn't know about the rifle.

Perhaps she did know. But she never told me about it.

I don't know.

Mr. Rankin: When did you learn that the rifle was not in the blanket?

Mrs. Oswald: When the police arrived and asked whether my husband had a rifle, and I said "Yes."

Mr. Rankin: Then what happened?

Mrs. Oswald: They began to search the apartment. When they came to the garage and took the blanket, I thought, "Well, now, they will find it."

They opened the blanket but there was no rifle there.

Then, of course, I already know that it was Lee. . . .

Hoover: No Evidence Of 'Any Conspiracy'

The following testimony of FBI director J. Edgar Hoover was taken in Washington on May 14, 1964:

Mr.Rankin: You have furnished us a considerable amount of information, Mr. Hoover, about whether or not Lee Harvey Oswald was ever an agent or acting for the bureau in any capacity as informer or otherwise at any time. Are those statements correct?

Mr. Hoover: They are correct. I can most emphatically say that at no time was he ever an employee of the bureau in any capacity, either as an agent or as a special employee, or as an informant. . .

Mr. Rankin: From your study of this entire matter of the assassination and work in connection with it, do you know of any credible evidence that has ever come to your attention that there was a conspiracy either foreign or domestic involved in the assassination?

Mr.Hoover: I know of no substantial evidence of any type that would support any contention of that character. I have read all of the results that have come to the bureau from this commission, and I have read and signed all the replies that have come to the commission.

In addition, I have read many of the reports that our agents have made, and I have been unable to find any scintilla of evidence showing any foreign conspiracy or any domestic conspiracy that culminated in the assassination of President Kennedy. . .

Just how far you are going to go for his protection and his security? I don't think you can get absolute security without almost establishing a police state, and we don't want that. You can't put security in a black groove or a white groove. It is in a gray groove, and certain chances have to be taken. You are dealing with a human being when you are dealing with the President of the United States. President Johnson is a very down-to-earth human being, and it makes the security problem all the more difficult, but you can't bar him from the people. . .

Prior to that time we reported to the Secret Service all information that dealt with individuals who were potential killers or by whom acts of violence might be anticipated. The Secret Service would take that information and would do with it as they saw fit. I gave great consideration to it because I am not very happy with the criteria expansion, but I felt we had to include subversives of various character, and extremists. We have, in turn, furnished their names to the Secret Service. I think 5,000 names up to the present time already have been submitted, and there are at least three or four thousand more that will be submitted within the next few months.

Then you come to the problem of what you are going to do when the Secret Service gets those names. They have to call upon the local authorities. Just recently, in the city of Chicago, when the President was there, the local authorities were asked to give assistance as they usually do to the Secret Service, and they went to the homes of some of these people, and it resulted really almost in a house arrest.

Now, I don't think there is any place in this country for that kind of thing, but these people who belonged to extreme subversive organizations that advocated the overthrow of government by force and violence were told that they couldn't leave their house, or if they did, they would be accompanied by a police officer. That gives me great concern, because in New York City alone you run into maybe three or four thousand such individuals who would be members of subversive organizations, and then you get into the twilight zone of subversive fronts . . .

Rep. Boggs: I read the FBI report very carefully and the whole implication of the report is that, number one, Oswald shot the President; number two, that he was not connected with any conspiracy of any kind, nature or description.

Mr. Hoover: Correct.

Rep. Boggs: Do you still subscribe to that?

Mr. Hoover: I subscribe to it even more strongly today than I did at the time that the report was written. You see, the original idea was that there would be an investigation by the FBI and a report would be prepared in such form that it could be released to the public.

Rep. Boggs: Surely.

Mr. Hoover: Then a few days later, after further consideration, the President decided to form a commission, which I think was very wise, because I feel that the report of any agency of government investigating what might be some shortcomings on the part of other agencies of government ought to be reviewed by an impartial group such as this commission. And the more I have read these reports, the more I am convinced that Oswald was the man who fired the gun; and he fired three times, killed the President, and wounded Gov. Connally.

And I also am further convinced that there is absolutely no association between Oswald or Ruby. There was no such evidence ever established.

Jack Ruby: 'I Just Was Carried Away'

Following are excerpts of Jack Ruby's testimony given on June 7, 1964, in the Dallas County Jail:

Ruby: At this moment, Lee Harvey Oswald isn't guilty of committing the crime of assassinating President Kennedy. Jack Ruby is. How can I fight that, Chief Justice Warren?

Chief Justice Warren: Well now, I want to say, Mr. Ruby, that as far as this commission is concerned, there is no implication of that in what we are doing. That I can assure you.

Ruby: All right, there is a certain organization here, Chief Justice Warren, if it takes my life at this moment to say it and Bill Decker said be a man and say it, there is a John Birch Society right now in activity and Edwin Walker is one of the top men of this organization—take it for what it is worth, Chief Justice Warren. Unfortunately for me, for me ~~giving the~~ people the opportunity to get in power, because of the act I committed has put a lot of people in jeopardy with their lives.

Don't register with you, does it?

Chief Justice Warren: No; I don't understand that.

Ruby: Would you rather I just delete what I said and just pretend that nothing is going on?

Chief Justice Warren: I would not indeed. I'm only interested in what you want to tell the commission. That is all I am interested in.

Ruby: Well, I said my life, I won't be living long now. I know that. My family's lives will be gone. When I left my apartment that morning—

Chief Justice Warren: What morning?

Ruby: Sunday morning. Let's go back. Saturday I watched Rabbi Seligman. Any of you watch it that Saturday morning?

Chief Justice Warren: No, I didn't happen to hear it.

Ruby: He ~~went ahead~~ and eulogized that here is a man that fought in every battle, went to every country, and had to come back to his own country to be shot in the back. (Starts crying).

I must be a great actor, I tell you that.

Chief Justice Warren: No.

Ruby: That created a tremendous emotional feeling for me, the way he said that. Prior to all the other times, I was carried away.

Then that Saturday night I didn't do anything but visit a little club over here and had Coca-Cola because I was sort of depressed. The fellow that owns the Pago Club, Bob Norton, and he knew something was wrong with me and the certain mood I was in.

And I went home that weekend, and Sunday morning, I saw a letter to Caroline two columns about a 16-inch area. Someone had written a letter to Caroline, the most heart-breaking letter. I don't remember the content. Do you remember that?

Secret Service Chief James Rowley: 'There Was No Reprimand' of Agents

Mr. Rankin: Did you learn in connection with the trip when the assassination occurred that certain of the Secret Service agents had been in the Press Club and what is called the Cellar, at Fort Worth, the night before?.

Mr. Rowley: I learned that there were nine agents involved at the Press Club. And I might say this—the agents on duty throughout that day had no opportuntiy to eat. When they arrived at Fort Worth, they were informed that there was a buffet to be server at the Fort Worth Club. This is what I ascertained in personal interviews. Upon going over there, they learned there was no buffet, and some of them stayed for a drink. Three, I think had one scotch, and others had two or three beers. They were in and out —from the time they arrived, I would say roughly around 12:30, until the place closed at 2 o'clock.

Now, after that some of them went to the cellar. This is a place that does not serve alcoholic beverages. They were there primarily, I think, out of curiosity, because this was some kind of a beatnik place where someone gets up and recites, or plays the guitar.

Mr. Rankin: Did you learn whether or not there were any violations of the regulations of the Secret Service by these men.

Mr. Rowley: Yes; there was a violation. At that time there was a section in our manual in effect that said that during— . . .

Mr.Rankin: Now, will you tell the commission about what the regulation was?

Mr. Rowley: "The use of liquor. Employees are strictly enjoined to refrain from the use of intoxicating liquor during the hours they are officially employed at their post of duty or when they may reasonably expect that they may be called upon to perform an official duty."

The one that applies here —"However, all members of the White House detail and special agents co-operating with them on Presidential and similar protective assignments are considered to be subject to call for official duty at any time while in travel status. Therefore, the use of intoxicating liquor of any kind, including beer and wine, by members of the White House detail and special agents co-operating with them or by special agents on similar assignments, while they are in a travel status, is prohibited."

Mr. Rankin: Can you tell the commission how many men wer involved in these trips to the Press Club and the Cellar, where these things were done?

Mr. Rowley: There were nine men involved at the Press Club, and there were ten men involved at the Cellar.

Mr. Rankin: Now, how many men, of those ten men, were in the Presidential motorcade on the day of the assassination?

Mr. Rowley: Four — four men were in the follow-up car.

The Chairman: Who were they?

Mr. Rankin: Do you know their names?

Mr. Rowley: Yes; Landis, Hill, Ready and Bennett.

Mr. Rankin: Did you make any investigation to determine whether or not their violation of the Secret Service regulations had anything to do with the assassination of the President?

Mr. Rowley: Yes. They performed their duties from the time they departed in the follow-up car from Love Field until the point of the tragedy in a most satisfactory manner. There was nothing deficient in their actions or their alertness. They went through the heaviest part of downtown Dallas, through the crowds, and performed in an exemplary manner. . . .

Mr. Rankin: Have you done anything to discipline these men for violation of the regulations of the Secret Service?

Mr. Rowley: Well, I did consider what type of punishment would be provided.

Then I also considered the fact that these men in no way had—their condust had no bearing on the assassination. And, therefore, I thought that in the light of history, to place a stigma on them by punishing them at that time, from which inevitably the public would conclude that they were responsible for the assassination of the President —I didn't think this was fair and that they did not deserve that, with their family and children. . . .

Mr. Rankin: Now, were these men under this regulation considered to be on travel status, so that they should not be using intoxicating liquor.

Mr. Rowley: Yes, sir.

Mr. Rankin: And there is no question about that in your mind?

Mr. Rowley: No, sir.

Mr. Rankin: Has anything been done to reprimand and cause them to realize that this is violation of your regulations?

Mr. Rowley: They were interviewed by the inspector at the time. The seriousness of the matter was impressed upon them. And I think they recognize the seriousness of their acts.

The men we recruit are men that are college graduates and mature, and we screen them very carefully, particularly before we assign them to the White House detail. They know and we know that they are in a fishbowl 24 hours a day, and that, therefore, their conduct is always subject to scrutiny, and so forth, and that they are responsible individuals. Their records have indicated that they have been performing in a high degree. They have worked endless hours of overtime. They are dedicated. And if they were not, they would not be on the detail.

They realize the seriousness of the violation, and I went over it with my special agent in charge. He understands it. And I am quite sure that they all understand it at this time. . . .

Rep. Ford: Mr. Rankin, I don't recall Chief Rowley saying precisely what the reprimands were specifically for these violations of the regulations in this one instance.

You spoke highly of their background, and you spoke very highly in their praise. But I did not hear what reprimand, if any, had actually been lodged against them.

Mr. Rowley: There was no reprimand. You are talking about the current thing?

Rep. Ford: I am talking about the Dallas trip.

Mr. Rowley: I stated in considering what would be an appropriate punishment at the time, I felt that these men, by their conduct, had no bearing on the assassination of the President in Dalsas. That to institute formal punishment or disciplinary action would inevitably lead the public to conclude that they were responsible for the assassination of President Kennedy. I did not think in the light of history that they should be stigmatized with something like that, or their families or children. And, for that reason, I took the position that I did.

Rep. Ford: So there was no official reprimand or disciplinary action?

Mr. Rowley: No, sir.

Mr. Rankin: Did you talk to the agents, to indicate and make it plain to them that this was a violation of the regulations?

Mr. Rowley: I talked to some of the agents, as did my inspector at the time, who interviewed each and every one of them.

Mr. Rankin: And I think the commission would be interested in whether you can be assured, or assure them that the action you took was sufficient so that this would not happen again.

Mr. Rowley: Well, I am confident that it would not happen again, Mr. Rankin.

Mr. Rankin: Can you tell us why you think so?

Mr. Rowley: Because they realize the seriousness of their action.

Initially I ca nunderstand the situation—they thought they were going for a dinner, buffet, and they got into the place and it wasn't there.

I talked personally with the agents there, and they just thought while they were there they would have a drink. It was one of those situations.

The important thing was that it was pointed out to them this was wrong, this was a violation. These men are young men with futures, they realize the true situation, innocent as they may have seemed to think it was.

But I am quite confident that we will not have a repetition of that.

And in talking to Mr. Behn—I a mconfident, too, in him—I know that he will see to it that they are well supervised. . . .

The chairman: Don't you think that they would have been much more alert, sharper, had they not been doing these things?

Mr. Rowley: Yes, sir; but I don't believe they could have prevented the assissination.

The chairman: Isn't it a substantial violation of these rules to do a thing of that kind?

Mr. Rowley: Yes, sir—on the basis of this section here.

The chairman: Yes.

Now, chief I noticed, also, in reading some of the reports that three of these men whom you speak of were actually on night duty, protecting the life of the President. And around 4 o'clock in the morning, when they were protecting him at the Texas Hotel, they said that they had a coffee break, and they went from the hotel over to the beatnik joint. Now, is that consistent with your regulations?

Mr. Rowley: In this case, I talked to these agents. They were relieved at different times — because their posts are in the corridor of a stuffy hotel—

The Chairman: Of the what?

Mr. Rowley: the corridor that they were on post outside the President's suite was a stuffy one, and they went downstairs to get a breath of fresh air. And they walked—it was a block— and out of curiosity they went into this place. One fellow looked in and left, he didn't buy any coffee. Another fellow went in and felt, I suppose, when he went in that he would buy a cup of coffee. But they were on what we call reliefs, the same as we relieve them around the White House. There are only so many posts, but you havee a group of men in one of the rooms of the hotel where they are available, like an alert squad, and they relieve everyone on post evry half hour. It is a part of the rotation of positions we have.

The Chairman: do you have any regulations concerning where they shall remain when they are relieved for this sort period of time?

Mr. Rowley: No, sir.

The Chairman: They can do any place they want?

Mr. Rowley: No; not any place they want?

Mr. Rowley: No; not any place. They usually stay within the immediate confines. That is understood. The hotel or the reseidence.

The Chairman: Well, they didn't do that here, did they?

Mr. Rowley: No, sir.

The Chairman: Now, is that consistent with their duty?

Mr. Rowley: No; it is not consistent or inconsistent with their duty. But as they explained to me, they wanted o get a breath of fresh air. If they are at a residence in a remote place, and they want to walk around the area, they might walk maybe a city block or so, which is what they do on a lot of these assignments — particularly in hotels. This was not an air-conditioned hotel.

The Chairman: It would seem to me that a beatnik joint is a place where queer people of all kinds gather anyway, and that the mere fact that these men did leave their post of duty might be an indication to someone that the President was not being protected, and might leave an opening for them to go there and try to do something.

Mr. Rowley: There were relieved, Mr. Chief Justice. They didn't leave their post of duty. They would not leave their post of duty until they were relieved by someone. . . .

The Chairman: I have not seen anything in there. It seems to me they were all given a complete bill of health. And I just wonder if that is quite consistent with all the facts that the commission should have.

Mr. Rowley: No, sir; as I said earlier, we don't condone their actions, nor do we try to belittle the violation. But in the circumstances, I took the decision that I thought right in view of the tragedy and so forth. In any other circumstance it would have been entirely different. But as I said earlier, I don't think that these people should be blamed for the tragedy that happened at that time, and that any attempt to assess formal punishment would be in the light of history stigmatize them for the rest of their life, as well as their families.

Mr. Rankin. Would you tell the commission what your practice was for the Secret Service concerning the route of the motorcade at the time of the assassination—that is, wheher you made inspecion of adjacent buildings?

Mr. Rowley. At that time, and prior to that time, except for the inaugurations in Washington and other parades involving the visit of foreign dignitaries in Washington in which the President would ride in the motorcade with the head of state, where we had ample time to make these surveys, we had never conducted on trips out of Washington surveys of this nature. I have here a statement of the conditions that prevailed in Dallas as well as oher areas —if I may read this.

Mr. Rankin. Yes.

Mr. Rowley. "Except for inauguration or other parades involving foreign dignitaries accompanied by the President in Washington, it has not been the practice of the Secret Service to make surveys or checks of buildings along the route of a Presidential motorcade. For the inauguration and certain other parades in Washington where the traditional route is known to the public long in advance of the event, buildings along the route can be checked by teams of law enforcement officers, and armed guards are posted along the route as appropriate. But on out-of-town trips where the route is decided on and made public only a few days in advance, buildings are not checked either by Secret Service agents or by any other law enforcement officers at the request of the Secret Service. With the number of men available to the Secret Service and the time available, surveys of hundreds of buildings and thousands of windows is not practical.

"In Dallas the route selected necessarily involved passing through the principal downtown section between tall buildings. While certain streets thought to be too narrow could be avoided and other choices made, it was not practical to select a route where the President could not be seen from roofs or windows of buildings. At the two places in Dallas where the President would remain for a period of time, Love Field and the Trade Mart, arrangements were made for building and roof security by posting police officers where appropriate. Similar arrangements for a motorcade of ten miles, including many blocks of tall commercial buildings, is not practical.

Gov. Connally: 'Hit Me in Back'

GOV. CONNALLY: We had—we had gone, I guess, 150 feet, maybe 200 feet, I don't recall how far it was, heading down to get on the freeway, the Stemmons Freeway, to go out to the hall where we were going to have lunch and, as I say, the crowds had begun to thin, and we could —I was anticipating that we were going to be at the hall in approximately five minutes from the time we turned on Elm St.

We had just made the turn, well, when I heard what I thought was a shot. I heard this noise which I immediately took to be a rifle shot. I instinctively turned to my right because the sound appeared to come from over my right shoulder, so I turned to look back over my right shoulder, and I saw nothing unusual except just people in the crowd, but I did not catch the President in the corner of my eye, and I was interested, because once I heard the shot in my own mind I identified it as a rifle shot, and I immediately—the only thought that crossed my mind was that this is an assassination attempt.

So I looked, failing to see him, I was turning to look back over my left shoulder into the back seat, but I never got that far in my turn. I got about in the position I am in now facing you, looking a little bit to the left of center, and then I felt like some one had hit me in the back.

MR. SPECTOR: What is the best estimate that you have as to the time span between the sound of the first shot and the feeling of some one hitting you in the back which you just described?

GOV. CONNALLY: A very, very brief span of time. Again my trend of thought just happened to be, I suppose along this line, I immediately thought that this—that I had been shot. I knew it when I just looked down and I was covered with blood, and the thought immediately passed through my mind that there were either two or three people involved or more in this or some one was shooting with an automatic rifle. These were just thoughts that went through my mind because of the rapidity of these two, of the first shot plus the blow that I took, and I knew I had been hit, and I immediately assumed, because of the amount of blood, and, in fact, that it had obviously passed through my chest, that I had probably been fatally hit.

So I merely doubled up, and then turned to my right again and began to . . . I just sat there, and Mrs. Connally pulled me over to her lap. She was sitting, of course, on the jump seat, so I reclined with my head in her lap, conscious all the time, and with my eyes open; and then, of course, the third shot sounded, and I heard the shot very clearly. I heard it hit him. I heard the shot hit something, and I assumed again . . . it never entered my mind that it ever hit anybody but the President. I heard it hit. It was a very loud noise, just that audible, very clear.

Immediately I could see on my clothes, my clothing, I could see on the interior of the car which, as I recall, was a pale blue, brain tissue, which I immediately recognized and I recall very well, on my trousers there was one chunk of brain tissue as big as almost my thumb, thumbnail, and again I did not see the President at any time either after the first, second, or third shots, but I assumed always that it was he who was hit and no one else.

I immediately, when I was hit, said, "Oh, no, no, no." And then I said, "My God, they are going to kill us all." Nellie, (Mrs. Connally) when she pulled me over into her lap, she could tell I was still breathing and moving, and she said, "Don't worry. Be quiet. You are going to be all right." She just kept telling me I was going to be all right.

After the third shot, I heard Roy Kellerman tell the driver, "Bill, get out of line." And then I saw him move, and I assumed he was moving a button or something on the panel of the automobile, and he said, "Get us to a hospital quick." I assumed he was saying this to the patrolman, the motorcycle police who were leading us.

At about that time, we began to pull out of the cavalcade, out of the line, and I lost consciousness and didn't regain consciousness until we got to the hospital.

Mr. Specter: In your view, which bullet caused the injury to your chest, Gov. Connally?

Gov. Connally: The second one.

Mr. Specter: And what is your reason for that conclusion, sir?

Gov. Connally: Well, in my judgment, it just couldn't conceivably have been the first one because I heard the sound of the shot. In the first place, I don't know anything about the velocity of this particular bullet, but any rifle has a velocity that exceeds the speed of sound, and when I heard the sound of that first shot, that bullet had already reached where I was, or it had reached that far, and after I heard that shot, I had the time to turn to my right, and start to turn to my left before I felt anything.

It is not conceivable to me that I could have been hit by the first bullet, and then I felt the blow from something which was obviously a bullet, which I assumed was a bullet, and I never heard the second shot, didn't hear it.

I didn't hear but two shots. I think I heard the first shot and the third shot.

Mr. Specter: Do you have any idea as to why you did not hear the second shot?

Gov. Connally: Well, first, again I assume the bullet was traveling faster than the sound. I was hit by the bullet prior to the time the sound reached me, and I was in either a state of shock or the impact was such that the sound didn't even register on me, but I was never conscious of hearing the second shot at all.

Obviously, at least the major wound that I took in the shoulder through the chest couldn't have been anything but the second shot. Obviously, it couldn't have been the third because when the third shot was fired I was in a reclining position, and heard it, saw it and the effects of it, rather—I didn't see it, I saw the effects of it—so it obviously could not have been the third, and couldn't have been the first, in my judgment.

Rep. Hale Boggs: This is a little bit off the subject, but it is pretty well established that the Governor was shot and he has recovered. Do you have any reason to believe there was any conspiracy afoot for somebody to assassinate you?

Gov. Connally: None whatever.

Rep. Boggs: Had you ever received any threat from Lee Harvey Oswald of any kind?

Gov. Connally: No.

Rep. Boggs: Had you ever seen him?

Gov. Connally: No.

Rep. Boggs: Have you ever had any belief of, subsequent to the assassination of President Kennedy and your own injury, that there was a conspiracy here of any kind?

Gov. Connally: None whatever.

Allen W. Dulles: You recall your correspondence with Oswald in connection with Marine matters, when he thought you were still Secretary of the Navy?

Gov. Connally: After this was all over, I do, Mr. Dulles. As I recall, he wrote me a letter asking that his dishonorable discharge be corrected. But at the time he wrote the letter, if he had any reason about it at all, or shortly thereafter, he would have recognized that I had resigned as Secretary of the Navy a month before I got the letter, so it would really take a peculiar mind, it seems to me, to harbor any grudge as a result of that when I had resigned as Secretary prior to the receipt of the letter.

Mr. Dulles: I think I can say without violating any confidence, that there is nothing in the record to indicate that there was—in fact, Marina, the wife, testified, in fact, to the contrary. There was no animus against you on the part of Oswald, as you——.

Gov. Connally: I have wondered, of course, in my own mind as to whether or not there could have conceivably been anything, and the only—I suppose like any person at that particular moment, I represented authority to him. Perhaps he was in rebellious spirit enough to where I was as much a target as any one else. But that is the only conceivable basis on which I can assume that he was deliberately trying to hit me.

Mrs. Johnson: 'God Help Us All'

My dear Mr. Chief Justice:

Mr. Lee Rankin, chief counsel to the President's commission on the assassination of President Kennedy, has advised me that the commission would be interested to have a statement from me concerning my recollection of the events of Nov. 22, 1963.

Beginning on Nov. 30, and as I found time on the following two days, I dictated my recollection of that fateful and dreadful day on a small tape recorder which I had at the Elms, where we were then living. I did this primarily as a form of therapy—to help me over the shock and horror of the experience of President Kennedy's assassination. I did not intend that the tape should be used.

The quality of the tape recording is very poor, but upon considering your commission's request, I decided to ask that the tape relating to Nov. 22 be transcribed. I am sending the transcription to you with only a few, minor corrections. Perhaps it will serve your purposes. I hope si. In any event, it is a more faithful record of my recollection and impressions than I could produce at this late date. . . .

LADY BIRD JOHNSON,
MRS. LYNDON B. JOHNSON.

(Transcript from Mrs. Johnson's tapes relating to Nov. 22, 1963.)

It all began so beautifully. After a drizzle in the morning, the sun came out bright and beautiful. We were going into Dallas. In the lead car, President and Mrs. Kennedy, John and Nellie, and then a Secret Service car full of men, and then our car—Lyndon and me and Sen. Yarborough. The streets were lined with people—lots and lots of people—the children all smiling; placards, confetti; people waving from windows. . . . Suddenly there was a sharp loud report—a shot. . . . I thought it must be firecrackers or some sort of celebration. . . . I heard over the radio system, "Let's get out of here," and our Secret Service man who was with us, Ruf Youngblood, I believe it was, vaulted over the front seat on top of Lyndon, threw him to the floor, and said, "Get down."

Sen. Yarborough and I ducked our heads. The car accelerated terrifically fast—faster and faster. Then suddenly they put on the brakes so hard that I wondered if they were going to make it as we wheeled left and went around the corner. We pulled up to a building. I looked up and saw it said "Hospital." Only then did I believe that this might be what it was. . . . I cast one last look over my shoulder and saw, in the President's car, a bundle of pink, just like a drift of blossoms, lying on the back seat. I think it was Mrs. Kennedy lying over the President's body. They led us to the right, the left, and onward into a quiet room in the hospital—a very small room.

People came and went—Kenny O'Donnell, Congressman Thornberry, Congressman Jack Brooks. Always there was Ruf right there. . . . Through it all, Lyndon was remarkably calm and quiet. Every face that came in, you searched for the answers you must know. I think the face I kept seeing it on was the face of Kenney O'Donnell, who loved him so much.

MARKED FILE AND INITIALED

It was Lyndon as usual who thought of it first, although I wasn't going to leave without doing it. He said, "you had better try to see if you can see Jackie and Nellie. . . ." I asked the Secret Service men if I could be taken to them. They began to lead me up one corridor, back stairs and down another. Suddenly I found myself face to face with Jackie in a small hall. I think it was right outside the operating room. You always think of her —or some one like her—as being insulated, protected; she was quite alone. I don't think I ever saw any one so much alone in my life. I went up to her, put my arms around her and said something to her. I'm sure it was something like, "God, help us all," because my feelings for her were too tumultuous to put into words.

And then I went in to see Nellie. There it was different because Nellie and I have gone through so many things together since 1938. I hugged her tight and we both cried and I said, "Nellie, it's going to be all right." And Nellie said, "Yes; John's going to be all right." Among her many other fine qualities, she is also tough.

Then I turned and went back to the small white room where Lyndon was. Mr. Kilduff and Kenny O'Donnell were coming and going. I think it was from Kenny's face and Kenny's voice that I first heard the words, "The President is dead." Mr. Kilduff entered and said to Lyndon, "Mr. President."

It was decided that we would go immediately to the airport. Quick plans were made about how to get to the car, who to ride in what. It was Lyndon who said we should go to the plane in unmarked cars. Getting out of the hospital into the cars was one of the swiftest walks I have ever made. We got in. Lyndon said to stop the sirens. We drove along as fast as we could. I looked up at a building and there already was a flag at half-mast. I think that is when the enormity of what had happened first struck me. . . .

Mrs. Kennedy had arrived by this time and the coffin, and there—in the very narrow confines of the plane with Jackie on his left with her hair falling in her face, but very composed, and then, Lyndon, and I was on his right, Judge Hughes with the Bible in front of her and a cluster of Secret Service people and Congressmen we had known for a long time—Lyndon took the oak of office. . . .

And then Police Chief Curry, of Dallas, came on the plane and said to Mrs. Kennedy, "Mrs. Kennedy, believe me, we did everything we possibly could."

We all sat around the plane. . . .I went in to see Mrs. Kennedy and, though it was a very hard thing to do, she made it as easy as possible. She said things like, "Oh, Lady Bird, it's good that we've always liked you two so much." She said, "Oh, what if I had not been there? I'm so glad I was there." I looked at her. Mrs. Kennedy's dress was stained with blood. Her right glove was caked—that immaculate woman—it was caked with blood, her husband's blood. She always wore gloves like she was used to them. I never could. Somehow that was one of the most poignant sights—exquisitely dressed and caked in blood. I asked her if I couldn't get someone to help her change, and she said, "Oh, no. Perhaps later I'll ask Mary Gallagher, but not right now. . . ."

I tried to express something of how we felt. I said, "Oh, Mrs. Kennedy, you know we never even wanted to be Vice-President and now, dear God, it's come to this." I would have done anything to help her, but there was nothing I could do to help her.

The President: 'Unbelievable'

. . . I was sitting behind agent Youngblood; Mrs. Johnson was next to me; and Sen. Yarborough was on the left of the rear seat—that is, just behind the driver.

At first, as we left Love Field and proceeded through the less-populated areas, the crowds were thin. I recall, however, that Mrs. Johnson and I and Sen. Yarborough commented upon the good spirit and obvious good wishes of the crowd. As we drove closer to town, the crowds became quite large.

. . . After we had proceeded a short way down Elm Street, I heard a sharp report. The crowd at this point had become somewhat spotty. . . .

I was startled by the sharp report or explosion, but I had no time to speculate as to its origin because agent Youngblood turned in a flash, immediately after the first explosion, hitting me on the shoulder, and shouted to all of us in the back seat to get down. I was pushed down by agent Youngblood. Almost at the same moment in which he hit or pushed me, he vaulted over the back seat and sat on me. I was bent over under the weight of agent Youngblood's body, toward Mrs. Johnson and Sen. Yarborough.

I remember attempting to turn my head to make sure that Mrs. Johnson had bent down. Both she and Sen. Yarborough had crouched down at agent Youngblood's command.

At some time in this sequence of events, I heard other explosions. It was impossible for me to tell the direction from which the explosions came.

I felt the automobile sharply accelerate, and in a moment or so agent Youngblood released me. I ascertained that Mrs. Johnson and Sen. Yarborough were all right. I heard agent Youngblood speaking over his radio transmitter. I asked him what had happened. He said that he was not sure but that he had learned that the motorcade was going to the hospital.

I did not see anything that was going on in and around the President's automobile.

When we arrived at the hospital, agent Youngblood told me to get out of the car, go into the building, not to stop, and to stay close to him and the other agents. When the car came to a stop, a cordon of agents formed around me, and we walked rapidly into the hospital and then we went into a room there.

Because of the method which agent Youngblood directed for leaving the car and entering the hospital, I did not see the Presidential car or any of the persons in it.

In the hospital room to which Mrs. Johnson and I were taken the shades were drawn—I think by agent Youngblood. In addition to him, two or three other agents were there.

As I remember, we got our first specific report from Emory Roberts, one of the agents from the White House detail. He told us that President Kennedy had been very badly injured and that his condition was quote poor. He said that he thought we should make plans to get back to Washington immediately.

MAIL ROOM

I asked about Gov. Connally and was told that he, too, had been shot, but that his wound was not serious. I was told that Mrs. Kennedy and Mrs. Connally were uninjured and that no one else had been hurt.

Mrs. Johnson and I asked if we could see Mrs. Kennedy and Mrs. Connally. Agent Youngblood told me that I could not leave the room, and I followed his direction.

Mrs. Johnson was allowed to leave for this purpose.

At some time during these events, Kenneth O'Donnell, Congressman Jack Brooks, Congressman Homer Thornberry and Cliff Carter came into the room.

It was Ken O'Donnell who, at about 1:20 p. m., told us that the President had died. I think his precise words were, "He's gone." O'Donnell said that we should return to Washington and that we should take the President's plane for this purpose.

I found it hard to believe that this had happened. The whole thing seemed unreal—unbelievable. A few hours earlier I had breakfast with John Kennedy; he was alive, strong, vigorous. I could not believe now that he was dead. I was shocked and sickened.

When Mr. O'Donnell told us to get on the plane and go back to Washington, I asked about Mrs. Kennedy. O'Donnell told me that Mrs. Kennedy would not leave the hospital without the President's body, and urged again that we go ahead and take Air Force I and return to Washington.

I did not want to go and leave Mrs. Kennedy in this situation. I said so, but I agreed that we would board the airplane and wait until Mrs. Kennedy and the President's body were brought aboard the plane.

It is, of course, difficult to convey an accurate impression of the period of time that we were in the hospital room. We were all stunned. I suppose we were in a state of shock, and there was no time for the shock to wear off sufficiently so that the magnitude of our personal loss of this great man and good friend could express itself in words or in surface feelings. . . .

Despite my awareness of the reasons for Mr. O'Donnell's insistence . . . I was determined that we would not return until Mrs. Kennedy was ready and that we would carry the President's body back with us if she wanted.

We left the room and were ushered by a cordon of agents to cars which were awaiting us. At agent Youngblood's insistence, I entered one car and Mrs. Johnson another.

When we got to the airport . . . we were ushered into the private quarters of the President's plane. It didn't seem right for John Kennedy not to be there. I told someone that we preferred for Mrs. Kennedy to use these quarters.

Shortly after we boarded the plane, I called Robert Kennedy, the President's brother and the Attorney General. I knew how grief-stricken he was, and I wanted to say something that would comfort him. Despite his shock, he discussed the practical problems at hand—problems of special urgency because we did not at that time have any information as to the motivation of the assassination or its possible implications. The Attorney General said that he would like to look into the matter of whether the oath of office as President should be administered to me immediately or after we returned to Washington and that he would call back.

I thereafter talked with McGeorge Bundy and Walter Jenkins, both of whom urged that the return to Washington should not be delayed. I told them I was waiting for Mrs. Kennedy and for the President's body to be placed on the plane and would not return prior to that time.

As I remember, our conversation was interrupted to allow the Attorney General to come back on the line. He said that the oath should be administered to me immediately, before taking off for Washington, and that it should be administered by a judicial officer of the United States. Shortly thereafter, the Deputy Attorney General, Mr. Katzenbach, dictated the form of oath to one of the secretaries aboard the plane.

I thought of Sarah Hughes, an old friend who is judge of the U. S. District Court in Dallas. We telephoned Judge Hughes' office. She was not there, but she returned the call in a few minutes and said she would be at the airplane in 10 minutes. I asked that arrangements be made to permit her to have access to the airplane.

A few minutes later Mrs. Kennedy and the President's coffin arrived. Mrs. Johnson and I spoke to her. We tried to comfort her, but our words seemed inadequate. She went into the private quarters of the plane. I estimate that Mrs. Kennedy and the coffin arrived about a half hour after we entered the plane—just after 2 o'clock.

About a half hour later I asked some one to find out if Mrs. Kennedy would stand with us during the administration of the oath. Mrs. Johnson went back to be with her. Mrs. Kennedy came and stood with us during the moments that the oath was being administered.

I shall never forget her bravery, nobility and dignity.

I'm told that the oath was administered at 2:40 p. m. Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Kennedy were at my side as Judge Hughes administered the oath of office.

Mrs. Kennedy: 'Oh, No, No, No'

The Chairman: The commission will be in order.

Mrs. Kennedy, the commission would just like to have you say in your own words, in your own way, what happened at the time of the assassination of the President. Mr. Rankin will ask you a few questions, just from the time you left the airport until the time you started for the hospital. And we want it to be brief. We want it to be in your own words, and want you to say anything that you feel is appropriate to that occasion.

Mr. Rankin: Can you go back to the time that you came to Love Field on Nov. 22 and describe what happened there after you landed in the plane?

Mrs. Kennedy: We got off the plane. The then Vice-President and Mrs. Johnson were there. They gave us flowers. And then the car was waiting, but there was a big crowd there, all yelling, with banners and everything. And we went to shake hands with them. It was a very hot day. And you went all along a long line. I tried to stay clost to my husband and lots of times you get pushed away, you know, people leaning over and pulling your hand. They were very friendly.

And, finally, I don't know how we got back to the car. I think Congressman Thomas somehow was helping me. There was lots of confusion.

Mr. Rankin: Then you did get into the car. And you sat on the left side of the car, did you, and your husband on your right?

Mrs. Kennedy: Yes.

Mr. Rankin: And then did you start off on the parade route?

Mrs. Kennedy: Yes. It was rather scattered going in. Once there was a crowd of people with a sign saying something like "President Kennedy, please get out and shake our hands, our neighbors said you wouldn't." And he stopped and got out. That was, you know, like a little suburb and there were not many crowds. But then the crowds got bigger as you went in.

Mr. Rankin: And you waved to them and proceeded down the street with the motorcade?

Mrs. Kennedy: Yes. And in the motorcade, you know, I usually would be waving mostly to the left side and he was waving mostly to the right, which is one reason you are not looking at each other very much. And it was terribly hot. Just blinding all of us.

Mr. Rankin: Now, do you remember as you turned off of the main street on to Houston Street?

Mrs. Kennedy: I don't know the name of the street.

Mr. Rankin: That is that one block before you get to the Depository Building.

Mrs. Kennedy: Well, I remember wherever it was, Mrs. Connally said, "We will soon be there." We could see a tunnel in front of us. Everything was really slow then. And I remember thinking it would be so cool under that tunnel.

Mr. Rankin: And then do you remember as you turned off of Houston on to Elm right by the Depository Building?

Mrs. Kennedy: Well, I don't know th names of the streets, but I suppose right by the Depository is what you are talking about? Well, that is when she said to President Kennedy, "You certainly can't say that the people of Dallas haven't given you a nice welcome."

Mr. Rankin: What did he say?

Mrs. Kennedy: I think he said—I don't know if I remember it or I have read it, "No, you certainly can't," or something. And you know then the car was very slow and there weren't very many people around. And then——. Do you want me to tell you what happened?

Mr. Rankin: Yes; If you would please.

Mrs. Kennedy: You know, there is always noise in a motorcade and there are always motorcycles besides us, a lot of them backfiring. So, I was looking to the left. I guess there was a noise, but it didn't seem like any different noise really because there is so much noise, motorcycles and things. But then suddenly Governor Connally was yelling, "Oh, no, no, no."

Mr. Rankin: Did he turn toward you?

Mrs. Kennedy: No; I was looking this way, to the left, and I heard these terrible noises. You know. And my husband never made any sound. So I turned to the right. And all I remember is seeing my husband, he had this sort of quizzical look on his face, and his hand was up, it must have been his left hand. And just as I turned and looked at him, I could see a piece of his skull and I remember it was flesh colored. I remember thinking he just looked as if he had a slight headache. And I just remember seeing that. No blood or anything.

And then he sort of did this (indicating), put his hand to his forehead and fell in my lap.

And then I just remember falling on him and saying, "Oh, no, no, no," I mean, "Oh, my God, they have shot my husband." And "I love you, Jack," I remember I was shouting. And just being down in the car with his head in my lap. And it just seemed an eternity.

You know, then, there were pictures later on of me climbing out the back. But I don't remember that at all.

Mr. Rankin: Do you remember Mr. Hill coming to try to help on the car?

Mrs. Kennedy: I don't remember anything. I was just down like that.

And finally I remember a voice behind me, or something, and then I remember the people in the front seat, or somebody, finally knew something was wrong, and a voice yelling, which must have been Mr. Hill, "Get to the hospital," or maybe it was Mr. Kellerman, in the front seat. But someone yelling. I was just down and holding him. (Reference to wounds deleted.)

Mr. Rankin: Do you have any recollection of whether there were one or more shots?

Mrs. Kennedy: Well, there must have been two because the one that made me turn around was Governor Connally yelling. And it used to confuse me because first I remember there were three and I used to think my husband didn't make any sound when he was shot. And Governor Connally screamed. And then I read the other day that it was the same shot that hit them both. But I used to think if I only had been looking to the right I would have seen the first shot hit him, then I could have pulled him down, and then the second shot would not have hit him. But I heard Governor Connally yelling and that made me turn around, and as I turned to the right my husband was doing this (indicating with hand at neck). He was receiving a bullet. And those are the only two I remember.

And I read there was a third shot. But I don't know. Just those two.

Mr. Rankin: Do you have any recollection generally of the speed that you were going, not any precise amount.

Mrs. Kennedy: We were really slowing turning the corner. And there were very few people.

Mr. Rankin: And did you stop at any time after the shots, or proceed about the same way?

Mrs. Kennedy: I don't know, because—I don't think we stopped. But there was such confusion. And I was down in the car and every one was yelling to get to the hospital and you could hear them on the radio, and then suddenly I remember a sensation of enormous speed, which must have been when we took off.

Mr. Rankin: And then from there you proceeded as rapidly as possible to the hospital. Do you recall any one saying anything else during the time of the shooting?

Mrs. Kennedy: No; there weren't any words. There was just Governor Connally's. And then I suppose Mrs. Connally was sort of crying and covering her husband. But I don't remember any words.

And there was a big windshield between—you know—I think. Isn't there?

Mr. Rankin: Between the seats.

Mrs. Kennedy: So you know, those poor men in the front, you couldn't hear them.

Mr. Rankin: Can you think of anything more?

The chairman: No; I think not. I think that is the story and that is what we came for. We thank you very much, Mrs. Kennedy.

(PRESIDENTIAL SAFETY)

WASHINGTON--SECRET SERVICE CHIEF JAMES J. ROWLEY BELIEVES HIS AGENTS COULD NOT HAVE PREVENTED THE ASSASSINATION OF JOHN F. KENNEDY EVEN IF SOME OF THEM HAD NOT STAYED UP DRINKING INTO THE EARLY HOURS OF NOV. 22 LAST YEAR.

ROWLEY WAS QUESTIONED CLOSELY BY THE WARREN COMMISSION MEMBERS ABOUT THE CONDUCT OF THE SECRET SERVICE AGENTS ASSIGNED TO PROTECT THE PRESIDENT ON HIS TEXAS TRIP. CHIEF JUSTICE EARL WARREN WAS PARTICULARLY CRITICAL.

ROWLEY, IN COMMISSION TESTIMONY JUST MADE PUBLIC, SAID NINE AGENTS HAD NOT EATEN ALL DAY AND HAD GONE TO THE FORT WORTH PRESS CLUB WITH THE UNDERSTANDING THEIR WOULD BE A BUFFET THERE. WHEN THEY FOUND THEIR INFORMATION WAS WRONG, ROWLEY SAID, SOME OF THEM STAYED FOR A DRINK.

"THREE, I THINK, HAD ONE SCOTCH, AND ANOTHER HAD TWO OR THREE YEERS," HE SAID.

ROWLEY SAID SOME OF THE AGENTS WENT TO A COFFEE HOUSE KNOWN AS THE CELLAR. HE SAID NO LIQUOR WAS SERVED THERE AND HE BELIEVED THE AGENTS WERE MOTIVATED BY CURIOSITY "BECAUSE THIS WAS SORT OF A BEATNIK PLACE WHERE SOMEONE GETS UP AND RECITES OR PLAYS THE GUITAR."

THE SECRET SERVICE CHIEF SAID NONE OF THE AGENTS WAS DISCIPLINED ALTHOUGH TECHNICALLY THEY VIOLATED A REGULATION PUNISHABLE BY DISMISSAL.

"I FELT THAT THESE MEN, BY THEIR CONDUCT, HAD NO BEARING ON THE ASSASSINATION OF THE PRESIDENT IN DALLAS," ROWLEY SAID. "THAT TO INSTITUTE FORMAL PUNISHMENT OR DISCIPLINARY ACTION WOULD INEVITABLY LEAD THE PUBLIC TO CONCLUDE THAT THEY WERE RESPONSIBLE FOR THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY.

"I DID NOT THINK IN THE LIGHT OF HISTORY THAT THEY SHOULD BE STIGMATIZED WITH SOMETHING LIKE THAT, OR THEIR FAMILIES OR CHILDREN."

THE COMMISSION FINALLY CONCLUDED THAT THE AGENTS INVOLVED ACTED IN THE HIGHEST TRADITIONS OF THE SERVICE DURING THE FATEFUL EVENTS THAT FOLLOWED.

Russia, Cuba Had No Part, Rusk Says

Secretary of State Dean Rusk told the Warren Commission that the "Gravest issues of war and peace" were raised by President Kennedy's asassination, but the evidence completely absolved both the Soviet Union and Cuba of any part in the shooting.

Rusk said that one of the "great questions" in his mind when he learned of the assassination was: "Could some foreign government somehow be involved in such an episode?"

"I realized that were this so, this would raise the gravest issues of war and peace, but that nevertheless it was important to try to get at the truth—to the answer to that question—wherever that truth might lead."

After a full inquiry, Rusk said, "I have not seen or heard of any scrap of evidence indicating that the Soviet Union had any desire to eliminate President Kennedy nor in any way participated in such an event."

"It has not been our impression that madness has characterized the actions of the Soviet leadership in recent years. I think also that it is relevant that people behind the Iron Curtain, including people in the Soviet Union and including officials in the Soviet Union, seemed to be deeply affected by the death of President Kennedy."

Rusk also absolved Cuba of responsibility for the assassination.

"I would think that objective considerations would mean that it would be even greater madness for (Fidel) Castro or his government to be involved in any such enterprise than almost for anyone else, because literally the issue of war and peace would mean the issue of the existence of regime and perhaps of his county might have been involved in that question," Rusk said.

(WARREN REPORT)

WASHINGTON--THERE IS NO ROYAL TASTER AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

THIS WAS REVEALED IN TESTIMONY MADE PUBLIC BY THE WARREN COMMISSION WHICH QUESTIONED ROBERT INMAN BOUCK, 49, HEAD OF THE PROTECTIVE RESEARCH SECTION OF THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT. THE PANEL HEARD BOUCK IN CONNECTION WITH ITS LENGTHY INVESTIGATION OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY'S ASSASSINATION.

HIS JOB IS TO OVERSEE THE HANDLING OF FOOD, GIFTS, MAIL AND PERSONS WHO HAVE DEALINGS AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

MEMBERS OF THE COMMISSION OBVIOUSLY WERE FASCINATED WITH BOUCK'S TESTIMONY.

"HAVE YOU HAD ANY POISONED FOODS?" ASKED JOHN J. MCCLOY, A MEMBER OF THE COMMISSION.

"WE THINK NOT AT THE WHITE HOUSE, BUT THIS WE ARE ALWAYS WATCHING FOR," BOUCK REPLIED. "WE HAVE SOME FOOD THAT WE THINK SANITATION-WISE IS VERY BAD, IT SMELLS BAD, IT LOOKS BAD, SOME HAS SPOILED AND SOME HAS BEEN PREPARED UNDER VERY BAD CONDITIONS, BUT WE KNOW OF NO ACTUAL CASE OF INTENDED POISON."

"YOU DON'T HAVE A ROYAL TASTER, DO YOU?" MCCLOY ASKED, REFERRING TO ANCIENT CUSTOM OF PROTECTING A KING'S LIFE BY HAVING A "TASTER" CHECK HIS FOOD FOR POISON.

BOUCK ASSURED HIM THAT SUCH AN EMPLOYE IS CONSIDERED UNNECESSARY.

"WE FIND OUT FROM THE WHITE HOUSE WHERE THEY WOULD LIKE TO BUY, WE CHECK ON THE EMPLOYES OF THESE ESTABLISHMENTS EVERY SIX MONTHS, WE CHECK ON THE PROCEDURES BY WHICH IT IS HANDLED AND WE CHECK ON THE SOURCES OF THEIR FOOD, WHERE THEY GET THE RAW MATERIALS," HE EXPLAINED.

BOUCK ALSO SAID HIS STAFF WATCHES THE WHITE HOUSE CAREFULLY FOR "BUGGING DEVICES" WHICH COULD BE INSTALLED BY ENEMY AGENTS. HE SAID THERE HAS NEVER BEEN ANY TROUBLE WITH SUCH ELECTRONIC EQUIPMENT.

BOUCK ALSO SAID THERE NEVER HAS BEEN A BOMB LOCATED IN THE WHITE HOUSE.

"I AM HAPPY TO SAY, WE HAVE HAD MANY SCARES BUT WE HAVE NOT HAD THE REAL THING," BOUCK TOLD THE COMMISSION.

THE COMMISSION QUESTIONED BOUCK IN AN EFFORT TO LEARN WHAT FURTHER PRECAUTIONS CAN BE TAKEN TO INSURE THE PRESIDENT'S SAFETY.

Rowley Backs His Agents

Secret Service Chief James J. Rowley has admitted that some of his men violated regulations when they took off-duty drinks the night before President Kennedy was assassinated, but he insisted to the Warren Commission that their night out had no bearing on the assassination.

Rowley defended his men when he testified before the Warren Commission in June.

On the basis of a detailed investigation, he said, he was confident that the agents performed in a most satisfactory manner and "there was nothing deficient in their actions or their alertness."

The Secret Service chief was questioned extensively about a visit some of the agents made to the Fort Worth Press Club and to a beatnik establishment known as The Cellar. The morning after this expedition, President Kennedy left Fort Worth for Dallas.

Chief Justice Earl Warren commented that the day after their late night, the agents were supposed to be alert to anything that might occur along the line of march.

"Don't you think that they would have been much more alert, sharper, had they not been doing these things?" the chief justice asked.

"Yes, sir," Rowley replied, "but I don't believe that they could have prevented the assassination."

WASHINGTON--THE FBI BELIEVES IT CANNOT PLACE SECURITY AS SUCH ABOVE THE RIGHTS OF THE INDIVIDUAL.

THIS WAS THE BURDEN OF A STATEMENT MADE TO THE WARREN COMMISSION BY ALAN H. BELMONT, IN CHARGE OF ALL FBI INVESTIGATIVE WORK.

BELMONT GAVE THIS OUTLINE TO THE COMMISSION OF HOW HIS AGENCY FEELS ABOUT ITS RESPONSIBILITIES:

"OUR ACTIVITIES ARE DIRECTED TO MEET THE TERRIFIC RESPONSIBILITY WE HAVE FOR THE INTERNAL SECURITY OF THE COUNTRY, BUT TO MEET IT UNDER THE LAW. WE FEEL THAT TO PLACE SECURITY AS SUCH ABOVE THE RIGHTS OF THE INDIVIDUAL OR TO INCREASE THESE CONTROLS BEYOND WHAT IS ABSOLUTELY ESSENTIAL IS THE FIRST STEP TOWARD THE DESTRUCTION OF THIS FREE SOCIETY THAT WE ENJOY.

"WE HAVE BEEN ASKED MANY TIMES WHY WE DON'T PICK UP AND JAIL ALL COMMUNISTS. THE VERY PEOPLE WHO ASK THOSE QUESTIONS DON'T REALIZE THAT IF ACTION, UNRESTRAINED ACION, IS TAKEN AGAINST A PARTICULAR GROUP OF PEOPLE, A PRECEDENT IS SET WHICH CAN BE SEIZED ON IN THE FUTURE BY POWER-HUNGRY OR UNSCRUPULOUS AUTHORITIES AS A PRECEDENT, AND WHICH INEVITABLY WILL GNAW AWAY AT THIS FREE SOCIETY WE HAVE, AND SOONER OR LATER WILL BE APPLIED TO THE VERY INDIVIDUALS WHO ARE SEEKING THIS ACTION."

Rips Warren Paper as 'Soft' on Reds

The Warren commission's report on President Kennedy's assassination "failed to realistically evaluate the known facts concerning the involvement with communism and the soviet secret police of the purported slayer, Lee Harvey Oswald," a member of Congress said last night.

Speaking on the radio forum conducted by Clarence E. Manion, author, lawyer and constitutional authority, Rep. John R. Pillion [R., N. Y.] declared that the commission chose to "gloss-over" and to avoid Oswald's long record of pro-communism.

Cites His Statement

"I stated to the commission," Pillion continued, "that its report would, in effect, constitute a 'whitewash' if the soviet-dominated world communist apparatus was not identified as the prime motivating factor in Oswald's assassination of President Kennedy. [But] the commission was bound to conform to the state department's policies not to create any hostility toward the soviet or toward communist infiltrations or subversions.

"Oswald was first inculcated with communism in New York City at age 15. At age 17, he joined the marine corps, where he brazenly expressed his admiration for the soviet and the communist life. It is a disgrace to our military forces that a boy sworn to defend this nation would become an admitted and confirmed Communist, without our marine corps officers even recognizing it."

Goes to Russia

After his discharge, Oswald went to Russia, Pillion said, where he sought out and became associated with the soviet secret police. He denounced the United States and was given "a sham cover job" in an electronics plant in Minsk where his pay was more than that of the plant manager, the chief of 5,000 employees.

Oswald's Russian wife, Marina, was a member of the komsomol, "which is the training organization for the soviet's young communist party members," the congressman said. Her uncle was a colonel in the MVD, a branch of soviet intelligence.

"After 2½ years in the soviet, Oswald returned to the United States about June, 1962," Pillion said. "From that period to the time of his assassination of President Kennedy, Oswald was preoccupied with communism. By this time, he was a cold professional killer associated with the soviet apparatus. The Warren commission deliberately avoided assigning the least bit of culpability to the soviet and to communism as the decisive factors motivating Oswald's crimes."

THE LEGACY OF GRIEF

The Warren Report, a masterly state paper, poses issues beyond the dire facts

REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT'S COMMISSION ON THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY. Illustrated. Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C. 888 pp. $3.25; paperback, $2.50.

OSWALD: ASSASSIN OR FALL GUY? By Joachim Joesten. Illustrated. Marzani and Munsell. 158 pp. $3.95.

DALLAS JUSTICE: The Real Story of Jack Ruby and His Trial. By Melvin M. Belli with Maurice C. Carroll. McKay. 298 pp. $5.50.

The murder of President Kennedy one year ago today is one of those rare public events—like Pearl Harbor, for example—which are also major occurrences in our private lives. They touch our consciousness so directly that we recall forever where we were, and what we were doing, when the news came.

Among the memories of those days, none is more vivid to me than the emptiness of streets during the hours of the funeral on Monday, while the people became a single congregation, united through television in mourning the President who so poignantly symbolized so many hopes.

The unique power of television had other consequences, good and bad. The world was literally flooded with reports of events and rumors of events, some of which the journalists helped to create. For journalism in all its forms, but particularly in its newest guise of television, was part of the news, and not simply the medium through which the news was transmitted. It brought unforgettably before us the vision of grief. And the nation stirred as it watched sad men gravely restoring a sense of rational order to a society shaken by the thunder of the irrational. But the new dimensions of journalism also put the institutions of order —and particularly those of the law—under novel strain. The intensity of that pressure was an important factor in the chain of accidents which gave Jack Ruby's madness the occasion for its climax.

In its turn, Ruby's act denied society the catharsis, and the emotional protection, of a public trial for Oswald.

With its ancient and familiar rules, and its ritual formality, a public trial serves many needs. It helps to discharge intense feelings, or at least confines them to safe channels. Through a trial, society expresses its deference to the moral code embodied in the law, and its desire for primitive revenge—still a fundamental element in the criminal law, although we are sometimes ashamed to admit it. It helps to reassure us that evil is truly exorcised, if only by locking up poor Caliban. At the same time, a trial minimizes our anxiety about the risk of punishing the innocent, for the customs of the law are supposed to guarantee that no one be convicted unless found guilty "beyond peradventure of doubt."

The trial has other functions. It establishes an official record of the "facts" about an event which may be one of great general concern. Its atmosphere shapes public opinion about the issues implicit in the drama of the courtroom. The trials of Dreyfus, for example, and of Warren Hastings had far-reaching social and political effects. A trial is also, inevitably, a link in the chain of law. Public dissatisfaction about the conduct of the Sacco-Vanzetti case, to take one famous instance, opened the door to Justice Sutherland's opinion for the Supreme Court in the Scottsboro case in 1932, and thus to the majestic modern development of the Fourteenth Amendment as a code of national duties governing the way in which the states exercise their rights in the field of criminal law and criminal law administration.

The public trial must be viewed in other perspectives as well. It is, after all, the ultimate guarantee of human liberty. The act of arresting anyone threatens everyone. Men have always understood the inner meaning of Churchill's remark that habeas corpus was the crucial distinction between civilization and tyranny. Certainly the theme of his comment is burned deep in the collective mind of this age, which knows despotism so intimately and in so many aspects. The Great Writ of habeas corpus promises every man accused of crime, however solitary or degraded, an open trial, carried on under rules that protect his dignity and integrity, and those of society as well. He cannot be tortured, nor, in our tradition, forced to testify against himself. He can be represented by counsel; hear and challenge the evidence against him; offer evidence in his own defense; and have the advantage of some kind of appeal, to make sure that his trial conformed to the rules of law.

These rules exist not only to fulfill our sense of the uniqueness and worth of the individual human being; they exist, and evolve, also to express our sense of the quality of the society as a community aspiring to govern itself humanely, and without cruelty.

Many of the tensions normally dealt with and mediated by a trial appeared in acute form after Lee Harvey Oswald's murder. Without the confrontations of a trial, rumor ran almost unchecked, disturbing opinion and even the authority of the state. As the Warren Commission observes, "the events of these two days were witnessed with shock and disbelief by a nation grieving the loss of its young leader." The basic sobriety and good sense of American opinion soon dominated the atmosphere, however, as the nation rallied to its new President. So far as the murder of President Kennedy was concerned, there was tentative acceptance of the hypothesis that what appeared to have happened actually did happen: that Oswald and Ruby had acted alone, motivated by heaven knows what private lunacies. No mobs sacked the offices of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee, or demonstrated in front of the Soviet Embassy. But there was a strong and persistent undercurrent of doubt. The uneasy possibility that Oswald and Ruby were agents of one or another branch of the Communist movement troubled many minds. Others were convinced that they represented plotters of the extreme Right. One fantasist surmised that a master-mind in the oil industry had murdered Mattei, the head of the Italian state oil monopoly (who died in a plane crash several years ago), as well as President Kennedy.

There was, as always, resistance to the thought that senselessness could play so large a role in human life. People insisted on clinging to the more familiar modern view that events must have "rational" causes, and "rational" meanings, even when this led them to the irrational conviction that some nameless "They" in the background pulled strings while puppets danced. In Cairo, it was taken for granted that the Zionists had murdered President Kennedy, through their tools, the Communist bankers of Wall Street. Moscow understood that a conspiracy of war-mongering monopolists had ordered the President killed, and his assassin silenced, to prevent a detente, and a decline in munitions orders. France, naturally, was a center of imaginative speculation, which advanced one idea after another, all being deemed plausible except the possibility that the two murders were in fact what they seemed to be—acts of blind fate, without cause or purpose. And in England Bertrand Russell led a band of protesters, who were sure that no one who believed in fair play for Castro, and had gone to the Soviet Union to live, could possibly have been guilty of the crime.

Such opinions were as common at home as they were abroad. A public opinion poll reported that more than half the American people believed that Oswald was part of some kind of plot or gang, and had not acted alone.

Other aspects of the tragedy in Dallas gave rise to concern, and to shame—reports of laxity or worse in the Secret Service and the F.B.I., for example, and the visibly low caliber of the Texas officials who appeared on television so often during the final week of November, 1963, and then later during the trial of Ruby.

The polity needed—and needed badly—an emotionally and intellectually satisfying substitute for a trial. President Johnson acted surely to organize an inquest into the circumstances of the President's murder. He persuaded Congressional leaders to give up their plans for Congressional committee enquiries and to support his proposal for a Presidential Commission of commanding eminence. Within a week the members of the Commission had agreed to serve, and an Executive order was issued establishing the body and stating broad and independent terms of reference: "to satisfy itself that the truth is known so far as it can be discovered, and to report its findings" to the President, to the American people and to the world. Two weeks later Congress passed a Joint Resolution empowering the Commission to compel testimony, and otherwise supporting its mission.

The members of the Commission, and of its senior staff, are men whose names are rightly taken everywhere to guarantee the probity of their work. For all the earthy vigor and the violent vocabulary of our public life, we have always been willing to put the sport of political warfare aside when serious national concerns required it. At such moments, except for a small group of true ideologues, the exuberant political gladiators discover that their most fundamental loyalties are to the nation, not to their parties, or even to their political principles. Whatever they may have said in the heat of battle, in fact they trust the leaders of the opposition as fellow-members of the same tribe.

So it proved to be in the make-up of the Commission on the Assassination of President John F. Kennedy. The Chief Justice, who has resolutely opposed the old practice of having Supreme Court Justices preside occasionally over public enquiries, yielded to the evident emergency. Senator Russell, a weighty leader of the Senate, whose handling of the MacArthur investigation had the hallmark of political genius, sat beside the libertarian Chief Justice, whose powerful role in the development of our Constitutional Law of Civil Rights is widely cursed in Georgia. There could be no more powerful demonstration of President Johnson's effort to achieve national unity than the partnership of these two.

Senator Cooper and Congressmen Boggs and Ford are among the solid men of the two houses, accepted in Washington and in the country as serious, careful and conscientious, incapable of narrow partisanship where great affairs are in issue. Both Allen Dulles and John McCloy are New York lawyers in the tradition of Stimson and Root — men who have devoted large fractions of their lives to the public service, and earned their high repute through work of genuine distinction. Five of the seven members of the Commission are Republicans, as is the General Counsel — Lee Rankin, former Solicitor General of the United States, and an excellent lawyer — and most of the senior members of the legal staff, who are equally men of outstanding professional reputation, like Albert Jenner, Francis Adams, William Coleman and Norman Redlich.

The Commission and its staff carried out an exhaustive program of enquiry. They directed investigations by personnel of the F. B. I. and of the Secret Service, and by trained employees of other government departments. Reports were received from agencies of the State of Texas, and from abroad. The Commission conducted some investigations of its own. Oral testimony was received from 489 persons, 94 of whom appeared before members of the Commission, the rest before staff members; 63 other persons supplied written statements. Elaborate tests were made, and inspections carried out, both in Texas and elsewhere, to verify various hypotheses about the circumstances of the murder.

The present report, of 469 closely printed pages in the official government version, with 17 appendices, and some 60 pages of footnote references, will be followed by 25 or 27 comparable volumes of evidence.

The Report is a masterly and convincing state paper. It has the high polish of legal writing at its best, carefully composed, terse, restrained and meticulous. In a detached and judicious tone, it deals with every feature of the case, discussing and evaluating the evidence at length to explain the basis for the conclusions the Commission reached, and their rejection of the various contrary theories which had been advanced.

As is universally known by now, the Commission found that both the murder of the President and the murder of his assassin were the work of isolated men, not linked to each other or to any third persons, and that the broad outlines of the story which poured out of Dallas late in November, 1963, were correct. It is a remarkable tribute to the work of the police and other officials, the journalists, and the public at large, cooperating under circumstances of indescribable confusion, that only details required revision in the light of subsequent study. As always happens in a lawsuit, a few loose ends remain unexplained and inexplicable still—the number of shots fired at the President, for example.

But the basic original account of what happened in Dallas, fantastic as only reality can be fantastic, is now confirmed. An alienated, erratic man, with a long history of emotional disturbance, bought several guns, and used them, first to shoot at General Walker, and then to kill President Kennedy and Policeman Tippitt, and to wound Governor Connally. He was identified by eyewitnesses who saw him shooting both the President and the policeman. His Soviet wife, now a bizarre American celebrity, feared he was the murderer when she heard the news of the President's being shot, and went to see if his rifle had been moved from its hiding place. His actions and movements were demonstrably within the realm of physical possibility and corresponded to the various times at which the chief events took place.

The Commission concludes, after elaborate tests, that it would not take extraordinary skill to have fired three shots at the President from Oswald's position, with the rifle Oswald used, and within the time interval so curiously and exactly measured by the movie films three citizens happened to be taking of the President during the period of the murder. And it would take no more than passable skill to have fired two shots in the same time span. These observations are consistent with other tests of the same kind.

The President's wounds, and the Governor's, were compatible only with shots being fired from where Oswald was seen shooting. The Commission found no evidence of any kind to support the hypothesis of a second assassin shooting from in front of the President's car as it approached a railroad bridge: no holes in the windshield of the car, no wounds of entry in the front of either the President's body or the Governor's. Only those unfamiliar with the normal confusions of the process of proof, or those irrevocably committed to an a priori theory, will continue to be disturbed by the evidence presented in the Report on these fundamental factual ~~elements~~ of the case against ~~Oswald.~~

Oswald's murderer was also a man of the shadows, living at the margin of society and emotional stability. He was a grubby figure out of Guys and Dolls, to be found in any police court in any city of the world, hardly the man to cast himself as avenging angel for the murder of a President. Neither the Commission nor his lawyer, the redoubtable Melvin Belli, can suggest any even faintly plausible motive or explanation for what he did—"plausible," that is, if we start by assuming that human behavior must make sense in terms of some kind of calculus, felicific or otherwise.

The human quality of the Commission, and the inherent intellectual quality of its Report, will persuade most readers to accept its reconstruction of the event itself. The doubts and wild theories of the long period between the President's murder and the issuance of the Report are fading, although they will probably never disappear entirely. It is normal to find judges and lay students disagreeing over ordinary cases. It would hardly be remarkable with regard to a catastrophe of such intense meaning if people continued indefinitely to argue about the more esoteric details of the medical testimony, or the other evidence so painstakingly reviewed in the Warren Commission Report.

There is, of course, another class of critics altogether—those of completely closed mind and predetermined outlook. Like Joachim Joesten, they know before they read the Report that it is part of a conspiracy to conceal the facts, and to pin the blame on two pathetic "fall-guys," Oswald and Ruby. They start their analysis with a premise it is not admissible to examine: that the F.B.I., the Dallas police, and "the Interests" generally, including "the Establishment" of the press and the universities, are joined in a conspiracy to repress the facts. Thomas Buchanan, one of the most celebrated of those who have spun myths about the Kennedy murder, puts this point of view simply in Who Killed Kennedy?: "I do not believe this case is closed. I do not think it will be, until some more satisfying answer has been given to the question which aroused the world: Why was the President of the United States assassinated? I believe we do his memory no service in pretending no one but a lonely madman could have wished him dead. If this were so, his death would have no meaning. I believe he lived for something, and I think he died for something."

From this statement of faith in the implacable and here malevolent rationality of the universe, Buchanan and the school he typifies attempt to discredit the reasoning and conclusions of the Warren Commission. They comb over the evidence in the Report, repeating with only minor modifications the points they made earlier about the evidence as it had been reported in the newspapers a year ago. Their arguments seem neither startling nor disturbing, in the context of the Report and its patient, systematic effort to answer all these contentions, however preposterous. They do no more than repeat, with endless variations, that there must have been more to the story than the vulgar re-enactment of a plot from Camus or Dostoevsky, and they throw up one libelous theory after another, to hint at alternative and presumably more "satisfying" or "meaningful" explanations, in the now all too familiar style of the True Believer.

The present reviewer does not propose to summarize the Commission's findings as to the evidence, nor to review the bootless debate of the zealots. The Report of the Commission has been accurately recapitulated in many journals. It is an absorbing story, magnificently told. The full, taut text deserves the widest possible public. Nor is it proposed here to evaluate the Commission's findings systematically. That cannot be done professionally until the 27 volumes of evidence are published, and then probably not without separate confirmatory enquiries.

For the purpose of this review, it seems preferable to accept the Commission's reconstruction of the facts about the murder of President Kennedy, and to concentrate on the methods and procedures of the Commission, and on some of its recommendations, as well as on certain inferences which might be drawn from the entire experience about the future of police work and criminal law administration.

The Commission's first decisions concerned its own procedures. "The Commission has functioned neither as a court presiding over an adversary proceeding [the Report says] nor as a prosecutor determined to prove a case, but as a fact-finding agency committed to the ascertainment of the truth." The Report points out that the law knows no proceedings for posthumous criminal trials. And the Commission in its investigative work necessarily dealt with hearsay and other evidence that would not have been admissible in court.

Yet the Commission was obviously troubled by its decision to proceed privately. It allowed witnesses to elect an open rather than a closed hearing, and one witness did so elect on two occasions. The witnesses were, of course, allowed to have counsel present when they were questioned, and to object to questions.

The Commission's argument does not seem altogether persuasive. The central part of its task was precisely to determine who killed President Kennedy and under what circumstances. It seems unfortunate that the Commission did not treat this part of its work as something closely akin to a trial. Of course its staff and the men working with them were engaged in investigations and studies, not in the holding of judicial hearings. But in the end, on the central issues of Oswald's guilt, at least, it is regrettable that public hearings analogous to those of a trial were not held. For this aspect of the Commission's responsibility, the distinction between "a fact-finding agency" and a "court" seems more verbal than functional. A court, after all, is a fact-finding agency, too.

The Commission, responding to some of the critics of its procedure, did retain Judge Walter E. Craig, president of the American Bar Association, to assist in its work. He was not exactly the lawyer for Oswald and his family, although the Report says he was brought into the proceedings "in fairness to the alleged assassin and his family." His function was defined as that of participating in the investigation and advising the Commission whether in his opinion its proceedings "conformed to the basic principles of American justice." Judge Craig and his associates were active in the enterprise, reviewing the work of the staff, cross-examining witnesses, and suggesting the names of witnesses who should be called by the Commission.

This step, desirable and valuable as it was, was no substitute for the openness of a public trial. The ancient requirement that trials be open is a central rule of law as the ultimate barrier to tyranny. "Star Chamber" is a phrase to reckon with, after all, in our collective memories. Some of the rumors surrounding the murder of the President measure only the prevalence among us of personalities given to irrational and virulent suspicions. Men of this stripe can never be persuaded or silenced by evidence. But they would have a harder time corrupting the rest of opinion if the crucial facts had been legally sifted in the full light of day.

Of course the Commission's problem went far beyond the demonstration of Oswald's guilt. It had a more difficult task, as the event was to prove: that of showing that Oswald and Ruby were not connected with each other, nor with a larger group of plotters. Proving a negative is a little like squaring a circle. It would not have helped to start by saying that there was no conspiracy unless somebody sustained the burden of proving that there was. The Commissioners had to convince not only themselves, but a skeptical, hard-bitten, and doubting world, which would never read the whole Report, and all 27 volumes of evidence. The Commission's analysis would have been more universally accepted, and less vulnerable to obscurantist attack, if it had been presented and debated in open sessions.

The Commission was severely and convincingly critical of the administrative and police arrangements for the protection of the President. There was petty bureaucratic feeling between the Secret Service and the F.B.I., and the coordination of both agencies with the local police seemed slipshod. Surely much can and should be done to improve the protective process.

But one hesitates about one of the fundamental lines of the Commission's suggestions—the building up of elaborate intelligence files about those deemed potential murderers, and the development of procedures of "preventive protection" that might be used during Presidential visits, and presumably on other occasions as well. If we knew more about ~~how to~~ distinguish potential ~~criminals~~ from everyone else, perhaps the ~~thought~~ of "protective research" and "preventive protection" on so vast a scale would inspire less concern. But, as the Commission recognizes:

". . . No set of meaningful criteria will yield the names of all potential assassins. Charles J. Guiteau, Leon F. Czolgosz, John Schrank, and Giuseppe Zangara—four assassins or would-be assassins—were all men who acted alone in their criminal acts against our leaders. None had a serious record of prior violence. Each of them was a failure in his work and in his relations with others, a victim of delusions and fancies which led to the conviction that society and its leaders had combined to thwart him. It will require every available resource of our government to devise a practical system which has any reasonable possibility of revealing such malcontents."

One can go further. The task is impossible, because "potentiality for violence" is not a criterion capable of legal definition, or any other kind of definition. And ~~systematic~~ and energetic attempts to use such a concept as the basis for widespread police action, including surveillance, short periods of arrest or detention on special charges, or on classic vagrancy charges, and other restrictions on the liberty of the malcontent and the maladjusted would raise grave questions of democratic and constitutional principle. After all, it is only 20 years since we herded the Japanese-Americans of the West Coast into concentration camps because we thought they had a special potentiality for treason.

The Report criticizes both the Dallas police department and the news media for the frantic pressures — and indeed, the near chaos — in the police building after the assassination of the President. It concludes that those pressures were responsible for the disorganization that allowed Ruby his opportunity. It hopes for the adoption of a code of conduct by the profession of journalism, but adds that "the burden of insuring that appropriate action is taken to establish ethical standards of conduct for the news media must also be borne . . . by state and local governments, by the bar, and ultimately by the public."

The trouble symbolized by the chaos in the Police Department of Dallas on November 22 and 23 runs very deep, and it will not be simply cured. Part of the problem derives from the fact that most state court judges and prosecutors are elected officials, or hope to become elected officials, and are in no position to resist the demands of the press for "cooperation." As the Report drily notes, "the police attitude towards the press was affected by the desire to maintain satisfactory relations with the news representatives and to create a favorable image of themselves."

The practice of electing judicial officers is an anomaly of great historic meaning. The colonists were suspicious of the Tory judges, for good reasons of bitter 18th-century experience with cases of criminal libel and other politically sensitive problems, as well as the ordinary course of criminal law. There is class feeling, and political feeling, behind the practice, which survives as a check on the professionalism and independence of the bench. On the other hand, the appointed United States judges have emerged over the years with higher prestige, and higher public regard, than their rivals in the state courts and in the administrative tribunals. It is time for reflective men concerned with the law to draw the true moral of the tragedy in Dallas and move towards higher standards of state criminal law administration by adopting the Federal model in the organization of state judicial systems.

The presence of the news media in the police buildings was not entirely a negative factor in the course of events, however. A Texas lawyer has said that in his 40 years of experience at the Texas bar, Oswald is to his knowledge the first man who was held overnight by the police, and did not confess. There are frequent references in the Report to the possibility of third-degree methods in the interrogation of Oswald, and the concern of the police to parade Oswald before the press to rebut such charges. Whether the Dallas police do in fact use such illegal and outrageous methods in interrogating suspects, everyone with any knowledge of American law enforcement is aware of the fact that the stringent rules of the Supreme Court on the subject have not yet entirely stamped out the practice.

The third-degree is only one facet of the broad issue represented by what happened in Dallas. After all, it would not have altered the problems of policy raised by the level of criminal procedure in Texas if Lee Harvey Oswald had been arrested on a Federal charge of insurrection (or conspiracy, for that matter) and taken to a Federal institution for a few days. President Taft said 60 years ago that the administration of criminal justice in the United States was a disgrace to a civilized country. The Wickersham Report, 30 years later, reached roughly the same conclusion. The work of the Supreme Court in raising the standards of due process of law in the state courts is one of the bright pages of our jurisprudence in the 20th century—an achievement of the common-law judicial process at its creative best.

But the function of the Supreme Court in this regard is to blaze the way. It cannot administer the law, nor accomplish basic reforms, save piecemeal, on a case-by-case approach. The experience of the President's murder, and its aftermath, suggest the desirability of a far more comprehensive attack on the shortcomings of our police practice and our criminal law. Is it not time for Congress to join the Supreme Court in affirmative action under the Fourteenth Amendment, as it has done in connection with Civil Rights, to give a large-scale impetus to the reform movement which the Court has led almost single-handedly for 30 active years?

Men will object to the idea of such action in the name of states' rights. The objection misconceives the nature of the Constitutional covenant. The articulation of national standards under the Fourteenth Amendment to govern the exercise of authority by the states does not deprive the states of constitutional or of political rights. It simply matches those rights with correlative duties—duties they owe, under our constitutional system, to "the people of the United States" whose Constitution it is. The Constitution is not a treaty among sovereign states, but an act of union of the people themselves, proceeding directly through constituent assemblies and conventions. The Constitution, enforced by the Supreme Court and other national agencies, is intended to keep state as well as national authorities within proper boundaries of power. And it is intended to establish appropriate criteria for the use of power by state as well as national officials.

In this setting, I suggest, we could hope that President Kennedy's tragic end might become a prod to progress we know to be long overdue. As part of a general movement to reform criminal law, Congress and the courts can hope to deal with many problems which press upon our consciences quite as much as the excesses of the press—much as those excesses threaten the possibility of a fair trial—or the absence of a statute making it a Federal crime to kill the President: the selection of juries, for example; the control of wiretapping and like offenses as a form of search and seizure; the availability of counsel; arraignment, bail, and a hundred other practices where our customs still widely justify President Taft's harsh verdict.

In every society, there is a gap between the actual and the ideal. For us, the gap has been great—in some areas so great as to suggest hypocrisy. But the ideal exerts a strong influence on the actual in American life, even though its pull is not uniformly strong, nor uniformly effective.

Among other themes, the Warren Commission Report deals with violence as a national custom, the violence of a frontier which has not quite disappeared; the violence of primitive layers of the national culture; the violence of the last few skirmishes of a Civil War which has, in fact, been a Hundred Years' War.

One aspect of the national reaction to President Kennedy's murder should not be allowed to fade—the sense in which Governor Connally and other Southern leaders so eloquently linked Oswald's act to the resurgence of modern "extremisms," with their atmosphere of bitter suspicion and its poisonous, implacable hatreds. Governor Connally stated the ultimate moral of the catastrophe with passion, in an interview from his hospital bed:

"The President of the U. S. . . . has been asked to do something in death that he could not do in life, that is, to shock and stun the nation, the people and the world about what is happening to us, about the cancerous growth that is being permitted to expand and enlarge upon the society in which we live, that breeds hatred and bigotry, and intolerance, indifference and lawlessness, and is an outward manifestation of what occurred in Dallas and could have occurred in any other city in America. . . .

". . . extremism on both sides is the genesis of our own self-destruction if we are ever going to be destroyed . . . we see it in the bombing of the five little children in Birmingham . . . fascism and extremism have become a fad, a fashionable fad, and this has to be destroyed.

"The memorial to President Kennedy," the Governor concluded, should be "to freedom of the individual in society under law and under God, where men respect each other notwithstanding their disagreements."

Death of a President, Vols. 2-27: Last of Warren Report Ready

By LESLIE H. WHITTEN

Hearst Headline Service Special to N. Y. Journal-American

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—The Warren Commission testimony, by a strange coincidence, is scheduled to be released within hours of the Nov. 22 anniversary of president Kennedy's murder.

A Nov. 23 date was tentatively set for publication of retailed testimony not contained in the commission report after the deadline of Nov. 15 was ruled out because it would mean three shifts a day at the Government Printing Office and heavy overtime expenses.

Only a presidential order could preserve the Nov. 15 deadline, a source on the operational end of the report said today, adding that even he Nov. 23 date might be optimistic.

Highlights of the 26 volumes—eight more than originally planned—will be the testimony of Jacqueline Kennedy, former Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy an dthe Secret Service men who were at the President's side when he was killed.

PORTION SEALED

The one-volume report—minus the testimony—was released Sept. 27.

A fractional amount of the material taken by the seven-man Warren Commission will not be released, it was learned today.

Amounting to well under one per cent of the total, this data will go directly to the National Archives under lock and key for release when it no longer poses a security risk.

This classified data does not bear directly on the President's death, and it woul reveal counter-espionage and other intelligence techniques used in foreign countries, presumably Mexico and possibly Russia. If released, it would also identify agents presently working under cover for the United States or friendly nations.

The data being withheld deals with investigations by the FBI, Central Intelligence Agency and other intelligence arms into the activities of Lee Harvard Oswald, the President's assassin. Oswald traveled in Mexico and lived in Russia.

The new volumes will have sequences from television newscasts, from home camera and still photograph series which were excluded as too bulky for the original single volume. Radio broadcasts — some of them interviews with the main characters in the tragedy — have been transcribed and will be excerpted in the new volumes.

A source who has seen the new volumes said there are no major facts in them that have not been summarized in the one-volume report. But much of the flavor of the testimony plus substantiation of the one-volume report's findings—more important from the historical point of view—are in the new volumes.

They, like the one-volume summary, will be available at the Government Printing Office after their release date. The White House, which will control the exact release date, plans to give reporters some "lead time" to digest the mass of material.

San Francisco, New York Meetings Hear Lane-Belli Debate on Oswald

Large audiences in both San Francisco and New York turned out to hear debates between Mark Lane and Melvin Belli on the Kennedy assassination.

Lane, a former New York state assemblyman, who was retained by Oswald's mother to represent her son before the Warren Commission, has dedicated himself to investigating the Dallas events of last November. He is an unsparing critic of the Commission's procedures and findings. Belli, a celebrated San Francisco attorney, was counsel for Jack Ruby, Oswald's slayer. He is a defender of the Warren Commission's Report.

The San Francisco debate took place Oct. 9 at the Masonic Auditorium with Jake Ehrlich, the noted criminal lawyer, as moderator. The 3,200-capacity hall was nearly sold out.

"Was Oswald the Lone Assassin?" was the title of the New York debate. It was held Oct. 19 at Manhattan Center with William M. Kunstler, the noted civil-rights attorney, as moderator. The 4,000-capacity hall was completely sold out and there were standees. Though both speakers were generously applauded, it was evident that the audience overwhelmingly favored Lane's arguments.

Lane declared that the Warren Report was really a prosecution case against Oswald and that no defense lawyer had been permitted at the secret hearings. He listed witnesses who had not been called before the Commission. He described testimony and evidence which called into question the direction from which the shots at Kennedy were fired, the location of the fatal wound, the identification of Oswald's alleged rifle and numerous other details of the Warren Commission findings.

Belli, too, likened the report to an indictment but declared that since in legal procedure grand-jury proceedings are secret and without defense counsel, the Warren Commission's refusal of counsel for Oswald was not amiss. He failed to discuss the fact that while a grand jury can only bring a charge, the Warren Commission had pronounced a verdict of guilty.

Obviously unequal to Lane in knowledge of the myriad factual details of the case, Belli's main arguments were 1) that Americans must have "faith" in the FBI, Secret Service, Dallas police and the eminent men who constituted the Warren Commission; and 2) Lane had no evidence of a conspiracy to kill Kennedy or that anyone other than Oswald had done it. To this Lane replied that while he had no evidence of a conspiracy that did not mean that there could not have been one.

Mark Lane

The day of the New York City debate, the Harris public-opinion poll released figures showing that a majority of the American people do not believe the Warren Report answered all the questions about the Kennedy assassination. Of those polled shortly after publication of the Report, 45% did not believe it told the full story; another 10% were unsure.

Compared with a similar poll taken before the issuance of the Report, the number convinced Oswald was the assassin rose from 76% to 87%; the number of those who believe him innocent dropped from 3% to 2%; while 11% are not sure as compared to a previous 21%.

Belief that Oswald had accomplices dropped from 40% to 31%, with 13% unsure. Those believing Oswald was the lone assassin numbered 56%.

Though the Harris Poll makes no mention of it, in almost every other country there is overwhelming disbelief in the official version of the assassination presented in the Warren Report.

BEHIND THE LINES

The big hot-cake scramble

For any enterprising publisher, the prospect was tantalizing: a can't-miss bestseller on the most topical subject of the last year—and with no need to pay the author the usual 15 per cent in royalties on the retail price or even to set the book in type.

The book, of course, was The Warren Commission Report, and since its contents were in the public domain, anyone who wanted to could put the 250,000-word report between book covers. Furthermore, since the Government Printing Office in Washington was, as an agency of the Federal government, printing the original version of the report, all any enterprising publisher had to do was photograph the GPO version the moment it was released and print it by the offset process, thereby eliminating high typesetting costs.

Thus, it seemed logical that big Doubleday & Co. should announce during the American Booksellers Association convention in Washington last June that it would start accepting sales orders for a hardback edition of the Warren report. Doubleday has a number of advantages over its biggest competitors. For one thing, it is the closest thing in the publishing world to a fully integrated company—it has its own printing plants, its own bookstores (31 in 23 cities) and its own book clubs (among them, Literary Guild, Dollar Book Club and Family Reading Club) whose total mailing list is reportedly well over 1 million. It also has a vigorous 70-man force of trade salesmen, distributed so that many of them live in the biggest book towns within their territory.

But the project looked so tempting that, as it turned out, there was no shortage of rivals. One business Doubleday is not in at the moment is the production of mass-market paperbacks (its distinguished Anchor line, a pioneer in the quality softcover field, publishes relatively few titles in such fields as well as a limited number of original works on special subjects). And the big paperback houses have advantages Doubleday lacks: they can print their books faster, sell them more cheaply and distribute them through tens of thousands of outlets (compared with just 2,500 or so stores that feature hardcover books around the country). So in the wake of the original Doubleday announcement, two paperback rivals entered the race—and, in collaboration with one of them, a formidable hardcover rival.

Most impressive contender was Bantam Books, which joined forces with The New York Times, whose assistant managing editor, Harrison E. Salisbury, contributed a commentary to the Bantam version, priced at $1. Bantam also allied itself with the Book-of-the-Month Club, which ordered 200,000 copies of the report, to be set from Bantam's galleys, as an extra book dividend for its members and as a free come-on for new members; 25,000 copies of the BOM print order were consigned to McGraw-Hill, which planned to bind them in a hardcover version for bookstore sales.

Two other menacing rivals also joined the jockeying. One was Popular Library, experienced at publishing paperback quickies like The Denning Report (five days in production) and a biography of President Johnson (from typewriter to bookstore in 14 days); Popular signed on veteran Washington reporter Robert J. Donovan, author of PT-109, to write an introduction and then pegged its price at 75c, lowest in the field. The other threat was The Associated Press, which announced late in the game that it planned to bring out a $1.50 hardcover edition of the report and market it through coupon ads in member AP papers. Since the sales price was less than half of the Doubleday and McGraw-Hill versions and since the AP was notably successful in its last publishing venture (4 million copies of The Torch

Has Passed, an account of the Kennedy assassination), this last threat was particularly troubling.

Doubleday, anticipating a stiff fight as the months wore on with no definite word on when the report would be made public, responded to the challenge by enlisting lawyer Louis Nizer to write an introduction and Pulitzer Prize-winning historian Bruce Catton to add an afterword. And in the face of the last-minute AP challenge, Doubleday decided not to retrench but to publish a de luxe, uncut $4.95 version that turned out to run 976 pages, with 32 pages of pictures. McGraw decided to price its version at $3.95.

On Friday morning, September 25, the White House released the Warren Report to the press, and the two paperback rivals went into a round-the-clock frenzy to rush their versions to newsstands and bookstores. Popular Library, mainly because it chose to bring out a "concise compendium" instead of the full report (dropping footnotes, appendices and most of the photographs), won the time race by selling its first copy at a Times Square bookstore at 6:31 p. m. Sunday, September 27—exactly one minute after the government's official release time to the public.

But the sales race has been another matter. Bantam's version, running 800 pages (the full text except for footnotes) and featuring 158 photographs, had 1.7 million copies in print by mid-October, with sales here and overseas approaching 1 million. Popular sold 300,000 copies the first week, topping the company's previous first-week record (held by To Kill a Mockingbird); by mid-October sales neared half a million.

In the hardcover race, the AP's 400-page version beat its rivals in timing. By October 2, just one week after the report was released, it began filling its 255,000 mail orders. Doubleday started moving its books to stores a week after the AP version hit the mails; Sam Vaughan, the Doubleday editor who dreamed the idea up, says he frankly doubts Doubleday will make money on its first run of 30,000, but between backlist sales and orders from fliers being sent to its book-club members, the company is likely to earn profits eventually. McGraw's version trailed its hardcover rivals into the stores by a few days. As for the U. S. Government's official version of the report, 40,000 copies were sold in Washington alone during the first four days it was available—so many that the GPO couldn't get to the 50,000 orders that had come in by mail.

In ballyhooing its version, Bantam had proudly announced that "a portion of the publisher's proceeds will be donated to the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library." Just how much that portion (to which McGraw-Hill will contribute, too) will be, Bantam isn't saying; all it says is that the donation will be a lump sum, not a percentage of the profits. It is difficult to say whether Bantam's announcement is the crowning vulgarity or the redeeming gesture of this publishing phenomenon which, while no doubt beneficial to the public, nevertheless has had a Barnum & Bailey aura about it from the start.

INSIDE WASHINGTON:

CIA Kept Vital Report From Warren Group

Scott

By ROBERT S. ALLEN and PAUL SCOTT

THE CENTRAL Intelligence Agency withheld vital intelligence information from the Warren Commission during its investigation of the assassination of President Kennedy. Despite the commission's written request for all documents that might shed light on the assassination, CIA authorities failed to turn over a national intelligence estimate warning that it is Kremlin policy to remove from public office by assassination Western officials who actively oppose Soviet policies.

Titled "Soviet Strategic Executive Action," the suppressed CIA document went into the shocking details of how agents of KGB, the Soviet secret police, are trained to do away with Western leaders, including officials in the U.S., and to make their deaths appear due to natural causes. One of the KGB's newly devised assassination weapons is "a pneumatically operated poison ice 'atomizer,' which leaves no wound or other evidence of the cause of death." While this deadly weapon has yet to be used against any high Western official, hundreds of KGB agents covertly operating outside of Russia have been supplied with this pocket-size gun, awaiting only orders from Moscow to use it.

HIGHLIGHTS of the suppressed intelligence estimate, which is locked in a security area within the tightly-guarded CIA, are as follows:

"It has been reported that the KGB endeavors to remove the threat to Soviet interests posed by certain members of Western governments, sometimes arranging for the dismissal of such persons from public office, at other times even having them "eliminated" physically.

"Such activities are known to be undertaken against other types of persons in the West, notably defectors from the U.S.S.R. and from other countries of the Soviet bloc.

"One recently reported assassination technique is to electrocute an individual by luring him to use a telephone, connected to a high-voltage wire, during a thunderstorm.

"Another involves the use of a pistol which projects a poison gas in liquid or compressed form. The gas is fatal within seconds and an autopsy would not reveal its use. Non-traceable poisons have been reported which do not take effect until several hours after being administered.

"A knowledgeable source has described a pneumatically operated poison ice 'atomizer' which leaves no wound or other evidence of the cause of death."

Congressional investigators, who have asked that the name of their committee be withheld for security reasons, report that CIA Director John McCone made no mention of this explosive document in his secret testimony before the Warren Commission.

WHILE McCone furnished the commission with the CIA's secret surveillance reports on Lee Harvey Oswald's eight days in Mexico City before the assassination, including details of Oswald's contact with the head KGB agent in the Soviet embassy there, the CIA chief gave no hint of the Kremlin's assassination policy.

Other U.S. intelligence experts, very dubious of Russia's co-existence line, stress that the Warren Commission's findings might have been different if this CIA estimate and other documents suppressed by the State Department had been available for study.

They point out that the State Department suppressed evidence linking Oswald with one of its employes, who, according to security files, "presented strong pro-Soviet views on every question that came up in the Department's U.S.S.R. country committee" while he was a member. This State Department official's name also appeared in the address book of a suspected Soviet agent who arrived in the U.S. in 1943, according to government files.

Congressional investigators also have been shocked to discover that the CIA's assassination document was never shown by administrative officials to Speaker John McCormack (Mass.), next in line to succeed President Johnson.

While FBI officials warned Speaker McCormack, a dedicated anti-Communist, that he is on the list of Western officials feared by the Kremlin, no CIA authority has shown the No. 2 man in government the CIA report listing these secret Soviet assassination methods.

RICHARD WILSON

Lax Security Methods Still Prevail

Senator Thomas Dodd of Connecticut is an old friend of President Johnson. He was for Johnson for President in 1960. But he has not been very successful in getting the President to pay much attention to the charges of the Internal Security Subcommittee of the United States Senate that security procedures in the executive branch, particularly the State Department, are lax and dangerous.

Mr. Johnson now has reason to know that even the man closest to him might, without the President's knowledge, have weaknesses which made him especially vulnerable to blackmail and were of such a nature that his resignation was called for immediately. This case is not unique. It happened before in the case of a trusted associate of a previous President who quietly resigned a few months after his appointment, much to the sorrow of those who had known his devotion to public service.

This man, as well as President Johnson's special assistant, was too vulnerable to hold a position of close intimacy with the President of the United States. In neither case was this vulnerability known at the time of appointment.

These cases alone should be enough to demonstrate that great care must be taken in the selection of all personnel having to do with the nation's security. No shadow can fall across them, cruel as this may seem in human terms.

This is what Senator Dodd has been trying to demonstrate and he has much evidence on his side. Scores of employes have been given "emergency clearance" in the Department of State, without any particular emergency, and thus have been spared a thorough examination of their records prior to employment. Easy-going security procedures have replaced those of the Eisenhower administration. When one employe, long recognized for the even-handedness of his administration of security procedures, told the truth to the Senate Internal Security Committee on State Department practices he was ostracized and suspended for disclosing secret information—information which, in itself, was innocuous but disclosed the casual methods of clearing applicants for employment.

The violent reaction of security officials of the State Department in this case—the Otepka case—was enough to illustrate the attitudes of mind which have grown out of the long-term reaction to "McCarthyism." Because Senator McCarthy, 14 years ago, adopted extreme methods and sometimes let caution and decency go to the winds, the post-McCarthy attitude seems to be that any qualified man has a "right" to avoid a rigorous inspection of his affairs before given a sensitive government position. No one, of course, has any such right, nor any right to public employment at all, nor any right to forgiveness of his past acts.

The Warren Commission recently held to strict account both the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Secret Service for failing to take preventive measures against the assassin of President Kennedy. We could see that it would have been much better, in this one case, if police-state methods had prevented the assassination.

If the Secret Service had information, as reported, on the aberrations of President Johnson's special assistant, it could be criticized again for having failed to take the action which would have avoided the President's present embarrassment.

What all this illustrates is that there is an urgent need for well-executed internal security procedures. This has been illustrated time after time, both in this country and in England, which of all nations prize highest rights and dignity of the individual.

Perhaps the fact that President Johnson has had closest to him an associate who could not be trusted to remain there any longer will turn the President's attention to the broader aspects of the internal security problem. Senator Dodd is in a position to give the President sound information and sage, un-McCarthy-like advice.

The Case Of 'Trial By Press'

By ANTHONY LEWIS

WASHINGTON.

A QUESTION that has long nagged at the conscience of Americans concerned about justice is posed most acutely by the report of the Warren Commission on the assassination of President Kennedy: Does this country's practice of unbridled liberty for the press, radio and television to report on pending criminal cases permit any man charged with a notorious crime to get a fair trial?

Chief Justice Earl Warren and his six colleagues on the commission were highly critical of what happened after the arrest of Lee Harvey Oswald. In the corridors of the Dallas Police Headquarters reporters and cameramen were so numerous and unruly that witnesses could hardly get through. Under the pressures of the press, officials repeatedly disclosed damaging evidence and said Oswald's guilt was certain. A desire to please the press was one reason for the ill-handled transfer that led to Oswald's murder. If he had lived, the commission said, his "opportunity for a trial by 12 jurors free of preconception as to his guilt or innocence would have been seriously jeopardized by the premature disclosure and weighing of the evidence against him."

What happened in Dallas last November was an extreme case. But the American Bar Association was stating the obvious when it observed, in comment condemning conditions in Dallas, that "excessive and prejudicial publicity with respect to criminal cases is not unusual in America."

Everyone knows, as Justice Arthur J. Goldberg said recently, that the American press commonly uses "labels such as 'killer,' 'robber,' 'hoodlum' . . . to describe the accused weeks before and even on the eve of the trial." Thirteen years ago, a predecessor of his on the Court, Justice Robert H. Jackson, said that "trial by newspaper" was "one of the worst menaces to American justice."

Since Justice Jackson's day, television has emerged as a potentially even more searching intruder into the criminal process. The bar and most courts have steadfastly resisted demands for admission of TV cameras to trials because they believe such broadcasting would make the process of determining guilt still more a public spectacle and less the quiet inquiry the law intended it to be. Even without entry into the courtroom, television can outdo the newspaper in pretrial comment on criminal cases.

Even before the tragedy in Dallas, concern about the conflict between free press and fair trial had been growing. A number of newspapers were criticizing excesses on the part of their profession or by broadcasters. As for the bar, its prevailing sentiment was probably expressed by Federal District Judge Hubert L. Will of Illinois in this 1963 comment:

"The press, even when it reports crimes and criminal trials with reasonable thoroughness and accuracy—which is seldom—too often in the very process encroaches upon and subverts the constitutional right to a fair trial by an impartial jury."

The argument on the other side has also been vigorously pressed. A major contention is that the press helps to prevent official abuses by its close watch on criminal cases. J. Russell Wiggins, editor of The Washington Post, mentioning such police practices as the third degree, said:

"These conditions much more menace the right of accused persons than pretrial disclosures in the press. . . . Newspaper publicity is the best way of treating these abuses."

As for the performance in Dallas specifically, it has been defended by numerous editors, among them Mr. Wiggins's colleague on The Post, Alfred Friendly. He made the point that the press is fiercely competitive and that when some reporters moved in aggressively on the Dallas police, the others could hardly afford to be gentlemen. He seemed to be saying that there is a kind of Gresham's Law of the press, with the tawdry and sensational driving out the responsible.

Mr. Friendly argued also, as many others have, that it was basically up to the authorities in Dallas to lay down the rules—not up to the press. He said: "The press was not pretty in Dallas. But it may not be fair to accuse it for failure to embrace a system that was not its to prescribe."

The Warren Commission was not insensitive to the point. It said that "primary responsibility for having failed to control the press and to check the flow of undigested evidence to the public must be borne by the [Dallas] Police Department."

BUT the commission also said that the disorder in Police Headquarters disclosed "a regrettable lack of self-discipline by the newsmen." Looking past the immediate incidents to a broader moral, the commission concluded:

"The experience in Dallas during Nov. 22-24 is a dramatic affirmation of the need for steps to bring about a proper balance between the right of the public to be kept informed and the right of the individual to a fair and impartial trial."

In considering how to balance these sometimes conflicting interests, it is well to put to one side first a slogan often shouted by press zealots: "The right to know." The phrase is used as if there were something in the Constitution, or in logic, that gave the press a right to demand the facts about anything.

There is no such abstract "right to know." The freedom of the press guaranteed in the Constitution, most students of the subject have agreed, is a freedom to publish — not a compulsion for everyone else to tell all to the press. Common sense supports that view. Surely reporters and television cameras have no "right" to be present at meetings of the National Security Council or conferences of the Supreme Court.

THERE is a public interest, as the Warren Commission phrased it, in being kept informed about criminal proceedings. This high interest is often cited by the press, but the desire to provide titillation and entertainment is usually the real motive for lofty demands to get the facts and admit the cameras. The honest argument for press entry in each case is that a useful social function will be served in the particular circumstances, not that the press has some "right."

The constitutional right that is involved here is the one guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment: "In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury. . . ."

The public trial, it should be noted, is for the benefit of "the accused," not of the press. Its purpose, in the minds of the Constitution's framers, was to prevent the former English practice — made infamous by the Star Chamber—of trying men in camera, without access to friends or public opinion.

"The public trial exists," Justice William O. Douglas explained a few years ago, "because of the aversion which liberty-loving people had toward secret trials and proceedings. That is the reason our courts are open to the public, not because the framers wanted to provide the public with recreation."

IT is the defendant who can demand a public trial, not the press. That was the holding of the New York courts in the case of Mickey Jelke, whose trial for sex offenses was held with the press excluded. Newspapers' demands to be admitted were rejected, but Jelke's own claim that he had a right to a trial in the open was sustained and his conviction reversed.

The Sixth Amendment's guarantee of "an impartial jury" is what gives concern about the performance of the American press. How can an impartial jury be found when the press and television and radio have been trumpeting for weeks ahead their certainty that a defendant is guilty?

The British deal with the problem in a clean-cut way. They punish for contempt of court virtually any publication about the defendant in a criminal case before trial except the bare fact of his arrest. And they punish severely. The editor of The Daily Mirror of London was sent to jail for three months in 1949 for publishing details of alleged murders by a man just arrested. In 1961, The Daily Express was fined £5,000 ($14,000) for describing a suspect before his arrest.

The British are also severe on criticism of judges. Ronald Goldfarb, an American expert in this area, describes cases in which British publications were severely fined for having suggested that judges were less than wholly impartial — although their comments came after decision, when they could not possibly have affected the course of justice.

SUCH restrictions on the press cannot be squared with our written Constitution's broad assurance of the right to speak and write freely. Thus the Supreme Court, applying the First Amendment, has severely limited the power of courts to punish, as contempt, comments on pending criminal matters.

The leading case was decided in 1941. It involved public pressures applied to the courts from two contrasting sources —Harry Bridges, the cantankerous left-wing labor leader, and an editorial in The Los Angeles Times, a conservative newspaper.

Bridges had published a telegram denouncing a California court's decision in a labor case as "outrageous" and threatening a strike over it. The Times editorial dealt with the assault conviction of two union leaders —it called them "gorillas"— and demanded that they be sent to prison rather than put on probation. Both Bridges and The Times were held in contempt of court.

THE Supreme Court, by a vote of 5 to 4, set aside the contempt findings. Justice Hugo L. Black said the Constitution did not allow such punishment for comment on judicial proceedings unless the publication presented a "clear and present danger" of obstructing justice.

Under that difficult standard there is almost no chance of using contempt proceedings to discourage sensational pretrial publicity about criminal cases, no matter how severely the defendant's right to a fair trial may be hurt. Nor is there any sign that the Supreme Court may relax the standard, for Americans are wary of putting vaguely defined power in judges' hands to punish speech and writing.

Since the Bridges case, the damaging effects of publicity on criminal proceedings have become much more widely recognized. Justice Douglas, a strong believer in the Bridges rule, praised it in a 1960 speech, but then added:

"This is not to say that the influence of newspapers on trials should go unnoticed. At times the papers can arouse passions in a community so that no trial can be a fair one."

In the absence of direct control over press comment, the courts have been forced to other remedies. These are to delay a trial if a community has been saturated with adverse publicity about the defendant, or move the trial to another city.

Appellate courts are finding more and more often that convicted defendants could not have had a fair trial in the circumstances of publicity and that there should have been a change of venue. When this is decided at the appellate level, the result is to require a new trial, often long after the event.

The Supreme Court first reversed a conviction because of newspaper influence on a jury in 1959. That was a relatively narrow decision, involving a Federal trial in which jurors were shown to have read in the press material specifically excluded from evidence in the trial.

In 1961, the Supreme Court found an Indiana conviction unconstitutional because the jury had read numerous articles describing the defendant as a "mad-dog killer." This was followed in 1963 by a decision throwing out a Louisiana trial held after the defendant's alleged confession to the sheriff had been filmed and shown to the community on television three times. Justice Potter Stewart used the term "kangaroo-court proceedings" for that episode.

THE lower courts have got the message from the Supreme Court and are bearing down harder on trial by newspaper. Last summer, a Federal district judge in Ohio issued a writ of habeas corpus releasing Dr. Samuel Sheppard after 10 years in prison for the murder of his wife, on the ground —among others—that newspaper and broadcast intimations of his guilt before trial had fatally infected the proceedings with unfairness.

This technique — the setting aside of past convictions because of the influence of publicity—has obvious and serious deficiencies. If an innocent man really was railroaded to jail by public passion, it is not much cheer to him to have a new trial 10 years later. And the public may suffer as well as defendants. Years after a crime, at a new trial, it may be difficult or impossible for prosecutors to reassemble the evidence needed for conviction of even the guiltiest man.

For these reasons, there has been more and more thought about ways to stop the evil, not after it has had its effect, but before — to curtail indiscriminate, unfair publicity before criminal trials.

ONE course would be to move closer to the British system and curb irresponsible press or broadcast comments by contempt proceedings against those who make them. Retired Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter, who dissented in the Bridges case, would have preferred this approach. He objected to the idea that, as he put it once, "while convictions must be reversed and miscarriages of justice result because the minds of jurors or potential jurors were poisoned, the prisoner is constitutionally protected in plying his trade."

But that does not seem a practical solution, for there is no discernible trend in the Supreme Court toward lessening the protections of freedom for the press. Some abuse goes along with freedom, the Court might say, but it must be handled in ways that do not lead to restriction and timidity.

The idea endorsed by the Warren Commission was "the promulgation of a code of professional conduct governing representatives of all news media" in reporting on pending criminal cases. This idea has had a good deal of attention in newspaper and broadcast circles, too.

With all deference, the proposal for a self-promulgated code is not very promising. It is likely to be ignored by those who sin most. H. L. Mencken disposed of the idea a generation ago when he wrote:

"Journalistic codes of ethics are all moonshine. . . . If American journalism is to be purged of its present swinishness and brought up to a decent level of repute—and God knows that such an improvement is needed—it must be accomplished by the devices of morals, not by those of honor. That is to say, it must be accomplished by external forces, and through the medium of penalties exteriorly afflicted."

ANOTHER course, which has attracted growing support, is for the courts to crack down on those more clearly within their disciplinary jurisdiction than the press — the prosecutors and defense lawyers and police who are the sources of the material printed or broadcast.

Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon and 10 other Senators introduced in the last Congress a bill along that line. It would punish as contempt, in Federal criminal cases, any disclosure by a Federal employe or defense attorney except of material already admitted as evi-

...ence. There would be a fine of $500 for violations.

A more sweeping proposal for legislation, state or Federal, has been put forward by Justice Bernard S. Meyer of the Supreme Court of Nassau County, N. Y. It would apply to newspapermen and broadcasters as well as lawyers and others involved in criminal trials. It would go into effect only when a defendant was to be tried by jury, the theory being that judges are less susceptible than laymen to influence by external forces.

THE Meyer proposal would flatly prohibit any disclosure of the existence of a confession of the defendant's prior record and of similar damaging matters unless they were brought out at the trial. It would also ban any expression of opinion on the defendant's guilt or the credibility of evidence or witnesses.

Justice Meyer would go even further in a second section listing other practices which would not be automatically condemned but would be violations if a jury found that they threatened substantial prejudice to justice. Among these are interviews with victims of a crime, appeals to racial bias and publication of the names and addresses of jurors.

The theory is that such a statute would be constitutional because it would not put the press at the hazard of a judge's virtually undefined contempt power. Instead, there would be specific legislative findings that certain activities threaten the right to a fair trial, and all would be on notice to steer clear of these. The first, or mandatory, part of the statute would be more easily sustainable on this reasoning than the second section.

It can readily be seen that the Meyer proposal is a severe one. Yet it has attracted wide attention and support as worthy of consideration in light of the serious threat to fair trial in this country.

THE truth is that excessive pretrial publicity does flaw our generally civilized standards of criminal procedure. More of the press should recognize its responsibility and consider effective measures to prevent abuses instead of talking about "the right to know." Otherwise, there may come the external retribution of which Mencken spoke.

Judge Emory H. Niles—like Mencken a civilized Baltimorean—said recently:

"I believe that in the end there will be a popular revulsion as well as a judicial revulsion, a sharpening of the public conscience that will condemn the practice of entertainment and amusement through uncontrolled publication of gossip and scandal."

Jack Ruby meets the press before his trial for murdering Lee Harvey Oswald.

"A question the Warren Commission posed is: Does liberty for the press permit a man to get a fair trial?"

DR. SAMUEL SHEPPARD of Cleveland stands accused of the murder of his wife in 1954. Last summer, he was set free after 10 years in prison on the ground, among others, that press and broadcast intimations of his guilt had rendered his trial less than fair.

Louis Nizer's Review of the Warren Report

No. 3

ONE of the most notable features of the Warren Commission, according to the renowned trial lawyer, Louis Nizer, was the ways in which its methods differed from those of a trial. In his analysis and commentary for the Doubleday & Co. edition of the Commission's report, the author of "My Life in Court" points out that the Commission was intent not on proving that the assassination of President Kennedy was or was not the work of one man but on sifting all the possibilities—even the most implausible—in the hope of reaching as close to truth as human error allows. This is the third of five parts.

By Louis Nizer

The style is reportorial—an unadorned statement of facts. Nevertheless, as one reviews the Commission's "findings," the events come alive again and one cannot help but experience the awful emotional trauma of the original tragedy.

One sees again the handsome President waving gaily to the throng, when suddenly a shot pierces the air. Secret Service Agent Kellerman, sitting in the front of the Presidential car, turns and hears the President say, "My God, I am hit," as his hands move to his throat. A bullet had entered the base of the back of the President's neck slightly to the right of the spine, traveled downward and exited from the front of the neck, causing a nick in the lower-left portion of the knot in his necktie. Within seconds another sharp sound is heard. This time the bullet tears open the President's skull. He falls into his wife's lap, and as she cradles him, she cries, "Oh, my God, they have shot my husband. I love you, Jack."

This is but the beginning of the gruesome recital, which becomes even more unbearable as the doctors at the hospital struggle to preserve the slightest breath in the President's body. He lies blue-white on a table, his eyes open with the pupils dilated, but without any reaction to light. In desperation, the surgeons perform a tracheotomy, enlarging the bullet wound in the neck to insert a tube for breathing. At 1 p.m., only a half-hour after he had joyfully acknowledged the cheers of the crowd, the last rites are administered and he is pronounced dead.

The report moves on to the other events. Two startling facts are revealed for the first time. First, Howard L. Brennan had been watching the parade from a point on Elm St. directly opposite the Book Depository Building. He happened to look up and see "a slender man, about 5 feet 10 inches, in his early 30s, take deliberate aim from the sixth floor corner window and fire a rifle in the direction of the President's car."

SAME MAN

He had noticed the same man in the window a few minutes before the motorcade made the turn onto Elm St. After the shot he immediately gave this information and description to a policeman. Thus it was that at 12:34 p.m., the Dallas police radio mentioned the Depository Building as a possible source of the shots, and that at 12:45 p.m., the police radio sent out a description of the suspected assassin based on Brennan's observations. Of course, his description fitted Oswald, and Brennan's testimony is not subject to the frailty of being an afterthought, because the police broadcast his observations at the time of the incident.

The second fact is that a Dallas motorcycle patrolman, Marrion L. Baker, observed that immediately after the shots were heard pigeons scattered in the air from their perches on the Depository Building. He raced his motorcycle there, and within two minutes after the shots were fired he dashed up the stairs and with gun in hand actually confronted Oswald.

But the building superintendent told him Oswald worked in the building, and so the officer rushed on.

Oswald left the building, took a bus and then a taxi to his rooming house. The housekeeper was surprised to see him at midday and remarked to him that he seemed to be in quite a hurry. He did not reply. Soon he emerged zipping his jacket, and rushed away.

Fourteen minutes later Patrolman J. D. Tippit, a veteran of 11 years on the police force with a good record, was patrolling in his police car. He had been told to watch for a man who fit Oswald's description. Tippit saw "a slender white male, about 30 years old, 5 feet 10 inches and weighing about 165 pounds."

He pulled up alongside him, got out of his car, and, as he approached, the man drew a revolver, fired several shots in rapid succession, hitting Tippit four times and killing him instantly. One witness, Domingo Benavides, saw the shooting. A number of other witnesses saw a man hurrying from the scene, emptying cartridge cases from his revolver. They later identified Oswald as that man.

Soon the police radio announced the new murder and the similarity of the descriptions of the President's and Tippit's assailant. An alert shoe store manager saw Oswald rush into a doorway as a police car approached, and then hasten into the Texas Theater, a motion picture house only 60 feet away, without buying a ticket. This suspicious conduct caused him to alert the cashier of the theater, and she called the police.

The theater was surrounded. Then the lights were turned on inside. Patrolman M. N. McDonald and a few other policemen approached Oswald and ordered him to stand. He said, "Well, it's all over now." He drew his gun, while striking the officer with his other hand. There was a struggle. He was disarmed and handcuffed.

Oswald had been arrested within an hour of the assassination, and about a half-hour after the President was pronounced dead.

When Oswald was questioned at police headquarters, he lied repeatedly. He denied owning a rifle, and he refused to explain a Selective Service card in his wallet, with a picture of himself and the name Alek J. Hidell. It turned out to be a favorite alias (for example, Oswald claimed to be part of a pro-Castro organization headed by Hidell). By 10 o'clock in the evening the FBI had traced the purchase of the rifle found in the Depository Building to one A. Hidell; it had been shipped to P.O. Box 2915 in Dallas, Tex., which was rented by Oswald. The money order used for payment was signed by A. Hidell, but handwriting experts soon established that it was Oswald who had ordered and paid for the rifle. The revolver he carried when arrested had been bought under the name A. J. Hidell.

A palm-print said to be Oswald's was found on the rifle. To check the FBI report, the Commission engaged an expert of the New York City Police Department who confirmed the bureau's findings. The markings were too indistinct to permit a firm conclusion. But fibers caught on the stock of the rifle were determined by experts to be the same as those in the shirt Oswald wore.

Oswald's wife identified the rifle found in the Depository as her husband's. She and others had seen it in the garage where he kept it under a blanket. He had practiced using it at night on the porch.

The report concludes that Lee Harvey Oswald fired the fatal shots from the sixth story window of the Texas Book Depository Building and later killed Patrolman J. D. Tippit. Based as it is upon the most exhaustive studies, scientific and factual, there can be no doubt of the accuracy of the conclusion.

THE LONER

We turn then to the next question, whether Oswald acted alone or was in a conspiracy with others. To examine the likelihood of such a man acting in concert with others, the report offers interesting biographical material.

Oswald's defection to Russia and return with a Russian girl as his wife are set forth in several chapters, together with photographs, government documents and other writings. When Russia rejected his request to become a citizen, he slashed his wrist, and the records of the Botkinskaya Hospital in Moscow reveal his treatment for a week for self-inflicted wounds on his left wrist.

His autopsy showed a scar on that wrist. Of course, if he had made any arrangements with the Soviet government to act as an agent, the attempted suicide would not have occurred. Furthermore, if there were a plan for him to return to the United States as a secret Russian agent, would he have brought back a Russian wife, whose very presence would be a constant reminder of a possible emotional tie to the Soviet Union?

The most persuasive analysis that Oswald was a frustrated, bitter, neurotic man who acted alone is found not in the extraordinary factual tracing of his conduct, which merely negates rumors of association in crime, but in the psychiatric study of his personality. It reveals his emotional disorganization from his earliest years.

Lee Oswald, a posthumous child, was the third youngest son of a woman who was to be once a widow and twice divorced. He was, for most of his youth, separated from his brothers, who attended boarding schools. He lived with his mother in Louisiana, Texas and New York amid constant money problems. His home life was unsatisfactory and he soon became a truant.

At the age of 13 he was remanded by a New York court for psychiatric observation because of his truancy, and even this early examination showed "intense anxiety, shyness, feelings of awkwardness and insecurity." He detached himself from the world and had no friends. He fantasized about being a powerful commander and sometimes hurting and killing people. This fantasy of fame through murder was the early seed which grew in his mind as his body matured.

To this aggressiveness, hostility and discontent, Oswald added an interest in Marxism. While he was in the Marine Corps he studied Russian, read a Russian newspaper and followed Russian affairs. Apparently his rebellious mood made communism, the enemy of his country's way of life, appealing.

In 1959 Oswald received a dishonorable discharge from the Marine Corps and defected to Russia, where he attempted to renounce his U. S. citizenship. Once more, what better was was there to express contempt for the Marine Corps than to seek Russian citizenship?

Once back in the United States, he severed all relations with his mother, abused his Russian wife and was unable to hold any job for more than a short period.

Oswald's rejection of capitalism and communism made it impossible for him to live happily in either the United States or in Russia. His recent marriage, disrupted by frequent separations, quarrels, long periods of sexual impotence and inability to provide simple comforts for his family, no doubt added its toll to his troubled mind.

Two events in 1963 shed some light on Oswald's possible motivations in killing the President: the attack on Gen. Walker and his interest in Cuba.

In April of 1963 Oswald shot at and missed Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker, out of a conviction that Walker was a fascist. Oswald's plans for the attempted killing were worked out in elaborate detail. He left a note for his wife in case he was caught. He had two photographs taken of himself holding his rifle, his revolver and copies of two Communist periodicals. His wife was instructed to send the pictures to the publisher of one of the periodicals in the event that he was caught. He made no plans for escape and left carefully documented evidence of his deed where it could be easily discovered.

All of these facts indicate that by killing Walker, Oswald was attempting to assure himself of a place in history. This conviction in his mind that murder of a famous man would at last make the world take note of him, this hunger for acceptance as a martyr, clearly set the pattern for his later deed, which he knew would shake the world. When circumstances, partly accidental, as we have seen, gave him the opportunity, he was ready.

From April to October, 1963, Oswald's political activities consisted of designating himself a one-man New Orleans branch of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee. The national headquarters of the same organization showed little interest in Oswald. Nevertheless, he decided to defect to Cuba. He went to Mexico City and applied to the Cuban Embassy for a visa. Despite his former residence in Russia and his activities on behalf of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee, he was rejected. Even those for whom he sacrificed himself had no use for him. The furies within him must have been continually mounting.

DAMNED TO EVIL

Thus, by November, 1963, Oswald had been dishonorably discharged from military service; was unhappy with life in the United States and the Soviet Union; had been refused admittance to Cuba; was at odds with his wife; had failed at almost everything he had ever tried to do; had no friends and had developed his feelings of aggression and hostility to the point where he had attempted one murder and one suicide.

In the last analysis, the Warren Committee's research into Oswald's character may supply the only reliable study from which the assassin's motive can be divined. To the normal mind, motivation for so gross an act would be clouded by mystery. But if we approach the question from the viewpoint that Oswald had declared war against society because it had rejected him as unfit, then the mystery is no more.

His shots were at the chief symbol of world order and power, the President of the United States. He was not firing at John F. Kennedy. He centered in his gunsight all mankind, which in his disordered mind had betrayed and rejected him.

Only in this impersonal sense can the motive for killing John F. Kennedy be understood. We are dealing with the imponderables of a man's distorted mind, which is not the subject of conclusive proof. But I believe the Commission's report has shed a light into an otherwise impenetrable darkness.

Mark Lane vs. Melvin Belli

Debate on Warren report blacked out

By PEGGY DENNIS

SAN FRANCISCO — A silence-boycott was clamped down last weekend by every daily newspaper in the Bay area on one of the most controversial issues in the country.

Not one word appeared in local newspapers about the first organized public debate on the Warren Commission Report that took place Oct. 9 at the Masonic auditorium with three nationally prominent lawyers arguing about the report's conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald was President Kennedy's lone assassin.

Phone calls by this reporter the morning after the debate to San Francisco's three daily newspapers, The Chronicle, The Examiner, The News Call Bulletin, and also to The Oakland Tribune, resulted in practically identical replies from the city desks: "No, we did not send anyone to cover the Warren Report debate last night."

If the newspapers were not interested, the public was; some 1,500 paid admission to hear the debate.

IMAGE-CONSCIOUS Melvin Belli presented this image of himself a he brushed aside a newsman's telephone cable while visiting his erstwhile client, Jack Ruby, killer of Lee Harvey Oswald in a Dallas, Tex., jail cell.

BIG ATTRACTIONS

Not even participation of this city's two colorful attorneys, Melvin Belli and Jake Ehrlich, whose every word and gesture usually makes news here, seemed sufficient to break through what appears to be a conspiracy of silence concerning any public criticism of the Warren Report.

If major news media are seeking to declare the case closed, New York civil liberties attorney Mark Lane, a former state Assemblyman, may well be the indefatigable obstacle to that aim.

Defense of the Warren Commission and its findings rested, in last week's debate, in the hands of Melvin Belli, who attracted public attention as defense attorney for Oswald's killer, Jack Ruby.

Belli got a frequent assist from Jake Ehrlich, the criminal trial lawyer who had a television series, "Sam Benedict", created in his image. The audience on occasion shouted down Ehrlich's stepping out of the role of moderator to personal views at length and particularly when he tended to ignore the some 100 questions that had been sent up to the debaters from the audience and proceded to ask most of the questions himself.

DOUBTS VOICED

That Lane's arguments stirred up doubts and questions among his listeners was apparent as this reporter wandered through the auditorium and spacious lobbies during the intermission break and again at the debate's end. In small groups people talked and argued, on the basis of Lane's contentions.

In the balcony, where seats cost $1 and $1.50 each, the crowd was young, the majority were students from S.F. State, the UC Berkeley campus, and Hastings Law School.

In the higher-priced downstairs section the majority were in the mid-thirties and mid-forties age bracket. From the wisps of conversation overhead, many were teachers and law-the Warren Report and followed their texts closely when quotes were read from the platform.

BELLI'S PLEA

Belli's prime defense was his oft-repeated, dramatically gestured cry: "If we cannot trust the FBI, the CIA and Earl Warren, then God pity us!"

He accused Lane of "hurting our national image" with his persistent efforts on Oswald's behalf and his implications abroad that "there is a conspiracy."

Belli declared, "We have to tell the world we can come up with an objective report." And he asked Lane, "What are you contending—that the FBI, the CIA, the police, everyone is trying to protect someone?"

Although Lane's attack upon the many weak spots in the Warren Report was, in the main, more convincing than Belli's line of defense, the fact that Lane consistently bypassed Belli's key question left many in his audience during the intermission and at the evening's end—asking each other: "But why?"

In the debate, as on past occassions, Lane did not venture to answer the question: in your opinion, what explains the Warren Commission's method of inquiry that you term is a violation of democratic due process and its flagrant rejection of such evidence that tends to disprove its claim of Oswald's lone guilt?

This question was put to him again by this reporter after the debate and Lane was surrounded by questioners on the platform. Part of his reply was the same he has given on previous occasions.

"I am not interested in speculating as to their reasons," he said. "I want only to place the questions to show that the Commission denied a fair hearing to Oswald before finding him guilty."

Then Lane added, for the first time, "You heard Mr. Belli tonight speak so much of the need to protect our national image. Maybe Mr. Belli has given you the answer to your question."

PRO AND CON

Touching briefly and lightly on several specific points of evidence on which the Commission based its conclusion of Oswald's guilt, Belli declared, "I am satisfied there are men in prison today and men who have gone to the electric chair on one-fiftieth of the evidence there is against Oswald."

Lane retorted, "But they had a trial."

While the evening was studded with appreciative laughter and applause as one or the other debater scored a fine point or came back with a witty repartee, one had the same uneasy feeling as when one had laughed nervously at the "Dr. Strangelove" movie. The ghosts of President Kennedy and Oswald hovered over that speaker's platform — and over the Warren Commission as well.

At one point in the rapid give-and-take, Lane was asked, "How do you account for Oswald's movements immediately after shooting the President?"

He replied, "I'm at a disadvantages there. Your client (Jack Ruby) killed my client before he could tell his story, so I can't answer for him."

When Belli pleaded, "we have to rely on the integrity of the witnesses that the Commission accepted," Lane retorted, "Do you accept prosecution witnesses without cross examining them in the courtroom?"

Lane charged the Warren Commission "never got the facts in its lifetime"; that it based its study upon the findings sifted through by the Dallas police and the FBI; that it refused to see witnesses whom the FBI had ruled out ahead of time.

He dealt in some detail with what he charged were discrepancies and conflicting evidence available (that the Commission refused to check out) concerning eyewitness reports of both the Kennedy and Police Officer Tippit shootings, the palm print on the gun barrel, the type of gun used, the direction from which the President was shot.

IMAGE AND SUBSTANCE

Lane's main charge was that the Warren Commission Report is a "prosecution document" that finds Oswald guilty not only in abstentia, but without participation of defense counsel to cross examine witnesses, to challenge evidence submitted by the prosecution.

This, together with the fact that the commission worked "behind closed doors," that all testimony is marked 'top secret," and the public is given only officially-approved handout statements and conclusions, Lane charged, "is a violation of American democratic due process."

In his rebuttal Lane said bitterly, "I'm tired of this plea for concern for our national image. I'm more concerned about the substance of our country."

FBI Asked to Do The Impossible?

I HAVE NEWS that is interesting, healthy, and infuriating. Three members of the Warren Commission apparently raged, behind closed doors, against the projected criticisms of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. But Earl Warren was adamant, and the criticisms were therefore registered.

The official Commission report said that the FBI "took an unduly restrictive view of its role in preventive intelligence work prior to the assassination. A more carefully co-ordinated treatment of the Oswald case by the FBI might well have resulted in bringing Oswald's activities to the attention of the Secret Service."

The three gentlemen who were healthy enough to dissent were Reps. Gerald Ford and Hale Boggs. and Sen. Russell. They made the point that it was unfair to criticize the FBI without suggesting what, of a concrete nature. the agency could have done, and without weighing the meaning of the kind of preventive activity Justice Earl Warren seemed to be recommending on the rights of the individual citizen.

It is all very well grandly to suggest that the FBI should pick up more suspects, or turn the names of those suspects over to the Secret Service to be picked up. Any implementation of such a program would. however, end the FBI up defending its behavior before—guess who?. Earl Warren himself, who—and this is what is infuriating about Warren's criticism of the FBI—has during the past years done everything within his power to undermine (a) anti-subversive legislation (for instance, of the kind that might have put the spotlight on Oswald), and (b) criminal-apprehension techniques (there was the famous Mallory case, for instance, where a rapist-murderer was released because he hadn't been arraigned soon enough: who went on to rape again).

The task of sequestering anyone who might conceivably assassinate a President of the United States is overwhelming, and it must dismay J. Edgar Hoover to be castigated for failing to do an impossible job largely by the same group of people who make it difficult for him to do a possible job—and who are always on the alert against any enhancement of the FBI's powers. It is especially curious that the testimony of Hoover to the Warren Commission was not published. Why, one wonders? Because it would have defanged Warren's criticisms?

What, actually, is the Chief Justice recommending? The FBI has estimated that in some areas of the country there are as many as five thousand persons who are as likely to assassinate a President as Lee Harvey Oswald was, judging only from his previous record. They are Communists, subversives, ultras of every variety, neo-fascists, men and women who are emotionally unstable or demonstrably irrational in their behavior. Is it seriously proposed that, let us say every time the President comes to New York, five thousand people be picked up and tucked away somewhere until the President is so gracious as to leave town? The proposal is preposterous and, one would think, utterly unenforceable for so long as we decline to repeal the Bill of Rights.

Clearly the principal responsibility rests on the President himself. It is not fair for him to impose upon the Secret Service or the FBI an undischargeable burden. It is in the great tradition of leadership to wave away the bodyguards and mingle with the people, and one's republican blood stirs at the sight of it. Charles de Gaulle entered Notre Dame Cathedral on the day that Paris was liberated and walked majestically up the great aisle even as snipers fired bullets all around him from the choirloft.

He got away with it, but the whole point about personal heroism is that sometimes you don't get away with it (otherwise it wouldn't be called heroism), and when you don't get away with it, it is hardly fair to blame the FBI. It was John Kennedy himself who rejected the protective bubble on November 22: and the Secret Service had no power to overrule him. One would like to think that a President could mingle among his own people with impunity. But we are a free society, free even to the point that men and women who think disorderly and abusive thoughts are nevertheless unmolested until and unless they act overtly, or are known to be afraid to act.

A committee of eminent people should solicit from all presidential candidates the pledge that they will, if elected, submit to elementary precautions against stray wildmen with twenty-dollar rifles and telescopic sights. It is better to ask one man to restrain his impulse to mingle with the crowds, than to ask the FBI to deprive of their freedom every man and woman whose unorthodoxy might conceivably explode into an act of regicide.

Personal Safety of Candidates Still Contains Loopholes

Besides this being a callow presidential campaign, unsullied by intellectual challenges, there is the grim spectre of death which follows each of the four major candidates.

It was brought by the terrible event of nearly a year ago and it has haunted us so much that the usual glamour and excitement of a big political joust is pushed back, reserved for an age when this country once again quiets down—where it is free from the noises and threats of extremism.

Almost daily now, the press reports threats to either Johnson or Goldwater, Humphrey or Miller. Elaborate security precautions preoccupy nervous police departments whenever the candidates appear. For them, it is only temporary; for the FBI and Secret Service, the increased vigilance is even more tiring.

Locally, the city and state police performed commendably during the visits of Congressman William E. Miller and Sen. Hubert Humphrey in Reading this week. We say commendably, though, only because no bad accidents happened.

But they could have, nevertheless, and we are aware, as every citizen should be, that a well-intentioned assassin always has the odds over the tightest of security.

But there were lapses this week. At Spaatz Field, even though there were plainclothesmen and uniformed police all over the place, there were absolutely no restrictions imposed on approaching either Congressman Miller or Sen. Humphrey.

We were there, and needed no press card to get beyond the runway fence and close to the candidates as they stepped off their planes. On Penn Square, near the speakers' stand, security was tighter. But why have it lax in one place and tight in another?

We have experienced this on more than one occasion: The few times we had attended press conferences of both President Kennedy and President Johnson we had to admit later that it was appallingly easy for any unidentified citizen to get as close as we were, and without a security check. We chill at those remembrances.

Although it is relatively easy for an assassin with a rifle fitted with a telescopic sight to shoot a public figure, it seems now that security precautions are more dedicated to reducing that probability than the danger of a point-blank shooting from close range.

On Nov. 22 and 24 last year, we had two violent examples of each case in Dallas, Tex., and for the second killing, not only the Dallas police, but the press, were accused of being less than prudent.

The press has already taken stock of the troubles of mass reporting concerning an extraordinary event, and on Saturday, press representatives will meet in Washington to discuss ideas for reducing these drawbacks.

But for our part, we wish security agents would use more discretion concerning who is to get inside the inner cordon near a public figure. Unfortunately, police are hesitant in even weeding out the pettiest of politicians. Why can't they be given identification tags?

Personally, we don't mind being asked to show a press card. It protects the press as well as the police, to say nothing of the personality who draws the crowd. At least it keeps out the Jack Rubys. And every town has more than one of them.

Louis Nizer's Review of Warren Report—No. 2

One of the most notable features of the Warren Commission, according to the renowned trial lawyer Louis Nizer, was the ways in which its methods differed from those of a trial. In his analysis and commentary for the Doubleday & Co. edition of the Commission's report, the author of "My Life in Court" points out that the Commission was intent not on proving that the assassination of President Kennedy was or was not the work of one man but on sifting all the possibilities—even the most implausible—in the hope of reaching as close to truth as human error allows. This is the second of five parts.

By Louis Nizer

When the paralyzing effect of the tragedy had worn off sufficiently to permit the nation to breathe again, Congress stirred to action. Two investigating committees were planned, one in the Senate, which would be headed by Sen. James Eastland of Mississippi, and one in the House, over which Rep. Emanuel Celler of New York would probably preside. This presented the danger of two investigations that might conflict with one another. Also, would world opinion be impressed sufficiently with reports emanating from such sources?

President Johnson, whose mantle of authority was so new that its prestige had not been personalized, acted with that sure hand that the country has since come to recognize. He induced both Congressional committees to surrender their investigating authority in favor of a Presidential commission, whose stature would better insure the acceptance of its findings and allay the anguish of uncertainty that had spread throughout the entire world.

This explains the composition of the commission. This is why Sen. Richard B. Russell, a Democrat from Georgia of high distinction and recognized integrity, displaced Sen. Eastland. Sen. Russell is second in seniority in the Senate, having served there for 30 years. He is chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee. In 1951 he won national respect for his handling of the Congressional investigation of President Truman's dismissal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

The President also appointed Sen. John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky, a Republican of equally high standing, to give bipartisan representation. Sen. Cooper had been a circuit judge, and later during the Eisenhower administration Ambassador to India. Contrary to a critic who charged that no friend of the slain President was included on the commission, Sen. Cooper was a close personal friend of President Kennedy and a frequent guest at the White House.

The Senate having been satisfied, the House of Representatives was persuaded to step aside by the President's designation to the commission of Rep. Hale Boggs, a Democrat from Louisiana, and Rep. Gerald R. Ford, a Republican from Michigan. Aside from their official positions, they had outstanding records.

Having disposed of political necessities, without sacrificing the requirements for public confidence in the appointees, the President had a freer hand. He appointed Allen W. Dulles, world renowned for his years as director of the Central Intelligence Agency, and at one time president of the Council on Foreign Relations.

He also appointed John J. McCloy, who in the 1930s had distinguished himself for his investigation of the Black Tom munitions explosion in Jersey City, and proved that German secret agents had been involved. If there had been conspiratorial chicanery, he could cast an experienced eye on the scene. McCloy had more recently served as head of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, and as United States High Commissioner in West Germany. President Kennedy appointed him disarmament adviser and member of the United Nations delegation.

Finally, a chairman of the Commission had to be designated. The structure of impartiality required a dome of such magnificence that generations to come would not doubt its architectural soundness. Only one man could give to the chairmanship a judicial distinction and objectivity which would be recognized throughout the world—the man who bore the title Chief Justice of the United States. Entirely apart from Earl Warren's creative career as attorney general and governor of California, and, above all, as the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in a historic era, it was the title of his office that, second only to the President's, provided unique prestige.

SYMBOLIC OMISSION

It may have been inadvertent, but the President's designation of the Commission mentions each member's name except Warren's. Instead it reads, "Chief Justice of the United States, Chairman." This was symbolic of the fact that not merely the man, but the most austere title in the nation was associated with the Commission.

Unfortunately for President Johnson's plans, Chief Justice Warren had long taken the stand that no judge on the nation's highest court should serve in any other capacity. The very authority of the title, so eagerly sought for special governmental or international functions, might be diminished by non-judicial activity. Chief Justice Warren had borne in silence criticism of the Court's precedent-shattering decisions. This was the inevitable burden of duty performed in sensitive controversies, where public feeling was sharply divided. But he felt neither he nor any other judge on the Supreme Court ought to risk criticism for services off the bench, which might affect public respect for him when he returned to his judicial duties. Besides, he regretted any diversion from the Court's work.

Thus he had disapproved of Justice Owen J. Roberts' past chairmanship of President Roosevelt's commission to investigate the Pearl Harbor disaster, and Justice Robert Jackson's service as prosecutor at the Nuremberg Trials. At first, he firmly rejected President Johnson's invitation. He did not think it proper to lend his ability and standing to the Commission.

But the President was not to be denied. He stressed the need to satisfy the bewildered populations of the world that the full truth had been sought and reported. This patriotic appeal overcame Chief Justice Warren's resistance. He sacrificed his conviction in order to answer this call to serve a nation whose mourning was made more anguished by uncertainty, and whose honor was tainted by ugly rumors heaped upon the disgrace of violence.

The Commission designated as its general counsel J. Lee Rankin, who had been appointed by President Eisenhower assistant attorney general and thereafter solicitor general of the United States. That office required him repeatedly to argue the government's position before the Supreme Court, and Chief Justice Warren's invitation to him to serve as the Commission's counsel was an eloquent tribute to the esteem in which he was held by the Court. Francis W. H. Adams was designated assistant counsel. He was formerly assistant to the United States Attorney General and thereafter police commissioner of New York City. So not only legal ability but an experienced police executive was added to the staff. Thirteen additional assistant attorneys and 12 staff members were appointed.

Thus, the Commission was peopled with men whose stature was intended to tower over irresponsible rumor. Such men would have no reluctance to unearth the facts no matter how embarrassing they might be to officials or to private individuals.

While the integrity and record of conscientious service of each member of the Warren Commission invite confidence, the final test must be made by evaluating the report itself. Only then can we determine that neither red herring nor whitewash has marred its conclusions.

A commission does not conduct a trial, it makes an investigation. The difference must be understood before proper evaluation can be made of the report.

A trial is an adversary proceeding—that is, two opponents clash with respect to issues, which are defined and delimited as much as possible in advance. This precludes irrelevant evidence, and certainly hearsay, rumor and conjecture. So, for example, if Oswald had not been killed, and had been tried for murder, the issue would have been his guilt or innocence, and only that.

No evidence would have been received on the subject of whether the Secret Service, the FBI, the Dallas police or others were negligent in guarding the President. This would have been irrelevant, because a trial would pose the question of whether Oswald shot the President, not whether he could have been prevented from doing so. Above all, speculations in the press, in books and in lectures, and theories of commentators about the possible larger dimensions of the crime, would clearly have excluded by the court as rampant hearsay and too remote even to be considered.

A commission, on the other hand, is not prevented by rules of evidence from exploring in depth. As an investigatory agency, it is free to inquire into all the surrounding questions—such as did Oswald act alone; was he an agent for a conspiratorial group; were the police and government agencies alert and efficient, or confused and negligent, or indeed even venal; why was Oswald slain; was Ruby acting alone or was he an agent for others; how valid are the rumors and speculations about the tragic sequence of events; what are the answers, if any, to the inconsistencies, suspicions and troublesome questions contained in the current literature sweeping this country and Europe, and, among many other questions, what recommendations should be made for the avoidance of such catastrophes in the future?

A commission, then, does not limit itself, as does a court, to relevant testimony. On the contrary, it can listen even to the crackpots and can pursue every wild rumor. It searches for the truth not merely in the high plains of responsible testimony, but in the low marshes of psychotic hallucination. Its function is to demonstrate that which is false as well as that which is true, thus eliminating feverish theories that excite the gullible and undermine the soundness of public reaction.

That is why the report, in Appendix V, lists the names of 552 witnesses who were questioned. All leads were tracked down, irrespective of relevancy or responsibility. The commission was as much concerned with the falsity of a rumor, no matter how wild, as it was with the falsity of an assertion, even if urged by a high official.

So we see that the commission is not to be judged by whether it conducted a trial pursuant to conventional standards. Its function was different, broader, and it served purposes far beyond the limited horizon of a trial's confined issues.

However, Chief Justice Warren's well-known solicitude for the rights of the individual asserted itself, and the commission adopted rules of procedure broader than ever before practiced in the history of investigative bodies. Although the commission had the power to subpoena witnesses and documents, it granted every witness the right, under the Fifth Amendment, to refuse to answer on the ground that to do so might tend to incriminate him. The commission, however, could overcome this plea by granting the witness immunity from prosecution. Then he was compelled to answer. Thus, the truth could not be withheld and yet the individual's rights were preserved.

The report informs us that it was not necessary to grant immunity to any witness to induce him to talk.

The commission also advised every witness that he had the right to have his attorney present during interrogation and be advised by him; to object to questions; to make a clarifying statement on the record after the testimony was ended, and to purchase a copy of his testimony. Furthermore, while the hearings were closed to the public (to discourage the piecemeal revelation of testimony, which might be misleading) every witness was granted the right to have his testimony taken in public, if he so requested. Only one witness availed himself of this privilege, when he testified on two occasions.

Finally, since the commission was not acting as a court or prosecutor, but as a fact-finding agency, it felt that in fairness to the alleged assassin and his family, outstanding counsel should be appointed "to participate in the investigation and to advise the commission whether in his opinion the proceedings conformed to the basic principles of American justice." Walter E. Craig, president of the American Bar Association, accepted this task, and participated "fully and without limitation."

He and his associates were given opportunity to cross-examine witnesses, to recall them or to suggest others who should be called. The report states modestly: "This procedure was agreeable to counsel for Oswald's widow." One would think so. Here was an exquisite blend of thorough probing and preservation of the rights of the individual (including even the reputation of the accused slayer) in accordance with the great traditions of Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence.

Unprecedented public grief, and the raging volatile passions that flowed beneath it, did not deter the commission from assuming that the accused was innocent until proved guilty. It was concerned, too, that his family and all witnesses be protected from the hysteria and bitterness which the murders evoked.

The shame our country felt at the bizarre events—the President slain, the slayer slain in full view of a national television audience, a strange series of characters cavorting in the national spotlight—was offset to some extent by the dignity of the commission's effort and the nobility of its protective procedures. These represent the true picture of our country, where democratic processes have been refined to high civilized standards

Against this background, we proceed to examine the Warren Commission Report. If its integrity is uncompromising, its impartiality unyielding and its thoroughness exacting, then its persuasiveness is bound to be impressive. The salutary effects from its recommendations could be profound. In any event, we must apply our own objective critical faculties to its contents.

In its final analysis it is not the banked lights on the outside of the edifice that will stir and persuade us, but the inner glow emanating from the report itself.

The third article will appear Sunday.

Louis Nizer's Review of Warren Report—No. 1

Four Presidents of the United States have been assassinated. Lincoln's death was followed by a trial of conspirators before a specially created military tribunal. In both Garfield's and McKinley's assassinations, the killers—Charles J. Guiteau, a dissappointed office-seeker, and Leon Czolgosz, an anarchist—were caught in the act, conceded their guilt, were tried in a court and were condemned to death.

President Kennedy's assassination differed from the others in that he was shot from a distance, by an assailant unidentified at the time. When Lee Harvey Oswald was apprehended, he vehemently denied any guilt. Within 48 hours he was killed by Jack Ruby, removing the possibility of his being tried by traditional processes.

Thus, an almost incomprehensible tragedy was surrounded by unique circumstances never experienced even in the three prior Presidential assassinations. Shock throughout the world was compounded by uncertainty. There being one device likely to allay the fears and suspicions which follow such a tragedy, a Presidential commission was resorted to, which was given the task of discovering, evaluating and reporting the facts. In the meantime, rumor and wild conjecture, fed by the inconsistencies in the early reports, when hysteria ruled, took over the scene:

"We see yonder the beginning of the day, but "I think we shall never see the end of it."

SPONTANEOUS COINCIDENCES

Most often a tragedy of immense proportions is the result of a series of coincidences, each extremely remote, occurring at the same time. Lord Chesterton referred to this phenomenon as "a certain concurrence of circumstances."

When a plane inexplicably explodes in mid-air and all perish, we find it difficult to accept the theory of spontaneous occurrence of numerous coincidences, and so we rush to mysterious theories of Russian sabotage or privately planted bombs. Nevertheless, investigations have on many occasions been able to trace the causes from preserved wreckage and testimony. In one case it was revealed that the pilot raised the landing gear instead of the flaps during the landing roll, that the engineer failed to change the fuel selector to another tank, that the co-pilot in attempting to pick up charts from the floor accidentally hit the landing switch. In another case the gear-warning horn was mistaken for the stall-warning horn, while escaping fumes irritated the pilot's eyes so that he failed to lower the gear on the second half of a go-around. In another instance starlings in flight were sucked into the engines, providing a bizarre explanation for the otherwise inexplicable. So circumstances, "that unspiritual god and miscreator," play an irrational role.

The sinking of the Morro Castle, which had been announced as "the safest ship of her size that it has been possible to build," is another illustration of an unbelievable combination of coincidences. The odds against each would be overwhelming, and the odds of their simultaneous occurrence inconceivable! Yet they happened, and only a trial establishing the facts overcame the first inevitable suspicion that sabotage and dark plot were responsible for the tragedy.

The Morro Castle was destroyed by fire and sank with more than 100 fatalities only eight miles from the coast of New Jersey. The cause? Capt. Willmott died at 7:45 p. m. the night before the fire; the fire would have been detected in time long before 2:45 a. m. had not the smoke detectors been turned off for fear that the smell of a cargo of wet hides in the forward hold might annoy the passengers; a wild northeast storm suddenly blew up; Chief Officer William F. Warms, who became acting captain, had been on duty 30 straight hours without sleep, and so failed to steer the ship away from the howling 40-mile winds that infuriated the flames into headlong speed; the fierce waves had caused seasickness among the passengers and even the crew, so that they tarried in their bunks until it was too late; some fire hydrants had been dripping and had been ordered sealed to preserve the deck; the radioman, George Rogers, turned out later to be criminally insane. (Subsequently, he bludgeoned two neighbors to death and was sentenced to life imprisonment.) Yes, as Emerson wrote, "Fate is a name for facts not yet passed under the fire of thought; for causes which are unpenetrated."

WHERE RUMOR BREEDS

I stress this phenomenon of extraordinary spontaneous coincidences as a possible explanation of otherwise unfathomable tragedies, because it goes to the heart of the Kennedy assassination problem. Our country, which is powerful enough to protect entire nations, was unable to preserve the life of its President.

This is so incredible as to call for explanations that soothe our perplexed and inflamed minds with probability. We lend an ear to those who contend that one disoriented man could not alone have succeeded in so enormous a crime against the protective resources of the most powerful nation in the world; that at least an ingenious group of conspirators, backed by foreign forces or traitorous domestic plotters—even some ensconced in government—must have been behind a deed so successfully executed. Rumor breeds in such soil.

Negligence, which could have contributed to the disaster, ceases to be just another link in the chain of coincidence, but is distorted into a deliberate criminal plan. Every contradiction in early reports; every reckless statement by petty officials overstimulated by the unexpected limelight; every false assertion by those who, like scavengers, swoop down on tragedy and feed until their stomachs burst with publicity; every uninformed version of the affair spread in foreign countries, where succession of rule by violence is not uncommon—all created a brew of mystery and inflammatory conjecture as fantastic as the crime itself. Yet, one can see from the Warren Commission Report that a series of coincidences, not likely to occur again in a thousand years, constitutes the true explanation of an otherwise incredible event. The facts established by the Commission fill a vacuum of incredulity.

In one sense only, coincidence is not the unique phenomenon we ordinarily think it to be. If we tied a string around the waist of every human being, so that it extended interminably wherever each individual went, would not hundreds of millions of such strings cross innumerable times in the most unexpected ways? Of the countless people moving in all directions, would it not be extraordinary if on many occasions the strings decreed an event which, when examined in an isolated instance, defies credibility?

The report of the Warren Commission finds such a series of coincidences:

The route past the Texas Book Depository was used only because the Market Hall was not available for the President's luncheon that day and the Trade Mart, used in its stead, took the President past Oswald's building.

Oswald was hired by the Texas Book Depository just one day before the Texas Employment Bureau sought to place him at a substantially higher salary with a company located a number of blocks away from the parade route.

Clearing skies, which replaced the rain that had fallen on Dallas the morning of Nov. 22, caused the Secret Service to remove the bubble-top which, though not bullet-proof, would have afforded the President some protection; instead he was seated in an open limousine.

An employee, Bonnie Ray Williams, ate lunch on the sixth floor by himself; he went to the fifth floor at 12:20 to find some friends to watch the parade. Had he tarried 10 more minutes, or decided to watch from the sixth floor window, Oswald would probably have slunk away, since the occasion would have been inopportune for his effort.

The first bullet that struck the President in the back of the neck did not topple him to the floor of the car only because he wore a medical brace. Ironically, the brace, worn because of a war-time back injury, prevented him from falling forward, where he would have been safe with a relatively minor wound; instead, he stiffened and the next bullet shattered his skull and fatally wounded him.

Had the Secret Service and the FBI co-ordinated their information, Oswald would have been kept away from the Presidential route for 10 minutes of critical time until the motorcade passed.

Had proper precautions been taken to guard any empty or partially empty building, such as a warehouse, situated on the Presidential route, Oswald would have been apprehended and the customary small item would have appeared in the press, "man with gun arrested near Presidential motorcade."

As we shall see later, there were other contributing causes, some of negligence, some avoidable, others unforesecable, but all combining to create what Ibsen once described as the "thousand strands of the web of fate, so strangely entangled."

When Tragedy Distilled STATESMANSHIP

by A. N. SPANEL
FOUNDER-CHAIRMAN
International Latex Corporation

It was inevitable that a document as complex as the Warren Report, dealing with events surcharged with emotion, should raise some questions. But fair-minded Americans must acclaim the competence, objectivity and dedication of Chief Justice Earl Warren and his associates on the Commission.

We have read with particular care the sections of the Report analyzing the roles played by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Secret Service, the State Department, CIA and the Dallas police. As a result we found the excerpts from the testimony of the veteran director of the FBI, J. Edgar Hoover, as published in the Washington Star on October 2nd absorbingly interesting—and reassuring for the American future.

The information on the Oswald case which he provided is pertinent and compelling. But even more significant, we believe, are Mr. Hoover's solemn warnings against restrictions on the civil liberties of the individual American in the name of Presidential security. His testimony in this connection has been reported; but its deeper implications—his deliberate emphasis on the sanctity of personal rights under our American system—have not as yet received the focused attention they deserve.

To appreciate the drama of this aspect of his testimony, it should be recalled that Mr. Hoover has been smeared and pilloried by fire-eating Left-wingers who dishonor a noble word by calling themselves "liberals." Some of these gentry in times past had the effrontery to compare him with Himmler and to equate the organization he heads with the Gestapo. Nearly all of them attributed to him a passion for more and more power.

These mindless slanders are too obviously imbecilic to affect the reputation of the man and the organization he has directed for some forty years.

For here is J. Edgar Hoover, the man who under our Federal setup comes closest to being the "police chief" of the United States, rejecting and denouncing the additional police powers implicit in what he calls "totalitarian security." Firmly and eloquently he cautions his countrymen against eroding our traditional concepts of civil liberties, no matter how great the provocation.

"I don't think you can get absolute security," he told the Commission, "without almost establishing a police state, and we don't want that."

The 100 percent security being advocated in some quarters, he pointed out, would require the authorities to round up or place under house arrest all known or suspected subversives and "extremists" in every town or city visited by the President. "Now I don't think there is any place in this Country for that kind of thing," Mr. Hoover declared. Isolation and detention of people without due process of law, he maintained, was intolerable in a free society and could constitute a long leap toward the police state.

AMERICANS WILL APPLAUD

"I am particularly concerned that we don't become hysterical," he went on, "and go too far in restricting the citizens of our Country from exercising their civil and constitutional rights.... I think that the enforcement of security and the enforcement of laws dealing with subversion ought to be handled in the American manner."

Genuine liberals and responsible conservatives alike, we submit, will understand and applaud those views and warnings. They carry exceptional weight because they come from a man who, probably more than any other single American, is aware in concrete terms, not as generalizations, of the threats posed by subversives, extremists and assorted crackpots.

We believe that J. Edgar Hoover by this clearheaded defense of essential civil liberties has earned the gratitude of all thinking Americans who value our democratic institutions. It is devoutly to be hoped that his detractors on the fanatic Left, at least those who have not sold their brains and conscience for a mess of ideological pottage, will reconsider their conduct in the light of Mr. Hoover's testimony. Those who vilify the FBI and its seasoned director should be helped to understand that they are doing a grave disservice to themselves and to this Country.

J. Edgar Hoover has drawn a sharp line between legitimate police powers and near-totalitarian techniques. In effect he has given the American people timely reassurance that their freedoms are safeguarded.

This is what the late President John F. Kennedy understood so well. His profound concern for the rights of the individual and basic freedoms was perhaps his greatest legacy. Fortunately his successor, Lyndon B. Johnson, wholeheartedly embraces and carries forward that legacy.

FLOODGATES OF VIOLENCE

Mr. Hoover's reaffirmation of the priority of civil liberties is especially important in the present period of great stress, when law and order is endangered by zealots. The peril-packed doctrine is nowadays being preached in words—and worse, practiced in action—that the law may be flouted to promote a "good cause." But this is a suicidal fallacy.

Once the floodgates are opened to "justified" violence, the Country would be launched on a catastrophic course. Innumerable individuals and groups could then proclaim the justice of their own brands of violence, and the whole concept of legality—the only reliable foundation for the civil liberties Mr. Hoover champions—would begin to crumble. There simply is no room in our Country for lawlessness, whatever the alibi or the provocation.

So we salute J. Edgar Hoover for his memorable pronouncement before the Warren Commission. We salute him for holding fast to the rock-bottom principles expounded by Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln. His cautions against hysteria and totalitarian methods should have a sobering effect on our Country. Moreover, his clearheaded approach will heighten the moral authority of the FBI in carrying out its strictly limited but all-important functions.

IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST

We believe it is incumbent upon every newspaper, every radio and television station, every writer and speaker with access to an audience, to make Americans—especially the new generation growing up in a time of tensions and confused counsel—aware of Mr. Hoover's spirited defense of our living freedoms, his unswerving allegiance to due process, to law and order, to the foundation principles of American democracy.

They know practically every detail of the tragedy by heart. Yet Americans are showing tremendous interest in the Warren Commission report on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. If the public keeps buying various editions of the report at the rate for the last two weeks, the report appears certain to make bookselling history.

Three commercial publishers already have put out the report in book form. Two more will market editions in the next two weeks. The Government Printing Office (GPO) printed the official version in paperback and hard-bound volumes. So within a month of its release seven different books containing the report will have reached the market.

Popular Library scooped the industry with its 640-page pocket book. Sunday, Sept. 27, at 6:31 p.m., just one minute after release time, Popular Library's edition went on sale in New York, Chicago, and Boston. Bantam and the Associated Press began retailing books the next day, along with GPO.

Popular Library distributed 500,000 copies initially. The publisher reported they were "going fast."

A Bantam Books spokesman reported: "We put through an initial print order for 700,000 books, quickly changed it to 1,100,000 and marketed all those paperbacks in a week and a half. Now we have ordered 450,000 more copies."

Buyers also deluged the Associated Press with requests for its hard-cover volume. Within 10 days of the report's release, AP had taken 400,000 orders. It had 90,000 copies on hand for early distribution. Now it's receiving 150,000 copies a week from the printer and mailing 25,000 copies a day. Even at that, many of the earliest buyers will wait a month for books.

Although approximately 1,700,000 copies of the report (counting Government and commercial editions) are now on the market, and more are to come, McGraw-Hill will soon receive the first shipments of 20,000 cloth-covered books—and Doubleday begins marketing 35,000 hardback copies early this week. These two publishers will help swell the total number of available copies to roughly 2,600,000 by the end of October.

The state of Texas has issued a book too. It's The Texas Supplemental Report on the Assassination of President John F. Kennedy and the Serious Wounding of Governor John B. Connally. This 18-page summary concurs with the Warren Commission findings that Oswald, acting alone, killed President Kennedy. It criticizes the FBI for not alerting Dallas police to Oswald's presence in the city. It also urges more co-operation among Federal, state, and local enforcement agencies and asks for consideration of adopting a rule that would bar cameras from Texas courtrooms. The Texas report isn't for sale.

Dallas Police Chief Says FBI Asked Coverup on Conduct in Oswald Case

DALLAS, Oct. 7 (UPI) The Warren Commission report took the FBI to task for failing to warn other agencies about Lee Harvey Oswald. The Dallas Police Chief said yesterday that he was once asked by the FBI to deny there ever was such a failure.

In a letter to the Warren Commission made public yesterday, Police Chief Jesse Curry said the request came from Gordon Shanklin, agent in charge of the Dallas FBI office, on Nov. 22, the day Oswald killed President Kennedy.

Curry had told newsmen that day that although the FBI had known about Oswald, they had passed on no information to the Dallas police.

"Within a few minutes of my statement to the press," Curry said in the letter, Shanklin was on the phone.

Curry said the FBI did not want to admit publicly that it had known about Oswald before the assassination, and asked Curry to retract his statement. Curry did retract the statement.

The FBI later admitted it had Oswald under investigation.

Shanklin refused to confirm or deny that he had made the phone call or the request.

Warren Report Stirs Uneasi

By RAY McHUGH

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The Warren Commission report on the assassination of President Kennedy has been greeted with general approval.

In its reconstruction of the events leading to the fatal attack in Dallas last Nov. 22 it has been accepted as painstakingly thorough.

The findings that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone, that he was without doubt the killer and that he was not part of any conspiracy have been greeted by general relief.

But, as time permits closer examination, some of the commission's recommendations and criticisms have stirred uneasiness. The stinging rebukes for the Secret Service and the Federal Bureau of Investigation are called "enthusiastic hindsight" by one congressman.

Others have voiced fears that traditional foes of the two agencies might seize on the report to launch a smear campaign.

"After any tragedy, one always hears the plaintive words if we had done this or if we had done that it wouldn't have happened," said the congressman.

"The facts are that both the Secret Service and the FBI carried out their responsibilities exactly as they were outlined and to the best of their ability.

"Certainly if procedures had been different, Oswald might not have been successful. But the lesson here is to move ahead, to tighten procedures, not to throw blame around wildly at men who have been doing their job.

"No system is perfect. Unfortunately we are mortals. We make mistakes. We learn from our mistakes and our tragedies."

The commission's view of some of the lessons learned, however, troubles many Washington observers.

The call for "more useful and precise criteria defining potential threats to the president" appears sound; but in it lurks the danger of unbridled police interference in individual rights, even possible political intimidation.

In its report the Warren Commission concluded that the FBI "took an unduly restrictive view of its role in preventive intelligence work."

Oswald killed President Kennedy. The FBI knew Oswald. Therefore, the commission reasons, the FBI should have foreseen the crime and prevented it.

The FBI, however, had no information suggesting that Oswald was a potential threat to Mr. Kennedy. Federal court rulings in recent years have pointedly discouraged authorities from speculating on the unproved designs of leftists and other subversives. Director J. Edgar Hoover testified in detail to the commission on the valuation of Oswald although his full remarks were not included in the report.

One thing Hoover pointed out was that the history of Oswald's psychiatric treatment was not available to the FBI before the assassination. Only a special exception to law made that record available to the commission.

The Warren report implies a lack of close liaison between the Secret Service and the FBI. This had been emphatically denied by both agencies. James J. Rowley, chief of the Secret Service, is a former FBI agent and a close personal friend of Hoover.

The commission summarized the testimony of Everett I. Bouck, chief of the protective research section of the Secret Service and concludes that he believes that had all FBI files on Oswald been made available, Oswald would have been apprehended before the assassination.

It has been learned that this conclusion was drawn by the commission, not by Bouck who emphasized that the FBI had followed standard procedures and had cooperated with the Secret Service.

Mr. Hoover's emphatic statements that the FBI had no information that would classify Oswald as a potential assassin, and the Warren Commission's criticism of "an unduly restrictive view" raise disturbing suggestions.

If the Secret Service, FBI and local police are to apply intangible criteria in determining such threats, the problem of policing presidential appearances becomes staggering. And, the threat to individual rights becomes serious.

Police officers have estimated that as many as 5,000 persons might have to be detained, arrested or watched in cities like New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. Such tactics would be certain to raise a storm of constitutional issues.

The dragnet would have to take in all suspected left wing subversives, ultra rightists, Fascists, the emotionally unstable and irrational, conceivably even political critics and rivals.

"It would take an army to handle so-called potential threats in many cities," one official remarked.

The task of simply rounding up members of organizations on the attorney general's subversive list would be staggering in itself.

Gov. Edmund Brown of California, a former state attorney general, has told reporters he knows of no way to detain a dangerous mentally ill individual without violating his civil rights.

It is easy to agree with Warren Commission report and accept all its findings. The assassination left an emotional mark on the nation. There is a hunger to assess blame, to demand far-reaching preventive action.

But, President Kennedy himself would have been the last man to ask for "police state" methods, mass interrogation, arrests on intangible suspicion, association or hearsay.

The Secret Service and the FBI have diligently avoided Gestapo labels. They have bent over backward to observe civil and individual rights.

There is much merit in the commission report. Many of its recommendations are already being practiced.

But, in it may lie also the temptation to invoke sweeping federal powers.

Sen. Everett Dirksen of Illinois, who expressed the first public misgivings about the criticism of the Secret Service and the FBI, reminded the nation that "there were no charges against Oswald and no grounds on which to hold him."

And on the morning of Nov. 22, President Kennedy said:

"If anyone really wanted to shoot the President . . . there was nothing anybody could do . . ."

Texas Gives Own Version

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN, Tex.

Texas Attorney General Waggoner Carr, reporting on Texas' role in the investigation of the Kennedy assassination yesterday urged changes in law enforcement information exchange methods and in trial news coverage practices.

Mr. Carr presented the report to Gov. John Connally, himself wounded by the assassin, alleged to have been Lee Harvey Oswald.

Mr. Carr concurred in findings of the Warren Commission, the national group which probed the assassination and added:

"So far as is known to me or my special counsel there are no untapped sources of information in the assembling of all material facts pertaining to the assassination of President Kennedy."

Mr. Carr's report traced the plans for, and subsequent decision against holding a court of inquiry—a fact-finding hearing by a justice of the peace—in Texas.

He said that "immediately following the arrest of Lee Harvey Oswald and after the arrest of Jack Ruby, (convicted of killing Oswald) the orderly procedures of the rule of law were placed under severe strain and unusual demands."

Mr. Carr gave three causes or the demands:

1. "The news media . . . virtually took charge of the entrances, hallways and public rooms of the city jail before Oswald was placed in jail. . . ."

2. "While local officials recognize that subsequent events, including the killing of Ruby during an attempted transfer from the city jail to the county jail, magnified the deficiency in security measures, they do not accept the full responsibility for such conditions because of the fact that they had no knowledge whatever of Oswald and his background until they were advised (after the assassination) of his presence in Dallas and his past activities by the Federal authorities.

3. "Interviews and comments elicited by the news media from police officers and the prosecuting attorneys . . . were made public before arraignment or indictment of the suspects. . . . The opportunity was provided for the leading defense counsel (Melvin Belli) to seize the microphones from co-operative news media in the courtroom and, in a vindicative manner, castigate the jury, judiciary and the city of Dallas with discredit to himself and the legal profession."

The 4,000-word report then concluded with recommendations:

That representatives of the state bar, the news media and local and state officials "take appropriate steps to establish a fair and satisfactory working relationship designed to prevent future disorder and confusion in pretrial activities, deficiencies in security for prisoners, as well as to improve judicial ethics in criminal trials."

Feud Brews

WASHINGTON — The Warren Commission's sharp criticism of both the Secret Service and the Federal Bureau of Investigation for inadequacy of performance related to the assassination of President Kennedy is sure to set off a bitter conflict as soon as the President and Congress get around to it.

Throughout all of his 40 years as chief of the FBI, J. Edgar Hoover has lost no opportunity to express his scorn for the tiny Secret Service branch of the Treasury Department which since 1906 has been formally charged with the job of physical protection of Presidents of the United States.

And the Secret Service on its side long has had its eye peeled toward the giant FBI with special attention to director Hoover's remarkable popularity in Congress.

IT IS CURIOUSLY true on the other hand that Mr. Hoover is no favorite of his executive superiors. At the age of 29 he was appointed to head the bureau by President Coolidge, incident to the discharge of Atty. Gen. Harry Daugherty at height of the scandals flowing out of the administration of President Warren G. Harding.

Mr. Hoover's timidity during his first years was so great that after passage in the early 1930s of the Lindbergh kidnaping and other laws greatly increasing federal as against state authority in law enforcement, Atty. Gen. Homer S. Cummings signed up a special publicity man to popularize the FBI and its chief.

It may be that Mr. Cummings slightly overdid it, since Mr. Hoover's capacity for taking care of himself has been growing ever since. Not only has he far exceeded the normal retirement age but, due to his iron grip on Congress, he long since had all of his executive superiors nonplused.

ONE REMEMBERS THE late Frank Murphy, successively governor general of the Philippines, governor of Michigan, U.S. attorney general and member of the Supreme Court. The FBI director at all times had Murphy completely baffled, but he has been equally successful in sidestepping orders of attorney generals ever since, including Robert F. Kennedy, recently resigned to become a candidate for U.S. senator from New York.

One reason for retirement by "Bobbie" Kennedy from the Cabinet certainly was his inability to fathom the ways of J. Edgar Hoover.

Dislike by attorneys general for Hoover appears to have been duplicated in the White House. Perhaps Hoover served out the tenure of Attorney General Cummings in complete accord; but no other attorney general since then. Under subsequent Roosevelt appointees as attorney general, Murphy, Robert H. Jackson and Francis Biddle, Hoover's self-confidence continued to mount.

Under the succeeding Presidents, Truman, Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson to date, the J. Edgar Hoover arrogance has been wholly insufferable.

THE POINT IS that Congress is most likely to leap through the Hoover hoop at the drop of a hat. No President for at least 20 years has dared to challenge the FBI regime. And Congress traditionally has granted all FBI requests for appropriation, and usually more.

So it is that President Johnson is faced with a severe challenge if he should come up with a request for continuation of the miniscule Treasury Secret Service, 844 men strong, as guardian of himself and the White House.

Somebody in the Legislative branch certainly will propose that the job be turned over to the FBI, and by all recent congressional precedents that move will be ratified with a whoop.

NOTABLY THERE was no congressionally prescribed police guardianship of the White House until 1906 when the job was allotted to the Secret Service, a branch of the Treasury Department previously devoted exclusively to pursuit of counterfeiters and other attacks on the nation's money.

Following the assassination of President McKinley in 1901, the latter branch had been called on for a few recruits — no more than a dozen to stand guard on President Theodore Roosevelt around the clock. As above stated, that arrangement was made legal by congressional enactment in 1906. The FBI did not come into existence until 1908.

Presently, the FBI numbers 14,452 employes.

SHOCKER IN THE WARREN COMMISSION REPORT regarding U. S. Government officials who in 1962 approved a $435.71 loan to help Oswald return from Russia. The commission absolves them, to wit: "The officers of the Department of State and Naturalization Service, acting within the proper limits of their descretion, concluded that Oswald's return to the United States was in the best interests of the country."

But the Secret Service and FBI were negligent!

(Memo to editors everywhere: The Warren Report definitely proves that Texas Senator Tower never arranged—as erroneously reported many times by various publications—Lee Oswald's return fare from Russia.)

Bureaucratic Feuding . . . By Chalmers M. Roberts

Warren Report Stings FBI

THE WARREN Commission report on the Kennedy assassination has surfaced one of the oldest bureaucratic feuds in Washington, that between the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Secret Service.

Roberts

Furthermore, it has accentuated in public the distaste the FBI and the State Department feel for each other. And it illuminates the FBI's inability to take any public criticism.

Bureaucratic infighting is old stuff in the Capital; the Forest Service, the Reclamation Bureau and others have been involved in some historic feuds. But it takes the public spotlight to show that these struggles are like icebergs: More doesn't show than does show.

The FBI long has been the most sacrosanct agency in town and FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover's current relations with President Johnson appear to be excellent. Still, he apparently decided to leak his side of the assassination case in advance of publication of the transcript in what amounted to putting the rap on the State Department for permitting Lee Oswald to return to the United States after his defection to the Soviet Union.

The Hoover statement and the State Department documents on Oswald reveal a totally different way of looking at defectors. Hoover says, in effect, be gone and good riddance. State says, in effect, defectors are embarrassing to the United States and should be brought home unless they renounce their citizenship, which Oswald never did though he sought to do so.

The FBI-Secret Service feud long has been well know. The Secret Service men have felt Hoover wanted to swallow their much smaller agency.

The Warren report criticized the FBI, in itself a major event, for its "unduly restrictive view" of its duties in not having even told the Secret Service it knew Oswald was in Dallas and working in a building along the Presidential route.

INDEED, reading the evidence in the Commission's report compels the thought that the Commission's criticism was mildly worded. Nor was the State Department laxity in informing others of Oswald hit as hard by the Commission as it might well have been.

FBI relations with the Central Intelligence Agency were only touched on in the report. But it is known there have been cases, or so say CIA officials, when the FBI withheld information the CIA wanted. The FBI, many believe, never forgave CIA for taking over its Western Hemisphere jurisdiction after the war.

JOSEPH ALSOP is on leave. His column will be resumed on his return.

All these subsurface feuds, and others too, are part of the price of a vast bureaucracy such as the United States Government.

It is particularly shocking, however, that after such a painstaking effort as that of the unanimous Warren Commission report one agency which has been criticized, the FBI, should attempt to twist the record of another agency.

State's report from its Moscow Embassy said that Oswald "stated frankly that he had learned a hard "lesson" after defecting, said he had "been completely relieved of his illusions about the Soviet Union" and declared he had "acquired a new understanding and appreciation of the United States and the meaning of freedom."

It added that much of Oswald's arrogance and bravado "appears to have left him."

IN LIGHT of what we now know this was a superficial report since it did not go beyond repeating what Oswald had said. But that is very different from the conclusions Hoover drew, as recounted in his testimony to the Commission.

Hoover said that "the Embassy gave him a clean bill of health" and "the report of the State Department . . . indicated this man was a thoroughly safe risk, he had changed his views, he was a loyal man now and had seen the light of day, so to speak."

Hoover produced no document saying any such thing. His comments thus were nothing less than unsubstantiated innuendo toward State designed, it is evident, to turn aside the Commission's criticism of the FBI's own laxity in dealing with the Secret Service.

The Secret Service, which deservedly took the biggest rap of all from the Commission, thus far at least has had the grace to take it like a man.

Lee Oswald: TV, the Press And Justice

By Joseph Carter
Of The Herald Tribune Staff

The 12th and final recommendation of the Warren Commission report on the assassination of President Kennedy reads:

"The Commission recommends that the representatives of the bar, law enforcement agencies, and the news media work together to establish ethical standards concerning the collection and presentation of information to the public so that there will be no interference with pending criminal investigations, court proceedings, or the right of individuals to a fair trial."

So, once again the question of the role of the press in a free society was brought to the fore. But this time it had a new look, for at the heart of the newscoverage in Dallas were the television cameras.

There can be little doubt—and the Commission report pointed this out—that the serio-comic events that followed the assassination (which included the first televised jail break in history) would not have occurred had it not been for the pitiable anxiety of the members of the Dallas Police Department and many of the prosecutor's staff to appear on television.

Television brings a whole new dimension to what used to be called "the press," and it presents many a knotty problem.

EDITORS' REACTION

Almost immediately after the report was made public, Miles H. Wolff, executive editor of the Greensboro, N. C., Daily News and president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, announced that a special study committee would consult with radio and television officials on the problem.

The crux of the problem, of course, is how to keep the American people informed, and yet not to infringe on the civil rights of individuals involved.

A survey of the New York Herald Tribune showed that responsible leaders in and out of the press are deeply concerned about the problem—but that an answer has not yet been found.

Seated in his office in the handsome new law school at Columbia University, where he is now a professor, Telford Taylor—the prosecutor at the Nuremberg war trials—said carefully:

"It seems to me that there are two points where I'm not in agreement with the report. One is the point of the suspicion at first, immediately after the assassination, that President Kennedy had been killed as part of a plot.

"Therefore, in my opinion, Lee Oswald should not have been in the hands of the Dallas police at all. There is a Federal statute covering this—the Commission report mentions it. But it says that it was quickly disproved that there had been a plot, and this is where I differ. Since there was that suspicion, I think Federal authorities should have taken Oswald into custody and held him until it had been proved beyond all doubt that there had been no plot—a circumstance that could have held Oswald in their custody for weeks.

ASSIGNING THE BLAME

"My second point is that I am inclined to lay almost all of the blame for this on the Dallas police.

"But that is simply this particular instance.

"I think that the press has to examine itself in two particulars.

"Now say that this involved, not the murder of a President, but some private citizen. There was an invasion of civil rights there, and I don't think the press can put all the blame on the Dallas police. It is extremely doubtful that such a thing could happen here in New York, but we all have the responsibility to recognize that there are many cities in this country that are not as sophisticated as New York, and the press has the responsibility of recognizing its own responsibilities in this matter, and not simply see how far it can go in a different situation.

"I was also appalled at that interview on TV with Mrs. (J. D.) Tippit, the widow of the slain policeman, when some TV reporter with obviously no taste at all asked her how she felt her grief rated with that of Mrs. Kennedy. Really, it was atrocious, and some responsible official somwhere along the line should have recognized this, and also should have recognized that Mrs. Tippit obviously did not know that her own rights of privacy were being invaded.

"I don't think that the press as a whole has a right to take advantage of the ignorance of the average citizen about what his rights are in a situation like this.

"This, too, is a field in which I would very much dislike seeing any legislation, and I do hope that the responsible leaders effective standards.

'APPALLING' COVERAGE

Pro. Louis Pollack, of the Yale Law School, had somewhat similar views, although he thought it was a problem for the Attorney General of the United States.

"It is appalling to recall how intensive the coverage of the press was of the Oswald affair," said Prof. Pollak. "Oswald couldn't have gotten a fair trial anywhere in the United States after that, had he lived. I see it as a challenge, not just to the press, but to the press, the police and the bar. It is at precisely the point of the arrest of a suspect —the whole period prior to trial, that we could stand a good deal of limitation of publicity.

"The whole point is the conflict between freedom of the press and insuring a fair trial for a suspect. We might look at the English experience. We don't have to put on rose-colored glasses, but the English system has two advantages: In England, no publicity of this type is allowed at all, and the prisoner's rights are protected immediately.

"In other words, the press is not allowed to try the prisoner by a sort of third degree, and the police immediately make sure that the prisoner has a lawyer.

"The most important part of what I am saying is that the owners of the press must do something about it themselves, rather than allowing it to become a matter for legislation.

WANTED: GROUND RULES

"And I do believe that the Attorney General should have some top level conferences about it, for it clearly falls within his jurisdiction. It was not just the press that behaved badly, it was also the police and the prosecuting attorneys. It is there, I think, that the Attorney General should lay down some ground rules that would apply to the whole country."

But that this is not a simple matter at all was pointed out by Edward K. Thompson, the editor of Life magazine.

"In this particular case, I'm inclined to lay the blame on the Dallas police and the prosecuting attorneys," he said. "That was about as venal a place as I've ever dealt with. It was a sieve of leaked information, rumors, leaked diaries and pictures.

"But in general we have a competitive press, and thank God we do. Life is in competition with the Herald Tribune and the Herald Tribune is in competition with television. And so between us we give the American people about as thorough a picture of the world as possible.

"Now, is a responsible editor going to tell a reporter not to cover such-and-such a story, or to ask questions only up to such-and-such a point? You don't run into this sort of thing in any well run police department, or any well run police department, or any well run court. Can you imagine what Commissioner (Michael J.) Murphy would have have done in this town if some precinct captain let this sort of thing go on at his station? He'd hand him his head on a platter.

"No, I think this is for the police and for the bar."

THE POOL SYSTEM

Edward G. Barrett, dean of the Columbia School of Journalism, was well aware of the dilemma.

"I hope that if a committee is set up, it will take a look at the British system and take what is good from it," he said.

"Perhaps the committee should look into the pool system of covering a major story, like that of the visit of Prime Minister Nikita Khrushchev a few years ago. That way, instead of 350 reporters, you'd have 35 or 50. (Mr. Thompson was adamant against the pool idea, except in very special circumstances.)

Hoover Claim Oswald Was Called Safe Risk Makes State Cry 'Foul'

The State Department believes it has been hit below the belt by FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover's contention that it had concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald was "a thoroughly safe risk."

Officials of the Department said Friday night that they could find no reports or documents to support that statement by the chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The Department did make available to newsmen a 1961 and a 1962 document on Oswald, who stands accused of assassinating President Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963.

One document, from the American Embassy in Moscow, appears to be the one to which Hoover referred when he testified before the Warren Commission last May 14. But the document says nothing that indicates that Oswald was "a thoroughly safe risk," or a "loyal man," nor does it give him "a clean bill," as Hoover said a State Department report concluded.

One State Department source said it was "undignified" for two departments of Government to be thrown into public dispute in the way they were when Hoover's accusation was prematurely made public on Friday.

A widespread view in official Washington yesterday was that Hoover authorized advance disclosure of his testimony before the Warren Commission, to try to offset criticism of the FBI. The Commission report said that the FBI had taken "an unduly restrictive view of its role in preventive intelligence work" prior to the President's assassination.

The Embassy report to the State Department, to which Hoover seemed to be referring, was a 2½-page document dated July 11, 1961. It was signed by Boris H. Klosson, American counselor for political affairs in Moscow. It said in part:

"Twenty months of the realities of life in the Soviet Union have clearly had a maturing effect on Oswald. He stated frankly that he had learned a hard lesson the hard way and that he had been completely relieved of his illusions about the Soviet Union at the same time that understanding and appreciation of the United States and the meaning of freedom.

"Much of the arrogance and bravado which characterized him on his first visit to the Embassy appears to have left him.

Oswald, at that time, had come to the Embassy asking help to return to the United States. In 1959, soon after he arrived in the Soviet Union, he had gone to the Embassy and said he wanted to renounce his citizenship. The Embassy, under its normal cautionary procedures, suggested he think over his intention. Oswald never followed through on the renunciation. Hoover, in his recent testimony, said he personally feels that such people should be able to renounce their citizenship "at once."

A State Department document from Washington dated March 16, 1962, said the Office of Soviet Union Affairs believed it was in the interest of the United States to give Oswald, his wife, and their child opportunity to return to the United States.

To refuse to do so, the memorandum said, could "weaken" efforts by the United States to get the Soviets to allow Russian relatives of American citizens to leave the Soviet Union. That report, however, far from "clearing" Oswald in any way, referred to him as "an unstable character, whose actions are entirely unpredictable."

THE NATION

The Warren Report

Within the last 100 years, four American Presidents have been assassinated. All were shot in public places without warning. Abraham Lincoln was slain by a fanatical Confederate sympathizer while attending a theater. James A. Garfield, about to board a train in Washington, was shot from behind by a disappointed office-seeker. William McKinley was killed by a self-styled anarchist who approached the Chief Executive in a public reception line at the Pan American Exposition in Buffalo. And John F. Kennedy was shot as his motorcade moved through Dallas last Nov. 22.

In the early years of the U.S., protection of the President was intermittent and haphazard. There was little concern for his safety, despite frequent threatening letters, and the various Presidents moved about freely without escort. Protection became systematic and continuous only after President McKinley was killed in 1901. The next year the Secret Service, which was organized in 1865 as a division of the Treasury Department to deal with counterfeiting, assumed full-time responsibility for the safety of the President. It still has that job today.

Growing Danger

The problems of protecting an American President have multiplied as his responsibilities and movements have expanded in a changing world. With jet travel, the President can be in the center of world troubles in one day and overseas on cold war business the next. He is continually exposed to potential danger. President Kennedy himself is reported to have said in a strangely prophetic conversation on the morning of his death that anybody with a telescopic rifle could easily take a shot at a passing President from atop a high building.

Soon after Mr. Kennedy was slain, President Johnson appointed a seven-man commission headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren to investigate the assassination and the reasons behind it. He instructed the commission to "satisfy itself that the truth is known so far as it can be discovered." One objective was to answer conspiratorial speculations abroad that could tarnish this country's prestige and hamper efforts toward better East-West relations.

The Findings

Last week, after 10 months of inquiry which included the questioning of 552 witnesses, the commission released an 888-page report with these main conclusions:

(1) "That the shots which killed President Kennedy and wounded Governor Connally were fired by Lee Harvey Oswald."

(2) "That there was no evidence that either Lee Harvey Oswald or Jack Ruby was part of any conspiracy, domestic or foreign, to assasssinate President Kennedy." Thus the commission rejected the rumors and charges that Oswald had not acted alone in the assassination of the President. It also rejected allegations that he and Jack Ruby, the night club owner who subsequently killed Oswald before a trial could be held, were party to any plot—either left-wing or right-wing—to kill the President. The report said Ruby also acted on his own. The commission did not pinpoint the motives of either man.

(3) That the Secret Service and F.B.I. were at fault in carrying out their respective roles. The Commission sharply criticized the Secret Service for failing to make adequate preparation for President Kennedy's trip to Dallas. It reprimanded the F.B.I. for failure to inform the Secret Service about the presence in Dallas of Oswald, who once defected to Russia.

Hoover's View

F.B.I. Director J. Edgar Hoover was known to be upset by the criticism of his agency. On Friday The Washington Evening Star published portions of Mr. Hoover's testimony before the commission in which he warned about tightening Presidential protection too far. He said this could lead to a police state "and we don't want that." It was generally believed Mr. Hoover or an aide had "leaked" the testimony prior to its official publication in an effort to rebut criticism of the F.B.I.

However, the brunt of the commission's indictment was directed at the Secret Service, which has primary responsibility for guarding the President. To improve the protection, the commission recommended, among other things, appointment by the Secretary of the Treasury of a new special assistant responsible directly to him; the overhaul of Secret Service facilities for "advance detection of potential threats against the President" and for conducting the Presidential motorcades, and the enactment of legislation making assassination of the President or Vice President a Federal crime. At present, Federal authorities have no clearly defined jurisdiction to investigate such killings.

Reaction overseas to the commission's conclusions were mixed.

Generally speaking, acceptance of the Warren Commission's findings was most widespread among those who tend to think well of the United States—most Western Europeans, for example. Among those tending to be critical of the United States—Arabs and Communists, for example — the conspiratorial theory persisted.

If and when any changes will be made will depend largely on a four-man, cabinet-rank committee appointed by President Johnson to advise him on the execution of the commission's recommendations. The committee is expected to complete its studies and make specific proposals before the end of the year.

However, the effectiveness of any protective measures depends on the President himself. History has shown that Presidents generally find protective restraints irksome, and like most political leaders, they want to meet people. This inevitably leads to plowing through airport crowds, shaking hundreds of hands on sidewalks, and chatting with tourists outside the White House fence. President Johnson does these things all the time, but he made it known last week he does not share the concern expressed about his safety.

Finally, physical protection of the President is only part of the problem. A larger question is the continuity of Presidential responsibility. This includes other facets such as undue strains on the President's health; the inadequate system for succession to the Presidency, and the absence of systematic protection for Presidential and Vice-Presidential candidates.

Bills to correct these deficiencies were before Congress, but the legislators adjourned yesterday until January without any action.

Arrests in Neshoba

A 20-year-old University of Wisconsin student who spent the "long hot summer" with other civil rights workers in Mississippi wrote in a letter last July to his hometown newspaper in Croton, N. Y.:

"It still takes more imagination than I possess to really believe that [this] hot, sticky, quiet and intensely ordinary little Southern town . . . could possibly explode into shattering violence."

Yet violence there had been—including the murder of three civil rights workers near the town of Philadelphia in Neshoba County almost as soon as the Mississippi project got under way last June.

Last week a Federal grand jury in Biloxi handed down indictments against five present and former members of the Neshoba County police force on charges of "striking, beating and whipping" Negroes.

The jury has been investigating the murder of the three civil rights workers and other violence in Mississippi.

The five, who were arrested yesterday, are:

Neshoba County Sheriff Lawrence Rainey, 41; Deputy Sheriff Cecil Price, 26; Neal Otha Burkes, 71, a Philadelphia patrolman and former Neshoba County deputy sheriff; Ethel Glen Barnett, 42, Neshoba County sheriff until last January, and Richard Andrew Willis, 40, another Philadelhpia patrolman.

Among the charges were unwarranted "incarceration" and brutality against local Negroes for the purpose of forcing them to make self-incriminating confessions with the intent of depriving them of rights.

The accused are charged under a statute first enacted in 1870 making it a Federal crime to wilfully deny a person his rights under the Constitution while acting under the guise of law.

The Biloxi jury—22 whites and one Negro woman—had heard 85 witnesses in a two-week investigation into alleged harassment, intimidation and violence against Negroes and white civil rights workers in Neshoba.

The Federal jury could not indict for murder, which is a state offense.

One question immediately raised by the indictments was whether they increased the possibility of eventual arrests in connection with the triple-slaying of the civil rights workers. Last Wednesday a Neshoba County grand jury adjourned its three-day investigation of the triple-slaying without making any charges.

The five arrested yesterday are expected to be tried by a jury from the Southern District of Mississippi, probably in Meridian next month. Despite the fact that it will be a Federal jury, it is likely to be all-white, if Mississippi custom is followed.

The charges under the two-count indictment of deprivation of rights of the local Negroes carry a maximum penalty of one year imprisonment and a fine of $1,000 on each count.

Following is the official transcript of President Johnson's news conference yesterday:

THE PRESIDENT: The Federal Government began operations under my first budget on July 1. The Kennedy year went out June 30. I spent part of the afternoon with Mr. Gordon yesterday, and we worked on it some more this morning. We now have complete figures for government operations during the first two months of this fiscal year, totaled and complete, July and August. This is what the figures show:

1. Total budget expenditures for this two months period are down $667 million from the same period last year.

2. Civilian employment in the Executive Branch in July 1964 was 25,000 below the same month, July, in the previous year. In August of 1964, it was 17,000 down below August of 1963. We expect that the September figures will also be below last year's level. In a few days, when we have our reports calculated from the various agencies, we will give you that information.

Federal non-defense agencies report in accordance with my reporting requirements that they took steps to initiate management improvements and cost reductions in July and August which will produce savings of more than $178 million on an annual basis. These savings are in addition to the $100 million reported last April, and to the $140 million reported in July. I would caution you that these are figures in non-defense agencies. They are in addition to the $2.5 billion savings actually already realized last year under the Defense Department's cost reduction program.

The agencies with the largest savings to be realized by actions taken in the first two months of our fiscal year, July and August, are as follows:

Savings Cited

Atomic Energy Commission, $66 million.

National Aeronautics and Space Administration, $44 million.

Department of Agriculture, $14,600,000.

Post Office Department, $10,500,000.

Agency for International Development, $8,900,000.

I have an economic statement.

This week as we enter the last quarter of 1964, the 44th month of our economic expansion, we can see the economic record of the year now taking shape. The pace of our advance has quickened. Unemployment, after remaining stubbornly between 5½ and 6 percent in 1962 and 1963, dropped to 5.3 in the first half of the year, to 5.1 in the first quarter.

Our total national output is growing at a 5 percent rate in real terms. With the aid of the tax cut, consumers are leading the advance. In the first half of the year, their spending rose by a record $15 billion. Strong gains are now continuing. In July August, and the first four weeks of September, retail sales have been 6 percent or more above this period last year. Business is investing 13 percent more in plant and equipment this year than last year. Sharply rising profits and depreciation allowances, which as you will recall were running 12 percent above a year earlier during the second quarter, have supplied most of the necessary funds.

Our great gains are not being eroded by inflation. Consumer prices, which dropped a bit in August, rose only 1 per cent in the past year, a rise well below the postwar average. Average wholesale prices were below their levels of a year earlier, and below their level at the time that the tax cut was enacted. Wise and responsible policies by business, by labor, and by government, working and reasoning together in harmony, can bring us continued solid and sound expansion for a long time to come.

A-Fleet Returns

Today the first round-the-world cruise of our first nuclear task force will come to an end when the three ships comprising that force return to their home ports in the United States. The carrier Enterprise and the cruiser Long Beach will put in at Norfolk, and the guided missile frigate Bainbridge will arrive in Charleston. I commend this event to your attention as one of great interest and there is a fuller statement that you can copy.

I have a statement prepared on the Congress that will be available to you, but I don't want to take your time from questions to read it. It summarizes the 10 months of hard, painstaking work of the Members and it gives my opinion of the achievement of the Congress.

I have a brief announcement on the number of women since we started our special program to induce the employment and promotion of women in the Federal service. Since our last report on September 6th, the Departments and selected agencies have reported a total of 88 personnel actions promoting or appointing women in grades GS-12 and above. These additions bring the grand total since January, 1964, to 1542, excluding Presidential appointments. With the Presidential appointments, that brings a total of 1610. There is more detail on that if you want it.

There is also a statement here by the Secretary of State and the Director of the Office of Information for providing the United States with a more flexible and effective foreign service. I won't read that. If you care to have it, you can get that mimeographed and George will make them available to you.

Now I will be glad to answer any questions.

Q. Mr. President, can you tell us how many women in GS-12 and above were in Government a year ago.

A. No, I can just tell you that we have added that many by promotion and appointment.

Q. Well, this is in addition?

A. These are in addition to that. You will remember it was reported — I questioned it at the time—but someone said that we would have at least 50 women in top places in Government. There was considerable splash about it and stories about the 50, and there has been 1600-odd.

Q. Mr. President, can you tell us when you plan to have the President-elect of Mexico and his wife as your guests at the LBJ Ranch, and also your thoughts in making the invitation?

A.

Q. Mr. President, in the light of the Warren Comission's report, and the campaign season, there are many stories about your behavior in crowds and the campaign and your physical well being. Because of these recommendations in the Warren Commission report, and because of some of these concerns that have been expressed, would this start you to change your style?

A. No. I want to be fully responsive to your question and I have studied the Warren Commission report. I wish you would specify what recommendations you had in mind, because I have been reading some of these articles that are written by people who obviously haven't seen it.

Q. It is not the solid recommendations, but some of the suggestions.

The President: What specific ones?

Questioner: Well, that you not go into the thick of a crowd.

A. There is no such recommendation.

Q. Well, undue exposure.

A. There is no such suggestion. I commend the report to your reading. I have read it and I have the provisions marked, and they point out that the President must have association and contact with them, and they do not recommend that you not do it. The facts of the case are that when you are visiting with these crowds and shaking hands with people, this is the least dangerous period that the President has. I am just amazed that the press would point up these things as creating a problem. I would have you know that the Director of the Secret Service and all of those associated with him tell me that you frequently quote their opinions and their feeling without authority or without justification, in your stories.

Only yesterday I sent him a story where a usually reliable White House reporter had written about the concern of the Secret Service and it was not only a concern, but they felt that we were following their instructions. I never violate any instructions from them. But the question is whether to follow some reporter who has neither read the Warren Report nor who knows anything about security — following his suggestion or following the suggestion of the security man.

Now, this morning I have this note from the chief of the service, and this is the feeling of all the people who have served the President.

Following the assassination, we took a good many precautionary steps. We had the highest people in this Government meet and attempt to work out what additional precautions could be taken. I don't want to go into all of those, because I really think that you all serve no good purpose by playing on these things and inviting the attention of folks who have interests in these fields, but if you want to do it and must do it, I think that you ought to do it with the facts, and not off the top of your head.

The memo from the Chief of the Secret Service this morning says this, which might be helpful to some of you.

There has been much said concerning the dangerous risk involved when the President personally appears in and mingles with crowds. The Secret Service is quite accustomed to working in crowds, and this responsibility does not make them nervous or jittery or worried. It is the nature of the protective assignment that the Secret Service is always concerned for the safety of the President and the First Family. The element of surprise which is gained during impromptu appearances of the President, for example, when he stops his car during a motorcade without notice is often the most important deterrent to risk. The ability to infiltrate any gathered crowd by plainclothesmen and law enforcement officers, both male and female, is another important deterrent. The crowd itself also offers some protection by covering the President. It also prevents a potential assassin from performing an act unnoticed and prevents the escape of the individual. When on the same level, only these persons in the front row have fair accessibility to the President.

(At this point the President went off the record.)

The President: But I would say that we have had the Secret Service meet with the FBI and appropriate people in other investigative agencies and we comply with their requests and with their instructions. I am very pleased with the competence of the Secret Service people that surround me, and with the cooperation that they receive from Mr. Hoover and his group at all times. We do feel and we have felt all along that you do need to take advance precautions before you go into a place. We try as best we can to balance their desire that we not overly advertise far ahead of time our exact movement with your desire that you have two weeks' notice before we travel, and we try to balance it as best we can. We think that the Secret Service is not in any way dismayed. They are pleased with the way we are handling ourselves, and I am pleased with them. The only ones I know that are not pleased are some politician that doesn't understand it or some reporter who hasn't read it.

I had the Warren Committee report briefed this morning. Will you get it for me? I think Dick has it here. I had a young lawyer go over it and we are trying to find out all of these recommendations that these folks are writing about, and how we violate it. It just isn't so.

Q. There was an innuendo there about exposure.

The President: Give me the innuendo. It is just not there. Have you read the Warren Commission report?

Questioner: Yes, sir.

The President: What are you referring to?

Questioner: Well, there were portions in there which said the President should not expose himself unduly.

A. There is a matter of degree. No one wants to endanger himself unduly, but the question is this: When you stand in front of a group of 80,000 people for 37 minutes, you are in much greater danger than you are stopping. None of the Secret Service or the FBI are worried about a fellow shaking hands.

Q. Mr. President, I believe one of the recommendations of the Commission was that your personal physician be close to you when you are in public. Dr. Burkley was several cars back in the motorcade when one burst into flame. Will you keep your own doctor closer to you in public?

President's Safety

A. No, I think that he is kept as close as is necessary, and as is practicable, and he is really not guarding me. He is a matter of seconds from me. If he happens to be in the second or third car, that is adequate, and they think it is adequate. We try to put first things first, and we believe that we are doing that.

There are some parts of the report that interest me, and I will quote them:

"From George Washington to John F. Kennedy, such journeys have been a normal part of the President's activities."

Another quotation is:

"In all of these roles, the President must go to the people. Exposure of the President to public view through travel among the people of this country is a great and historic tradition of American life. Desired by both the President and the public, it is an indispensable means of communication between the two."

Here is another quotation:

"But his very position as representative of the people prevents him from effectively shielding himself from the people. He cannot and will not take the precautions of a dictator or a sovereign. Under our system, measures must be sought to afford security without impeding the President's performance of his many functions."

This is another quotation:

"An approach to complete security would require the President to operate in a sort of vacuum, isolated from the general public and behind impregnable barriers. His travel would be in secret; his public appearances would be behind bullet-proof glass."

Very frankly, they had "behind bulletproof glass" as a recommendation following the Kennedy assassination. On certain occasions, when we go over and under certain dangerous places they have outlined ahead, they try to cover every one of these trips with dozens of men going ahead of us, long before you folks even know what we plan. Sometimes they go and examine places that we don't even go to, because they think that we might go to them.

Quoting further:

"Any travel, any contact with the general public, involves a calculated risk on the part of the President and the men responsible for his protection. Some risks can be lessened when the President recognizes the security problem, has confidence in the dedicated Secret Service men who are ready to lay down their lives for him and accepts the necessary security precautions which they recommend. Many Presidents have been understandably impatient with the security precautions which many years of experience dictate because these precautions reduce the President's privacy and the access to him of the people of the country. Nevertheless the procedures and advice should be accepted if the President wishes to have any security."

Old Car Irritates

We have gone through and analyzed all of the pertinent parts, and I have read the pertinent parts here to you now. Since I became President, we have been following them. It is irritating to go in an old car that sometimes roars and you can't even talk in it, but if they recommend it, that is what we do. None of you need to be worried about my physical safety between now and November. I am going to follow their recommendations. Of course, no one can tell whether their recommendations are best or not, but I comply with them. I had the same people with me as Vice President when you will remember a good many of you complained in columns and articles and in four speeches about having too much protection.

I remember some congressmen got up and made speeches about having too much protection, and a waste of money, and so forth. But we follow what these men do. Mr. Rowley is the head of it, and Mr. Behn is the head of the White House Detail, but the man who has been with me many years, and who travels with me, and really supervises all of the folks with us is Mr. Rufus Youngblood. He and I never have a difference of opinion or a cross word. We are very congenial and very understanding, and his security recommendations are carried out to the letter.

The memorandum that I read you a moment ago from Mr. Rowley represents the views of the people who really do the actual guarding. It is over his signature, but I have discussed that with him thoroughly because of two or three articles that were written along that line.

Q. Mr. President, going back to the budget figures that you read us, have you come to any tentative conclusions as to whether or not next year's budget can be held at this year's budget or under it?

A. We have given to the Departments certain guidelines for their exploration in connection with their recommendations to us. We cannot finalize that figure until (1) our task forces have made their reports, which will be the latter part of November, some 15 task forces working on the program which I will recommend to the next Congress, and (2) until the Budget Director and I have a chance to scan their recommendations.

We are anxious to keep the expenditures just as low as we possibly can. We possibly can. We recognize that we have a growing population and we have growing needs, but we are trying as I have said on other occasions to take the things that we are now doing, what you call the haves, if we think they are unnecessary, we reduce them in every way we can in order to give to other new programs for which they now do not have anything—the have-nots—and we will take from the ones that can be reduced over to the ones that need to be started.

For instance, we reduced from regular departments throughout the Government — Agriculture, Commerce, Labor, HEW, Defense, and others—more than enough money from what they had to finance our entire poverty program which was a so called have-not at that time. We took from them and put it over here.

I am trying to follow the policy that if I am going to have a new venture, then I have to have some way whereby I can find the money for that rather than just adding to what we spend. I actually had a billion dollars less in our budget this year than last year. I don't know how it will run the coming year. We will have to take a look at it. We are working very hard to keep it as low as possible.

Q. Mr. President, there has been a good deal of invective — and I use that word — hurled across the landscape lately by some candidates running for high office—words like lies and deceit and drift and defeat and words along that line. Aside from what is read into your replies at formal speeches, I wonder if you have anything to say about that kind of campaign.

A. No. I would refer you to my previous statements on my belief that the people are not particularly concerned about my opinion of my opponent or his personal opinion of me. Most of them recognize in campaigns that candidates don't spend their time recommending the other fellow.

Q. Referring to your statement of taking from the Government departments that are involved and giving to those that are have-nots, in the spirit of the season, it appears there is some material questioning whether you meant to apply this to the Executive Departments or the country as a whole and I thought you might want to clarify it. I think we all understand it.

A. If there is any conclusion, eliminate the words have and have-nots. What I mean to say, by a previous appropriation of funds, where a Department has those funds and a new program does not have those funds, you have to find places where you can make savings if you are to inaugurate a new program. You have to get the approval of Congress, and I think that is one of the reasons we got our poverty program through because we had effective savings from those Departments that had appropriations. So we have something available to those have-nots.

Q. Mr. President, could you tell us, sir, what the status and the meaning are of this nuclear treaty that Sir Alec Douglas Home and Senator Douglas, among others, talked of in the past few days?

A. There is no secret of any kind. It seems to me that the question raised by one of the candidates yesterday—my opponent—on a train was somewhat impulsive. Most of you have had these news briefings and will recall that back in January I made a public announcement on the television and radio networks of this country and have said several times at press conferences that we propose new agreements to stop the spread of nuclear weapons to nations not now possessing them. We put forward that proposal publicly and officially in Geneva. All of you know it has been under constant discussion ever since. I am convinced, as I said in Seattle, that the spread of nuclear weapons is one of the great dangers to peace, and as long as I am President, I shall continue to work as hard as I know how to work to seek agreements that will stop that spread

Unfortunately, as you know, and as the public record clearly shows, the Soviet Union so far has refused to support our proposals and, as all the world knows, the Chinese Communists have violently opposed any nuclear agreement of any kind.

So, there is no secret here. It is simply some more evidence that impulsive people should probably get themselves properly briefed.

(At this point the President went off the record.)

Medicare Failure

Q. Mr. President, would you comment on the failure to get the Medicare Bill and particularly whether it was satisfactory to you that we also failed to get the social security benefits increased?

A. We regret that we could never get Congressman Mills, the Chairman of the Committee, and Congressman Byrnes, the Chairman of the Republican Policy Committee, and Congressman Curtis to yield or to moderate their views.

The Members reported to me that there was an impasse and they just would not have any part of a Senate proposal this year. I did everything that I could to get it accepted in the Senate and the House. I had many, many conferences with many, many people. But they felt that they couldn't get agreement and they had several meetings and several votes, and like many conferences, they just couldn't agree. I think Senator Gore very properly presented the situation when he said that it is now a matter that the people of this country can pass judgment on hope that we get a mandate in November. There are about 19,700,000 about one out of every 10 people, who are on social security, and we thing that one of the most important domestic problems is to provide some hospital and medical care for them. It does not in any way involve doctors, and we think it is better for the individual and his employer to provide that by contributing to a fund than to shovel it out of State funds as you do in other programs. The Senate agrees with us, but as is often the case, you have difficulty getting both Houses to agree on the same thing at the same time. However, we confidentially feel that we will find a way to get agreement in the next session. We are just sorry that one of our Democrats agreed with two Republicans. I know he was sincere and I know he thought he was doing the right thing, and men do have different opinions.

Q. Sir, do you think any good can ever come from a situation in which testimony given to the Warren Commission is released to the public by someone other than the Warren Commission?

A. I would think any matter involving the testimony of the Warren Commission at this stage of the game is a proper inquiry for the Warren Commission.

Q. Mr. President, can you give us your view on the suggestion that your Administration is soft on communism?

A. I don't know that I want to reply in kind to the charge of that nature. I see in the papers—that is the only information that I have—the new and frightening voice of the Republican party is merely trying out this charge at the moment to see if it works. On that basis, my own advice would be to drop it.

I also saw it reported that he was advised along these lines by Mr. Hoover and Mr. Nixon, former President Hoover, but both President Hoover and Vice President Nixon are men I have known for many years and have worked with them, and I doubt very much that either of them would make such a suggestion about me or about my Cabinet or this Administration.

My own belief is that this sort of nonsense was the product of some third-string speech writer and accidentally got into the public print without prudent or careful screening. As far as I am concerned, I intend to ignore it. I think when the Republican candidate really has a chance to think about it and study it, he will stop it.

Q. Thank you, Mr. President.

Q. Mr. President, we all have more questions.

A. I am sure that would be true if I stayed here all day, Sarah.

Mr. Hoover's Testimony

J. EDGAR HOOVER'S testimony before the Warren Commission investigating the assassination of President Kennedy now has been published.

Just as the Warren Commission did in its report, Mr. Hoover pinpoints the devilish problems involved in trying to protect a President.

"President Johnson," he said, for instance, "is a very down-to-earth human being, and it makes the security problem all the more difficult, but you can't bar him from the people."

The FBI director spoke out strongly against "police-state" methods in shielding the President from possible crackpots.

"I am particularly concerned," he said, "that we don't become hysterical and go too far in restricting the citizens of our country from exercising their civil and constitutional rights."

He deplored an incident in Chicago when some "extremists" practically were put under house arrest while President Johnson was there.

"I don't think there is any place in this country for that kind of thing," Mr. Hoover said.

Coming from a man who has spent his life in police work, this is an especially salutary attitude—as well as practical.

Mr. Hoover, however, did recommend some stringent restrictions on a President's travel: careful advance preparation for a trip, maximum delay in announcing the route of travel, a car equipped with bullet-proof protection. "He must never ride in an open car," Mr. Hoover said.

But these are restrictions most Presidents would shun.

The Secret Service, the FBI and the police combined cannot "case" every person who may be within striking distance of a President. As Mr. Hoover testified, they had cased Lee Oswald, but there was no indication of his homicidal intent.

The nub of Mr. Hoover's testimony, and the gist of the Warren Commission recommendations, is that protective measures for the President can be improved, but, as Mr. Hoover said: "We don't want a gestapo. We have got to, I think, maintain a balance."

And Presidents, as Mr. Kennedy believed, will continue to find it necessary to travel among the people, to see and be seen. The risk cannot be absolutely eliminated. But a President also has an obligation to the people to maintain his own safety—and Mr. Hoover's advice in this respect is highly pertinent.

The FBI vs. the Warren Commission

J. Edgar Hoover has begun his campaign of retaliation against the Warren Commission for its critical comments on the FBI's role in the Dallas disaster. The counterattack was predictable; its form is familiar; but its substance is an intriguing, ironic footnote to the melancholy story of the assassination.

What the FBI has done is to "leak" to one of Mr. Hoover's old newspaper fans key excerpts from his unreleased testimony before the commission. In it he protested against the use of "Gestapo tactics" to safeguard a President's life. The implication was that any seeming dereliction on the FBI's part reflected its dedication to civil liberties rather than any flaw in the bureau's operation.

It is a delight to have Mr. Hoover on the side of the libertarian angels. But his answer is somewhat unresponsive and self-serving.

Lee Harvey Oswald had long been under many varieties of FBI surveillance. The dossier was full of evidence of social instability, political extremism . . . and of Oswald's proximity to the parade route. What was the point of amassing such information if it were to be withheld from the Secret Service in the interval when it might matter most?

"I don't think you can get absolute security without almost establishing a police state, and we don't want that," Mr. Hoover is quoted as saying.

He further decried mass arrests of alleged subversives and parenthetically noted that a State Dept. report indicated that Oswald was no longer a menace.

We agree with Mr. Hoover about the danger of dragnet proceedings. We agree that we must not "become too hysterical and go too far" in seeking security for the President.

But none of this answers the vital point of criticism in the Warren report—that the Secret Service should have been alerted to Oswald's presence, and surely informed of the vantage point he would occupy during the parade. No protective procedure can be infallible. But if the FBI is to devote so much of its manpower and man-hours to the investigation of real and alleged subversives, its information should at least be available to those entrusted with security precautions in so explosive a setting.

Perhaps a lesson of Dallas is that much of the vast machinery of political investigation is futile and wasteful; that the calculated risks of a free society are beyond neat control. To the extent that Mr. Hoover's remarks sustain those propositions, they may help to avoid the "hysteria" he deplores. We trust that his plea for sanity (even if partially evoked by vanity) will not be construed in any quarter as softness on communism in the FBI's top echelons.

Hoover Gets Support On Police State Fears

A psychiatrist who has studied political assassinations has lent support to the view of FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover that "absolute" protection of a President could create a police state.

Hoover's views as expressed to the Warren Commission were reported in a copyrighted story in the Star yesterday.

The psychiatric study, provided by the American Psychiatric Association here, contends that assassins seem to have two things in common, a desire for immortality and a resentment of authority — but that so do hundreds or thousands of other people.

In his study, Dr. G. Wilse Robinson, medical director of the Kansas City (Mo.) Neurological Hospital, said the FBI interviews many people each year who have similar backgrounds as Lee Harvey Oswald, the accused assassin of President Kennedy.

They have "some connection, vague or more or less real, with some subversive group or party," he said. "Most of these people have a history of rebellion against authority at some time in their lives.

"Many of them own some kind of firearm. Probably all of them want to change our form of government or at the very least the person in office."

To arrest them, he said, would be unconstitutional and would create a police state "and all our martyrs would have died in vain."

Dr. Robinson finds this pattern in modern-day political assassinations:

"A single man with a desire that results from long brooding to destroy a leader who is antagonistic to some belief that the assassin considers important.

"This is a very personal matter to the man," Dr. Robinson said. It becomes a personal role to destroy the "symbol of authority."

"Such a person," Dr. Robinson said, "cannot be diagnosed or catalogued in psychiatric terms." Under most legal interpretations, Dr. Robinson survised, Oswald would be found sane.

Police-State Security' Hit By Hoover

President Must Face Some Risks, Warren Panel Told

By George Lardner Jr.
Staff Reporter

Strict security measures to protect the President could easily slip over the line into police-state tactics, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover warned the Warren Commission.

Hoover told Commission members in testimony last spring that "certain chances have to be taken" in guarding against presidential assassinations without infringing on individual rights.

"I don't think you can get absolute security without almost establishing a police state," the FBI chief testified, "and we don't want that."

In its report on President Kennedy's assassination, the Warren Commission was critical of both the FBI and the Secret Service for their secu-rangements

Recommended

The Commission recommended tigher precautions for presidential motorcades. It also noted that the FBI had stepped up its reporting of potential security risks to the Secret Service after the assassination.

But the Commission also acknowledged that it could "recommend no procedures for the future protection of our Presidents which will guarantee security."

While the Commission report criticized the FBI for lack of alertness in failing to consider Lee Harvey Oswald "a potential threat" to the President, Hoover testified that a State Department report "indicated this man was a thoroughly safe risk." The FBI did not tell the Secret Service what it knew of Oswald before the assassination.

The FBI chief's testimony before the Commission has not yet been officially released, but became known yesterday. It was first published in The Washington Star.

Oswald Interviewed

Hoover said the State Department report he referred to came from the United States Embassy in Moscow where Oswald was interviewed before he reutrned to this country.

The State Department, however, took issue with Hoover's description of the report.

"A thorough search discloses no Department of State report concerning Lee Harvey Oswald which states or in any way implies that he was 'a thoroughly safe security risk'," the Department said in a statement, adding that its files on Oswald were "available for inspection."

Hoover said the FBI had interviewed Oswald several times after his return from Russia in May of 1962 but picked up "no information that would have warranted our reporting him as a potential danger to the security or the safety of the President or the Vice President . . ."

36 Defectors in U.S.

Under the FBI's new standards, however, Hoover said, the Secret Service is alerted on all defectors. He said there were 36 of them "that we know of" in the United States.

The FBI also turns over now the names of "subversives, ultrarightists, racists and fascists." Hoover said that 5000 names had been given the Secret Service during the first four months of 1964 and that another 4000 names were on the way.

At the same time, he felt that the original standards "were sound." Under the Old setup, Hoover said, "we limited the furnishing of names to persons potentially dangerous to the secruity of the President," including any one had threatened the President or Vice President.

Explaining that he was "not very happy" with the stepped-up flow of names, Hoover said that it led "pretty close to a house arrest" of some persons on a presidential visit to Chicago. He was apparently referring to a trip by President Johnson.

Local Police Used

The understaffed Secret Service, Hoover said, called on local police officials to help them out, but then the authorities in Chicago "went to the homes of some of these people, and it resulted really almost in a house arrest."

"We don't want that," Hoover said. "We don't want a Gestapo."

The FBI chief attributed the Chicago incident to "very bad judgment" but said this is bound to crop up from time to time so long as the Secret Service has to rely on local police officials.

The Warren Report

TODAY: THE SECRET SERVICE, THE FBI—AND OSWALD

ARTICLE VI

NO INFORMATION concerning Lee Harvey Oswald appeared in Secret Service files before the President's trip to Dallas. Oswald was known to other Federal agencies with which the Secret Service maintained intelligence liaison. The FBI had been interested in him, to some degree at least, since the time of his defection in October 1959. It had interviewed him twice shortly after his return to the United States, again a year later at his request and was investigating him at the time of the assassination.

The FBI opened a file on Oswald in October 1959, when news reports appeared of his defection to the Soviet Union.

In June 1962, the Bureau was advised by the Dept. of State of Oswald's plan to return to the United States.

Oswald was first interviewed by FBI Agents John W. Fain and B. Tom Carter on June 26, 1962, in Fort Worth. Fain reported to headquarters that Oswald was impatient and arrogant, and unwilling to answer questions regarding his motive for going to the Soviet Union. Oswald "denied that he had ever denounced his U. S. citizenship, and . . . that he had ever applied for Soviet citizenship specifically." Oswald was, however, willing to discuss his contacts with Soviet authorities. He denied having any involvement with Soviet intelligence agencies and promised to advise the FBI if he heard from them.

Fain was not satisfied by this interview and arranged to see Oswald again on August 16, 1962. According to Fain's contemporaneous memorandum and his present recollection, while Oswald remained somewhat evasive at this interview, he was not antagonistic and seemed generally to be settling down. (Marina Oswald, however, recalled that her husband was upset by this interview.)

Having concluded that Oswald was not a security risk or potentially dangerous or violent, Fain determined that nothing further remained to be done at that time and recommended that the case be placed in a closed status.

From August 1962 until March 1963, the FBI continued to accumulate information regarding Oswald but engaged in no active investigation. Fain retired from the FBI in October 1962, and the closed Oswald case was not reassigned. However, pursuant to a regular Bureau practice of interviewing certain immigrants from Iron Curtain countries, Fain had been assigned to see Marina Oswald at an appropriate time. This assignment was given to Agent James P. Hosty, Jr. of the Dallas office upon Fain's retirement.

On April 21, 1963, the FBI field office in New York was advised that Oswald was in contact with the Fair Play for Cuba Committee in New York, and that he had written to the committee stating that he had distributed its pamphlets on the streets of Dallas. This information did not reach Hosty in Dallas until June. Hosty considered the information to be "stale" by that time, and did not attempt to verify Oswald's reported statement.

In the middle of May of 1963, Hosty checked Oswald's last known residence and found that he had moved. Oswald was tentatively located in New Orleans in June, and Hosty asked the New Orleans FBI to determine Oswald's address and what he was doing. The New Orleans office investigated and located Oswald, learning his address and former place of employment on August 5, 1963. A confidential informant advised the FBI that Oswald was not known to be engaged in Communist Party activities in New Orleans.

On Aug. 9, 1963, Oswald was arrested and jailed by the New Orleans police for disturbing the peace, in connection with a street fight which broke out when he was accosted by anti-Castro Cubans while distributing leaflets on behalf of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee. On the next day, he asked the New Orleans police to arrange for him to be interviewed by the FBI. The police called the local FBI office and an agent, John L. Quigley, was sent

In Quigley's judgement, Oswald "was probably making a self-serving statement in attempting to explain to me why he was distributing this literature, and for no other reason, and when I got to questioning him further then he felt his purpose had been served and he wouldn't say anything further."

Soon after, on October 1, 1963, the FBI was advised by the rental agent for the Oswalds' apartment in New Orleans that they had moved again. According to the information received by the Bureau they had vacated their apartment, and Marina Oswald had departed with their child in a station wagon with Texas registration. On October 3, Hosty reopened the case in Dallas to assist the New Orleans office. He checked in Oswald's old neighborhood and throughout the Dallas-Fort Worth area but was unable to locate Oswald.

The next word about Oswald's location was a communication from the CIA to the FBI on October 10, advising that an individual tentatively identified as Oswald had been in touch with the Soviet Embassy in Mexico City in early October of 1963.

On October 25, the New Orleans office of the FBI learned that in September Oswald had given a forwarding address of 2515 West Fifth St., Irving, Tex. After receiving this information on October 29, Hosty attempted to locate Oswald. On the same day Hosty interviewed neighbors on Fifth St. and learned that the address was that of Mrs. Ruth Paine.

Having determined that Mrs. Paine was a responsible and reliable citizen, Hosty interviewed her on November 1. The interview lasted about 20-25 minutes. In response to Hosty's inquiries, Mrs. Paine "readily admitted that Mrs. Marina Oswald and Lee Oswald's two children were staying with her. She said that Lee Oswald was living somewhere in Dallas. She didn't know where. She said it was in the Oak Cliff area but she didn't have his address.

"I asked her if she knew where he worked. After a moment's hesitation, she told me that he worked at the Texas School Book Depository near the downtown area of Dallas. She didn't have the exact address, and it is my recollection that we went to the phone book and looked it up, found it to be 411 Elm St."

On November 4, Hosty telephoned the Texas School Book Depository and learned that Oswald was working there and that he had given as his address Mrs. Paine's residence in Irving. On November 5, Hosty was traveling near Mrs. Paine's home and took the occasion to stop by to ask whether she had any further information. Mrs. Paine had nothing to add to what she had already told him, except that during a visit that past weekend, Oswald had said that he was a "Trotskyite Communist," and that she found this and similar statements illogical and somewhat amusing. On this occasion Hosty was at the Paine residence for only a few minutes.

During neither interview did Hosty learn Oswald's address or telephone number in Dallas.

Hosty did nothing further in connection with the Oswald case until after the assassination.

The Commission has considered carefully the question whether the FBI, in view of all the information concerning Oswald in its files, should have alerted the Secret Service to Oswald's presence in Dallas prior to President Kennedy's visit. The Secret Service and the FBI differ as to whether Oswald fell within the category of "threats against the President" which should be referred to the Service.

Robert I. Bouck, special agent in charge of the Protective Research Section, testified that the information available to the Federal Government about Oswald before the assassination would, if known to PRS, have made Oswald a subject of concern to the Secret Service.

Agent Hosty testified that he was fully aware of the pending Presidential visit to Dallas.

In fact, Hosty participated in transmitting to the Secret Service two pieces of information pertaining to the visit. Hosty testified that he did not know until the evening of Thursday, November 21, that there was to be a motorcade, however, and never realizing that the motorcade would pass the Texas School Book Depository Building. He testified that he did not read the newspaper story describing the motorcade route in detail, since he was interested only in the fact that the motorcade was coming up Main Street, "where maybe I could watch it if I had a chance."

Even if he had recalled that Oswald's place of employment was on the President's route, Hosty testified that he would not have cited him to the Secret Service as a potential threat to the President. Hosty interpreted his instructions as requiring "some indication that the person planned to take some action against the safety of the President of the United States or the Vice President."

Shortly after Oswald was apprehended and identified, Hosty's superior sent him to observe the interrogation of Oswald. Hosty met an acquaintance, Lt. Jack Revill of the Dallas police force. The two men disagree about the conversation which took place between them. They agree that Hosty told Revill that the FBI had known about Oswald and, in particular, of his presence in Dallas and his employment at the Texas School Book Depository Building.

Revill testified that Hosty said also that the FBI had information that Oswald was "capable of committing this assassination." According to Revill, Hosty indicated that he was going to tell this to Lieutenant Wells of the homicide and robbery bureau.

Hosty has unequivocally denied, first by affidavit and then in his testimony before the Commission, that he ever said that Oswald was capable of violence, or that he had any information suggesting this.

Hosty's interpretation of the prevailing FBI instructions on referrals to the Secret Service was defended before the Commission by his superiors. J. Edgar Hoover concluded that "There was nothing up to the time of the assassination that gave any indication that this man was a dangerous character who might do harm to the President or to the Vice President." Director Hoover emphasized that the first indication of Oswald's capacity for violence was his attempt on General Walker's life, which did not become known to the FBI until after the assassination.

The Commission believes, however, that the FBI took an unduly restrictive view of its responsibilities in preventive intelligence work, prior to the assassination.

There were no Secret Service criteria which specifically required the referral of Oswald's case to the Secret Service; nor was there any requirement to report the names of defectors. However, there was much material in the hands of the FBI about Oswald: the knowledge of his defection, his arrogance and hostility to the United States, his pro-Castro tendencies, his lies when interrogated by the FBI, his trip to Mexico where he was in contact with Soviet authorities, his presence in the School Book Depository job and its location along the route of the motorcade.

To Protect The President

THE WARREN Commission report produced little which was unexpected or unknown. It did make recommendations for future security which merit careful consideration.

One of the most immediate needs appears to be for a law making it a federal offense to kill or attempt to kill a president or v i c e president. This would eliminate any jurisdictional problems for federal agencies charted with the protection of the nation's top leaders.

We suspect that some action already has been taken on the commission suggestion that there be closer liaison between the Secret Service and the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Certainly this should be done. We have the greatest of confidence in both agencies. We see no need for another proposal by Rep. James Roosevelt that all federal law-enforcement departments be placed under one man.

Perhaps the most important recommendation was that the State Department "exercise great care" in allowing defectors who have renounced U.S. citizenship to return to this country.

We endorse these recommendations.

In the section where the report calls for newsmen to exercise more restraint in the coverage of n e w s events, it seems as if the commission was attempting to shift blame.

Security is the responsibility of the law - enforcement agency in charge. Public information is the responsibility of the press.

News coverage has been enlarged by all media and as such it creates new problems which can best be examined by the news industry. But it should be remembered that historically newspapers have a strong record of respecting security in carrying out their public responsibility to cover news.

Didn't Call Oswald Safe, State Department Says

Spokesman Denies Existence of Report Referred To by FBI Chief

By BERNARD GWERTZMAN
Star Staff Writer

The State Department has denied FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover's assertion that a department document described assassin Lee Harvey Oswald as a "thoroughly safe risk."

Press spokesman Robert J. McCloskey said last night "a thorough search discloses no Department of State report concerning Lee Harvey Oswald that states or in any way implies that he was a 'thoroughly safe risk.' We have been unable to locate any Department of State document apparently referred to by Mr. J. Edgar Hoover in his testimony."

Testifying before the Warren Commission last May 14, Hoover had said a State Department document "indicated this man (Oswald) was a thoroughly safe risk; he had changed his views; he was a loyal man now and had seen the light of day, so to speak."

Hoover's testimony was referred to in the commission's report made public last Sunday night. It is due to be published by the commission along with other testimony taken during the 10-month-old investigation. The Star, however, gained access to the testimony and published highlights of it yesterday.

Not Mentioned

McCloskey noted that the report of the Warren Commission made no reference to any State Department document which ruled on Oswald's security.

The State Department had turned over its entire Oswald file to the Warren Commission, and the documents are now being printed as part of the commission's plan to publish all its findings. Reporters were allowed to examine the file in McCloskey's office yesterday.

The file began with Oswald's application for a passport in 1959, his decision to defect in the Soviet Union, his decision to return to the United States, and papers dealing with the issuance of a visa to his Russian-born wife.

Embassy Report on Oswald

Most likely, the document referred to by Hoover was a two-and-a-half-page summary of an interview between Oswald and Richard H. Snyder of the American embassy in Moscow in July of 1961. Oswald had gone to the embassy from Minsk seeking the return of his passport, which he had voluntarily given up in 1959, and announcing his decision to return to the United States.

In the dispatch signed by Boris H. Klossen, counselor for political affairs, the embassy reported: "Twenty months of the realities of life in the Soviet Union have clearly had a maturing effect on Oswald.

"He stated frankly that he had learned a hard lesson the hard way and that he had been completely relieved of his illusions about the Soviet Union at the same time that he acquired a new understanding and appreciation of the United States and the meaning of freedom.

"Much of the arrogance and bravado which characterized him on his first visit to the embassy appears to have left him."

Recommendation on Wife

Hoover also said in his testimony that he did not know how intensive the interview was with Oswald in Moscow but that "nevertheless, it was the State Department document that was furnished to us."

Another document, written by the State Department office of Soviet Union affairs, to the visa office, recommended the issuing of a visa to Mrs. Oswald—a Russian citizen—on the grounds it was in the United States' interest to get the Oswald family home as soon as possible:

"The Office of Soviet Union Affairs believes it is in the interest of the United States to get Lee Harvey Oswald and his family out of the Soviet Union and on their way to this country. An unstable character, whose actions are entirely unpredictable, Oswald may well refuse to leave the USSR or subsequently attempt to return there if we should make it impossible for him to be accompanied from Moscow by his wife and child.

"Such action on our part also would permit the Soviet Government to argue that although it had issued an exit visa to Mrs. Oswald to prevent the separation of a family, the United States Government had imposed a forced separation by refusing to issue her a visa. Obviously, this would weaken our embassy's position in encouraging positive Soviet action in other cases involving Soviet citizen relatives of United States citizens."

Following The Law

The Warren Commission studied the State Department's role in Oswald's return to the United States and determined that it only was following the law. It noted that Oswald never had formally denounced his American citizenship and thus there was no legal bar to his returning to the United States.

The commission criticized both the Secret Service and the FBI but found little fault with the State Department's role.

It urged, however, that in cases of defectors such as Oswald the department should exercise "great care" in processing information on them so as to disseminate information about them to various intelli-

WHAT J. EDGAR HOOVER TOLD WARREN COMMISSION

By the Associated Press

WASHINGTON.

Following are highlights of FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover's May 14 testimony to the Warren Commission, as reported in a copyrighted article yesterday by The Washington Star:

REP. GERALD FORD—Is the Federal Bureau of Investigation continuing its ramifications of this assassination?

HOOVER—That's correct. We are receiving and we, I expect, will continue to receive [illegible]s or maybe weeks to come, letters from individuals that normally probably would be in the category of what we would call crank letters in which various weird allegations are made or in which people have reported psychic vibrations. We are still running out letters of that character and in turn making a report to this commission upon it, notwithstanding the fact that on the face of it the allegation is without any foundation. . . .

I, personally, feel that any finding of the commission will not be accepted by everybody, because there are bound to be some extremists who have very pronounced views, without any foundation for them, who will disagree violently with whatever findings the commission makes. . . .

I can assure you, so far as the FBI is concerned, the case will be continued in an open classification for all time. . . . I think this will be a matter of controversy for years to come, just like the Lincoln assassination. . . .

HOOVER—If any person has fought communism, I certainly have fought it. We have tried to fight it and expose it in democratic ways. I think that is the thing we have to very definitely keep in mind in this whole problem in the security of the President and the successor to office.

Just how far you are going to go for his protection and his security (CQ). I don't think you can get absolute security almost establishing a police state, and we don't want that. You can't put security in a black groove or a white groove. It is in a gray groove, and certain changes have to be taken. You are dealing with a human being when you are dealing with the President of the United States. President Johnson is a very down-to-earth human being, and it makes the security problem all the more difficult, but you can't bar him from the people.

There are certain things that can be done, and I submitted a memorandum to the Secret Service and to the White House on certain security steps that might be taken and tightened up. But, when you are dealing with the general public, and that is what has given me great concern in the recent expansion of the criteria for dissemination that we have adopted after the assassination.

Prior to that time we reported to the Secret Service all information that dealt with individuals who were potential killers or by whom acts of violence might be anticipated. The Secret Service would take that information and would do with it as they saw fit. I gave great consideration to it because I am not very happy with the criteria expansion, but I felt we had to include subversives of various character, and extremists. We have, in turn, furnished their names to the Secret Service. I think 5,000 names up to the present time already have been submitted and there are at least three or four thousand more that will be submitted within the next few months.

Then you come to the problem or what you are going to do when the Secret Service gets those names. They have to call upon the local authorities. Just recently, in the city of Chicago, when the President was there, the local authorities were asked to give assistance as they usually do to the Secret Service and they went to the homes of some of these people, and it resulted really almost in a house arrest.

Now, I don't think there is any place in this country for that kind of thing, but these people who belonged to extreme subversive organizations or organizations that advocated the overthrow of government by force and violence were told that they couldn't leave their house or if they did they would be accompanied by a police officer. That gives me great concern because in New York City alone, you run into maybe three or four thousand such individuals who would be members of subversive organizations, and then you get into the twilight zone of subversive fronts.

Merely because a man belongs to subversive front organizations in my estimation doesn't mean that he is blacklisted and is a menace to the country for life. . . .

But I was startled when I learned the week before last of the incident in Chicago because there you come pretty close to a house arrest and we don't want that. We don't want a Gestapo. We have got to, I think, maintain an even balance.

ask you, Mr. Hoover, was this house arrest based on names you had furnished the Secret Service and they furnished the local authorities?

HOOVER—Yes, sir. . . .

HOOVER—We found no indication at all that Oswald was a man addicted to violence.

The first indication of an act of violence came after he, Oswald, had been killed, and Mrs. Oswald told us about the attempt on Gen. Walker's life by Oswald.

No one had known a thing about that. . . .

We went back into his Marine Corps record. He was a "loner." He didn't have many friends. He kept to himself, and when he went abroad, he defected to Russia. The first evidence we had of him in our file was a statement to the press in Moscow. And then later, about 22 months later, he returned to the embassy there and according to the report of the embassy we have and which the commission has been furnished with, the embassy gave him a clean bill. He had seen the error of his ways and disliked the Soviet atmosphere, et cetera, and they, therefore, cleared him, paid his way and paid his wife's way to come back to this country. . . .

REP. HALE BOGGS—You have spent your life studying criminology and violence and subversion. Would you care to speculate on what may have motivated the man?

HOOVER—My speculation, Mr. Boggs, is the fact that this man was no doubt a dedicated Communist. He preferred to call himself a Marxist but there you get into the field of semantics. He was a Communist, he sympathized thoroughly with the Communist cause.

I don't believe now, as I look back on it, that he ever changed his views when he asked to come back to this country. I personally feel that when he went to the American Embassy in Moscow originally to renounce his citizenship he should have been able right then and there to sign the renouncement. He never could have gotten back here. I think that should apply to almost all defectors who want to defect and become a part of a system of government that is entirely foreign to course. If they have that desire, they have got that right, but if they indicate a desire for it, let them renounce their citizenship at once. . . .

. . . We had interviewed him, I think, three times. Of course, our interviews were predicated to find out whether he had been recruited by the Russian intelligence service, because they frequently do that.

Associated Press

J. Edgar Hoover

BOGGS—And had he been?

HOOVER — He had not been, so he said, and we have no proof that he was.

There are many people who read the Daily Worker, or what is now the Worker, and you certainly can't brand them as hazards to the security of the country or as potential assassins. It is in that area that I am particularly concerned that we don't become hysterical and go too far in restricting the citizens of our country from exercising their civil and constitutional rights. The mere fact a person disagrees with you in a matter on communism doesn't mean he should be arrested. . . .

But, all in all, I think that the enforcement of security and the enforcement of laws dealing with subversion ought to be handled in the American manner. . . .

We have participated in the protection of the President since the assassination. The Secret Service indicates how many agents it needs when the President is traveling somewhere or going somewhere in Washington, and then I assign that number of agents to the Secret Service. They are not under my direction. They are under the direction of the Secret Service because under law they are charged with the protection of the President. We have never done that before, but I felt that it was something we must do if the Secret Service desired it. . . .

Prior to the assassination of the President, a defector, before he came back, was always cleared for return by a representative of the State Department or the military abroad. When he came back we immediately interviewed him. It had to be done at once to determine whether he could be a potential intelligence agent.

Now, in December of last year, following the assassination, we expanded the criteria of what should be furnished to the Secret Service, and all defectors automatically go on the list to be furnished to the Secret Service.

There are 36 defectors that we know of in this country who have been under investigation. Some of those men may have changed their views sincerely. Some of them may not have. But as a matter of general precaution, as a result of the Oswald situation, we are seeing that all go to the Secret Service. . . .

J. LEE RANKIN—I think the commission would desire to have your comments or whatever you care to tell them, concerning the reasons why you did not furnish the information you had concerning Lee Harvey Oswald to the Secret Service prior to the time of the President's assassination.

HOOVER—Well, I have gone into that very thoroughly because that was obviously one of the questions that I had in mind when the tragedy occurred in Dallas.

In going back over the record, and I have read each one of the reports dealing with that and the reports of Mr. Hosty (James Hosty, FBI agent in Dallas) who had dealt with the Oswald situation largely in Dallas, we had the matter that I have previously referred to, the report of the State Department that indicated this man was a thoroughly he had changed his views, he was a loyal man now and had seen the light of day, so to speak.

How intensive or how extensive that interview in Moscow was, I don't know. But, Nevertheless, it was in a State Department document that was furnished to us.

Now, we interviewed Oswald a few days after he arrived. . . . e interview him twice, in regard to that angle that we were looking for. We had no indication at this time anything other than his so-called Marxist leanings, Marxist beliefs.

We wanted to know whether he had been recruited by the Soviet government as an intelligence agent, which is a frequent and constant practice. There is not a year goes by that individuals and groups of individuals, sometimes on those cultural exchanges, go through Russia and recruits are enlisted by the Russian intelligence usually through blackmail. The individual is threatened that if he doesn't come back to this country and work for them they will expose the fact that he is a homosexual or degenerate or has been indiscreet. . . .

In Oswald's case we had no suspicion that any presure like that had been brought to bear on him because he had gone voluntarily and had obviously wanted to live in Russia and had married a Russian woman.

After those interviews had been completed the next incident was the difficulty he had at New Orleans.

We were concerned there as to whether he was functioning officially for the Fair Play for Cuba Committee which was financed and supported by Castro and Castro's government, and, if he was, where he obtained money and with whom he had dealt.

He apparently had the leaflets printed himself There was no reason for us then, to have any suspicion that he had any element of danger in him.

However, we did not ignore or forget the fact that he was still in the country. We kept track of him....When he went from New Orleans to Dallas, and that was one of the reasons why Hosty went to the home of Mrs. Paine. She told us where Oswald was working, at the Texas Book House. Hosty gave her his telephone number and his name so that if there was any information or any contact she wanted to make she could phone him at the Dallas office.

Up to that time, there had been no information that would have warranted our reporting him as a potential danger or hazard to the security or the safety of the President or the Vice-President, so his name was not furnished at the time to Secret Service.

DULLES—How many names, Mr. Director, in general, could the Secret Service process? Aren't their facilities limited as to dealing with vast number of names because of their limited personnel?

HOOVER—I think they are extremely limited. The Secret Service is a very small organization and that is why we are fortifying them, so to speak, or supplementing them by assigning agents of our bureau which is, of course, quite a burden on us.

Now, the Secret Service has a very small group and I would estimate that the names we have sent number over 5,000 I would guess there are about another 4,000 that will go over in the next month to them. Frankly, I don't see how they can go out and recheck those names.

FBI Told Oswald Wasn't 'Risk'

Hoover Leaks Warren Rebuttal

By Dom Bonafede
Of The Herald Tribune Staff

WASHINGTON.

In testimony which he gave before the Warren Commission, FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover disclosed his agency had received a report from the State Department labeling Lee Harvey Oswald a "thoroughly safe risk."

Mr. Hoover's testimony, given May 14 to the commission, was released by him to a Washington newspaper and published yesterday.

A transcript of his testimony also quoted him as warning the commission against the creation of a "gestapo" police state resulting from well-meaning but overzealous attempts to protect the President.

I DON'T THINK you can get absolute security without establishing a police state and . . . we don't want a Gestapo.
J. Edgar Hoover to Warren Commission. His Testimony, Page 4.

Shortly after Mr. Hoover's testimony was published, the State Department announced a "thorough search" of its files failed to disclose any document "that states or in any way implies" that Oswald was a "thoroughly safe risk."

Press aid Robert J. McCloskey said the closest thing to Mr. Hoover's testimony that could be found in the files was a memorandum from the U. S. Embassy in Moscow dated July 11, 1961. It said "20 months of the realities of life in the Soviet Union have clearly had a maturing effect on Oswald."

The memorandum quoted Oswald as saying he had learned a "hard lesson," and that he had dropped some "illusions" about Russia and had acquired a "new understanding" of the U. S. The report added he had lost some of his "arrogance and bravado."

Mr. McCloskey noted that another memorandum, written by the State Department's Soviet Affairs Office in Washington March 16, 1962, described Oswald as "an unstable character whose actions are entirely unpredictable."

Mr. Hoover's testimony was alluded to in the commission's report released last Sunday but was not spelled out in any detail. The report included criticism of the FBI for taking "an unduly restrictive" view of its role, prior to the assassination of President Kennedy, by not maintaining close liaison with other Federal agencies, particularly the Secret Service, concerning the activities of potentially dangerous subversives.

Mr. Hoover declined comment on the commission's report, but those close to him indicated he was piqued by what he considered unfair criticism.

It was unknown yesterday if that was the reason for the premature release of his testimony to The Washington Star. Neither Mr. Hoover nor bureau spokesmen would say why the testimony was turned over to the newspaper.

Nonetheless, the unusual action by Mr. Hoover caused almost as much stir in Washington as the contents of the testimony.

J. Lee Rankin, the commission counsel, said he had not been informed in advance by Mr. Hoover but nonetheless defended the FBI chief as having done nothing improper.

"Any witness can do that if he wants," Mr. Rankin said. He said the commission "was very careful not to ask anyone to withhold anything."

This, however, is in conflict with statements made by several witnesses to the effect they had been requested by the commission not to discuss their testimony with anyone until it was officially released.

On at least two occasions the commission asked the FBI to conduct an investigation when testimony given by Jack Ruby, the convicted slayer of Oswald, was released to newspapers.

Presumably, the commission draws a line between a witness releasing his own testimony and a release by someone other than the witness without the witness' permission.

Asked about the publication of Mr. Hoover's testimony at the afternoon White House briefing, Presidential press secretary George Reedy said, "I have no comment. I have been trying to get the facts. I have nothing to say in the absence of the facts."

A reporter drew a laugh when he quipped, "have you asked the FBI to investigate the leak?"

According to the Star, Mr. Hover testified that the FBI had received a report from the State Department "that indicated this man (Oswald) was a thoroughly safe risk here, he had changed his views, he was a loyal man, now and had seen the light of day so to speak."

Mr. Hoover contended that Oswald should have been allowed to renounce his U. S. citizenship when he sought to do so at the American Embassy in Moscow.

"He never could have gotten back here," Mr. Hoover said. "I think that should apply to all defectors who want to defect. If they indicate a desire for it, let them renounce their citizenship at once."

He said he was "not very happy" with a new criteria for determining the names of subversives and extremists which are furnished by the FBI to the Secret Service and other Federal agencies. He estimated that the names of 10,000 persons have been added to the risk list under the expanded crit[illegible]

FBI Warns on 'Gestapo' Guard for President

WASHINGTON — (AP) — FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover has cautioned against establishment of Gestapo tactics in efforts to safeguard the President, the Evening Star reported Friday.

He spoke out in testifying before the Warren Commission investigating the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, saying "we don't want a Gestapo. We have to, I think, maintain an even balance."

He testified also, The Star said, about a State Department document which it said indicated that Lee Harvey Oswald, Kennedy's assassin, was a thoroughly safe risk.

Hoover's testimony has not been made public by the Warren Commission. It criticized the FBI for "an unduly restrictive view of its role in preventive intelligence work prior to the assassination." The commission indicated the FBI was remiss in not reporting to the Secret Service Oswald's presence in Dallas.

The FBI so far has made no comment on the commission's finding, but officials have indicated the report was taken bitterly by high FBI officials.

Hoover's testimony also included recommendations for protective measures that he thought might be more successful than those employed by the Secret Service up to the time Kennedy was slain last Nov. 22.

"I don't think you can get absolute security without almost establishing a police state, and we don't want that," Hoover told the commission.

The FBI chief said he is "not very happy with the criteria expansion" — measures affecting the lists of names of subversives and extremists being furnished by the FBI to the Secret Service as a new security measure since the assassination.

Hoover estimated that, with the new criteria for furnishing names of potential risks, some 10,000 subversives and extremists will have been culled by the FBI. He said:

"Then you come to the problem of what you are going to do when the Secret Service gets those names. They have to call upon the local authorities.

"Just recently, in the city of Chicago, when the President was there, the local authorities were asked to give assistance as they usually do to the Secret Service, and they went to the homes of some of these people, and it resulted really almost in house arrest.

"Now, I don't think there is any place in this country for that kind of thing, but these people who belonged to extreme subversive organizations . . . were told they couldn't leave their house, or if they did they would be accompanied by a police officer."

In New York City alone, Hoover said, there are up to 4,000 such individuals in subversive groups.

Hoover told the Warren Commission that the FBI received a State Department report "that indicated this man (Oswald) was a thoroughly safe risk here, he had changed his views, he was a loyal man now and had seen the light of day, so to speak."

The document, he said, was based on an interview with Oswald by the American Embassy in Moscow before he returned to the U.S. Hoover said there is no doubt in his mind that Oswald was a dedicated Communist.

Hoover emphasized that none of the FBI's information on Oswald indicated any tendency toward violence. While many persons read the Communist party organ, The Worker, they cannot be branded as potential assassins or hazards to the security of the country, he said.

(KENNEDY ASSASSINATION)

WASHINGTON--RAMPARTS MAGAZINE TODAY CALLED FOR A NEW INVESTIGATION OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY'S ASSASSINATION, BASING THE CALL ON THE 10 MYSTERIOUS DEATHS IT CLAIMED WERE INDIRECTLY RELATED TO THE TRAGEDY.

THE CONTROVERSIAL MAGAZINE, WHICH HAS STIRRED STORMS OF PROTEST IN RECENT ARTICLES, CALLED FOR THE NEW PROBE BASED ON WHAT IT ACKNOWLEDGED WAS A "LIMITED INVESTIGATION" OF THE UNSETTLED PARTS OF THE WARREN COMMISSION INVESTIGATION.

RAMPARTS ALSO SAID THERE WAS "EVIDENCE" OF A CONSPIRACY THAT LEE HARVEY OSWALD WAS NOT THE LONE KILLER.

THE MAGAZINE POINTED TO 10 DEATHS FOLLOWING THE NOV. 22, 1963 ASSASSINATION AS "ENOUGH REASON" TO MAKE A NEW INQUIRY.

THE MAGAZINE SAID THE DEATHS WERE "POSSIBLY RELATED TO THE ASSASSINATION" OF THE PRESIDENT.

THE DEATHS PREVIOUSLY WERE BROUGHT TO PUBLIC ATTENTION IN STORIES BY EDITOR PENN JONES JR., OF THE MIDLOTHIAN MIRROR, A WEEKLY TEXAS NEWSPAPER.

THE DEATHS REFERRED TO BY RAMPARTS RANGED FROM SYNDICATED COLUMNIST DOROTHY KILGALLEN WHO, RAMPARTS SAID, WAS "PASSIONATELY INTERESTED" IN THE CASE TO DALLAS POLICEMAN J. D. TIPPIT--SLAIN BY OSWALD ON THE DAY OF THE ASSASSINATION.

2 GROUPS ANALYZE KENNEDY MURDER

Warren Unit Critics Scored by U.C.L.A. Project Head

By PETER BART
Special to The New York Times

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 22 — Lingering doubts about the circumstances surrounding President Kennedy's assassination are being analyzed at the University of California at Los Angeles Law School by two teams of researchers.

The teams are working under the direction of Wesley J. Liebeler, an acting professor at the law school, who served as an assistant counsel on the staff of the Warren Commission, which released a massive report on the assassination.

Mr. Liebeler said this week that the study had been prompted by two books that sharply criticized the Warren Commission report, "Rush to Judgment" by Mark Lane and "Inquest" by Edward Jay Epstein.

Though Mr. Liebeler has criticized some of the methods and findings of the commission staff, he has, in general, supported the commission's conclusions. During a recent speaking tour of Southern California by Mr. Lane, he and Mr. Liebeler engaged in heated public exchanges.

Slander Suit Threatened

"Mr. Lane said on a local television show that he was suing me for slander," Mr. Liebeler said. "But I have never been served with papers. Nor has he ever agreed to engage me in public debate."

Twenty students at the U.C.L.A. Law School are participating in one aspect of Mr. Liebeler's study. Each will investigate a facet of the assassination, analyzing such questions as these:

Did Oswald kill Officer J. D. Tippit?

What was the evidence of Oswald's rifle capability?

Was Oswald at the window of the Texas School Book Depository at the time of the assassination?

Meanwhile, three other teaching assistants are working under Mr. Liebeler's direction on an analysis of the criticisms advanced by the Lane and Epstein books.

The assistants' salaries are being paid by the U.C.L.A. Law School, he said, and the three will probably go to Washington to examine the Warren Commission's working papers, which have been secreted in the National Archives. According to Mr. Liebeler, these records may be made available for outside analysis in the next two months.

Mr. Liebeler said he was writing a book analyzing the Warren Commission's work and the criticisms by Lane and Epstein.

Objective Work Urged

"What is needed at this point is one piece of work which sets forth both sides objectively," Mr. Liebeler said. "Lane doesn't. Epstein doesn't.

"There is evidence in the records not entirely reflected in the text of the Warren report. That doesn't mean it wasn't considered. It needs to be put in one short, concise place so that the readers can then make up their own minds."

Mr. Liebeler supports the basic commission conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald was the assassin and that he acted alone. He says he has found 15 instances in the Lane work in which the author allegedly misstated or distorted the record.

Mr. Liebeler, a 35-year-old graduate of the University of Chicago Law School, wrote the chapter dealing with Oswald's background and possible motives in the Warren Commission report and says he also wrote part of another chapter about possible conspiracy. He believes there was sufficient evidence to have convicted Oswald of murder had he lived.

Burning questions

By Gaeton Fonzi

THE OSWALD AFFAIR: An Examination of the Contradictions and Omissions of the Warren Report. By Leo Sauvage. Translated by Charles Gaulkin. World. 418 pp. $6.95.

Shortly after the Warren Commission Report was issued two years ago, the publisher who was to have brought out Mr. Sauvage's book cancelled his contract. "The problem," the publisher wrote Mr. Sauvage, "is that the Warren Report has put the Oswald matter in a different light from what I had expected, and I'm now convinced that any book which attempts to question Oswald's guilt would be out of touch with reality and could not be taken seriously by responsible critics."

Unconvinced by this, Sauvage, who is the American correspondent for the Paris daily Le Figaro, had his manuscript published in Europe, where controversial theories about the Kennedy assassination were more openly entertained than in the United States. Recently, however, the climate of opinion about the assassination has begun to alter in this country. Doubts about the Commission's basic conclusions have been raised in a variety of periodicals and books, and public interest has been aroused sufficiently to justify publishing The Oswald Affair in this country.

Yet despite Mr. Sauvage's book and other attacks on the Warren Commission, such as Mark Lane's Rush to Judgment and Edward Jay Epstein's Inquest, the reservations expressed by Mr. Sauvage's prospective publisher are still heard. They were repeated to me recently by Arlen Specter, district attorney of Philadelphia, who, as a Warren Commission investigator, is credited with developing the hypothesis that a single bullet hit both Kennedy and Connally. Specter thinks it is inconceivable that Oswald is innocent: "That investigation," he said, "had seven smart guys, the Commissioners, who did a lot of work. And they went all over the country to get assistant counsel and made a real effort to find able people. Some of the guys on that Commission were the smartest fellows around. I don't think Earl Warren would fudge the facts if all hell froze over."

The doubts remain, however. Even the intelligent and articulate Mr. Specter equivocated and grew evasive when asked to explain obvious discrepancies between the evidence and the Commission's conclusions. The location of the bullet holes in Kennedy's jacket and shirt, for instance, is not consistent with the "official" autopsy report which describes the President's wounds. Also, the bullet that supposedly passed through Kennedy's neck and caused all of Connally's wounds emerged miraculously unscathed.

These inconsistencies, unlike many of Sauvage's other points, cannot be argued about; they are hard facts which seriously challenge the Commission's conclusion that Oswald operated alone. But again, how could such an eminent group have bungled their investigation to the extent Sauvage claims they did? This question looms larger in The Oswald Affair than in the books by Lane or Epstein. The primary reason is that Sauvage did not build his case as convincingly as the other authors did. Sauvage tends to be more shrill in his contentions and does not always base his conclusions on the best evidence. For example, he makes much of the contention that the Commission itself might have provided Oswald with an alibi when it reconstructed his descent from the sixth floor of the Dallas Book Depository to the second-floor lunchroom where he was observed by a policeman moments after the shooting. The basis for the argument is the policeman's estimate of the time he himself took to get into the building and up to the second floor. One need not be a lawyer to know that estimates of time cannot be considered unflawed gems of evidence.

I, Lee Harvey Oswald do hereby request that my present United States citizenship be revoked.

I appeared in person, at the consulate office of the United States Embassy, Moscow, on Oct 31st, for the purpose of signing the formal papers to this effect. This legal right I was refused at that time.

CONSULAR SECTION TAKEN

Letter by Oswald to the American Embassy in Moscow.

Nevertheless, the points are made, and they are valid insofar as Sauvage's principal allegation is valid: that the Commissions, it is an allegation not possibilities that might have led away from the preconceived notion of Oswald's guilt. For someone who has examined the 26 volumes of evidence and testimony, and attempted an objective comparison of the facts with the Commission's conclusions, it is an allegation not without foundation.

The special value of The Oswald Affair is that it offers the views of an on-the-scene foreign observer at a time when the rush of events and immediate concern for the national interest were straining some of the basic concepts of our judicial system.

Two chapters, "Oswald and the Law" and "Oswald and the Press," especially reveal Sauvage's outrage about the numerous casual violations of individual rights by both federal and local authorities (as when Dallas police officials told the world that Oswald was officially accused of the assassination of President Kennedy before they told the accused himself) and about the manner in which these violations were accepted and even carelessly perpetuated by the press. As Sauvage points out, even the New York Times lost its head in the excitement: the very edition that printed an editorial admonishing the Dallas authorities for having declared Oswald guilty of a crime he was only "alleged" to have committed, carried the page-one headline, "PRESIDENT'S ASSASSIN SHOT TO DEATH."

Sauvage concludes that the Warren Commission's handling of the Oswald affair may have been based on a blind concept of patriotism, which in Europe is cynically identified with the interests of the state: "Distinguished persons and important institutions, apparently believing this was their patriotic duty, lent their names and reputations to support the affirmations and attitudes based on Oswald's guilt. . . ." Much as was done in the Dreyfus case, whose first verdict of guilty "with extenuating circumstances" in 1899 was regarded in the words of Georges Clemenceau as "a compromise between discipline and the consciences."

Sauvage also maintains that "the compromise was much easier 65 years later in Washington. Lee Harvey Oswald is dead and buried; there is no innocent man in prison whose suffering could weigh consciences. And there is no Esterhazy in the Oswald affair: Nobody among those who believe in Oswald's innocence is able to accuse anyone else by name. Why then make a fuss about it?"

Why, indeed?

Warren Report Under the Microscope at UCLA

Professor Directs Massive Analysis of Challenged Findings on Assassination

BY GENE BLAKE
Times Staff Writer

Nagging doubts about the Warren Commission reports on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy are being explored in a massive study at the UCLA law school.

Directing the project is Prof. Wesley J. Liebeler, who served as an assistant counsel on the commission staff. Twenty law students, most of them in their third year, are participating.

Each has been assigned a particular topic in the report. They will go through the record, analyze the evidence on both sides and perhaps suggest what the commission should have gone into more thoroughly.

Results of the seminar will serve as the basis for some of the things to be said in a book which Liebeler plans to write.

Liebeler frankly admits the study was spawned by two books critical of the Warren report—"Rush to Judgment," by attorney Mark Lane, and "Inquest," by Edward Jay Epstein.

Although Liebeler himself has been critical of some of the things done by the commission staff and is quoted extensively in the Epstein book, he is thoroughly in accord with the commission findings.

And he is appaled at the nature of the attacks questioning the conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald was the assassin and acted alone.

Liebeler and his fellows on the commission staff "are particularly incensed at what they claim to be misstatements or distortions of the record. He says he has found at least 15 in the Lane book.

In assessing Lane's treatment of the subject, Liebeler said he is "forced to the conclusion of dishonesty." He is kinder to Epstein by labeling him merely "incorrect."

Liebeler said Epstein, who wrote his book originally as a master's thesis in government at Cornell University, was overwhelmed by the stir it caused and has since been convinced to abandon some of his contentions.

"What is needed at this point," said Liebeler, "is one piece of work which sets forth both sides objectively. Lane doesn't. Epstein doesn't.

"There is evidence in the record not entirely reflected in the text of the Warren report. That doesn't mean it wasn't considered.

"It needs to be put in one short concise place so that the readers can then make up their own minds."

Liebeler is even wary of published accounts of the controversy.

As an example, he cites a wire service report this week quoting him as saying autopsy X rays of President Kennedy showed all shots fired at him were from behind and above.

"I did not state that this was shown by the X rays, but rather that it was shown by the autopsy itself," Liebeler said.

"I did not and could not have made the statement about the X rays themselves showing that the shots were fired from behind and above for the simple reason I have never seen the X-rays.

☐ Being Investigated

"In addition, while I am not an expert on such matters, I doubt that X-rays could show such a thing one way or the other."

But Liebeler believes the pictures of the President's wounds would more likely confirm the findings. And he thinks such material, which he understands has been turned over to the Justice Department by the Kennedy family, should be made available to a responsible body.

He said the commission's working papers, now secreted in the national archives, may be available for scrutiny within 60 days.

The university will be asked for funds to permit students to go to Washington to analyze this material and perhaps to do further research in Dallas, Liebeler said.

Besides reviewing the record, the students may also interview experts—such as pathologists—to see if some more investigation ought to be done.

Writing Criticized

But Liebeler emphasizes that his criticism of the commissiion staff work was directed not at the investigation—which he believes was thorough—but at the writing of the report.

"The time rush basically affected how the report was written, not the investigation," he said.

Liebeler said Epstein is incorrect when he suggests that the commission took only 10 weeks for its work. He said it basically lasted at least seven months—and some further investigations were carried on even beyond that.

For example, he had raised a question about a print of Oswald's palm reportedly listed by Dallas police from the underside of the rifle which fired the fatal shots. FBI tests showed no such print, nor even any evidence that a print had been lifted.

But Liebeler saw that the matter was pursued in Dallas after the commission's basic investigation had been completed. Further investigation of the lifted palm print showed markings proving that it could have come only from the rifle in question.

These are the topics Liebeler has assigned his students to explore:

1—How did the police get the description that was sent out over the police radio and what is the likelihood that it led to Oswald's arrest? General treatment by the Warren report of eye-witness identification of Oswald.

2 — Evidence on Oswald's rifle capability.

3—Source of the shots.

4—Did Oswald purchase the rifle and keep it in his possession until the time of the assassination?

5—Did Oswald bring the rifle into the Texas School Book Depository on Nov. 22, 1963, or at any other time?

6—Was Oswald at the window at the time of the assassination?

7—Did Oswald kill Officer J. D. Tippit?

8—What did Oswald do from 12:30 p.m. to the time he was arrested in the Texas theater?

9—Did Oswald earlier shoot at retired Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker?

10—Analysis of the story that Oswald had a sight mounted on a rifle at a gun shop in suburban Irving, indicating he owned another rifle.

11—Analysis of the testimony by Sylvia Odio suggesting that Oswald may have been involved with Cubans in a conspiracy.

12—Were Oswald and his killer, Jack Ruby, known to each other before the assassination or involved in any kind of conspiracy, directly or indirectly?

13—Make the strongest argument that (a) Oswald was not involved in the assassination at all and (b) that he did not do it alone. Defend the report on these propositions.

14—Where was the bullet found that was recovered after the assassination?

15 — Medical evidence relevant to the one-bullet theory.

16—Other physical facts on the bullet—trajectory, fire-arms identification, weight, etc.

17—Did the bullet go through the President's body as suggested by the one-bullet theory, and if not, when was the President hit, what hit him and where is it?

Wrote Chapter

Liebeler's specific task for the Warren Commission was to write the chapter dealing with Oswald's background and possible motives, plus about one-fifth of the chapter on possible conspiracy.

But he also reviewed the chapter on the assassin. He wrote a critical memo which succeeded in bringing about some changes in the text—although not all he wanted, he says.

An honor graduate of the University of Chicago law school in 1957, the 35-year-old Liebeler practiced law in New York before he was assigned to work with the commission. He is now in his second year as an acting professor at UCLA.

He believes that even though not all of the evidence introduced before the commission would be admissable in a murder trial, there probably was sufficient physical evidence to have convicted Oswald had he lived.

But Liebeler raises a deeper and perhaps even more intriguing question, in the light of the current controversy over free press and fair trial.

Where could Oswald ever have gotten a fair trial?

ON THE RIGHT:

What Does Warren Want of the FBI?

By WILLIAM F. BUCKLEY JR.

I HAVE NEWS that is interesting, healthy, and infuriating. Three members of the Warren Commission apparently raged, behind closed doors, against the projected criticisms of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. But Earl Warren was adamant, and the criticisms were therefore registered. The official Commission report said that the FBI "took an unduly restrictive view of its role in preventive intelligence work prior to the assassination. A more carefully coordinated treatment of the Oswald case by the FBI might well have resulted in bringing Oswald's activities to the attention of the Secret Service."

BUCKLEY

The three gentlemen who were healthy enough to dissent were Representatives Gerald Ford and Hale Boggs, and Senator Russell. They made the point that it was unfair to criticize the FBI without suggesting what the agency could have done, and without weighing the meaning of the kind of preventive activity Chief Justice Warren seemed to be recommending for the rights of the individual citizen.

It is all very well grandly to suggest that the FBI should pick up more suspects, or turn the names of those suspects over to the Secret Service to be picked up. Any implementation of such a program would, however, end up with the FBI defending its behavior before—guess who? Earl Warren himself.

The task of sequestering anyone who might conceivably assassinate a President of the United States is overwhelming, and it must dismay J. Edgar Hoover to be castigated for failing to do an impossible job largely by the same group of people who make it difficult for him to do a possible job.

What, actually, is the Chief Justice recommending? The FBI has estimated that in some areas there are as many as 5,000 persons who are as likely to assassinate a President as Lee Harvey Oswald was, judging only from his previous record. They are Communists, subversives, ultras of every variety, neo-fascists, men and women who are emotionally unstable or demonstrably irrational in their behavior. Is it seriously proposed that, let us say every time the President comes to New York, 5,000 people be picked up and tucked away somewhere? The proposal is preposterous.

Clearly the principal responsibility rests on the President himself. It is not fair for him to impose upon the Secret Service or the FBI an undischargeable burden. It is in the great tradition of leadership to wave away the bodyguards and mingle with the people, and one's republican blood stirs at the sight of it. Charles de Gaulle entered Notre Dame Cathedral on the day that Paris was liberated and walked majestically up the great aisle even as snipers fired bullets all around him from the choirloft.

He got away with it, but the whole point about personal heroism is that sometimes you don't get away with it (otherwise it wouldn't be called heroism) and when you don't get away with it, it is hardly fair to blame the FBI. It was John Kennedy himself who rejected the protective bubble on November the 22nd: and the Secret Service had no power to overrule him.

A committee of eminent people should solicit from all Presidential candidates the pledge that they will, if elected, submit to elementary precautions against stray wildmen with twenty-dollar rifles and telescopic sights. It is better to ask one man to restrain his impulse to mingle with the crowds, than to ask the FBI to deprive of their freedom every man and woman whose unorthodoxy might conceivably explode into an act of regicide.

WARREN REPORT AUTHOR PLANS NEW STUDY TO BACK FINDINGS

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A professor who helped write the Warren Report announced today plans for a new investigation to support the official findings on John F. Kennedy's assassination.

Wesley J. Liebeler said the study would be carried out by 20 law students at the University of California at Los Angeles, where he teaches, the results to be incorporated into a book.

He said the project was prompted mainly by two recent books critical of the Warren Commission's report—Rush to Judgment by Mark Lane, and Inquest by Edward J. Epstein.

"There is evidence in the record not entirely reflected in the text of the Warren Report. That doesn't mean it wasn't considered.

"It needs to be put in one short, concise summary, so that readers can make up their own minds."

Liebeler wrote the Warren Report chapter on the background and motives of Lee Harvey Oswald, whom the Warren Commission named as the killer. The professor maintains that the evidence against Oswald was strong enough to convict him had he not been slain in turn by Jack Ruby.

Liebeler sad his student investigators would examine the Warren Commission's working papers, now in the National Archives at Washington, and might also go to Dallas, scene of the assassination.

Warren Commision Created Out of Thin Air After Plea From Communist Worker

Both Boggs and Red Editor First Blamed Segregationists For Death of John Kennedy

DALLAS--Probably the first two calls for creation of the "Warren Commission" came from the Communist Worker newspaper and a Louisiana congressman, Hale Boggs of New Orleans.

An Associated Press story printed in the Dallas Times Herald Dec. 1, 1963, said "Boggs was an early and vocal proponent of a presidential commission to investigate the slaying."

MOMENTS AFTER DEATH

Moments after the death of President Kennety, Hale Boggs began to issue strong statements blaming segregationists and conservatives.

Boggs was quickly joined by the Midweek edition of The Worker, formerly known as the Daily Worker. Its issue of Nov. 26, 1963, carried an editorial which must have been written on Nov. 24 or earlier.

This editorial:

(1) Blamed segregationists and conservatives for Kennedy's death as did Rep. Boggs.

(2) Called for creation of the Warren Commission to take the investigation out of the hands of Texas officials.

A COMMUNIST PLEA

The Worker editorial was headed: "A Call for an Extraordinary Commission." It stated:

"Violence spewing madmen like General Edwin Walker of Dallas and the Rev. Hargis vied with Governor Wallace of Alabama, Barnett of Mississippi, Senators Eastland and Strom Thurmond in hate-fomenting speaking tours across the land.

"To these groups, the Birchites and the White Citizens Councils among them, the attachment of the late President Kennedy and of the Chief Justice Warren to constitutional democracy and an outlook of progressive development for the nation was anathema...

"We believe that President Johnson on the one hand and Congress on the other should act at once to appoint respective Extraordinary Investigation Commissions with full powers to conduct a searching inquiry into all the circumstances around the assassination of the President and the murder of the suspect...Such an investigating committee, headed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court (Earl Warren), should be composed of citizens and experts who enjoy the confidence of the nation."

End of communist quote.

Three days later, on Nov. 29, Lyndon Johnson gave the nation what the Communist Worker and Hale Boggs asked for: The Warren Commission.

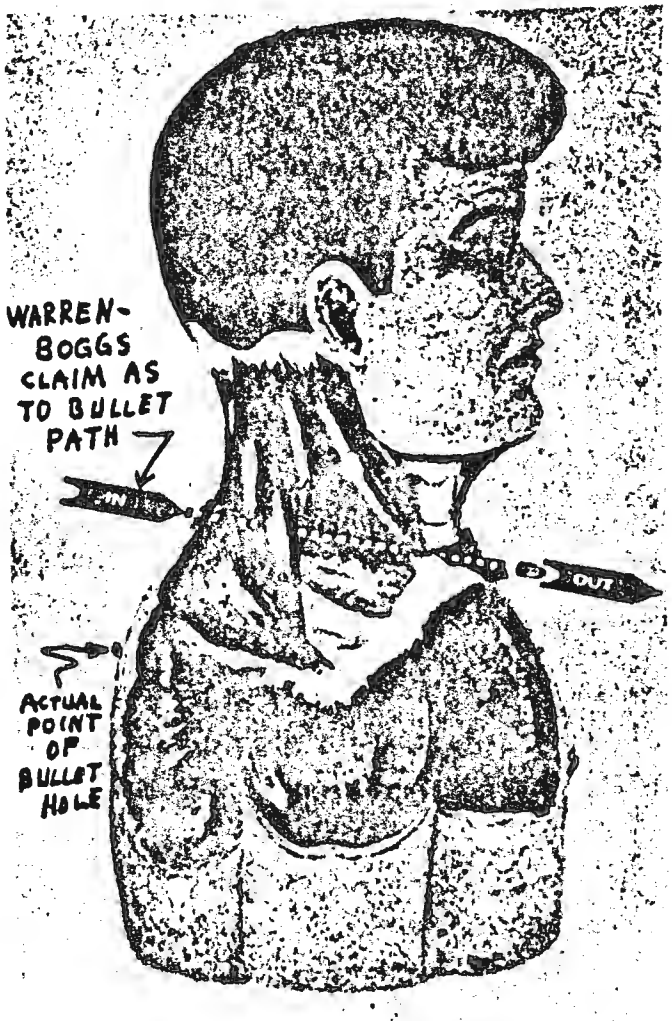
MORE EVIDENCE that Earl Warren and Hale Boggs lied to the public. These official FBI photographs show Kennedy's shirt and tie at the time of the assassination.

Note bullet holes in necktie and front of shirt. Now compare these to position of the bullet hole in back of the shirt.

WARREN-BOGGS theory holds that Bullet 399 was fired from this room in sixth floor of Texas Schoolbook Bldg., traveled downward to enter Kennedy's back, and exited from his throat. The theory says same bullet passed through Governor Connally's body, then smashed and shattered against Connally's wrist.

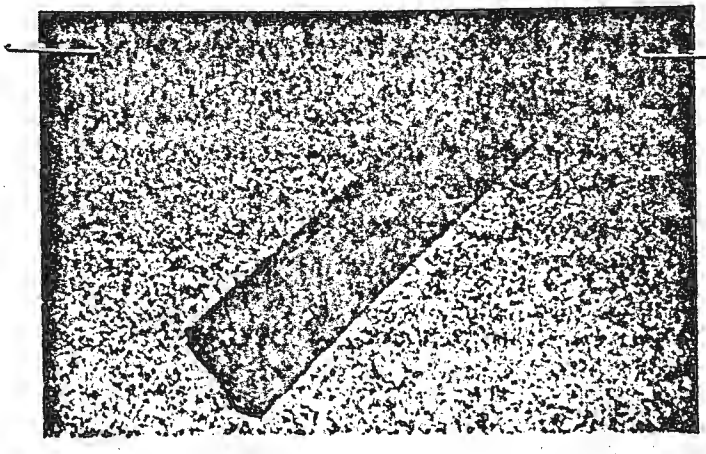
TEST YOUR I.Q.



FALSE CLAIM. According to Earl Warren and Hale Boggs, one of the bullets which struck John Kennedy followed the path shown in this official drawing.

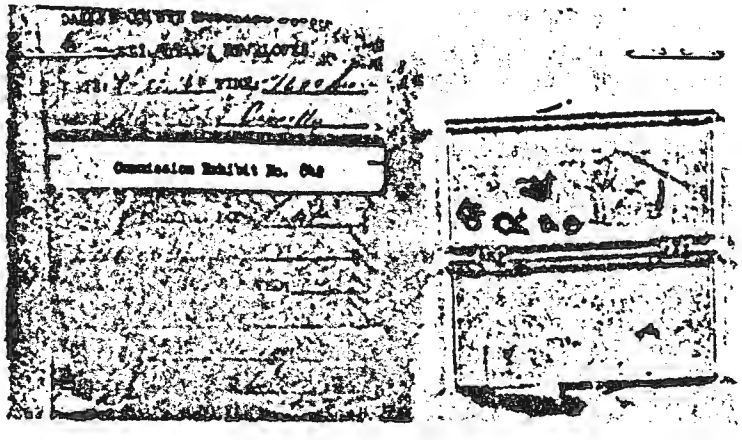
The drawing is false. The bullet hole in Kennedy's back was approximately 6 inches below the point marked "in" on the drawing above.

If the neck wound--at necktie level--and the back wound were caused by the same bullet, it was obviously fired at ground level from behind JFK, or from a point in front of, and slightly above, the president.



SHATTERED(?) BULLET. This is an official Warren Commission photo of Bullet 309 which Hale Boggs attested to. It is in virgin condition.

The bullet was found at Parkland Hospital on a stretcher. Controversy exists as to whether this was stretcher used for Kennedy body or for Connally. The bullet may have been "planted" at the scene by Oswald's unnamed accomplices, or by persons who wanted to create the "Lonely Loner" myth in which Oswald is portrayed as an ~~all-by~~-himself killer.



TEST YOUR I.Q. This is Warren Commission exhibit No. 842, consisting of metal fragments taken from Governor Connally's wrist. Hale Boggs and Earl Warren say they came from Bullet 399. Can you see what part of Bullet 399 they came from? (Editor's Note: We can't.)

The Kennedy Assassination By Great Texas Editor, J. C. Phillips Will Awaken You

A great Texas editor—J. C. Phillips of the Borger News-Herald of Borger, Texas in his famous column, "News Into Focus" looks again at the assassination of President Jack Kennedy. He says regardless of what the Warren Report has to say about the assassination, millions of American people will draw their own conclusion and believe what to them makes common sense. Now read what editor Phillips says which follows:

NEWS INTO FOCUS
BY J. C. PHILLIPS

You Can't! Can You?

Imagine Lee Harvey Oswald in open court being tried for the assassination of President Jack Kennedy with the federal prosecutor being compelled to establish for the record whatever association and/or allegiance that the defendant might have had with the Communist apparatus in this country and the seat of this conspiracy in Moscow, Russia!

YOU CAN'T! CAN YOU? It would have been inconceivable.

Imagine President Lyndon B. Johnson calling upon FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover to subpoena as witnesses to testify in the trial of Lee Harvey Oswald identifiable Communists in the higher echelons of our government.

YOU CAN'T! CAN YOU? It would have been much too embarrassing.

Imagine Lee Harvey Oswald, a man who had renounced his American citizenship, had moved to Russia for training under Soviet Russian police and who while in Russia married a Russian girl, and upon returning to this country working various Communist fronts, BEING FOUND GUILTY acting as a Communist agent in his assassination of President Jack Kennedy.

YOU CAN'T! CAN YOU? It might have caused an international incident.

What They Believe

Regardless of whatever the Warren Report has to say about the assassination, millions of American people will draw their own conclusions and believe what to them makes common sense.

Certainly no one can be blamed for believing, that everything considered, Lee Harvey Oswald had to be killed! His apprehension and arrest was what might be termed a "terrible political blunder." Someone without delay had to put Oswald, the accused, where he could not be forced, by public opinion, to testify in open court.

On television, millions saw Jack Rubenstein (Ruby) shoot Lee Harvey Oswald while officers on either side of him were conveniently staring straight ahead.

Future historians (come the revolution) will probably say that the world owed a debt of gratitude to Jack Rubenstein unless those who obediently write the history to please those in power should select Lee Harvey Oswald for their gratitude. It all depends on a lot of things. Historians draw their own conclusions and this they do.

We must realize that not people see anything in exactly the same perspective: and most certainly "Liberals" who tried to blame the assassination on right wing extremists do not see things as clearly as intelligently informed Americans who bitterly resent Communist influence being so evident within our government.

Let us reduce the belief of millions of Americans who saw both the assassination and the murder on television into language as simple as this: Lee Harvey Oswald acting for an alien conspiracy (Communist and/or Fascist; assassinated President Jack Kennedy. These people believe that Lee Harvey Oswald was given to believe that he would escape unframed following the conclusion of his murder assignment: and that when he failed to escape out of this country, he had to be killed; and that Jack Rubenstein was given the assignment to get rid of the number one witness, Lee Harvey Oswald, and that is when millions saw Lee Harvey Oswald shot to death, (as they looked at their television) by Jack Rubenstein.

Either to prevent an international confrontation with Soviet Russia, Red China or Castro's Cuba, the whole thing had to be white-washed or the white-wash had to be applied to justify statements of officials high in our government who declare that the Communist conspiracy is not a menace in our country.

We are merely stating here what millions of people believe. To be sure the "liberals" believe what they want to believe. They are in the saddle. They control the news. They control a lot of things.

Any conspiracy that might have directed the murder of Lee Harvey Oswald certainly could not afford to let the man who did the deed for them to be executed for his crime. For this reason millions of Americans never did believe that Jack Rubenstein would pay for the murder of Lee Harvey Oswald. Perhaps he did not commit the murder with malice, but nevertheless Lee Harvey Oswald is dead and the star witness is out of the way where he cannot possibly embarrass anyone with his testimony.

Somehow or the other we cannot escape the conviction that the American people have suffered a great insult to their intelligence.

CLAYTON FRITCHEY

Warren Report Critics Draw Fire

There is no doubt that the movement for a new inquiry into the assassination of John F. Kennedy is gaining momentum; and the reopening of the Jack Ruby case is obviously going to increase the clamor.

The action of the Texas Court of Appeals, in setting aside the conviction of Lee Oswald's slayer, comes at a critical moment, for it simply climaxes a series of actions that have aroused suspicions about the Warren Report, and undermined confidence in its findings.

The danger now is that this uneasy doubting sentiment may become so contagious that the government will feel compelled to plunge into a new investigation without sober consideration of what is involved.

The recent poll showing that the American people reject, by a 3-to-2 margin, the "main thrust" of the Warren Report, has made a marked impression on Congress. The finding that a majority of the people doubt that the assassination was the work of one man, and tend to believe the killing was part of a larger plot, has definitely quickened interest in a whole new review.

From the first, of course, many people here and abroad (especially Europe) have rejected the official, generally accepted explanation, but the new Harris poll shows how this suspicion has suddenly swelled in the wake of a recent wave of books attacking the Warren Report.

Heretofore, the doubters had only their instincts to rely on, but they have now been fortified by a series of private postmortems, which both challenge the official verdict and attempt to show that there must have been a conspiracy.

Rep. Ted Kupferman, R-N.Y., already has introduced a resolution calling for a joint congressional committee to re-examine the case with a view to launching a new legislative investigation. The proposal is gaining wide editorial support.

Nevertheless, it will be a disservice to the nation if Congress is stampeded into some action without carefully weighing the substance of the attacks on the Warren Commission that have been receiving so much uncritical publicity.

It must be kept in mind that these books not only question the judgement and conscientiousness of the Warren Commission, but, by insinuation and innuendo, its integrity as well.

We are asked to believe that a panel composed of Chief Justice Earl Warren, Allen Dulles, John McCloy, Senators Richard Russell and John Sherman Cooper, Reps. Hale Boggs and Gerald Ford, would deliberately ignore the evidence to arrive at a political verdict.

We are further asked to believe that three distinguished doctors, who performed the autopsy in the presence of many others, would conspire with the commission by forging a false postmortem on the shooting.

The critics are now demanding a new inquiry "by some completely unprejudiced and fearless body." Just where, Congress should ask itself, could a more trustworthy group of men be found than the members of the Warren Commission, all of whom have given the country years of devoted service?

Also, before reopening the deep wound of the assassination, Congress should satisfy itself that there is enough new and significant evidence to justify so agonizing a step.

Up until recently the critics had the field to themselves, because the commission and its staff were reluctant to dignify and further publicize the attacks by answering them, but now they are beginning to fire back.

Arlen Specter, a key member of the commission's legal staff, and now the district attorney of Philadelphia, flatly says, "There has not been a scintilla of new evidence disclosed in any of the books." Is this so, or isn't it? So far the critics have not rebutted this rebuttal.

Ford and Dulles, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, say they are in "complete agreement" that no "new information has been produced which could reasonably cast any doubts upon the findings or conclusions" of the commission.

"If they have found another assassin," adds Dulles, "let them name names and produce the evidence." This would not seem to be an unreasonable proposal; it is one that Congress should give due weight to.

Finally, a great "mystery" has been made over the whereabouts of the X-rays and photographs that were made of the autopsy, but which were not included in the Warren Report because they were regarded as merely corroborative of the exhaustive testimony of the doctors who performed the autopsy.

Actually, there is no mystery at all. The X-rays and photos are in the possession of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, and if there is ever a legitimate need for them in the future they will be available.

Three investigators say Washington better take a new look at the assassination of President Kennedy

In the last several weeks, three books have been published, severely criticizing different aspects of the Warren Commission's Report on the assassination of President Kennedy. Their assertions have caused one of the late President's advisers, Richard Goodwin, to call for the convening of a new fact-finding body to examine the Commission's evidence. Here, in their own words, are the claims of the three leading critics.

LEO SAUVAGE, author of "The Oswald Affair" (World) and U.S. correspondent for "Le Figaro" newspaper.

"I am not anti-American. I have no political axe to grind. But speaking as a foreigner, and therefore with some extra claim to objectivity, I can only say that from the very first day, the Commission showed they were not looking for the truth but simply trying to prove what they had already decided — that Lee Harvey Oswald was guilty.

"They spent the entire first month of the hearings interrogating members of the Oswald family, who could shed no light whatsoever on the actual assassination as it happened, while the Dallas police officer, who was the first person into the warehouse from which the fatal bullets were supposedly fired, was not called as a witness for seven weeks.

"But the great and unforgivable flaw in the report is the refusal to permit cross-examination, essential to determining the truth in any judicial hearing. I, my secretary, any intelligent person could take the testimony of the incredible series of witnesses brought before the Commission and riddle it — and them — with the most glaring contradictions.

"Equally shocking are the gaps between what the Commission said and the report stated. For instance, the Commission went to great lengths to portray Oswald as a superb marksman. They summoned three masters of the National Rifle Association to hit a moving target at the same distance, with the same inferior rifle — and gave the impression they had thus proved a point. But read the report — you discover these three master marksmen could not duplicate Oswald's supposed feat! The Commission relied on the regrettable fact that the public was not going to read the report. They indulged in what can only be called brainwashing." ■

MARK LANE, author of "Rush to Judgement" (Holt, Rinehart & Winston).

"If one compares the one-volume Warren Commission report with the 26 volumes of evidence on which it is purportedly based, not one major conclusion reached by the Commission bears any relation to the facts. The evidence does not compel the conclusion that Oswald was involved in the killing of President Kennedy or of Officer Tippit, and the evidence is overwhelming that at least two persons were involved in the assassination.

"Absolute proof regarding the origin of the shots might well repose in the photographs and X-rays of the President's body made when the autopsy was performed at Bethesda Naval Hospital. The Commission never examined them, and their whereabouts remains a mystery. More than a third of the reports relied on by the Commission remain classified and inaccessible, including every document regarding Jack Ruby and his associates, and this material may not be seen until September, 2039. The bullets, pistol, rifle, the crucial radio tapes of the Dallas Police Radio on November 22, 1963, have been divided in secrecy among the various police agencies.

"If the Commission is right, if Oswald was the assassin, it is hard to imagine the reason for this suppressing of evidence and for the continuing mystery with which the government surrounds the case." ■ author of "Inquest: the Warren Commission and the Establishment of Truth" (Viking Press, Bantam).

EDWARD JAY EPSTEIN

"I do not agree with Mr. Lane or Mr. Sauvage. The evidence of Lee Oswald's guilt is obvious and overwhelming. But did Oswald act alone? I found in my research a major contradiction between the FBI reports and the autopsy findings in regard to where the murder bullet entered the President's body. And the primary evidence, the only documents that could resolve the contradiction — the autopsy photos — are missing.

"In almost all its actions, the Commission was far too heavily oriented toward public relations. For instance, Chief Justice Warren journeyed to Dallas, with great fanfare, to interview Jack Ruby. But he failed to bring two lawyers who had spent weeks probing Ruby's case, so he had no significant questions to ask.

"A good part of the Commission's ten-month investigation was conducted by one lawyer. The junior lawyers who did the bulk of the staff work operated under terrific pressure to resolve matters as soon as possible. The staff's efforts were often crippled by their lack of trained private investigators working directly for them. They had to depend on the FBI and the CIA and the liaison was very poor.

"I found no indication that anyone distorted evidence or did anything dishonest. I think the Commission did its best within the very inadequate framework in which it was forced to work. Overall, they did a sloppy job, but this does not mean that their conclusion was wrong." ■

More Doubts, and a New (Conspiracy) Theory

By ELIOT FREMONT-SMITH.

THE SECOND OSWALD. By Richard H. Popkin. Introduction by Murray Kempton. 174 pages. Avon. Paper, 95 cents.

IT seems a reasonable surmise that until this summer most Americans, including most Americans who consider themselves both open-minded and well-informed, accepted the major conclusions of the Warren Commission's report on the assassination of President Kennedy. The commission held that Lee Harvey Oswald had shot and killed the President and wounded Governor Connolly from the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository building. The report also said that Oswald had later shot and killed J. D. Tippit, a Dallas policeman; that he had done all this by himself, and that Oswald had not been a party to any assassination plot or conspiracy.

But if this was the general opinion, it no longer appears to be so. The latest Louis Harris poll indicates a growing doubt about the circumstances of the assassination and claims that a majority of the public now believes that the Warren Report, for all its massive documentation, does not contain the full story. It further reports that more people (46 per cent as against 34 per cent, for what that's worth) think Oswald was involved in a plot than that he acted alone.

Public opinion can, of course, be wrong, and so can public opinion polls. Yet if such a shift in opinion has taken place, it is no doubt in large part due to the spate of books and articles that have come out attacking the Warren Commission, its findings, its methods and even its motives.

Until recently, these attacks have been dismissable as too shrill, too one-sided, too insulting and paranoid, and too much the work of habitual dissenters, left-wingers and/or eccentrics. Then last July, Edward Jay Epstein's "Inquest: The Warren Commission and the Establishment of Truth" was published—a soberly reasoned study that may now be called the watershed book of anti-commission criticism. It explored how the commission itself had operated, and suggested how it had become hampered by the very reputation of its distinguished members, by its lack of a proper staff and by extraordinary pressures for haste and unanimity and how it finally had been caught between conflicting demands, the demands of truth and the demands of what might be the best truth for the national interest.

One Book Paved the Way

"Inquest" was the first fully "respectable" critique of the commission's work. It has brought in its wake other, often angrier, books to the attention of serious readers.

In the July 28 issue of The New York Review of Books, Richard H. Popkin, professor of philosophy at the University of California at San Diego, wrote a lengthy article that started out as a review of the more recent and important critical examinations of the Warren Report, continued as a critique itself of the report, and ended up offering an answer to the frequent charge by defenders of the commission that no one had yet come up with a more reasonable interpretation of the evidence and solution to the assassination than that presented by the report.

Mr. Popkin's article has now been published as a paperback book with an added introduction by Murray Kempton, and appendices of pertinent documents from the Warren Report and the National Archives. For this reader, at least, "The Second Oswald" is a very hasty book, but fascinating reading, both because Mr. Popkin may be on to something in his outline of a possible alternative solution, and because he writes like a budding mystery expert.

Mr. Popkin's main thesis is that the Warren Commission's one-man solution is not just implausible but virtually impossible, in terms of the commission's own evidence. Like Messrs. Epstein, Mark Lane ("Rush to Judgment"), Harold Weisberg ("Whitewash"), Leo Sauvage ("The Oswald Affair") and others, Mr. Popkin is especially disturbed by the oddly pristine condition of bullet 399 (the bullet that supposedly went through the President's neck and wounded Governor Connolly, and then was "found"—Mr. Popkin suggests it was placed—on a stretcher in Parkland Memorial Hospital). He is also disturbed by sharply conflicting evidence over the paper bag in which Oswald may or may not have transported his gun, and by the continuing confusion over whether the first bullet entered the President's neck or six inches lower down his back. This last is important in establishing the angle of the bullet, the likelihood of its hitting the Governor and, indeed, the possibility that it never left the President's body.

About the Autopsy Reports

Mr. Popkin is disturbed too by the vague and conflicting reports of the autopsy performed at Bethesda Naval Hospital. And he notes that certain crucial questions can be answered now only with reference to the autopsy photographs and X-rays. He reports that these photographs were never seen by the Warren Commission (one example, among many, of evidence not demanded and leads not followed) nor by the Federal Bureau of Investigation nor by the autopsy surgeons. Commission lawyers have stated that publication of the photographs was withheld at the request of Robert F. Kennedy.

In company with his fellow critics, Mr. Popkin believes that the Warren Commission accepted, rejected, investigated and ignored a great deal of testimony on the basis of its support of the single-assassin hypothesis. He believes no adequate solution is possible without a new and thorough investigation. There has already been talk of such an investigation in Congress,

In the meantime, Mr. Popkin offers a partial and hypothetical solution that, he argues, is at least more in accord with the known evidence than is the Warren Report's. It also accounts for some of the more bizarre discrepancies in the recorded testimony—particularly those that have reported Oswald in two places at once—as well as for the odd run-in with Patrolman Tippit and Oswald's peculiar self-assurance following his arrest. It is a theory of two (or more) assassins, with Oswald supplying a court-proof alibi both for himself and for the "real" assassin, should either of them be caught. Admitedly porous and incomplete, the hypothesis is intended to be suggestive of the possibilities of an alternative solution, and in this it succeeds.

There are those who will object to such a book on a variety of both good and questionable grounds—just as members of the Kennedy family are now reported to be objecting to magazine serialization of William Manchester's forthcoming (one trusts it is still forthcoming) book, "The Death of a President." But the assassination was an event that belongs to all of us, that none of us will ever get over. It is not further obfuscation (for whatever understandable reason) we now need, but greater clarity.

WASHINGTON--A WARREN COMMISSION LAWYER VOICED CONFIDENCE TODAY THAT REOPENING OF THE KENNEDY ASSASSINATION INVESTIGATION WOULD DISCLOSE NO NEW EVIDENCE OR ALTER THE COMMISSION'S FINDINGS.

"THE EVIDENCE IS OVERWHELMING THAT LEE HARVEY OSWALD WAS THE ASSASSIN OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY," SAID ARLEN SPECTER, AN ASSISTANT COUNSEL FOR THE COMMISSION, IN ANSWERING RECENT BOOKS AND ARTICLES THAT CAST DOUBT ON THE COMMISSION FINDINGS.

The Harris Survey

Country, 3-2, Rejects Main Argument Of Warren Report on Kennedy Slaying

By Louis Harris

© 1966, The Washington Post Co.

The American people have deep and abiding doubts about the official explanation of the assassination of John F. Kennedy put forth in the Warren Commission Report, according to a just-completed survey.

The reaction of a cross-section of the public shows these findings:

- By a 3-to-2 margin, the American people reject the main thrust of the Warren Report that the assassination was the work of one man and tend to believe the killing was part of a larger plot. But, the public is at a loss to say who was behind the "plot."
- A majority of the public holds the view that the full story of the assassination was not contained in the Warren Commission Report.
- Fewer people today than at the time of the shooting are sure that Lee Harvey Oswald killed the late President.

The largest lack of acceptance of the explanation by the Warren Commission persists among lower-income, less-educated Americans. The more articulate, better informed groups tend to give more credence to the official report.

The national cross-section was asked:

"From what you have read, do you feel the full story of the Kennedy assassination was reported in the Warren Commission Report or do you think there are still a lot of unanswered questions about who killed President Kennedy and how it was done?"

Just after the killing in December, 1963, and again last month, the Harris Survey asked the public:

"Do you feel that Lee Harvey Oswald was the man who shot President Kenendy?"

COMMISSION 10/3 WA
NIGHT LD
WASHINGTON (UPI) --A WARREN COMMISSION LAWYER SAID MONDAY THERE WAS NO DOUBT THAT LEE HARVEY OSWALD KILLED PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY AND THAT ANOTHER INVESTIGATION COULT NOT TURN UP ANY NEW EVIDENCE TO ALTER THE COMMISSION'S VERDICT.

ARLEN SPECTER, NOW DISTRICT ATTORNEY OF PHILADELPHIA, DEFENDED THE COMMISSION'S REPORT AGAINST RECENT BOOKS AND ARTICLES CRITICIZING THE INVESTIGATION OF THE LATE PRESIDENT'S MURDER.

IN A COPYRIGHTED INTERVIEW IN U.S. NEWS & WORLD REPORT, SPECTER SAID:

"THERE CAN BE NO REAL DOUBT ON THAT SUBJECT, BASED ON THE FACTORS OF OWNERSHIP OF THE WEAPON...THE HANDWRITING LINKS TO OSWALD'S HAVING ORDERED THAT WEAPON, THE FACT THAT IT IS SCIENTIFICALLY, BALLISTICALLY PROVED BEYOND QUESTION THAT THE WHOLE BULLET...CAME FROM THAT WEAPON, THAT THE TWO MAJOR FRAGMENTS FOUND IN THE FRONT SEAT OF THE PRESIDENTIAL LIMOUSINE CAME FROM THAT WEAPON."

"FURTHER INDICATIONS OF OSWALD'S GUILT ARE HIS RAPID EXIT, FLEEING FROM THE SITE OF THE TEXAS SCHOOLBOOK DEPOSITORY BUILDING AND THE LATER KILLING OF OFFICER (J.D.) TIPPIT, WHICH WAS WITNESSED BY SEVERAL PECPLE, PLUS PHOTOGRAPHS SHOWING OSWALD HOLDING A RIFLE IDENTIFIED AS BEING THE MANNLICHER-CARCANO WHICH WAS USED."

SPECTER SAID THERE WAS OVERWHELMING EVIDENCE THAT THE SAME BULLET WOUNDED TEXAS GOV. JOHN B. CONNALLY AND THERE WAS NOTHING TO INDICATE OSWALD ACTED AS PART OF A CONSPIRACY.

"THE COMMISSION LEFT NO STONE UNTURNED TO TRACK DOWN OSWALD'S BACKGROUND TO THE MAXIMUM EXTENT POSSIBLE, ZPECTER SAID, "TO SEE IF HE HAD DEALINGS WITH ANYONE ELSE WHO MIGHT HAVE BEEN A CO-CONSPIRATOR."

HE SAID THE COMMISSION DID NOT START THE INVESTIGATION WITH "THE PRECONCEIVED NOTION THAT OSWALD WAS THE ASSASSIN. THE COMMISSION...DID MAINTAIN AN OPEN MIND ON THAT SUBJECT AND SURVEYED THE EVIDENCE BEFORE COMING TO ITS CONCLUSION."

Warren Commission Law Defends Probe of Oswald

A Warren Commssion lawyer said yesterday there was no doubt that Lee Harvey Oswald killed President John F. Kennedy and that another investigation could not turn up any new evidence to alter the commission's verdict.

Arlen Specter, now District Attorney of Philadelphia, defended the Commission's report against recent books and articles criticing the investigation of the late President's murder.

In a copyrighted interview in U.S. News a World Report, Mr. Specter said:

"There can be no real doubt on that subject, based on the factors of ownership of the weapon . . . the handwriting links to Oswald's having ordered that weapon, the fact that it is scientifically, ballistically proved beyond question that the whole bullet . . . came from that weapon, that the two major fragments found the front seat of the presidential limousine came from that weapon."

"Further indications of Oswald's guilt are his rapid exit, fleeing from the site of the Texas Schoolbook Depository building and the later killing of Officer (J. D.) Tippit, which was witnessed by several people, plus phtographs showing Oswald holding a rifle identified as being the Mannlicher-Carcano which was used."

Mr. Specter said there was overwhelming evidence that the same bullet woundedTexas Gov. John B. Connally and there was nothing to indicate Oswald acted as part of a conspiracy. (UPI)

U.S. INQUIRY IS URGED ON WARREN REPORT

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Sept. 28—Representative Theodore R. Kupferman asked Congress Wednesday to conduct its own investigation into the adequacy of the Warren report on President Kennedy's assassination.

Citing recent books and articles critical of the report, the Manhattan Republican called for the creation of a 10-member joint Senate-House committee to review the Warren Commission's work.

The committee, composed of five members from each house, would first determine whether there is a need to go beyond the Warren Commission's investigation. This would be based on a review of the commission's findings and also the critical writings and outside data.

LONDON DEBATES WARREN REPORT

Critics Are Split on Issues Raised by 2 U.S. Books

By ANTHONY LEWIS
Special to The New York Times

LONDON, Sept. 25 — The Warren Commission report on the assassination of President Kennedy is undergoing another round of scrutiny in Britain. Critics and defenders seem about equally divided.

The occasion for the revival of interest is the publication of two critical books already on the market in the United States—"Inquest" by Edward Jay Epstein and "Rush to Judgment" by Mark Lane.

Mr. Epstein's complaint that the commission headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren did a hasty, inadequate job has won more support than any conspiracy theories — either his or the more fanciful ones of Mr. Lane.

Mr. Epstein, a Harvard doctoral candidate, undertook his study of the Warren Commission report as a master's thesis at Cornell. Mr. Lane is a lawyer and former Democratic Assemblyman from New York City.

Tonight The Times of London called on the Warren Commission to reopen its inquiry and deal with the various points of criticism raised. The comment was in an editorial for tomorrow's editions.

"All things considered the Warren Commission did a remarkable job of work in difficult circumstances and extreme pressure," The Times said.

However, it continued, "it is now clear" that the commission "did cut some corners."

Lord Devlin, one of the most respected legal figures in England, said in The Observer today that, in light of the Epstein book, the commission "was not as potent an instrument for discovering the truth as externally it appeared to be."

On the other hand, Lord Devlin said Mr. Epstein had not sustained his intimated charge that the commission had "brought itself to shirk the truth because of its own fear of the political consequences."

Evidence Held Lacking

Mr. Epstein agreed with the commission that Lee Harvey Oswald had fired at the President but thought there might well have been a second assassin. Lord Devlin thought the known evidence on firing times left the possibility open, but he saw it as only a possibility, with no trace of affirmative evidence to support it.

Prof. Arthur I. Goodhart, another eminent lawyer, writing in The Sunday Telegraph, ridiculed both the Lane and Epstein books as worthless, especially Mr. Lane's.

He recalled that Mr. Lane's own testimony before the commission was evasive and devoid of direct relevance. He described as "utter nonsense" a statement by Mr. Lane that Oswald would have had posthumous counsel before an English royal commission.

The only favorable review in the serious Sunday papers was by Cyril Connolly, the literary critic.

He said in The Sunday Times that he was now convinced that the authorities investigating the assassination were unduly committed to the view that Oswald had committed the slaying alone. He called for another investigation by "some completely unprejudiced and fearless body."

Alistair Cooke, the long-time American correspondent of The Guardian, also was critical of the Warren report. He said that it had "signally failed" to ascertain the truth, and that "this President or the next should convene another commission."

Another call for a further independent study was made by the anonymous reviewer in The Economist. Without it, he said, the judgment will "never be satisfying or conclusive."

Bernard Levin, an often acidulous columnist in The Daily Mail, found both Mr. Epstein and Mr. Lane "shifty" in their handling of the evidence. He said they merely served those who refused to believe the report's conclusion "because the truth is unbearable to them."

"MR. LANE'S book is a brief for the defense — the case he would have made, had he been permitted to represent Oswald. It is well-documented, persuasive, and restrained. As a professional advocate, he . . . presents a powerful case for the proposition that the Commission committed numerous errors in admitting, evaluating, and excluding evidence." — FRED GRAHAM, New York Times Book Review

"This is the most disturbing book I have read in many years. Whatever one may think about conspiracies and all the other highly debatable areas of conjecture, it seems to me that Lane has completely proved his main point, and it is a terrible one: that the most significant murder of our lifetime received an investigation which does not measure up to the standards of criminalistics and detection which we have a right to expect in the most ordinary everyday homicide. (And that the official Commission did its best to conceal this fact from the public.)"
— ANTHONY BOUCHER

"If one-tenth of these facts should prove to be significant, then the work of the Warren Commission will be judged by history to be a scandal worse than Teapot Dome. . . . RUSH TO JUDGMENT will live as a classic for every serious amateur detective in America because Lane's book proves once and forever that the assassination of President Kennedy is more of a mystery today than when it occurred. . . . His work is not without a trace of that stature we call heroic. Three cheers!"
— NORMAN MAILER, Front page, Book Week

"The Warren Commission Report is not acceptable. It ignores or misrepresents or distorts much of the recorded evidence, and its most important conclusions are suspect. If you think that is incredible, or even merely unlikely, and wish to go on thinking so, do not read this book. Do not even stop in at a bookstore for a look at it, for if you read a page, almost any page, you will probably be hooked."— REX STOUT

LET'S start a rumor, you and I. There will be a point to it.

Charles Whitman, the psychotic sniper, sat the night before he wrought his carnage writing a letter. He told his friend, Larry Fuess, he was writing to a friend in Washington whom he hadn't seen in five years.

This was one of the letters the grand jury in Austin suppressed. The grand jury suppressed Whitman's last thoughts because, it argued, his letters libeled innocent people. But let's say they didn't libel innocent people; let's say they were inflammatory, let's say they contained terrible charges.

Who would he charge?

Well, we can only make rumors. But we can guess that Charles Whitman served in the Marines about the same time another famous sniper named Lee Harvey Oswald served. Perhaps they knew each other. Why not?

And if they knew each other, is there any reason why Charles Whitman couldn't have been the second assassin? The assassin who some believe helped Oswald murder President John F. Kennedy? Maybe that suppressed letter is a confession.

But my rumor, hereby rescinded, is no more implausible than the spate of books which now question the findings of the Warren Commission. I can think of four off-hand: Mark Lane's "Rush to Judgment" (Holt, Rinehart & Winston, $5.95); Harold Weisberg's "Whitewash" (Harold Weisberg, $4.95); Edward Jay Epstein's "Inquest" (Viking, $5); and Jean Stafford's "A Mother in History" (Farrar, Straus & Giroux, $3.95).

Many critics insist there must have been two assassins. The basis for this insistence is that if Oswald succeeded he needed a fantastic amount of luck. Which I believe is precisely why Oswald did succeed. He had a maniacal courage and there is something about maniacal courage which commands luck.

The main criticism leveled at the Warren Commission is that it proceeded on the assumption of Lee Harvey Oswald's guilt. I see no reason why men cannot make presumptions about facts. The Mark Lane book makes much of the nonsense that Jack Ruby was in on it because he had such easy access to police headquarters.

What Mark Lane doesn't know is that every town in America has at least one Jack Ruby; the fellow whose pockets are filled with Police and Sheriff "courtesy" cards, and who is always "butting in." No only do you see him at Police Headquarters when they are bringing in someone, but you'll also see him at big fires wearing a fireman's hat. And any semi-intelligent conspirator would have had to be insane to take a Jack Ruby into his confidence.

But to say that the Warren Report withheld vital evidence, as two of these books charge, is to say also that the Chief Justice and his colleagues, who included at least three very "tough" men; Dulles, Rankin, and Gerald Ford, were in on a conspiracy to protect Jack Ruby. Why? But there's no need to ask why? You are involved here with the renunciation of logic against which no logic can prevail.

All of this is to say nothing of the brother of the murdered president, who, next to the widow, was the most devastated human being in America; another "tough" man, who happened also to be the Attorney General of the entire United States. Two months after the tragedy, Robert Kennedy told me, " . . . the family is satisfied it was this one fellow."

By William F. Buckley Jr.

THE literature of skepticism concerning the official history of the assassination of President Kennedy grows and grows.

For a while the Warren Commission benefited from the ideological cast of the criticism.

In France, particularly, during 1964, the sophisticates were seriously explaining to each other that Mr. Kennedy was the victim of an elaborate plot involving the Dallas police, Texas billionaires, Lyndon Johnson, and the Widow McCarthy. I mean, in all seriousness.

The conclusion which is intellectually responsible as a result of the probing of these critics is not so much the rejection of the conclusions of the Warren Commission, which would be premature, but a revaluation of the Commission's competence. That is to say, the critics appear to have made the case cogently that the Commission showed itself more concerned to substantiate the national postulates about the assassination — that Oswald was the executioner, and the lone executioner — than to investigate and assimilate all the discoverable evidence; presumably for fear that, properly weighed, such evidence might tend to different conclusions.

One asks hastily: why might the Warren Commission fear other conclusions? The answer to which is possibly alarmist, tho not necessarily so. Going from one end of the spectrum to the other, the Warren Commission might subconsciously have feared to discover a) that Oswald executed Mr. Kennedy acting upon a directive of an agent of the Communist Party; or z) at the other end of the imaginative spectrum, that Oswald executed Mr. Kennedy at the instigation of Dallas right-wingers.

In the event of a), the popular indignation of the people could — conceivably — have triggered a world war. In the event of z), it could have triggered a national program against right-wingers. And even in between a) and z) — a finding that Oswald was not the executioner; or if he was the executioner, that he had accomplices, might have resulted in a public torment at not knowing who-all were responsible for the awful deed — a traumatizing torment leading to suspicion, resentment, frustration.

My own judgment is that the presumptions of the Warren Commission are still plausible. But it does seem that the better part of wisdom is to stand by to reactivate the Warren Commission, or at least spokesmen for the Commission. And the best way to do that, it seems to me, was suggested by Mr. Richard Goodwin, formerly of President Kennedy's staff. His proposal is that a panel of respectable and qualified gentlemen be established to winnow the vast amount of material, intending to come up with one of the following conclusions:

(1) That the Warren Commission investigations do in fact contain the evidence necessary to dispose of the doubters' doubts;

(2) That the Warren Commission's investigations, altho they do not successfully cope with the anomalies unearthed by the critics, nevertheless present such irrefutable evidence to back the conclusion that Oswald was the lone killer, as to make unnecessary any further investigation. Or, of course,

(3) That the Warren Commission's investigations have been proved inadequate, and altho there is as yet no evidence that Oswald had an accomplice or that he acted as someone else's agent, neither is the evidence to the contrary conclusive: and investigations should resume.

Buckley Group Plans Warren Report Study

The Historic Research Foundation, an organization associated with conservative causes, announced yesterday it was planning a $2,000 grant to study the Warren Commission Report on President Kennedy's assassination.

A foundation spokesman said the idea for the study originated with Wiliam F. Buckley Jr., editor of the National Review and one of the foundation's trustees. Buckley was quoted as saying the evaluation of the report would be made "for the sake of the public tranquility."

The foundation was set up by the late Alfred Kohlberg, a textile importer, who was a leading member of the China lobby in the U.S. after the expulsion of Chiang Kai-shek from the Chinese mainland.

The foundation's announcement coincided with the publication of a fourth book critical of the Warren Report, "The Second Oswald," by Prof. Richard H. Popkin, chairman of the philosophy department of the University of California.

Soviet Halts Distribution Of Warren Panel Report

From News Dispatches

MOSCOW, Aug. 31 — The U.S. Embassy here said today it had been ordered by Russia to stop distributing Russian-language versions of the Warren Commission Report on President Kennedy's assassination.

The Embassy was told the 850-page Report contained material which slandered the Soviet Union and its circulation here was improper and inadmissable.

Some 653 Russian copies of the report have already been handed out to Kremlin officials and others in Russia and the Embassy still has another 750.

It was understood that the Soviet government objected to the inclusion in the Warren Report of comments by Lee Harvey Oswald on his life in the Soviet Union. Oswald had returned to the United States, saying he was disillusioned with Soviet communism. He brought back a Russian wife.

U.S. Minister-Counsellor John C. Guthrie was called to the Foreign Ministry last Wednesday and informed of the ban on the Warren Report. He said that the U.S. Government had been distributing it so the Soviet people here could form an accurate opinion of the circumstances of the assassination in Dallas.

Washington sent Guthrie back to the Foreign Ministry yesterday to express regret on the ban. He agrued that the U.S. government has permitted circulation in the United States of Soviet publications and asked for reconsideration of the ban.

But an Embassy spokesman said there seemed little chance of this. The Soviet Foreign Ministry made no statement on the ban today.

The commission, under Chief justice Earl Warren, was given access to Russian goverment documents on Oswald's stay in the Soviet Union when it set out to study the killing. The Commission's report did not implicate Russia.

During his second appearance at the Foreign Ministry Guthrie also protested a new article in the Soviet press claiming Kennedy was killed in a conspiracy. The Soviet labor newspaper Trud ran a reprint last Thursday of an article in the Czech newspaper Rude Pravo which charged that the Warren Commission Report falsified and concealed facts.

This version also said the assassination was the work of a right-wing conspiracy.

(WARREN COMMISSION)

MOSCOW--THE U.S. HAS PROTESTED AGAINST A KREMLIN DECISION TO BAR DISTRIBUTION OF COPIES OF THE WARREN COMMISSION REPORT ON THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY, THE U.S. EMBASSY DISCLOSED TODAY. BUT EMBASSY OFFICIALS SAID THERE APPEARED TO BE LITTLE HOPE THAT THE SOVIETS WOULD RESCIND THE ORDER.

IN WASHINGTON, HOUSE GOP LEADER GERALD R. FORD, R-MICH., SAID, "I THINK IT IS RIDICULOUS THAT THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT SHOULD BAN DISTRIBUTION OF THE WARREN COMMISSION REPORT IN RUSSIA. THIS SIMPLY POINTS UP THE OPPRESSION AND CENSORSHIP SUFFERED BY THE PEOPLES LIVING UNDER A TOTALITARIAN FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

"THE SHARP CONTRAST BETWEEN AMERICA AND THE SOVIET UNION--BETWEEN FREEDOM AND TYRANNY--IS EXEMPLIFIED BY THIS ACTION OF THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT. AMERICANS DO NOT FEAR THE TRUTH. THAT IS WHY WE ALLOW OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS OF THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT TO BE DISTRIBUTED IN THIS COUNTRY. CERTAINLY THE SOVIETS SHOULD ACCORD US THE SAME KIND OF TREATMENT."

THE EMBASSY RELEASED DETAILS OF TWO TALKS, ON AUG. 24 AND 30, BETWEEN EMBASSY MINISTER COUNSELOR JOHN GUTHRIE AND G. N. KORNIYENKO, CHIEF OF THE AMERICAN SECTION AT THE SOVIET FOREIGN MINISTRY.

KORNIYENKO REPORTEDLY TOLD GUTHRIE THAT THE FULL REPORT OF THE INVESTIGATION INTO KENNEDY'S DEATH "CONTAINED MATERIAL SLANDEROUS TO THE SOVIET PEOPLE."

HE DID NOT ELABORATE, BUT THE EMBASSY SPECULATED HE WAS REFERRING TO EXCERPTS FROM THE DIARY OF ACCUSED ASSASSIN LEE HARVEY OSWALD.

THE REPORT WENT OUT OF ITS WAY TO REJECT SPECULATION THAT THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT WAS CONNECTED WITH THE ASSASSINATION IN DALLAS IN NOVEMBER OF 1963. SOVIET OFFICIALS WHO HAD SEEN EARLIER ENGLISH-LANGUAGE COPIES OF THE REPORT SAID PRIVATELY THEY WERE IMPRESSED BY ITS BALANCE.

SOON AFTER PUBLICATION OF THE WARREN REPORT TWO YEARS AGO, THE U.S. GOVERNMENT SENT 80 COPIES HERE, TOGETHER WITH 750 RUSSIAN-LANGUAGE SUMMARIES.

THEY WERE DISTRIBUTED TO TOP SOVIET OFFICIALS AND EDITORS WERE WITHOUT HINDERANCE.

SINCE THEN, THE EMBASSY HAS RECEIVED 178 REQUESTS FROM LOWER-RANKING OFFICIALS OR PRIVATE CITIZENS FOR RUSSIAN-LANGUAGE COPIES.

ABOUT 2,000 SUCH COPIES WERE PREPARED BY THE USIA IN WASHINGTON. OF THESE, 1,400 WERE SENT TO MOSCOW. SINCE JULY 1, THE EMBASSY WAS DISTRIBUTED 75 TO THE SAME LEADERS WHO RECEIVED ENGLISH-LANGUAGE COPIES, PLUS 400 TO LOWER RANKING OFFICIALS AND [illegible] THOSE PRIVATE CITIZENS WHO HAD REQUESTED THEM.

THREE HAVE BEEN RETURNED--"HARDLY AN AVALANCHE,"--THE EMBASSY SAID.

KORNIYENKO "INVITED" THE EMBASSY TO STOP THE DISTRIBUTION, BUT THIS INVITATION WAS TREATED AS AN ORDER.

Russia Bans U.S. Report On Kennedy

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet government has stopped distribution by the U.S. Embassy of a Russian language text of the Warren Commission report on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, an embassy spokesman said today.

The Foreign Ministry called the report "slanderous to the Soviet people" and its distribution "improper and inadmissible," the spokesman said.

It was understood the Russians objected to parts of the report that included comments by Lee Harvey Oswald on his life in Moscow.

Soviet Union Absolved

The report held that Oswald alone killed Kennedy, that the assassination had nothing to do with his life in Moscow and the Soviet Union had no connection with the crime.

There was speculation in Moscow that distribution of the report was stopped because it contradicts the Soviet version of the Kennedy assassination as a right-wing conspiracy of "Texas oil barons."

The embassy objected to the ban, denied the Soviet charges and asked the Foreign Ministry to reconsider. But the spokesman said there was little chance the Foreign Ministry would reverse itself.

Russia Bars Circulation Of U.S. Warren Report

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet government has told the U.S. embassy to stop distributing a Russian-language text of the Warren Commission report on the assassination of President Kennedy, an embassy spokesman said today.

The Soviet Foreign Ministry called the report "slanderous to the Soviet people" and said its distribution in the Soviet Union was "improper and inadmissible," the spokesman said.

The embassy objected to the ban, denied the Soviet charges and asked the Foreign Ministry to reconsider. But the spokesman said there was little chance the Foreign Ministry would reverse itself.

Action Unprecedented

Senior American diplomats could not recall another case of the Russians asking the embassy to stop distributing an official American document.

They said, however, that the Warren Commission report was unprecedented so there was no way of comparing the ban on it to earlier bans.

The Russians stopped distribution of the Russian-language Magazine Amerika last September because the cover contained, in a display of flags, the flag of Nationalist China which Moscow does not recognize.

Published Under Agreement

Amerika is published under U.S. government supervision and sold here under the U.S.-Soviet Cultural exchange program. An English-language magazine is distributed in the United States by the Russians.

The Warren Commission report was given to top Soviet government officials as an authoritative document of the U.S. government. Its distribution did not fall under any U.S.-Soviet agreement.

It was also distributed to 178 Russians who had written the embassy and asked for copies.

Warren Critics Cast Doubt In Kennedy Slaying

Analyzing the New Books; Interesting Theories, But Still No Clear Rebuttal

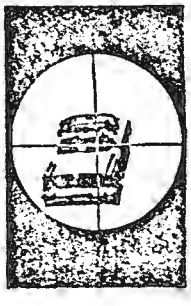
WASHINGTON, D.C.

". . . The commission has done what it could. But mysteries like this have a way of staying unresolved."

With those words, on Sept. 28, 1964, The National Observer closed its analysis of the Report by the Warren Commission on the assassination of President Kennedy. In recent weeks, a spate of books has confirmed those words. A considerable number of people remain unconvinced that the Commission Report was a definitive verdict.

Notable is a book called Inquest, by Edward J. Epstein, in which, for the first time, the basic functioning of the commission is called into doubt. Other well-researched books, using the same evidence used by the commission, make different analyses, which result in different conclusions.

As yet there is no outcry for further investigation in Congress or elsewhere. And there may be none. "We'll have to wait until the dust has cleared, until all the books are out, and everyone has a chance to digest them," says one congressman. "Then we'll see if anything else should be done."



The books have not shaken the men who formed the commission (which dissolved when its report was published). They are sticking, not surprisingly, to their conclusions. "I have my doubts on some of our statements," says one lawyer who worked on the commission's staff. "I think we might have avoided some trouble if we had handled certain parts of the evidence differently. But much of the criticism is based on obvious misreading of the known facts. It makes me angry that they can get away with that.

"There may be some inaccuracies in the report. But on the essential conclusions—that Lee Harvey Oswald, acting alone, killed the President, and wounded Governor [John] Connally—I have no doubts."

'Impeccable Credentials'

When the Warren Commission Report appeared, Americans were disposed to believe it. Here was a group of leaders with impeccable credentials assisted by a staff of crack lawyers and the complete investigative facilities of Government providing a full and official verdict. To quote again from a not untypical reaction, The National Observer noted:

"The Warren Commission has reported and the first great reaction is: No surprises.

"But to stop there would be to do an injustice to a massive effort. For the commission was not assigned to write a mystery; it was assigned to clear up a mystery."

The commission's official conclusions were:

"The shots which killed President Kennedy and wounded Governor Connally were fired by Lee Harvey Oswald.

"The commission has found no evidence that either Lee Harvey Oswald or Jack Ruby (who murdered Oswald) was part of any conspiracy, domestic or foreign, to assassinate President Kennedy.

"The shots . . . were fired from the sixth-floor window at the southeast corner of the Texas School Book Depository."

The critics of this version have new weapons now. Instead of having to rely on newspaper clippings, television film clips, and their own erratic investigation, they have the commission's own 26-volume proceedings (available to anyone at $76 a set). Those proceedings make for fascinating reading, and have spawned the new assaults.

Besides Inquest there is Rush to Judgment by Mark Lane; Whitewash, by Harold Weisberg; The Unanswered Questions about President Kennedy's Assassination, by Sylvan Fox; and The Oswald Affair, by Leo Sauvage.

Whitewash was written by a free-lance author who finds the report lacking; it is overshadowed by better jobs from others more closely connected with the event. Unanswered Questions comes from a New York newspaperman; scholarship is lacking.

Rush to Judgment and The Oswald Affair are better. The latter is superior. It is not some wild creation by a Frenchman obsessed with conspiracy; for one thing Mr. Sauvage has lived in the United States for 18 years. It is a readable and usually reasonable analysis of the evidence; the book reaches conclusions at odds with the commission's.

What Mr. Lane Argues

Mr. Lane's Rush to Judgment is an excellent defense lawyer's presentation. He doesn't, finally, refuse to accept Oswald's involvement, though he considers the case not well proven. He does argue that the assassination didn't happen as the commission said it did, and, at the least, others were involved.

Mr. Lane, who was hired by Oswald's mother to defend his interests, makes some good points and some weak ones. Like any good defense lawyer he uses a scattershot approach—to attempt to create in the minds of judge and jury, as it were, a "reasonable doubt" about his client's guilt.

Most telling of all, however, is Inquest. Mr. Epstein starts with the advantage of being less suspect. He set out simply to write a master's thesis (for prominent Cornell University political scientist Andrew Hacker) on the workings of an extraordinary government body—its functions, not its conclusions.

Mr. Epstein has done two things. First he has interpreted the operation of the commission through interviews with five of its seven members and nine of its staff lawyers. He has studied its hearings and working papers. And he has concluded that the report is not the product of the monumental research that it was presumed to be.

Second, he has avoided the scattershot approach to drive hard at a handful of key issues in the report. In this way, he builds a considerable case for doubting the conclusions.

On the first point, he notes that the average attendance time spent by the seven commissioners (Chief Justice Earl Warren, Sen. Richard Russell, Sen. John Sherman Cooper, Rep. Hale Boggs, Rep. Gerald Ford, Allen Dulles, and John McCloy) was 45 per cent, varying from Mr. Dulles' 71 per cent to Senator Russell's 6 per cent. He quotes one staff lawyer's answer to the question of what the commissioners did: "Nothing."

Busy With Other Things

He maintains that the five "senior lawyers" on the staff contributed little time or effort. The problem, he says, is that men of the stature of these lawyers and commissioners, chosen precisely because of their stature, were inevitably busy with other things.

Thus, he finds, most of the work fell on a staff of lawyers in their early 30s, admittedly bright but just as admittedly inexperienced for such a task.

Mr. Epstein concludes that the commission began slowly, was held up by the Ruby trial in Dallas, did most of its investigation in 10 weeks, and was constantly harried to publish the report. The deadline for copy was originally June 1; it was regularly pushed back until publication Sept. 27, 1964.

He finds that, because of the division of labor in its organization, many staff lawyers evaluated information that might have proven useful to other staffers but was discarded because it didn't fit their assigned slot. He makes much of the fact that the essential reconstruction of the assassination itself fell on one young lawyer, Arlen Specter, who is now district attorney of Philadelphia.

Commission staff lawyers deny much of this thesis. "As a practical matter, the commissioners were like members of a board of directors," says one. "They set the over-all tone and directed the conclusions. The work was done by a staff, as in any business or Government function."

A staff lawyer maintains that the investigation was much longer than Mr. Epstein suggests. "The commission began slowly in December but by January we were working hard and full-time. I worked six days a week continually and for the last month and a half seven days a week. Many of us did. The Ruby trial held up some field work in Dallas, but there was always enough to do in Washington and elsewhere."

As for Mr. Epstein's comments that the staff frequently disagreed, a lawyer says that of course this was true. Tempers are bound to get short under such pressure, and we had many difficult points to resolve," he said. "I hardly think that should be surprising."

One of Mr. Epstein's most serious charges concerns what he calls the "dominant purpose" of the investigation. He says:

"There was a dualism in purpose. If the explicit purpose of the commission was to ascertain and expose the facts, the implicit purpose was to protect the national interest by dispelling rumors.

"The two purposes were compatible so long as the damaging rumors were untrue. But what if a rumor damaging to the national interest proved to be true? The commission's explicit purpose would dictate that the information be exposed regardless of the consequences, while the commission's implicit purpose would dictate that the rumor would be dispelled regardless of the fact that it was true. In a conflict of this sort, one of the commission's purposes would emerge as dominant."

He illustrates with the rumor brought early into the investigation that Oswald was an undercover agent for the FBI. The commission decided secretly to let the FBI "clear its own skirts" and at the same time to conduct an independent investigation of the charge.

"In the end . . ." writes Mr. Epstein, "the entire matter was turned over to the FBI, to affirm or deny, and the commission relied solely on the FBI's word.

"The surest and safest way to dispel the rumor was not to investigate it, but to keep secret the allegations and publish only the affidavits of denial. The commission's course of action in this case can thus be explained only in terms of the purpose of dispelling damaging rumors."

Again, the answer is a denial. "We did investigate this ourselves," a staff lawyer says, "from every possible angle. We found it untrue. We used to sit around at night and scare each other with questions like this, 'What would happen if we found out Oswald worked for the FBI?' But we never had to face that moral dilemma."

Mr. Epstein comes down hard on the crucial hypothesis that the same bullet that wounded but did not kill the President also caused Governor Connally's wounds. Motion-picture films establish incontrovertibly when Mr. Kennedy was hit and when it was impossible for either man to have been hit. These facts, coupled with the fact that a minimum 2.3 seconds was needed to operate the bolt on the rifle, establish that it is absolutely essential for both men to have been hit by the same shot if Oswald was the lone assassin.

Was the Governor Wrong?

This is a sticky matter. Governor and Mrs. Connally both say flatly that he was not hit by the same bullet; he says he heard the shot and started to turn around before being hit himself. The commission says he is wrong, that he had a delayed reaction to his wounds.

The commission maintains that the bullet passed through the President's neck and into the governor's body. But, as Mr. Epstein sees it, there is doubt about whether any passage was found through Mr. Kennedy's body; there is testimony from doctors at Dallas that the neck wound looked like an entrance, not an exit, wound; the President had bullet holes in his jacket and shirt more than five inches below the collar, which would indicate a back not a neck wound; the bullet was found nearly whole near Governor Connally's stretcher despite the amount of damage it had done. All these leads might indicate that at least one shot came from the front, perhaps from behind a fence next to the Depository, where many persons thought they heard shots.

The report says: "Although it is not necessary to any essential findings of the commission to determine just which shot hit Governor Connally, there is very persuasive evidence from the experts to indicate that the same bullet which pierced the President's throat also caused Governor Connally's wounds."

'To Say Otherwise . . .'

The first clause of that is indefensible. It is absolutely necessary to determine which shot hit the governor in order to reach this verdict, and to say otherwise is to blur the issue. And the phrase "very persuasive evidence" sounds unconvincing. (Some commission members wanted to say "compelling evidence" but they lost.) The commission's explanations, at least, are better than its conclusions.

The autopsy did disclose a passage; the doctors at Dallas were more interested in trying to save Mr. Kennedy's life than studying his wounds. As for the bullet holes, five inches down the jacket and shirt isn't as far down at it might seem. The jacket curves over the shoulder and can ride up with any normal movement. A bullet coming down from a building could have hit that spot, passed through the body, and emerged from the bottom of the neck. The bullet would have had to stay whole to do as much damage as it did. The sound of the shots confused people because of the echo effect of the nearby triple underpass.

There is evidence, made much of by Mr. Lane and Mr. Sauvage, that Oswald couldn't have fired the rifle as fast as necessary, 5.6 seconds elapsing between the two shots that hit, because experts who tried it had trouble matching his time and accuracy, and Oswald, according to Marine Corps records, wasn't such a great shot. But it is mathematically possible for him to have fired twice in 4.6 seconds. Also, since three shots were fired and one missed, if the miss was on the third shot (or the first, less likely), then he actually took more than 5 seconds between the ones that hit.

Another of the serious criticisms is that the commission relied so heavily on the testimony of two eye witnesses, Howard Brennan, who said he saw Oswald at the window, and Mrs. Helen Markham, who saw the shooting 45 minutes later of Officer J. D. Tippit, also said to have been murdered by Oswald. Both of their stories are full of holes, on the record; both changed their stories during the investigation.

"I personally would have rather relied more on the physical evidence, which was much stronger," concedes one staff lawyer. "But the commission decided otherwise."

Critics of the report say that testimony of witnesses the commission chose not to believe is discredited while those it did believe is built up. On the record, this appears to be so.

But, in defense, commission staffers contend that "the bare bones of the record" are not the whole story. "One of the foundations of the American judicial system is that a judge and jury are not only hearing what the witnesses have to say but studying their demeanor," says one. "That's why appellate courts get in trouble if they try to evaluate evidence from the record alone. We saw these witnesses, and questioned them. Some of them were simply more believable than others."

Both Mr. Lane and Mr. Sauvage argue that the commission seemingly directed almost all its attention to proving a case against Oswald, without searching for other involvements. For one illustration they cite a combination of unusual circumstances all of which allegedly occurred in the few weeks before the assassination. There was testimony, sometimes corroborated, to all of the following events.

First, a man who gave his name as Lee Oswald went to an auto agency, test-drove a car 60 m.p.h. on a freeway, said he soon would have "some money coming in," and said he might have to go to Russia to buy a car. Second, a man looking like Oswald turned up at a rifle range, mysteriously collected spent shell casings, and made himself noticeably unpleasant. Third, a man took a rifle into a repair shop to have a telescopic sight mounted, giving the name Oswald. Fourth, a man identified as Oswald visited a Cuban woman in Dallas to discuss anti-Castro activity.

The commission writes all these things off, quite plausibly, by showing how the witnesses could have been mistaken; for example, Oswald didn't know how to drive a car. Mr. Lane and Mr. Sauvage say, in effect: So what? Assume it wasn't Oswald. Wasn't it worth serious investigation to see if someone else was trying to make it seem to be him—a frame, in other words? There is no commission discussion on this point.

The commission answer is, simply, that many things like this were in fact investigated. "We didn't turn up any evidence of a conspiracy," says a lawyer. "This isn't the same as saying we proved there was no conspiracy, but we looked for and didn't find any."

Mr. Lane and Mr. Sauvage also contend that their argument is not weakened by the charge that they don't provide an alternate assassin. That isn't my problem, Mr. Lane says in effect. He argues that the case against Oswald is weak enough so that other solutions should have been investigated more thoroughly.

Finally, Mr. Sauvage makes the thoughtful point that although eminent commentators have criticized the commission, they invariably conclude the faults are not all that serious because Oswald was guilty. Why? he wants to know.

Referring to one professor's criticism, Mr. Sauvage says: "If I understand him correctly, he thinks that the commission's 'anomalous position' is dangerous in principle, but that no harm was done in fact this time because, happily, Oswald was guilty anyhow. How does [he] know this? Because the commission says so? . . . [How can] those Americans not blinded by adoration . . . explain how they manage to reconcile their devastating criticism with their final approbation?"

One rapid answer to that is that most critics of the report aren't nearly as "devastating" as Mr. Sauvage. But the answer, finally, must be the same one that has been given all along: The Warren Commission was composed of honorable men, who guided the work, and capable lawyers and investigators, who did the work, dedicated to finding the truth. There are holes in their account, owing, among other things, to the confusion of the event, the bungling of the Dallas police, and a series of stunning but plausible coincidences.

Under the circumstances, the report still rings true as a reasonable, careful solution. But the matter will never be resolved to the satisfaction of some people, and for many there will forever be a lingering doubt. —JERROLD K. FOOTLICK

Warren Report's Conclusions Challenged

By JOSEPH R. DAUGHEN
Bulletin Washington Bureau

Washington, Aug. 27—Mrs. John F. Kennedy, her pink wool suit stained with the blood of her slain husband, entered the National Naval Medical Center at Bethesda, Md., under the watchful eyes of Secret Service agents.

With crisp but solemn efficiency, she and her brother-in-law, Robert F. Kennedy, were escorted to a waiting elevator which lifted them to a private suite on the 17th floor.

IT WAS 7.35 P. M. (EST), Nov. 22, 1963. John F. Kennedy, 35th President of the United States, had been dead less than six hours.

Insulated from a shocked and grieving nation by solicitous officials, Mrs. Kennedy and the then attorney general joined other members of the Kennedy family who already had arrived at the private quarters. Together they waited while a team of physicians in an autopsy room examined the body of the late President.

It was an autopsy that Jacqueline Kennedy did not want. Robert Kennedy, too, objected.

THE AUTOPSY was scheduled, however, at the insistence of J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Hoover deemed it unthinkable that this fundamental procedure should be omitted in a case where such a monumental crime—the assassination of a President—had been committed.

The examination was started about

8 P. M. Cmdr. James J. Humes, senior pathologist at Bethesda Naval Hospital, acted as chief surgeon. He was assisted by Lt. Col. Pierre A. Finck, a wound ballistics specialist, and Cmdr. J. Thornton Boswell, the hospital's chief of pathology.

AS THE DOCTORS began the formidable task of trying to chart the course of the bullets that ended the President's life at 46, Lee Harvey Oswald was being questiond in a small room in Dallas Police Headquarters, 1,400 miles away.

The autopsy was completed about 11 P. M. and the President's body was prepared for burial. At 11.36 P.M. (CST), in Dallas, Oswald was removed from the interrogation chamber, formally charged with assassination, and taken to a brief press conference in the base-ment. There is no major difference of opinion over what happened in Dallas Police Headquarters that night. Oswald, a 24-year-old Marxist who had been cast out by the U. S. Marine Corps, simply denied the charges.

But the activity in the autopsy room, where antiseptic science is supposed to prevail, has come under withering criticism from those who continue to raise the disturbing questions:

Was Oswald alone?

Was there—is there—another assassin?

Almost three years after the shots that killed Mr. Kennedy were fired, the competence of the seven-member Warren Commission, which investigated the assassination, is being challenged.

The commission report, which identified Oswald as the lone gunman, is being called inaccurate and is said to have failed to establish its major premise, that Oswald did, in fact, act alone.

Two Authors Criticize Conclusions of Report

Much of the controversy has been generated by two recently published books which are highly critical of the Warren Commission's work. "Inquest," by Edward Jay Epstein, contends that the possibility of a second assassin has not been excluded and cites the commission's own evidence to support this contention.

"Rush to Judgment," by New York lawyer Mark Lane, is wider ranging and challenges the commission on a number of fronts. Lane, who was retained by Mrs. Marguerite Oswald, Oswald's mother, also draws extensively from commission material to weave a story fraught with overtones of plots and subplots.

Both books explore weaknesses in the commission's case which could indicate the presence of a second assassin. For the most part, the authors concentrate on raising doubts through the presentation of physical circumstances which they interpret as tending to prove that Oswald could not have been alone. Neither, however, presents any material which could lead to the conclussion that Oswald was without guilt.

Among the major matters at issue are the honesty of the autopsy report and the mysterious disappearance of X-rays and photographs taken of the President's body.

During the autopsy, a dozen X-rays and about 20 photographs, in color and black and white, were taken. Later, seven black and white and six color exposures of the brain were made.

The X-rays were developed and handed over, unseen by the physicians, to Secret Service Agent Roy H. Kellerman. The undeveloped first series of photographs was also turned over to Kellerman.

Kellerman says he subsequently gave them to Special-Agent-in-Charge Robert I. Bouck at the White House. The undeveloped photographs of the brain were delivered, by hand, directly to Rear Admiral George W. Burkley, the White House physician.

Pathologists Cite Value of Photos

The X-rays and photographs promptly dropped from sight, never to reappear, although their value in understanding the nature of the President's wounds was emphasized by Humes, Finck and Boswell. In their autopsy report, they stated:

"The complexity of these fractures (of the skull) and the fragments (of metal) thus produced tax satisfactory verbal description and are better appreciated in photographs and roentgenograms, which are prepared."

Despite this statement by the autopsy surgeons, they were never permitted to examine the X-rays and photographs. Despite strong protests from staff members of the Warren Commission, the X-rays and photographs were never produced or made available to the commission.

There is, in fact, no public record of where they are, who has them, or even whether they still exist.

So secretly has this evidence been handled that some members of the commission, appointed by President Johnson to ferret out all the facts of the assassination, have no idea as to its whereabouts.

The sole reason for withholding this material, announced by J. Lee Rankin, the commission's general counsel, was one of "taste."

"The Kennedys didn't want the photos shown," said a source close to the commission.

"They wanted the President remembered as a handsome, alert vigorous man, not as somebody with half his head shot away. That was not in keeping with the Kennedy image."

Robert Kennedy, this source said, relayed the family's feelings to Chief Justice Earl Warren, chairman of the commission. As he was to do several times during the investigation, Warren yielded to sensitivity and decreed that the material be withheld.

A commission source says the evidence was subsequently turned over to Robert Kennedy even though "this was government property."

In "Inquest," Epstein, a Harvard Ph. D. candidate, states that Francis W. H. Adams, who served briefly as senior staff counsel to the commission, told him the X-rays and photographs were given to Robert Kennedy. Epstein's book was begun as a master's thesis when he was at Cornell University.

Rep. Ford Is Astonished By Disappearance

The confusion over the X-rays and photographs can be gauged by the reaction of Rep. Gerald R. Ford (R-Mich), House minority leader and a member of the commission. When asked about them, Ford said:

"They're in the National Archives."

Informed they are not, Ford said:

"Are you sure they're not there? I don't know where else they'd be. I don't know. It's been two years. I don't remember."

Ford said he was not familiar with any meeting at which Robert Kennedy might have asked Warren to withhold the evidence.

Dr. James B. Rhoads, assistant archivist of the United States, said his agency never has had possession of the X-rays and photographs. There are more than 3,000 pieces of evidence catalogued in the archives, including more than 1,000 still being held by the FBI. There is no mention whatever of the missing material.

Kellerman later said he had seen one photograph of the President's skull. On another occasion in Dallas, a staff member who expressed concern over the absence of the evidence was shown by a Secret Service agent a photograph purportedly representing the upper back of the President. These are the only two known instances of any outside contact with the evidence.

The X-rays and photographs have now beome crucial, because of the light they could shed on the controversial autopsy report, in the dispute over whether Oswald acted alone.

They could tend to reinforce the commission's theory that a single bullet ripped through the President's back and neck and continued on to injure Texas Gov. John B. Connally, who was sitting directly in front of the President in an open limousine.

Or, they could indicate, as the commission's critics contend, that the locations of the President's wounds were such that it would have been impossible for a single bullet to have passed through his neck and entered Connally's body.

If the latter argument were to be sustained, it would all but rule out the commission's finding that Oswald was a lone assassin.

The shots came with murderous unerring accuracy at about 12.30 P. M. on that unforgettable Friday in Dallas. Just behind and to the right of the President's limousine was the Texas School Book Depository, where Oswald worked as an order filler. Just ahead and to the right was a grassy embankment. Directly ahead was a triple underpass, where three downtown streets converged on a freeway.

The President was sitting in the rear seat, which was raised about six inches for the parade. His wife was on his left. Connally was seated directly in front of the President, in a jump seat, and his wife was in front of Mrs. Kennedy.

The ugly sound of gunfire, perhaps magnified or distorted by the buildings surrounding Dealey Plaza, where the shooting occurred, sent a convulsion of confusion and panic through the crowd of spectators.

Some said they heard anywhere from two to six shots. Some said they saw puffs of smoke and heard shooting from the embankment. Some believed they observed suspicious activity on the top of the underpass. But others told police they saw a man with a rifle in a sixth-floor window of the Texas School Book Depository.

Among the spectators was Abraham Zapruder, armed with an 8-mm. home movie camera. The sequence captured on Zapruder's film was to provide firm evidence that the President and Connally were either hit by the same bullet or were shot by more than one sniper.

During the next unbelievable hour, Mr. Kennedy was pronounced dead, Dallas Patrolman J. D. Tippit was slain, and Oswald was arrested in a movie theater, accused of murdering Tippit and suspected of assassinating the President.

At Parkland Memorial Hospital, Dr. Malcolm Perry noted a wound in the lower front of the President's neck before he performed a tracheotomy, which obliterated the dimensions of the wound. Dr. Charles J. Carrico, who first treated the President, also observed the neck wound, as did some of the 12 physicians on hand.

They estimated that it was from four to eight millimeters in diameter. Most of them felt it had the characteristics of a bullet entrance wound, meaning that it would be at the point of original impact.

The phyiscians also observed a massive wound in the right rear part of the head.

Because the President was not turned over at the Dallas hospital, bullet holes in the back of his head and in the region of the "base of the back of the neck" were not discovered until the autopsy. Dr. Carrico felt the President's back but did not come upon any wound considered large enough to interfere with the emergency measures being taken on the front of the patient.

Connally suffered a wound slightly to the left of his right armpit, with the bullet apparently passing through his body and shearing off a portion of his fifth rib, exiting through his chest, and then continuing on to fracture his right wrist and eventually penetrate into his left thigh.

Wound Is Discovered In Back of Head

When the autopsy began in Bethesda that night, the surgeons discovered a small entrance wound in the back of the President's head. They also discovered the wound at the base of the back of the neck. The location of this was fixed at 14 centimeters, about 5½ inches, below the right mastoid process, the bony point behind the ear, and about the same distance in from the right shoulder joint.

When the autopsy surgeons came upon this wound, they were at first at a loss to explain it. Kellerman, who was present; told the commission that Dr. Finck said, "There are no lanes for an outlet of this entry in this man's shoulder."

Upon learning that a nearly whole bullet had been found in Parkland Hospital, the surgeons tentatively decided that it was the missile that had caused the back wound, but that it had fallen out when heart massage was started on the President.

After Dr. Humes spoke by telephone with Dr. Perry, the commission contends, this opinion was revised. The surgeons then decided, after learning there had been a wound in the front of the neck, that the bullet had passed through the President. Throughout the autopsy, Secret Service and FBI agents were present.

The autopsy report, although undated, was prepared that night, according to the commission. On Dec. 20, it was forwarded to the commission by the Secret Service.

However, on Dec. 9, the FBI issued a summary report which stated that the examination showed that " . . . one of the bullets had entered just below his shoulder to the right of the spinal column at an angle of 45 to 60 degrees downward, that there was no point of exit, and that the bullet was not in the body."

In a supplemental report on Jan. 13, 1964, the FBI again stated, directly contrary to the autopsy report, that "medical examination of the President's body had revealed that the bullet which entered his back had penetrated to a distance of less than a finger length."

If the FBI report were true, it would mean purely and simply that Oswald was not alone in the assassination.

Analysis of the Zapruder film disclosed that it moved at 18.3 frames per second. By numbering the frames, it was determined that the President had clearly been struck at frame No. 225, in which he starts to clutch his throat. In frame No. 235, Connally slumps forward and appears to have been hit. In frame No. 313, the impact of a bullet on the President's head is clearly defined.

Prior to frame No. 207, the line of fire from the sixth floor window of the Texas School Book Depository was obscured by a tree, establishing that the earliest the President could have been hit was at frame 207. The commission found, and Connally's doctors certified, that the Governor could not have been hit after frame No. 240.

Using the maximum amount of time available under these circumstances, it is clear that the President and Connally were both struck within 1.8 seconds.

Tests Are Conducted On Oswald's Rifle

The FBI conducted extensive tests on Oswald's 6.5-mm. Mannlicher - Carcano rifle, which was found near the sixth-floor window. FBI firearms expert Robert Frazier testified before the commission that the bolt-action rifle could not be fired twice in less than 2.3 seconds, not including time for sighting.

To sustain the theory of a lone assassin, then, it is axiomatic that a single bullet must have struck both the President and Connally, because it was physically impossible for one sniper to fire two shots in 1.8 seconds.

If the bullet that entered the President's back did not go through his body, as the FBI report states, then it could not have caused wounds in the front of the President's neck or entered Connally's back.

This was just one, albeit a major one, of the problems to be confronted when President Johnson established the commission on Nov. 29, 1963, seven days after the assassination.

Besides Warren and Ford, Mr. Johnson named as members Sens. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga) and John Sherman Cooper (R-Ky); House majority whip Hale Boggs (D-La); the former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, Allen W. Dulles, and John J. McCloy, former president of the World Bank and former U. S. high commissioner for Germany. All the members were lawyers.

Rankin was appointed chief counsel, and a staff of 14 assistant counsels was recruited. Among these were Arlen Specter, now district attorney of Philadelphia, and William T. Coleman, former Mayor Richardson Dilworth's law partner. Specter, assigned to investigate the basic facts of the assassination itself, developed the theory that the President and Connally were struck by a single bullet. If substantiated, this theory would permit the conclusion that Oswald, who was unquestionably guilty, was able to carry out the assassination alone.

The FBI conducted 25,000 interviews, 552 witnesses gave depositions and 94 of them testified before the commission. On Sept. 24, 1964, ten months after the assassination, the commission placed its stamp on Specter's theory, delivered its report to the White House, and dissolved itself.

It found that Oswald was indeed the assassin and that he had acted alone. For the most part, its findings were accepted without question.

The aftermath of the assassination, predictably, saw a flood of outrageous literature. Drafted by misguided crusaders or outright charlatans, ill-conceived books and pamphlets crowded the world's book stalls with dark tales of international and domestic conspiracies. Most of the nation viewed the Warren Report as accurate and ignored the self-appointed critics.

Epstein's Book Brings A Serious Restudy

It was not until the publication of Epstein's 154-page study of the commission's work that any large number of serious and responsible observers began re-examining its findings.

Written in spare, low-key language, replete with footnotes referring to interviews with commission and staff members, Epstein's book zeroes in on the weaknesses inherent in the commission's procedures and findings.

Epstein does not offer any evidence indicating there was, in fact, a second assassin. He does not suggest that Oswald may have been innocent. He does, however, point out many seeming inconsistencies in the findings and many administrative lapses and deficiencies.

Richard N. Goodwin, a former adviser to President Kennedy and now a fellow at the Center for Advanced Studies at Wesleyan University, found Epstein's arguments so compelling that he has called for an independent evaluation of the commission's findings.

However, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass), the late President's brother, has stated that he is perfectly satisfied with the commission's findings. It is not known whether Kennedy has read Epstein's book.

Mark Lane treats the commission much more harshly than does Epstein. He has written what amounts to the case for the defense of Oswald.

With skillful probing and adroit emphasis, Lane attempts to discredit the entire case against Oswald. He is, if anything, more effective than Epstein in areas where the commission findings are weak because of his unabashed advocacy.

Although Lane at times appears to be trying to put out a forest fire with a garden hose, both he and Epstein have raised serious questions in a number of sensitive areas, including the autospy report.

Both Epstein and Lane contend that, in the matter of the autopsy, either the FBI acted irresponsibly or the autopsy report was subsequently doctored to make the medical facts conform to the single-bullet theory. Both authors indicate they believe the FBI acted responsibly, clearly hinting that the autopsy report was tampered with.

Authors Point Out Some Peculiarities

They point to these circumstances:

—The face sheets of the autopsy report contain two drawings by Dr. Humes showing front and rear views of the President's body. In these drawings, it is clear that the back wound is much lower than the neck wound, indicating that a bullet fired from above and from the rear could not possibly have traveled the course described by the surgeons.

—Examination of the President's clothing showed a bullet hole in the back of the coat 5¾ inches below the top of the collar and a bullet hole in the back of the shirt 5¾ inches below the top of the collar. The presumed exit hole in the front was located at the collar button and a nick was found in the knot of the President's tie. This tends to prove, the authors state, that the bullet entered at far too low a point to have exited through the President's throat. They hint that FBI photographs of the coat and shirt showing the location of the holes were deliberately omitted from the Warren Commission Report to conceal these facts.

—At least four witnesses at the autopsy, representing the FBI and the Secret Service, described the back wound as a shoulder wound and placed it "about four inches down from the right shoulder" or "about six inches below the neckline."

—Besides the missing photographs and X-rays, Dr. Humes admitted destroying "preliminary draft notes" made at the autopsy.

"The fact that the autopsy surgeons were not able to find a path for the bullet is further evidence that the bullet did not pass completely through the President's body," Epstein states.

"If the FBI reports are accurate, as all the evidence indicates they are, then a central aspect of the autopsy was changed more than two months after the autopsy examination, and the autopsy report published in the Warren Report is not the original one."

Specter Discusses Reasons for Charges

In discussing these charges, Specter said the issue "rests squarely on the integrity of Humes, Boswell and Finck."

"We are talking about the integrity of the doctors and of the autopsy," said Specter. "There was nothing changed in the autopsy report. I firmly believe it is the original one."

Specter said he had "no foregone conclusion" about the case and "was not about to lend myself to anything improper."

"It's ridiculous," said Specter. "It's indirectly saying that Chief Justice Warren perjured himself when he signed the report to the President."

Specter said the original FBI report contained the mistaken information that the bullet had not passed through the President's body because "two guys from the Maryland field office" heard the surgeons comment on the apparent lack of an exit wound. They transmitted that information to their superiors, he said, before it was learned that there was an exit wound in the neck.

Specter's only explanation as to why the error was repeated in the FBI's Jan. 13, 1964, report was that the mistaken information simply had never been excised. He emphasized that Hoover later admitted his agency was wrong.

The locations of the holes in the clothing, said Specter, are explained by the fact that the President was waving at the crowds, causing his shirt and coat "to ride up" on his neck. He insisted that it was reasonable for the clothing to ride up high enough so that the bullet entered the base of the neck while the shirt and coat were punctured more than five inches below the top of the collar.

Specter said that he was one of those who argued for the inclusion of the X-rays and photographs taken at the autopsy. He said he felt "everything pertinent" should be made part of the record.

"You must remember, though, that the doctors testified before they knew the X-rays and photographs were going to be excluded," he said.

Specter refused to comment on the reasons for withholding the evidence or to speculate on its whereabouts.

A major argument against the single-bullet theory is based on testimony offered by Connally. In his appearance before the commission, Connally steadfast-

...maintained that the bullet that hit the President did not cause his own injuries.

"To say that they were hit by separate bullets is synonymous with saying that there were two assassins," Epstein quotes Norman Redlich as saying. Redlich, a law professor at New York University, served as Rankin's special assistant on the commission staff.

Connally Disputes Single-Bullet Theory

Connally told the commission he heard two shots, and believed he was struck by still another, which he did not hear. Mrs. Connally testified that she saw the President clutch at his throat after the first shot, then saw her husband hit by the second shot. If this is true, it would tend to confirm the presence of more than one assassin, since the Zapruder film fixed 1.8 seconds as the maximum time elapsed between the President's wound and Connally's wound, and FBI tests established that Oswald's rifle could not be fired twice—even without sighting—in less than 2.3 seconds.

"In your view, which bullet caused the injury to your chest, Governor Connally?" Specter asked, at a Commission hearing.

"The second one," was the answer.

"And what is your reason for that conclusion, sir?"

"Well, in my judgment, it just couldn't conceivably have been the first one because I heard the sound of the shot. In the first place, I don't know anything about the velocity of this particular bullet, but any rifle has a velocity that exceeds the speed of sound and when I heard the sound of that first shot, that bullet had already reached where I was, or it had reached that far, and after I heard that shot, I had the time to turn to my right and start to turn to my left before I felt anything.

"It is not conceivable to me that I could have been hit by the first bullet, and then I felt the blow from something which was obviously a bullet, which I assumed was a bullet, and I never heard the second shot, didn't hear it. I didn't hear but two shots. I think I heard the first shot and the third shot."

Connally also said the rapidity of the gunfire made him think "that there were either two or three people involved or more in this or someone was shooting with an automatic rifle."

As to the direction of the shots, an issue Lane makes much of, Connally said there was "no question about it," that they came from the direction of the Texas School Book Depository.

Connally's testimony placed the commission in a predicament. To sustain the single-bullet theory, the commission would have to find that Connally was mistaken in his belief that he was struck by a separate bullet, it would have to ignore Mrs. Connally's testimony, and it would have to find that Connally actually was unaware of when he was hit.

Senator Russell, a commission source said, balked at the theory. He told the other members that Connally was entitled to be believed and hinted that he could not sign a report picturing his friend and sometime political ally as a man who did not even know when he had been shot.

Ford, on the other hand, accepted the hypothesis. He said he urged the commission to find that "compelling evidence" led to the conclusion that the President and Connally were struck by the same bullet. The commission eventually compromised, saying the evidence was "persuasive."

Throughout its report, the commission repeatedly says "probably" when referring to the single-bullet thesis. Nevertheless, for practical purposes, it rejected Connally's testimony.

"The physical evidence appears to have rebutted the commission's basic working hypothesis—that Oswald was the lone assassin," Lane contends. "The commission sought for, and eventually realized, a new solution, but it was able to do so only by departing from the facts."

"Connally's testimony flies directly in the face of the report," Specter admitted. "But he was most probably incorrect. The commission concluded he was wrong."

'The Magic Bullet' Is Found on Stretcher

A closely related problem concerns what Lane has christened "the magic bullet." Some time after the assassination, Darrell C. Tomlinson, senior engineer at Parkland Hospital, saw two stretchers, one on an elevator, the other next to a wall. He moved the stretcher off the elevator, then bumped the other stretcher. Commission exhibit No. 399, a nearly whole 6.5-mm. bullet, rolled out.

Although Tomlinson was unsure as to where the bullet came from, the commission concluded that it came from the stretcher used to carry Connally into the hospital. It also concluded that this was the bullet that had passed through the President's neck, Connally's body, right wrist and left thigh.

The near-perfect condition of the missile, however, forced many commission witnesses to dispute this finding, and Epstein and Lane dwell at length on the problem.

A new bullet of the type the commission concluded had hit the President and Connally weighs 160 to 161 grains. Exhibit 399 weighed 158.6 grains, indicating it had lost a maximum of 2.4 grains in wreaking its damage.

Dr. Robert Roeder Shaw, who treated Connally in Dallas, said it was "difficult to believe" Exhibit No. 399 was the source of all of Connally's wounds because there seemed to be "more than three grains of metal" in the Governor's wrist. An additional fragment of metal, which was not weighed, was left in Connally's thigh.

"I feel there would be some difficulty in explaining all of the wounds as being inflicted by bullet 399 without causing more in the way of loss of substance to the bullet or deformation of the bullet," Dr. Shaw said.

In FBI test-firings of similar bullets through cadaver wrists, every slug emerged flattened and deformed, whereas Exhibit 399 was almost perfect.

Specter asked Dr. Charles Gregory, who also treated Connally, whether the recovered bullet could have passed through the President's neck and still wounded the Governor.

"I believe one would have to concede the possibility, but I believe firmly that the probability is much diminished," said Dr. Gregory.

"The doctors are not able to provide conclusive answers to this," said Specter. "They are able to advance their opinion as to what happened, but their testimony, as a whole, aside from their opinion, is consistent with the bullet having gone through Connally's chest, wrist and thigh."

Specter said the fragments of metal in Connally's body were of "postage-stamp weight." He also said that, once the missile had exited from Connally's chest, it probably tumbled in flight, perhaps entering the wrist broadside, and therefore was not significantly deformed.

"It is a possibility, unusual but a possibility," Specter said. "When it all boils down, the doctors doubt it."

Oswald's Proficiency Is Subject of Debate

The question of Oswald's proficiency with a rifle has also become a matter for debate. Using the Zapruder film as a base of reference, the FBI concluded Oswald was firing at a moving target some 180 feet away. From the first to the last hit, it was found that 5.6 seconds had elapsed. During this time, Oswald was found to have fired three shots.

Using Oswald's rifle, with its scope mounted, three FBI experts fired three rounds each at a stationary target about 45 feet away. All the shots were high and to the right and the firing time required for the three men was nine, eight and six seconds, respectively.

Later, three experts who hold the highest rating from the National Rifle Association conducted tests, firing at stationary targets but from approximately the same distance as Oswald was said to have fired from. Only one matched the 5.6 second limitation, and none was on target more than twice.

Oswald's record as a rifleman in the Marine Corps showed that, in a scale from low to high of marksman-sharpshooter-expert, he scored two points over the minimum for sharpshooter in December 1956, but slumped to one over the minimum for marksman in May, 1959. Two Marine firearms experts, however, testified that the shots from the sixth-floor window were "very easy" and "an easy shot."

"The manner in which testimony was developed indicates that premeditation was involved in the selection process," Epstein states. He claims that the Marine experts were not called until July 24, 1964, more than a month after that phase of the investigation was closed, for the express purpose of calling the shots "easy."

Although puzzling, the question of Oswald's marksmanship appears to be a futile exercise. The President was shot and killed, Connally was wounded, ballistics tests established that Exhibit 399 and bullet fragments in the car came from Oswald's rifle, the rifle was found near the sixth floor window, along with three empty cartridges, and Oswald's palm print was found on the rifle.

Both Lane and Epstein argue that the great number of witnesses who claimed to have heard shots coming from the grassy embankment were largely ignored. A second assassin, they seem to be saying, could have been hidden there.

While there may be disagreement over the direction of the shots, it is undisputed that police attention was centered on the Texas School Book Depository within minutes of the shooting. Before the lead car of the motorcade had reached the triple underpass, Dallas Police Chief Jesse Curry had given orders to "surround the building."

Furthermore, the evidence is unquestionably strong that the shots did come from above and behind the President's car.

Both the President and Connally suffered wounds that clearly were inflicted from behind. The inside of the windshield contained a residue of lead and was cracked from the inside, indicating a bullet from the rear. A chrome strip above the visor in the driver's side was dented, although the source of the dent was never identified.

Concealed Evidence Is Hinted by Lane

Where Epstein has carefully chosen several major issues to develop, Lane has attempted to discredit the entire case against Oswald by hinting at a sordid concealment of evidence by the commission. In many instances, he and Hugh Trevor-Roper, the Oxford historian who wrote the introduction to his book, try to exploit seemingly frivolous hypotheses.

Discussing a paraffin test given to Oswald, the commission said a positive response was recorded from Oswald's hands, while his cheek produced a negative response. Paraffin tests have been regarded as indicating whether the subject has recently fired a weapon. The commission disregarded whatever could be deduced from the positive response of Oswald's hands, stating the test "is completely unreliable."

Lane, however, arrives at the rather startling conclusion that "a positive response on both hands and a negative response on the face is consistent with innocence."

Trevor-Roper, who has made an avocation of pursuing conspiracy theories about the assassination, asks the rhetorical question:

" . . . how was it that, in all Dallas, the police, in the person of Patrolman Tippit, contrived, almost at once, to pounce on one man and one man only, and that man, according to their subsequent insistence, the real murderer?"

Either Trevor-Roper has never seen a police department function when a major crime has been committed, where suspicious persons for blocks around are routinely stopped, or he has lost his perspective on the matter. Dallas police undoubtedly stopped hundreds of persons that Friday to ask questions. But only one of them murdered Tippit, and the weight of the evidence points to Oswald as the murderer.

Lane continually refers to the commission as "biased" and comes very near an outright accusation that it suborned perjury.

of Dallas; they were questioned by commission counsel who called them 'boys.' It is not unreasonable to conclude that many forces combined to impose on their testimony a uniform fidelity to the official point of view."

The composition of the panel would seem to be proof against this type of charge leveled by Lane. Headed by Chief Justice Warren, who only reluctantly agreed to serve, the commissioners are men of unquestioned integrity. Warren, however, may be found to have been right in originally refusing to serve. The case of Jack Ruby, convicted of murdering Oswald on Nov. 24, 1963, could travel to the Supreme Court for review, and Warren might have to disqualify himself.

While the stature of the commissioners seems to provide against fraud, Epstein contends that, because they were such important men, the investigation suffered. He found that the average attendance at hearings of the commission was 45 percent. Dulles scored the highest, with 71 percent, while Russell was low, with only six percent. The business obligations of the senior staff counsel members also prevented them from fully participating, Epstein states, which threw the heaviest workload on the junior staff counsel.

Since the investigation was broken down into five distinct areas, Epstein says evidence tended to be overlooked if one team uncovered it and found that it didn't pertain to their area of investigation. This happened, he claims, with the statement of Mrs. Eric Walther, who told the FBI she saw two gunmen in the School Book Depository. Her statement was never called to the attention of the commission and she was never interrogated by the staff.

Another Epstein contention is that the commission, either consciously or subconsciously, was preoccupied with protecting the nation against rumors of conspiracies and intricate plots at least as much as it was interested in uncovering the circumstances of the assassination. This he describes as a search for "political truth."

Informer Rumor Cited by Epstein

As an example, Epstein points to an early rumor that Oswald was an undercover agent for the FBI, receiving informer's fees of $200 a month and was assigned informant's No. S-179. In Oswald's address book was the name and license plate number of FBI agent James Hosty. Although the information in Oswald's address book was recorded in an FBI report, the reference to Hosty was deleted. The FBI explained the deletion by saying that it knew why Hosty's name appeared in the document.

Epstein charges that the commission never investigated the rumor and followed Rankin's advice that the "dirty rumor" must "be wiped out."

"The surest and safest way to dispel the rumor was not to investigate it, but to keep secret the allegations and publish only the affidavits of denial," Epstein states.

Although it is true that there are parts of the commission's case against the presence of a second assassin that are seemingly inconsistent, and there is evidence of possible selection of evidence to reinforce that case, there is also a wealth of material linking Oswald firmly to the assassination. This includes:

—A direct chain of evidence between Oswald and the Mannlicher-Carcano rifle found on the sixth floor. Handwriting analysis disclosed that Oswald, using an alias, purchased the weapon from a Chicago mail order house.

—Positive ballistics tests showing two bullet fragments found in the President's car and Exhibit 399 were fired from Oswald's rifle to the exclusion of all other weapons. The fragments apparently came from the bullet that struck the President's head.

—Oswald's palm print on the rifle and his presence near the sixth-floor window moments before the murder.

—Oswald's unexplained flight from his place of employment at midday. Flight from the scene of a crime has long been recognized as an indication of the presence of a consciousness of guilt, and, as such, has been regularly accepted as evidence by the courts.

"I don't think the commission ever said everything perfectly pointed to a closed case," Ford said. "There were some areas where judgment had to be exercised.

"We didn't say then or in the future there will be no evidence (that the commission had not uncovered), but there is no evidence today. There are theories, yes, but no new evidence.

"But the commission's conclusions are valid; we examined all the theories and could find nothing to substantiate them, because they just didn't hold water."

'Distortions' Cited In Epstein's Book

David Belin, a staff attorney who was assigned to work on the identity of the assassin, said Epstein's book is loaded with "distortions" and "artificial scholarship" held together by "fabrication."

As an example of Epstein's alleged inaccuracy, Belin points out that the author described him and Joseph Ball, the senior counsel with whom he worked, as "experienced criminal trial lawyers."

"Actually, I have been involved in only one criminal jury trial—and that was to defend a client who was charged with operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated," said Belin. He did not say how many non-jury criminal trials he has been connected with.

"There was no avenue of investigation which we overlooked," said Specter. "There simply was no evidence of a second assassin.

"We looked to see if there was any evidence of a conspirator who fired from the knoll or the overpass and we found no such evidence.

"There were thousands of leads from all over the country about a second assassin, a tremendous number of leads, and we ran them down. There has been criticism that we believed, the commission believed, Oswald was guilty and that precluded the investigation of others. That was just not true. Oswald at a minimum was the number one suspect and we certainly examined every part of his life, his defection to Russia, his return, everything. But we looked and looked for an accomplice and we could find not one single, solitary shred of credible evidence that there was one."

There is no credible evidence of a second assassin. There are curious contradictions that challenge the absence of a second assassin.

Unexplained and seemingly inexplicable circumstances shroud the assassination.

The disappearance of the X-rays and photographs, the dispute over the autopsy report, conflicting eyewitness testimony over the number of shots fired and their direction, the strangely intact condition of Exhibit 399 and the uncanny marksmanship attributed to Oswald all cause doubts.

Discreet Questioning Causes Concern

Warren's extremely discreet questioning of Mrs. Kennedy, in private and with some of her testimony classified, and his almost equally gingerly handling of Oswald's wife, Marina, cause concern about the thoroughness of some aspects of the investigation.

When it became apparent that Marina was telling conflicting stories almost every time she appeared before the commission, Philadelphia lawyer Coleman and special assistant Redlich insisted that she be cross-examined. When Rankin refused to permit this, Coleman threatened to resign and Redlich said Marina had "lied repeatedly" on matters of "vital importance.

Tales have also filtered out about serious disagreements between staff members, one of whom has been quoted as saying the members of the commission had "nothing" to do with the probe.

And, while the commission has denied that there was pressure exerted to have its report completed before the 1964 Presidential elections, one commission source said that pressure was indeed exerted, and that the pressure came from the White House.

Added to these curious factors is the insatiable curiosity attaching to such an extraordinary event as the assassination of a chief of state. Under such conditions, unanswered questions, inconsistencies, weaknesses and theories can be woven into a legend to parallel the official version of what actually happened, and the legend can survive as long as interest in the event survives.

What remains is the knowledge that a President is dead, as is the man who almost certainly was his assassin. Both died violently under somewhat pecullar circumstances. But the body charged with determining facts, the Warren Commission, after accumulating almost 17,000 pages of testimony, concluded that each was a victim of individual derangement.

For many, if not most, that explanation will be sufficient. For others, who have been asking themselves "Why?" since Nov. 22, 1963, there is now perhaps still another disquieting question.

Third book questions Warren body's report

NEW YORK (UPI) — The third book in recent months questioning conclusions of the Warren Commission in its inquiry into the assassination of President Kennedy will be published Monday.

"Rush to Judgment," by Mark Lande, a New York City lawyer, published by Holt, Rinehart & Winston, is presented as "a critique of the Warren Commission's inquiry into the murders of President John F. Kennedy, Officer J. D. Tippit, and Lee Harvey Oswald."

It is an exhaustive presentation of attorney Lane's case that in the Warren Report, the "evidence against him (accused assassin Oswald) was magnified, while the evidence in his favor was depreciated, misrepresented or ignored."

Lane wrote an article saying that the Dallas district attorney's evidence, as published, contained "inexplicable contradictions." In late 1963, he got a call from Marguerite Oswald, mother of the dead suspect, saying she had read the article and asking him to represent her son before the commission.

"I accepted. Thus began an investigation that has continued for more than two and one-half years," Lane said.

After studying the Warren Report, going to Dallas seven times, interviewing witnesses extensively, Lane concludes:

"The force of the evidence is inescapable—the case against Oswald as the lone assassin is refuted by the very witnesses upon whom the commission relied."

Lane also asserted that "the FBI report devastates the commission's conclusions that all of the shots were fired from the rear and that they were fired by a lone assassin."

Did Oswald Do It?

Some New Books Raise Further Questions About the Warren Commission's Verdict

By NORMAND POIRIER

"THERE IS NOT one shred of evidence, not a single hard fact, in the 26 volumes of the record or in the additional material at the Archives, that demonstrates there was more than one assassin. But there will always be loose ends. You could review that record and prove Joe Stalin did it if you wanted to. Nothing will ever kill the morbid curiosity."—A Warren Commission Staff Member.

THAT MONUMENTAL WORK—THE WARREN Commission Report—never did allay all the doubts in the minds of many Americans about what happened in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963. At the peak of its soothing effect on the nation, several months after it was released in the fall of 1964, a survey showed that 31 per cent of the citizenry believed that Lee Harvey Oswald had one or more accomplices.

That percentage is undoubtedly higher now with the recent publication of three books attacking the 888-page report of the seven-man Presidential commission: "Rush to Judgement" by Mark Lane, "Inquest" by Edward Jay Epstein, and "Whitewash" by Harold Weisberg.

All three authors found most of their ammunition in the 26 volumes of hearings and exhibits compiled by the commission from interviews with 552 witnesses, some 25,000 FBI interviews, 1,550 Secret Service interviews, and tons of documents in the National Archives.

All three challenge the commission's conclusion that Oswald and Oswald alone killed President Kennedy. They all charge that the commission was handed the single-assassin theory by the FBI early in the investigation and then proceeded to sift testimony and even alter evidence to fit that conclusion. Commission members and staff lawyers, of course, have flatly denied the accusations.

Most susceptible to attack, perhaps—and essential to the Commission's single-assassin case—is the hypothesis that a single slug tore through the President at a downward angle and ripped through Texas Governor John Connally's chest, wrist and thigh.

From a movie film shot by an amateur photographer, it was firmly established that Connally was hit between a half second and 1.8 seconds after Kennedy was first wounded. Tests also established that a minimum of 2.3 seconds were required to work the bolt on Oswald's rifle.

If the same bullet didn't wound both men, then someone other than Oswald would have had to fire a second shot.

THE COMMISSION WAS SATISFIED THAT ALL evidence supported its single-bullet theory; the trajectory was right, Connally was sitting in such a place relative to the President and in such a manner that the bullet would have wounded him exactly as it did.

But the three authors jumped on the commission's finding. For one thing, there was the testimony of both the Governor and his wife.

"Connally testified that it was inconceivable to him that he was hit by the first shot because he distinctly remembered the first shot before he had felt the impact of the bullet striking," Epstein wrote. "Since a bullet travels faster than the speed of sound, Connally reasoned that he could have been hit only by the second bullet. The evidence clearly indicated that Kennedy had been hit by the first bullet."

Mrs. Connally, seated next to her husband in the jump seat of the President's car, also testified that after the first shot she saw "the President and he had both hands at his neck" and seconds later "there was the second shot that hit" her husband.

The Commission resolved the problem by suggesting that Connally didn't realize he had been hit until a second or so after the slug struck him.

This single bullet was recovered later at Parkland hospital and Epstein makes much of the circumstance. The slug was found on a stretcher—Connally's or Kennedy's. The man who found it, hospital engineer Darrell Tomlinson, said he was not positively sure" from which stretcher it had dropped. He said he thought it had not come from the Connally stretcher.

Epstein, along with Lane and Weisberg, points out that if the slug had come from the Kennedy stretcher it could not have passed through his body and struck Connally. The commission settled the issue by saying:

"Although Tomlinson was not certain whether the bullet came from the Connally stretcher or the adjacent one, the commission has concluded that the bullet came from the Governor's stretcher."

That conclusion was buttressed, the commission said, by the fact that Kennedy was never removed from his stretcher until his body was placed in a casket, and that after he was removed the linen was taken off and placed in a hamper and the stretcher pushed into a room in a "completely different location from the site where the nearly whole bullet was found."

THE CONDITION OF THE BULLET, WHICH ballistics experts testified was fired from Oswald's Mannlicher-Carcano rifle, furnished the three critics with still more material for argument. It was nearly whole, its nose barely flattened, and its body marked only by riflings.

Tests were run—similar bullets were fired through gelatin blocks, a goat carcass, and the wrist of a human cadaver—and the commission was satisfied by the results.

Lane charges that the tests were not convincing. He points out that the same test bullets were never fired through all three substances at the same time. Even so, he said, "each bullet suffered distortion in the process."

Lane also brings out that expert testimony indicates the presence of "more than three grains of metal in (Connally's) wrist wound alone. Yet the missile weathered its traumatic trajectory to emerge only 1.4 to 2.4 grains lighter than the normal weight of a bullet of that type before firing. In short, it apparently left metal that it never possessed in the Governor's wrist, to say nothing of the fragments lost in the other collisions."

The commission concluded that probably three shots were fired—"though some heard only two shots, while others testified that they heard four and perhaps as many as five or six shots"—and that one hit Kennedy in the neck and exited the lower part of his throat and that a later shot entered the back of his head and tore off the upper right portion of his skull.

(The slug recovered at the hospital, the Commission theorized, was the one that passed through the President's neck.)

THE PRESIDENT'S WOUNDS ARE ANOTHER source of controversy for the writers. They report at length on how doctors at Parkland hospital described the wound in Kennedy's throat as an "entrance wound," a small, neat hole indicating he had been shot from the front, further proof that Oswald was not alone in the assassination.

But Lane, who makes much of this testimony, doesn't mention that doctors at Dallas had no occasion to turn Kennedy over and didn't notice the "entrance" wound in his back.

Even greater confusion developed when Kennedy's body was examined by the three doctors at Bethesda Naval Hospital who performed the autopsy.

The official autopsy was delivered to the commission in March, 1964, and said that one bullet passed through the President's neck.

Epstein came across two unpublished FBI reports in the National Archives dated Dec. 9 and Jan. 13—before the official autopsy report was received by the commission—that contradict the report.

The FBI documents state that the slug which entered Kennedy's body traveled about a finger-length and did not exit.

"If the FBI's statements on the autopsy are accurate," he wrote, "then the autopsy findings must have been changed after Jan. 13. This would mean that the document in the Warren report which purports to be the original autopsy report is not."

Epstein suggests that the report was altered to conform with the single-bullet, single-assassin theory adopted by the commission.

"If this is in fact the case the significance of this alteration of facts goes far beyond merely indicating that it was not physically possible for a lone assassin to have accomplished the assassination. It indicates that the conclusions of the Warren Report must be viewed as expressions of political truth."

Lane makes the same point. "Either the original autopsy report, after having been examined by the FBI and used as a basis for that agency's summary of its investigation, was withdrawn and then modified, or the FBI acted in an irresponsible manner."

THE CONSPIRATORIAL ATMOSPHERE SUR-rounding the two FBI reports was cleared up recently, however, by the three doctors who performed the autopsy and signed the report and by the FBI itself.

Apparently the FBI never saw the autopsy report. Navy Commander J. Thorton Boswell, one of the three doctors who performed the autopsy, told Fletcher Knebel of Look magazine: "Our autopsy report went downtown to Admiral Burkley (the President's physician) at the White House on Nov. 25th after the three of us had signed it on Nov. 24th. It appeared in the Warren Commission report exactly as it was written Nov. 24th and it was never changed or altered in any way."

The report went from the White House to the Secret Service—not to the FBI—and from the Secret Service to the commission.

Two FBI agents were present at Bethesda when the three doctors performed the autopsy. They heard the doctors express puzzlement that the bullet which had entered the President's back had not exited. They also heard the doctors discuss how the bullet's path could be probed only about a "finger-length."

The agents departed and made out their reports. Next day, the Bethesda doctors telephoned doctors at Parkland in Dallas and were told about the small wound in Kennedy's throat visible before the Dallas doctors performed a tracheotomy in a desperate effort to save Kennedy.

The Bethesda doctors then revised their description of the bullet's path. The FBI, apparently, was never told about the revision.

Warren Report Critic Accused of Deception

Warren Commission critic Edward Jay Epstein is "guilty of the very sins" of distortion and deception that he placed against the Commission itself, according to an article in Look Magazine out today.

"At worst, Epstein has written a dangerously deceptive book" about the investigation of the Kennedy assassination, Look correspondent Fletcher Knebel said.

"At the best," said Knebel, "he is guilty of precisely what he lays at the door of the Warren Commission—a superficial investigation."

Epstein charged that the Commission, partly out of a desire to meet deadlines and terminate rumors, failed to explore full evidence that indicated Lee Harvey Oswald may have had an accomplice.

The book, written originally as a master's thesis at Cornell, began as a case study of special commissions as methods of solving national problems.

Among its disclosures were hitherto unpublished FBI reports at variance with the official autopsy report.

Knebel said that Epstein, by using the techniques available to any police reporter, could have discovered that the early FBI report, which supported the two-assassin theory, had been proven erroneous through investigation.

According to Knebel, Epstein deserves credit for disclosing internal disputes in the Commission that lay behind the final report and the mistake in naming busy men of national renown to do work that required constant attention by the commissioners themselves.

Epstein, now studying for a doctorate at Harvard, said yesterday Knebel had made some valid criticisms, but the book never was intended as a complete account of the assassination itself. He said Knebel and other reporters were in a better position than he to get fuller statements from the FBI and other sources.

New Study Suggested in JFK Death

NEW YORK, July 23 (UPI) Richard N. Goodwin, a former assistant special counsel to President Kennedy, suggested today that an independent group should determine whether the Warren Commission investigation of the President's assassination was inadequate and defective.

Goodwin made the suggestion in a review of a book by Edward Jay Epstein entitled "Inquest: The Warren Commission and the Establishment of Truth."

The Epstein book, Goodwin emphasized, "Does not show that anyone besides Lee Harvey Oswald was even remotely involved in the assassination. Therefore it does not prove that the basic conclusion of the Commission was wrong . . .

"The concern of this book is with the adequacy of the investigation," Goodwin wrote, which Epstein characterized as "extremely superficial." Goodwin said that an investigation by an independent group might be the solution "if we want to be sure that we know as much as we can know about what happened on Nov. 22, 1963."

Second Assassin?

By LARRY HOWELL
Editorial Staff Writer

"WHEN I FIRST read Mr. (Richard Jay) Epstein's book it was with the hope that I would find it greatly flawed and could advise that it was not a work to be taken seriously." Instead, Richard H. Rovere, Washington correspondent for The New Yorker magazine wound up writing the foreword of "Inquest" (New York: Viking Press. $5), to be released late this month.

HOWELL

"But," Rovere continues, "I found it from start to finish responsible, sober . . . and compelling. It is a public service . . ."

Its service is to reveal gaping holes in the Warren Commission Report on the assassination of President Kennedy. Epstein, heavily footnoted, sets about to prove that the Warren Commission did not prove Lee Harvey Oswald to be the only man who could have fired shots at the assassination site.

Epstein doesn't say Oswald had an accomplice. He merely says the commission doesn't prove that Oswald did not have one.

THREE SHOTS were fired shortly after noon on Nov. 22, 1963, the Warren Commission states. One struck President Kennedy in the back of the neck and another in the head. A third ricocheted off the curb and wounded a spectator. Gov. John Connally was wounded, the report says, by a bullet that passed through the President's body.

Epstein says the evidence proves no such thing. He bases his conclusion on the fact that an FBI autopsy report and the one included in the Warren Report are diametrically opposed.

The FBI's report states that the first bullet hit President Kennedy "just below the shoulder." It penetrated "less than a finger length," and "there was no point of exit." On the basis of this report then, the bullet could not have struck Gov. Connally.

The governor himself believes he was wounded by the second shot, although this is the one that shattered the President's skull.

Movie films show that the two men were wounded in a period of ½ second to 2 seconds. It is humanly impossible to fire, reload, aim and fire a bolt-action rifle like Oswald's within that time period and shoot with any degree of accuracy, according to competent specialists.

The Warren Report's contention that the first shot passed through the President's neck and then into Connally is also at odds with the fact that Kennedy said, "I've been hit." If the bullet passed through his trachea, he could not have spoken.

"ALTHOUGH the evidence identified Oswald as one assassin, it did not rule out the possibility of a second assassin," Epstein writes. "One bullet, which possibly was the fatal bullet, was too fragmented to be matched to Oswald's rifle by means of ballistics. Thus the possiblity of a second rifle existed.

"One identifiable but unidentified palm print was found on the 'sniper's nest,' and thus the possibility of an accomplice remained open. The fact that Oswald was able to escape from the murder scene suggested that a second assassin could also have escaped undetected."

Epstein also refers to eyewitnesses who were not called, statements by witnesses who said one thing at first and then changed their testimony when called before the commission.

But the vortex of Epstein's theory is discrediting the "single-shot theory" of Gov. Connally's being struck by a bullet that first hit President Kennedy.

The commission itself termed this point absolutely essential. "To say that they were hit by separate bullets is synonymous with saying that there were two assassins," Norman Redlich of the commission staff said to Epstein.

Remember that Epstein does not say this. He merely says the report fails to prove the contrary.

EPSTEIN BEGAN the book as a master's thesis at Cornell. He had no ax to grind. He embarked on it to study the Warren Commission as an agency of the government unprecedented except for the Roberts Commission that wrote a report on Pearl Harbor.

The farther he delved into the commission's report, however, the more inconsistencies and contradictions he encountered. He takes no individual of the commission to task, but does take serious issue with the limits, time and otherwise, placed on both the investigation and the investigators of President Kennedy's slaying.

Epstein's isn't the first report on the Warren Report, nor will it be the last. But it is said to be the best of the post-report reports to date.

The commission "ascertained the truth," in its own words. But there will forever be unanswered questions about the events of Nov. 22, 1963, because of the way the Warren Commission went about ascertaining the truth.

But the burning question Epstein raises is, if the Warren Commission built its report largely on information from the FBI, why don't its conclusions agree with the FBI's?

A STUDY OF X-RAYS OF KENNEDY IS URGED

A proposal that X-rays and photographs of President Kennedy's body be examined by a committee of scholars and doctors was made public yesterday as a way to support the Warren Commission's findings that Lee Harvey Oswald alone killed the President.

The proposal in the current issue of The Nation was made by Jacob Cohen, who is described as completing a book to defend the conclusion made by the commission headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren. Mr. Cohen, 32-year-old freelance writer, of Montclair, N. J., formerly was on the history faculties of Yale and Brandeis Universities.

Mr. Cohen wrote that 25 to 32 X-rays and at least 15 to 20 photographs had been taken. He argued these could show whether a wound in the President's back had been high enough to sustain the theory of a single bullet wounding both the President and Gov. John B. Connally Jr. of Texas.

They could also, he contended, refute suggestions that the President might have been shot from the front or side—a theory requiring a second assassin.

It was unclear, he wrote, whether the Warren Commission "ever requested and received the X-rays." He reported several commission lawyers had told him the photographs and possibly X-rays had been withheld from publication at Senator Robert F. Kennedy's request.

This might have been "for reasons of taste," Mr. Cohen wrote.

Arlen Specter, who was a key commission lawyer and is now District Attorney of Philadelphia, said yesterday he personally had not seen the photographs or X-rays, but "the commission decided it was not necessary to review them." Mr. Specter had examined Commander James J. Humes, autopsy surgeon, who testified he did not believe the X-rays would "materially assist" the commission.

Reports on the Report

INQUEST. The Warren Commission and the Establishment of Truth. By Edward Jay Epstein. With an Introduction by Richard H. Rovere. 224 pp. New York: The Viking Press. $5.00.

WHITEWASH: The Report on the Warren Report. By Harold Weisberg. Illustrated. 208 pp. Hyattstown, Md.: Harold Weisberg. Paper, $4.95.

By FRED GRAHAM

CRITICS of the Warren Commission's report on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy would do well to bear in mind the bard who wrote: "As you go on through life, brother, /Whatever be your goal— /Keep your eye upon the donut/And not upon the hole." For it obscures the truth to search for holes in the Warren Report without viewing it against the background of the Commission's peculiar nature and the possible alternatives to the conclusions it reached.

If President Kennedy had been killed by a disease, it would have been natural to call in the medical profession to clear up any mystery about its nature. Since he died by assassination, which is a crime, lawyers were called upon to arrive at the truth of the case.

But the parallel is not exact. Doctors are trained to discover medical truth, while lawyers are trained in expounding a point of view. (The best ones can believe passionately in every client's case, including the cases of great rascals.) Their truth-finding genius is not individual, it is institutional—the adversary system—and the record of Congressional investigating committees has long since established that the mere presence of skilled lawyers and legal trappings does not produce truth.

Yet when President Lyndon B. Johnson was faced with the need to expose the truth and settle doubts about the assassination, and with no precedents to guide him, he turned instinctively to lawyers and the law. He appointed the nation's most distinguished jurist, Chief Justice Earl Warren, to direct a commission of six leading citizens—all lawyers. In turn, the Commission retained J. Lee Rankin, a former U.S. Solicitor General, and a staff of 22 lawyers, nicely balanced between a few leading private attorneys (to give the staff prestige) and a number of top-ranked recent law graduates (to do most of the work).

They naturally adopted a forensic method. The witnesses and physical evidence were marshaled so that the story would unfold in a trial-like manner, with witnesses responding to questions and submitting exhibits for the record. Testimony was taken either in deposition form by the staff or before the Commission members themselves somewhat as in a courtroom. The result was a verbatim record of 522 witnesses' testimony (94 of these witnesses testified before the Commission), which filled 26 volumes when published and read reassuringly like a trial transcript. Basing their findings on this evidence, the Commission issued its 816-page report, which documented in impressive detail the story of Lee Harvey Oswald's crime.

The report was an immediate popular success. It was persuasive, its conclusion that Oswald acted alone stilled the conspiracy rumors, and it came out before the November, 1964, Presidential election.

Because the Warren Commission had been a body apart in American legal history, this success inspired praise for the commission idea itself as a means of determining the truth in unusual circumstances. Arthur L. Goodhart, the noted authority on British and American law, compared it favorably with the British Royal Commission system and suggested that "a new and more satisfactory system of investigation has been found than ever existed in the past." The American Bar Association Journal carried an article pointing out that the Commission was able to get far more information on Oswald than a trial would have produced because court rules would have precluded Marina Oswald from testifying against her husband. Some observers were so impressed with this that they suggested substituting a Warren Commission type of procedure for trials in certain cases.

In fact, Marina Oswald's testimony was one of the most troubling aspects of the Commission's investigation. She was questioned at length several times, yet as the investigation progressed, she continued to volunteer new and important information about her husband. It did not appear that she wished to mislead the Commission, but rather the opposite—she seemed too anxious to say what she thought the Commission wanted to hear. When she finally appeared before the Commission itself, her testimony was so contradictory that one staff attorney threatened to quit unless the Commission called her back. When it did, she changed her story on several points.

THERE arises here an important fact about the Commission—it resembled a court, but its procedures lacked the crucial elements of a trial. There was no opposing counsel to cross-examine the witnesses; there was no division of function between investigator, attorney, judge and jury; there was no impending appellate review.

These were a few of the shortcomings that seem to have impressed Edward Jay Epstein as he studied the workings of the Commission for his Master's thesis in government at Cornell. As he delved deeper, he also concluded that the commission members themselves did not devote enough time to their study, that the use of F.B.I. men and Secret Service agents as investigators tended to perpetuate established theories, and that the report was hastily issued to meet the election deadline.

Finally, Mr. Epstein found evidence that led him to doubt the essential premise of the Warren report — that Oswald acted alone. On Jan. 27 the staff had seen for the first time the remarkable color film sequence of the assassination taken by an amateur photographer. It showed that the maximum time that could have elapsed between the first hits of President Kennedy and Governor Connally was only 1.8 seconds. Tests showed that Oswald's bolt-action rifle could not fire two rounds in less than 2.3 seconds, not including aiming time.

This necessitated the "single bullet" theory, because, as one staff lawyer told Mr. Epstein, "To say that they were hit by separate bullets is synonymous with saying that there were two assassins."

According to the written report of the autopsy performed at Bethesda Naval Hospital on the night of the assassination and the testimony of the doctors who performed it, the first bullet struck President Kennedy on the back of the neck, passed through without striking any bones or major muscles, and came out the front of his throat. Ballistics tests showed it could have retained enough velocity to cause the injuries to Governor Connally. However, Mr. Epstein found in the National Archives two newly declassified F.B.I. reports, dated Dec. 9, 1963, and Jan. 13, 1964. Both state flatly that the first bullet struck President Kennedy in the right shoulder and did not exit at the front. They do not say upon what evidence this conclusion was reached.

Mr. Epstein analyzes the other evidence (perhaps the most damaging, autopsy photos and X-rays of the corpse, which might prove that the bullet passed through as the doctors testified, are reportedly being held by the Secret Service and have never been released) and concludes that the F.B.I. statement is right. He views the contradictory autopsy report in the Warren Report as "political truth" — a deliberate fraud, although he does not use the word—to conform to the single-assassin hypothesis to which the Commission had somehow become inextricably committed.

This point is also made in his own book by Harold Weisberg, a painstaking investigator who formerly worked for the Senate Civil Liberties Subcommittee. But Mr. Weisberg cites so many flaws in the Warren Report that the impact of the F.B.I. contradiction is lost. In fact, Mr. Weisberg questions so many points made by the report that the effect is blunted—it is difficult to believe that any institution could be as inept, careless, wrong or venal as he implies. Rather, the reader is impressed with the elusiveness of truth and the possibility that the assassination, given Oswald's death, may be inexplicable.

Neither author appears to appreciate the difference between the actions of a court and the much greater task of the Warren Commission. If Lee Harvey Oswald had lived to stand trial, nobody would have expected the prosecution to marshal a case that answered all questions, explained all motives and foreclosed all possibilities. It would have been enough to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Oswald killed the President, and if some embarrassing loose ends remained, the jury's verdict would have obscured them.

But the Warren Commission had to do better. Beyond proving that Oswald did it, it had a responsibility to look at the available evidence and conclude whether or not he acted alone. Furthermore, its task was not only to find the truth, but to be seen to have found the truth.

Of course, the "single bullet" theory is porous—but no other explanation makes any sense. If another assassin fired from the Dallas School Book Depository, he and his rifle came and went without leaving a shred of evidence that the Warren Commission could cite to support a conspiracy theory. In failing to take this into account, and in concluding that the Commission must therefore have prostituted itself for some dark political purpose, the authors detract from their disclosures that the Commission was subject to elements of institutional bias, and that it did fail to correct this by not providing some form of adversary advocacy.

Moreover, Mr. Epstein's book is subject to two criticism that he levels at the Commission—that it traveled under false pretenses, and that it was superficial. The book jacket describes Mr. Epstein as "a young scholar," and makes much of the academic genesis of the book. It is sprinkled with footnotes, graduate-school style. The United States National Archives are given as a major research source, and the impression is created that this is a definitive scholarly study of the Commission.

In fact, a major scholarly study is not feasible now because the crucial papers in the archives — the internal memoranda — have not yet been declassified. The available papers —investigative reports submitted to the Commission by the F.B.I. and other agencies—were considered by Mr. Epstein to be of so little value that he spent only two days in the Archives, making a "spot check" on their contents.

Mr. Epstein's book is based largely upon interviews. He talked with five of the seven Commission members and ten of the 27 people on the staff (of the 659 footnote citations, 299 refer to interviews), and the book leans heavily upon information supplied by two of the staff attorneys and a memo file provided by one of them. He did not talk to Comdr. James J. Humes, the doctor who performed the disputed autopsy. He also failed to note a fact that appears in the autopsy file in the National Achives, but not in the published evidence or report. The autopsy report, showing that the first bullet passed through and out of the President's neck, was sent to the Commission by the Secret Service on Dec. 20, 1963—a month before anyone knew a "single bullet" thesis would be necessary to explain Oswald's solitary role.

Warren Report Questioned

You are to be congratulated on the highly important article by Richard Harwood, concerning the Warren Report, which appeared on May 29. It is gratifying that responsible discussion of the assassination has resumed for, as Mr. Harwood's article shows clearly, several fundamental problems remain unresolved.

The article properly focuses on the critical question of the authenticity of the description of the President's back wound in the FBI Reports of December 9, 1963, and January 13, 1964. The FBI does not seem to have retracted or admitted error. Moreover, Mr. Harwood's story provides the significant new information that the FBI confirmed to The Washington Post on about December 18, 1963, that the first bullet to hit the President lodged deep in his shoulder—which is consistent with the FBI rather than the autopsy description of the wound.

I cannot readily believe that the FBI was capable of issuing statements and reports so profoundly in error in an investigation of such enormous gravity. The less so, when the FBI Supplemental Report of January 13, 1964, contains internal evidence of a flow of information from the autopsy surgeon, Commander J. J. Humes, to the FBI; and collateral evidence such as the position of the bullet holes in the clothing, and the testimony of witnesses who saw the President's body, suggests that the FBI findings were accurate.

True, Arlen Specter's evidence is scattered through the 26 volumes of Hearings and Exhibits, but the same scattering has fragmented every other major segment of the evidence. That has rendered research more difficult, but not impossible. And in piecing together the evidence on the single-missile theory, one finds that the testimony and documents in no way support Mr. Specter's hypothesis but, on the contrary, leave it without ground on which to stand.

I must take issue with Mr. Harwood's assertion that Dr. Robert Shaw was convinced that the intact bullet found on a stretcher at Parkland Hospital "did cause the wounds" sustained by Governor Connolly. Dr. Shaw first deposed (on March 23, 1964) that one bullet could have or did inflict all the Governor's wounds. However, when he later appeared as a witness before the Commission, he was shown the stretcher bullet for the first time. As a result, he modified his original opinion, now saying that the Governor's wounds could have been caused by two or even three bullets.

It is true, as Mr. Harwood says, that Dr. Shaw testified that it was not uncommon for people to suffer a wound without knowing it immediately. Dr. Shaw added, however, the qualification, "but in the case of a wound which strikes a bony substance such as a rib, usually the reaction is quite prompt." I am sure that Mr. Harwood would agree that, since the Governor's rib was shattered by the bullet that struck his chest, Dr. Shaw's qualifying remark should not have been omitted. Moreover, at least two other medical witnesses declined to support the alleged delayed reaction by the Governor.

The inconsistencies in the record are not "apparent"; they are real.

Books Rap Warren Report On JFK as 'Whitewash'

By GEORGE MORRIS

THE WARREN Commission buried its material on the Kennedy assassination in the National Archives, not to be touched for 75 years, but many books are now coming off the presses challenging its conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald alone killed John F. Kennedy, and that there was no conspiracy.

Moreover, the commission's conclusions are challenged largely on the basis of its own hearings compiled in 26 volumes, the FBI's summary and some glaring omissions and evasion of facts in its own report.

Most significant in the material now coming to light is the persistent view that more than one killer was involved and that either by inference or direct charge Oswald was an agent of one of the intelligence bodies or of some outfit that served as an undercover agent of a government intelligence body.

Harold Weisberg, investigator of the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee of the Senate that exposed the industrial spy agencies of the thirties, who served in other investigations of Nazi activities and monopoly practices, had to publish his book, "Whitewash," personally in offset form from typewritten pages because offers to 193 publishers, despite widespread praise of the book, were turned down. The apparent key reason is the large section in the book in which, on the basis of the Warren Commission's own data, he builds up a comprehensive network of evidence of a strong case that Oswald was an intelligence agent, with most footprints leading to the CIA's doors.

Weisberg describes in a lengthy preface his futile efforts to get a publisher.

Sylvan Fox's "The Unanswered Questions About Kennedy's Assassination," issued by Award Books in 100,000 paperbacks has been selling since October.

M. A. THESIS

By the end of this month, Viking Press will publish Jay Epstein's "Inquest," a Cornell University master's thesis to have an initial run of 15,000.

Holt, Reinhart & Winston has announced it will have a first printing in 30,000 of former assemblyman Mark Lane's "Rush to Judgment." Lane was, for a period, attorney for Oswald's mother in the hearings.

"The Oswald Affair," by Leo Sauvage, of Figaro, Paris, will be published by World Publishers next September.

The apparent hoped-for burial of the case has already been shattered as newspapers everywhere take notice of the new facts coming to light and much new analysis.

The Washington Post blazed out with a headline across the top of its front page May 29 and with a full page on the Weisberg and Epstein books.

The N. Y. Times also ran a lengthy summary of the trend in its Sunday issue June 5.

Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy, too, is interested in a fully-documented story of the assassination, and is cooperating with William Manchaster on a book that may not be published, however, until 1968, according to announced plans.

STAFF INTERVIEWED

Epstein wrote his book mainly on the basis of interviews with members of the Warren Commission staff. According to the Washington Post, Epstein found that not a single member of the commission heard all the testimony. Sen. Richard Russell was present at sessions where only six percent of the testimony was given, and only three commissioners heard more than half of the testimony with average for the entire commission 45 percent of the testimony.

Allan Dulles, who was CIA director during most of the period covered by background to the events, heard 71 percent of the testimony.

Richard Rovere, of the New Yorker magazine who wrote a preface to the Epstein book says:

"Nothing Mr. Epstein reveals is quite so shocking as the fact that this great investigation was carried out by men who could not give their full attention to it and who because of their own needs and also because of certain political circumstances were in a desperate hurry to get it over with. . . ."

Epstein says that McGeorge Bundy, who was assistant to President Johnson, and members of the commission pressed for completion of the report well in advance of the 1964 Presidential election. Deadlines were set for June 1, then extended to July 15, to Aug. 1 and eventually to September.

Epstein's major stress, as in Weisburg's book, is on the discrepancy in the first and second of the FBI's reports on the as sassination that became in effect evidence on which the Warren inquest was based. The first was submited Dec. 9 and the "supplementary report" was dated Jan. 13.

The FBI report has been "declassified" and is therefore open for analysis.

The supplementary report was the basis for the commission's conclusions that the same bullet hit both the President and Gov. Connally of Texas.

The commission had the problem of explaining how two shots could be fired so accurately with a bolt-action rifle within 1.8 seconds, the time shown by films of the shooting.

Epstein's books contains 31 pages of the FBI's original report. Epstein quotes Norman Redlich of the Commission's staff as defending the report, but conceding:

"To say that they were hit by separate bullets is synonymous with saying there were two assassins."

And that is exactly the issue. If there were two assassins, another is running around loose to this day.

PREJUDICE

In two chapters on Oswald's connections, Weisberg does a devastating job of showing the commission's prejudice in filling much of the record with Oswald's alleged "Marxism." He shows, however, by the commission's own data that Oswald was an enemy of the Soviet Union and the Communist Party of the U.S., and that he claimed to be a "Trotskyite," rather than a friend of the USSR. Weisberg quotes extensively from Oswald's documents in which he spewed his hatred of the Soviet Union and the Communists.

Weisberg also advances the theory that "agents of agents" Oswald associated with were in the sphere of anti-Castro Cubans in this country. He pieces together bits of evidence that are in the Warren Commission's records, showing at least some relationship. He sharply criticizes the commission for not pursuing that path of investigation and for brushing off charges that Oswald was an agent of a group and was involved in a conspiracy. He calls attention to the involvement of more than one person in the several times Oswald took a post office box in his mail order purchase of a rifle and, later, in his dealings with a gun shop for attachment of a telescopic sight.

WARREN REPORT CHALLENGED

Question of Second Kennedy Assassin Again Being Asked

BY ROBERT J. DONOVAN
Times Washington Bureau Chief

WASHINGTON — Nearly 19 months after publication of the Warren Commission Report, the question of whether a second assassin may have been involved in the murder of President John F. Kennedy is again being asked.

No new evidence has come to light. Rather the issue is being resurrected in new challenges to the findings of the Warren Commission and in new interpretations being placed on the evidence.

These challenges are abetted by what appear to be errors in the early Federal Bureau of Investigation report on the President's wound. If the FBI statements are not errors, they could unhinge the central conclusion of the commission report: that Lee Harvey Oswald was probably the sole assassin. An FBI spokesman Sunday said, however, that the statements are in error.

The possibility Oswald had an accomplice staggers the imagination at this late date. Who could such a person be? If he exists, where is he? What is he doing? Is he still a potential menace? Such a question has a fantastic ring to it. Yet it is diligently put forth in a new book to be published this week by Viking Press—a book that is but the first of many that will challenge the Warren Commission findings.

The Viking book is called "Inquest: The Warren Commission and the Establishment of Truth." It was written originally as a thesis for a master's degree at Cornell University by Edward Jay Epstein, who is now working for a Ph.D. degree at Harvard.

It carried a highly laudatory foreword by Richard H. Rovere, Washington correspondent for the New Yorker magazine, who writes that Epstein's case "is as impressive as it is disturbing."

Contains Criticism

The book contains some of the most pointed criticism and surprising revelations about the internal controversies in the Warren Commission yet to appear.

It reports, for example, that Chief Justice Earl Warren, the chairman, lost his temper over delays in getting out the report. It says staff lawyers called the commission's hearings a "joke" and it charges that much of the investigation was "superficial" and overly hasty.

According to Epstein, the White House through McGeorge Bundy, former special assistant to the President, exerted pressure to get the report out before the 1964 Presidential election to prevent the assassination from becoming a campaign issue.

The book also indicates a serious division within the commission on whether the President and Texas Gov. John B. Connally were struck by the same bullet — a crucially important point in establishing whether Oswald was alone.

According to Epstein, Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.) a commission member, "reportedly said he would not sign a report which concluded both men were hit by the same bullet."

Agree With Russell

Two other members, Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R-Ky.) and Rep. Hale Boggs (D-La.) "tended to agree with Russell's position," Epstein says.

Yet the report appeared a unanimous one and the conclusion was that the same bullet had struck Mr. Kennedy and Connally—the bullet, that is, that wounded the two men.

Another bullet, the fatal one, hit Mr. Kennedy only. It struck his head. The commission concluded that three bullets were fired, one of which went astray.

The two senators were unavailable for comment Sunday. The Washington Post, however, quoted Boggs as having said that an implication the commission was divided in its conclusions is wrong. There were, he said, many discussions involving many points of evidence. But the findings were unanimous.

No Proof

While the Epstein book challenges the commission's methods and its findings, it does not prove the case of a second assassin any more than the Warren Commission proved beyond all doubt that Oswald was the sole assassin. The commission concluded simply that "Lee Harvey Oswald was the assassin of President Kennedy." But it said:

"Because of the difficulty of proving a negative to a certainty, the possibility of others being involved with either Oswald or Ruby cannot be rejected categorically. But if there is any such evidence, it has been beyond the reach of all the investigative agencies and resources of the United States and has not come to the attention of this commission."

In other words, while not excluding the possibility of an accomplice, the commission leaned heavily toward the belief Oswald was alone.

Complex Question

The question of what happened to the bullets fired at the Presidential limousine in Dallas Nov. 22, 1963, is unbelievably complex. Yet on its resolution depends the answer to whether one or two gunmen were involved.

Motion pictures taken by a bystander show clearly the reactions of Mr. Kennedy and Connally when they were first struck. Mr. Kennedy clutched his throat; Connally slumped forward. These reactions occurred less than two seconds apart.

It was, however, demonstrably impossible for Oswald's bolt-action rifle to have been fired twice in that brief interval. Therefore, one of two things must have happened: either Mr. Kennedy and Connally were shot almost simultaneously by two different gunmen, or, as the commission concluded, the bullet that struck Mr. Kennedy in the shoulder must have passed through his body first and then through the chest of Connally, who was seated in front of him.

Epstein attacks this conclusion forcefully, beginning with citations from FBI reports, which had not been made public at the time the commission submitted its finding.

In its first assassination report dated Dec. 9, 1963, the FBI said:

"Medical examination of the President's body revealed that one of the bullets had entered just below his shoulder to the right of the spinal column at an angle of 45 to 60 degrees downward, that there was no point of exit and that the bullet was not in the body."

In a supplementary report dated Jan. 13, 1964, the FBI said:

"Medical examination of the President's body had revealed that the bullet which entered his back had penetrated to a distance of less than a finger.

Notes Small Slit

"There is a slit approximately one-half inch long about one inch below the collar button in the overlap of the shirt the President was wearing. The slit has a characteristic of an exit hole of a projectile."

"The FBI report," Epstein writes, "precluded the possibility that both men were hit by the same bullet. There was thus a prima facie case of two assassins. The fact that Oswald was able to escape from the murder scene suggested a second assassin could also have escaped undetected."

Epstein's case is challenged by the statement Sunday by the FBI spokesman that the FBI report was wrong when it said "there was no point of exit."

Quoting Doctors

The FBI agents were not doctors but were merely quoting doctors, the FBI spokesman said, which of course does not dispose of the question whether the doctors were right or wrong. The FBI spokesman said the ultimate truth about the wound is in the autopsy report, which reads:

"The missile contused the strap muscle of the right side of the neck, damaged the trachea (windpipe) and made its exit through the anterior surface of the neck."

It was on this statement that the Warren Commission relied in concluding that there was "very persuasive evidence" that the same bullet that "made its exit through the anterior surface of the neck" went on to pierce Connally's chest and wound his wrist.

Disagrees

Epstein disagrees with the commission, saying:

"Either both men were hit by the same bullet or there had to be two assassins. Norman Redlich, Arlen Specter and other members of the staff took the position the report had to conclude that both men were hit by the same bullet. There was, however, no substantial evidence which supported this contention. And there is evidence that all but precluded the possibility that both men had been hit by the same bullet."

Epstein also argues

there is a question whether the autopsy report published by the commission was the original autopsy report. Before any official word had been released about the autopsy, he notes, certain newspapers carried stories saying the autopsy showed the first bullet had penetrated the President's back by only a couple of inches.

The wound in the front of the throat, according to these newspaper accounts of the autopsy, was caused by a metal fragment from the subsequent fatal shot in the head.

Notes Testimony

Epstein notes for example that Connally testified it was "inconceivable" that he was hit by the same bullet that also hit Mr. Kennedy, although Connally's own surgeon believes the governor could have been mistaken.

Epstein argues that, if the bullet that hit Connally had also damaged Mr. Kennedy's windpipe, the President would not have been able to exclaim: "My God, I am hit." Secret Service agent Roy Kellerman testified he heard Kennedy say that after the first shot.

Epstein's thesis is that the Warren Commission did not want to rock the boat by delving into troublesome matters that might have suggested the facts about the assassination were other than what they appeared to be.

Thus, he says, the commission did not make a sufficiently exhaustive inquiry into the rumor that Oswald was a paid FBI informer, even though there were some very curious circumstances.

Instead, Epstein says, the commission simply took the word of J. Edgar Hoover and the FBI that Oswald was not an informer.

Quotes Lawyer

Epstein quotes Joseph A. Ball, a Long Beach, (Calif.) lawyer, who was an important member of the commission staff, as complaining that the FBI was "exasperatingly bureaucratic" in its dealings with the commission and that FBI agents collaborated only on "express orders" from Hoover. Epstein also says, however, that "the staff had virtually all its questions answered by the FBI."

On the other hand, he quotes another staff member, Wesley J. Liebeler, that "the most disquieting thing about the FBI investigation was that it was less thorough than it appeared to be." Liebeler also is quoted that "the CIA was so secretive it was virtually useless to the commission."

"Opinions differ as to what the commission actually did," Epstein writes after interviewing many of those connected with it. Ball said the commission had no idea of what was happening; we (the staff) did all the investigating, lined up the witnesses, solved the problems and wrote the report."

'Nothing'

Liebeler, when asked what the commission did, replied: "In one word, nothing."

These judgments are not compatible with the views of some independent observers here who thought at the time that members of the commission made a substantial contribution to the final report, even though the report may not have broken new ground.

Epstein concludes his book with these words:

"Unless the basic facts and assumption established by the commission are incorrect, there is a strong case that Oswald could not have acted alone. Why did the commission fail to take cognizance in its conclusion of this evidence of a second assassin?

"Quite clearly, a serious discussion of this problem within itself has undermined the dominant purpose of the commission, namely, the settling of doubts and suspicion. Indeed if the commission had made it clear that very substantial evidence indicated the presence of a second assassin, it would have opened a Pandora's box of doubts and suspicion. In establishing its version of the truth, the Warren Commission acted to reassure the nation and to protect the national interest."

THINKING ALOUD

The Warren Commission's Case Against Oswald

By Leo Sauvage

TWO YEARS have passed since John Fitzgerald Kennedy was slain in Dallas. There will be numerous public and private commemorations, just as there were last November 22. There will be speeches and sermons, reminiscences and understandably sorrowful head-shaking before the television sets. There will be pilgrimages to the grave at Arlington. And again this year, as last, it will be tacitly understood that there can be no casting of doubts on the official account of the President's assassination.

After July of 1925, thanks to Clarence Darrow, Americans became used to the idea that they could discuss the Bible. But since September 27, 1964, when the Warren Commission Report was issued, they have been subjected to a unanimous chorus in which jurists like Louis Nizer add their befuddled hallelujahs to the frantic hosannas of liberal opinion running from Walter Lippmann to James Wechsler and on to I. F. Stone. Thus Americans still do not seem capable of accepting the idea that one can criticize—and even reject—the Warren Report.

The death of President Kennedy has been felt not only by the United States but by the entire free world. How much longer can we all fail to honor his memory through the elementary homage of seriously seeking the truth about his assassination? Perhaps now, 15 months after its publication, it will not be considered inappropriate to at least examine closely the Warren Commission's case against Lee Harvey Oswald.

The Commission insists it did not pass judgment on Oswald. According to its Report, it merely "ascertained the facts surrounding the assassination but did not draw conclusions concerning Oswald's legal guilt." It was content simply to gather the evidence which "identifies Lee Harvey Oswald as the assassin of President Kennedy." Judgment or not, no American newspaper that I know of today feels obliged to place the word "alleged" before "assassin" in referring to Oswald.

On what grounds does the Commission, headed by the Chief Justice of the United States, label as an assassin a man whom it claims not to be judging and whose family, for that reason, was refused an opportunity to defend his name? A summary of its indictment is presented at the conclusion of Chapter IV of the Report, which is titled, precisely, "The Assassin":

"The Commission has found that Lee Harvey Oswald 1) owned and possessed the rifle used to kill President Kennedy and wound Governor Connally, 2) brought this rifle into the Depository Building on the morning of the assassination, 3) was present, at the time of the assassination, at the window from which the shots were fired, 4) killed Dallas Police Officer J. D. Tippit in an apparent attempt to escape, 5) resisted arrest by drawing a fully loaded pistol and attempting to shoot another police officer, 6) lied to the police after his arrest concerning important substantive matters, 7) attempted, in April 1963, to kill Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker, and 8) possessed the capability with a rifle which would have enabled him to commit the assassination. On the basis of these findings the Commission has concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald was the assassin of President Kennedy."

I have commented in detail on each of these eight affirmations in my book, L'Affaire Oswald, published in Paris by Editions de Minuit. (The New York publisher broke the contract for the American version when he learned that I was not convinced by the Report and that I intended to say so.) In the available space here, I can only point up briefly the main flaws that weaken, vitiate or destroy all the Commission's affirmations, even when they are not totally irrelevant. Of the eight "proofs," cited by the Commission, four have no connection, or only the slightest link, with its conclusion.

To begin with, it is necessary to single out proof number 6, concerning Oswald's "lies." I use quotations around the word "lies" because it is a reference to statements of the accused which, since they were not recorded on tape or by a stenographer, are known to us only through the recollections of various policemen who questioned Oswald. While the Commission apparently sees nothing reprehensible in that fact (it is also not shocked that the man suspected of having killed the President of the United States was questioned for a total of 12 hours in the absence of a lawyer), it is certainly not regular procedure to hold a defendant accountable for remarks attributed to him by his interrogators when it is impossible to know their context and still less their exact terms.

In any case, the use of Oswald's "lies"—regarding his ownership of a rifle or his adoption of the alias "Hidell"—as evidence against him brings to mind that "consciousness of guilt" once invoked by a lamentably famous judge in a trial which Chief Justice Warren would surely not choose for a model. It was Judge Webster Thayer who saw this kind of reasoning as sufficient ground to send Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti to the electric chair. Felix Frankfurter, then a Harvard Law School professor, asked at the time what basis Thayer had for affirming that the "consciousness of guilt" shown by the lies of Sacco and Vanzetti was "consciousness of murder rather than of radicalism." I expect that Justice Frankfurter, if he were alive, might pose the same question today to Chief Justice Warren on the subject of Oswald. In addition, it certainly cannot be presumed that Oswald believed he was obliged to tell the truth to hostile police whom he scorned and blamed for not providing him with a lawyer; as the Report says, he was "overbearing and arrogant throughout much of the time between his arrest and his own death."

It seems clear to me, given these circumstances, that proof number 6 proves nothing. Indeed, it is rather astonishing that the Commission dared to include Oswald's "lies" as one of its eight officially proclaimed proofs on page 195 of the Report, for on page 180 it declares: "Oswald's untrue statements during interrogation were not considered items of positive proof by the Commission."

THREE OTHER affirmations of the Commission—numbers 4, 5 and 7—appear to have no genuine connection with its conclusion. Number 4, for example, which maintains that Oswald killed Tippit, rests essentially on such a scandalous collection of inacceptable "testimony" and inadmissible "identification" that it constitutes a graver indictment of the Commission than of Oswald. But let us suppose, for a moment, that the accusation was based on valid arguments. It would still be necessary to show how his murdering Tippit proved that Oswald was Kennedy's assassin.

The Commission's explanation is that Oswald killed Tippit "in an apparent attempt to escape." Yet, no one—the Commission no more than I—knows why Tippit, alone in his patrol car, "pulled up alongside a man walking in the same direction." The Commission states that "it is conceivable, even probable, that Tippit stopped Oswald because of the description broadcast by the police radio." This statement is ridiculous. The description broadcast by the police did not mention clothing, shoes, manner or any other distinctive trait enabling identification of a man approached from behind in a car. And this occurred several miles from the scene of the crime, in a neighborhood where Tippit (unless he was informed about Oswald, a hypothesis the Commission avoids like the plague) had no reason to seek the suspect.

If the police had taken to arresting every "white male, approximately 30, slender build, height 5′ 10″, weight 165 pounds," from one end of Dallas to the other, there would not have been enough theaters and gymnasiums and ballrooms to hold them all. As it turned out, the description broadcast by the police radio did not lead to any other arrest, not even in the immediate neighborhood of the Texas School Book Depository. Is it "probable," even "conceivable," that in the entire Dallas Police Department, J. D. Tippit alone was able to identify someone he saw from behind, in Oak Cliff, who in fact stood 5 foot 9 inches tall, was 24 years old, and weighed between 140 and 150 pounds? Finally, according to the extraordinary Mrs. Helen Markham—whose testimony the Commission regards as "reliable," though I do not have the slightest faith in it—Tippit did not at any time act as if he were dealing with someone suspected of assassinating the President. In short, it is impossible to affirm that Oswald was seeking "to escape" because it is impossible to affirm that Tippit was trying to arrest him.

Nor is it possible to affirm, as proof number 5 does, that Oswald "resisted arrest by ... ing a fully loaded pistol and attempting to shoot ... her police officer." The circumstances of Oswald's arrest in the Texas Theater remain confused, since the Warren Report does not elucidate any of the contradictions and inconsistencies raised by the accounts of the police officers, and the two witnesses it produced (out of a total it estimates at 12 or 14) only added new contradictions and inconsistencies, as the Commission recognizes. The Report itself, and the statements of officer M. N. McDonald contained in Volume III of the Hearings of the Commission, show that in striking the officer who was arresting him, Oswald was not attempting an escape. Oswald resisted arrest, the Report tells us, by hitting McDonald "between the eyes with his left fist," and it was only after this, according to the Report, that he drew a gun.

If Oswald had wanted to "shoot another police officer," he had plenty of time to do so, since McDonald—even though the suspect had been immediately pointed out to him in the back of the theater—first searched "two men in the center of the main floor, about ten rows from the front." McDonald acknowledged that during this time Oswald "remained seated without moving, just looking at me." Later, when questioned by Senator John Sherman Cooper (R-Ken.), who was clearly intrigued, McDonald repeated a second time that Oswald "just sat in his seat, with his hands in his lap, watching me." The Report does not reproduce these embarrassing details from the hearings, but it does not hesitate to state that when McDonald finally decided to approach Oswald, the latter "rose from his seat, bringing up both hands." There was thus no question of Oswald's resisting arrest even at this final moment, and it was only when "McDonald started to ...rch Oswald's waist for a gun" that the man p...nted to us as the calm killer of President Kennedy and Officer Tippit ventures his first gesture of resistance: a punch in the face.

While resistance to arrest is considered an incriminating circumstance, it is not proof of guilt. When such resistance reveals neither premeditation nor method but appears to be an ineffective act of irrational anger, it actually often constitutes an indication of innocence.

As for proof number 7, again space limitations prevent a full exploration of the charge that Oswald attempted to assassinate General Walker. Suffice to say that the accusation rests essentially on the "revelations" of Marina Oswald—whom everyone need not regard with the same confident admiration as does Justice Warren. Besides, her testimony is contradicted by a mountain of improbabilities: the circumstances under which Oswald would have been able to go to Walker's house and back, the identification of the recovered bullet, the simple fact that the sharpshooter of Elm Street is supposed to have missed an extremely easy target and, curiously, did not immediately fire a second shot. All that matters here, however, is the way the Commission tries to link the attack on Walker with the President's assassination.

The idea, apparently, is that the attempt on Walker demonstrates Oswald's "disposition to take human life" and "his capacity for violence." This is summed up in Chapter VII of the Report, where "possible motives" of Oswald are discussed, in a striking sentence that is in itself sufficient to destroy proof number 7: "The Commission has concluded that on April 10, 1963, Oswald shot at Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker (Resigned, U.S. Army), demonstrating once again his propensity to act dramatically and, in this instance, violently, in furtherance of his beliefs."

In furtherance of which beliefs is Oswald supposed to have slain Kennedy? The Report gives us the following details: "Oswald did not lack the determination and other traits required to carry out a carefully planned killing of another human being and was willing to consummate such a purpose if he thought there was sufficient reason to do so. Some idea of what he thought was sufficient reason for such an act may be found in the nature of the motive that he stated for his attack on General Walker. Marina Oswald indicated that her husband had compared General Walker to Adolph [sic] Hitler . . ." Granting for now, as does Chief Justice Warren, that the word of Marina Oswald is sacred —did Oswald consider John Kennedy to be another Hitler or another Walker? Oswald's various statements about Kennedy, cited by the Report, categorically disprove this interpretation; yet in the conclusion to Chapter VII the Commission cooly repeats that Oswald demonstrated "a capacity to act decisively and without regard to the consequences [illegible]en such action would further his aims of the mo[illegible]t." Since one searches in vain, from start to finish of the Warren Report, for a single word on the "aims of the moment" Oswald believed he would serve by killing Kennedy, the Commission—to the extent that it brings up the attempt on Walker—seems to prove, if anything, that Oswald could not have been the assassin of President Kennedy.

FOUR AFFIRMATIONS remain which, according to the Commission, accuse and (if we can stop playing with words) condemn Oswald not by implication but directly. I am not going to discuss the ownership of the rifle (proof number 1), although I wonder what the Commission means by "possession." If it means that Oswald had the weapon in his possession at the moment of the crime, it would be necessary first to prove Affirmations 2 and 3: that Oswald had brought the rifle to the Depository on the morning of November 22, and that he was the man at the window on the sixth floor. If the Commission means that Oswald had uninterrupted possession of the rifle until the day of the crime, its own Report clearly establishes the shakiness of this contention. The Report does declare that "the rifle was kept among Oswald's possessions from the time of its purchase until the day of the assassination," but this statement is knowingly false. On the next page, in fact, the Commission states that its star witness, Marina Oswald, saw the stock of the rifle in the Paine garage at Irving "about one week after the return from New Orleans," that is, about September 30. Two pages further, in describing the discovery of the empty blanket after 3 P.M. on November 22, the Report informs us that "Marina Oswald testified that this was her first [illegible]owledge that the rifle was not in its accustomed pl[illegible]." Thus, according to the Commission's own Marina, the rifle could have disappeared from the unlocked garage of the Paine house without anyone noticing it at any time between September 30 and November 22, 1963, and the Report is overtly misleading in suggesting that the rifle was brought out of the garage only on "the morning of the assassination"—that is to say, in Oswald's package.

In any case, the Commission fails to prove that this rifle, however it arrived in the Depository, was "used to kill President Kennedy and wound Governor Connally." The Report offers us the testimony of experts who, basing their views on ballistics tests, affirm that two bullet fragments found in the front seat "after the Presidential car was returned to Washington" were fired from Oswald's Mannlicher-Carcano. One of the fragments represented less than a third, the other hardly more than an eighth of a complete bullet. They were mutilated to the point that "it was not possible to determine whether they were from the same bullet or from two different bullets," but the experts claim that each had a "sufficient unmutilated area to provide the basis for identification." I will merely note that the manual on "Modern Criminal Investigation" by Harry Söderman and John J. O'Connell, in common use in American police academies, considers ballistics tests suitable for identification purposes only "if the bullet has retained its shape or is only partly deformed."

There also exists, meanwhile, a "nearly whole bullet." Here the Commission would have had a better case if it did not ask us to believe that this bullet, after passing through the neck of the President, also passed through the Governor's chest, "shattering his fifth rib,". and then traveled on through his right wrist, shedding small fragments of metal "upon striking the firm surface of the bone," and finally leaving "a tiny metallic fragment embedded in the Governor's leg"—all of this while remaining "nearly whole." The "nearly whole bullet," we are further told, was "slightly flattened but otherwise unmutilated."

One could write pages about this miraculous bullet and its extraordinary voyage, whose vicissitudes (when brought to light, as they were most effectively by Vincent J. Salandria, a Philadelphia lawyer) seem to have been borrowed from the fables of Baron Munchhausen. It must be noted, at least, that the Commission theory was rejected by several medical experts whose depositions are reproduced in the Hearings record even though they are ignored in the Report. In addition, while the Report rather arbitrarily affirms the existence of "very persuasive evidence from the experts to indicate that the same bullet which pierced the President's throat also caused Governor Connally's wounds," it does not conceal the formal disagreement of Connally himself and grants that "Governor Connally's testimony and certain [illegible] factors have given rise to some difference of opinion as to this probability." The Commission thus officially admits that this is not a demonstrated fact but a simple "probability," and a doubtful "probability" at that. Yet it apparently does not consider the issue of great importance, since "it is not necessary to any essential findings of the Commission to determine just which shot hit Governor Connally."

Such an opinion is thoroughly stupefying. The Report tells us that the "nearly whole bullet" was discovered "on the stretcher used to carry Governor Connally at Parkland Hospital," and it emphasizes expressly that "that conclusion is buttressed by evidence which eliminated President Kennedy's stretcher as a source of the bullet." Since the Commission admits it did not establish beyond any doubt that the bullet which struck Governor Connally is one of those which hit the President, it cannot say that it has identified all of the bullets which struck Kennedy. And it has not proved that Oswald's rifle was the weapon used in the crime, or at least that it was the sole weapon used.

COMPROMISED ALREADY by the yawning gap, the fundamental accusation of the Warren Commission is definitely demolished by the fact that it is equally incapable of furnishing any evidence of the indispensable corollary: If Oswald's rifle was in fact the murder weapon, it is necessary to prove that it was Oswald who fired it. Countless crimes have been committed with weapons belonging to others, often precisely in order to incriminate the owners. The Commission carefully avoids any allusion to this possibility in the Oswald case, and to dodge this argument it employs affirmations 2 and 3. What remains of these after a close scrutiny?

Only two witnesses saw the brown paper package that Lee Oswald carried when he went to work on the morning of November 22—the package which, the Commission says, contained the dismantled rifle. In their deposition before the Commission on March 11, 1964, Wesley Frazier and Linnie Mae Randle were exhaustively questioned by Assistant Counsel Joseph A. Ball, who the Hearings record shows, employed the traps and tricks and other devices an experienced lawyer makes use of when testimony embarrasses him. This effort was a total loss, however: The descriptions given by Frazier and Mrs. Randle, confirmed by the practical tests to which the witnesses were put by Ball, applied to a package which could not have contained the rifle. Does the Commission waver? No: "The Commission has weighed the visual recollection of Frazier and Mrs. Randle against the evidence here presented that the bag Oswald carried contained the assassination weapon and has concluded that Frazier and Mrs. Randle are mistaken as to the length of the bag."

A sub-heading on the following page perfectly illustrates the spirit in which "the evidence here presented" was approached. The evidence concerning the bag should obviously have related to the rifle, not to Oswald, but the sub-heading—and the section it introduces—mixes the two: "Scientific Evidence Linking Rifle and Oswald to Paper Bag." This allows the Report to go into great detail about "Oswald's fingerprint and palmprint found on bag" or about "Materials used to make bag," all of which remains totally irrelevant because it proves nothing about whether the package contained a rifle.

The Report would like to convince us that the presence of the rifle was suggested by the discovery, inside the bag, of fibers which could have come from the blanket in which the rifle was wrapped. But the expert called on by the Commission "was unable to render an opinion that the fibers which he found in the bag had probably come from the blanket." It should be observed that the expert found no trace of powder and no oil stains. In a letter to the Commission, which asked the FBI for technical data about the firing pin of "the assassination rifle," J. Edgar Hoover commented that the weapon was in "well-oiled condition."

I must leave aside the delicate and/or insoluble problems raised by the theory that the rifle was brought in dismantled, and thus had to be secretly and perfectly assembled in time for the assassination. It is now necessary to discuss proof number 3—the testimony of Howard L. Brennan, which the Commission uses as the basis for stating that Oswald "was present, at the time of the assassination, at the window from which the shots were fired."

Howard L. Brennan—one of the Commission's star witnesses, along with Marina Oswald and Helen Markham—was presented as an apparent discovery of the Commission. Yet Brennan's statements had appeared in the press from the start of the investigation in Dallas. Nobody at that time took him seriously, and it was necessary to await the Warren Report to learn that "Howard L. Brennan made a positive identification of Oswald as being the person at the window." Leafing back in the Report to the chapter on "The Assassin," and its section titled "Eyewitness Identification of Assassin," we learn that "Brennan testified that the man in the window was standing when he fired the shots," while the Report is obliged to recognize that "the half-open window, the arrangement of the boxes, and the angle of the shots virtually preclude a standing position." The conclusion of the Commission is that Brennan was mistaken in saying that the man was standing, but not mistaken in identifying (from the sidewalk opposite the building) the man sitting behind a half-open sixth-floor window.

As to the variations which marked his identification in the police lineup and the turnabouts that followed, these are related on an epic page of the Report, the farcical torment of which could never be suggested by any summary. I would therefore refer the reader to page 145, only remarking that one will also find there the following admission: "Prior to the lineup, Brennan had seen Oswald's picture on television."

There remains affirmation number 8, the most dubious of all, with the Commission serving up the refutation on a large platter. To demonstrate Oswald's "rifle capability," the Commission cites his record in the Marines: "Oswald was tested in December of 1956, and obtained a score of 212, which was 2 points above the minimum for qualification as a 'sharpshooter' in a scale of marksman-sharpshooter-expert. In May of 1959, on another range, Oswald scored 191, which was 1 point over the minimum for ranking as a 'marksman.'" To the layman, this suggests that Oswald was among the elite riflemen of the U.S. Marine Corps, although his skill diminished somewhat between 1956 and 1959. What the Commission does not point out is that the scale "marksman-sharpshooter-expert" applies not to an elite group but to all Marines. Thus, toward the end of his service, in May 1959, Oswald was just 1 point above the minimum required of any one of the 175,571 Marines in the Corps at that time.

More than four years were to go by between that time and the shots on Elm Street. Did Oswald have more opportunities for training in those four years than he had during his Marine service? The Warren Report does not claim this, and in dealing with his second-hand, $19.95 rifle bought in March 1963, it is even less satisfactory. We learn that "Marina Oswald testified that in New Orleans in May of 1963, she observed Oswald sitting with the rifle on their screened porch at night, sighting with the telescopic lens and operating the bolt." But previously, preoccupied with other concerns, the Report left this admission pass: "The Commission found no credible evidence that Oswald used the rifle at any time between September 23, when it was transported from New Orleans, and November 22, the day of the assassination."

THE ONLY possible remedy, under these conditions, was to demonstrate that nothing was easier than to obtain three direct hits in 4.8 to 5.6 seconds, with a bolt action rifle such as Oswald's Mannlicher-Carcano. And the Commission seems to have had no trouble in finding a Marine Sergeant, even a Marine Major, as well as an FBI expert and the "chief of the U.S. Army Infantry Weapons Evaluation Branch of the Ballistics Research Laboratory," to confirm this. But many European experts—including the Olympic rifle champion and instructors of the Italian Army, where the Mannlicher-Carcano was used during the War—continued to maintain the contrary. The Commission then asked three "masters" of the National Rifle Association—three recognized champions—to fire from the top of a tower with Oswald's rifle, at stationary targets at distances corresponding to those on Elm Street. The "chief of the U.S. Army Infantry Weapons Evaluation Branch of the Ballistics Research Laboratory" was asked to evaluate the results. And the chief, etc., testified in effect "that in his opinion the probability of hitting the targets at the relatively short range at which they were hit was very high."

These results are shown on the same page of the Report. Each rifleman had two chances. The times recorded for them in the first round of three shots each were 4.6 seconds for the first master, 6.75 for the second master, and 8.25 for the third master; in the second round, 5.15, 6.45, and 7 seconds. Out of the six shots fired at each target all hit the first target, four missed the second "by several inches," and one missed the third.

It is clear that even if the three "masters" of the National Rifle Association—all of them identified in the Hearings as professional specialists—had done as well or better than the Elm Street assassin, that would prove little about non-expert Oswald. Moreover, contrary to the Report's claim, the conditions of the test did not "simulate those which prevailed during the assassination," since not only were the targets stationary but the champions "took as much time as they wanted for the first target," whereas the gunman of the Texas School Book Depository, by reason of the limitations imposed by the movement of the motorcade and by his own position at the window, had as little time for the first shot as for the two others. Despite all this, only one of the three "masters" matched the assassin.

How, under these circumstances, can the Warren Commission unhesitatingly assert that "Lee Harvey Oswald was the assassin of President Kennedy"?

KENNEDY—by Sorensen

CHAPTER 1

By THEODORE C. SORENSEN

John Fitzgerald Kennedy had no fear or premonition of dying.

Having narrowly survived death in the war and in the hospital, having tragically suffered the death of a brother and a sister, having been told as a young man that his adrenal deficiency might well cut short his years, he did not need to be reminded that the life he loved was a precious, impermanent gift, not to be wasted for a moment.

John Kennedy could speak of death like all other subjects, candidly, objectively and at times humorously. The possibility of his own assassination he regarded as simply one more way in which his plans for the future might be thwarted. Yet he rarely mentioned death in a personal way and, to my knowledge, never spoke seriously about his own, once he recovered his health.

He had no morbid fascination with the subject of death. When his wife and daughter stopped by his White House desk with a dead bird Caroline wanted to bury, he preferred not to look at it. (Dead animals, in fact, appalled him. He did not like to hunt, was upset about the deer he had shot at the Johnson ranch in Texas, and often dangerously swerved his car to avoid running over a rabbit or dog, alive or dead, in the middle of the road.)

He mentioned more than once—but almost in passing—that no absolute protection was possible, that a determined assassin could always find a way, and that a sniper from a high window or rooftop seemed to him the least preventable.

His trip to Texas in November of 1963, like his mission in life, was a journey of reconciliation—to harmonize the warring factions of Texas Democrats, to dispel the myths of the right wing in one of its strongest citadels, and to broaden the base for his own re-election in 1964.

RECORDED

57 SEP 22 1965

This is the first of 20 articles by Mr. Sorensen, who as special counsel to the President was closer to John F. Kennedy than any other official. They are taken from his book, soon to be published.

South Lawn—Nov. 21, 1963, 10:45 a.m.—I ran out with some suggestions he had requested for "Texas humor." I never saw him again.

I must ask to be excused from repeating the details of that tragedy. How and why it happened are of little consequence compared to what it stopped.

He would not have condemned the entire city of Dallas. Certainly the warmth of its welcome that day was genuine and impressive.

He would not have condemned the Dallas police, the FBI and the Secret Service. Certainly there were limitations on their ability to guard an active, strong-willed President in a free society.

He would not, finally, have doubted the conclusions of guilt pronounced by the Warren Commission. In the Commission's own words, "because of the difficulty of proving negatives to a certainty, the possibility of others being involved . . . cannot be established categorically"; and thus we can never be absolutely certain whether some other hand might not have coached, coaxed or coerced the hand of President Kennedy's killer.

Personally I accept the conclusion that no plot or political motive was involved, despite the fact that this makes the deed all the more difficult to accept.

Jack Kennedy was living at his peak. Almost everything seemed to be moving in his direction—abroad after the Cuban missile crisis and Nuclear Test Ban Treaty, at home with the tax and civil rights bills, in office with a more complete mastery of the executive branch. He was healthier and happier than he had ever been.

On his last full day in Washington, Nov. 20, at breakfast with the legislative leaders, he had reviewed progress on the tax, civil rights and education bills, and spoken out strongly against attempts to curb his foreign aid funds and wheat sales to the Soviet Union.

The controversial nature of his program did not seem to have dimmed the enthusiasm of his reception (in Dallas)—and Dallas had voted more strongly against Kennedy in 1960 than any other big city.

Perhaps that encouraged him to think, as he rode through the streets, about his new proposals for 1964. Foremost among the new items was a comprehensive, coordinated attack on poverty.

More likely he was thinkIng of 1964 in terms of the campaign, for this was a barely disguised campaign trip.

He had already flatly committed himself to a restaging of the televised debates with his opponent and was looking forward to them.

He cautioned us not to talk to the press regarding prospective Republican nominees, fearful that our indication of a favorite might encourage the Republicans to turn elsewhere. Within the confines of the White House he predicted—and fervently hoped—that Barry Goldwater would be nominated.

For Nelson A. Rockefeller to be named, he said, "would be too good to be true — but he doesn't have a chance." George Romney or some dark horse, he felt, had a chance and would be tougher to beat than Goldwater, whom he liked personally but who stood diametrically opposed to him on every major issue.

Looked Forward To 1964 Campaign

"This campaign," said the President with relish, "may be among the most interesting as well as pleasurable campaigns that have taken place in a long time." Defeating Goldwater, he thought, would halt the growth of the radical right and provide him with a renewed and more powerful mandate.

He expected his second term, like that of Theodore Roosevelt, to be more productive of domestic legislation than the first, with a more responsive, responsible Congress and a less distractihg, distressing foreign scene.

He did not deliberately defer controversial proposals until that term — with the exception of a few in need of more study, such as new patent and pension fund regulations, new tax treatment for foundations and the adoption of the metric system of measurement.

But he believed that the second term would see far-reaching breakthroughs to meet the modern problems of automation, transportation, urbanization, cultural opportuntiy and economic growth.

He anticipated that an increased stabilization of the arms race and an easing of East-West tensions would enable him to devote a larger share of expenditure increases to domestic and particularly urban needs.

Even more important were his long-range goals in foreign affairs — a decade of development to put the poorer nations on their feet, an Atlantic partnership with Western Europe as an equal and increasingly more intimate partner, a United Nations made stronger as national sovereignty became weaker and, most importantly, an evolving detente with the Soviet Union and the eventual reunification of Europe.

He had learned so much from the first and second Cuban crises, from his travels and talks with foreign leaders, from his successes and failures. He knew better than he had even a year earlier how to stay out of traps, how not to antagonize generals, and how to stay on top of international nuclear politics.

New arms limitations, new science and space cooperation, new approaches on Berlin, and increased trade and contacts with Eastern Europe were all on the future agenda. And the one major foreign policy issue deliberately postponed to the second term was Red China.

After the second term . . . well, I do not believe he was thinking about that in Dallas that day. I do not believe he thought about it much at all.

I have an idea he would have groomed his own successor as Democratic standard-bearer, but I have no idea whom he would have picked, and I don't think he did either.

He would have remained active and influential in the party — ex-presidents, he said, in some ways have more influence than they did when they were presidents.

He would have written his memoirs. He would have spent time at his library.

But none of these outlets would have been sufficient for a man of his exceptional energies at the age of 51.

He might have purchased, published or edited a newspaper, as he once contemplated when still in the Senate, or become a syndicated columnist. He might have been secretary of State in some subsequent Democratic administration.

He might have been president of a university. When I told him that McGeorge Bundy had been mentioned as a possible new president of Yale (but said he wasn't interested), Kennedy dead-panned: "I wish somebody would offer me the presidency of Yale!"

Return to Senate Was a Possibility

Necessarily on the list of possibilities was a return to his first love, the Senate. His wife, remembering his contentment in that body, once asked Ted Kennedy at dinner whether he would give back Jack's seat when the time came, and Teddy loyally said that of course he would. But the President was upset, and sternly told Jacqueline later never to do that to Teddy and not to worry about his future.

On Nov. 22 his future merged with his past, and we will never know what might have been.

His own inner drive, as well as the swift pace of our times, had enabled him to do more in the White House in three years than many had done in eight—to live a fuller life in 46 years than most men do in 80. But that only makes all the greater our loss of the years he was denied.

How, then, will history judge him? It is too early to say. I am too close to say. But history will surely record that his achievements exceeded his years.

In less than three years he presided over a new era in American race relations, a new era in American-Soviet relations, a new era in our Latin American relations, a new era in fiscal and economic policy and a new era in space exploration.

His presidency helped launch the longest and strongest period of economic expansion in our peacetime history, the largest and swiftest buildup of our defensive strength in peacetime history, and new and enlarged roles for the federal government in higher education, mental affliction, civil rights and the conservation of human and natural resources.

Some moves were dramatic, such as the Cuban missile crisis and the Test Ban Treaty and the Peace Corps and the Alliance for Progress.

Some were small day-by-day efforts on Berlin or Southeast Asia, where no real progress could be claimed, or on school dropouts or national parks.

Some were simply holding our own—no nation slipped into the Communist orbit, no nuclear war raised havoc on our planet, no new recession set back our economy.

But generally Kennedy was not content to hold his own. His efforts were devoted to turning the country around, starting it in new directions, getting it moving again.

"He believed," said his wife, "that one man can make a difference and that every man should try."

He left the nation a whole new set of basic premises—on freedom now instead of someday for the American Negro, on dampening down instead of "winning" the cold war, on the unmakability instead of the inevitability of nuclear war, on cutting taxes in times of deficit, on battling poverty in times of prosperity.

For the most part, on Nov. 22, these problems had not been solved and these projects had not been completed. Even most of those completed will impress historians a generation from now only if this generation makes the most of them.

But I suspect that history will remember John Kennedy for what he started as well as for what he completed. The forces he released in this world will be felt for generations to come.

People will remember not only what he did but what he stood for—and this, too, may help the historians assess his presidency.

He stood for excellence in an era of indifference, for hope in an era of doubt, for placing public service ahead of private interests, for reconciliation between East and West, black and white, labor and management. He had confidence in man and gave men confidence in the future.

It will not be easy for historians to compare John Kennedy with his predecessors and successors, for he was unique in his imprint upon the office:

The first from the Catholic faith.

The first to be elected at so young an age.

The first to take office in an age of mutual nuclear capabilities.

The first to reach literally for the moon and beyond.

The first to prevent a new recession or inflation in modern peacetime.

The first to pronounce that all racial segregation and discrimination must be abolished as a matter of right.

The first to meet our adversaries in a potentially nuclear confrontation.

The first to take a solid step toward nuclear arms control.

And the first to die at so young an age.

Pulitzer Prize And the Presidency

In battle he became a hero. In literature he won a Pulitzer Prize. In politics he reached the presidency.

His inaugural, his wife, his children, his policies, his conduct of crises, all reflected his pursuit of excellence.

History and posterity must decide. Customarily they reserve the mantle of greatness for those who win great wars, not those who prevent them.

But in my unobjective view I think it will be difficult to measure John Kennedy by any ordinary historical yardstick. For he was an extraordinary man, an extraordinary politician and an extraordinary President.

Just as no chart on the history of weapons could accurately reflect the advent of the atom, so it is my belief that no scale of good and bad presidents can rate John Fitzgerald Kennedy. Without demeaning any of the great men who have held the presidency in this century, I do not see how John Kennedy could be ranked below any one of them.

His life, not his death, created his greatness. In November, 1963, some saw it for the first time. Others realized that they had too casually accepted it. Others mourned that they had not previously admitted it to themselves.

But the greatness was there, and it may well loom even larger as the passage of years lends perspective.

One of the doctors at the Parkland Hospital in Dallas, observing John Kennedy's six-foot frame on the operating table, was later heard to remark: "I had never seen the President before. He was a big man, bigger than I thought."

He was a big man—much bigger than anyone thought—and all of us are better for having lived in the days of Kennedy.

The Author

Ted Sorensen was 24 when he joined the staff of 35-year-old Sen. John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts in 1953 as administrative assistant.

A Unitarian from a middle-income family in Lincoln, Neb., and holder of a law degree from the University of Nebraska, he had little in common with his new boss in terms of background and experience.

Yet in the 11 years that followed he became almost a part of Kennedy—in some respects he was in fact the "alter ego" some called him.

Sorensen knew the senator, the candidate, the President as no one else knew him throughout his entire political life. Appointed special counsel to the President after Kennedy's election in 1960, he was on the inside of every decision and every crisis.

A MESSAGE FROM THE AUTHOR

This book is not a neutral account. An impassioned participant cannot be an objective observer.

Having formed a strong attachment for John Kennedy, I cannot now pretend an attitude of complete detachment. Having devoted nearly 11 years to advancing his interests and explaining his views, I cannot now cloak my partisanship as disinterested scholarship.

This book, let it be clear at the outset, praises John Kennedy and what he has done, not merely out of loyalty and affection, but out of deep pride and conviction.

Nevertheless he both deserves and would have desired something better than a portrait that painted him as more herculean than human. In life he did not want his counsel to be a courtier, and in death he would not want his biography confined to eulogies.

Making no claims of omniscience or infallibility, he freely admitted imperfections and ignorance in many areas. He credited luck with many of his achievements.

This book does not purport to be a full-scale biography of John Kennedy or a comprehensive history of his era. Yet it is more than a personal memoir.

I have attempted to put into context and perspective my observations and association with an extraordinary man during an extraordinary period, relying primarily on what I know rather than on what others have written.

I have not interviewed those whose memories may have been shaded by subsequent events, but have depended principally on my files and recollections—for which there can be no footnotes.

As a result, in addition to certain facts omitted for reasons of security or propriety, those episodes in John Kennedy's life in which I did not participate—including all that took place before 1953 and many thereafter—are not reported here in intimate detail.

I do not claim that those included were necessarily the most important, only that none has been deliberately excluded and that the real John Kennedy can be more clearly sketched through first-hand recollections.

This is a book, moreover, about one man—not his family, his friends or his foes, not Washington or the world he inhabited, and those in search or need of further facts on these subjects will find them here only as they pertain to John Kennedy.

If some passages seem politically partisan, it is because he was a Democrat and proud of it. My purpose is neither to condemn nor condone the actions of others, nor to substitute my judgment for my subject's. My only obligation is to the truth about Kennedy.

Historical truths, to be sure, are rarely the object of unanimity. Recollections differ, opinions differ, even the same facts appear different to different people.

John Kennedy's own role will be recalled in wholly different fashion, I am certain, by those in different relationships with him. To the politicians, he was first and last a politician. To the intellectuals, his qualities of mind were most memorable. Differing traits and trade-marks are recalled by his friends and by his family.

Most regrettable, in my view, are those memorials and tributes which speak more of his style than of his substance. The Kennedy style was special—the grace, the wit, the elegance, the youthful looks will rightly long be remembered.

But what mattered most to him, and what in my opinion will matter most to history, was the substance—the strength of his ideas and ideals, his courage and judgment. These were the pith and purpose of his presidency, of which style was but an overtone.

I would be the last to diminish the value of his speeches. But their significance lay not in the splendor of their rhetoric but in the principles and policies they conveyed.

(OSWALD)

WASHINGTON--A MEMBER OF THE WARREN COMMISSION HAS SUGGESTED THAT LEE HARVEY OSWALD MAY HAVE KILLED PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY TO IMPRESS HIS WIFE, MARINA.

MRS. OSWALD SPURNED HIM THE DAY BEFORE THE ASSASSINATION.

THE POSSIBILITY WAS RAISED IN A BOOK BY REP. GERALD P. FORD, R-MICH., THE HOUSE REPUBLICAN LEADER AND A MEMBER OF THE PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION WHICH INVESTIGATED THE ASSASSINATION.

IN "PORTRAIT OF THE ASSASSIN" (SIMON & SHUSTER), GOING ON THE MARKET THIS WEEK, FORD SAID THAT "IN ALL LIKELIHOOD, HISTORY WILL NEVER BE ABLE TO JUDGE" THE CAUSE OF OSWALD'S DECISION TO ASSASSINATE KENNEDY.

HE PRESENTS A CRITICAL VIEW OF MARINA BY WEAVING TOGETHER SELECTED TESTIMONY FROM THE 26 VOLUMES COMPILED BY THE COMMISSION.

FORD CITES MRS. OSWALD'S TESTIMONY BEFORE THE COMMISSION AS HAVING A POSSIBLE BEARING ON OSWALD'S FATEFUL DECISION.

OSWALD HAD RETURNED FROM MEXICO CITY WHERE HE HAD BEEN REFUSED PERMISSION TO GO TO COMMUNIST CUBA. MARINA HAD BEEN LIVING WITH MRS. RUTH PAINE IN A DALLAS SUBURB WHILE OSWALD LIVED ALONE IN A ROOMING HOUSE AND WORKED AT THE TEXAS SCHOOLBOOK DEPOSITORY.

UNEXPECTED, OSWALD SHOWED UP AT THE PAINE HOME TO PLEAD WITH MARINA TO LIVE WITH HIM ONCE AGAIN. IT WAS NOV. 21--THE EVE OF THE ASSASSINATION. MARINA SAID:

"ON THAT DAY, HE SUGGESTED THAT WE RENT AN APARTMENT IN DALLAS. HE SAID HE WAS TIRED OF LIVING ALONE AND PERHAPS THE REASON FOR MY NOT TALKING TO HIM, FOR MY BEING SO ANGRY WAS THAT WE WERE NOT LIVING TOGETHER.

"THAT IF I WANT TO, HE WOULD RENT AN APARTMENT IN DALLAS TOMORROW. HE REPEATED THIS NOT ONCE BUT SEVERAL TIMES, BUT I REFUSED.

"I WASN'T REALLY VERY ANGRY. I, OF COURSE, WANTED TO MAKE UP WITH HIM. BUT I GAVE THE APPEARANCE OF BEING VERY ANGRY. I WAS SMILING INSIDE, BUT I HAD A SERIOUS EXPRESSION ON MY FACE."

WHEN OSWALD WENT TO BED THAT NIGHT, MARINA SAID, "HE WAS VERY UPSET."

FORD NOTED THAT ON THE MORNING OF THE 21ST, OSWALD HAD TOLD A CO-WORKER THAT HE HAD TO GO TO THE PAINE HOME TO GET "CURTAIN RODS"--A COVER-UP FOR THE PACKAGE CONTAINING HIS RIFLE.

"HE COULD HAVE MADE UP HIS MIND TO SHOOT THE PRESIDENT REGARDLESS OF THE OUTCOME OF HIS QUARREL WITH MARINA, OR HE COULD HAVE LEFT THE RIFLE IN THE GARAGE AND SIMPLY SAID THE CURTAIN RODS WOULD NOT WORK IN HIS ROOM," FORD SAID.

"THAT HE WAS SENSITIVE, HOWEVER, TO MARINA'S REFUSAL TO TAKE AN APARTMENT WITH HIM THERE CAN BE NO QUESTION."

BUT FORD SAID IT WOULD BE IMPOSSIBLE TO DETERMINE FOR SURE "THAT HER REJECTION OF HIS OFFER TO COME BACK WOULD MAKE THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE DECISION TO KILL OR NOT TO KILL."

BUT FORD LEAVES NO DOUBT THAT MARINA ADDED TO THE FRUSTRATIONS THAT FACED OSWALD:

"MARINA WAS CONTINOUSLY MAKING FUN OF HIM. IN THE MARINE CORPS HE HAD BEEN NICKNAMED 'OZZIE RABBIT.' SHE FREQUENTLY MADE THE UNFORTUNATE MISTAKE OF SAYING 'OH, YOU'RE A BRAVE RABBIT'--A RUSSIAN EXPRESSION THAT GOADED HIM TO FURY. SHE BELITTLED AND ANTAGONIZED HIM AT EVERY TURN."

FORD NOTED TESTIMONY FROM SEVERAL PERSONS WHICH SHOWED MARINA CONSTANTLY NEEDLING OSWALD FOR THINGS HE COULDN'T AFFORD--A CAR, A BETTER APARTMENT, MORE DRESSES. SHE DID IT AGAIN THE DAY BEFORE THE ASSASSINATION, INSISTING THAT HE BUY HER A WASHING MACHINE BEFORE THEY WOULD LIVE TOGETHER, FORD SAID.

FIGHTING AND BICKERING IN THE OSWALD HOME SEEMED TO PRECEDE OSWALD'S PLANS TO KILL GEN. EDWIN A. WALKER AND FORMER VICE PRESIDENT RICHARD M. NIXON IN THE MONTHS BEFORE KENNEDY WAS ASSASSINATED.

FORD SAID THE NIXON INCIDENT "WOULD SEEM TO ADD A CONSIDERABLE WEIGHT TO THE STRONG EVIDENCE THAT LEE OSWALD'S MIND TURNED TO MURDER WHENEVER HE WANTED TO IMPRESS MARINA WITH HIS STRENGTH."

HELPING FORD WRITE THE BOOK WAS JOHN R. STILES, A LONG-TIME FRIEND AND A WARREN COMMISSION STAFF WORKER. THE BOOK CONTAINS VERY LITTLE "INSIDE" INFORMATION ON THE COMMISSION ITSELF.

FORD DOES NOT REVEAL ANY NEW FACTS SURROUNDING THE ASSASSINATION, BUT HAS MERELY WOVEN HIS INTERPRETATIONS INTO THE TESTIMONY OF SOME OF THE 552 WITNESSES WHO APPEARED BEFORE THE COMMISSION.

'STRONG EVIDENCE'

Did Lee Oswald Kill To 'Impress' Wife?

WASHINGTON, June 10 (UPI).—There is strong evidence that Lee Harvey Oswald's mind turned to thoughts of murder whenever he wanted to impress his Russian-born wife Marina.

This may have resulted in his fateful decision to assassinate President John F. Kennedy.

These possibilities were raised in a book by Gerald R. Ford (R.-Mich.), House Republican leader and a member of the Presidential commission which investigated the assassination.

CRITICAL OF WIFE

In "Portrait of the Assassin," going on the market this week, Rep. Ford said that 'in all likelihood, history will never be able to judge" the cause of Oswald's decision to assassinate Mr Kennedy.

He presents a critical view of Marina and cites Mrs. Oswald's testimony before the commission as having a possible bearing on Oswald's fateful decision.

Oswald had returned from Mexico City where he had been refused permission to go to Communist Cuba. Marina had been living with Mrs. Ruth Paine in a Dallas suburb while Oswald lived alone in a rooming house and worked at the Texas Schoolbook Depository.

RECONCILIATION PLEA

Oswald suddenly appeared at the Paine home to plead with Marina to live with him once again. It was Nov. 21—the eve of the assassination. Marina said:

"On that day, he suggested that we rent an apartment in Dallas. He said he was tired of living alone and perhaps the reason for my not talking to him, for my being so angry was that we were not living together.

"That if I want to, he would rent an apartment in Dallas tomorrow. He repeated this not once but several times, but I refused.

"I wasn't really very angry. I, of course, wanted to make up with him. But I gave the appearance of being very angry. I was smiling inside, but I had a serious expression on my face."

When Oswald went to bed that night, Marina said, "he was very upset."

Rep. Ford said it ~~would be~~ impossible to determine for sure "that her rejection of his offer to come back would make the difference between the decision to kill or not to kill."

But Rep. Ford leaves no doubt that Marina added to the frustrations that faced Oswald.

Rep. Ford noted testimony from several persons which showed Marina constantly needling Oswald for things he couldn't afford—a car, a better apartment, more dresses.

DEMANDED WASHER

She did it again the day before the assassination, insisting that he buy her a washing machine before they would live together, Rep. Ford said.

Fighting and bickering in the Oswald home seemed to precede Oswald's plans to kill Gen. Edwin A. Walker and former Vice President Richard M. Nixon in the months before Mr. Kennedy was assassinated.

Rep. Ford said the Nixon incident "would seem to add a considerable weight to the strong evidence that Lee Oswald's mind turned to murder whenever he wanted to impress Marina with his strength."

WASHINGTON, MAY 17 (UPI)--FBI DIRECTOR J. EDGAR HOOVER SAYS LEE HARVEY OSWALD NEVER WOULD HAVE BEEN MURDERED HAD THERE BEEN A FEDERAL LAW COVERING ATTACKS UPON THE PRESIDENT OR VICE PRESIDENT.

IN TESTIMONY BEFORE A HOUSE APPROPRIATIONS SUBCOMMITTEE MADE PUBLIC TODAY, HOOVER ENDORSED LEGISLATION MAKING ASSAULTS AGAINST TOP OFFICIALS A FEDERAL OFFENSE.

HE SAID HAD SUCH A LAW BEEN IN EFFECT NOV. 22, 1963, PRESIDENT KENNEDY'S ALLEGED ASSASSIN WOULD HAVE LIVED TO STAND TRIAL INSTEAD OF BEING SHOT TO DEATH WHILE IN THE CUSTODY OF DALLAS, TEX., POLICE.

"IF IT HAD BEEN A FEDERAL VIOLATION, JURISDICTION WOULD HAVE BEEN UNDER THE SECRET SERVICE OR THE FBI AND THE EPISODE IN DALLAS FOLLOWING THE ASSASSINATION WOULD NEVER HAVE OCCURRED," HOOVER SAID.

HOOVER TOLD THE SUBCOMMITTEE THAT THE FBI AND THE SECRET SERVICE HAVE ENJOYED "HARMONIOUS" RELATIONS.

HE NOTED THAT THE FBI WAS CALLED UPON TO HELP THE SECRET SERVICE PROTECT THE PRESIDENT IN THE AFTERMATH OF THE KENNEDY MURDER. HIS AGENCY HAD FURNISHED A TOTAL OF 534 AGENTS ON 74 OCCASIONS IN THE YEAR FOLLOWING THE ASSASSINATION, HOOVER SAID.

HOOVER ALSO SUBMITTED TO THE COMMITTEE A STATEMENT ENTITLED "STATE DEPARTMENT REPORT ON BASIS OF WHICH I CHARACTERIZED OSWALD AS A 'THOROUGHLY SAFE RISK.'"

THE STATEMENT RECOUNTED HOOVER'S TESTIMONY BEFORE THE WARREN COMMISSION IN WHICH HE SAID A STATE DEPARTMENT REPORT ON OSWALD AT THE TIME OSWALD APPLIED FOR PERMISSION TO RETURN TO THE UNITED STATES FROM RUSSIA INDICATED THAT OSWALD WAS NOT CONSIDERED A RISK.

HOOVER QUOTED THE REPORT OF THE STATE DEPARTMENT OFFICIAL WHO INTERVIEWED OSWALD IN 1961 AND NOTED THAT THE DEPARTMENT HAD ISSUED HIM A NEW PASSPORT AS LATE AS JUNE OF 1963.

Couldn't Bar Oswald, Says State Dept.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The State Department had no authority to prevent Lee Harvey Oswald from leaving Russia and returning to the United States, congressional testimony revealed Sunday.

Oswald, the accused assassin of President John F. Kennedy, went to Russia in 1959, turned in his passport to the U.S. Embassy in 1961 but was granted permission to return in 1962.

Undersecretary of State William J. Crockett said the department could only decide the legal question of whether Oswald was still an American citizen. It decided he was.

Crockett, according to the transcript of a House Appropriations subcommittee hearing, was asked about FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover's claim that a State Department document labeled Oswald as a "thoroughly safe risk." The department has denied the claim.

"I would like it specifically understood that the State Department does not have the authority to investigate any American citizen for entry into the United States on security, emotional health or anything else," Crockett told the subcommittee.

"Do you think it might be well if there were legislation introduced in this field?" asked Rep. John M. Slack Jr., D-W. Va.

"I do not know," Crockett said. "It might well be. I would just like to have it understood no State Department person was derelict in his duty in this case because he had no authority, no jurisdiction or responsibility in any of these areas."

The possibility of new laws was also discussed by Abba B. Schwartz, administrator of the department's Bureau of Security and Consular Affairs.

Schwartz said a State Department study group was studying the entire Oswald case to see if legislation should be recommended to Congress.

Fulbright Urges Greater Effort For Improvement at Home

BLACKSBURG, Va.—Sen. J. W. Fulbright criticized the premise yesterday that "the United States has a vital interest in just about every country in the world," and said "the time has come to divert some portion of our material and intellectual energies from the challenges of communism abroad to the challenge of improvement at home."

The chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee told an audience at Virginia Polytechnic Institute that "there is everything wrong with a crash program aimed at landing on the Moon by 1970 at a cost of $20 billion to $30 billion for the sole purpose of getting there ahead of the Russians."

Fulbright praised President Johnson's $1.3 billion education bill and said the United States should begin "creative competition" with Russia to see who can build the stronger society.

Report in Russian

Plans for mass distribution in the Soviet Union of a Russian translation of the Warren Report on the assassination of President Kennedy have been scrapped by the United States Government. Officials of the U.S. Information Agency said a limited number of copies would be made available through the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, but not the 10,000 copies of the translation of the 888-page document originally planned in an attempt to clarify for Russians that Mr. Kennedy was killed by a lone assassin.

Airline Strike

NEW YORK—Talks aimed at settling the Pan American Airways strike made no progress, a Federal mediator reported. Airline operations were suspended Wednesday, marooning, about 1000 passengers in San Juan and 500 in Hawaii, as the line's 1400 pilots walked out after efforts to reach a new contract failed.

Lawyers Needed

BILOXI—The board of regents of the American College of Trial Lawyers announced a four-point program to meet what is called a critical need. The program includes a $625,000 fund for loans to promising students in 135 law schools, preparation of a model course on advocacy for law schools and continued sponsorship of the National Moot Court Competition.

Judges and Bribes

OKLAHOMA CITY—A special Bar Association investigating committee agreed unanimously that there is evidence to support a charge of accepting a bribe against former State Supreme Court Justice Earl Welch, but disagreed on the evidence in a similar charge against impeached Justice N. B. Johnson.

The Association immediately filed disbarment proceedings against Johnson, however, charging "professional misconduct." Welch and Johnson have been accused of sharing a $150,000 bribe in an appeal of a tax case.

Old Age Care

CHICAGO—The President of the American Medical Association said a recently completed public opinion survey shows the people favor limiting a Government program of health care for the elderly to those who need financial help in line with the Association's eldercare plan instead of the President's medicare proposal. Dr. Donovan F. Ward said the poll by Opinion Research Institute, Inc., of Princeton, N.J., revealed that 74 per cent of the people favor eldercare while 14 per cent prefer medicare and 12 per cent have no opinion.

Veterans' Problem

Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz said military officers and enlisted men are having trouble finding well-paying jobs when they retire after 20 years' service. Wirtz reported on a study of 2000 officers and enlisted men that showed 20 per cent were unemployed six months after they left the service.

Wirtz said only 20 per cent of the enlisted men and one-third the officers lined up jobs before they left the military. The difficulty these men have finding work, he said, results in a waste of highly trained manpower.

Voice From Hanoi?

MIAMI—A Cuban exile group said Fidel Castro is sending Robert Williams to North Viet-Nam to broadcast propaganda to U.S. Williams, from North Carolina, has been making pro-Castro, anti-American broadcasts from Havana since 1963. His program, "Radio Free Dixie," was aimed at the Negro population in the Southern states.

Tax Exemption

President Johnson signed an order giving Japan a limited exemption from the interest equalization tax, which is designed to improve the U.S. balance of payments by discouraging the sale of foreign securities in America. Under the order, new securities issued or guaranteed by the government of Japan, up to $100 million annually, will be exempt from the tax.

Warren Report Allocations At $1 Million

By the Associated Press

The government has allocated $1 million to date for the investigation and report on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

This was the figure given by Elmer B. Staats, deputy director of the Bureau of the Budget, in testimony before the House Appropriations Committee earlier this month which was made public yesterday.

Out of this amount, Staats said, there still are "bills to be paid, records to be disposed of — in effect, winding up the affairs of the Warren Commission."

The commission, headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, was created Nov. 29, 1963, seven days after the assassination, and made its report Sept. 24, 1964.

Travel, Editing Expense

The costs include travel expenses of the commission and witnesses, office rent, salaries for personnel, supplies and equipment and preparing for publication the 888-page report and 26 volumes of hearings.

"Of course, the editing job of this was an extremely expensive job, and there was much travel involved for the commission itself, and great numbers of witnesses," Staats said.

Copies of the report are being sold by the Government Printing Office — sales of the report and hearings now total some $545,000. Any profit made from the sales will be returned to the U.S. Treasury.

The offices of the commission, in a building near the Capitol, were closed down last December and all the records turned over to the National Archives. The Budget Bureau is handling the bill cleanup.

From Emergency Fund

Costs of the commission have been paid out of the emergency fund of the President, an established fund which has been $1 million a year for some years.

Staats said that $600,000 out of the fund was allocated to the commission in 1964 and $400,000 for this year.

"I do not have a current report as to how much of the $400,000 has actually been spent," he said.

The commission had a general counsel and 14 assistant counsels. It also had the assistance of personnel from other federal agencies, including lawyers from the Department of Justice and agents of the Internal Revenue Service. It took the testimony of 552 witnesses.

PLOT ON KENNEDY STILL SUSPECTED

Theory Persists in Europe Despite Warren Report

Special to The New York Times

LONDON, March 13 — The suspicion of conspiracy in President Kennedy's assassination persists in Europe, even as the whole subject fades out of current attention and into history.

Only in Britain can it be said with any assurance that the Warren Commission's report on the assassination has substantially dispelled doubts. Elsewhere, the report seems to have left most prejudices unaffected.

These are the findings of New York Times correspondents asked to appraise local views 15 months after the tragedy in Dallas.

As would be expected, the issue of how the assassination came about has largely dropped out of conversation. Public charges of conspiracy have just about ceased.

Nevertheless, the general report is that underlying opinions have altered little. If people are questioned about the President's death, many will still respond that there must have been a conspiracy of some kind.

Few Convinced in Rome

"Although discussion of the assassination has considerably died down, the feeling remains that one day the full truth may be known. Few Italians are really convinced that there is no more to the story than what was published in the Warren report."

From Bonn, a correspondent reported that the Warren Commission volume had been a best-seller but that it "did little to dispel the prevalent notion that the assassin was probably the instrument of a powerful organization of the radical left or right."

"The report came too late to to rekindle public debate," the Bonn writer added. "There was some reaction, generally critical, from the educated minority, but the people as a whole had already ceased to wrack their brains about the tragedy."

The Paris report was that the subject had just about dropped from sight and that the Communists, who had kept interest alive for some time with charges of rightist conspiracy, had turned to other topics.

The Warren Report was not available in Moscow, and the typical Soviet citizen knows nothing about it. The Soviet Press printed a brief summary of its findings and then quoted some skeptical comments from the West.

An Impact in Britain

In Britain, the conspiracy theories never achieved the widespread acceptance that they had on the Continent. And there are indications that, among the informed few who read it, the Warren Report did have an impact.

A major effort to attack the report was made by Prof. H. R. Trevor - Roper of Oxford. Answering articles exploded all his points, however, and he has not been heard from recently.

This week's New Statesman carries a lengthy article on the report by Lord Devlin, one of th most respected of English judges, now retired. The piece appeared in the United States in The Atlantic Monthly.

Lord Devlin, surveying the critics, says the average reader of the report need not worry that he has not studied it closely enough "if this is the best criticism that can be produced by those who have spared neither time nor money in the dissection of the report."

"It is no doubt distressing to the logical mind," Lord Devlin writes, "when after an immense investigation two extraordinary murders occurring in the course of the same story are explained only as disconnected and senseless actions.

"But life is often more distressing than logical. And what is the alternative? Perhaps one day the critics will produce one. If they can suggest one that is even faintly credible, they will deserve more public attention than they are likely to get by making charges of suppression that are more than faintly ridiculous."

Findings Again Attacked

A second and more detailed attack by Vincent J. Salandria of Philadelphia on the Warren Commission's findings that only one assassin was involved in the shooting of President Kennedy is published in the current issue of Liberation, an antiwar monthly that one of its editors has described as "non-Communist."

Mr. Salandria, a lawyer and consultant to the American Civil Liberties Union, says in the 18,000-word article:

"We maintain that the evidence gathered by the Warren Commission certainly indicates the existence of one entry wound in front of the President's neck and a separate wound in his back. To avoid this obvious conclusion the Warren Commission appears to have involved itself wittingly or unwittingly in fabrication and withholding of vital evidence."

To bolster his original contention, made in the January issue of the magazine, that the bullets that killed President Kennedy and wounded Gov. John B. Connally Jr. of Texas ha come from at least two directions and therefore showed a conspiracy, Mr. Salandria quotes at length from the testimony of physicians and a nurse who examined President Kennedy's wounds at Parkland Hospital in Dallas and the testimony of a Secret Service agent, Glen A. Bennett, who had been riding in the car behind the President's.

Mr. Salandria says that the ~~Lane~~ Recording Went to Warren Group in July

A TRANSCRIPT of a telephone conversation that New York attorney Mark Lane says he had with a witness to the shooting of Dallas Policeman J. D. Tippit, is buried deep in one of the volumes of the hearings before the Warren Commission.

Lane has used a recording of the conversation to argue that it was not Lee Harvey Oswald who killed Tippit a few minutes after President Kennedy was assassinated because the witness, Helen Markham, said that the killer had "somewhat bushy" hair. The transcript shows that Mrs. Markham said the killer's hair was "a little bit bushy" in referring to the fact that it was uncombed.

Lane refused to turn the recording over to the Warren Commission in both his appearances before it as a witness, but he submitted it last July after his second appearance. The Washington Post incorrectly reported on Jan. 17 that Lane refused to turn over the recording.

THE SUGGESTED TRIAL: You simply agree to buy three Club Selections or Alternates within the next twelve months, choosing them from among at least 200 that will be made available during that period

BOOK-DIVIDENDS: A home library-building system every American book-reading family should know about

THE PURPOSE of this suggested trial is to have you discover by actual experience the various advantages of Club membership, and particularly the most recent one: the extraordinary opportunity members now have to acquire a well-rounded library at little cost—through the Club's unique Book-Dividend system. The two-volume set you will receive may be considered "advance Book-Dividends," earned by the purchase of the books you engage to buy later. After the trial membership, if you decide to continue, with every single Selection or Alternate you buy you will receive a Book-Dividend Certificate which—together with a trifling sum—can be redeemed for your choice of other fine library volumes or multi-volume sets. At present more than 100 different works are available for this purpose and most of them can be obtained for only one Certificate plus $1.00 or $1.50—occasionally more for an unusually expensive volume. Last year the savings enjoyed by members on these Book-Dividends—which are always in original publishers' editions—averaged 78% below their retail prices.

✱ HOW CAN THIS BE DONE? The answer to this natural question is that the Book-Dividend system is based somewhat on the pattern of profit-sharing consumer cooperatives. A portion of the amount members pay for the books they buy is accumulated and invested in entire editions of valuable books and sets through special contractual arrangements made with the publishers in each case. These are the Club's Book-Dividends and since the inauguration of the system more than $300,000,000 worth of books (retail value) has been earned and received by Book-of-the-Month Club members through this unique member-profit-sharing plan.

✱ GOOD SENSE: STOP MISSING BOOKS YOU INTEND TO READ • There are three other extremely important benefits of membership that this suggested experimental subscription will demonstrate. First, members have a very wide choice among currently published and widely discussed books—at least 200 a year; you will quickly find that the books you most want to read are usually either Club Selections or Alternates. Second, the Club's prices for these books average 20% below retail prices—a continuing economy over and above Book-Dividend savings. Finally, and perhaps most important—something that has been demonstrated in hundreds of thousands of book-reading families over almost forty years—the Club's unique method of operation insures you against missing the new books you intend to read but so often fail to through sheer oversight or overbusyness. That alone, without the immense amount of money saved in building your library, makes the suggested trial good sense.

By Morton Mintz
Washington Post Staff Writer

WHEN THE Nobel Prize-winning poet T. S. Eliot died in London Jan. 4, the obituaries recalled two of his most memorable lines: "This is the way the world ends/not with a bang but a whimper."

The same lines might have been recalled a day earlier when the London Sunday Times carried its second article by Prof. Hugh Trevor-Roper, the historian and author of "The Last Days of Hitler," on the Warren Commission Report on the assassination of President Kennedy.

The 3500-word first article, published Dec. 13, created a bang. At the top of the page was the banner, "KENNEDY MURDER INQUIRY IS SUSPECT." Under it, in large type, was this: "HUGH TREVOR-ROPER, Regius Professor of Modern History at Oxford, who cables this astonishing report from America, finds that suppressed police and medical evidence eluded the Warren Commission."

During the next three weeks, the article brought the Professor under sharp attack in the Sunday Times and in other British papers as well. Then his second article appeared. It gave the Sunday Times's readers less bang for eight pence; in fact, it sounded almost like a whimper.

The headlines caught the change in tone:

"THE WARREN REPORT CONTROVERSY: VITAL QUESTIONS STILL UNANSWERED/How was the President shot?/Did Oswald have accomplices?/Hugh Trevor-Roper replies."

Danger of Infection

THE BANG of the first article was largely attributable to the distinction of its author. Here was no lightweight, no witch-hunter, no opportunist, no great man grown old and tired—none of these.

That was what worried the Professor's fellow Oxonian, John H. Sparrow, Warden of All Souls College. He termed it "deplorable that such a document should carry the authority of the Professor's name . . . many who have read neither the Report nor his article will be infected by the atmosphere that it creates and conclude, 'There must be something fishy somewhere if Prof. Trevor-Roper says so.'"

Those who did read the article found the brilliant 50-year-old Professor saying that the Report contained "nothing . . . [that] can be taken on trust," that it was "inadmissible" and "suspect" and that it was "slovenly" and no more authoritative "than the tendentious and defective police reports out of which it is compiled."

He was saying that the Commission headed by the Chief Justice of the United States had "never" subjected the evidence it had received from police or FBI sources "to proper legal or intellectual tests," that it had "never" gone beyond that evidence and that it had "never" insisted upon "clear meaning or clear answers."

He was saying that the Commission "has not established the facts; behind a smokescreen of often irrelevant material, it has accepted impermissible axioms, constructed invalid arguments and failed to ask elementary and essential questions."

And he was saying that the press in Britain as well as the United States had endorsed the Report "gleefully and faultlessly" and "uncritically," even going so far as to regard it as "a sacred text not to be questioned by the profane." The Professor lamented "a failure of the critical spirit of journalism."

Among the alchemists in the transmutation of a bang into a whimper were the Sunday Times's own Washington correspondent, Henry Brandon; Godfrey Hodgson, Washington correspondent of the London Observer, and Sparrow.

In a letter to the editor published Dec. 27 by the Sunday Times, Brandon said: "Trevor-Roper tried his own hand at assassination—the character assassination of the Warren Commission."

Hodgson wrote in the Observer: "The impressive quality of the Commission's report is not one whit impaired by Prof. Trevor-Roper's assault on its handling of the inquiry. The Commission may be faulted; no doubt future historians and lawyers may be able to expose weak links in the massive documentation of a mammoth inquiry. But the Commission cannot be faulted on any of the grounds cited by the Professor."

Oxford Warden Sparrow wrote a devastating response to Trevor-Roper in the Sunday Times, "not in order to pick a quarrel with a colleague for whose intellect and ability I have the greatest admiration, and with whom I am (and hope to remain) on the friendliest terms, but because I think that he has done to the Report and its authors an injustice that should be exposed without delay.

". . . His account of it seems to me a travesty, so marred by bias and spotted with inaccuracies that it is hard to believe that it was written by the honest and intelligent man that he is . . .

"Nothing is easier to create than an atmosphere of suspicion, nothing—so long as the crackpots and the credulous continue to abound—more difficult to dispel.

"I think the Report provides overwhelming evidence for the acceptance of its conclusions, that it deals fully and fairly with a complex and confusing story and that it shows no bias and no desire to shirk uncomfortable questions . . . If those who read it judge between Prof. Trevor-Roper and its authors, his structure of sinister and shadowy suspicion will collapse like a pricked balloon."

Editors and reporters also were taken aback on being told that their critical spirit had failed. Well before the Warren Report was issued, several key publications, including the New York Herald Tribune, the New York Times and The Washington Post, assigned reporters to list all of the troubling questions about the assassination and its sequels.

At this newspaper, for example, reporter Laurence Stern prepared almost three single-spaced pages of questions that were circulated among colleagues who were to be involved in covering the Commission Report.

The list was assembled from two primary sources: the "conspiracy theory" books by Thomas Buchanan and Joachim Joesten, which Stern read, and the numerous magazine articles, by Bertrand Russell and others, which I read.

When the Report came out, we looked to see if the questions had been dealt with. Not every question was answered, and not every question that was answered was answered perfectly. But, overwhelmingly, the Commission had explained what had happened, honestly and thoroughly. None of us was left with any serious doubts.

Essentially, this was the attitude of Trevor-Roper's three critics, Brandon, Hodgson and Sparrow. Their detailed analyses (Hodgson repeatedly cited volume, exhibit and page numbers) led them to conclude that the Professor had escalated nit-picking into the stratosphere, had made serious errors (or worse), had been impaled by his own ignorance and, in at least one instance, had revealed a curious double standard.

A Matter of Evidence

THE STANDARD set by Trevor-Roper for the Commission was appropriately lofty. "If I dissent from the findings," he said, "it is not [illegible] cause I prefer speculation to evidence or have a natural tendency toward radicalism: it is because, as a historian, I prefer evidence."

But historian Trevor-Roper seemed to reveal a failure of his critical spirit when he evaluated the evidence of Mark Lane, the New York lawyer who claims that Lee Harvey Oswald was not the killer of President Kennedy. Trevor-Roper said that Lane "has made a series of formidable criticisms of the Report. They are documented, reasoned and, in my opinion, generally conclusive."

On tours of the United States and Europe, Lane has played what is purported to be a tape recording of an interview with Helen Markham of Dallas, a witness to the murder of Patrolman J. D. Tippit less than an hour after the Kennedy assassination.

Last March 4, Lane talked of the interview during his testimony before the Commission. On July 3, when he appeared again, the Commission reopened the matter by asking Lane if he had a copy of the recording. Lane said he did, but refused to say who made it or when it was made. He refused to turn it over to the Commission.

In addition, Mrs Markham told the Commission she had never talked to Lane. The man singled out by Trevor-Roper for praise was told by Chief Justice Earl Warren, "Until you give us the corroboration that you say you have, we have every reason to doubt the truthfulness of what you have told us."

A Disputed Meeting

IN HIS MARCH testimony, Lane also said he had been told that several days before the assassination, Patrolman Tippit, Jack Ruby, the killer of Oswald, and Bernard Weissman, the promoter of an anti-Kennedy advertisement published in the Dallas Morning News the day of the President's murder, had met for more than two hours in Ruby's Carousel Club. The Commission's Report said:

"Lane declined to state the name of his informant but said that he would attempt to obtain his informant's permission to reveal his name. On July 2, 1964, after repeated requests by the Commission that he disclose the name of his informant, Lane testified a second time concerning this matter but declined to reveal the information, stating as his reason that he had promised the individual that his name would not be revealed without his permission.

"Lane also made this allegation during a radio appearance, whereupon Weissman twice demanded that Lane reveal the name of the informant. As of the date of this report Lane has . . . offered no evidence to support his allegation. The Commission has investigated the allegation of a Weissman-Ruby-Tippit meeting and has found no evidence that such a meeting took place anywhere at any time . . . No employe of the Carousel Club has any knowledge of the meeting described by Lane. Ruby and Weissman both deny that such a meeting occurred, and Officer Tippit's widow has no knowledge that her late husband ever went to the Carousel Club."

'Bricks of Straw'

IN HIS FIRST article, Trevor-Roper concentrated "on a few central facts which, to me, render the whole report suspect." One of the "central facts" involved the basis for the attempted arrest of Oswald by Officer Tippit (mispelled "Tippett" by the Professor). The second concerned the absence of a stenographic or tape recording of the interrogation of Oswald.

The third concerned the medical evidence about the President's wounds. The fourth related to the paper bag in which Oswald carried the murder rifle into the Texas Book Depository Building. The fifth dealt with the evidence about how Jack Ruby gained access to the basement of Dallas Police Headquarters, where he shot Oswald.

Each of the "central facts"—which Henry Brandon called "really bricks of straw"—was thoroughly dissected by Trevor-Roper's press critics. They had no difficulty finding the facts that, as Sparrow put it, made "his structure of sinister and shadowy suspicion . . . collapse like a pricked balloon." Nor, after doing so, did they find it difficult to show that Trevor-Roper's facts were not "central" at all; that even if true, they would not seriously affect the Commission's conclusions.

What they found more difficult or almost impossible to cope with were innuendoes that were never made clear and Trevor-Roper's refusal to subject alternative theories, such as Lane's, to scrutiny while casting unsupported aspersions on the Commission Report.

In the Observer, Hodgson said that the Commission had established "beyond reasonable doubt" that Oswald shot Mr. Kennedy, that Ruby shot Oswald, that both acted from personal motives and that there was no conspiracy. "If Prof. Trevor-Roper disagrees, then surely he should say who else might have been involved," said Hodgson.

It would be pointless to recite here all the lengthy back-and-forth by which Trevor-Roper's case was blown up—pointless because the Professor's reply, in his lengthy second article Jan. 3, was not a bang but a whimper.

The savage descriptions of the Commission and its Report were gone. Yes, he had said that the composition of the Commission was "highly unsatisfactory," but he had meant only "that its members were nearly all busy politicians." No, he "certainly did not wish to gain any ends by innuendo."

Repeatedly, Trevor-Roper reached into the first article for a mitigating qualification, to show that he had been, after all, mild, restrained, reasonable.

There was even one flat-out admission of error in regard to one of those "central facts"—his claim that "police destroyed the real evidence [the paper bag] and substituted their own fabrication." Now he said, "I must eat humble pie . . . I withdraw the statement completely."

At the same time, the destruction of some of his initial charges was ignored, as if the charges had never been made. For example, Trevor-Roper had said on Dec. 13 that the chief pathologist at Bethesda Naval Hospital, Dr. James J. Humes, "signed an affidavit that he had burned all his original notes [on his autopsy on the President's body] and kept no copy."

Hodgson pointed out that the Professor had misquoted a certificate (not a sworn statement) in which the physician had said that he had "destroyed by burning certain preliminary draft notes" relating to the examination of the body—not "all his original notes." The preliminary notes, further, were simply a first draft of the autopsy report that he had already revised.

New 'Arguments'

THERE WAS a new flurry of nit-picking. There was also a set of new arguments put in such a way as to be hard to deal with. Consider the closing lines:

"Not knowing how far we can trust the police evidence, we do not know how fully we have been informed." [Is it possible to answer an innuendo like that?]

"The solid pieces of evidence, which have been arranged in one pattern, may easily, if that is defective, have to be arranged in another. [What does that mean?]

"Meanwhile, precise conclusions are necessarily uncertain. [Is Trevor-Roper saying that after a mammoth investigation, after taking testimony from 550 witnesses of whom more than 400 had no police or FBI connection, after reviewing 26,550 FBI and Secret Service interviews and 3100 FBI and Secret Service reports—that after all this, there are no precise, certain conclusions that can be drawn?]

"We do not know precisely how the President was shot. [Hasn't that been established beyond a reasonable doubt?]

"We do not know whether Oswald had accomplices. [The Commission found no evidence that he had any. Trevor-Roper offers no evidence that he had.]

"We do not know the real motives, or connections, of Ruby. [The lives of no men have been investigated more thoroughly than those of Ruby and Oswald. Their motives and connections are known as well as it is humanly possible to know anyone's.]

"And these, after all, are the essential questions." [Essential whats?]

LAWYER PICTURES TRIAL FOR OSWALD

Doubts if Much of Warren Report Could Be Used

By AUSTIN C. WEHRWEIN

Special to The New York Times

CHICAGO, Jan. 10—Alfredda Scobey, a lawyer who was on the staff of the Warren Commission, has raised the question: If Lee Harvey Oswald had not been murdered, how much of the Warren report could have been used against him in a criminal trial?

Miss Scobey says the report was never intended as a brief for the prosecution, and that although it included the whole picture it is "crammed with facts that would not be admissible on the trial of a criminal case."

Miss Scobey, who has been law assistant with the Georgia Court of Appeals for 16 years, says that the circumstantial evidence against Oswald "is either more cogent or less subject to attack than the direct [evidence]."

Her analysis of the report made by the President's Commission on the Assassination of President John F. Kennedy is in the current American Bar Association Journal.

The commission found Oswald guilty of Mr. Kennedy's slaying in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963. Oswald, who was captured, was slain two days afterward by Jack L. Ruby, a night-club owner who has since been convicted of Oswald's murder.

Had Oswald Lived

Miss Scobey weighs the testimony amassed by the commission from the standpoint of a lawyer who might have defended Oswald, had he lived. Her interest is technical.

There is no Federal law against the assassination of a President. Oswald would have been tried under Texas state law.

A very lucky defense lawyer, Miss Scobey says, might have been able to exclude or impeach the testimony of "a large number of key persons" who added strength to the report.

"This is not to say that what would be left," she declares, "would leave room for a reasonable doubt of Oswald's guilt."

"There first must be deleted the testimony of his wife, Marina," she goes on.

Under Texas law, as is generally the case, a wife may not testify against her husband in a criminal case, Miss Scobey notes.

There are "many facts that appear only in Mrs. Oswald's uncorroborated testimony, Miss Scobey continues. It is extremely doubtful, she says, whether a court would admit in evidence Mrs. Oswald's testimony that related to Oswald's attempt on the life of former Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker on April 10, 1963, and a threat of assault on former Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

Texas law applicable to these instances, Miss Scobey says, follows the general rule that "distinct criminal transactions must tend to connect the defendant with the offense for which he is on trial."

She then lists a series of facts depending upon Mrs. Oswald's testimony—the identification of a blue jacket at the Texas School Book Depository Building as her husband's; the identification of a shirt, threads from which were caught in the assassination rifle; a white jacket found along the reconstructed escape route; a photograph of Oswald with the rifle.

More important, only Mrs. Oswald identified the weapon as the one he owned, Miss Scobey notes. This, she says, is the only eyewitness testimony connecting Oswald with the assassination weapon or definitely identifying the clothing.

Mrs. Oswald, Miss Scobey declares, was the only source of a "wealth of background information" that included facts that provided the basis of the interpretation of Oswald's character on which the "motiveless motive" of the crime depends.

Miss Scobey also raises a question of illegal search and "personal security" in violation of the Fourth and the 14th Amendments of the Constitution.

She makes this point in connection with a police search, without a warrant, of the home where Mrs. Oswald was residing. They discovered the blanket in which the rifle had been wrapped, fibers from which were later identified as being like those found in the abandoned bag beneath the assassination window. Miss Scobey says there would seem to be a strong basis for excluding this evidence.

"The only eyewitness who ever identified him [Oswald] at the window first refused to make positive identification, saying only that Oswald looked like the man he saw," she declares. "Oswald's subsequent departure from the building was reasonably subject to his explanation that with all the commotion he did not think any more work would be done that day."

WARREN FINDINGS AGAIN QUESTIONED

But Trevor-Roper Concedes an Error on One Point

Special to The New York Times

LONDON, Jan. 3 — Hugh Trevor-Roper, the distinguished Oxford history professor who has criticized the Warren Commission's version of the assassination of President Kennedy, answered his own critics today.

In a 2,000-word article in The Sunday Times, he restated his original objections that the commission accepted with too little question material from prosecuteing agencies and did not provide sufficiently for the cross-examination of witnesses.

He said he did not believe that a vast police conspiracy existed. Neither had he found any "positive evidence," however, that Lee Harvey Oswald, the assassin, had brought the murder weapon into the Texas School Book Depository or fired it.

In an earlier article in the same newspaper, the 50-year-old professor cited several "discrepancies" between the report and the evidence published with it, and suggested that the Warren Commission had put up a "smokescreen."

'Inaccuracies' Charged

He was severely taken to task by a number of critics in both the United States and Britain.

In an article published two weeks ago in The Sunday Times, John Sparrow, warden of All Souls College, said his fellow Oxonian's reasoning was "marred by bias and blotted with inaccuracies."

Mr. Sparrow, who was a lawyer for 14 years, wrote that "nothing is easier to create than an atmosphere of suspicion, nothing—so long as the crackpots and the credulous abound—more difficult to dispel."

It was to this attack in particular that Professor Trevor-Roper replied. The Sunday Times, with a circulation of 1.3 million has no relationship with The Times of London.

For the most part he maintained his original criticism, restating "discrepancies," such as between original medical evidence and police theory, and examining the question of motive.

"Why should a Marxist, who expressed admiration for Kennedy, have laid so deep a plot to kill him?" he asked.

One Point Retracted

On one point, though, the professor said he "must eat humble pie." This related to his suggestion that the police had destroyed the paper bag used, according to the commission, to cover the murder weapon when it was brought to the book depository in Dallas, where Oswald worked.

Mr. Sparrow pointed out that the police had not destroyed the bag, but had handed it in, with a replica, to the commission as an exhibit. A captioned photograph of the bag appears on page 132 of the report.

Professor Trevor-Roper, an authority on the 20th and 17th centuries, said he had "neglected the cardinal rule, 'Always check your references,' and must pay the price."

Although the professor wrote in today's article that there was no positive evidence that Oswald had fired the rifle, he said later in the article: "We do not know whether Oswald had accomplices."

Professor Trevor-Roper was a central figure in an academic dispute in 1961, when he tangled with another Oxford historian, A. J. P. Taylor, over the role of Hitler in the origins of World War II.

Article Is Disputed

J. Lee Rankin, who served as counsel for the Warren Commission, said yesterday that "there was no credible evidence" to support a theory that more than three shots had been fired during the assassination of President Kennedy.

Mr. Rankin rebutted the view put forward in a magazine article by Vincent J. Salandria, a Philadelphia lawyer and consultant to the American Civil Liberties Union.

Mr. Salandria, writing in the January issue of Liberation, an antiwar monthly, disputed the idea that a single bullet had hit both President Kennedy and Governor John B. Connally Jr. of Texas. To do this, he contended, the bullet would have had to change direction in mid-air.

"Once we conclude that a separate shot hit Governor Connally," Mr. Salandria wrote, "we are confronted with an extra bullet, which puts the commission theory of just three bullets from one gun into the limbo of historical myth."

Replying to a reporter's questions on Mr. Salandria's article, Mr. Rankin said "there was an alignment" between President Kennedy and Governor Connally, which made it possible for one bullet to hit both men.

The contention that the bullet would have had to change direction to hit both men was "not very reasonable" in light of the evidence presented by the commission, Mr. Rankin said.

Even if the same bullet had not hit both men, he added, the President could have been hit by two bullets and the Governor by one, without requiring the firing of more than three shots.

LAWYER DISPUTES WARREN FINDINGS

Article Says At Least Two Persons Fired at Kennedy

Alleged weaknesses in the Warren Commission Report are cited in a magazine article to dispute the commission's contention that Lee Harvey Oswald was the only person who fired the shots that killed President John F. Kennedy, and wounded Gov. John B. Connally Jr. of Texas.

An article by Vincent J. Salandria, a Philadelphia lawyer and consultant to the American Civil Liberties Union, says at least two persons fired shots and that if they knew of each other's participation they were, contrary to the Warren Commission Report, in conspiracy.

The article is based on a study of the report and a 10-day investigation in Dallas by the lawyer. It appears in the January issue of Liberation, an antiwar monthly that one of its editors calls "non-Communist."

Mr. Salandria argues that the commission is on weak ground in asserting that during the assassination a total of three shots were fired, all of them from the Texas Book Depository Building.

He says that to support this position the commission had to insist that the first shot that hit the President also wounded Mr. Connally.

If the Warren report is accepted, Mr. Salandria writes, it would mean that the first bullet, having been fired downward from the sixth floor, would have to change course after hitting Mr. Kennedy in order to strike Mr. Connally in the back.

"One would certainly, once accepting this unusual and highly improbable course of the bullet, have to concede that it would fly harmlessly over the Governor's head, heading for the sky," Mr. Salandria writes.

"But the commission asks us to believe that this strange bullet changed direction in midair. No bullet ever has, unless spent. But this bullet was far from spent."

Mr. Salandria says that film used by the Warren Commission and testimony by Mr. Connally and his wife suggest that the Governor was not struck by the same bullet that hit President Kennedy.

"Once we conclude that a separate shot hit Governor Connally," the lawyer writes, "we are confronted with an extra bullet, which puts the commission theory of just three bullets from one gun into the limbo of historical myth."

One of the editors of the magazine, Dave Dellinger, in a prefatory article, points out that the magazine has hitherto preferred to avoid the controversy. "Quite simply," he writes "we have not been satisfied by either the official version or the most widely circulated attacks on it."

The Truth at Dallas

Sealing up part of the evidence of its investigation of President Kennedy's assassination for 75 years appears, at first glance, to be a mistake by the Warren Commission. The action will tend to support those extremists of the left and right who believe a heinous plot by the extreme right or the Communists was responsible for Mr. Kennedy's death.

Yet a good case can be made for the commission's decision. One argument that supports it is that the national security matters discussed might prove to be helpful to enemies of future presidents. Secret Service Chief James J. Rowley, for example, discussed some of the possible changes to be made by his agency in checking buildings along the routes of a presidential motorcade. Why advertise those changes to a potential assassin?

But there's another reason for putting some of the evidence under lock and key for 75 years. This is the belief this period could serve as a protection for innocent persons whose reputations might otherwise be damaged because of their relationship with participants in the case. The commission's aim was to get at the truth, but the unsupported rumors and reports offered by some witnesses might have been damaging without helping the commission get at the facts.

Serious scholars may have earlier opportunities to read the sealed testimony. And some departments may declassify material they offered. But an outsider would apparently need approval of the agencies involved, including the FBI, CIA, State Department and U.S. Immigration Service.

The commission's own report—and the 26 volumes it made public—should have resolved most of the questions about the tragic events at Dallas. But if some people still believe in the conspiracy theory, that apparently is the price the nation has to pay to protect future presidents—and the rights of innocent citizens involved in the Kennedy assassination.

The Truth at Dallas

Sealing up part of the evidence of its investigation of President Kennedy's assassination for 75 years appears, at first glance, to be a mistake by the Warren Commission. The action will tend to support those extremists of the left and right who believe a heinous plot by the extreme right or the Communists was responsible for Mr. Kennedy's death.

Yet a good case can be made for the commission's decision. One argument that supports it is that the national security matters discussed might prove to be helpful to enemies of future presidents. Secret Service Chief James J. Rowley, for example, discussed some of the possible changes to be made by his agency in checking buildings along the routes of a presidential motorcade. Why advertise those changes to a potential assassin?

But there's another reason for putting some of the evidence under lock and key for 75 years. This is the belief this period could serve as a protection for innocent persons whose reputations might otherwise be damaged because of their relationship with participants in the case. The commission's aim was to get at the truth, but the unsupported rumors and reports offered by some witnesses might have been damaging without helping the commission get at the facts.

Serious scholars may have earlier opportunities to read the sealed testimony. And some departments may declassify material they offered. But an outsider would apparently need approval of the agencies involved, including the FBI, CIA, State Department and U.S. Immigration Service.

Warren Inquiry Data Secure for 75 Years

Herald Tribune News Service

Evidence and investigating reports used by the Warren Commission have been stored in a special vault in the National Archives Building, where they will remain inaccessible to the public for 75 years.

Only under extraordinary circumstances will off-the-record parts of the historic material be made available earlier to scholars and writers.

Deputy Archivist Robert H. Bahmer said Thursday that each agency that furnished data may declassify its material, or parts of it, and grant permission for responsible persons to see it.

However, an outsider wishing to see all of the secret material would need the approval of all of the agencies involved in the investigation. These included the FBI, CIA, State Department and Immigration Service.

Public interest in the length of time required before the complete evidence became public was stirred by a remark by Chief Justice Earl Warren, the commission chairman.

Following testimony last February by Marina Oswald, widow of the presumed assassin, Warren told newsmen that some of the testimony might not be released "in your lifetime."

The next day the Chief Justice modified his statement, explaining that he was referring to matters involving the national security that conceivably could come up during the inquiry.

Bahmer said Thursday that, barring any grants of special permission, the National Archives will follow its policy of keeping the material classified for 75 years. This, he said, is the policy concerning all historic investigations.

He said that 75 years was chosen because it was considered to be the life span of an individual. The period is intended to serve as protection for innocent persons who could otherwise be damaged because of their relationship with participants in the case, such as Oswald's two infant daughters.

Bahmer said that the Kennedy assassination material will be stored in an inner vault equipped with highly-sensitive electronic detection devices to guard against fire and theft. The vault will have temperature and humidity controls to prevent deterioration of the material.

The combination to the vault will be known by only two or three persons, he said.

The material will include physical exhibits such as the rifle used to kill the President in Dallas Nov. 22, 1963.

CRITIC IS DISPUTED ON WARREN GROUP

Oxford Professor's Doubts Dismissed in Capital

By ANTHONY LEWIS

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16 — Doubts expressed about the Warren Commission Report by Hugh Trevor-Roper, the British historian, are dismissed by informed persons here as without factual basis.

Mr. Trevor-Roper, professor of history at Oxford, wrote in the Sunday Times of London this week that the commission investigating President Kennedy's assassination had left important matters unresolved. He emphasized two.

First, he said, the suspected assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald, was questioned for 12 hours after his arrest by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the police. Oswald was warned that any statement could be used against him. Yet, supposedly, no notes or tape recordings were kept.

Validity Questioned

That could not be true, the professor said. "How could any statement made by Oswald be used against him if his statements were unrecorded?"

According to Warren Commission staff members and persons familiar with the police methods, this question by Professor Trevor-Roper is simply based on unfamiliarity with the situation. The fact is that few police forces tape or transcribe interviews with suspects.

Characteristically, the suspect is questioned at some length. If he makes incriminating admissions, a stenographer will be called in and a confession dictated and signed.

Indeed, some criminal law experts concerned about police interrogation are now pressing the suggestion that such interviews all be tape-recorded, so that there will be a check on the use of improper methods. The police have not generally been receptive to the idea.

The F.B.I. similarly avoids tape recordings in interviews but has two agents present at all times if possible so that their recollections can be confirmed.

In any event, Professor Trevor-Roper was called inaccurate by commission aides in suggesting that the F.B.I. played a major part in the questioning of Oswald. The Dallas police were in charge, and Federal agents had only limited access to the interrogation.

The second of Professor Trevor-Roper's major points was phrased as follows: "Why also, and on whose authority, was the original medical report on President Kennedy's death destroyed?"

According to those most familiar with the commission's work, this question is also based on an inaccurate factual assumption — namely, that an "original" autopsy report was destroyed. In fact, none was.

The doctors who examined President Kennedy's body at Bethesda Naval Hospital did make some brief, fragmentary pencil notes that they threw away when they prepared their typewritten report. But in any case they were all questioned at length by the commission under oath, and no doubts were raised about their formal report.

British Critic Hits Warren Report as 'Suspect, Slovenly'

The Washington Post Foreign Service

LONDON, Dec. 13—The perpetuation of doubts about the true story of President Kennedy's assassination continues on this side of the Atlantic.

Today it was Oxford historian Hugh Trevor-Roper who argued at great length that the Warren Commission report on the murder was "suspect" and "slovenly."

Trevor-Roper presented his views in a spectacular full-page article in the London Sunday Times, a respected newspaper with nationwide circulation.

Choosing three points of the Dallas story to argue his view that the Warren Commission "lacked independent judgment" and showed "culpable indifference" to the demands of reason, he said the records indicate important police and medical evidence was suppressed and destroyed. And the commission was blandly satisfied to do without it, he claimed.

Trevor-Roper is a contentious historian, often breaking into popular print and television to press his running feud with rival historian A. J. P. Taylor on the proper way to study history.

Both are distinguished scholars. Their quarrels have greatly added to their public position, so that when Trevor-Roper pronounces on a great historical incident of our time, people perk up to listen.

His argument against the Warren Commission report differs from that of other critics by making no effort to insist that there was a conspiracy or that some other version of what happened in Dallas is really true.

He simply states the official report is not conclusive or credible enough, and that wishful emotion has made Americans determined to believe it in the face of reason.

But Trevor-Roper, who joined the controversial "Who Killed Kennedy?" Committee before the Warren report appeared, reported to the British public signs that even in America skepticism is beginning to spread.

"Orthodoxy," he concluded, "is not yet final. Heresy may still be heard."

The points he chose to demonstrate the commission's shortcomings, in his view, were the lack of clear-cut police evidence on what led to the first moves to arrest Lee Harvey Oswald; the lack of official records on F.B.I. and police questioning of Oswald for 12 hours after his arrest; the lack of notes and medical records made at the time of the autopsy on the President.

Trevor-Roper said the commission should have been far more persistent and critical of explanations offered by officials for these and other gaps in the evidence.

Like the many other analyses, Trevor-Roper's article also leaves it still to be proved that the Warren Commission failed to find the truth.

3,000 flock to Warren report forum

LOS ANGELES — A vast public curiosity, tinged with skepticism, still exist concerning the circumstances of the assassination of President Kennedy in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

If this fact needed confirmation, it received it here last week when the chief critic of the Warren Commission report on the assassination came to join with a trio of attorneys—one of whom participated in the Warren Commission probe—in a public symposium on the subject.

A capacity crowd of 2,000 persons jammed the Beverly Hills High School auditorium on Friday night, Dec. 4, and an estimated 1,000 additional persons were turned away.

Mark Lane, chairman of what he calls the Citizens Committee of Inquiry, argued about the Warren Commission report with Joseph H. Ball, one of the commission's attorneys: Herman F. Selvin, former president of the Los Angeles Bar Assn., and A. L. Wirin, nationally known civil liberties lawyer.

It was a no-decision affair.

Lane attempted to sustain his contention that the Warren Commission report is "a fraud from the first to the last." He reiterated his charge that evidence pointing to someone other than Lee Harvey Oswald as the killer was suppressed or ignored by the Warren probers. The others, led by Ball, tried to disparage the contentions of the New York lawyer and former state legislator.

Selvin and Wirin emphasized the refusal of the Warren Commission to succumb to Rightist pressure and characterize the assassination as a Leftist act because of some of Oswald's professed beliefs.

Lane conceded at a press conference during his stay here that much of the financial support for his Citizens Committee of Inquiry comes from the ultra-Right, which is interested in discrediting the Chief Justice.

The debate was sponsored by Discussions Unlimited. Similar interest in Lane's theories were manifest during other appearances in Southern California.

The Summit Approaches

Johnson and Wilson Will Discuss Policy Toward New Soviet Union Leaders

By Drew Pearson

NO. 1 ITEM on the Anglo-American agenda when Prime Minister Harold Wilson meets with President Johnson this week is future policy toward the new leaders of the Kremlin. Especially, they will explore the wisdom of a summit meeting.

President Johnson, who believes in talking to people face to face, had previously been planning on a personal talk with Nikita Khrushchev.

Later, when Khrushchev was knocked out of the Kremlin box, LBJ naturally figured on meeting with Brezhnev and Kosygin at some appropriate time.

However, Secretary of State Dean Rusk has been less than enthusiastic. He doesn't want to see a high-level meeting unless there is a real chance of settling major problems.

He is also concerned over evidence that the new Kremlin is following a tougher line than Khrushchev. Furthermore, it has made no overtures toward a meeting with the President.

While the President is usually inclined to follow his own famous advice, "Come, let us reason together," in this case he is following the advice of his Secretary of State.

This is where Prime Minister Wilson comes into the picture. It's probable that he will act as a sort of unofficial emissary to sound out Moscow about a meeting. He expects to go to Moscow soon, will take some diplomatic soundings and then return to Washington after Christmas to report.

Upon this will depend whether there will be a summit conference in 1965.

Meanwhile, United States Ambassador to Russia Foy Kohler has reported that he is concerned over the influence of the Red Army in the new Soviet government. Three deputy premiers — Ustinov, Rudnev, and Smirnov — are considered strong supporters of the army and the armaments industry.

The new Chief of Staff, Marshal Matyev Zakharov, is a believer in conventional weapons. The late Chief of Staff, Marshal Sergei Biryuzov, recently killed in a plane crash in Yugoslavia, was a rockets-missile advocate and had been placed by Khrushchev because he supported him in his battle against conventional weapons.

Khrushchev's argument with the Red Army in favor of missiles and against conventional weapons was somewhat similar to President Johnson's argument for missiles as against Gen. Curtis Lemay's argument for manned bombers.

Kennedy Hate Sheets

IT DIDN'T MAKE headlines, but the Warren Commission has finally dug out the mystery of the full-page ad "Welcome Mr. Kennedy" which appeared in the Dallas News the day President Kennedy was assassinated. The ad was a scurrilous diatribe against the late President.

The Warren Commission has found that the ad was financed by John Birchers with Nelson B. Hunt, son of the well-known oil billionaire H. L. Hunt, helping to raise the money.

Another inflammatory hate sheet, "Wanted for Treason," featuring pictures of Mr. Kennedy, turned up on the streets of Dallas three days before he arrived. The Warren Commission found it was produced by Robert Surrey, a partner in the American Eagle Publishing Company.

Doctors' Secret Strategy

THE DOCTORS of the United States are among the most dedicated people in the Nation, but being necessarily busy they don't always know what their so-called "trade union," the American Medical Association, is doing.

Recently, for instance, top policy-makers of the AMA got together behind closed doors to ponder Lyndon Johnson's landslide victory and to decide on further strategy to defeat the bill for medical care for the elderly.

The strategy they first considered was to offer a compromise bill, and they even picked Rep. Tom Curtis, a moderate Missouri Republican who has received substantial campaign funds from the doctors to carry the legislative ball. In the end, however, they decided to stand pat against any kind of medicare bill.

The doctors poured unprecedented sums into the 1964 election campaign in an attempt to defeat candidates who favored medicare. AMA leaders, who held their convention in San Francisco just ahead of the Republican convention, helped to nominate Sen. Barry Goldwater because of his outspoken opposition to medicare.

But after the election returns were in, it was the anti-medicare candidates who generally went down to defeat. Some of the bill's most militant opponents, whose Congressional seats were considered safe, were upset.

The AMA's most serious losses were: Congressmen Victor Knox of Michigan, Bruce Alger of Texas, and Steve Derounian of New York, all Republicans. They had helped block medicare inside the House Ways and Means Committee.

The AMA has already started lobbying behind the scenes to maintain the old Democratic-Republican ratio on the Ways and Means Committee and to replace the Republican casualties with like-minded, anti-medicare Congressmen.

Ways and Means now has 15 Democrats and 10 Republicans. Proponents of medicare are hoping to adjust the ratio to 18 Democrats and only seven Republicans. They are also trying to persuade the GOP leadership to assign moderates to the committee, such as New York Congressman John Lindsay and Massachusetts Congressman Hastings Keith, who have open minds on medicare.

But the GOP leaders have received too much financial support from the doctors to ignore their wishes. House GOP Leader Charles Halleck of Indiana and Wisconsin Congressman John Byrnes, the ranking Republicans on Ways and Means, are expected to appoint fanatic opponents of medicare to the vacancies.

However, the anti-medicare people took such a drubbing at the polls that the doctors have decided they can no longer block medicare with the old Kerr-Mills Law, which pays the medical expenses only of elderly people who take a poverty oath and can't otherwise pay their doctor bills.

As a result, AMA strategists are studying how far they must compromise in order to put across a compromise substitute.

How the FBI Regards Its Responsibilities

From a statement to the Warren Commission by Alan H. Belmont, FBI official in charge of investigative work:

"Our activities are directed to meet the terrific responsibility we have for the internal security of the country, but to meet it under the law.

"We feel that to place security as such above the rights of the individual or to increase these controls beyond what is absolutely essential is the first step toward the destruction of this free society that we enjoy.

"We have been asked many times why we don't pick up and jail all Communists. The very people who ask those questions don't realize that if action, unrestrained action, is taken against a particular group of people, a precedent is set which can be seized on in the future by power-hungry or unscrupulous authorities as a precedent, and which inevitably will gnaw away at this free society we have, and sooner or later will be applied to the very individuals who are seeking this action." LMW

Presidential Safeguard Thorns

Could all of the agents of the FBI and the Secret Service, if gathered in Dallas, have saved the life of President Kennedy? We doubt it.

There is no way in which the president of the United States can be protected from all harm. The president is a political animal and must be in close touch with his public. And that is where the danger lies.

For no matter how well the various federal agencies cooperate with each other—and better cooperation between the FBI and Secret Service should be sought—they cannot take into custody or put under strict surveillance all of those who might cause physical harm to the president.

Not every Castro sympathizer, pro-Communist or right-wing fanatic is a potential assassin of the president. Many people in such groups had expressed hate for President Kennedy or had uttered private threats against him. Yet not even such people are necessarily potential killers. Talk is one thing. Assassination may never enter their minds.

On this point we agree with FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover. He said that absolute security cannot be obtained for the president "without almost establishing a police state." What he meant was that the police, the FBI and the Secret Service must follow democratic procedures. They must have evidence in order to lock up potential assassins. They cannot fill the jails with citizens who may have at one time or another strongly criticized the president.

With the advantage of 20-20 hindsight, we can agree with the Warren Commission that the FBI should have warned the Secret Service of Lee Harvey Oswald's presence in Dallas. Yet we can't even be sure that the Secret Service, had it possessed that information, could or would have taken action to protect Mr. Kennedy from the assassin's bullet.

The Warren Commission did make some excellent recommendations for tightening up security. But the commission's most important service was to make it clear to the public that the assassination was conceived and performed by one man, Lee Harvey Oswald, and that there was no widespread plot despite the rumors that had swept the country.

Better protection no doubt can and should be provided for the president of the United States, but if he is to continue to see the public—and be seen by the public—an element of danger will remain. No reorganization of the duties and responsibilities of the FBI and Secret Service can guarantee perfect security to the chief of state in a democracy such as our own. Every president knows it. Every citizen must accept it.

Attorneys, Critics Debate Warren Report

The dispute about the Warren Commission's findings has been mounting steadily. This article is based on excerpts from a panel discussion in which two attorneys who served on the commission's staff met two of the commission's leading critics.

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP).—Following are excerpts from the transcript of a panel discussion of the Warren Commission's Report by two of its leading critics and two attorneys who helped in the commission's investigation of President John F. Kennedy's assassination.

The debate was held before the Associated Press Managing Editors convention in San Diego on Nov. 17.

The participants were authors Mark Lane ("Rush to Judgment") and Edward Jay Epstein ("Inquest"), critics of the report, and Joseph A. Ball and J. Wesley Liebeler, both of whom served on the commission's staff.

Ball is a California attorney and Liebeler is acting professor of law at the University of California.

Epstein

I think I'd rather discuss the new evidence that has come to light and this is of course the X rays and autopsy photographs that were turned over to the National Archives by the Kennedy family.

In fact the absence of the autopsy photographs from the commission's evidence left a very embarrassing link in the Warren Report. The fact that these photographs had to be produced at this late date is, I think, indicative of the embarrassing this gap was for the commission.

The autopsy reports were the only evidence that could clear up a very basic contradiction in the commission's evidence. The contradiction I am referring to is the contradiction between the FBI's report of the autopsy findings and the doctors' report of the autopsy findings.

THE DOCTORS who conducted the autopsy (at the naval hospital in Bethesda, Md.) made one report of their findings which appears in the final edition of the Warren Report and this says that the bullet which struck the President in the back of the neck passed through his neck and exited through his throat.

During the course of my research, I came across two FBI summary reports which contradicted this. The FBI summary reports—the last was issued two months after the autopsy—stated that the bullet in question hit the President below the shoulder, penetrated his body only a finger length and fell out of the back of the wound entry.

Both versions are obviously diametrically opposed. If one is true, the other is false . . .

When the commission lawyers arrived in Washington they were confronted by two contradictory reports of the autopsy.

IT WOULD NOT have been especially difficult to clear up the contradiction in these early stages. The FBI agents who wrote the report could have been called as witnesses and then of course the autopsy photographs could have been examined and analyzed by independent forensic pathologists to see if they conformed with either the FBI version of the autopsy doctors' version—but this contradiction was not resolved.

The FBI reports were not entered into the record . . . The two FBI agents were not called as witnesses. The autopsy photographs were never analyzed or seen by anyone that I know of. The report simply glossed over the facts.

To see how the commission handled this problem—or the lawyers who wrote the chapter—it is interesting to note that on Page 88 and 89 of the Warren Report the report states that there was only one autopsy conclusion, it was reached during the autopsy—that is, when the body was in front of the doctors—and that this conclusion said that the bullet passed completely through the neck. This conclusion was confirmed by evidence received from Dallas the next day.

WELL, AFTER publication of the FBI reports in my book and a good deal of other facts that came to light, one commission lawyer or inspector wrote a definite answer, or what he considered a definite answer, in the U.S. News and World Report. In this he said that there were actually two autopsy results, one on the night of the autopsy was a tentative theory that the bullet had penetrated only a finger's length and the next day the autopsy doctors changed their conclusion when they received further evidence from Dallas about the throat wound.

This sounds plausible. The problem is that Mr. Specter (Arlen Specter, a commission assistant counsel, now district attorney of Philadelphia) is the man who wrote the chapter that there was only one conclusion and that it was confirmed.

Now he says that there were two conclusions and that it was changed by the evidence from Dallas. Certainly when the basic facts presented in the Warren Report are contradicted by the man who wrote them, I think we have to go to further evidence . . .

SINCE THERE are autopsy photographs available and these autopsy photographs do show the track both inside the body and the photographs and X rays of possibly bones or fragments in the path, I think that these photographs should be examined now by a group of forensic pathologists.

So long as these autopsy photographs remain unanalyzed, the commission has not completed its job . . .

Lane

I flew back from Paris to be here because I would like to discuss with you the role played by the press in the development of the false report submitted to the American people by the Warren Commission.

Our moderator said quite correctly the public was in the mood to accept the Warren Report. Now why do you suppose that was? Who put the public in the mood to accept the report of the Warren Commission?

When the evidence was first presented by the Dallas district attorney in the opening hours, the press played a very responsible and important position.

This is a picture of the Dealey Plaza area. The presidential limousine of course came across Main Street, up Houston and down Elm.

The commission said all the shots were fired from here, from the 6th-floor window of the (Texas) Book Depository Building as the limousine moved in this direction and said further that there is no credible evidence which even suggests that any shots were fired from elsewhere. No credible evidence!

ON NOV. 22 the press found Charles Brehm. He was standing right there. He was very likely the closest witness, closest spectator—to the assassination.

He was on radio and television. He was interviewed by newspapers and his name appeared in almost every newspaper in America on Nov. 23.

It's unfortunate that the Warren Commission never found Mr. Brehm, and never questioned Mr. Brehm. It's unfortunate our distinguished colleagues, lawyers for the commission, never questioned Mr. Brehm.

Because Mr. Brehm said, and it is not, unfortunately, on record anywhere, except in a filmed interview which we conducted which will be shown all over Western Europe in the next two or three months and hopefully in the United States as well, Mr. Brehm said:

"I SAW THE EFFECT of the bullet upon the President's head. As the bullet struck his head, a portion of the president's skull was driven backward and to the left over the rear and left of the car, indicating that the fatal shot came from a right front area, not from the rear, not from behind the limousine."

The press found Mr. Brehm on that day. Unfortunately the commission never could, or never tried, or never did, in any event.

The press found Mary Woodward over there. In fact she works for the press—The Dallas Morning News—and she wrote her own article, published in The Dallas Morning News on Nov. 23, and she said, "I heard the shots. It was a horrible ear-shattering sound coming from directly behind me, from behind the wooden fence on the top of the grassy hill."

It shouldn't have been difficult to find her. Her name appeared in The Dallas Morning News the next day. The Warren Commission never found her. She never testified as a witess.

AND THEN we have Mary Moorman standing over there, who took a picture of the limousine as it moved down Elm Street and in the background of that picture was shown the Book Depository Building.

According to the Dallas sheriff, who took the photograph from her, it showed the 6th-floor window, from which the gunman purportedly fired. According to Miss Moorman it was taken when the shots were fired.

What a valuable picture! A picture of the window with Oswald with his Italian Mannlicher or German Mauser or a cannon rifle of some kind, firing out of the window.

Did the commission ever publish the picture? No. Did the commission ever call Miss Moorman as a witness? No, although her name appeared in newspaper articles all over the country and she was on radio and television as well that day.

THE LAST ONE I make reference to is Warren Reynolds, a witness to an aspect of the (police officer J.D.) Tippitt killing. He heard the shot. He was called out where he works, about one block from the office where Tippitt was killed.

Shortly after he heard the shots he saw a man run by with a gun in his hand and Mr. Reynolds was questioned by the press on that day—his name appeared in newspapers, on radio and television as well—Nov. 22.

Never questioned by the FBI or by the Secret Service or any of the federal police during November or December until January 21 when he was shown photographs of Lee Harvey Oswald and he said that he could not say that was the man fleeing from the Tippitt scene with a pistol in his hand and two days later he was shot through the head and finally the commission called him after he had been reduced to a quivering mass of terror after the attempt on his life and then he was able to say then he believed it was Oswald for the first time and the commission indicated that he had changed his mind during the period and was now a witness against Lee Harvey Oswald after his death.

I THINK we have the right to know who killed our president in Dallas that day and why he died. I think if we read with intelligence we know we can never get the answers to these questions from the Warren Commission Report . . .

I think that what is required now is a new investigation, and a new commission, but one in which the American people will have some trust and have some confidence . . .

Ball

I've read Mr. Lane's book and I've read Mr. Epstein's book and I'll tell you frankly, if we had followed the same evasiveness and distortion of evidence that Mr. Lane, particularly, followed, you'd have some reason to criticize . . .

Let's talk about facts. This investigation was the most extensive investigation ever conducted in American history. The staff and the commission had at their disposal the entire investigative facilities of this great nation.

Do you know that over 25,000 people were interviewed . . . and 552 of those people either came before the commission, their depositions taken or their affidavits taken.

Many of these people Mr. Lane mentioned in his book, we have their evidence and we considered their evidence. It came in by way of affidavit and in accordance with the procedures which we adopted.

NOW WE AS LAWYERS took the evidence and we analyzed the evidence. Many of these things that Mr. Epstein and Mr. Lane now come up with wide eyes of amazement and say, "Why didn't you consider?" — of course we knew they were there.

But as lawyers we had to weigh evidence and analyze evidence and come to conclusions and say that this evidence does not fit into the pattern, this is not credible evidence . . .

There's the question of the gun. The commission established, by documentary evidence, which you can read, beyond any question that Oswald ordered that gun and paid for it.

THE REVOLVER—there's no question he ordered that revolver from a Los Angeles sporting goods store and paid for it.

And there's no question from the documents that these two—gun and revolver—were delivered to a post office box in Dallas—to a box owned by Oswald.

Now when Mr. Lane presents this to his readers, does he present this documented evidence to them? Does he tell them where the weight of evidence lies? Oh, of course not . . .

The readers never hear of the sound evidence upon which the commission based its conclusion that Oswald bought the gun.

Now let's take another one—the identification of the gun . . . I don't think any sensible person in this nation doesn't believe that the Italian Carcano rifle was not found on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository.

Seymour Weitzman, a deputy constable of Dallas, and Deputy Sheriff (Eugene) Boone were looking for something and they saw over a pile of boxes about five feet high a gun, and like good police officers, they called for identification and a picture was taken of it, which you can see—anybody can see. Mr. Lane has seen it.

AND LATER ON that day they both said it was a Mauser—a German Mauser.

Now Mr. Lane sarcastically says: "Well, overnight this gun changes its nationality from a German Mauser to an Italian Mannlicher Carcano."

He wants you to believe that identification was by men who never handled a gun, that therefore it's probable . . . the Italian Carcano was substituted for a Mauser. I gather that's what he says, or he wouldn't put it in his book.

Now he does not show the evidence that is almost conclusive that this gun fired without question three shells that were found on that floor, that two bullet fragments found in the front seat of the Lincoln were fired to the exclusion of all other weapons by that gun and the bullet found at Parkland Hospital was fired to the exclusion of all other weapons by that gun . . .

Seymour Weitzman is an expert on guns, and that's just the reason he made the mistake he made, because of what Mr. Lane doesn't tell you, but he knows as well as I do and Seymour Weitzman knows, is that this is a bolt-action rifle.

THE BASIC PATENT on bolt-action rifles is Mauser. This is an Italian rifle built on the Mauser patent. It's an Italian Mauser and of course, because he was an expert, Weitzman made the mistake.

Now weigh evidence as scholars. Ask us to weigh evidence as lawyers.

Put Seymour Weitzman's faulty identification against the overwhelming evidence that the Mannlicher Carcano was found on the sixth floor and see where the weight of evidence lies . . .

Let's go to the grassy knoll evidence. Now what is this "compelling" evidence that Mr. Lane tells us about? . . . The evidence is compelling that the shots were fired from the Texas School Book Depository.

Here is his "compelling" evidence that they were fired from the grassy knoll area. First of all the earshot testimony, such as Mary Woodward he mentioned.

There were hundreds of people there in Dealey Plaza. Some thought it came from the overpass. Some thought it came from the grassy knoll.

MARY

Earhart testimony is something we could not rely upon and neither can Mr. Lane, because when a bullet recedes from the muzzle it sets up shock waves at right angles. So it depends on where you stand, but it's true there's a good many people thought that the sound of the shot came from the grassy knoll area.

Now when I say grassy knoll area, I say what does Mr. Lane mean, because it's three or four hundred feet long, but a good many people ran up there and they found nothing. They found no man with a gun. They found no gun. They found no shells. They found nothing.

So we have the "compelling" testimony that Mr. Lane talks about—their evidence against overwhelming evidence that the shots came from the School Book Depository.

AND, AGAIN, he says, "Well, there are some witnesses that saw a puff of smoke." What does a puff of smoke mean? Does it mean that there's a rifle? Of course not. Since when did rifles give off a puff of smoke? They don't do it.

Now I've had time to give you only a few examples of the complete distortions of the record which appear in this book, but there are many. His footnotes don't follow and more important than that, he makes up his own record . . .

I have nothing more to say, but I do say this: that it's with a certain amount of pride that I stand before you and defend my name and those of the honorable men on that commission against a man of whom they have said, "Veteran criminal lawyers go for the jugular, Lane goes for the capillaries."

Liebeler

I must say that it is difficult to forgo the challenge, in a sense, that Mr. Lane sets forth by his very presence . . . His book is a tissue of distortion . . . At a press conference at the University of California at Los Angeles, Mr. Lane's response . . . was to threaten to sue me for libel and I've been awaiting anxiously for those papers.

If you have them here this morning I'll be glad to accept service of process, Mr. Lane, because you know very well as soon as you do that you're going to have to deposition under oath and go through discovery proceedings and that day I'll wait for. Sh. . . .

Now, I'm not going to be so harsh with Mr. Epstein.

Mr. Epstein makes several points—one of which was that the commission or the lawyers suffered from a time problem, that we didn't have enough time to do our work.

THERE IS NO QUESTION but what the actual writing of the report suffered to some extent because of the deadline that the commission states or imposed on getting the report out . . .

We have to sharply distinguish between the time problem in that regard and in the question of whether or not this affected the investigation that was carried out, and I don't think it did. None of us thought it did.

If any of us had had any problems that were unresolved in our minds at that time, you can rest assured that we would have conducted any additional investigation that was necessary to resolve those doubts.

Mr. Epstein indicates that the investigation only lasted 10 weeks. I have never been able to understand how he came to that conclusion because in fact the investigation went on from early January when the commission lawyers started to come to Washington until the very end of the commission's work some time in September.

WHEN YOU GO through his book you find that he emphasizes an alleged contradiction between the autopsy report and between FBI and Secret Service statements about what occurred at the autopsy.

It's not really quite so much of a contradiction as he'd like to have us believe. He's saying there's a contradiction between the statements of two FBI agents and two Secret Service agents who very imprecisely placed the wound in the back of the President's body, and this all relates to whether the bullet came through the President's neck and then went on to strike Gov. Connally, or not.

And they placed it very imprecisely. They said it was below the shoulders.

I always like to compare it with the statement that the autopsy surgeons made on the face sheet of the autopsy . . . which indicates that that wound was located 14 centimeters, or 5½ inches, below the right mastoid process, or bony tip behind your right ear, which places the wound precisely, right at the base of the neck . . .

MAKE THIS measurement and see whether there is any inconsistency or not, and I think you will find that there is no inconsistency of any kind whatsoever.

At no time prior to the time that Mr. Epstein wrote this book or made these statements did he ever measure 14 centimenters from his own right mastoid process or from the right mastoid process of any other human being on the face of this earth and this is the kind of "scholarship" that we find running through this man's work . . .

We have the right to hear from him whether he really thinks . . . there is any real possibility that one of the murderers of John F. Kenndy are still on the loose.

Mr. Epstein's work has had more effect than that of any other critic of the commission and this results from what I must call a superficial appearance of scholarship.

We are not afraid of having our work for the Warren Commission examined closely, but that task must be approached with an intellectual rigor and honesty which so far is most notable by its absence.

CARL T. ROWAN

In Defense of Warren Commission Findings

On April 15, 101 years ago, William Pitt Fessenden, newly-elected U. S. senator from Maine, stood in the New York Customs House and harangued a grieving and angry crowd. "We will hang Jeff Davis!" he cried.

This man, whom Carl Sandburg later was to describe as a scrupulous statesman, was giving voice to what the New York Herald called "an ominous muttering in the streets."

Fessenden spoke on the morning that Abraham Lincoln died from an assassin's bullet. And he spoke with the assumption that the President had fallen victim to a plot that was hatched at the very top of the Confederacy.

The furiously, dangerously angry mob drifted away from the Customs House in grief that day because L. E. Chittenden, Register of the Treasury, kept screaming that Lincoln "fell by the hand of a madman" until someone leaned out a window and read a dispatch proving that Jeff Davis and his colleagues had not tried to kill Lincoln, Sec. of State Seward and others.

But the "mutterings in the street continued for months and even years as imaginative citizens, enterprising newsmen and a variety of publicity-seekers popped up with new theories and explanations as to who did what to whom, and why.

Even Secretary of War Edwin M. Stanton, who ran the country with the stern precision of a dictator during the hours that Lincoln lay dying, came in for some suspicion and criticism. A favorite story used against him was a report that during the night-long ordeal, Mrs. Lincoln became hysterical while looking at her dying husband and fainted. Stanton supposedly shouted: "Get that woman out of here and keep her out!"

A lot of people note the rumors, the suspicions, the theories, the "big plot" charges about the assassination of President Kennedy and mumble that "history is repeating itself."

But we cannot blame history for the "ominous mutterings in our streets" or in our bookstores or newspaper city rooms. The simple fact is that human nature has not changed; so we may have to resign ourselves to at least a generation of noise from those who always know how to capitalize on a great tragedy, either to make a buck, make a headline or to indulge a childish fascination for making like Sherlock Holmes.

Even in the shock and gloom that followed Mr. Kennedy's death, there were people who knew that suspicion is an acid that eats at the bowels of a nation. It was precisely to erase the suspicion, the rumors that would weaken American unity and destroy the country's reputation abroad that the Warren Commission was established.

What painful irony that the commission report itself has given rise to so much controversy, to so many theories, so much headline-hunting.

I, for one, say nonsense to all this morbid speculation. The Kennedy clan has closeness and money. And if the Kennedys had the vaguest notion that the "real assassin" and other "plotters" were at large, I expect that they would long ago have begun a massive private investigation.

Life magazine sees a "reasonable doubt" that Oswald acted alone and it, among others, wants to reopen the case. Life's doubts arise from an analysis of an amateur motion picture taken of the shooting. I found the rebuttal by Arlen Specter, a lawyer who handled the Warren Commission's investigation of the shooting, more convincing than Life's presentation of its own theory.

But the simple fact is that both Specter and Life are dealing with fractions of seconds, ballistic theories, medical data and assumptions about human reactions that merely create issues that can never be resolved simply by "re-opening" the investigation. What would result, beyond doubt, is another round of rumors and speculations—and perhaps another batch of books.

Unless someone has some new evidence that goes beyond split-second nit-picking and 007 mumbo-jumbo, the case should stay closed. It would serve both the nation and the memory of a slain President if we could somehow end these "ominous mutterings in the streets."

Hoover Says Facts Show Oswald Alone Was Kennedy Killer

By FRED P. GRAHAM
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—J. Edgar Hoover said today that no evidence had been found to indicate that Lee Harvey Oswald had had an accomplice in the assassination of President Kennedy.

"All available evidence and facts point to one conclusion—that Oswald acted alone in his crime," the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation said in a statement.

"Not one shred of evidence has been developed to link any other person in a conspiracy with Oswald to assassinate President Kennedy," Mr. Hoover said.

Explains Discrepancies

Commenting for the first time on the controversy over the adequacy of the Warren Commission's report of the assassination, Mr. Hoover said the critics had ignored or misinterpreted the facts.

He also gave the first official explanation of the discrepencies between the two F.B.I. reports on the assassination and the Warren Report. The F.B.I. reports said the bullet that struck Mr. Kennedy below the back of the neck had not passed through the President's body. The Warren Report concluded that the bullet had passed through President Kennedy and had wounded the Texas Governor, John B. Connally Jr.

Mr. Hoover said that statements in the first F.B.I. report, dated Dec. 9, 1963, had been based upon comments made that time the doctors believed that the bullet had not gone through the body, but information obtained the next morning disclosed that it had, Mr. Hoover said.

By the time the F.B.I. submitted its supplemental report on Jan. 13, 1964, the commission had been given a copy of the autopsy report that said the bullet had passed through the President's body, Mr. Hoover said.

Therefore, he explained, the F.B.I. did not mention this in the Jan. 13 report.

Critics of the Warren Report have pointed out that the only reference to Mr. Kennedy's wounds in the Jan. 13 F.B.I. report stated:

"Medical examination of the President's body had revealed that the bullet which entered his back had penetrated to a distance of less than a finger length."

Mr. Hoover explained that this had been followed by a statement that Mr. Kennedy's shirt had an entrance bullet hole in the back and an exit hole in the front. He said this had been intended to point up the fact that the doctors' findings contained in the first report had probably been in error.

Mr. Hoover concluded that "While there is a difference in the information reported by the F.B.I. and the information contained in the autopsy report concerning the wounds, there is no conflict."

Mr. Hoover's statement was directed to The Washington Evening Star, which had asked him to comment on the rash of books and articles that have criticized the Warren Report. The statement was later release to other news media.

Criticism for Critics

In an accompanying letter to The Star, Mr. Hoover said that, while the critics had every right to state their views, they "should show more regard for the facts on record."

"They have ignored certain facts, misinterpreted others, and expressed pure speculation as truth," he said.

Mr. Hoover branded as "totally false" allegations that the F.B.I. had altered the film of the assassination taken by an amateur photographer, Abraham Zapruder.

"The F.B.I. never had the original Zapruder film in its possession — it was purchased by a national magazine," he said, referring to Life magazine.

"The F.B.I. obtained a copy of the original uncut film and reproduced this for the commission, which since has turned it over to national archives," he added.

The discrepancy between the Warren Report's description of Mr. Kennedy's body wound and the two F.B.I. reports has fanned the controversy over the adequacy of the Warren Commission's investigation.

In his book "Inquest," Edward Jay Epstein pointed out that the F.B.I. had repeated in its Jan. 13 report that the bullet had not passed through the President's body without stating that this view might be in error and without mentioning the contrary view expressed in the official autopsy.

Mr. Epstein said a person might find it "inconceivable that the F.B.I. would make a repeated error of this magnitude and import in its final report to the President."

Sees Truth vs. Politics

After analyzing the evidence, he concluded that "all the evidence" indicated that the F.B.I. version was true and that the Warren Commission's statement was an expression of "political truth."

Critics say that the commission's conclusion that the same bullet struck President Kennedy and Governor Connally was crucial to its explanation of the crime. The commission has denied that it is necessary.

The Zapruder film showed that the two men were struck almost simultaneously. Since Oswald's bolt-action rifle could not fire two rounds in less than 2.3 seconds, the commission concluded that the same round had hit both men, and that Governor Conally had had a delayed reaction to his wound.

Mr. Epstein and other critics have insisted that, if the first bullet had lodged in Mr. Kennedy's back and had later fallen out, as the doctors first assume then Mr. Kennedy and Governor Connally must have been hit by two riflemen firing almost simultaneously.

(WARREN COMMISSION)

WASHINGTON--THE GROWING CHORUS OF CHALLENGES TO THE WARREN COMMISSION REPORT MAY BRING PUBLIC DISCLOSURE OF THE PHOTOGRAPHS TAKEN DURING THE AUTOPSY ON THE BODY OF PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY, A COMMISSION ATTORNEY SAID TODAY.

ARLEN SPECTER, 36, THE MAN WHO HANDLED THE COMMISSION INVESTIGATION OF THE SHOOTING, TOLD UPI TODAY, "IF IT KEEPS UP, YOU MAY GET A LOOK AT THEM."

INTEREST SWUNG TO THE PICTURES--NOW BARRED FROM PUBLIC USE--WHEN ONE OF THE GROUP OF THREE DOCTORS WHO PERFORMED THE AUTOPSY SAID THE PICTURES COULD SETTLE CONTROVERSY SURROUNDING A WOUND IN KENNEDY'S NECK.

CRITICS OF THE COMMISSION HAVE CONTENDED THE BULLET MAY HAVE BEEN FIRED FROM THE FRONT OF THE PRESIDENTIAL LIMOUSINE ON NOV. 22, 1963, CHALLENGING THE COMMISSION THEORY THAT LEE HARVEY OSWALD ALONE WAS RESPONSIBLE FOR KENNEDY'S DEATH.

SPECTER, NOW THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY OF PHILADELPHIA, PA., IS GENERALLY CREDITED WITH EVOLVING THE THEORY THAT KENNEDY AND TEXAS GOV. JOHN CONNALLY WERE WOUNDED BY THE SAME BULLET.

HIS COMMENT CAME IN A TELEPHONE INTERVIEW DURING WHICH HE DENIED REPORTS THAT HE HAD EVER SAID, "I DON'T THINK ANYONE WILL EVER BELIEVE WHAT WE'VE (THE COMMISSION) REPORTED."

HE SAID HE STILL BELIEVED THE BULLET WHICH HIT KENNEDY NEAR THE BASE OF THE SKULL AND PASSED THROUGH HIS NECK WAS THE SAME ONE THAT HIT CONNALLY.

THE DOCTOR WHO SAID THE PICTURES COULD DISPEL THE CONTROVERSY OVER THE TYPE AND LOCATION OF THE SLAIN PRESIDENT'S WOUNDS WAS J. THORNTON BOSWELL, FORMER CHIEF PATHOLOGIST AT THE BETHESDA NAVAL HOSPITAL WHERE THE AUTOPSY TOOK PLACE THE NIGHT OF NOV. 22, 1963.

BOSWELL SAID THE PICTURES WOULD SHOW CONCLUSIVELY THE COMMISSION REPORT ON THE WOUNDS WAS IN AGREEMENT WITH THE AUTOPSY'S RESULTS.

THIS WOULD SUPPORT THE COMMISSION VIEW THAT THE SAME BULLET HIT KENNEDY AND CONNALLY, AND THAT OSWALD, FIRING SHOTS FROM BEHIND THE PRESIDENT, WAS THE LONE ASSASSIN.

BOSWELL ISSUED AN EXPLANATION OF SEEMING DISCREPANCIES IN AN AUTOPSY SKETCH HE DREW OF THE PRESIDENT'S BODY WHICH SEEMED TO GIVE CREDENCE TO SOME CRITICS' THEORIES THAT THERE IS A POSSIBILITY OTHERS WERE IN ON THE SHOOTING.

HE SAID THAT HE MADE A MISTAKE, THAT THE DRAWING IMPRECISELY SHOWED A WOUND IN KENNEDY'S BACK BUT THAT THE SKETCH WAS ONLY INTENDED TO GIVE A ROUGH AAPPROXIMATION OF THE LOCATION OF THE WOUNDS.

BOSWELL SAID HE ASSUMED THAT THE PHOTOGRAPHS WOULD BE AVAILABLE TO GIVE THE PRECISE LOCATIONS OF THE WOUND.

Text of Statement by Hoover on the Warren Report

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25 (UPI)—Following is the text of the statement by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, on recent challenges of the findings of the Warren Commission on the Kennedy assassination:

The Warren Commission and its findings concerning the assassination of President Kennedy currently are being severely criticized. The conclusions of the commission, especially its conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in the assassination, have been openly challenged.

In support of their speculations, some of the critics allege, among other things, that there is a "conflict" between portions of two F.B.I. reports and the official autopsy report regarding the wounds found in the President's body.

While there is a difference in the information reported by the F.B.I. and the information contained in the autopsy report concerning the wounds, there is no conflict.

The F.B.I. reports record oral statements made by autopsy physicians while the examination was being conducted and before all facts were known. The autopsy report records the final findings of the examination.

Two Agents at Autopsy

Briefly, this is what happened. The autopsy was conducted at Bethesda Naval Hospital on the evening of Nov. 22, 1963. Two F.B.I. agents were present.

They reported that Dr. James J. Humes, chief autopsy surgeon, located what appeared to be a bullet hole in the back below the shoulder and probed it to the end of the opening with a finger. The examining physicians were unable to explain why they could find no bullet or point of exit.

Unknown to the agents, the physicians eventually were able to trace the path of the bullet through the body. On the morning of Nov. 23, 1963, Dr. Humes contacted doctors who treated the President at Parkland Hospital in Dallas, Tex., the previous day and confirmed his assumption that a tracheotomy had been performed using a bullet hole in the front of the neck as the point of incision.

The information reported by the agents present during the autopsy was summarized on page 18 of the F.B.I. report dated Dec. 9, 1963.

Hole Found in Clothing

Meanwhile, the clothing worn by the President when he was shot was examined in the F.B.I. laboratory. This examination revealed a small hole in the back of his coat and shirt and a slit characteristic of an exit hole for a projectile in the front of the shirt one inch below the collar button. A nick on the left side of the tie knot, possibly caused by the same projectile which passed through the shirt, also was noted.

These findings clearly indicated the examining physician's early observation that the bullet penetrated only a short distance into the President's back probably was in error.

Since this observation had been included in the F.B.I. report of Dec. 9, 1963, another reference was made to it in the report of Jan. 13, 1964, in conjunction with the laboratory findings to point up this probability.

The F.B.I. and the Warren Commission each received a copy of the official autopsy report on Dec. 23, 1963, from Secret Service following a specific request for this document. Since the F.B.I. knew the commission had a copy of the official autopsy, its contents were not repeated in an F.B.I. report.

Film Charge Denied

Recently the charge has been made that the F.B.I. altered the film of the assassination taken by Abraham Zapruder. This is totally false. The F.B.I. never had the original Zapruder film in its possession—it was purchased by a national magazine. The F.B.I. obtained a copy of the original uncut film and reproduced this for the commission, which since has turned it over to national archives.

At the direction of President Johnson, the F.B.I. conducted a prompt, intensive, objective and thorough investigation of the assassination. The results of this investigation were accurately reported to the Warren Commission.

Not one shred of evidence has been developed to link any other person in a conspiracy with Oswald to assassinate President Kennedy. All available evidence and facts point to one conclusion—that Oswald acted alone in his crime.

French TV Weighs Report

Special to The New York Times 25

PARIS, Nov. 25—French television broadcast tonight a graphic, 40-minute examination of the controversy over the Warren Report.

The framework of the show was provided by interviews of a French-speaking United States lawyer upholding the Warren Commission's findings and a French journalist presenting the case of the critics.

Over-all, the show induced a compelling impression of doubt that Oswald had acted alone.

The show faded out at the end on a studio mock-up of the scene of the assassination in Dallas as an announcer speculated about whether the truth would ever be known.

The scale model appeared repeatedly during the program as investigators set the scene and returned to it as points of controversy were injected verbally and then demonstrated.

Spot footage was introduced to provide the scale for viewers. Library footage and still pictures were shown to fix the event, its actors and their implements. Sketches and diagrams were used for additional clarity.

The assassination sequence was used with slow-motion cartoons to give viewers the time element, against which were opposed views and explanations tending to demonstrate that Oswald could not have fired three shots so accurately in so short a time. Spot interviews brought in suggestions that four shots may have been fired, two in close succession.

The program was the lead subject of the television network's weekly news "magazine," entitled "Panorama."

Through innuendo and suggestion, the program cast doubt on Jack Ruby's role in the event, and it listed those connected near or far with the event who have met deaths under "suspicious" conditions.

Despite assertions from persons supporting the report's conclusions, the program clearly left the door open to speculation about a possible conspiracy.

Warren Unit Aide Sees New Probe As Waste of Time

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—A Tulane University law professor who served as a Warren Commission investigator says he believes a new probe of the assassination of President Kennedy would be a waste of time.

Leon D. Hubert Jr., former Orleans Parish district attorney, worked with the commission on conspiracy aspects of the assassination.

Hubert said yesterday he agreed with the findings of the commission on the death of the late president. Earlier yesterday, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the FBI, said all available evidence indicates Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in the assassination.

Hubert said no link was found between Jack Ruby and Oswald. Ruby gunned down Oswald as police led him through a station basement. Hubert said he was convinced Ruby told the truth down the line about acting alone in the death of Oswald.

Oswald Killed Without Help, Hoover Says

By PAUL HEALY

Washington, Nov. 25 (News Bureau) — FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover said today that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in killing President Kennedy.

Hoover released a statement sent a newsman who reuqested comment on certain "alleged conflicts" in the Warren Commission assasination report.

"Not one shred of evidence has been developed to link any other person in a conspiracy with Oswald to assasinate President Kennedy. All available evidence and facts point to one conclusion — that Oswald acted alone in his crime," Hoover declared.

Right to Views

While magazine and book critics have eevry right to state their views, the FBI boss said, "They should show more regard for the facts on the record. They have ignored certain facts, misinterpreted others and expressed pure speculation as truth."

Hoover noted that it has been charged that the FBI altered the film of he assassination taken by a bystander, Abraham Zapruder. "This is totally false," Hoover said.

Under orders from President Johnson, Hoover stated the FBI "conducted a prompt, intensive, objective and thorough investigation of the assassination."

Hoover Asserts Warren Critics Ignore and Misinterpret Facts

By Stephen M. Aug
Associated Press

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover rapped critics of the Warren Commission report on the assassination of President Kennedy yesterday, saying they "ignored certain facts, misinterpreted others and expressed pure speculation as truth."

In a statement, Hoover said also:

• "Not one shred of evidence has been developed to link any other person in a conspiracy with (Lee Harvey) Oswald to assassinate President Kennedy."

• "While there is a difference in the information reported by the FBI and the information contained in the autopsy report concerning the wounds, there is no conflict."

• The FBI never altered the film of the assassination taken by Abraham Zapruder, a bystander.

Hoover made the comments in a statement requested by the Evening Star and made available to other news media.

Hoover devoted most of the statement to explaining differences between FBI reports of the Kennedy autopsy and the official report.

"The FBI reports record oral statements made by autopsy physicians while the examination was being conducted and before all the facts were known. The autopsy report records the final findings of the examination," Hoover said.

Hoover recalled that when the autopsy was conducted at the Bethesda Naval Hospital on the evening of Nov. 22, 1963 —the day Mr. Kennedy was shot—"two FBI agents were present. He said:

"They reported that Dr. James J. Humes, chief autopsy surgeon, located what appeared to be a bullet hole in the back below the shoulder and probed it to the end of the opening with a finger. The examining physicians were unable to locate [illegible] they could find no bullet or point of exit."

But Hoover said that, unknown to the agents, the physicians eventually were able to trace the path of the bullet through the body.

~~Facts~~ Point to One Conclusion'

FBI Defends Warren Report

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover yesterday joined the attack on critics of the Warren Commission Report on the assassination of President Kennedy.

Mr. Hoover, whose agents "conducted a prompt, intensive, objective and thoro investigation," said recent critics "have ignored certain facts, misinterpreted others, and expressed pure speculation as truth."

CONFLICT

The FBI Chief said that seemingly conflicting Bureau reports on the autopsy performed on the President's body could be explained by the fact that doctors performing the autopsy in the presence of FBI agents, were unable to locate accurately the exit wound made by a bullet that struck the President in the back.

Later, after the agents had left the autopsy room, the doctors discovered that the bullet made its exit from his neck, a fact that had been obscured because Dallas physicians had used the exit wound as the point of incision for a tracheotomy.

Since the FBI knew the Commission received a copy of the final, official autopsy report, showing the location of the exit wound, it did not change the report of the agents who saw the autopsy. The Bureau, however, did give the Commission its laboratory report on the President's clothing, which showed a bullet exit hole in his shirt collar front.

REJECTS

Mr. Hoover also rejected a claim that the FBI had altered a movie of the assassination taken by Abraham Zapruder, which he had sold to Life Magazine.

The FBI never had possession of the original, but obtained "a copy of the original uncut film", which it then copied for the Commission, Mr. Hoover said.

"Not one shred of evidence has been developed to link any other person in a conspiracy with (Lee Harvey) Oswald to assassinate President Kennedy."

"All available evidence and facts point to one conclusion — that Oswald acted alone in his crime," he said.

Hoover Hits Warren Critics, Insists Oswald Acted Alone

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25 (AP)—FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said today all available evidence indicate that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

"Not one shred of evidence has been developed to link any other person in a conspiracy with Oswald to assassinate President Kennedy," Hoover said in a statement.

A number of books, articles and statements recently have raised questions about the validity of the findings of the Warren Commission, which named Oswald as the assassin and said he acted alone. The FBI turned over all its own findings to the commission.

Hoover said that although the critics have every right to state their views, they "should show more regard for the facts on record. They have ignored certain facts, misinterpreted others, and expressed pure speculation as truth."

Hoover noted that some of the critics allege, among other things, that there is a conflict between portions of two FBI reports and the official autopsy report regarding the wounds found in Kennedy's body.

But he said "while there is a difference in the information reported by the FBI and the information contained in the autopsy report concerning the wounds, there is no conflict."

Hoover said the FBI reports record oral statements made by autopsy physicians before all the facts were known. The ultimate findings of the examination, he said, are contained in the autopsy report.

Hoover said two FBI agents were present at Bethesda Naval Hospital when the autopsy was performed Nov. 22, 1963.

The agents reported that Dr. James J. Humes, chief autopsy surgeon, "located what appeared to be a bullet hole in the back below the shoulder and probed it to the end of the opening with a finger. The examining physicians were unable to explain why they could find no bullet or point of exit."

Hoover said that, unknown to the agents, the physicians eventually were able to trace the path of the bullet through the body.

The morning following the assassination, Hoover said, Humes contacted physicians who had examined the President at Parkland Hospital in Dallas the previous day. They confirmed Humes' assumption that a tracheotomy had been performed using a bullet hole in the front of the back as the point of incision.

Examination of the President's clothing at the FBI laboratory, Hoover said, "revealed a small hole in the back of his coat and shirt and a slit characteristic of an exit hole for a projectile in the front of the shirt one inch below the collar button."

Hoover added:

"These findings clearly indicated the examining physician's early observation that the bullet penetrated only a short distance into the President's back probably was in error."

This early observation had been included in an FBI report of Dec. 9, 1963, and another reference was made to it in a report of Jan. 13, 1964.

The FBI and the Warren Commission each asked for and received a copy of the official autopsy report on Dec. 23, 1963. Hoover added that since the FBI knew the Warren Commission had a copy of the official autopsy, its contents were not repeated in an FBI report.

Hoover also took issue with those who have said that the FBI altered films of the assassination taken by one Abraham Zapruder.

"This is totally false," Hoover said, "and the FBI never had the original Zapruder film in its possession—it was purchased by a national magazine.

Hoover said the FBI obtained a copy of the original uncut film and reproduced it for the commission, which has since given it to the National Archives.

JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY, THE 35TH PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, WAS SHOT TO DEATH THREE YEARS AGO LAST TUESDAY. HIS SUCCESSOR, LYNDON BAINES JOHNSON, APPOINTED A COMMISSION HEADED BY EARL WARREN, CHIEF JUSTICE OF THE UNITED STATES, TO STUDY THE EVENTS AND REPORT TO THE NATION.

IT WAS HOPED SUCH A STUDY WOULD PRECLUDE THE CONFUSIONS, RUMORS AND THEORIES THAT SURVIVE FROM THE ASSASSINATION OF LINCOLN. IT WAS HOPED THAT HISTORY WOULD BE SATISFIED. BUT BY THE THIRD ANNIVERSARY OF THE KENNEDY TRAGEDY, CERTAIN ASPECTS OF THE WARREN COMMISSION REPORT WERE CAST INTO DOUBT. AND ONE OF THE PROMINENT DOUBTERS WAS TEX. GOV. JOHN CONNALLY, WHO TOOK A BULLET HIMSELF ON THAT BLACK FRIDAY IN DALLAS.

SIMPLY PUT, THE WARREN COMMISSION BELIEVES ONLY LEE HARVEY OSWALD WAS INVOLVED; OSWALD FIRED THREE BULLETS FROM BEHIND; THE FIRST BULLET WENT THROUGH KENNEDY'S THROAT AND STRUCK CONNALLY; THE SECOND BULLET IS UNACCOUNTED FOR; THE THIRD BULLET SHATTERED THE PRESIDENT'S BRAIN.

"I AM CONVINCED BEYOND ANY DOUBT THAT I WAS NOT STRUCK BY THE FIRST BULLET," CONNALLY TOLD A NEWS CONFERENCE WEDNESDAY.

"I KNOW THAT I HEARD THE FIRST SHOT, THAT I TURNED TO SEE WHAT HAPPENED, AND THAT I WAS STRUCK BY A SECOND SHOT," THE GOVERNOR SAID. "THE THIRD SHOT HIT THE PRESIDENT AND NOT ME."

CONNALLY SAID HE BELIEVES THE COMMISSION REPORT'S PRINCIPAL FINDING--THAT OSWALD ACTED ALONE--BUT DIFFERS ON THE ONE DETAIL ABOUT WHICH BULLET HE RECEIVED.

The Ghouls

THE MERCHANTS of morbidity keep setting new highs in output and new lows in taste by refusing to let go of the horror of Nov. 22, 1963—and refusing to let the memory of John F. Kennedy rest decently in peace.

Some of the doubters are unquestionably sincere, but many more seem motivated by a hunger for the buck, a thirst for publicity, a drive for circulation at all costs. There is also in this sordid tapestry a pattern of what could most charitably be called political mischief.

But, whatever the assorted motivations, the effect is the same—to impugn not only the honesty of the Warren Commission report but the integrity of the commission and its head, the Chief Justice of the United States.

That would be excusable if some useful purpose were being served. But it isn't. Virtually every scrap of so-called evidence, every tortured argument advanced by the doubters was carefully evaluated by the Warren Commission in reaching its conclusions.

Real-life tragedy seldom meets the requirements of a scenario. The explanation does not come in a neat package, with all loose ends tied up.

The Warren Commission made no pretense of handing down any such package. Nor could it, with Lee Harvey Oswald dead. The commission had to rely on judgment as well as painstaking evaluation of all the available evidence in reaching its verdict—that Oswald was the sole assassin.

There has been no evidence persuasive enough to upset that carefully reasoned, abundantly documented conclusion—nor to support the bizarre, sinister but implausible thesis of conspiracy.

Certainly it is highly significant that Gov. Connally of Texas, while disagreeing with the commission on which bullet struck him, nonetheless is "satisfied beyond any doubt" there was only one assassin, reaffirms his confidence in the commission and vehemently opposes any futile re-investigation.

Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr. insists there is a "residue of uncertainty" in people's minds. Naturally. But it has been put there by its irresponsible manufacturers. This is like detonating dynamite and deploring the devastation.

Out of respect for common decency and for the memory of a martyred president, we think it is time to ask the ghouls, the buck-chasers, the sensation-mongers and the character assassins to desist—to shut up until or unless they can put up, as so far they have so notoriously failed to do.

Bitter Attacks and Debate Clouding Warren Report

By LARRY VAN GELDER
World Journal Tribune Staff

Debate, controversy, criticism.

In newspapers, magazines, books, on television—these words are sounded in a mounting chorus addressed to one topic, the Warren Commission.

As the pace of attacks accelerates, as the volume of words multiplies, as time passes, the commission itself and its report seem to fade. They appear not as living people and a real document but as a combined one-dimensional traget, devoid of depth or substance, less real, less immediate than the latest critic or criticism.

Recent polls show that fewer Americans today are convinced that Lee Harvey Oswald assassinated President Kennedy than at any time since the shooting. Most remain unconvinced that the assassination was the work of one man—yet they cannot say who was behind the plot. And most believe that the full story of the events of Nov. 22, 1963 was not told in the Warren Commission report.

LIKE MOST DEBATES

Like most debates, this one has nearly obscured the subjects of its origin, the Warren Commission and its report.

Seven days after the death of President Kennedy, the so-called Warren Commission was created by President Johnson in Executive Order Number 11130, "Appointing a Commission to Report upon the Assassination of President John F. Kennedy."

The commission was charged to "ascertain, evaluate and report upon the facts relating" to the assassination of Kennedy and "the man charged with the assassination."

The order further stated: "The purposes of the commission are to examine the evidence developed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and any additional evidence that may hereafter come to light or be uncovered by federal or state authorities; to make such further investigation as the commission finds desirable; to evaluate all the facts and circumstances surrounding such assassination, including the subsequent violent death of the man charged with the assassination, and to report to me its findings and conclusions."

COOPERATION ORDERED

The order directed all executive departments and agencies to cooperate with the commission, authorized payment of commission expenses from the President's emergency fund, empowered the commission to "prescribe its own procedures and to employ such assistants as it deems necessary," and listed the commission's members.

The first line on the list read simply: "The Chief Justice of the United States, Chairman." That was all. The name Earl Warren did not appear, and the listing of the title, rather than the man, has been interpreted to mean that the prestige, dignity, even majesty of the nation's highest judicial office was what was sought—a symbol to cap the grave, historic task at hand.

Warren was a reluctant appointee. His conviction that no member of the Supreme Court should serve in any other capacity was well-known, long-standing and grounded in the belief that the authority of the office would be diluted by service in a non-judicial capacity.

WARREN ACCEPTED

Initially, Warren rejected President Johnson's request to serve as commission chairman. But the President appealed to his patriotism, stressing the need to answer the nation's and the world's questions by seeking and reporting the full story. Warren then put his personal convictions aside and accepted the appointment.

On Dec. 13, 1963, Congress enacted Senate Joint Resolution 137 (Public Law 88-202) giving the commission the power to issue subpoenas for witnesses and the production of evidence and authorizing the panel to compel testimony by offering immunity to any witness who claimed the fifth amendment's privilege against self-incrimination.

During December and January, federal and state agencies forwarded their investigative reports to the commission. Members of its legal staff pored over the documents and evidence, organizing facts, extracting issues, targeting problems and recommending additional inquiry. The commission sent requests to 10 major departments of the government, 14 independent government agencies and commissions and four Congressional committees for additional information relating to the investigation.

Requests for additional information—statements from witnesses and analysis of physical evidence—were carried out at commission request by the FBI, Secret Service, Internal Revenue Service, State Department, Central Intelligence Agency and individuals from state and city governments. And the commission members from time to time visited the assassination scene and other parts of Dallas.

25,000 INTERVIEWS

The commission said the FBI carried out 25,000 interviews and re-interviews "of persons having information of possible relevance to the investigation" and submitted 2,300 reports totaling 25,400 pages; the Secret Service conducted about 1,500 interviews and submitted 800 reports totaling some 4,600 pages.

commission and its staff took the testimony of 552 witnesses—94 of them heard by members of the commission, 395 by members of the legal staff, 61 in the form of sworn affidavits, and two by statement.

ADVICE ASKED

Although it was later criticized for acting as judge and jury, the commission saw itself "neither as a court presiding over an adversary proceeding nor as a prosecutor determined to prove a case, but as a fact-finding agency committed to the ascertainment of the truth."

Also, "In fairness to the alleged assassin and his family," the commission on Feb. 25, 1964, requested Walter E. Craig to participate in the investigation and to advise the commission whether in his opinion the proceeding conformed to the basic principles of American justice."

The commission said that Craig participated, either personally or through appointed assistants, "without limitation." All records, it said, were made available to him and he had the power to cross-examine witnesses, recall witnesses, and suggest witnesses.

The commission concluded that President Kennedy was killed by Lee Harvey Oswald acting alone, and that the assassin had no motive that could be "judged by the standards of reasonable men."

THE VOLUME

On Thursday, Sept. 24, 1964, members of the commission filed into the cabinet room at the White House, where Chief Justice Earl Warren handed to President Johnson the four-inch thick volume that was its report.

The following day at 9 a.m., in the Indian Treaty Room on the fourth floor of the Executive Office just west of the White House, copies of the report (the 26 volumes of testimony and exhibits followed later) were issued to the press with the condition that no release of the contents whether "paraphrased, alluded to or hinted at" was to be made until 6:30 p.m. Sunday, although certain transmissions to publications were allowed beginning at 3 a.m. Sunday.

When the report was released, reaction—pro and con—was instantaneous and world-wide.

It has yet to subside.

Critics of Warren Report Play With the Facts: Hoover

Washington, Nov. 25 (AP)—FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover today said all available evidence indicates that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in the assassination of President Kennedy.

"Not one shred of evidence has been developed to link any other person in a conspiracy with Oswald to assassinate President Kennedy," Hoover said in a statement.

A number of books, articles and statements recently have raised questions about the validity of the findings of the Warren Commission, which named Oswald as the assassin and said he acted alone. The FBI turned over all its own findings to the commission.

Hoover said that although the critics have every right to state their views, they "should show more regard for the facts on record. They have ignored certain facts, misinterpreted others, and expressed pure speculation as truth."

Hoover noted that some of the critics allege, among other things, that there is a conflict between portions of two FBI reports and the official autopsy report regarding the wounds found in Kennedy's body.

But, he said, "while there is difference in the information reported by the FBI and the information contained in the autopsy report concerning the wounds, there is no conflict."

Hoover said the FBI reports record oral statements made by autopsy physicians before all the facts were known. The ultimate findings of the examination, he said, are contained in the autopsy report.

In Fort Worth, Tex., a note attached to a large bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums on the grave Oswald said ". . . he has left all the world confused."

More than 600 persons yesterday filed by the grave in Rosehill Cemetery on the third anniversary of the slaying of Oswald by Dallas night club operator Jack Ruby.

The typewritten note on the flowers read: "Lee Harvey Oswald. Did he assassinate the President? Was he truthfully accused? Guilty, Yes? Or was he innocent? He has left the world confused."

Autopsy Doctor Says Films Back Warren Report

By PETER KIHSS

X-rays and photographs taken during the autopsy of President Kennedy verify the location of a disputed wound at the base of the back of his neck. But by themselves they cannot end the argument over a bullet's path through his body.

This was the opinion yesterday of one autopsy surgeon, who has seen the X-rays and photographs, which were put into the National Archives Oct. 31. It is also the private opinion of two investigators for the Warren Commission.

In a telephone interview from Bethesda, Md., Dr. J. Thornton Boswell, a retired Navy commander now in private medical practice, said he and the chief autopsy pathologist, Capt. James J. Humes, agree the pictures cannot prove the so-called single-bullet theory.

Single-Bullet Theory

This theory holds that one bullet pierced the back base of the President's neck, passed through and emerged at the lower left part of his tie knot and then wounded Gov. John B. Connally Jr. of Texas in the back, chest, wrist and thigh.

The Warren report said there was "persuasive evidence" for the single bullet theory "although it is not necessary to any essential findings."

The commission held that Lee Harvey Oswald alone assassinated the President, firing three shot in less than eight seconds, including one probable miss. If the President and Governor were wounded separately, questions of timing and the possibility that there were two rifles have been raised by critics.

Dr. Boswell said yesterday he saw the photographs for the first time last Nov. 1. They show clearly, he said, the accuracy of the autopsy report and of the autopsy surgeon's testimony as to the location of the wound.

Error in 'Hasty' Diagram

It was his diagram, Commission Exhibit 397, Dr. Boswell said, that critics of the Warren Commission have cited in arguing that the wound was farther down the back. He said this hasty "work sheet," made during the autopsy, had a "diagram error"—a dot that placed the wound incorrectly. But he said the notes he wrote on the diagram did locate it accurately.

The tracing of the bullet's path must still depend on medical interpretation because it went through soft tissues and muscles, Dr. Boswell said. These were bruised, he said, but the pictures do not conclusively show the path.

Dr. Boswell said of the diagram:

"This was unfortunate. If I had known at the time that this sketch would become public record, I would have been more careful. It was strictly a work sheet, the same as rough working notes. You could see that by looking at it. It was very dirty.

"Its sole purpose was to indicate for the autopsy doctors right, left, front, back—things like that. The photographs were to provide the exact visual description."

'Absolutely No Doubt'

Autopsy surgeons have "absolutely no doubt in our minds now" that a single bullet hit both President Kennedy and Governor Connally, Dr. Boswell said.

Dr. Boswell said Federal Bureau of Investigation reports used by the critics were "simply wrong." The F.B.I. agents present during the autopsy were "not trained in medicine," he said.

F.B.I. spokesmen have said the agents' reports covered discussions that took place during the autopsy. The reports did not take in the final autopsy report, the bureau said.

In the report, the surgeons, after having spoken the next morning with a Dallas hospital surgeon, concluded that the bullet had gone out through a hole in the throat, which had been obliterated by an emergency operation.

The Warren Commission published "schematic drawings," done by a Navy medical illustrator and based on measurements and verbal descriptions given him by the autopsy surgeons just before they were called to testify.

Downward Path Shown

The drawings include Commission Exhibit 385, which shows the downward path the bullet is thought to have taken through the President's neck, and they remain "sufficient to illustrate the finding," Dr. Boswell said yesterday.

Dr. Boswell noted that his diagram, which differs from Exhibit 385, included his handwritten notes of the specific measurements. These fixed the disputed wound at 14 centimeters, or 5½ inches, from the right acromion process, the tip of the right shoulder joint, and 14 centimeters below the tip of the right mastoid process, the bony point immediately behind the ear.

Hole Below Shoulders

In his book "Inquest," Edward Jay Epstein had cited the diagram as indicating a wound higher in front than in back. In his first Viking Press edition, Mr. Epstein gave the text of an F.B.I. summary report, placed in the national archives, which said medical examination had reported a bullet entering the President "just below his shoulder."

In a later Bantam edition, Mr. Epstein added an F.B.I. report that said Dr. Humes located during the autopsy an apparent bullet hole "below the shoulders."

"The end of the opening could be felt with the finger" and Dr. Humes had offered an opinion that the bullet possibly "worked its way out of the body during external cardiac massage," the report said.

In the current Esquire magazine, Mr. Epstein wrote that there was a "flagrant contradiction" between the autopsy report and the F.B.I. agents' report. Mr. Epstein argued that "by viewing the photographs the contradiction can be resolved once and for all time."

According to Volume 2 of the Warren Commission documents, Dr. Humes reported that X-rays and photographs had been made before and during the autopsy. He said the physicians studying the "wound in the lower posterior neck of the President" had "examined carefully the bony structures in this vicinity as well as the X-rays, to see if there was any evidence of fracture or of deposition of metallic fragments." They saw none, he said.

Bruises Photographed

Dr. Humes testified about bruises and discoloration on the upper portion of the right lung and reported hat "Kodachrome photographs were made of this area in the interior of the President's chest."

He testified that the black and white and the color negatives made during the autopsy were not developed before they were turned over to the Secret Service.

Unanswered Questions

There are enough solid doubts of thoughtful citizens, among the shrill attacks on the Warren Commission, now to require answers. Further dignified silence, or merely more denials by the commission or its staff, are no longer enough.

We have come to this conclusion not because of any of the specific charges brought by the dozens of books, TV shows and articles about President Kennedy's assassination but because of the general confusion in the public mind raised by the publication of allegations and the many puzzling questions that have been raised.

Since the whole purpose of the commission's appointment and mission is being eroded a little at a time by the clamor, it would seem the commission itself has the most reason to answer. Certainly, it should be given the chance.

Its members and staff, in varying degree, of course, have full knowledge—or should have—of the investigations, evaluations and decisions that went into the report. Until they have spoken, the demands for special Congressional committees, foundation studies and inquiries by prestigious people seem premature. The Warren Commission itself is composed of leading members of Senate and House and responsible citizens, headed by the respected Chief Justice.

Perhaps every detail will not be settled. History can never be as neatly packaged as fiction, and people are still writing and reading about the assassination of President Lincoln a hundred years later. But enough responsible inquiry has been aroused to deserve responsible answers.

"The members of the Warren Commission have performed a difficult task well," was the comment in these columns when the report was issued more than two years ago. "Their report in no way excludes others from investigating this tragedy, but they have set an admirable standard in the quest for truth."

Further clarification and answers to unanswered questions by them now would be a logical epilogue.

PLAY ABOUT OSWALD OFFERED IN LONDON

LONDON, Nov. 24 (AP)—"The Silence of Lee Harvey Oswald," a play about President Kennedy's assassin, got lukewarm reviews today in London.

The 2½ hour drama, based on the 26-volume Warren Commission Report and interviews with Oswald's mother and his wife, is a detailed study of his character. It opened last night at the small Hampstead Theater Club.

David Nathan of The Sun said the author, Michael Hastings, had attempted to "portray the shadowy figure of Oswald, to stage the evidence of character and motive which might have been given at the trial that never took place."

"In a major sense," he continued, "the play fails. At the end we know no more about Oswald than any cursory reading of evidence could bring."

The Times of London said: "Oswald, despite the exhaustive investigation into his background, remains an impenetrable figure. One respects Mr. Hastings's discipline and concern for the truth, but he seems to have undertaken a hopeless task."

Herbert Kretzmer of The Daily Express said, "Oswald was a dour, humorless, and violent man—beyond his mother's understanding, beyond his wife's, beyond Mr. Hastings's and beyond ours."

M.D. Backs Warren Report, Admits He Erred in Sketch

A DOCTOR whose autopsy sketch has figured in the renewed Kennedy assassination controversy said yesterday the drawing was only a worksheet and that films of President Kennedy's body prove it.

The sketch shows a bullet wound in the President's back, not the base of his neck where the Warren Commission says the first shot struck. Critics of the Commission report say the sketch proves that the shot could not have exited from the President's throat and hit Texas Gov. John B. Connally, and that thus there must have been two assassins.

But Dr. J. Thornton Boswell, who helped perform the Kennedy autopsy at Bethesda Naval Hospital, said the sketch was drawn quickly as "rough notes" and that his longhand notes with the sketch gave the correct precise location of the wound.

Moreover, he said, he has seen autopsy photos—recently turned over to the National Archives by the Kennedy family— and they show the wound in the back of the neck.

Asked about an FBI report that the wound was in the back. Dr. Thornton said it was simply wrong. He noted that the FBI agents at the autopsy were not trained in medicine.

Dr. Thornton, a former Navy doctor, is now in private practice here.

EXHIBIT—A former Navy doctor, Cmdr. J. Thornton Boswell, has admitted he made a mistake in this hasty sketch at the time of the autopsy on President Kennedy's body. He said the first bullet wound was at the base of the neck and not as far down the back as indicated in the sketch.

Hoover Asserts Warren Critics Ignore and Misinterpret Facts

By Stephen M. Aug
Associated Press

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover rapped critics of the Warren Commission report on the assassination of President Kennedy yesterday, saying they "ignored certain facts, misinterpreted others and expressed pure speculation as truth."

In a statement, Hoover said also:

• "Not one shred of evidence has been developed to link any other person in a conspiracy with (Lee Harvey) Oswald to assassinate President Kennedy."

• "While there is a difference in the information reported by the FBI and the information contained in the autopsy report concerning the wounds, there is no conflict."

• The FBI never altered the film of the assassination taken by Abraham Zapruder, a bystander.

Hoover made the comments in a statement requested by the Evening Star and made available to other news media.

Hoover devoted most of the statement to explaining differences between FBI reports of the Kennedy autopsy and the official report.

"The FBI reports record oral statements made by autopsy physicians while the examination was being conducted and before all the facts were known. The autopsy report records the final findings of the examination," Hoover said.

Hoover recalled that when the autopsy was conducted at the Bethesda Naval Hospital on the evening of Nov. 22, 1963—the day Mr. Kennedy was shot—"two FBI agents were present. He said:

"They reported that Dr. James J. Humes, chief autopsy surgeon, located what appeared to be a bullet hole in the back below the shoulder and probed it to the end of the opening with a finger. The examining physicians were unable to explain why they could find no bullet or point of exit."

But Hoover said that, unknown to the agents, the physicians eventually were able to trace the path of the bullet through the body.

(KENNEDY)

WASHINGTON--FBI DIRECTOR J. EDGAR HOOVER SAID TODAY THAT DESPITE THE CONTINUING CONTROVERSY OVER THE WARREN COMMISSION REPORT, ALL AVAILABLE EVIDENCE INDICATES LEE HARVEY OSWALD ACTED ALONE IN KILLING JOHN F. KENNEDY.

HOOVER SAID CRITICS OF THE COMMISSION CONCLUSION THAT OSWALD WAS UNAIDED IN THE ASSASSINATION HAVE EVERY RIGHT TO AIR THEIR VIEWS, BUT HE SAID "THEY SHOULD SHOW MORE REGARD FOR THE FACTS ON RECORD."

"THEY HAVE IGNORED CERTAIN FACTS, MISINTERPRETED OTHERS, AND EXPRESSED PURE SPECULATION AS TRUTH," HOOVER SAID.

"NOT ONE SHRED OF EVIDENCE HAS BEEN DEVELOPED TO LINK ANY OTHER PERSON IN A CONSPIRACY WITH OSWALD TO ASSASSINATE PRESIDENT KENNEDY."

ASKED ABOUT CRITICS' CHARGES THAT THERE WERE DISCREPANCIES IN FBI REPORTS AND THE FINDINGS OF AN AUTOPSY, HOOVER SAID THERE WAS A DIFFERENCE IN THE FORMATION, BUT "THERE IS NO CONFLICT."

"THE FBI REPORTS RECORD ORAL STATEMENTS MADE BY AUTOPSY PHYSICIANS WHILE THE EXAMINATION WAS BEING CONDUCTED AND BEFORE ALL FACTS WERE KNOWN," HOOVER SAID. "THE AUTOPSY REPORT RECORDS THE FINAL FINDINGS OF THE EXAMINATIONS."

HE ALSO DENIED A CHARGE THAT THE FBI HAD ALTERED COLORED FILM OF THE ASSASSINATION TAKEN BY ABRAHAM ZAPRUDER, A BYSTANDER AT THE TIME OF THE NOV. 22, 1963, MURDER IN DALLAS.

"THIS IS TOTALLY FALSE," HOOVER SAID. "THE FBI NEVER HAD THE ORIGINAL ZAPRUDER FILM IN ITS POSSESSION."

HE SAID THE FBI OBTAINED A COPY OF THE ORIGINAL, UNCUT FILM AND REPRODUCED IT FOR THE WARREN COMMISSION. IT SINCE HAS BEEN TURNED OVER TO THE NATIONAL ARCHIVES ALONG WITH OTHER PHOTOGRAPHIC EVIDENCE AND MEDICAL DATA CONSIDERED BY THE COMMISSION IN ITS INQUIRY.

HOOVER MADE HIS STATEMENT IN RESPONSE TO NEWSPAPER QUERIES GROWING OUT OF THE CONTROVERSY OVER THE FINDINGS OF THE COMMISSION. THE CONTROVERSY REACHED A NEW HIGH THIS WEEK ON THE THIRD ANNIVERSARY OF KENNEDY'S DEATH.

All Facts Sho[illegible] No Accomplice, Critics Are Told

FBI Chief Charges Warren Report Is Misinterpreted

By RONALD SARRO
Star Staff Writer

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said today that all available evidence and facts point to the one conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

"Not one shred of evidence has been developed to link any other person in a conspiracy with Oswald to assassinate President Kennedy," Hoover said in refuting critics of the Warren Commission report.

Hoover said the FBI reached its conclusion through a "prompt, intensive, objective and thorough investigation of the assassination" ordered by President Johnson.

He said the results of this investigation "were accurately reported" to the Warren Commission, which also concluded that Oswald acted alone in the killing of Kennedy three years ago this week.

The FBI made secret reports on the assassination which the commission considered along with other evidence. The FBI reports have been preserved, but have not been made public.

The Star asked Hoover for a statement on the assassination in light of recent confusion and doubt created about the validity of the commission findings in a rash of books, articles and statements.

Asked About "Conflicts"

In particular, Hoover was asked to comment on alleged conflicts concerning variances in FBI reports, dated Dec. 9, 1963, and Jan. 13, 1964, and the official autopsy report made by doctors to the commission. These have been used by some critics to support their conclusions.

On the [illegible] question of the commissi[illegible] conclusion, Hoover sa[illegible] critics have every right to state their views, "they should show more regard for the facts on record.

"They have ignored certain facts, misinterpreted others, and expressed pure speculation as truth," Hoover said.

Hoover emphasized that he was speaking only for the FBI and not for any other agency or group involved in any phase of the investigation and inquiry into the assassination.

He said that while there is a difference in information reported by the FBI and information in the autopsy report on Kennedy's wounds, "there is no conflict."

"The FBI reports record oral statements made by autopsy physicians while the examination was being conducted and before all facts were known. The autopsy report records the final findings of the examination."

He said two FBI agents were present as the autopsy was conducted the night of Nov. 22, contacted doctors who treated the President at Parkland Hospital in Dallas, Tex., the previous day and confirmed his assumption that a tracheotomy had been performed using a bullet hole in the front of the neck as the point of incision."

See KENNEDY, Page A-8

Hoover said the information from the two agents present during the autopsy was summarized in an FBI report dated Dec. 9, 1963. Hoover continued:

"Meanwhile, the clothing worn by the President when he was shot was examined by the FBI Laboratory. This examination revealed a small hole in the back of his coat and shirt and a slit characteristic of an exit hole for a projectile in the front of the shirt one inch below the collar button. A nick on the left side of the tie knot, possibly caused by the same projectile which passed through the shirt, also was noted."

Photos of the clothing were contained among evidence pictured in the Warren Commission report, but public display of the clothes has been prohibited during the lifetime of Kennedy relatives.

Hoover said the lab findings "clearly indicated the examining physicians' early observation that the bullet penetrated only a short distance into the President's back was in error."

Therefore, in its report Jan. 13 the FBI referred both to the early observation by the physician, and the probability that his initial finding was in error in view of the laboratory evidence, Hoover said.

Hoover said both the FBI and Warren Commission received copies of the official autopsy report from the Secret Service Dec. 23, 1963. He said since the commission had a copy, the FBI did not repeat its contents in its Jan. 13 report.

Critics of the Warren Commission report have questioned that the same bullet that struck Kennedy's neck also passed through and hit Texas Gov. John B. Connally.

They claim that because of the rapidity of the shots fired, another rifleman was part of the plot to kill Kennedy if Connally was struck by a separate bullet.

The December FBI report indicated a bullet that was reportedly found on Kennedy's stretcher at Parkland did not pass through the President's neck. The Warren Commission later found evidence the bullet came from Connally's stretcher.

The FBI report also concluded, based on the wrong stretcher, that "it was entirely possible" an external cardiac massage performed at Parkland caused the bullet to work its way back out of the point of entry.

But as Hoover pointed out, the tracheotomy incision was later found to be the point the bullet exited, and the FBI found exit holes on the front of Kennedy's clothes. The FBI also said the original reference to Kennedy's stretcher was wrong; it was Connally's stretcher.

The evidence that the bullet passed through Kennedy's neck, and exit hole in front of the shirt and nick on the knot of the tie's left side, indicated the bullet then went into Connally, who sat in front of Kennedy, the Warren Commission concluded.

Connally was struck in the right shoulder, the bullet exited from his chest and went through his wrist, entering his left leg just above the knee. The Warren Commission said another bullet missed and another hit the sion, which since has turned it over to the National Archives."

Some critics of the Warren Commission report recently have used the film in an attempt to support a theory that more than one rifleman was involved in a plot to kill Kennedy.

Gov. Connally, wounded as he sat in front of Kennedy in the presidential limousine as the assassin struck, said Wednesday he disagrees with the theory that the same bullet that apparently passed through Kennedy's neck hit the goverror in the back.

Connally said he believes he was wounded by a separate bullet, not by one that first hit Kennedy. But Connally said he agrees with the Warren Commission that Oswald alone did the shooting and sees no reason for the investigation to be reopened.

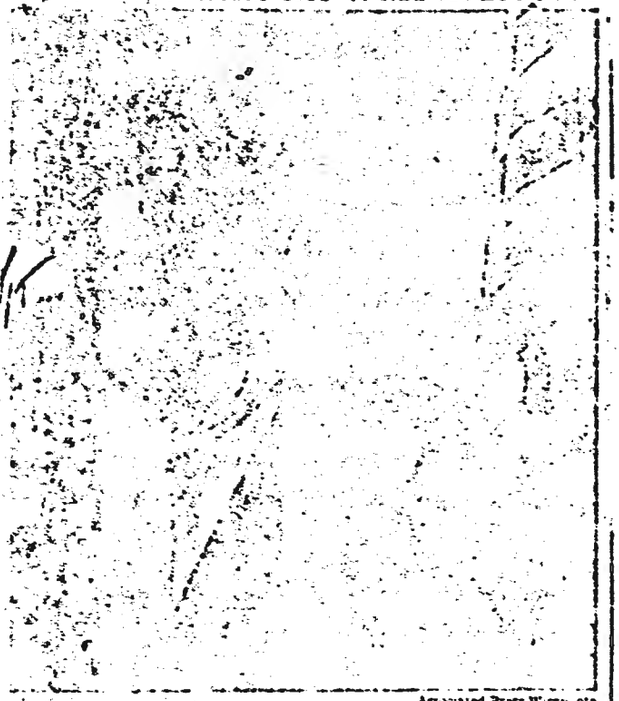
Governor Backs the Warren Report



Associated Press Wirephoto

Governor John B. Connally Jr. of Texas at news session

By MARTIN WALDRON

Special to The New York Times

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 23—Gov. John B. Connally Jr. said today that the Warren Commission's findings on President Kennedy's assassination should be accepted as final unless compelling new evidence is brought forth. A new investigation is "neither warranted, justified or desirable," he said. The Governor, who was riding in a Dallas motorcade with President Kennedy, was wounded in the chest, right wrist and left leg when the President was assassinated. He still carries a bullet fragment just above his left kneecap. Mr. Connally said today that many criticisms of the Warren Commission's investigation might have "political overtones." He said he was shocked "that in the backlash of tragedy, journalistic scavengers such as Mark Lane attempt to impugn the motives" of members of the commission. Mr. Connally would not elaborate on his suggestion of political overtones. "I am going to let it rest right there," he said.

He said he had not read any of the books that have criticized the Warren Commission's findings, including "Rush to Judgment," written by Mr. Lane, a New York lawyer.

The Governor said that he had read press reports and book reviews on the books he was talking about and that he always accepted as accurate whatever he read in newspapers.

Mr. Connally decided to hold the news conference, at the State Capitol, after, he said, he had been besieged with questions about a Life magazine article this week.

In the article the Governor repeated that he disagreed with the Warren Commission's finding that he and President Kennedy were both hit by one of three shots fired down on the open limousine in front of the Texas School Book Depository.

Sole Disagreement

The Governor said today that his sole disagreement with the Warren Commission's findings centered on which bullet struck him.

"I am convinced, beyond any doubt, that I was not struck by the first bullet. I know that I heard the first shot, and I turned to see what happened, and that I was struck by a second shot. The third shot struck the President and not me," he said.

The Warren Commission found that there were three shots and that one went through President Kennedy's neck and into Governor Connally's body, that one shot hit the President in the head, and that one shot probably missed both men.

Governor Connally said the shot that hit him did not hit President Kennedy.

The Governor said he had had no intention of adding fuel to the flames of dissension when he agreed to review a motion picture of the assassination for Life magazine and to point out just when he was struck.

He said, "They asked me to do it and I agreed."

The Life magazine article was not one of those with "political overtones," the Governor said.

Mr. Connally, a close friend of President Johnson, said he had discussed "very casually" with Mr. Johnsom some of the criticisms of the Warren Commission investigation. But he said he and the President had never "sat down" and discussed the Warren Commission report itself.

He did not reveal Mr. Johnson's feelings about the criticisms.

Governor Connally said he did not regard his own views as to which shot wounded him as casting any doubt on the validity of the Warren Commission's over-all findings.

The Governor said he was satisfied that the shot that hit him was fired by Lee Harvey Oswald, named by the Warren Commission as the assassin of President Kennedy. The Governor said he did not believe there was more than one person involved in the shooting.

"There are certain facts about this assassination which may never be known," he said. He added that he did not consider his memory or his judgment to be infallible.

He said he had not even heard the shot that wounded him in the chest, although his wife, Idanell Connally, he said, heard three shots.

Text of Governor Connally's Statement

58

Special to The New York Times

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 23—Following is a statement made by Gov. John B. Connally Jr. today in discussing the assassination of President Kennedy in Dallas three years ago:

So that there will be no misunderstanding or misinterpretation of this news conference today, let me first speak to you from a prepared text.

I want to make it abundantly clear that I have no desire to prolong or perpetuate the stark memories of the tragedy of three years ago. This conference has been arranged solely as a result of the widespread request of newsmen.

I will take just a moment to reiterate and to clarify once again the events of that day. Let me point out that this information is not new. It is precisely the information I recalled and related in a television interview from a hospital bed in Dallas on Nov. 27, just a few days following the assassination.

It is precisely the way I related it in testimony to the Warren Commission. It also is precisely the way it had been recalled by me in interviews since that time.

I am convinced, beyond any doubt, that I was not struck by the first bullet. I know that I heard the first shot, that I turned to see what happened and that I was struck by a second shot. The third shot struck the President and not me.

As I said earlier, this testimony was presented to the Warren Commission. They chose to disagree, which is their privilege. I maintain my original view, always shall.

I want to make it very clear, however, that simply because I disagree with the Warren Commission on this one detail does not mean that I disagree with the substance of their over-all findings.

I think the commission did an outstanding job under difficult circumstances. Each of the members of that commission, Chief Justice Earl Warren, Senator Richard B. Russell, Senator John Sherman Cooper, Representative Hale Boggs, Representative Gerald Ford, Mr. Allen Dulles and Mr. John J. McCloy, are men of unquestioned integrity, of long and devoted service to their nation, men whose dedication to the task of seeking truth in these circumstances I would never question, and men whose patriotism has been manifested so many times in so many ways over such a long period that it now is somewhat shocking to me that in the backlash of tragedy, journalistic scavengers such as Mark Lane, attempting to impugn the motives of these members individually, cast doubts upon the commission as a whole and question the credibility of the Government itself.

I think it is time that we pause and reflect on who these individuals are and rather than calling for a further investigation of the assassination, which in my judgment is neither warranted, justified or desirable, we should turn our attention to doing a little research on and evaluation of the credentials of the self-appointed experts who, with no evidence, no new facts, nevertheless use distortion, inference, innuendo, in order to cast doubts and create confusion

I suspect that a searching investigation into their own credentials will divulge that their motives have political overtones and that their views have been given prominence out of proportion to their value.

'Journalistic Scavengers' Blasted

Connally Defends Warren Report

B. APP. 10X 1/17

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 24 — Texas Gov. John Connally yesterday criticized "self-appointed experts who, with no evidence, no new facts ... use distortion, inference, innuendo, in order to cast doubts and create confusion" about the assassination of President Kennedy.

Gov. Connally, wounded in the shooting on Nov. 22, 1963, said he saw no reason for another investigation into the tragedy — despite his disagreement with some of the findings of the Warren Commission.

The 49-year-old governor, who still carries a bullet fragment in his left leg, said he heard three shots fired at the motorcade in downtown Dallas.

"I am convinced beyond any doubt that I was not struck by the first bullet," Gov. Connally said.

The Warren Report said three shots were fired at the President by Lee Harvey Oswald. The first hit Mr. Kennedy in the neck and passed thru his throat to hit Gov. Connally in the shoulder, right wrist and left leg. The Commission said a second shot hit Mr. Kennedy. "I know that I heard the first shot, that I turned to see what happened, and that I was struck by a second shot," he said. "The third shot hit the President and not me."

The Warren Commission "chose to disagree, which is their privilege," he said.

"I want to make it very clear, however, that simply because I disagree with the Warren Commission on this one detail does not mean that I disagree with the substance of their overall findings," Gov. Connally said.

"Unless and until there is some new evidence of significant value," he said, another investigation "is neither warranted, justified or desirable."

Differs Only on Which Bullet Hit Him

Connally Hits Warren Report Critics, Sees No Need for New Investigation

By Stuart Long
Special to The Washington Post

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 23 — Three years and a day after he was wounded when President John F. Kennedy was assassinated, Gov. John B. Connally of Texas struck out at those who feel a new investigation should be made.

Connally strongly and vehemently told a packed news conference that he sees no need for a new investigation. He said he differs with the Warren Commission only on a single point, but he does not think the difference is of enough importance to justify an additional look into the case. He said he agreed with the Commission's conclusion that Kennedy was killed by Lee Harvey Oswald acting alone.

The single point of difference is this: Connally thinks that of the three shots fired at the Presidential car that sunny Nov. 22 in Dallas, the first and third struck only the President, and the second struck only Connally. The Commission had concluded that Connally was not wounded by the second bullet but by the first bullet after it had initially hit the President and passed through his body.

Connally said, "I am convinced beyond any doubt that I was not struck by the first bullet." He added, "I know that I heard the first shot, that I turned to see what happened, and that I was struck by a second shot. The third shot hit the President and not me."

"This testimony was presented to the Warren Commission," Connally said. "I want to make it very clear, however, that simply because I disagree with the Warren Commission on this one detail does not mean that I disagree with the substance of their over-all findings."

As for his earlier statement that for a fleeting moment he thought there was more than one assassin, Connally said there is no reason "a fleeting thought of my own should be given great value."

He said he heard only the ~~first and~~ third shots, but that Mrs. Connally heard all three clearly.

They agreed that all came from the same direction, "over our right shoulders," the direction of the Texas Book Depository, where Oswald fired rifle shots. Connally believes there was only one assassin, because all the testimony to the Commission pointed to a single man.

He praised all the members of the Commission by name, then turned to a denunciation.

". . . It now is somewhat shocking to me that in the backlash of tragedy, journalistic scavengers such as Mark Lane attempted to impugn the motives of these members individually, cast doubt upon the Commission as a whole and question the whole credibility of the Government itself."

He continued, "I suspect that a searching investigation into their own credentials will divulge that their motives have political overtone and that their views have been given prominence out of proportion to their value."

Connally said in response to questions that Life magazine, for which he viewed assassination movies to try to ascertain the timing of the shots, was not among those he characterized as "journalistic scavengers."

House Chiefs Back Warren Commission As Criticism Grows

By PETER KIHSS

While new voices called for another inquiry into the assassination of President Kennedy, Democratic and Republican leaders of the House of Representatives contended yesterday that the basic questions had been answered by the Warren Commission.

In contrast to their view, Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr., former assistant to the President and winner of a Pulitzer Prize-winning history of his 1,000-day Administration, said there was a "residue of uncertainty" in people's minds that should be reduced. Mr. Schlesinger suggested that Congress initiate a new inquiry.

Yesterday on the third anniversary of the assassination in Dallas, Tex., on Nov. 22, 1963, Mayor Erik Jonsson of that city brought a wreath of bluish-pink roses on green satin to the new bronze historical marker near the assassination site. A boys' choir sang at another ceremony in Dallas, songs that it had sung for Mr. Kennedy that morning.

In Arlington National Cemetery, frost glistened on the President's hillside grave when his brother and sister-in-law, Senator and Mrs. Robert F. Kennedy arrived shortly after sunrise, the first of members of the family there to say prayers during the day. At noon a Naval aide brought a wreath from President Johnson.

The nagging worries, which have evoked a flurry of new books and criticisms of the September, 1964, findings by the commission headed by Earl Warren, Chief Justice of the United States, impelled Senator Russell B. Long to observe that further inquiry might be desirable.

Suspicions by Long

News services reported the Louisiana Democrat had answered a reporter's question in New Orleans late Monday by saying he had no doubt that Lee Harvey Oswald — whom the commission pronounced to be the President's lone assassin — had played a role.

But Senator Long, whose father was killed in an assassination while in office as a Senator, said he had "always suspected there was someone else involved" in killing Mr. Kennedy.

He was quoted as saying "whoever fired that second shot was a better shot than Oswald and he was using a better weapon." Mr. Long's office said yesterday he could not be reached for elaboration.

Representative Carl Albert of Oklahoma, the House Democratic majority leader, said he believed "the commission answered the basic questions."

Mr. Albert said he had kept up with its proceedings through the newspapers and had read the book titled "Portrait of the Assassin," which was written by one commissioner, Representative Gerald R. Ford, Republican of Michigan.

"I never did get excited about minor inconsistencies [illegible]," Mr. Albert said. Noting he was a lawyer, he observed, "I think the evidence here is better than in the Abraham Lincoln case," a Presidential assassination, which, 101 years later, is still disputed in some quarters.

"Of course, by saying I do not see any reason why further administrative or Congressional investigation should be made," Mr. Albert added, "I would not want to be in the position of encroaching on the powers of the properly constituted committees of Congress. I just don't know of any evidence."

Criticisms Criticized

Representative Ford, now the House Republican leader, said the criticisms in books and articles dealing with the Warren report had been "speculative."

"In none of the articles," he said, "have I seen any new evidence whatsoever. At such time as I see any new evidence, I would be glad to examine it or to have responsible authorities or some group other than the Warren Commission consider that."

Senator Richard B. Russell, Democrat of Georgia, who had been a commission member, issued a statement last night from his home in Windsor, Ga.

Senator Russell said he knew of no instance in which recent critics had presented "any hard testimony to answer the questions that are so easy to raise."

He added that he had caused several qualifications to be made in the report "pointing to the impossibility of dogmatic certainty in some of the findings."

Mr. Schlesinger, now a professor at City University here, said he had not read either the Warren report or the various books on the assassination of Mr. Kennedy. He said the case remained "too painful."

"Just on the basis of the public reaction," Professor Schlesinger observed, "it's perfectly clear, it seems to me, that since the Warren Commission, questions have arisen which would sort of leave people dissatisfied."

He continued:

"If this is so, it seems to me to warrant a fresh look. I am not a master of any details. I think enough points have been raised both about the conduct of the inquiry as well as about the substantive problems developed in the inquiry that there is a residue of uncertainty. Whatever can be done to reduce, to narrow, that zone of uncertainty.

One call for a Congressional or other investigation to "re-examine evidence" and consider data that the Warren Commission was alleged to have "failed to evaluate" had come this week from Life magazine. But yesterday its sister publication, Time magazine, took the opposite view. Both enterprises are led by Henry R. Luce.

"Even a new investigation," Time declared, "would be committed to making its own judgments and offering its best reasoned opinions—just as the Warren Commission did — in crucial areas where no firm facts exist. Thus, lacking any new evidence, there seems little valid excuse for so dramatic a development as another full-scale inquiry."

Life magazine's view was based on renewed disagreement by Gov. John B. Connally Jr. of Texas with the commission's theory that both he and President Kennedy had been struck b a single bullet.

The Governor believes he was wounded a half-second to 1.3 seconds after the time the commission believed President Kennedy was first hit—too short an interval for two shots to come from Oswald's rifle, which needed 2.3 seconds between shots.

Eye Witness Satisfied

Arlen Specter, District Attorney of Philadelphia and assistant counsel for the former commission, said yesterday:

"Based on all the facts, including those presented by Connally and many other witnesses, the commission concluded that Governor Connally was incorrect."

In Dallas, Charles F. Brehm, who stood less than 20 feet from the President's limousine but was never called before the commission, said yesterday he was "more than satisfied" with the findings.

A World War II Ranger staff sergeant wounded in Normandy, Mr. Brehm said he had seen the President hit by two bullets and considered a third shot went wild. But he added, "I did not see the man who shot him," and "I did not see the shots fired."

In another Dallas interview, S. M. Holland, a railroad signal supervisor who had been a commission witness, insisted "there definitely was a shot fired from behind that fence" — a point ahead of President Kennedy's car. Oswald was allegedly behind the President.

"Four or five of us saw it, the smoke," Mr. Holland was quoted as saying by The Associated Press. "One of my employes even saw the muzzle flash. The way the Warren Commission published my testimony, it was kind of watered down some. It made it seem that I wasn't really sure whether I'd heard a shot from the fence."

Mr. Holland said he was certain at least four shots were fired, and perhaps five. He said those from Oswald's alleged position in the Texas School Book Depository Building had been "quite a bit louder than the one from the fence," so he "could tell they were from different rifles."

The commission concluded only three shots were fired.

In Washington, James B. Rhoads, deputy archivist of the National Archives said yesterday that "two-thirds of the investigative and other reports that were furnished to the commission by Federal agencies" had been made available for public scrutiny.

The National Archives and other agencies, Mr. Rhoads said, are "required to review in 1970 the material that remains unopened, and thereafter at 10-year intervals until everything is opened up," although they would not have to wait that long if it seemed possible to release material earlier.

Justice Department guidelines for keeping material locked up, Mr. Rhoads said, cover items that would be detrimental to administering and enforcing laws and regulations "relatively little"; sources of embarrassment to innocent persons; revelations of confidential sources or techniques of investigation; and data relevant to the still pending court prosecution of Jack Ruby for Oswald's murder.

2 Frenchmen Back The Warren Report; Most Are Doubtful

Special to The New York Times

PARIS, Nov. 22 — A small French publishing house is about to publish a small book attacking the attackers of the Warren Commission report on President Kennedy's assassination.

A well-known court reporter wrote in Le Figaro yesterday that it was easier to make a case against Mark Lane, author of the best-selling "Rush to Judgment," than against the commission.

But these two are exceptions. By and large, the major French newspapers and magazines marked the third anniversary today with long articles casting doubt on the commission for one reason or another. France has been the source of the most agitation and suspicion about the case from the start, and it continues to be.

Two newspapers, the prestigious Le Monde and the mass circulation France-Soir, sent reporters from Paris to Texas for the anniversary. This morning Le Figaro carried a half-page article by its New York reporter, Leo Sauvage, the author of one of the dozen-odd doubting books that have been published.

Paris-Match, weekly magazine, has a cover photograph of the Kennedys and Gov. John B. Connally Jr. in their limousine just before the fatal moment, and 18 pages of photographs and re-examination inside.

Candide, a pro-Gaullist weekly magazine, has an eight-page analysis headlined "The Mystery Is in This Bullet," showing a photograph of the bullet that, the commission said, hit the President and the Governor.

Over Warren Report

By Richard Harwood
Washington Post Staff Writer

A disquieting undercurrent of suspicion marred this year's anniversary of John F. Kennedy's murder in Dallas.

It infected many parts of the country and many elements of American society and was directed at the official version of the assassination issued more than two years ago by the Warren Commission.

Did Lee Harvey Oswald, contrary to the Commission's findings, have an accomplice in the killing? Were more than three shots fired? Were President Kennedy and Gov. John Connally of Texas struck by different bullets from different rifles?

The doubt raised by these questions was reflected in recommendations from such diverse men as Sen. Russell Long and historian Arthur

See SHOTS, A5, Col. 4

SHOTS—From Page A1

Report Doubts Mar Anniversary

Schlesinger Jr. that a new inquiry into the assassination be undertaken.

Gov. Connally and former White House assistant Malcolm Kilduff added to the public uncertainty by disputing one of the crucial findings of the Warren Commission: That the first bullet that struck the President had also wounded the Governor.

"There is my absolute knowledge," Connally said in a statement this week, "and Nellie's (Mrs. Connally's) knowledge, too, that one bullet caused the President's first wound and that an entirely separate shot struck me."

Kilduff, who was riding in the motorcade that day, agreed with Connally's recollection.

If they are correct, there is a strong probability that at least two assassins were at work in Dallas that day. Films of the assassination strongly suggest that Kennedy and Connally were wounded within a period of one-half second, at the minimum, and less than two seconds at the maximum.

It was physically impossible for a sniper to fire two rounds in that flash of time from a bolt-action rifle of the type Oswald used. Thus, Kennedy and Connally were either struck by the same bullet or two men fired two nearly simultaneous shots.

House Majority Leader Carl Albert brushed off this dilemma yesterday as "a minor inconsistency" and said there was no need for a new inquiry. House Minority Leader Gerald R. Ford agreed.

Sen. Long, on the other hand, said he had been convinced for some time that Oswald had an accomplice who was "a much better shot than Oswald."

Another Senator who was also a member of the Warren Commission, Richard B. Russell of Georgia, disclosed in an interview that he had objected to any categorial finding by the Commission that no conspiracy was involved. "I'm the only man that bucked the report," he said.

Nevertheless, Russell said in a statement yesterday after numerous inquiries:

"I certainly do not have any objection whatever to appointing any number of commissions to review this tragedy, although I am of the opinion that in the abscence of additional testimony, any of these commissions —whether composed of leaders of the American Bar Association, the Congress or any of the other groups suggested— will come to the same general conclusion (as the Warren Commission)."

There even was disagreement yesterday among eyewitnesses to the assassination. Jack Bell, an Associated Press reporter riding in the same car with Kilduff, agreed with the Commission's findings.

A spectator in Dallas, S. M. Russell, on the other hand, insisted that four or five shots were fired and that at least two of them came from in front of the presidential car, rather than from the Texas School Depository where Oswald was located behind the car.

Russell's version, however, was denied by another eyewitness, Charles E. Brehm, who said he was standing 20 feet from the President when he was shot. Brehm said there were three shots, that they all came from the Book Depository, and that in his opinion the Warren Commission was right in its conclusions.

Connally may hold a press conference today to elaborate on his views. But Robert F. Kennedy and other members of the President's family had nothing to add to the controversy.

"Even a new investigation," Time declared, "would be committed to making its own judgments and offering its best reasoned opinions—just as the Warren Commission did — in crucial areas where no firm facts exist. Thus, lacking any new evidence, there seems little valid excuse for so dramatic a development as another full-scale inquiry."

Life magazine's view was based on renewed disagreement by Gov. John B. Connally Jr. of Texas with the commission's theory that both he and President Kennedy had been struck by a single bullet.

The Governor believes he was wounded a half-second to 1.3 seconds after the time the commission believed President Kennedy was first hit—too short an interval for two shots to come from Oswald's rifle, which needed 2.3 seconds between shots.

Ex-Witness Satisfied

Arlen Specter, District Attorney of Philadelphia and assistant counsel for the former commission, said yesterday:

"Based on all the facts, including those presented by Connally and many other witnesses, the commission concluded that Governor Connally was incorrect."

In Dallas, Charles F. Brehm, who stood less than 20 feet from the President's limousine but was never called before the commission, said yesterday he was "more than satisfied" with the findings.

A World War II Ranger staff sergeant wounded in Normandy, Mr. Brehm said he had seen the President hit by two bullets and considered a third shot went wild. But he added, "I did not see the man who shot him," and "I did not see the shots fired."

In another Dallas interview, S. M. Holland, a railroad signal supervisor who had been a commission witness, insisted "there definitely was a shot fired from behind that fence" — a point ahead of President Kennedy's car. Oswald was allegedly behind the President.

"Four or five of us saw it, the smoke," Mr. Holland was quoted as saying by The Associated Press. "One of my employes even saw the muzzle flash. The way the Warren Commission published my testimony, it was kind of watered down some. It made it seem that I wasn't really sure whether I'd heard a shot from the fence."

Mr. Holland said he was certain at least four shots were fired, and perhaps five. He said those from Oswald's alleged position in the Texas School Book Depository Building had been "quite a bit louder than the one from the fence," so he "could tell they were from different rifles."

The commission concluded only three shots were fired.

In Washington, James B. Rhoads, deputy archivist of the National Archives said yesterday that "two-thirds of the investigative and other reports that were furnished to the commission by Federal agencies" had been made available for public scrutiny.

The National Archives and other agencies, Mr. Rhoads said, are "required to review in 1970 the material that remains unopened, and thereafter at 10-year intervals until everything is opened up," although they would not have to wait that long if it seemed possible to release material earlier.

Justice Department guidelines for keeping material locked up, Mr. Rhoads said, cover items that would be detrimental to administering and enforcing laws and regulations "relatively little"; sources of embarrassment to innocent persons; revelations of confidential sources or techniques of investigation; and data relevant to the still pending court prosecution of Jack Ruby for Oswald's murder.

Warren Panel Member Disagrees With Some of the Findings

New JFK Assassination Probe?

The clamor for a new investigation into the assassination of John F. Kennedy seemed certain to increase today with the disclosure that one of the members of the Warren Commission disagreed with some of the panel's findings.

Sen. Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) became the first commission member to publicly disagree with the report and its findings when he said yesterday he was "not satisfied with some of the answers" it gave.

In a related development, Texas Gov. John B. Connally, who was seriously at the time of the assassination, scheduled a news conference at his Austin office to answer questions about the investigation.

DIFFERS

Gov. Connally has differed in at least one respect with the Warren Commission report — that dealing with how many shots were fired. He believes he was hit by a different bullet from the first slug, which passed thru Mr. Kennedy's neck.

The commission's contention was that the same bullet hit Mr. Kennedy and Gov. Connally.

Speculation over the timing of the shots fired at the motorcade in Dallas Nov. 22, 1963, has led to suggestions that Lee Harvey Oswald may have had an accomplice, or that a conspiracy was involved.

Sen. Russell, in an interview with the Atlanta Journal, agreed with Gov. Connally in rejecting the "single bullet" theory, but upheld the commission's findings that Oswald acted alone.

The senator said that tho he was "not completely satisfied about the completeness of some of the anssers the commission was compelled to make, its report was based on the evidence before it and speculation, rumors and questions."

NO OBJECTIONS

He said he had no objection to the appointment of any number of new investigating commissions, but he added:

"I am of the opinion that in the absence of additional testimony any of these commissions — whether composed of leaders of the American Bar Association, the Congress, or any of the other groups suggested — will come to the same general conclusion."

But other commission members willing to comment said they saw no need for a new inquiry.

One, Allen W. Dulles, former CIA director, told UPI: "I don't think a new investigation is warranted. There's no new evidence to consider."

Chief Justice Earl Warren, who headed the panel, has been quoted as saying that the findings were valid. And House GOP leader Gerald D. Ford (Mich.), who also served on the commission refused to comment, but a source close to him said the findings were as valid today as they were two years ago.

HALLOWED SPOT

Meanwhile, yesterday in Dallas crowds gathered to mourn President Kennedy on the anniversary of his death three years ago.

The Very Rev. Oscar Huber, who said the last rites for the fallen President after the assassination, conducted a simple ceremony at the assassination site memorial.

"To us, this is a hallowed spot," he said.

on Its Findings in Kennedy Death 3 Years Ago

By PETER KIHSS

On the third anniversary of President John F. Kennedy's assassination today, the two-year-old Warren Commission report on his death is the subject of intensive attacks. But commission members uphold their findings that a lone assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald, was guilty.

Malcolm Kilduff, acting White House press secretary on the fateful day in Dallas, upholds the finding against Oswald as the lone killer. He does this in a taped Westinghouse Broadcasting Company interview to be aired today.

But Mr. Kilduff disputes the commission theory that a bullet that he said was "in almost perfect condition" could have hit both President Kennedy and Gov. John B. Connally Jr. of Texas.

Earl Warren, Chief Justice of the United States, the commission's chairman, is still declining public comment, his office said yesterday. But Newsweek magazine quoted the 75-year-old Justice yesterday as having told a Johnson Administration official recently:

Moyers Cites Johnson

"I was a district attorney in California for 12 years, and I tried a number of murder cases [an average of 15 a year]. If I were still a district attorney and the Oswald case came into my jurisdiction, given the same evidence I could have gotten a conviction in two days and never heard about the case again."

In Austin, Tex., Bill Moyers, the present White House press secretary, was asked for comment by President Johnson on Life magazine's editorial call this week for a new official inquiry.

The magazine had cited Governor Connally's renewed view after restudy of the assassination movie film, that he and President Kennedy had been hit by separate shots.

Mr. Moyers referred newsmen to a news conference statement on Nov. 4 in which President Johnson said that if there were any evidence causing any reasonable person to have a doubt about the report, "I am sure that the commission and the appropriate authorities will take action that may be justified."

In New York yesterday, one Warren commissioner, Allen W. Dulles, said yesterday:

"I find there is nothing new or startling in this Life article except its conclusions."

Mr. Dulles said that "in the recent publicity, including the Life article, I have found no new evidence to justify any reconsideration or any change in the conclusions of the commission."

Another commissioner, Senator John Sherman Cooper, Republican of Kentucky, was on his way home from Madrid to Washington. But an associate said the senator had been saying that everything brought up in recent books and articles had been pursued and deliberated over by the commission and that there were errors in some of these writings.

In Winder, Ga., Senator Richard B. Russell, Democrat of that state, declined comment on the dispute over the report yesterday.

The other members of the seven-man Warren commission —Representatives Gerald R. Ford, Republican of Michigan, and Hale Boggs, Democrat of Louisiana, and John J. McCloy, New York banker and lawyer, were reported unavailable for comment yesterday, as was Governor Connally.

Other commission sources observed that they had received testimony from Governor Connally on April 21, 1964, that he believed he had been wounded at a time identified by frames 231 to about 234" in a series of motion pictures taken by an amateur photographer, Abraham ZZapruder, of Dallas.

In his restudy for Life this month, Governor Connally picked out the 234th frame as the most likely point. This was nine to 24 frames—or 0.5 to 1.3 seconds—after what the commission said were the probably points between which President Kennedy could have suffered his first wound.

Oswald's rifle required 42 frames, or 2.3 seconds, between shots.

The commission met this timing problem by suggesting that one bullet had wounded both the President and the Governor, which would account for a time difference in reactions by the two men.

In the current issue of Frontier magazine, Jacob Cohen, a former professor at Yale and Brandeis Universities, asserts that the exhibit bullet considered to have inflicted both wounds weighed 158.6 grains the day after the assassination, compared with 160.85 to 161.5 grains for new bullets.

Theory by Lane

Mr. Cohen contends this would account for the "imprecise" medical estimate that 3.1 grains had been left in Governor Connally's wrist and leg.

Mark Lane, whose book "Rush to Judgement," criticizing the Warren report, has become the nation's non-fiction best-seller, made available yesterday a new chapter written for a French translation to be published by Editions Arthaud this week.

In this Mr. Lane offered a five-shot hypothesis. This would have a bullet strike President Kennedy in the back, and a second bullet hit him in the throat from the front. A third bullet would hit Governor Connally. A fourth would miss the President's limousine, but shatter off a sidewalk curb to graze a spectator, James R. Tague, in the face. A fifth fired from the right would inflict the fatal head wound on President Kennedy.

Mr. Lane noted that the alleged Oswald rifle could not fire five shots in the time indicated. He said his hypothesis "rests upon the facts which show conclusively that shots were fired from two directions, and that assertion of course precludes the possibility that there was a lone assasin."

In his taped interview to be heard here today over radio station WINS at 11:30 A.M. and 8 P.M., Mr. Kilduff recalled he was riding in the fourth car behind the President, while acting as press secretary. He said he and others in the car, as well as Secret Service agents, believed there were three shots.

He and Governor Connally, he said, believed the first shot hit President Kennedy in the neck. (The Warren Commission holds a shot that hit Mr. Kennedy at the base of the back of the neck came out the front and wounded Governor Connally.) It was the second shot, Mr. Kilduff contended, that hit the Texas Governor.

Kilduff Criticism

Mr. Kilduff, who left the White House staff in June, 1965, after three years' service, said there had been about 34 books and articles written questioning the Warren report.

"I think they are pure garbage" written for "personal gain," he said.

Mr. Kilduff charged that a book by William Manchester, "The Death of a President," from which Look magazine is to publish excerpts in an issue going on news stands next Jan. 10, was in violation of a "written agreement" that it would

The former White House press aide said he knew that the original agreement with Robert F. Kennedy, the President's brother, "stated that the complete text shall be reviewed by Mrs. John F. Kennedy and Robert F. Kennedy and the text shall not be published unless and until approved by them."

"I have reason to know," Mr. Kilduff added, "that Mrs. Kennedy has at no time given either oral or written permission for publication of the book or any portion thereof prior to Nov. 22, 1968."

A spokesman for Robert Kennedy, now Senator from New York, said yesterday that Mr. Kennedy had no comment on the Kilduff charge. Mr. Manchester was reported by The Associated Press to be travelling with his family in Europe and "unavailable for comment."

Look magazine said, "we have received no request from any member of the Kennedy family for a change from the publicly announced Look issue date."

In his interview, Mr. Kilduff said President Johnson had been frustrated in a desire to accompany Mrs. Kennedy from the plane as the late President's body was being brought out at Andrews Air Force Base.

Instead of steps, he said, a forklift had been set up, and this was immediately filled by members of the Kennedy staff and Secret Service agents while the new President could not reach Mrs. Kennedy.

750,000 Pages of Information

Sleuths Get Full Co-Operation

By SETH KANTOR
Scripps-Howard Staff Writer

Three years after the assassination of President Kennedy, scores of amateur and big-league sleuths are at work, trying to disprove the Warren Commission's findings on the murder.

They work mainly in the nation's biggest clues closet — the National Archives building here — where 750,000 pages of information on the shooting and boxes of exhibits are stored in a special 300-cubic-foot Kennedy section.

The collection of testimony, pictures and physical belongings "has become the best known body of records in Federal custody," said James B. Rhoads, Deputy Archivisit of the U.S.

This has happened "within the past six or seven months," said Mr. Rhoads, "with the publication of some well-known books and articles" blasting the Warren Commission's finding that no conspiracy existed.

TEAM OF 3

Formerly, State Department records and other Federal files were in the most demand by researchers. But now a three-member team, headed by Marion Johnson, a specialist in Justice Department records, is hard at work helping the growing battery of Kennedy assassination sleuths take on the Warren Commission.

Mr. Johnson is especially anxious to knock down the general but "completely wrong" impression that when Supreme Court Chief Justice Earl Warren turned over Commission records to the National Archives in November, 1964, it was with the provision that some materials would not be made public for 75 years.

MORE AND MORE

According to Justice Department guidelines, more assassination information will be made public in 1970 and in each 10-year period after that, including material now locked up because its publication:

- "Would be detrimental to the Administration and enforcement of the laws and regulations of the U.S. and its agencies."
- Would be a source of embarrassment to innocent persons.
- Might reveal the identity of confidential sources of information.
- "Would reveal material pertinent to the criminal prosecution of Jack Ruby for the murder of Lee Harvey Oswald, prior to the final judicial determination of that case."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Warren Report Aimed at Rumors

By Drew Pearson

Today, when a favorite national sport seems to be that of casting doubt on the findings of the Warren Commission, it might be well to investigate how that Commission came into being.

Pearson

I discussed the matter with the new President of the United States 10 days after President Kennedy's tragic death. Suddenly, from having been a background figure in the Kennedy Administration, Lyndon Johnson had been thrust into the White House, with all its heavy long-range responsibilities plus its immediate problems of President Kennedy's funeral and the fixing of guilt for his death. The latter had been complicated by Jack Ruby's shooting of Lee Harvey Oswald, which unleashed a flood of rumors that Lee Oswald had been in conspirary with the Dallas police, the underworld, or the pro-fascist right wing in Dallas.

The new President was fully aware of this. He also recalled from history the rumors that followed Lincoln's assassination, the vicious report that members of Lincoln's Cabinet had conspired to kill him. So Johnson decided to pick the most unimpeachable, bipartisan board possible to investigate the tragedy of Dallas.

He picked two Republicans—Sen. John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky and Rep. Gerald Ford of Michigan. He balanced them against two Democrats—Sen. Richard Russell of Georgia and Rep. Hale Boggs of Louisiana. He chose a distinguished elder statesman of the Republican party, John J. McCloy, who had served as Assistant Secretary of War, High Commissioner to Germany, head of the Chase Manhattan Bank and head of the World Bank; plus Allen Dulles, former chief of the Central Intelligence Agency, and brother of the late Secretary of State.

But these men were willing to serve only if led by a respected, nonpartisan chairman, and to this end the new President approached the Chief Justice.

Warren Demurred

Earl Warren had been three times Republican Governor of California, had run for Vice President on the Dewey ticket in 1948. His credentials were of the highest.

But the Chief Justice was most reluctant. He told President Johnson the Supreme Court had made it a rule that its members must not serve outside the Court; that they must concentrate on judicial problems. He recalled criticism of the late Justice Robert Jackson when Jackson took leave of the Court to be U.S. Prosecutor at the Nuremberg war trials. Justice Frank Murphy had also taken time off from the Court for brief World War II military training.

The Chief Justice was adamant in his opposition.

But Lyndon Johnson is a persuasive President. The other members of the Commission would serve only if the Chief Justice was its chairman.

"In 1917," Mr. Johnson told the Chief Justice, "you put on a uniform and went out to fight for your country when your country needed you. Your country needs you today."

With tears in his eyes, the Chief Justice accepted.

LBJ Was Target

One development in the investigation of the tragedy which occurred in Dallas three years ago today was the testimony of Mrs. Lee Oswald that her husband had tried to kill Richard Nixon.

She told the Warren Commission how he had read in the newspaper that Vice President Nixon was in town, had strapped his holster and revolver underneath his coat and announced he was going downtown to kill "the Vice President."

Mrs. Oswald, then recently arrived from Russia, didn't know what to do. But when her husband went into the bathroom she locked the door and kept him there for a couple of hours, until his ardor for killing had cooled off.

The incident puzzled the Warren Commission. Checking on the movements of Richard Nixon, they found that he not only was not Vice President at that time, but he was not in Dallas.

On the other hand, Vice President Lyndon Johnson was in Dallas. Commission members concluded, therefore, that it was Lyndon Johnson who had escaped assassination.

Note 1: In studying Lee Oswald's youth, it was found that he had boyhood problems because he lacked a father. Big Brothers in New York at one time was approached to help guide young Oswald, but his mother vetoed the idea.

Big Brothers of the National Capital Area holds its annual dinner tonight at the Shoreham Hotel to help solve the problems of many fatherless boys here.

Note 2: Unlike the American publications which have cast doubt on the Warren Commission findings, Der Stern, the largest West German magazine, has published three articles supporting the Commission's conclusions. Henri Nannen, Der Stern's editor, came to Washington, talked with Chief Justice Warren, examined the facts, and became convinced the Commission had told the full truth.

NEW YORK--CONTENDING THERE WAS A "REASONABLE DOUBT" THAT THE SAME BULLET HIT PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY AND TEXAS GOV. JOHN CONNALLY, LIFE MAGAZINE TODAY URGED THAT A NEW INVESTIGATING BODY BE SET UP TO DETERMINE WHETHER LEE HARVEY OSWALD HAD A CO-CONSPIRATOR.

THE QUESTION OF THE NUMBER OF BULLETS IS SIGNIFICANT, FOR IF DIFFERENT BULLETS STRUCK KENNEDY'S NECK AND CONNALLY'S BACK, THEN, IT IS REASONED, THERE MUST HAVE BEEN ANOTHER ASSASSIN.

"THE CASE SHOULD BE REOPENED," CONCLUDED LIFE, WHICH BASED ITS DOUBTS ON A RECENT INTERVIEW WITH CONNALLY AFTER THE GOVERNOR HAD PAINSTAKENLY EXAMINED A MOTION PICTURE FILM OF THE ASSASSINATION.

KENNEDY ASSASSINATION

Life Says Photos Dispute Theory on Bullets

Life magazine printed pictures of the Kennedy assassination today and said they cast doubt on the conclusion of the Warren Commission that a single bullet killed President John F. Kennedy and wounded Texas Gov. John Connally.

The magazine said the picture and Connally's interpretation of it neither proves nor disproves that Lee Harvey Oswald had a co-conspirator in killing Kennedy, but does show "that reasonable—and disturbing—doubt remains." It called for a new investigation of the assassination, which took place three years ago tomorrow.

The key picture, frame 230, is part of a sequence of motion pictures taken by a Dallas resident, Abraham Zapruder. It shows Kennedy having been struck by a bullet and Connally sitting in front of him with his hand slightly raised holding his hat.

Hit in Three Places

The Warren Commission decided that Connally, who had been sitting on the jump seat in front of Kennedy, was hit by a bullet that went through Kennedy's neck. The bullet hit Connally in three places, the commission determined. Another hit Kennedy in the back of the head, killing him. The commission said a third bullet also was probably fired, but it could find no trace of it although an expended cartridge case was found.

Connally has maintained that he was struck by a separate bullet.

The Life article and Connally's contention brought a quick comment today from Arlen Specter, the leading proponent of the single-bullet theory.

Specter, now district attorney of Philadelphia and a former assistant counsel of the Warren Commission, said in a telephone interview:

"Life has shed no new evidence on the facts of the assassination."

Asked whether Connally's views had added any new material or raised doubts in his mind, Specter replied:

"Absolutely none."

He also said:

"The assassination is going to be examined far into the next century. No one has brought forth one iota of new evidence. There just isn't any. Tomorrow will be three years since the assassination, and with the free exchange of information in our society, if there were any new evidence it most likely would have come to light by this time."

The rifle used by Oswald needed 2.3 seconds between each shot, according to the commission's caculations.

Using the Zapruder film, the commission said that Kennedy "was not hit until at least frame 210 and that he was probably hit by frame 225." Zapruder's 8mm. movie camera ran at 18.3 frames a second, or a little more than one-twentieth of a second—0.55 seconds—for each frame.

The half-second interval between shots that would have allowed Kennedy to have been hit at frame 225 and Connally to have been hit when he says he was—frame 234—would have required firing from more than one gun.

Had Kennedy been hit at frame 210, this would still have allowed only 1.3 seconds until frame 234, a second less than the minimum time required to open and close the bolt of Oswald's rifle to fire it.

Even More Convinced

Life said Connally was even more convinced of his testimony before the commission that he and Kennedy were hit by different bullets after viewing blow-ups of the Zapruder film.

Connally testified that he heard the first shot that hit Kennedy and was turning to look at the President when he felt a second shot hit him. After reviewing the Zapruder film recently, he told Life:

"They talk about the 'one-bullet or two-bullet theory,' but as far as I'm concerned, there is no 'theory.' There is my absolute knowledge . . . that one bullet caused the President's first wound, and that an entirely separate shot struck me. It's a certainty. I'll never change my mind."

Life quoted Specter as upholding the theory and saying he believed frame 230 showed Connally "wincing, indicating a probability he's been hit," with his wrist apparently coming up from his lap in frame 229 as though it was wounded.

Specter, in a copyrighted interview published by the magazine U.S. News & World Report Oct. 10, said the single bullet theory had no bearing on whether the conclusion that Oswald was the assassin and acted alone.

Discusses Time Sequence

Discussing the time necessary for three shots to have been fired, Specter said:

"The rifle could be fired as rapidly as 2.3 seconds between shots. But bear this in mind: When you fire three times, the first shot is not taken into account in the timing sequence. This point is missed repeatedly by the would-be critics of the commission's report.

"For example, aim is taken: Bang!—at least 2.3 seconds must pass while the bolt is worked and aim is taken again; bank!—2.3 seconds again for bolt action and aim; bang! So that three shots can be fired within a 4.6 second range of time."

Discussing the Zapruder film, Specter said it "does not lend to such precision as to pin down exactly in which frame of the film it was that Gov. Connally was struck.

"The film is two-dimensional, and it was viewed by many of us on hundreds of occasions, but you simply cannot be so precise as to tell exactly where it was that Gov. Connally was struck. . . . The events of the assassination just cannot be reduced to mathematical certainty by use of a stop watch and the Zapruder film, notwithstanding all our efforts to recreate it with minute precision. . . ."

Cites Commission Tests

Specter said that an exhaustive series of tests with animals and cadavers showed that "it was entirely possible for a bullet to have gone through the President's neck, lost little velocity, then to have gone through the governor's chest grazing a rib, but again not striking anything in a smashing fashion.

"It would have come out wobbling, as indicated by the large wound on the front of the governor, and then it would have tumbled through the governor's wrist."

He said a "whole host of features were analyzed by the orthopedic surgeon" to indicate that the bullet that struck Connally was not a "clean bullet, but was one that had passed through another object."

He said Connally, his doctors and ballistic experts were all agreed that Connally's wounds came from one bullet and "no other bullet was found anywhere in the car which would have accounted for the bullet which inflicted the governor's wounds."

Connally's leg, Specter said, "was substantially lower than the top of the doors (of the car); that if a bullet had hit his leg, it would have been a curious twist of physics for it to have ended up outside of the car completely" and been lost.

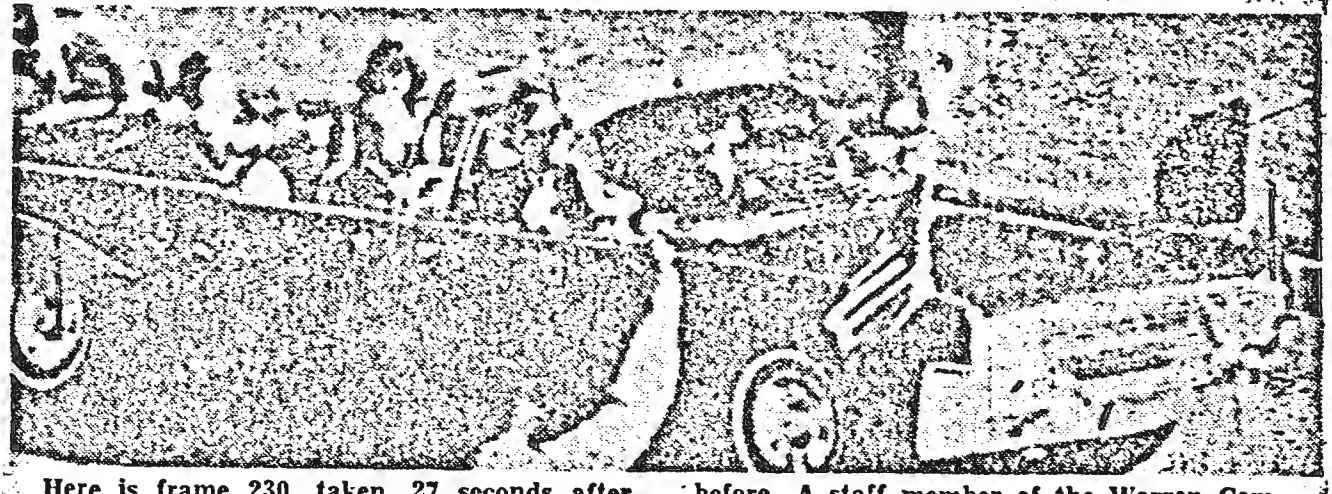
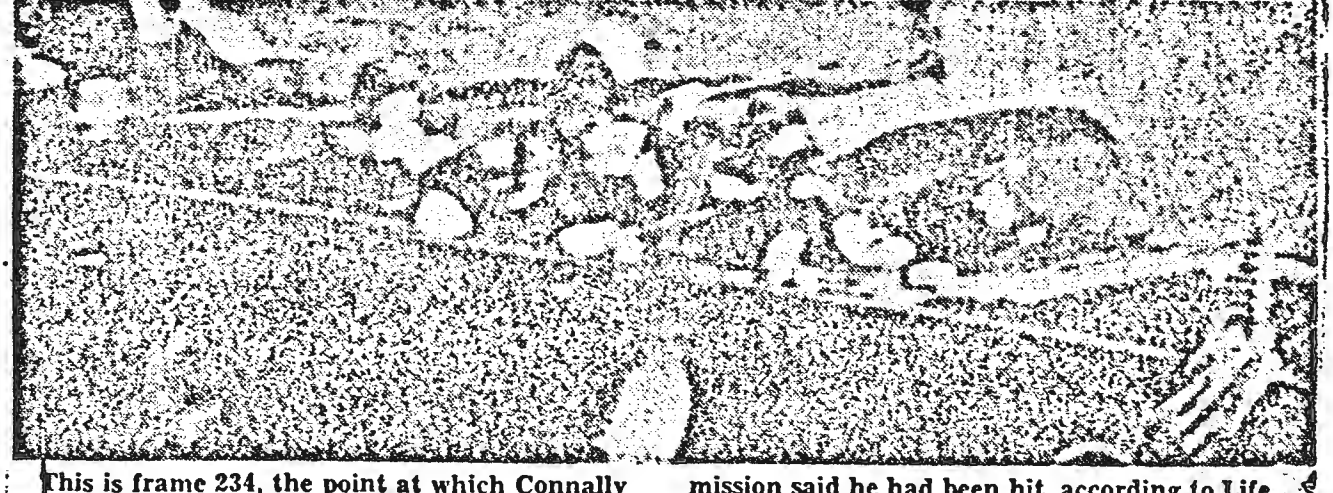
This is frame 225 of a movie film taken by Abraham Zapruder of President Kennedy's assassination and now owned by Life Magazine. Life says it shows that Kennedy's face is distorted and his right hand is rising toward his neck. Gov. John Connally, seated in front of Kennedy, appears unperturbed, Life says. The Warren Commission said President Kennedy probably was hit by the time of frame 225.



Here is frame 230, taken .27 seconds after frame 225. Life says it shows a calm Connally still gripping the brim of his hat with his right hand, which was supposedly injured a second before. A staff member of the Warren Commission says the picture shows Connally wincing. Connally says he was unharmed at this point.



This is frame 234, the point at which Connally says he was struck. It is at least nine frames and a half second later than the Warren Commission said he had been hit, according to Life. Connally concedes he might have been hit a frame or two earlier, but no more.

Lawyers Clash

More Controversy In Assassination

San Diego

Two attorneys for the Warren Commission which investigated the assassination of President Kennedy clashed yesterday with two critics of the Commission's report.

Joseph A. Ball, a senior counsel for the Commission, and law professor Wesley J. Liebeler, a Commission junior attorney, traded sharp statements with authors Mark Lane and Edward J. Epstein.

At several points, Lane, author of "Rush to Judgment" and the attorney for the mother of accused assassin Lee Harvey Oswald, called the Commission report fraudulent.

Appearing on a panel at the Associated Press Managing Editors Association Convention, Ball and Liebeler called the report fair and conclusive and criticized Lane and Epstein, author of "Inquest."

IGNORED

Ball hinted the critics of the report ignored evidence in shaping their versions of the Kennedy slaying. The commission found that Oswald along killed President Kennedy.

At the core of the controversy was the decision of the U.S. Government and the Kennedy family to withhold from public release autopsy photos and X-rays of the dead President's body.

Epstein said most theories that the assassination was the result of a conspiracy depend on the autopsy photos.

He said the autopsy report indicated one bullet went through Mr. Kennedy's throat and hit Governor John Connally of Texas. But, he said, a report by two FBI agents who were present at the autopsy said only one bullet hit Mr. Kennedy's back and it fell out of the wound.

MYSTERY

"The autopsy photos might resolve this mystery," Epstein said. "In a nutshell, if these autopsy photox reveal that the bullet exite dthe throat, the possibility there was a second assassin will be virtually reduced to nil.

"If they reveal that the bullet in question did not pass through the body . . . that would substantially reduce the probability that Kennedy was killed by a single assassin."

Critics of the Warren Commission have said Oswald could not have fired three bullets quickly enough and, therefore, there may have been more than one assassin.

Liebeler and Lane had the sharpest exchange, with Liebeler inviting the author to file a libel suit against him.

'DISTORTION'

Liebeler said Lane's book was a "tissue of distortion" and he said when he had made similar charges previously Lane had threatened to sue him.

"I've been waiting anxiously for those papers ever

Lane, sitting next to Liebeler, said quietly, "You'll have them very soon."

CONTRADICTION

Epstein charged that Warren Commission attorneys did not resolve the contradiction posed by the autopsy report and the FBI version and did not include the FBI statement in the final report.

Liebeler, in criticizing Epstein's book, said faulty research and scholarship went into its preparation.

"This book," he said, "has done more to impugn the integrity of the Warren Report than Mark Lane did. Epstein owes an obligation to the public to explain his work."

Lane accused the press of failing in its duty following the assassination.

"Where was the press during the investigation by the Warren Commission?" he asked. "The press miserably failed the American public by not demanding open hearings of the Warren Commission."

Ball is a Long Beach attorney and a former president of the California Bar Association. Liebeler is a professor of law at UCLA.

More on Oswald

JIM BISHOP, moderator of a televised argument between several authors of books attacking the Warren Commission Report, spoke for many of us when he said he was convinced that Lee Harvey Oswald "did it" and had no accomplices . . . But the debaters (who were windy and dreary) kept haggling about technicalities and other trivia, and never during the two hour discussion mentioned that the slayer's palm print was found on the murder rifle . . . Nor did any of them mention that the killer threatened to "do something" about Gov. Connally . . . If you just tuned in, we repeat for the steenth time—Oswald wrote to the then Secy of the Navy Connally (from Russia) that unless his dishonorable discharge status was changed he would return some day and "do something about it."

That threat was in the Pentagon files and probably is now among the Warren Commission's evidence, etc.

YALE LAW PROFESSOR Alexander Bickel in Commentary mag debunks many of the points raised by critics of the Warren Report . . . The trouble is, with 28 volumes to work with, it is easy for Oswald's spokesmen to dig up new conjectures, speculations and outright fibs . . . As usual, the corrections never catch up with the first truth-stretchings . . . And, if you're wondering how all the books on the Warren Report seem to attack it—that's because there is no money in defending the Report . . . You might say the antis are getting away with homicide.

...OTOGRAPH ...N KENNEDY DEATH

Magazine Publishes It With 'Second-Assassin Theory'

By PETER KIHSS

A controversy over whether a photograph showed a man aiming a rifle in front of President Kennedy the day he was killed in Dallas was stirred up yesterday by Esquire magazine.

The magazine's report brought quick dissent from United Press International, from whose files the picture came. The news service quoted Jack V. Fox, a staff correspondent, as having said that "if the picture is studied long enough one can believe that he sees" a rifleman with sunglasses leaning on top of a station wagon—"but one can also imagine a white-faced steer staring down."

The news agency added that Mr. Fox, after an investigation of various challenges of the Warren Commission report and talking with eyewitnesses, reported on June 27 that "he personally was satisfied" with the commission's findings. The commission, headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, held that Lee Harvey Oswald was the lone assassin of the President on Nov. 22, 1963, firing from the sixth floor of a building behind the Kennedy car.

In a press release concerning its December issue, out today, Esquire said the picture "appears to confirm the existence of an assassin now at large."

But late yesterday, John Berendt, an associate editor, said the press release was "perhaps a bit too positive." The magazine, he said, was standing instead on the text of an "impartial" article that offered the photograph in the eighth of 35

Took Picture

The controversy arose over one frame of an eight-millimeter color film by Orville O. Nix, a Dallas employe of the Federal General Services Administration. This showed a fence along a grassy knoll and, when enlarged, behind it what the article said was "in fact a vehicle" with a man leaning on its roof.

The Esquire article said S. M. Holland, a railroad signal supervisor, had told Mr. Fox he had heard a shot from behind the fence as well as three shots from the Texas Book Depository, where Oswald was employed. Mr. Holland said he had found a station wagon behind the fence, with two muddy marks on its bumper as if someone had stood on it

United Press International, in a statement, said the Esquire article "states erroneously that three U.P.I. editors are proponents of a theory that the picture indicated a second slayer." Mr. Berendt said the word "proponents" was meant to refer to persons who worked on "tracking down" a theory, even if "right now they may feel differently."

Meanwhile, WNBC-TV made available a text of a 55-minute "Open Mind" panel program taped late last month and scheduled for broadcast at noon next Sunday, after having been displaced by a news program last Sunday.

Back Up Report

On this, two assistant counsels for the Warren commission reported they stood by its findings after having examined challenges in books by two other panelists, Mark Lane and Edward Jay Epstein, authors respectively of "Rush to Judgment" and "Inquest."

One of the Commission aides was Burt W. Griffin, now director of the Legal Aid Society of Cleveland, who said the two authors had pointed out "loose ends, which I don't think are central or germane." The other was Wesley J. Liebeler, now professor of law at the University of California in Los Angeles who said the Warren inquiry had been "thorough" and sometimes the report "didn't reflect" all the evidence in the record.

Is Warren Commission Out of Commission?

By MARSHALL McNEIL
Scripps-Howard Staff Writer

Is the Warren Commission, created to investigate and report on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, still in being and able on its own motion to inquire further into the murder?

The question arises because of new demands, in books and magazine articles, for further investigation to reveal what some say are facts that were glossed over by the Commission.

The answer to the question appears to be one of these:

✔ Yes, the Commission is alive, according to President Johnson.

✔ No, it is dead, according to the Justice Department and a member of the Commission.

✔ Maybe it is alive, according to a White House legal expert.

STILL ALIVE

President Johnson indicated he thinks the Commission is alive and still able to inquire into any new evidence regarding the assassination.

At his televised press conference here last week, he was asked about the books and reports casting doubts on the work of the Commission.

"I think they (the Commission) made a very thoro study," the President said.

"I know of no evidence that would in any way cause any reasonable person to have a doubt about the Warren Commission.

"But if there is any evidence and it is brought forth, I am sure that the Commission and the appropriate authorities will take action that may be justified."

The President's use of the words "will take action" seems to leave no doubt that he regards the Commission as still in being.

President Johnson created the Commission by an Executive Order.

He named Chief Justice Earl Warren as chairman and appointed these members: Sens. Richard Russell (D., Ga.) and John Sherman Cooper (R., Ky.), Reps. Hale Boggs (D., La.) and Gerald Ford (R., Mich.), Allen W. Dulles, former head of the Central Intelligence Agency, and the New York banker and Presidential trouble-shooter, John J. McCloy.

The Commission, in a letter dated Sept. 24, 1964, submitted to the President what it called its "final report."

On the same day, the President wrote Justice Warren accepting the report, adding: "The submission of this report fulfills the assignment which I gave to the Commission, and accordingly I now discharge the Commission with my heartfelt thanks."

But, according to White House record-keepers, the President never has issued an Executive Order rescinding his original Order.

So, in theory, at least, the Commission still exists, as well as its source of operating money, the President's Emergency Fund.

REACTIVATED

White House legal experts say that even if the Commission were not now alive, it could be reactivated at any time. "It's only a question of the President putting pen to paper," it was said.

But a Justice Department spokesman said the Commission is dead, that its career ended when the report it was created to make was accepted by the President. There was no explanation from that source, however, of what the President meant by his press conference statement.

The view that the Commission no longer exists is shared by member Dulles, who said he believed it ended when it made its report. He said he was speaking only for himself.

In any event, still on the books, is a public law which gives the Commission power to subpena witnesses. It has not been repealed.

The White House lawyer indicated this law would be operative again if the Commission reopened its inquiry. But at Justice it is contended this law died with the Commission.

Picture Adds Fuel To Oswald Debate

Just eight days before the third anniversary of the assassination of President Kennedy, new fuel was added to the controversy over his killing today with publication of the photograph of a man—not Lee Harvey Oswald — apparently aiming something at the President's car at the time of the shooting.

The photograph, published by Esquire magazine for the first time, is an enlargement of a frame of 8-mm color film bade by Orville Nix, a Dallas resident. The frme was not among ehe six frmes of Nix film published in the Warren report.

The Warren Commission concluded that the assassination was solely the work of Oswald, although some theorists hold that more than one person was involved in it.

'SECOND GUNMAN'

After the Nix film was found in the Unieed Press International film bilrary by an independent investigator, UPI sent reporter Jack Fox to Dallas to interview eyewitnesses last June.

Lee E. Bowers Jr., a towerman for the Union Terminal Co. who was stationed in a 14-foot tower directly behind the grassy knoll shown in the photo, told Fox:

"There is at least a 50-50 chance that something happened there, and it could have been a second gunman." Bowers died last Aug. 9 in an automobile accident.

The photograph is published in the current Esquire in connection with a compilation of assassination theories by Edward Jay Epsteinn, author of "Inquest," a book critical of the Warren Commission findings.

Epstein viewed the Nix film with Warren Commission attorney Wesley Liebler and said he was "impressed" by it. He said that in the film, the President's head appears to snap backward and to the left when hit, giving the appearance of being hit by a bullet from the knoll, rather than from the Texas Book Depository where Oswald was stationed.

However, Epstein made it clear that there was nothing in the Nix film to lead him to conclude that a shot had actually been fired from the knoll.

4 Critics and 2 Defenders Debate Warren Report on Television

By PETER KIHSS

Four authors aired their criticisms of the Warren Commission's conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald alone killed President John F. Kennedy in a special three-hour telecast last night on WNEW-TV.

Two other writers offered some defense of the Warren report.

In the recorded telecast, Mark Lane, whose "Rush to Judgment" this week became the nation's top nonfiction best-seller with 110,000 copies sold, contended that "shots were fired from at least two different vantage points." Mr. Lane, a New York lawyer, said that the view that Oswald was the lone assassin "cannot be reached upon what the commission discovered."

Harold Weisberg, the author of "Whitewash," argued that there had to be at least two assassins. Leo Sauvage, a Frenchman, who wrote "The Oswald Affair," contended that there was "no case against Oswald," and suggested a conspiracy to impersonate Oswald and possibly use him "as patsy for someone else."

Something 'Sinister'

Penn Jones, the editor of the weekly Midlothian (Tex.) Mirror and the author of "Forgive My Grief," saw something "sinister" in the deaths of 14 persons who had had some association with the cases of Oswald or his accused killer, Jack Ruby.

A rebuttal was offered by Jacob Cohen, who is working on a book defending the Warren thesis against Oswald and who wrote an article that was published in The Nation.

Discussing a bullet supposed to have hit both President Kennedy and Governor John B. Connally Jr. of Texas, he said:

"The explanation that I've been given by several doctors, including Dr. Milton Helpern, the chief medical examiner of New York City, is that Kennedy was hit when he was waving, and his muscles were gathered in the back of his neck. Later, in the morgue, he was relaxed, and that this would tend to close off the channel of exit."

Jim Bishop, a syndicated columnist, said his own book, "The Day Kennedy Was Shot," was still two years from completion. He said he expected to support the commission's finding that Oswald was the lone assassin.

Mr. Bishop, who led the discussion, said each participant had "read and digested the 10.4 million words of the Warren Commission report."

corded last Aug. 30, took up these points:

OSWALD'S RIFLE CAPS

An Italian Mannlicher-Carcano carbine identified as Oswald's had been delivered to a Dallas post office box. Mr. Weisberg contended that it "was never shown to be in the possession of Oswald."

Mr. Lane asserted that on Nov. 22, 1963, the date of the assassination, Oswald's wife had said she "could not identify the alleged assassination rifle" as her husband's.

However, she did so identify it in February, 1964, after "she had been in police custody," Mr. Lane said.

He said that when a weapon was first found on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository in Dallas, it was identified as a German Mauser 7.65 by Deputy Constable Seymour Weitzman, who filed an affidavit the next day; by Capt. J. Will Fritz of the Dallas police, who ejected a live round from the rifle after inspecting it, and by Deputy Sheriff Eugene Boone. Mr. Lane said the rifle shown him when he appeared before the commission was clearly marked "MADE ITALY. CAL. 6.5."

Mr. Lane said that the commission had said a company had "recently made" ammunition used in the rifle, although the company had reported that any such ammunition on the market was government surplus from contracts ended in 1944.

Mr. Lane also asserted that shadows on a picture taken of Oswald by his wife, showing the accused assassin with a rifle, indicated it was a composite as Oswald had charged. The commission reached the opposite conclusion.

SOURCE OF SHOTS

Mr. Lane asserted that two-thirds of the witnesses who estimated the origin of the shots said they came "from behind a wooden fence high up on the grassy knoll" in front of the President's car, rather than from the Depository behind it.

He said these included 17 Dallas deputy sheriffs, a Dallas police officer, eight railroad employes and some Depository executives. He offered film interviews with three witnesses who said they had glimpsed a puff of smoke or a flash of light in that area. One of the three had never been called or interviewed by the commission.

WOUNDS

Mr. Lane said that every doctor at Parkland Hospital in Dallas who made a statement on Nov. 22 said the wound in the President's throat appeared to be an entrance wound.

Mr. Cohen argued that what they had seen was a "neat wound which they then quickly widened to perform the tracheotomy."

Mr. Cohen said the autopsy surgeons later that day found a back wound and several clues as to the bullet's path—"a bruise to the top of the lung, a pattern of contusion which was five centimeters in width." After conferring with the Dallas doctors, he said, they "concluded that this bullet had exited from the throat."

A conflicting Federal Bureau of Investigation report, Mr. Cohen asserted, was based on the first incomplete findings during the autopsy.

Mr. Weisberg said that "the doctors testified that these bruises could have been caused by the tracheotomy."

Mr. Bishop said "the ballistics tests go right back to the same rifle."

But Mr. Lane argued that the bullet, Exhibit 399, found on a stretcher in the hospital was practically "pure, pristine." He said a test bullet from the weapon, fired through a goat carcass, shattered the goat's ribs and became "very deformed," as did a bullet test-fired at the wrist of a body to simulate Governor Connally's wrist wound.

Mr. Weisberg said the bullet that wounded Governor Connally lost three grains of metal in his wrist. This, he said, was enough to disqualify Exhibit 399, which, he asserted, was "missing 2.4 grains" and "undeformed."

INSIDE THE DEPOSITORY

Mr. Sauvage questioned the identification of Oswald at a half-closed sixth-floor window by Howard L. Brennan, a spectator who was sitting on a concrete wall 120 feet away.

Mr. Sauvage said the sun at the hour of the assassination made the upper part of the window "a plain mirror you cannot see through" and that Oswald had to be "at least one foot away from the window."

He also questioned whether Oswald could have left that corner, hidden the rifle and run down to the second floor lunchroom in time to be seen there holding a soda bottle, by a motorcycle patrolman, Marrion L. Baker.

On one pair of commission tests, Mr. Sauvage said, it took Patrolman Baker only 1 minute 15 seconds to reach the lunchroom, while a Secret Service man imitating the alleged Oswald movement took 1 minute 18 seconds—giving "Oswald a clear alibi of 3 seconds."

But he noted that in another pair of tests, Patrolman Baker took 1 minute 30 seconds to 1 minute 14 seconds for the simulated Oswald, giving "Oswald a possibility of having been there by 16 seconds."

TIPPIT MURDER

Mr. Weisberg contended that "if the commission had used the only written evidence"—a taxicab trip card showing that Oswald got out at the 500-block of North Beckley Avenue—Oswald "couldn't possibly" have reached the site of the slaying of Patrolman J. D. Tippit in time to commit the murder.

Instead, Mr. Weisberg said, the commission used the oral testimony of the taxi driver, William Whaley, that Oswald had emerged in the 700-block, "a two-block difference."

Mr. Lane said that "the shells found at the scene and later delivered through various sources into the hands of the Dallas police were related" to a revolver taken from Oswald on his arrest, but "the bullets themselves were not related."

Mr. Bishop asserted that two women who had run out of an apartment across the street in time to glimpse a fleeing man with a revolver had identified Oswald in a lineup later that day, as did a woman who had been at the intersection and said she saw the shooting.

'FALSE OSWALD'

Mr. Sauvage accused the commission of "systematically ignoring" a "strong possibility that someone was there to prepare a lead going to Oswald, making Oswald the patsy or scapegoat."

He cited the following incidents:

¶A gunsmith found a repair ticket that indicated someone had given the name of Oswald when submitting a rifle for repairs on the telescopic sight.

¶A man giving that name road-tested a car for sale.

¶A man resembling Oswald fired at other persons' targets on a rifle range "to be well noticed."

WNEW-TV called the program "A Minority Report" and said members of the Warren Commission and its staff had indicated they might participate in a later program supporting the report. They had refused to take part in last night's broadcast.

Warren Report Critics Lack Facts

By Drew Pearson and Jack Anderson

Thousands of words have been written casting doubts on the Warren Report and the accuracy of its findings on President Kennedy's assassination. There are a lot of facts, however, which the doubt-casters have either ignored or glossed over. Here are some of them:

No. 1 doubt-caster is Mark Lane, attorney for Lee Harvey Oswald's mother. Lane has delivered hundreds of lectures and written a book taking issue with the findings of the Warren Commission.

What Lane neglects to point out is that while he was touring Europe expounding his views on the assassination, he was summoned back to Washington to testify before the Warren Commission. Its members wanted to take advantage of the facts he was broadcasting in Europe which might help them in their investigation.

Lane, however, refused.

He was so uncooperative that the Warren Commission considered citing him for contempt, which it had the power to do. The Commission finally decided that a jail sentence for Lane would only make him a martyr and give him the publicity he was looking for.

One issue in the assassination which was pumped up as a big mystery was the whereabouts of the photographs and X-rays of the late President's body, and the clothes he wore on the fatal day. It was reported that these had been suppressed or destroyed in order to conceal evidence which might prove the Warren Report false.

Horror Museum

What actually happened was that during the commission's investigation, several promoters tried to secure copies of the photographs and other exhibits connected with the assassination, such as Oswald's gun, in order to establish a traveling museum to be shown at country fairs.

The photograph of Kennedy's head, split open by a bullet, is gruesome in the extreme. And since the commission believed that it was not in good taste to give a national tragedy the aspects of a sideshow, Chief Justice Warren ordered all the photos and X-rays sent to the Justice Department, with instructions that they not be shown to anyone except law enforcement officers or other qualified officials.

At about that time, Jacqueline Kennedy made a request that she be given her husband's clothing. She did not state why she wanted it, and it was suspected she might destroy it in order to remove unhappy memories. However, the disappearance of any evidence might cast doubt on the Commission's findings, so the President's clothing was also sent to the Justice Department.

As of last week these articles have been turned over to the Archives Office.

The President's clothing, incidentally, clearly shows the fabric of his shirt in front is bent out, indicating that the bullet which passed through his body came from the back.

This is important, because some critics of the Warren Report claim that one shot fired at the President and Gov. Connally came from the front, not the rear, which, they claim, meant there was another assassin besides Oswald.

Some doubt has also been raised as to whether Oswald could have fired three shots in the brief time elapsed. However, Oswald attained the rating of marksman in the Marine Corps, and it did not take much of an expert to fire three shots at the President's slowly moving car.

Work Notes Preserved

The Warren Commission report is voluminous. It takes up an entire book shelf. The Commission did not suppress anything. Its members were mindful that future historians would be digging through the records for years to come, so Commission members even put their work sheets in the final report — the only Commission ever to do so.

One point made by the critics, that the Commission's members were busy men and didn't have time to attend every session, is true. Sen. Richard Russell (D-Ga.), was busy guiding the military appropriations bill through Congress during part of the Commission's proceedings, therefore had to be on the Senate floor.

However, a lawyer was appointed to be his representative at all Commission hearings, and at the end of the day Sen. Russell had a transcription of the entire proceedings placed on his desk.

Russell is a thorough public servant, and at one time, dissatisfied with the first cross-examination of Marina Oswald, the assassin's widow, he took a trip to Texas to cross-examine her.

On the Warren Commission were the following top Republicans: Earl Warren, three times elected Republican Governor of California, and candidate for Vice President on the Dewey ticket in 1948; John J. McCloy, former Assistant Secretary of War, High Commissioner to Germany, head of the World Bank and head of the Chase Manhattan Bank; Sen. John Sherman Cooper former Governor of Kentucky and Ambassador to India; Rep. Gerald Ford of Michigan, Republican Leader of the House.

They were not interested in covering up anything for either the Kennedy or the Johnson Administration.

Is Warren Commission Out of Commission?

By MARSHALL McNEIL
Scripps-Howard Staff Writer

Is the Warren Commission, created to investigate and report on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, still in being and able on its own motion to inquire further into the murder?

The question arises because of new demands, in books and magazine articles, for further investigation to reveal what some say are facts that were glossed over by the Commission.

The answer to the question appears to be one of these:

✔ Yes, the Commission is alive, according to President Johnson.

✔ No, it is dead, according to the Justice Department and a member of the Commission.

✔ Maybe it is alive, according to a White House legal expert.

STILL ALIVE

President Johnson indicated he thinks the Commission is alive and still able to inquire into any new evidence regarding the assassination.

At his televised press conference here last week, he was asked about the books and reports casting doubts on the work of the Commission.

"I think they (the Commission) made a very thoro study," the President said.

"I know of no evidence that would in any way cause any reasonable person to have a doubt about the Warren Commission.

"But if there is any evidence and it is brought forth, I am sure that the Commission and the appropriate authorities will take action that may be justified."

The President's use of the words "will take action" seems to leave no doubt that he regards the Commission as still in being.

President Johnson created the Commission by an Executive Order.

He named Chief Justice Earl Warren as chairman and appointed these members: Sens. Richard Russell (D., Ga.) and John Sherman Cooper (R., Ky.), Reps. Hale Boggs (D., La.) and Gerald Ford (R., Mich.), Allen W. Dulles, former head of the Central Intelligence Agency, and the New York banker and Presidential trouble-shooter, John J. McCloy.

The Commission, in a letter dated Sept. 24, 1964, submitted to the President what it called its "final report."

On the same day, the President wrote Justice Warren accepting the report, adding: "The submission of this report fulfills the assignment which I gave to the Commission, and accordingly I now discharge the Commission with my heartfelt thanks."

But, according to White House record-keepers, the President never has issued an Executive Order rescinding his original Order.

So, in theory, at least, the Commission still exists, as well as its source of operating money, the President's Emergency Fund.

REACTIVATED

White House legal experts say that even if the Commission were not now alive, it could be reactivated at any time. "It's only a question of the President putting pen to paper," it was said.

But a Justice Department spokesman said the Commission is dead, that its career ended when the report it was created to make was accepted by the President. There was no explanation from that source, however, of what the President meant by his press conference statement.

The view that the Commission no longer exists is shared by member Dulles, who said he believed it ended when it made its report. He said he was speaking only for himself.

In any event, still on the books, is a public law which gives the Commission power to subpena witnesses. It has not been repealed.

The White House lawyer indicated this law would be operative again if the Commission reopened its inquiry. But at Justice it is contended this law died with the Commission.

Warren Report Doubts Worry U.S.

By LYLE DENNISTON
Star Staff Writer

Some government sources are now doing some thinking about what can be done to erase doubts that the public may have about the assasination of President John F. Kennedy.

It's understood that government officials themselves have no doubt that the Warren Commission was right in concluding that Kennedy was shot by Lee Harvey Oswald and that Oswald acted all alone, not as part of a "conspiracy."

President Johnson himself told the press Friday he knew of "no evidence that would cause any reasonable person to have any doubt" about the Warren Report.

Thus, the pondering that is now going on in some federal offices deals with the possible means of settling the issues in the public's mind.

Books Raise Doubts

Doubts about the commission's main conclusions have been raised in a series of books by private authors. Those doubts have been widely publicized and, so far, there has been little official effort to dispel them — either by the men who sat on the Warren commission or by any other ranking official in the government.

President Johnson's press conference remarks Friday represented his first direct reply to the critical books. He did not volunteer his remarks but offered them in a question about the books.

The critical books about the Warren Report did have "something to do with" the government's recent successful efforts to obtain for official safekeeping all the evidence that might bear on the assasination, officials said earlier this week.

On Monday, the items of evidence most often cited as crucial by critics of the commission — that is, photographs and X-rays made during the autopsy on Kennedy's body — were turned over to the National Archives.

That evidence was never shown to the full commission and there is some doubt that any single member of the commission or any of its staff aides saw it. Still, the government wanted those materials on file "to complete the historical record," it was reported.

Critics of the Warren Report have argued that these materials should have been used by the commission. It could have been important, critics have suggested, in resolving such questions as the number of shots fired and the participation, if any, by persons other than Oswald.

The Kennedy family, which had possession of the autopsy data since shortly after it was prepared, turned it over to the archieves with strict limits on how it may be used. The public will not see this data for many years, and almost no one outside the government will be able to inspect it in the next five years.

The fact that the materials had not been in government hands for the last three years had led some critics to conclude that it was being suppressed.

Some observers have suggested that a new, formal investigation of the assasination should be opened.

It is understood that some government sources feel that the mere possession of the materials by the government could not, by itself, answer the critics and deal with doubts that might have arisen.

But, going beyond mere receipt of the data caused a dilemma. It is that dilemma which some officials have begun to analyze.

On the one hand, it was felt that if an official organization or panel were set up to go over the autopsy materials, this might suggest that the government itself questions the Warren Report when in fact it does not.

At the same time, to avoid some new review of the autopsy data, might seem, it was felt, to be "unwarranted government secrecy" about them. That might appear true to some private observers, particularly because the Warren Commission did not use the materials in its investigation, and even the doctors who performed the autopsy and testfied about it did not see the autopsy photos and X-rays until just this week.

Recognizing this dilemma, as some officials now do, some sources began thinking about finding what has been called a "middle ground" between appointing a new study panel or doing nothing.

So far, these sources have not sat down to talk about the techniques that might possibly be used to persuade the public that the autopsy data does support the commission's conclusions.

Up to now, nothing formal has happened it was reported. But the likelihood is that the internal review of the issue will go on, at least for some time.

JOHNSON DEFENDS WARREN REPORT

Says a 'Reasonable Person' Would Accept Its Findings

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4—President Johnson defended the Warren Commission today, declaring that the evidence supports its conclusions about the assassination of President Kennedy.

In his first public statement on the subject since the commission became the target of a series of critical books and articles, the President gave the panel high marks for its "thorough study."

In answer to a question at his news conference, Mr. Johnson said "I know of no evidence that would in any way cause any reasonable person to have a doubt" about the commission's findings. [Question 12, Page 10.]

The commission concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in the slaying of President Kennedy.

Asked About X-Rays

Mr. Johnson's statements came in response to a question about the 65 X-rays and photographs of President Kennedy's body turned over to the National Archives this week by the Kennedy family. He was asked why the material had not been turned over before, and why it will not be available to non-Government investigators for at least five years.

Mr. Johnson replied that the material "has been available to the Warren Commission anytime it wanted to see it" and that Government agencies had access to it now.

"I think every American can understand," he said, "the reasons why we wouldn't want to have the garments, the records and everything paraded out in every sewing circle in the country to be exploited and used without serving any good or official purpose."

Mr. Johnson concluded that if anybody turned up evidence to cast doubt on the Warren report, it would be considered by the proper authorities.

Dr. James B. Rhoads, deputy archivist at the National Archives, said today that the mass of Warren Commission evidence delivered to the building by the Justice Department last week would be available for study by researchers in about a

Weapons in Dallas

The weapons have been kept in Dallas where they were the subject of litigation growing out of the fact that Oswald violated a Federal firearms law by purchasing them under a false name.

A department spokesman said the F.B.I. would return the weapons to the archives within the next few days, where they will be placed with the other evidence.

Dr. Rhoads said "any serious researcher" would be permitted to study the items, which Acting Attorney General Ramsey Clark officially claimed for the Government this week. Under a 1965 law, the owners of the items will be compensated by the Government.

The documents considered by the Warren Commission—mostly reports from the Federal Bureau of Investigation and other investigative agencies — have been in the archives for two years.

Dr. Rhoads said about two-thirds of this material had been cleared for release to researchers. Some documents must be withheld for security reasons, he said.

Kennedy Autopsy Photos Barred to All

Private Persons for at Least 5 Years

By FRED P. GRAHAM
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2—Private persons will not receive permission to see the autopsy photographs and X-rays of President Kennedy's body for the next five years, a representative of the Kennedy family disclosed today.

A statement by Burke Marshall, a New York lawyer who has been designated by the Kennedy family to handle requests to see the items, indicated that news media representatives might be denied access to them for much longer.

The 65 X-rays, color transparencies and black and white negatives were placed in the National Archives by the Kennedy family on Monday.

Mr. Marshall's statement was surprising in view of the announcement last night by a Government spokesman that under the agreement with the Kennedy family only nonofficial persons approved by Mr. Marshall would be permitted to see the articles during the first five years.

This had created the impression that Mr. Marshall would give selected private persons access to the material. His latest statement appeared to rule this out.

Mr. Marshall gave no reason for his decision.

No Approval Planned

Reached in New York, where he is general counsel for the International Business Machines Corporation, Mr. Marshall said he would grant no requests from journalists, historians, biographers and researchers for at least five years.

Under an agreement between the President's executors and the Government, only Federal investigative agents have the right during the first five years to see the material without Mr. Marshall's permission.

After the five-year period, selected scholars and researchers will be given access to the pictures and X-rays, he said, but the news media will probably still be excluded.

These restrictions will continue as long as any member of President Kennedy's immediate family lives.

According to testimony before the commission, the undeveloped film and the X-rays were turned over to Secret Service agents in the autopsy room. The agents were reported to have delivered the items to the Kennedy family.

Meanwhile, two physicians who conducted the autopsy on President Kennedy said their conclusions about his wounds were unchanged after they saw the autopsy photographs for the first time yesterday.

Capt. James J. Humes of the Navy and Dr. J. Thornton Boswell said the photographs corroborated their testimony to the Warren Commission and the commission's conclusions about the wounds.

Dr. Humes and Dr. Boswell were both Navy commanders when the President was assassinated in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963. They conducted the autopsy that night at the Bethesda Naval Hospital in Maryland.

Another physician who participated in the autopsy, Col. Pierre A. Finck of the Army, is on duty in Vietnam. Dr. Boswell is now in private practice in Bethesda.

The doctors told the Warren Commission that one bullet had struck President Kennedy in the back of the neck and passed through his body and out the front of his throat.

Critics later charged that the bullet had lodged in the President's back and that the photographs and X-rays had been suppressed to conceal this fact.

According to both physicians, it was unimportant that they had never seen the photographs because they had seen the X-rays during the authopsy and had been able to describe the wounds to the Warren Commission.

"We were there and saw just exactly what the photographs show," Dr. Boswell said.

However, he said it was beneficial that the items were now preserved in the Archives, where "they will be important to those who didn't see the wounds themselves and to corroborate our testimony."

Dr. Boswell said the main purpose for the pictures having been taken had been to have them as evidence against Lee Harvey Oswald, the assassin, who had then been captured and was still alive.

The Justice Department asked the Kennedy family to give the items to the Government after critics of the commission's report had complained that the items to the Government after suppressed that even the commission members had not seen them.

Some critics had suggested that the pictures and X-rays had been suppressed to conceal flaws in the commission's conclusion that a single bullet had passed through President Kennedy and wounded Gov. John B. Connally Jr. of Texas as they were riding in a car through Dallas.

The Kennedy family had been widely reported to have withheld the material for reasons of taste.

"We were there and saw just exactly what the photographs show," Dr. Boswell said.

However, he said it was beneficial that the items were now preserved in the Archives, where "they will be important to those who didn't see the wounds themselves and to corroborate our testimony."

Dr. Boswell said the main purpose for the pictures having been taken had been to have them as evidence against Lee Harvey Oswald, the assassin, who had then been captured and was still alive.

The Justice Department asked the Kennedy family to give the items to the Governmene after critics of the commission's report had complained that the items to the Government after suppressed that even the commission members had not seen them.

Some critics had suggested that the pictures and X-rays had been suppressed to conceal flaws in the commission's conclusion that a single bullet had passed through President Kennedy and wounded Gov. John B. Connally Jr. of Texas as they were riding in a car through Dallas.

The Kennedy family had been widely reported to have withheld the material for reasons of taste.

Lane Threatens Suit

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 2 (AP)—Mark Lane, a New York lawyer who wrote a book questioning the official verdict of the assassination, threatened today to file suit to open to the public photographic files from the Archives.

Mr. Lane, here to promote his book "Rush to Judgement," issued a statement contending that the turning over of the pictures and X-rays to the Archives "officially confirmed" that "the Warren Commission failed to examine some of the most relevant and vital documents in the case."

Epstein Sees Photos' Value

BOSTON, Nov. 2 (AP)— Edward Jay Epstein, author of "Inquest," which challenged the Warren Commission's investigation of the assassination, says the possiblity of a second assasin "will probably be reduced to nil" by the pictures.

Mr. Epstein said in an interview:

"The crucial contradiction in the events that happened Nov. 22 was that the same bullet could have wounded both Kennedy and Texas Governor Connally.

"It's possible that the photographs show a path of exit for that bullet. If we now have photographic evidence that the bullet went through the President's body, this must be seen as new evidence."

"This also proves the main point of my book—that the Warren Commission failed to examine crucial evidence."

Tass Is Critical

MOSCOW, Nov. 2 (AP)— Tass described today the placing of X-rays and photographs in the Archives as an "attempt to hide clues to the mystery" of his assassination.

The official Soviet press agency said that "a great number of articles and books appeared [illegible] criticize the Warren [illegible]mission for its incomplete [illegible]objective report." Tass [illegible]ney "express the opinion" [illegible]swald had "hardly acted

Robert Kennedy Comments

Senator Robert F. Kennedy, Democrat of New York when asked Tuesday night why the executors of his brother's estate had placed the restrictions on the pictures and X-rays, said that "the reason is so obvious it shouldn't need spelling out."

He said the items turned over to the Archives were things the general public would not be concerned about that they would be of interest only to medical persons, Federal police officers and federally appointed investigators.

The Warren Report . . .

Skeptics Offer Rumors, No Facts

By Roscoe Drummond

The way things are now going, the Nation is headed into a morass of pernicious rumor and speculation about the assassination of President Kennedy.

Drummond

This miasma is being fed from two directions:

1. By some pious innocents who foolishly suggest that it would be better if some facts bearing on the assassination did not come out, that a little cover-up might be a good thing.

2. By a spate of books by authors — mostly mischievous and one-sided, sometimes reckless and one or two honestly fascinated by some of the unanswered questions — who suggest a vast, unfinished conspiracy and charge the Warren Commission with either being grossly incompetent or a tool of the conspiracy.

I am confident there is no cover-up and, if there are any new facts to shed any new light whatsoever on the Kennedy tragedy, let them come out. They should.

The truth is that in the hundreds of thousands of words in the six main books and other articles attacking the motives, acts, and conclusions of the Warren Commission, there is no evidence of a plot, a conspiracy or any assassin other than Lee Harvey Oswald.

SINCE THEY produce no new evidence, where are these conspiracy-prone writers drawing their information from? Mostly from two sources—from the 888-page report of the Warren Commission and the 26 volumes of testimony and exhibits which it made public and from their own fertile imaginations and theorizing about the same evidence which brought the Commission to its unanimous conclusion.

Obviously, if there is a cover-up of the real assassin the Warren Commission must have perpetrated it or, if it failed to discover the assassin, then it must have falsified the evidence on which it based its verdict.

Do you recall the make-up of the Warren Commission which President Johnson named within a week after President Kennedy's murder? I doubt if a more experienced, able, single-minded, honorable and detached panel could be put together than this:

Earl Warren, Chief Justice of the United States; Democratic Sen. Richard Russell of Georgia and Republican Sen. John Sherman Cooper of Kentucky, two of the most trusted and respected men of the Senate; Rep. Hale Boggs of Louisiana, Assistant Democratic Leader of the House; Rep. Gerald Ford of Michigan, Republican House Leader; Allen Dulles, former head of the Central Intelligence Agency, and John McCloy, lawyer, banker and diplomat who has served five Presidents.

IF THERE WERE a conspiracy to cover up truth about the assassination, it would have to involve the Chief Justice, the Republican, Democratic, and non-party members of the Commission, the FBI, the CIA, the Secret Service, the distinguished doctors of the armed services — and the White House—a conspiracy so multiple and complex that it would have fallen of its own weight.

A conspiracy to what purpose? Nothing is cited. And with what motive? None is offered. Only one writer, Richard H. Popkin, provides even an imagined reason for the kind of cover-up he alleges. It is suggested that possibly President Kennedy's successor was involved and as evidence the author refers only to "rumors I have often heard."

Judge Arnold J. Fein of the Civil Court of the City of New York, and a former special counsel to the Kefauver Committee, reported on all of these assassination books in The Saturday Review. This was his conclusion:

"No one has yet been able to produce a scintilla of proof or a minute reason why the Commission would want to exculpate the real assassin or assassins, if Oswald was even indeed innocent or not alone," or would wish "to have the presidential assassin or assassins on the loose."

My own judgment is that most Americans do not want to see the tragedy of the Kennedy assassination turned into a witch-hunt. But if there are new facts — not merely fictions — they will want them brought out.

U.S. Archives Gets Photos of JFK Autopsy

The Justice Department disclosed last night that pictures and X-rays of the autopsy performed on President John F. Kennedy have been given to the National Archives under terms worked out with the Kennedy family.

Responding to repeated inquiries from newsmen, the Department confirmed officially for the first time that the family had this material in its possession.

Much of the controversy over the adequacy of the Warren Commission investigation resulted from the fact that neither the Commission nor its staff actually saw the photographs. It relied on testimony of the doctors.

Some experts believe that the photographs and X-rays, taken at Bethesda Naval Hospital shortly after the assassination in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963, could go far toward confirming the Commission's conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald alone murdered the President.

If the photographs are consistent with the pathologists' official autopsy report, they will bolster the conclusion that the fatal rifle shots came from behind the presidential limousine despite testimony of witnesses who thought they heard shooting from other directions.

This would dispel much of the dual- or multiple-assassin theories of some critics of the Commission's report.

Strict terms governing access to the materials were laid down in a letter written for the Kennedys by Burke Marshall, who headed the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division when Sen. Robert F. Kennedy (D-N.Y.) was Attorney General.

Marshall's agreement with the General Services Administration, parent body of the National Archives, prohibits public display of the materials—14 X-rays, 25 black and white negatives and 26 color transparencies.

Official Federal investigating bodies will have unlimited access to the materials, but no one outside the Government may view them unless Marshall approves.

Others May Have Access

The agreement stipulates that Marshall or any other designated family representative may be more liberal in granting access after 1971 to qualified pathologists or other scientists who demonstrate a "serious purpose," with the family passing on the applicants' qualifications.

The agreement, which Government lawyers said was a familiar one for certain donations of personal effects of public figures, is to last during the lifetimes of the late President's immediate family—his widow, brothers and sisters, parents and children.

The Justice Department's announcement of the donation came after publication in the Federal Register of an order by Acting Attorney General Ramsey Clark giving the Government title to about 10,000 pieces of evidence actually considered by the Warren Commission. This material also will be preserved in the National Archives.

The Department was meeting a one-year deadline set by a law signed Nov. 2, 1965, for specifying what items should belong to the United States. The law allows an additional year for individuals claiming ownership of specific items to file claims for compensation.

Already Delivered

Clark's order prompted renewed inquires about the much-discussed photographic materials. The Justice Department then revealed that they had already been delivered to the Archives.

It was clear that the sensitivities of the late President's family were a prime factor in negotiations that lasted several weeks. Government spokesmen said the government's principal concern was the completeness of the historical record but admitted that criticism of the Warren Commission "may have had something to do with it."

The agreement itself remained a secret last night. So delicate were the negotiations that Government spokesmen at first refused even to identify Marshall as the family representative.

One prominent critic of the Commission, Edward Jay Epstein, author of the book, "Inquest," said last night that the restrictions sounded "very reasonable" to him. He said it was in good taste to screen out the curious public and laymen who could not interpret the photographs.

Kennedy Death X Rays Given to U.S. by Family

By LYLE DENNISTON
Star Staff Writer

Evidence never seen by the Warren Commission in its study the assassination of President John F. Kennedy is now in government files.

The evidence was turned over to the government on Monday by the Kennedy family, a Justice Department spokesman disclosed last night.

However, the evidence will not be seen by the general public for many years and will be shown to almost no one outside the government over the next five years. Those conditions were imposed by the family in giving the evidence to the national Archives.

The turnover of the evidence followed what the spokesman called "weeks" of discussions between the family and the Justice Department. President Johnson was not involved, it was reported.

Included in the evidence are photographs, negatives and X rays made of the slain President's body while an autopsy was being performed at Bethesda Naval Hospital the night after he was shot in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

Called Crucial by Critics

This evidence has been described as crucial by a number of critics of the Warren Commission. These critics, who dispute the commission's conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald, acting alone, killed the President, have said the commission should have studied the autopsy materials.

It never saw them. However, three pathologists who performed the autopsy testified before the commission.

The photographic materials, it has been argued by critics, would have guided the commission in deciding the number of shots fired, the direction from which they came, the number of the President's wounds, and—possibly—the participation in the shooting of more than one person.

It has been suggested that the doubts raised by the Warren Report should be settled by another formal inquiry—either official or private—into the assassination. An official inquiry has been supported by, among others, Richard N. Goodwin, a former White House aide to President Kennedy.

Asked last night if any consideration had been given to reopening the questions about who killed the President and how it was done, the Justice Department said: "Not that we know of."

For Historical Record

The spokesman acknowledged that the growing controversy over the validity of the commission's conclusions had contributed, at least in part, to the government's desire to obtain the autopsy photos and X rays from the Kennedy family.

But, he said, critical books about the Warren Report were not the "direct cause" of the department's approach to the Kennedys.

"It was just for the historical record," the spokesman said.

Asked if any member of the Warren Commission had had anything to do with the discussions with the Kennedys, the spokesman said: "No."

However, the spokesman added that, on looking again yesterday at the photos and X rays, the Navy doctors who had joined in the autopsy "saw nothing new." They looked at the pictures again primarily to "authenticate" them, the spokesman said, adding that this "was not an extensive study."

The location of the autopsy material has been a mystery almost from the time the Warren Report was published just over two years ago.

The department spokesman said last night that, in accepting the materials for deposit, the government "did not know the history" of what had happened to the materials earlier and "did not insist on knowing the history."

Besides accepting the autopsy material for safekeeping, the National Archives also agreed with the Kennedy family to hold—with some restrictions on its use—the clothing the president had worn on the day he was murdered.

The restrictions the family put on the use of the clothing were less stringent than those imposed on use of the autopsy photos and X rays.

Open to Official Study

The autopsy data may be examined at any time by "any official federal government body"—in Congress, the executive branch or elsewhere—that may study again the assassination.

These materials will not go on "public display" during the lifetime of Mrs. Kennedy, the former president's brothers and sisters, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kennedy, and his two children, Caroline and John.

Study of the autopsy material by "nonofficial researchers" is strictly limited for the five years that began last Saturday—the day of the agreement to turn over the material—no unofficial source will be permitted to see the materials "without the consent of a family representative."

The family representative will be Burke Marshall, a former assistant attorney general when Robert Kennedy was attorney general in his brother's cabinet. Marshall is now a private lawyer.

Granting of access during the next five years, the government spokesman said, "will be exceptional—that is, rare."

After the five-year period, unofficial access to the autopsy data wil be limited to "recognized experts in pathology and related sciences." Such experts will have to prove their scientific qualifications and their "serious purpose" to marshall or to another Kennedy family representative if Marshal is not then holding that position.

This restriction, like the one forbidden public display, will remain for the lifetimes of the Kennedy relatives.

The Autopsy Items

The autopsy materials — all photographic reproductions of the president's body or portions of it—include 14 X rays, 25 black-and-white negatives, an indefinite number of prints from those negatives and 26 color slides.

The pathologists who examined the pictures again yesterday at the Archives "said that these were the only pictures" taken at the autopsy, a department spokesman said.

Examining the materials were two Navy doctors, J. J. Humes and J. Thornton Boswell. They, along with an Army doctor, Col. Pierre A. Finck, performed the autopsy on Kennedy's body. Col. Finck is now serving in Viet Nam, while the two other doctors remain at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

Also examining the photographic data for its authenticity yesterday was a radiologist who took some of the photos. He was not otherwise identified by the department.

mission, also do not apply to official government sources interested in that evidence.

Public display of the clothing is prohibited during the lifetime of the Kennedy relatives.

"Nonoffical sources" may obtain permission from the national archivist, Dr. Robert H. Bahmer, to see those materials at any time. Such sources would include "serious scholars or investigators who are investigating the death of the president." This "does not exclude" newspapermen, a department spokesman said.

Amounts to 'Contract'

The agreement to turn over the evidence to the Archives and the restrictions on its use amounts to a "contract" between the government and Mrs. Kennedy and the two senators, Robert and Edward Kennedy.

Such arrangements are authorized, the spokesman said, by a 1950 law. The law permits the General Services Administrator—now W. Lawson Knott—to accept "for deposit" papers and other historical materials of presidents "subject to restriction agreeable to the administrator as to their use."

The restrictions on use and availability "may be specified in writing by the donors or depositors" of the materials, the law says. The GSA chief is required to abide by those restrictions, if he agrees to accept them, "for so long a period" as the donors specify.

Administrator Knott agreed to the Kennedy condition by signing his name at the bottom of a letter specifying the agreement and the restriction. This is the only document there is, and it will not be made public, the government spokesman said.

He said it was not unusual for presidential families to impose such restriction. He also said it was common practice for presidential families to take possession of government records and documents that were related to a president's life and actions.

Year-Long Effort

Department efforts to obtain for government files, the autopsy materials was part of a year-long effort to determine what evidence surrounding the assassination should be held in that National Archives.

Yesterday, Acting Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark issued an order claiming government ownership of all evidence considered by the Warren Commission and now in government possession.

[illegible] be preserved intact Clark said.

The study of which evidence actually used by the commission should be kept directed attention to those autopsy photos" which the commission had not used, the department spokesman said last night. This led to the discussion with the Kennedy family, he said.

JFK Kin Gives Autopsy Data to U. S.

Photo and X-rays of the autopsy on the body of President John F. Kennedy — never seen by the Warren Commission — have been turned over to the National Archives by his family.

The family's action taken at the request of the Justice Department, was disclosed yesterday by a Department spokesman in answer to questions as to the whereabouts of the pictures — 14 X-rays, 25 black and white negatives, and 26 color transparencies.

The pictures were taken during the autopsy performed on the slain President at Bethesda Naval Medical Center on the night of Nov. 22-23, 1963. Two of the three pathologists who performed the post-mortem examination verified the pictures, officials said.

The spokesman said recent criticism of the Warren Commission's investigation of the assassination was indirectly responsible for the Department's request that the family turn the pictures over to the National Archives.

Warren Commission Report critics have made much of the fact that the pictures were not available for study, nor were they ever actually shown to commission members.

For the first five years, starting now, no non-governmental agency will be permitted to see the pictures unless an exception is made by the Kennedy family; after five years access will be limited to pathologists and other medical experts and investigators with a "serious purpose."

The ban is to be in force during the lifetimes of the President's widow, his two children and his brothers and sisters.

The family's release of the pictures followed the Justice Department's action yesterday in ordering all evidence the Warren Commission had considered preserved in the national archives. (UPI)

AUTOPSY PHOTOS PUT IN ARCHIVES BY THE KENNEDYS

Access to Negatives, Slides and X-Rays of President's Body Will Be Restricted

OPEN TO LAW AGENCIES

Justice Department Asked Filing of Data—Doubts on Warren Study a Reason

By FRED P. GRAHAM
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1—The Justice Department disclosed tonight that photographs and X-rays taken of President Kennedy's body at the autopsy after his assassination were turned over to the National Archives yesterday by the Kennedy family.

The 65 X-rays, color slides and black and white negatives will be available to Federal law-enforcement officials. However, for the next five years access by scholars and other unofficial investigators will be granted only with the consent of the Kennedy family.

The material had been withheld by the family for reasons of taste. As had been previously reported, it was not seen by the full Warren Commission, although Chief Justice Earl Warren, who headed the commission, had viewed it.

The limitations on access to the material were included in a letter to the Archives signed by a lawyer for the executors of the Kennedy estate—Mrs. Kennedy and the President's brothers, Senators Robert F. Kennedy of New York and Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

Law Provides for Curbs

A Federal law regarding Presidential libraries provides that papers and other items may be deposited in the Archives subject to limitations and restrictions imposed by the donors.

This morning, Acting Attorney General Ramsey Clark officially turned over to the Archives all of the physical evidence considered by the Warren Commission.

This had been in the hands of the Justice Department.

The X-rays and photographs were placed in the National Archives at the request of the Justice Department.

A Justice Department spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said tonight that the action was prompted in part by a number of recent books that expressed doubt about The Warren Commission's conclusions concerning the asassination.

Details on Restrictions

According to the spokesman, the items will be restricted as follows:

¶Access will be immediately granted to law-enforcement officials of all Federal investigative agencies.

¶No public display or release will be permitted.

¶For the next five years access by scholars and other unofficial investigators will be granted only with the specific consent of the Kennedy family. After five years, the family will permit qualified pathologists and other medical experts to study the items.

These limitations will remain in effect throughout the lifetimes of Mrs. Kennedy, the late President's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy, and the President's brothers and sisters and his two children.

Arlen Specter, who was a key Warren Commission lawyer and is now District Attorney of Philadelphia, has reported that the commission, in investigating the circumstances of the assassination, decided it was unnecessary for its members to review the photographs or X-rays.

Mr. Specter had interviewed Comdr. James J. Humes, an autopsy surgeon, and had asked if X-rays would assist him in further specifying the nature of President Kennedy's wounds. The published testimony, in Volume II, Page 371, shows the Navy surgeon replied:

"I do not believe, sir, that the availability of the pictures would materially assist the commission."

Questioned by Warren

Asked by Mr. Specter about the other photographs, Commander Humes said these would show more accurately and in detail the character of the wounds, giving perhaps a more graphic picture.

Chief Justice Warren, who was presiding, then asked:

"If we had the pictures here and you could look them over again . . . would it cause you to change any of the testimony you have given here?"

Commander Humes replied:

"To the best of my recollection, Mr. Chief Justice, it would not."

The commission concluded that President Kennedy and Gov. John B. Connally Jr. of Texas had been struck by the same bullet, which passed first through the President.

Some critics contended the bullet had not passed through the President's body and suggested that the pictures and X-Rays taken at the autopsy were being suppressed to conceal the truth. These critics implied that another bullet, perhaps fired by another assassin, had struck Governor Connally.

It has been widely reported that the Secret Service delivered all the undeveloped pictures and X-rays to the Kennedy family.

Today, Commander Humes and another of the three physicians who performed the autopsy, J. Thornton Boswell, went to the National Archives and authenticated the X-Rays and pictures as those taken during the autopsy. Both physicians are now stationed at the Bethesda Naval Hospital.

The third physician, Col. Pierre A. Finck, is on duty in Vietnam.

The radiologist who took the X-Rays, whose name was not given tonight, also authenticated the X-Rays.

Doctors' Testimony

According to the Justice Department spokesman, the two Navy doctors who authenticated the material today both said they saw nothing new in the X-Rays and pictures.

In their testimony before the Warren Commission, both said their examination of the President's body indicated that the bullet that struck him in the back of the neck passed out his throat.

This testimony was crucial to the commission's conclusion that a single bullet had struck the President and Governor Connally.

Asked if everything they saw today was corroborative, the doctors were said to have replied, "Yes."

The spokesman emphasized they were merely trying to authenticate the material and did not study it from a medical standpoint.

14 X-Rays in Group

The Justice Department said there were 14 X-rays, 25 black and white negatives and 26 four-by-five-inch color transparencies. The spokesman gave as one reason for the department's request for the data the desire to complete the historical record of the assassination.

He added that he was "sure that the questions which some of these books helped to raise in the eye of the public" helped lead to the Justice Department's action.

Questions about the pictures have been raised in recent books that dispute the Warren Commission's conclusions. The most widely publicized of these, "Inquest: The Warren Commission and the Establishment of Truth," by Edward Jay Epstein, quoted from Federal Bureau of Investigation reports saying the bullet that struck the President in the back of the head did not go through.

Later, F.B.I. sources said these reports were in error. But Mr. Epstein and other critics continued to demand the pictures and X-rays as proof.

Another book, "Rush to Judgment," by Mark Lane, stressed the same theme.

Government Takes Evidence

In an earlier action today, acting Attorney General Ramsey Clark took title for the Federal Government to all the physical evidence considered by the Warren Commission.

Acting under a law of 1965 that authorized him to decide which articles should be preserved in the National Archives, Mr. Clark concluded that "the national interest requires the entire body of evidence considered by the commission" to be preserved intact.

In a poignant recount of the memorabilia of the assassination, he listed first "one 6.5 mm. Mannlicher-Carcano rifle, with telescopic sight, serial No. C2766, including sling and cartridge clip."

Evidence Withheld in Kennedy Slaying, Bishop Pike Insists

BY ERNEST SCHONBERGER
Times Staff Writer

Episcopal Bishop James A. Pike insisted Monday that vital evidence in President John F. Kennedy's assassination has been suppressed, but he denied having said Mr. Kennedy was the victim of a conspiracy rather than a lone assassin.

He said the Associated Press misquoted him on that point Saturday in New York, but observed that "it was an oral interview, and that can happen."

Bishop Pike said he does believe certain reports were suppressed "because we were thinking of the image of the United States. We didn't want people to be disturbed around the world. People would think there was a conspiracy."

He said 90% of the information produced by the Central Intelligence Agency in some vital areas was withheld from the public, as was half the evidence produced by the FBI. He did not say whether the material was suppressed by the agencies or by the Warren Commission.

Delivers Address Here

The controversial churchman, now a scholar-in-residence at the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions at Santa Barbara, was here for an address at Cal State, L.A.

His comments were made in an interview and in the address.

He said evidence of suppression in the Kennedy investigation had been brought to him by Edward M. Keating, publisher of Ramparts Magazine. It had been prepared and given to Keating by a friend who formerly worked for the FBI but not for the Warren Commission, he said.

Bishop Pike, Keating and Abraham Heschel of the Jewish Theological Seminary in New York have formed a committee to ask President Johnson to release any undisclosed information.

They have said they would accept the lone assassin theory only if it is confirmed by examination of the withheld data.

"I just want the facts," the bishop said. "We should first look at the truth—the same as with the church . . . Hopefully, the more truth, the more relevance."

Earlier he spoke to 450 students in California State's Campus Theater. Almost that many were turned away.

Bishop Pike, accused of heresy by 22 fellow bishops, renewed his questioning of such traditional church concepts as eternal life, the Trinity and the omnipotence of God.

He affirmed a belief in God but declared that classical religion is looking "stranger and stranger . . . prefab thing. It's a big book you find in your motel room."

He said he has not denied traditional concepts but does not see the basis for positively asserting them.

"Clear me or unfrock me!" he demanded in a challenge to his colleagues.

(KENNEDY ASSASSINATION)

LOS ANGELES--CONTROVERSIAL EPISCOPAL BISHOP JAMES A. PIKE URGED THE SECRET SERVICE MONDAY TO RELEASE PHOTOGRAPHS TAKEN OF THE AUTOPSY PERFORMED ON PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY.

THE RECENTLY RESIGNED BISHOP OF THE CALIFORNIA DIOCESE SAID THAT FIVE MEMBERS OF THE WARREN COMMISSION -- WHICH INVESTIGATED [illegible] WERE ALLOWED TO SEE THE AUTOPSY FILMS.

SPEAKING TO STUDENTS AND FACULTY AT CALIFORNIA STATE COLLEGE AT LOS ANGELES, PIKE SAID PRESIDENT JOHNSON SHOULD RELEASE ALLEGEDLY "SUPPRESSED EVIDENCE" GATHERED BY THE COMMISSION.

HE SAID AT LEAST 15 PIECES OF EVIDENCE WHICH CAST DOUBT ON THE THEORY THAT OSWALD ACTED ALONE WERE KEPT FROM THE COMMISSION BY GOVERNMENT AGENCIES AND PRIVATE PARTIES.

MOSCOW--RUSSIA GAVE HIGH PRAISE TODAY TO A BOOK WHICH SAID PRESIDENTIAL ASSASSIN LEE HARVEY OSWALD WAS A "DISCREDITED AGENT" FOR THE CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY.

THE MAGAZINE NEW TIMES PRINTED A FIVE-PAGE REVIEW OF "THE TRUTH ABOUT KENNEDY'S DEATH -- AND WHY THE WARREN REPORT LIED," WRITTEN BY JOACHIM JOESTEN, A GERMAN-AMERICAN AUTHOR.

APPARENTLY BECAUSE OF OSWALD'S CONNECTIONS WITH RUSSIA -- WHERE HE DEFECTED AND MARRIED A RUSSIAN WOMAN -- THE SOVIET PRESS NEVER HAS ACCEPTED THE OFFICIAL FINDING THAT OSWALD ALONE SHOT AND KILLED PRESIDENT KENNEDY.

RUSSIANS HAVE HINTED THAT OSWALD ACTUALLY WAS A FIGURE IN A PLOT BY "TEXAS OIL MILLIONAIRES."

NEW TIMES SAID JOESTEN MADE A "CLOSE AND PAINSTAKING STUDY" AND DISCOVERED THAT "IN REALITY, OSWALD WAS A SECRET AGENT OF THE U.S. INTELLIGENCE SERVICE."

Pike Hits Warren Report

CLEVELAND, Oct. 31 (UPI) — Bishop James A. Pike, the stormy petrel of the Episcopalian Church, lashed out at the Warren Commission yesterday, alleging it had failed to obtain all the evidence in the assassination of President Kennedy.

At the same time, he challenged the church to acquit him of heresy charges or unfrock him.

The controversial Californian said he believes President Kennedy was the victim of a conspiracy of which Lee Harvey Oswald was a member.

Bishop Pike said he and two other men are forming a committee to ask President Johnson to release "suppressed evidence."

He identified the other members as Edward M. Keating, publisher of Ramparts Magazine, and Rabbi Abraham J. H. Heschel, of the Jewish Theological Seminary in New York.

Bishop Pike issued his challenge to the church in a sermon at the sesquicentennial festival service at Trinity Episcopal Cathedral here.

(ASSASSINATION)
NEW YORK--EPISCOPAL BISHOP JAMES A. PIKE AND RAMPARTS MAGAZINE PUBLISHER EDWARD M. KEATING SAID TODAY IT WAS THEIR BELIEF THAT THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY INVOLVED A CONSPIRACY IN WHICH LEE HARVEY OSWALD PLAYED ONLY A PART.

BOTH MEN CONCEDED THAT THIS CONCLUSION MIGHT BE WRONG, BUT THEY SAID ALL EVIDENCE, BOTH FROM THE GOVERNMENT AND FROM OTHER INTERESTED PARTIES, MUST BE REVEALED TO THE PUBLIC.

KEATING SAID "THE MOST CRITICAL SUPPRESSED EVIDENCE" INCLUDED FILM OF THE ASSASSINATION MADE BY DALLAS, TEX., BUSINESSMAN ABRAHAM ZAPRUDER AND THE 40 AUTOPSY PHOTOGRAPHS AND X-RAYS OF KENNEDY'S BODY.

"I THINK THE AMERICAN PEOPLE CAN ACCEPT THE TRUTH, WHATEVER IT IS," KEATING SAID.

KEATING, A ROMAN CATHOLIC, AND PIKE, ANNOUNCED THAT THEY AND RABBI ABRAHAMN J. HESCHEL OF THE JEWISH THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY OF AMERICA IN NEW YORK WERE FORMING A NATIONAL INTERFAITH COMMITTEE WHICH WILL CALL ON PRESIDENT JOHNSON TO RELEASE ALL WITHHELD EVIDENCE IN THE ASSASSINATION.

HESCHEL WAS NOT PRESENT AT THE NEWS CONFERENCE AT KENNEDY INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT BECAUSE SAUTRDAY IS THE JEWISH SABBATH.

KEATING SAID COMMITTEE MEMBERS WILL ATTEMPT TO PRESENT THE PETITION TO THE WHITE HOUSE "WITHIN THE NEXT 10 DAYS."

Oswald Innocent, Two Editors Assert

By MILTON BERLINER

Penn Jones Jr., who disputes the Warren Commission's judgment that Lee Harvey Oswald killed President Kennedy, called a press conference here yesterday and was surprised when newsmen turned up.

"I am overwhelmed," said the editor of the Mirror of Midlothian, Tex., as he faced a score of reporters and three TV crews complete with floodlights, cables, electricians, cameras and commentators in a small Sheraton-Carlton room.

"I think this is ridiculous for a weekly with less than 1000 circulation, facing you all."

"It's the only show in town," a newsman replied.

EUREKA!

Mr. Jones was joined by David Welsh of Ramparts Magazine whose current issue credits Mr. Jones with discovering "a series of mysterious deaths, possibly related to the assassination of President Kennedy." The circumstances of each of the 10 deaths, such as that of columnist Dorothy Kilgallen, are described in the magazine.

Neither Mr. Jones nor Mr. Welsh had new information to back their contention that the assassination was the product of a well-organized conspiracy.

"I think two rifles fired almost simultaneously," said Mr. Jones, adding he is positive that Oswald pulled no trigger.

"These people were professionals," he said. "They would not hire Oswald. I don't think he killed anyone, including Officer Tippett."

"Do you think the Government is withholding evidence?"

"No question about that," Mr. Jones replied.

WANT RUBY GRILLED

He and Mr. Welsh issued a statement calling for "the immediate transfer to Washington of Oswald's slayer, Jack Ruby, so that competent impartial investigators can question him on what he has never told about the events in Dallas."

Mr. Welsh said that of the 10 people listed in the magazine, those who had died violently had "indicated to their friends that they were willing to talk."

OTHERS ARE MUM

What about key figures like Ruby, Oswald's wife and mother who are still alive?

"They showed no signs that they would talk," said Mr. Welsh.

"There is," he said, "a pervasive fear in Dallas."

NEW THEORY — Dr. John K. Lattimer, a New York physician writing in the Journal of the American Medical Association, said President Kennedy might have survived the Dallas shooting if he had not been wearing an extra-stiff back brace. Dr. Lattimer said the brace prevented the President from slumping after being hit by the first of three shots. He said he feels the first shot was not fatal.

The assassination of JFK

In your editorial suggesting I acted irresponsibly in calling for a re-opening of the investigation of the assassination of President Kennedy ("A cold trail," June 30), you seem to have no quarrel with the Senate Select Intelligence Committee's finding that high intelligence officials withheld key evidence from the Warren Commission. Nor do you differ with our documentation of the fact that the FBI shut down its priority investigation of anyone other than Lee Harvey Oswald less than 24 hours after the assassination.

Having agreed the investigation was deficient, The Star goes on to say that it is willing to accept the Warren Commission's findings. That's like saying the product is sound even though key ingredients are missing.

What makes the Warren Commission so sacrosanct that we are prevented from doubting its adequacy? We demand the truth about Vietnam and Watergate, but the Warren Commission's findings are held to a less exacting standard, even in the face of documented evidence of a cover-up.

Was Presidential Assistant Marvin Watson irresponsible when he told the FBI that President Johnson was "convinced that there was a plot in connection with the assassination?"

Was ABC-TV newscaster Howard K. Smith irresponsible when he reported recently that President Johnson made the flat assertion to him that Fidel Castro was responsible for President Kennedy's death?

And speaking of irresponsibility, in its editorial The Star referred to me as "one of the more ardent of the conspiracy theorists."

I have repeatedly refrained — despite intense pressure upon me to do so — from passing judgment on the question of conspiracy. When asked at the news conference at which we released the report whether I personally do not believe that Oswald was the sole assassin, I answered, "I've made no judgment on whether there was a conspiracy or not."

The Star's misrepresentation of my position, I think, is indicative of its willingness to dismiss without regard to the facts legitimate criticism of the Warren Commission.

AM-JFK 7-3

NEW YORK (UPI) -- THE NEW YORK DAILY NEWS REPORTED IN ITS SUNDAY EDITION IT HAS LEARNED A FORMER CIA AGENT TOLD THE SENATE INTELLIGENCE COMMITTEE THAT JACK RUBY, THE MAN WHO KILLED LEE HARVEY OSWALD, ONCE DISCUSSED WITH FIDEL CASTRO THE POSSIBILITY OF ASSASSINATING PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY.

THE NEWS DID NOT IDENTIFY THE FORMER AGENT. IT SAID HE WAS "A CONTRACT OPERATIVE -- THAT IS NOT A REGULAR PAYROLL EMPLOYE -- WHO WORKED FOR THE CIA IN CUBA."

THE NEWS SAID IT LEARNED THE FORMER AGENT RECENTLY GOT IN TOUCH WITH THE SENATE INTELLIGENCE COMMITTEE, WHICH HAS BEEN STUDYING THE POSSIBILITY OF REOPENING THE INVESTIGATION OF KENNEDY'S DEATH, AND TOLD THE COMMITTEE RUBY MET WITH CASTRO IN THE SUMMER OF 1963.

THE NEWS SAID THE AGENT SAID RUBY, A NIGHTCLUB OPERATOR IN DALLAS, MADE A SECRET TRIP TO HAVANA ABOUT 10 WEEKS BEFORE KENNEDY'S DEATH BY PLANE FROM MEXICO CITY FOR THE PURPOSE OF OFFERING CASTRO "ARMS AND MILITARY EQUIPMENT IN EXCHANGE FOR PERMISSION TO USE CUBA AS A CONDUIT FOR DRUG SHIPMENTS TO THE U.S."

THE AGENT, THE NEWS SAID, SAID RUBY MET WITH CASTRO AND FOUR OTHER CUBAN LEADERS WHO TOLD HIM THE CIA HAD BEEN TRYING TO ASSASSINATE CASTRO AND THAT A CLOSE AIDE TO CASTRO HAD BEEN KILLED IN A RECENT ATTEMPT. HE SAID CASTRO "BLAMED KENNEDY FOR THE MURDER PLOTS...AND INDICATED THAT HE WAS READY TO STRIKE BACK."

THE NEWS SAID THE AGENT SAID RUBY WAS ASKED "WHETHER HE WOULD BE WILLING TO KILL KENNEDY OR COULD ARRANGE AN ASSASSINATION," BUT SAID IT WAS NOT KNOW WHAT THE AGENT SAID RUBY HAD REPLIED.

THE NEWS ALSO SAID IT LEARNED A CUBAN REFUGEE IN MIAMI HAD TURNED OVER TO THE FBI AT THE TIME OF THE ORIGINAL KENNEDY INVESTIGATION A LETTER FROM HIS HALF-BROTHER, A CUBAN ARMY OFFICER, WHO ALSO REPORTED A MEETING BETWEEN RUBY AND CASTRO, BUT THE NEWS SAID THE FBI NEVER INFORMED THE WARREN COMMISSION, WHICH INVESTIGATED KENNEDY'S DEATH, ABOUT THE LETTER.

THE WARREN COMMISSION CAME TO THE CONCLUSION THAT OSWALD WAS KENNEDY'S LONE KILLER.

AFTER OSWALD'S CAPTURE, RUBY SHOT OSWALD IN A POLICE STATION IN DALLAS. RUBY DIED OF CANCER BEFORE HE COULD BE BROUGHT TO TRIAL FOR OSWALD'S DEATH.

New Doubts, Fears in JFK Assassination Probe

The Warren Commission's examination of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy has been controversial almost since the day it was completed. Recently released commission material has raised new and serious questions about the commission's work. Tad Szulc, a Washington journalist, and the editors of the magazine, the New Republic, have studied the new material. This is the first of three articles on what they found.

Special to the Washington Star

Just 11 years ago — on Sept. 27, 1964 — the President's Commission on the Assassination of President John F. Kennedy issued its final report concluding, in brief, that Lee Harvey Oswald was the assassin, that he acted alone rather than as part of a conspiracy and that there never had been any link between him and his killer, Jack Ruby.

After nearly 10 months of intense labor, however, the commission, presided over by the chief justice of the United States, Earl Warren, was unable to come up with a motive for the Dallas assassination.

Its principal conclusion: "Many factors were undoubtedly involved in Oswald's motivation for the assassination, and the commission does not believe that it can ascribe to him any one motive or group of motives." Thus we still really do not know what happened in Dallas on Friday, Nov. 22, 1963. Nor, then, do we know why.

LOOKING BACK 11 years, however, there are extremely serious reasons to question not only the Warren Commission's conclusions, but the quality and integrity of the entire investigation as it was carried out between December 1963 and September 1964 by the seven commissioners, carefully chosen for political balance and reputability: Chief Justice Warren; Sen. Richard Russell, (D-Ga., Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky.; Rep. Gerald Ford, (R-Mich.; Rep. Hale Boggs, D-La.; former CIA Director Allen W. Dulles, and John J. McCloy, a leading New York corporate attorney

Of the group, four are now dead: Warren, Russell, Boggs and Dulles. Ford is now president of the United States — on Sept. 5, 1975, he almost became the victim of an assassination attempt.

The National Archives began declassifying the transcripts in 1968, but the most significant ones were made available for research only in 1974 and this year.

THERE ARE STILL GAPS. The National Archives continue to refuse to declassify the transcripts of the May 19 and June 23 sessions. The reason given for withholding the May 19 transcript was that it related to "personal and medical files and similar files," the disclosure of which would, under the provisions of the law, "constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." There was no explanation, however, whose privacy might have been jeopardized.

In the case of the June 23 transcript, the New Republic was advised by letter from Jane Smith, director of the civil archives division, that it was being held back on the request of the CIA. Ms. Smith's letter said in part:

"The transcript was reviewed by the Central Intelligence Agency because it relates to Yuro Nosenko, the Soviet defector. In response . . . the CIA asked that the request for access be denied "in order to protect sources and methods and other information related to our operational equities.'"

Yuri Ivanovich Nosenko, identified in internal commission documents as a KGB official who defected from the Soviet Union in 1964, provided both the FBI and the CIA with a certain amount of information concerning the period that Lee Harvey Oswald, himself a defector, spent in the Soviet Union, between 1959 and 1962.

UNTIL THE END, the Commission remained dissatisfied with the knowledge it could obtain about Oswald's stay in Russia. However, an internal memorandum, dated June 24, 1964, makes this point:

". . . Most of what Nosenko told the FBI confirms what we already know from other sources and most of it does not involve important facts, with one extremely significant exception. This exception is Nosenko's statement that Lee Harvey Oswald was never trained or used as an agent of the Soviet Union for any purpose and that no contact with him was made, attempted or contemplated after he left the Soviet Union and returned to the United States. Nosenko's . . . position with the KGB was such that had there been any subversive relationship between the Soviet Union and Oswald, he would have known about it.

". . . Noskenko was shown certain portions of our file on Oswald, including a section which stated that Oswald received a monthly subsidy from the Soviet Red Cross. On seeing this statement, Nosenko commented that it is normal practice in the Soviet Union to make payments to emigres and defectors in order to assist them to enjoy a better standard of living than ordinary Soviet citizens engaged in similar occupations. (Nosenko also said that the subsidy Oswald received was probably the minimum given under such circumstances)."

". . . The KGB in Moscow, after analyzing Oswald through various interviews and confidential informants, determined that Oswald was of no use to them and that he appeared 'somewhat abnormal.'

". . . Shortly after the assassination, Nosenko was called to his office for the purpose of determing whether his department had any information concerning Oswald. . . . The KGB branch office in Minsk (where Oswald had lived) . . . dictated a summary of the Oswald file to Moscow over the telephone. This summary included a statement that the Minsk KGB had endeavored to "influence Oswald in the right direction."

This statement greatly alarmed the Moscow office . . . The complete Oswald file at Minsk was ordered to be flown at once via military aircraft to Moscow for examination. It turned out that all this statement referred to was that an uncle of Marina Oswald, a lieutenant colonel in the local militia at Minsk, had approached Oswald and suggested that he not be too critical of the Soviet Union when he returned to the United States. . . ."

NOSENKO is not even mentioned in the Warren report.

The Kennedy assassination records add up to 360 cubic feet of material. Much of it remains uncataloged in the public inventory. According to Sen. Richard S. Schweiker (R-Pa.), 152 Warren Commission items still remain classified in the archives, including 107 FBI and 23 CIA documents.

In addition to the executive sessions and special staff meetings, the commission took direct testimony from 94 witnesses, including President and Mrs. Johnson; Mrs. John F. Kennedy; FBI Director Hoover; CIA Director John A. McCone and his deputy, Richard M. Helms; Secret Service Chief James J. Rowley; Mrs. Marina Oswald (Oswald's widow); Mrs. Marguerite Oswald (Oswald's mother); and Jack Ruby, the man who killed Oswald in the Dallas police station Nov. 24. The staff interviewed 395 other witnesses.

However, the commission apparently disregarded the recommendation of Texas Atty. Gen. Waggoner Carr that all FBI and CIA agents who were in the Dallas area in the period immediately preceding and following the assassination be interviewed as well. Carr's written recommendation to General Counsel Rankin was based on the long-held suspicion that Oswald may have been employed by either the CIA or the FBI.

Through transcripts of its executive sessions, staff memoranda (including the revealing transcript of a session with a panel of psychiatrists), and other documents only recently declassified, the commission is revealed to be a group of men consumed by doubts, fears and uncertainties; troubled by suspicions of the investigatory work performed for it by the FBI and the CIA; worried about a parallel inquiry in Texas; and, finally, suffering from a lack of confidence in their own ability to produce a report that would be credible to the American people and the world at large — or, for that matter, to themselves.

The commission also showed itself motivated by unacknowledged and secret political concerns that deflected it from its main task.

THE DEEP FEAR of being disbelieved and having been trapped into prefabricated conclusions by the FBI and other intelligence agencies — whose instinct to protect themselves was already apparent — was the theme running through the secret deliberations. All this was concealed in the final report.

Unable to disprove that there may have been a conspiracy, the commission simply accepted what it had been told and built a case to support the conclusion that Oswald, regardless of motive, was the lone assassin. And the book is closed on history, or so it was thought.

The commission, as it turns out, was justified in its initial suspicions of the FBI. Only this month did FBI Director Clarence Kelley admit that a crucial piece of evidence — a hand-delivered letter to the FBI from Oswald 10 days before the assassination, threatening to blow up the Dallas police station — had been withheld and destroyed. What else, one may ask, has been withheld and destroyed?

THE TRANSCRIPTS and material show that a series of critical facts, decisions and judgments have been simply kept away from the American people.

Here are some highlights from the executive sessions:

● Keenly aware of domestic political considerations, Chief Justice Warren was determined to complete the investigation before the onset of the 1964 presidential campaign in which Lyndon Johnson would seek election in his own right. On Jan. 21, he told the commission: "I think if this (the work on the report) should go along too far and get into the middle of a campaign year, it would be very bad for the country to have this thing discussed at that particular time."

The commission then decided to set a secret June 1 target date — secret even from its own staff. This disproves the claims of the commission that, indifferent to extraneous pressures, it was only interested in the truth of what happened in Dallas.

● Warren's initial notion was that the commission needed no investigators of its own, no subpoena power to call witnesses or obtain materials, and no power to grant immunity. His concept was that "our job here is essentially one for the evaluation of gathering evidence. . . . We can start with the premise that we can rely upon the reports of the various agencies. . . ."

Led by Sen. Russell, however, the commission overruled Warren on subpoenas. But it never really freed itself from the informational monopolies held by these agencies, and particularly the FBI. The commission — and acting Atty. Gen. Nicholas Katzenbach — were convinced from the outset that the FBI was deliberately leaking information to the press to construct the anticonspiracy case rapidly and decisively in the public mind. Moreover, the commission privately accused the FBI of attempting to impose its own anticonspirational conclusions on the presidential panel.

On Jan. 22, J. Lee Rankin, the commission's general counsel, exploded in sarcastic anger against the FBI's insistence that there was no conspiracy and that Oswald was the assassin. He said that "they would like to have us fold up and quit. . . . They found the man (Oswald). There is nothing more to do. The commission supports their conclusions, and we can go on home and that is the end of it."

The commissioners' suspicion, of course, was that the FBI, which had failed to inform the Secret Service and the local police of Oswald's presence in Dallas prior to Kennedy's visit, could not have lived with evidence of conspiracy.

As a former defector to the Soviet Union and self-proclaimed Marxist and supporter of the Cuban revolution, Oswald, in the commission's view, should have been placed on the Secret Service list of persons dangerous to the President. Likewise, the evidence shows that the FBI was aware of Oswald's mental condition, having interviewed him and his wife.

● The commission appeared terrified of FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover. After receiving in secret session information from Texas officials that Oswald might have been an FBI undercover informer, the commission spent four months debating just how to approach Hoover for a denial that would convince public opinion — a formal statement by Hoover was not deemed sufficient. Paradoxically, the commission feared that Hoover might feel that he was being investigated. (It wasn't.

until May 14, 1964, nearly six months after the commission was appointed, that testimony under oath was received from Hoover.)

● Allen Dulles himself cautioned the commission that Hoover might lie if Oswald was, indeed, an FBI informer. He astounded his colleagues with the frank admission that during his tenure as CIA director he would lie under oath to everybody except the President of the United States if he thought it was in the national interest or in the interest of the agency.

● The psychiatrists' panel told the commissioners that Oswald might not have assassinated Kennedy if Marina, his wife, had treated him with kindness on the eve of the murder. The psychiatric hypothesis was, that Marina unwittingly triggered Oswald's disturbed personality into his criminal act. This was as close as the commission could have come to fixing on a proximate assassination motive, but it shied away from it in the report (which didn't even mention that the psychiatrists had been consulted).

● Rep. Ford provoked a near uproar in the panel when, on June 4, 1964, he charged that outside forces were trying to pressure the commission to decide in advance that Oswald was a solitary assassin.

In December, "Mr. Katzenbach wrote and asked (for) . . . a statement to the effect that there was no foreign involvement, there was no conspiracy. . . . I have come to no specific conclusion yet." A month later, with but one executive session held in the interim and its contents still classified, members of the commission met with the psychiatrists in an effort to construct a psychological portrait of Oswald as murderer.

THESE TRANSCRIPTS reflect the age of American innocence that died with John Kennedy. During the course of their meetings, the commissioners were seized with doubts about the probity of the FBI, whose reputation had rarely been questioned in the past.

Warren recoiled at the idea of reproducing the gruesome photographs of Kennedy's autopsy reports. A staff memorandum told the commission that if certain rumors about the assassination — the possibility of a foreign conspiracy — are not quenched, they "could conceivably lead the country into a war which could cost 40 million lives."

But, also, there were grotesque touches. John J. McCloy, for example, was continually advising the commission that he had to catch a plane to London or Brazil and would have to be excused. Boggs found it difficult to attend a session because a new governor was being elected in Louisiana. Ford missed the April 30 session because he was in Michigan on political business.

The commission kept worrying at some length about such prosaic matters as parking space near its Maryland Avenue headquarters, the possibility of borrowing clerical help from other government agencies so that it would not have to pay them salaries, and the minimum number of copies of the report to be printed at the least possible cost.

CASUAL REMARKS show how much the commission was an expression of the American Establishment. Its members understood each other. When the name of William T. Coleman, a Philadelphia lawyer, came up for staff appointment, the general counsel explained, in the language of the day, that "he is a colored man." (In 1975, President Ford named Coleman to be secretary of transportation).

The commission was appointed by Executive order 11130 on Nov. 29, 1963. This was a few days after President Lyndon Johnson had encouraged Texas authorities to set up their own court of inquiry — as much as anything else to clear the name of the state of Texas in the tragedy.

Johnson may have been unaware at the time that by setting in motion two parallel investigations, he was inviting rivalries that, in the long run, complicated the overall effort. For a time, the Warren Commission and the Texas Court of Inquiry, unknown to the public, were not even on speaking terms.

THIS SITUATION reached a ludicrous point: For months members of the Warren Commission were afraid to go to Texas to investigate the scene of the investigation, lest they be subpoenaed by Texas authorities.

The Warren Commission is known to have held 13 executive sessions between Dec. 5, 1963, and Sept. 18, 1964. But so much concerning the commission's work is still wrapped in secrecy that it is entirely possible that it met on other, unrecorded occasions. Thus the "inventory" of the Records of the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy", issued by the National Archives in 1973, lists only 12 meetings.

An emergency meeting, called by Warren in utter secrecy on Jan. 22, 1964, to discuss information that Oswald may have been an FBI informer, is not listed. It was declassified from top secret only last March. Likewise there is no actual transccipt of the final, Sept. 18, 1964, session. There are, however, schematic minutes of this meeting which inadvertently throw additional and disturbing light on the proceedings.

FBI Chiefs Accused in Letter Case

A-3

By [illegible] International

Top FBI officials ordered a threatening letter written by Lee Harvey Oswald destroyed shortly after the 1963 assassination of President John F. Kennedy, The New York Times reported yesterday.

The Times said then-FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover "probably" was in on the decision, because the person who relayed the order to destroy the letter was one of his assistants who would not have acted except on Hoover's instructions.

The decision to destroy the letter was made at a meeting of top agency officials in Washington the weekend after Kennedy's death, the Times said, quoting "a source familiar with the meeting." It did not say who attended the high-level meeting or whether Hoover was there.

The existence of the letter was first reported earlier this month by the Dallas Times-Herald.

FBI director Clarence M. Kelley, in a statement, confirmed its existence and said there was evidence it had been destroyed. He said the letter, delivered to the FBI's Dallas bureau about 10 days before the President was killed, apparently warned investigators not to make further attempts to interview Oswald's Russian-born wife. It did not threaten the President.

The Times, however, quoted its source as saying the letter contained a threat to "blow up" the Dallas police department.

The letter was destroyed to avoid potential embarrassment to the FBI and not to hinder the investigation of Kennedy's death, the Times' source said.

He said an assistant to Hoover, who relayed the order in the Dallas FBI bureau, would never have directed the destruction of possible evidence except on Hoover's expressed order.

JFK death questions linger after dozen years

By HUGH AYNESWORTH
Staff Writer

Twelve years ago today President John F. Kennedy was shot to death in Dallas, exploding what had been a rather serene, pleasant day into the depths of tragedy and turmoil.

The physical aspects of that tragedy have somewhat subsided through these dozen years, but the emotion and turmoil rage on.

Many people, perhaps most people, believe that the assassination of the 46-year-old Kennedy was part of a conspiracy — a vast plot that might have included officials and agencies once held in high esteem.

The seven-man investigation body formed eight days after the assassination (and generally called The Warren Commission because former Chief Justice Earl Warren was its chairman) found after thousands of interviews, scores of technical tests and several months of deliberation and hearings that Kennedy was killed by a young dissident named Lee Harvey Oswald.

The manner in which that Commission carried out its assigned duties, the secrecy with which it locked up some of its work papers and materials, the refusal to deal strongly with key witnesses, plus the input of a coterie of personally-motivated "critics," made the report suspect in many circles almost as soon as it emerged from the U.S. Government printing office.

The Warren probers castigated the FBI for what it considered its ineffectual role. Though Oswald did not qualify at that time under that agency's official mandate as a man who should have been watched as a potential assassin, the Commission indicated strongly that the FBI should have at least given the Secret Service and the Dallas police the information that a Russian defector and a pro-claimed Marxist worked along the motorcade route.

Over the years it became quite lucrative to write books, movies and plays — almost all of them alluding to an alleged conspiracy and Warren Commission "coverup."

By now much of this smoke might have subsided had it not been for the disclosures of wrongdoing and government coverup in Watergate, wiretapping of private citizens, character assassination by agencies against "troublemakers" and actual participation of our government's agencies in foreign assassinations and political coups.

The spectre of all this — which spotlighted a kind of national morality crisis and prompted a re-evaluation even in the most trusting eyes, has once again made all the rumors of a Kennedy assassination conspiracy and coverup all the more believable to many Americans.

Then, just earlier this year The Dallas Times Herald reported for the first time that Oswald had actually visited the Dallas FBI offices a few days before Kennedy was killed and left a threatening note for an agent. The FBI admitted this happened.

This gesture by Oswald probably meant nothing as far as the investigation of his role in the assassination was concerned, but once again it fueled rumors of coverup because the bureau in an admitted "don't embarrass the bureau" posture, destroyed the note and did not inform the Warren probers about it.

Counsel Defends Warren Report

Says Panel Didn't Rely on Reports From FBI

Joseph A. Ball, attorney who served as chief counsel for the Warren Commission report on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, Wednesday defended the commission and said there is no evidence that would justify reopening the investigation.

Critics of the commission report recently have called for such action, partially because of evidence that the FBI may have withheld pertinent information and that the commission relied unduly on information furnished by that agency.

Ball said he "many times found the FBI had not been accurate" and its information was often "slipshod and contradictory."

But he emphasized that he and his associates on the commission "did not rely on the FBI, but went into the field and personally investigated every bit of evidence."

Ball's address was made before 300 students at California State University, Long Beach at a Law Society program.

She had personal relationship with President

Kennedy, Giancana and John Roselli had one thing in common, Judy Exner

By DAN THOMASSON
And TIM WYNGAARD
Scripps-Howard Staff Writers

WASHINGTON — Startled attorneys for the Senate Intelligence Committee struck from the record Judith Campbell Exner's testimony to them about her relationship with the late president John F. Kennedy, Scripps-Howard News Service was informed today.

This was learned after Mrs. Exner, now a California "artist," confirmed at a San Diego press conference that she had a "close personal" relationship with Kennedy and at the same time a relationship of a "personal nature" with two high-ranking Mafia leaders — Sam "Momo" Giancana and John Roselli.

Reliable sources informed Scripps-Howard that when Mrs. Exner was questioned by the committee's Democratic counsel, F.A.O. Schwarz III, and Republican counsel, Curtis Smothers, she explained the exact nature of her relationship with Kennedy. Schwarz convinced Smothers that her statement should not be included in the deposition she was giving for the committee. Senators serving on the committee never did question her directly.

COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN Frank Church, D-Idaho, has denied any attempt to cover up the discovery of her association with Kennedy and the two Mafia leaders who both were recruited by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) to assassinate Cuban Premier Fidel Castro in 1961-62.

The committee killed its internal investigation to find the source of leaks to Scripps-Howard about the relationship of Kennedy and Mrs. Exner after she held her press conference, committee sources said today.

The committee's report on CIA assassination attempts did not identify Mrs. Exner or even the sex of a Kennedy "friend" linked to the two mobsters. And the committee concluded that there was no evidence to show that Kennedy knew of the plots or the use of the Mafia by the CIA because of his "friend."

IN HER PRESS conference, Mrs. Exner admitted she also knew the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy when he was attorney general, but refused to go into her relationship with him. She also said she had met other members of the Kennedy family, but not former First Lady Jacqueline Kennedy.

Informed sources told Scripps-Howard today that Mrs. Exner had been introduced to John Kennedy in Las Vegas in 1960 by Singer Frank Sinatra, who at the time was close to the President and members of his family. Sinatra, the sources said, also introduced her to Giancana with whom Sinatra also was then friendly.

Mrs. Exner told the Senate committee and said at her press conference that she was well acquainted with both Sinatra and Peter Lawford, a Sinatra crony, who also was Kennedy's brother-in-law at the time. But at her press conference Mrs. Exner declined to say whether Lawford or Sinatra had introduced her to Kennedy.

SHE SAID THE same unidentified friend who introduced her to Kennedy in Las Vegas in February, 1960, introduced her to Giancana in March of 1960 in Miami Beach.

The late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover in February, 1962 warned Robert Kennedy about the President's association with Mrs. Exner, then known as Judith Campbell. But there apparently was no action taken to break off the relationship until Hoover personally lunched with President Kennedy on March 22, 1962.

Mrs. Exner said at her press conference she was not aware of Hoover's visit to the President. Asked how the association with Kennedy broke off, she replied: "It just ended."

WHITE HOUSE telephone logs show the last of more than 70 calls between the President's oval office and Mrs. Exner took place hours after Hoover's warning to the President.

Mrs. Exner denied she had any knowledge that would put her in fear for her life from the Mafia. However, she said stories implying she had such knowledge had put her in danger and that she had called the press conference to clarify the situation.

She also noted that she has all the facts about her relationship with Kennedy, Giancana and Roselli "transcribed, documented, and placed in a secure storage."

MRS. EXNER SAID she planned to make the whole episode in her life public at "a proper time and in a proper manner." The attractive, slim dark-haired woman challenged two of Kennedy's former top aides, Kenneth O'Donnell and former Kennedy personal secretary Evelyn Lincoln, who had claimed Mrs. Exner was just a campaign aide.

She said that both O'Donnell and Mrs. Lincoln knew of the true nature of her relationship with Kennedy and that she would not let them "sully or distort my personal relationship" with the late President.

She said Mrs. Lincoln passed her calls through to the President.

THE STATEMENTS by Mrs. Lincoln and O'Donnell, were intended, she said, "probably" to try to protect the President. They knew about the kind of scandal it would raise."

Her relationship, she said, had included numerous meetings with Kennedy in the White House. When asked if it were 10 or 20, she replied at least 20.

Scripps-Howard reported earlier that Mrs. Exner had met Kennedy in various locations outside the White House including Palm Beach where the President's family has a compound. Asked about Palm Beach, she said she would "go into that later."

"I PAID FOR my own trips at all times," she added.

Sources said Mrs. Exner had reason to fear for her safety. They noted Giancana's unsolved murder last June in Oak Park, Ill., shortly after receiving a committee subpoena to testify about the assassination plots.

Scripps-Howard also learned today that "five or six" witnesses connected with the investigation of the Mafia-CIA plots have "vanished." Sources said the witnesses may be hiding in fear of some retaliation. The sources would not identify the witnesses.

MRS. EXNER flatly denied she ever served as a go-between for the Mafia and Kennedy or that she was even aware of these "bizarre assassination conspiracies between the underworld and government entities."

She said she never discussed matters of state with Kennedy and that when they were together she never thought of him as the President but only as "Jack Kennedy."

She conceded that during her involvement with the President she had been the target of a "top priority investigation" by the FBI that included "substantial harassment." She said portions of the FBI file read to her during her interrogation by the committee staff "shocked me."

SHE DENIED she ever called Kennedy from Giancana's Oak Park home. But she said the FBI investigation of her partially was carried out by illegal means, suggesting wiretaps.

Hoover became aware of the President's relationship with Mrs. Exner and her relationship with Giancana and Roselli through an almost continuous surveillance of Giancana, including wiretaps, during that period of time, sources said.

Mrs. Exner said she last "laughed and talked" with President Kennedy in 1962 and that her last contact with Giancana took place in 1964.

She said that prior to the breakoff of her relationship with Kennedy she never had any trouble getting through to Kennedy "if it were my purpose to talk to him."

Scar, height raise Oswald querie

By EARL GOLZ

Pathologists who performed the autopsy on Lee Harvey Oswald in 1963 told The News they didn't remember seeing evidence of a mastoidectomy on the body and would have noted it in their autopsy report if they had.

Oswald, according to U.S. Marine Corps records, had a 1-inch mastoidectomy scar behind the left ear and was 5-foot-11. Autopsy records showed no scar and indicated the body was measured to be only 5-foot-9.

Dr. Earl F. Rose, Dallas County medical examiner in 1963, said "it would seem to me that a man of his age (23) shouldn't have lost 2 inches. That's a little much."

Both Rose and his assistant at that time, Dr. Sidney Stewart, said they were not looking for a mastoidectomy or a height difference, because the Federal Bureau of Information had not told them of any possible discrepancies when the autopsy was performed at Parkland Memorial Hospital.

"I won't say that we couldn't have overlooked a mastoidectomy," Rose said. "That is a possibility and I certainly won't deny it. You know, it could have been in the hair."

STEWART, HOWEVER, recalled that "we went into very careful details to note as many of the abrasions or scars or any type of skin blemish to help in identification in case this question arose."

The pathologists as part of the autopsy did make incisions in the mastoid area.

Yet, no mention of a mastoidectomy scar or that a portion of the mastoid bone of the skull was missing was recorded in the detailed autopsy report.

Retired London lawyer Michael Eddowes has alleged that the accused assassin of President John F. Kennedy was not Oswald but rather was a Russian spy-assassin who entered the United States posing as Oswald. Oswald defected to Russia in 1959 after he left the Marine Corps and supposedly returned to this country 18 months before the assassination in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

EDDOWES HAS written a book in which he calls for exhumating the body of the man killed by Dallas nightclub owner Jack Ruby to determine if it has evidence of a mastoidectomy and if the teeth match Oswald's dental records.

He says the teeth of Oswald had "peculiarities" which would be discernible in the corpse buried in Rose Hill Burial Park in Fort Worth.

The author also maintains the autopsy report showed discrepancies between scars on the left upper arm of the body and records of scars on the same arm of Oswald resulting from an accidental gunshot wound 5 years earlier during his Marine days. The post mortem report disclosed only 2 scars on the arm of the assassin, the Englishman says, whereas Marine records indicate Oswald had 3 scars there.

Stewart, however, said he is satisfied from a review of the 1963 autopsy report that "our description of the wounds sustained from the old gunshot wound probably do represent pretty accurately what he had before."

ROSE AND STEWART suggest that X-rays of the skull, if they exist, would probably show whether any bone had been removed as a result of a mastoid operation when Oswald was 6 years old.

However, any X-rays that may have been made of Oswald at Parkland on Nov. 24, 1963, were probably destroyed in 1969 when the files were purged of records that were at least 5 years old and which were not needed in pending litigation, according to Dr. Charles S. Petty, the current county medical examiner.

A spokesman for the National Archives in Washington, D.C., said no Oswald skull X-rays were ever deposited there.

Petty said it would not be surprising if a pathologist overlooked a mastoidectomy scar because some scars "simply don't show up very well, particularly when they are years and years old.

"I AM SURE that I have missed mastoidectomy scars, too," Petty said. "They frequently were put there (behind the hairline) for cosmetic reasons years ago, so that later the hair would tend to cover it."

Stewart, however, agreed with Rose that he "cannot explain the discrepancy in height. That's an enigma to my own mind."

Rose said that "unless there was an inaccuracy in the measurements somewhere along the line, either we or the Marine Corps had an inaccuracy." Eddowes has "quite a valid point unless somebody measured him with shoes on," he said.

FORMER ASST. DIST. ATTY. Bill Alexander, who would have prosecuted the assassin had he lived, insisted Rose "would not have missed a mastoidectomy. Hell, you or I wouldn't have missed it. If you've ever seen one, then there's never any question in your mind about what it is."

Dist. Atty. Henry Wade shrugged off the possibility that someone other than Lee Harvey Oswald is buried in Fort Worth.

"There's all kinds of these (assassination) books," Wade said, "and they write them to sell.

"I GUESS he (Oswald) would still be in Russia then, if somebody else came back," Wade said. "Well, his mother and brother and all recognized him pretty well. And his brother, I consider, is a pretty reliable person . . . And I don't think there's any question in his (brother's) mind that Oswald did it (assassinated Kennedy) himself, alone. I don't know whether he told him he did, but he knew him pretty well, he said."

The justice of the peace who issued the search warrant for Oswald's apartment after the assassination said he doubted Eddowes' contention that Russian agents were able to switch the FBI fingerprints of Oswald with those of an imposter.

"I'm not going to say that it couldn't be done," David L. Johnston said, "but I'm going to say that it would really take some smart, sharp people to do it. Because No. 1, you are not dealing with just one file, you are dealing with two cross references files which then go back to what they call the master file. Which means that an individual would have had to had access to change both the master file and the cross reference file."

Probe of agency raises new questions in slaying of JFK

© 1975 Chicago Tribune

THE WARREN COMMISSION may have been denied crucial information about the assassination of John F. Kennedy by two aides of the slain President who were advised by high officials of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to withhold certain data.

That is the thrust of preliminary information furnished Congressional leaders by a Central Intelligence Agency liaison man in advance of two Capitol Hill investigations of CIA activity.

According to the material, Presidential aides Kenneth O'Donnell and David Powers are reported to have told investigators soon after the Kennedy assassination in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963, that they thought they had observed what might have been shots coming from a location other than the Texas School Book Depository from which Lee Harvey Oswald is accused of having gunned down the President.

BUT SOMETIME before O'Donnell and Powers submitted their eye witness accounts to the Warren Commission by deposition and affidavit, either J. Edgar Hoover, the late FBI Director, or his top aides prevailed on the men not to disclose their suspicions to the commission.

If true, the reasons must have been compelling enough to prompt them to agree to the request, for there is no indication that either ever publicly espoused such contradictory information.

"The story is an absolute lie," O'Donnell declared in a phone interview. "I'm not accusing the reporter, but whoever gave that story is lying. It's an absolute, outright lie."

In the data given orally to the congressmen, the CIA liaison officer alleged the FBI warned O'Donnell and Powers that testimony to that effect could lead to a possible international incident and inflame public passions fed by other secret information then known by the FBI.

Federal investigators had determined that Oswald had visited Mexico City eight weeks before the Kennedy assassination, contacting both the Cuban and Soviet embassies there. They also were aware of alleged CIA contracts with Chicago Mafia boss Salvatore [Momo] Giancana and mobster John Rosselli to assassinate Castro in 1961.

If these facts were to have emerged together, they would have spawned suspicions that the Kennedy killing had been carried out in retaliation for the reputed plots on Castro's life and that the Soviet Union might also be dragged into such speculation because of Oswald's residence there from 1959 until 1962.

For the good of the country and global tranquility, the FBI is alleged to have told the two aides, it would be better if they made no mention of their suspicions to the Warren Commission.

Such information, they were told, might cause people to surmise that Oswald had been part of a band of conspirators instead of the lone and perhaps demented gunman portrayed eventually in the Warren report.

IN ITS REPORT, the Warren Commission concluded that three shots had been fired from a rifle held by Oswald on the sixth floor of the Texas School Book Depository, two of which had killed Kennedy and wounded John Connally, then governor of Texas. The third was believed to have missed.

That agrees with the personal accounts of O'Donnell and Powers in their book on their years with the late President, entitled "Johnny, We Hardly Knew Ye."

In that account, both men declare they heard only three shots, two of them close together and a third five seconds later. At the time—12:30 p.m.—the aides were riding on jump seats in a Secret Service back-up car directly behind the limousine bearing the President, his wife, and Gov. and Mrs. Connally.

BOTH RECALLED they were accurately aware of the exact time of the shooting because Powers checked his watch and determined the caravan was only five minutes behind schedule as it rounded the plaza in front of the Book Depository.

There is no mention of their alleged suspicions that some of the three shots might have come from somewhere other than the Book Depository. In fact, there is no speculation on the direction of the firing at all.

"I spent four hours before the commission and my testimony is quite clear," O'Donnell said in the phone interview. "I told them exactly what I saw. I was in charge of the whole operation so I know what happened. I arranged the whole trip.

"I testified under oath and I stand by it."

O'DONNELL recalled he told the Warren Commission he heard two shots, the first of which he initially thought was a firecracker. Both came from behind, he said.

During their service with the Kennedy administration, O'Donnell was Presidential appointments secretary and one of Kennedy's trusted advisers. Powers' title was White House receptionist, and he was valued by Kennedy for his wit and political know-how.

THERE IS nothing to indicate why the CIA elected to inform Congress of the Kennedy assassination allegations since the Warren Commission suggested no complicity in the death by the agency.

The fact the reputed CIA arrangements with the Mafia to kill Castro figured in the account may have prompted the disclosure to Congress.

John F. Kennedy

Denies withholding facts in JFK death

Sun-Times Bureau

WASHINGTON — Former White House aide Kenneth O'Donnell denied as "absolutely untrue" a report Saturday that he withheld evidence indicating a second gunman might have been involved in the 1963 assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

O'Donnell, who was in the car immediately behind Kennedy's, told The Sun-Times he was convinced from the beginning that all the shots came from the same direction.

Sen. Frank Church (D-Ida.), chairman of the Senate intelligence committee, also denied that any evidence has turned up in conflict with the Warren Commission's conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald was the sole gunman in the Dallas assassination.

O'Donnell expressed annoyance that he was not called before publication of a story in Sunday's Chicago Tribune alleging that he believed Kennedy was shot at from two directions but that O'Donnell suppressed the information in testimony to the Warren Commission at the urging of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

O'Donnell said that as Kennedy's appointments secretary in the White House he was in daily contact with the FBI and the Central Intelligence Agency, and no such thing was ever discussed.

The report that O'Donnell denied said the FBI asked him to suppress the information to avoid international complications, particularly with the Soviet Union. But O'Donnell pointed out that the story was "ridiculous" on the face of it since the FBI has no concern with or jurisdiction over foreign affairs.

O'Donnell said he had "no doubt" at any time that all the shots fired at Kennedy came from the Texas School Book Depository building, where the Warren Commission said Oswald fired.

David Powers, another Kennedy aide who allegedly suppressed evidence in testimony to the Warren Commission, said Saturday: "I never, ever, discussed the assassination of President Kennedy with the FBI or with the CIA."

"I was almost certain that two shots came from above and behind me (the direction from which Oswald fired)," Powers said.

Powers and O'Donnell were riding in the same car in the Dallas motorcade.

No [illegible] other senators and aides at the heart of the investigation of the CIA have offered any support for another report that CIA officials discussed with French dissidents a plot to kill the late French President Charles de Gaulle. It was noted that many unsubstantiated rumors have been stimulated by the congressional and Rockefeller Commission investigations of alleged CIA involvement in the assassination of foreign leaders.

There were indications that the reports about Kennedy and de Gaulle had risen out of the House investigation, which has not yet developed an expert staff to sort out fact from fantasy about the CIA.

It was understood that no such information was under study by the Senate Intelligence Committee, which has been in operation with a full, expert staff for several months.

Assassination of President John F. Kennedy

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

FBI Withheld Data on JFK Slaying

By Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

The FBI withheld from the Warren Commission hundreds of documents about the assassination of President Kennedy.

These are raw FBI files, which the commission requested but never received. They contain no startling information that will overturn the commission's verdict, but they reveal intimately how the FBI handled its most important case.

In the margins of some suppressed memos, the late FBI chief, J. Edgar Hoover, scribbled caustic comments in blue ink. He was critical of almost everyone involved in the investigation, from Dallas police chief Jesse Curry to President Lyndon Johnson.

Confidential notes kept by one top FBI official, for example, quote Hoover as warning: "Johnson may become very dictatorial. We must keep our guard up."

Sources familiar with the suppressed documents say the contents were summarized and submitted to the Warren Commission. But there were some subtle, perhaps deliberate, omissions.

The documents show that Hoover brought pressure on his subordinates to rush out a preliminary report on the FBI involvement before the murder of President Kennedy's brother, Robert F. Kennedy, returned to his desk as Attorney General.

The confidential notes quote Hoover as instructing his subordinates to get the report out of the Justice Department "before Bobby gets back."

Apparently, the FBI chief also feared Deputy Attorney General Nicholas deB. Katzenbach might tamper with the report before forwarding it to the Warren Commission. Hoover told his aides to alert President Johnson's major-domo, Walter Jenkins.

"Let Jenkins know after report is out of our hands," Hoover directed. "Let Jenkins know what Katzenbach is doing. Might cause long delay. Must not consider any alteration."

Thirteen days after President Kennedy was gunned down in Dallas, Hoover delivered a detailed report to Katzenbach naming Lee Harvey Oswald as the assassin. Katzenbach kept it four days before submitting it to the commission.

The crusty old G-man was furious at the Dallas police chief, meanwhile, for leaking the story that the FBI had investigated Oswald but had failed to alert the Secret Service.

"This is the lowest level in history of Bureau since I have been director," Hoover lamented, according to the confidential notes.

He contended that Oswald had never been seen with firearms, had written no hate letters against U.S. leaders. As a former defector, he also knew he was a marked man whom the FBI was watching.

"With that background," grumbled Hoover, "how could he be security risk? No indication of violence so far as our records show . . . Oswald could have hollered false arrest if we had arrested him."

The FBI chief commented that Chief Justice Earl Warren, who headed the commission, "would have been first one to holler" about Oswald's rights. Citing the criticism of the FBI, Hoover commented: "This is one of the rough ones."

He felt, therefore, that President Johnson should have endorsed the FBI report. "President should have backed up report," complained Hoover, "based on evidence gathered by the FBI."

In private remarks that were never intended to be repeated outside his inner circle, he made deprecating remarks not only about President Johnson but about Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.), who was then preparing to run against LBJ for the presidency.

"Goldwater has no sound advisers around him," Hoover noted. But his comment on Johnson was more deadly: "LBJ's speeches are dull."

The Warren Commission adopted a resolution, meanwhile, calling for "the raw materials upon which any reports given to the commission are based, together with all raw materials and reports relating to the work of the commission since the date of any and all earlier reports."

J. Lee Rankin, the general counsel, followed up with a "Dear Edgar" letter to the FBI chief requesting the full files "as promptly as possible." But they were never delivered.

A commission lawyer, remembering those days more than a decade ago, told us: "Nobody ever got the FBI's own files." In 1963-64, another staff member pointed out, the FBI "could do no wrong," so no one pressed too hard for their internal records.

Now 12 years after the Kennedy assassination, a fascinating story is still locked in FBI files awaiting a public reopening. We will tell part of the story in future columns. Sen. Richard Schweiker (R-Pa.), chairman of the Senate intelligence subcommittee investigating the assassination, is seeking the full story from the FBI.

Footnote: FBI spokesmen stoutly defended the FBI's findings and the thoroughness of the investigation. They conceded that "informative" and "deliberative" memos were not given to the commission. But "everything they needed was given them. They had all they wanted to make their findings."

Those Assassination Buffs

President's Commission on the Assassination of President John F. Kennedy

In regard to the autopsies, rethinking and rehashing of the political assassinations of the modern American era, Congress should pause to ask some basic questions.

What good will it do? That is the paramount query that should be answered before the other "unanswered questions" unearthed in years of suspicion and speculation. Can any new commission persuade the assassination buffs that Lee Harvey Oswald or Sirhan Sirhan or James Earl Ray acted alone?

With all deference to those who harbor justifiable doubts about the apparently sloppy methodology of the Warren Commission, no second-guessing will cure the disease of doubt. Assassination zealotry has replaced antiwar protests, civil rights marches and mah-jongg on college campuses.

Doubt and skepticism — for a generation weaned on Vietnam and Watergate — feed themselves. The supply of suspicion is inexhaustible and the zealots will cherish the "unanswered questions" for a lifetime, like old newspapers in the attic.

Conspiracy theories live forever. Stroll into an Elks Lodge some night and someone is sure to describe in detail how Franklin Roosevelt directed the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Who will be believed? Peter Rodino? Sam Ervin? For every hero of the last constitutional crisis, the assassination probe is a bottomless pit, a no-win proposition. Prestige and credibility, after all, were the very foundations of the Warren Commission. Now, those 26 volumes of solemn testimony taken before famous men crumble like phony parchment.

Perhaps the press, not Congress, has the responsibility. Again, a no-win proposition. Woodward and Bernstein, Mary McGrory and Dan Rather could toil for months and, if their efforts did not confirm the more lurid conspiracy theories, their credibility would also crumble. The assassination buffs would probably brand them puppets of the CIA.

What if all the facts, films, ballistics, autopsies, eyewitness accounts and other evidence could be tossed into a rigidly analytical meat grinder again and a vivid pattern of conspiracy emerged? Would the underground then cheer the government for fingering and presumably punishing the mastermind?

The reaction to the "grand-scale investigation" is as unlikely as the conclusion.

What should be done, then? A compromise might be a less-than-grand-scale investigation by Congress. But who would conduct it? Certainly not the FBI. Then who? Mark Lane?

Congress might find it difficult to recruit gumshoes from the roving bands of conspiracy-theory zealots. Their no-compromise independence is as precious as their narcissistic cause.

Yes, officials in Los Angeles ought to fire that pistol again and yes, someone — who? — ought to retrace the steps of Oswald, Jack Ruby et al with a fresh eye. Then what?

Those shots in Dallas on that bright November afternoon echo still, a generational trauma unmatched in history. The wrenching repetitions in that violent decade of the '60s exacerbated a national malaise that may be curable only by time.

John F. Kennedy will not live again, nor Robert Kennedy, nor Martin Luther King, nor Malcolm X, nor George Lincoln Rockwell. An investigation into how they died should have a lower budget, lower priority and a looser grip on the attentions of those who must cope with the problems of the living.

Did Impostor Use ID?

Hoover Memo Raises New Wrinkle on Oswald

By Ben A. Franklin
New York Times News Service

J.Edgar Hoover in 1960 sent a memorandum to the State Department raising the possibility that an impostor might be using the credentials of an American defector named Lee Harvey Oswald, who was then in the Soviet Union.

This memo from the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and two subsequent State Department memos related to it were apparently not shown to key investigators of the Warren Commission, which examined the assassination of President Kennedy and determined that Oswald, acting alone, was the assassin.

The late Hoover's warning of the "possibility" that an impostor could be using Oswald's identification data in the Soviet Union or elsewhere came more than two years before the murder of the American president in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963. The impostor theory was rejected, by implication but not directly, in the published report of the Warren Commission, and it's significance could not be determined.

THE BODY of the man who the commission concluded had shot the president—and who was shot to death by Jack Ruby two days later—was identified by his mother and other relatives and also by fingerprints and other physical features as that of Lee Harvey Oswald.

But the apparent withholding of information from commission investigators responsible for checking Oswald's activities in foreign countries supported a theory of some critics of the commission's final report that the panel had come to its conclusion regarding Oswald without having had all the facts.

A spokesman for the FBI said, in response to questions, that "we can definitely state, without hesitation, that a copy of the Hoover memo was shown to a member of the Warren Commission staff in the presence of an FBI agent." However, the spokesman said that he could not identify the commission staff member to whom the memo reportedly had been shown. Neither J. Lee Rankin, the former general counsel of the commission, nor any of his former staff aides who were most involved in investigating Oswald's background, said they could remember seeing it.

However, Howard P. Willens, now a private lawyer here, identified himself in an interview yesterday as the commission lawyer who had reviewed the FBI file. Willens, who was then the commission's special liaison officer to the Justice Department, said that "while I do not think that anyone can state now with the necessary precision whether or not he saw the Hoover memo, it is my best recollection that I did, in fact, see that memo."

"I DO NOT WANT to be in a public debate with my old colleagues," Willens said, "but I know that there was discussion of this among others on the staff concerned with the activities of Oswald abroad. I am concerned with continued public references to the notion that the commission overlooked obvious facts."

Shown the FBI memos and the two State Department documents— discovered in the National Archives here by a private researcher— W. David Slawson, a lawyer who checked out rumors about Oswald for the commission in 1964, said he thought the assassination inquiry should be reopened.

Slawson, who is now a law professor at the University of Southern California, said he and other investigators had never been shown the memos.

"We were the rumor runner-downers, and we certainly should have seen this material, as we did a great deal of other stuff that we showed to be unfounded," he said.

"It may be more significant that we did not see it, in terms of a possible cover-up and the reasons for it, than if we had seen it. I mean, I don't know where the impostor notion would have led us — perhaps nowhere, like a lot of other leads. But the point is we didn't know about it. And why not?"

SLAWSON SAID in an interview that the investigation should be reopened also "because the interposition of an impostor, if that happened, is a political act."

"And after all, this (the assassination) was not just another murder," he said. "It was, by definition, a political murder."

Two other commission staff members shared with Slawson the responsibility for checking out rumors. Neither recalled specifically having seen the memos, but they tended to discount any thought of a renewed investigation.

One of them, Dr. Alfred Goldberg, who wrote the gossip-puncturing "speculations and rumors" section of the commission's report, said in an interview:

"I don't have any recollection of having seen that (Hoover) memorandum. As a matter of fact, I am fairly certain I didn't.

"WHILE I THINK we might have done more had we seen it — we might have engaged in more research, we might have looked for more, we might have asked for more from the State Department and the FBI - in terms of the outcome, I don't believe it would have made any difference."

William T. Coleman Jr., who was Slawson's immediate superior at the commission, and who was nominated last month by President Ford to be secretary of transportation, was asked during an interview whether he had seen the memos.

"It's been 10 years," he said, "and I don't remember one way or the other."

He recalled, however, that his duties "required me to see everything that Oswald had done as a defector to the Soviet Union."

Hoover's memo was dated June 3, 1960. Its contents suggest that the FBI director raised the possibility of an imposter because of certain facts the memo recounts.

IT CITED A Foreign Service dispatch concerning Oswald's declaration in Moscow on Oct. 31, 1959, that he would renounce his citizenship and noted that he had surrendered his passport.

It also cited a report of an FBI agent in Dallas of May 12, 1960, which said that Oswald's mother, Marguerite K. Oswald, "stated subject had taken his birth certificate with him when he left home."

The agent's report indicated that Mrs. Oswald was apprehensive about her son's safety because she had written him three letters and they had all been returned to her undelivered.

Hoover concluded "Since there is a possibility that an imposter is using Oswald's birth certificate, any current information the Department of State may have concerning subject will be appreciated."

Two internal State Department memos transmitted Hoover's warning. One, dated June 10, 1960, went to the department's Soviet desk. The other, dated March 31, 1961, was sent from one section of the passport office to another.

THE LATTER MEMO indicated concern that a revalidated passport to be issued to Oswald in preparation for his return to the United States in June, 1962, not be mailed to him through the Soviet postal system but be delivered to him "only on a personal basis" at the embassy in Moscow. Officials there could then be satisfied that they were dealing with the real Oswald.

The Warren Commission subsequently developed that in July, 1961, Oswald's passport was handed back to the man who Moscow embassy officals were satisfied was the same Oswald they had first met in 1959, when he angrily announced his intention to renounce his citizenship. The State Department had ruled by then that he had not actually given up his citizenship.

None of these documents — not the Hoover memo or either of the State Department memos — was in the department's Oswald file as it was given to the Warren Commission in 1964, according to Slawson.

He said commission lawyers, interested in any marginal notes scribbled on duplicate copies of the documents retained by department officials, had asked for a second set. This, too, did not have the memos, he said.

AFTER THE COMMISSION published its report, thousands of pages of unpublished commission records were declassified by the State Department and placed on public file in the National Archives.

Among them J. G. Harris, a 45-year-old New Yorker who has spent nearly a decade in Kennedy assassination research, found the Hoover and State Department memos.

How the memos came to be missing from the State Department's Oswald file given to the commission but included in the same file placed in the Archives remains unclear.

At the State Department, a spokesman said there would be no comment because all former officials who might have knowledge of the Oswald file had died or retired.

Under Better Surveillance, Lee Oswald Might Have Been In Jail

Here and there, the Federal Bureau of Investigation may have extended its general surveillance too far and too deep and screened through its network many a man whose conduct scarcely deserves so much attention from the police.

This is very nearly the requirement and first rule of any preventive detection. Before the FBI or any other police agency can decide who bears close watching and who is merely an innocent bystander it must look at both long enough to make the distinction.

Let's admit, then, for the sake of argument, that the FBI has often drawn into its net the innocent when it might have occupied its agents better by concentrating on something else and with this admission pass to more particular considerations.

The FBI had Lee Harvey Oswald in its files for a long time and spotted as a source of danger. Alas, at the critical moment in Dallas, the surveillance was not quite good enough, and the United States lost a president.

Whether or not anyone did, someone should have had Sirhan Sirhan under surveillance. It might have saved the life of Sen. Robert Kennedy.

Finally, there is the case of James Earl Ray, undoubtedly a hard man to pick out of a crowd, but one can't help wish that someone had spotted him before he spotted Dr. Martin Luther King.

And the point, of course, is that while there may be reason to criticize the FBI for suspecting too much and looking too hard in the wrong places, there is far better reason to wish that it had looked even harder in the right places and discovered the assassins in time to prevent the assassinations.

The problem, of course—and it is peculiarly the FBI's problem, is to know which is the right and which the wrong place; and except as it is excused in the accumulation of many a useless bit of information, it is hard to imagine how it will uncover the useful bit in time to do anything about it.

McGeorge Bundy Points Out Author's Works

'Scholar' Hits Warren Report Critics

By RICHARD STARNES
Scripps-Howard Staff Writer

An article published in a widely unread egghead journal has been cited in an attempt to stem the tide of criticism of the Warren Commission report on the assassination of President Kennedy.

The article appeared in the spring number of The American Scholar, a quarterly published by Phi Beta Kappa. It was written by John Kaplan, a professor of law at Stanford University. It attracted widespread attention only after McGeorge Bundy chided members of the American Society of Newspaper Editors here last week for ignoring the "fascinating" article because it appeared in "a learned journal, not a book or a column or a speech with headlines."

The article is a long, dispassionate analysis of the series of books, pamphlets and magazine pieces that have brought the Warren Report under fire in the U.S. and abroad.

EARLY CRITICISM

In his article Mr. Kaplan dismissed early criticism of the Warren Commission findings (principally Thomas Buchanan's "Who Killed Kennedy" and Joachin Joesten's "Oswald: Assassin or Fall Guy?" as "so inept that it is embarrassing to read them over." But he offers detailed refutation of five other books that have won wide circulation with varying theories seeking to cast doubt on the Commission report. They are: "Inquest," by Edward Epstein; "Rush to Judgment," by Mark Lane; "Whitewash," by Harold Weisberg; "The Oswald Affair," by Leo Sauvage; and "The Second Oswald," by Richard Popkin.

Mr. Kaplan accuses each of the authors of being guilty of the very offense they themselves have laid to the Warren Commission — offering highly selective, often distorted bits of evidence chosen to bolster a preconceived theory.

He goes to considerable lengths to defend the "single bullet" theory — the theory adopted by the Warren Commission to reconcile the multiplicity of wounds suffered by President Kennedy and Texas Gov. John Connelly with the generally assumed fact that Oswald had only time enough to fire two shots.

In commending the article to the ASNE, Mr. Bundy said much of the criticism of the Warren Commission "has turned around assertions about the path of one of the bullets that struck President Kennedy.

THE APRIL 6 EMBARGO ON WILLIAM MANCHESTER'S BOOK "THE DEATH OF A PRESIDENT" HAS BEEN BROKEN.

(KENNEDY BOOK)

NEW YORK--PRESIDENT KENNEDY'S ASSASSINATION PRECIPITATED A TWO-HOUR TELEPHONE BLACKOUT IN WASHINGTON THAT COULD HAVE MEANT THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN SURVIVAL AND DEFEAT IF RUSSIA HAD BEEN PLOTTING NUCLEAR WAR, WILLIAM MANCHESTER'S "THE DEATH OF A PRESIDENT" DISCLOSES.

THE BOOK, TO BE PUBLISHED APRIL 6 AFTER MONTHS OF CONTROVERSY, SAYS THAT THE ARMY SIGNAL CORPS STILL HAS NOT BEEN GIVEN THE GO-AHEAD TO LINK THE HOMES OF ALL VITAL GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS TO AN EMERGENCY TELEPHONE SYSTEM, EVEN THOUGH IT HAS THE EQUIPMENT AND EXPERTISE. THE LESSON OF NOV. 23, 1963 HAS YET TO BE LEARNED, MANCHESTER WRITES.

"A STUDY OF THAT AFTERNOON SUGGESTS THAT IN ANY DISASTER ON A WORKDAY COMMERCIAL TELEPHONES WOULD BECOME HIGHLY UNRELIABLE," ACCORDING TO MANCHESTER.

THE 710-PAGE ACCOUNT OF THE ASSASSINATION AND ITS AFTERMATH--PUBLISHED BY HARPER & ROW--WILL GO ON SALE FOR $10 A COPY JUST A MONTH AFTER THE FINAL INSTALLMENT OF A FOUR-PART SERIES IN LOOK MAGAZINE. THE LOOK SERIES SKIMMED THE CREAM OFF THE HIGHLY DETAILED, MINUTE-BY-MINUTE HISTORY BUT SLIGHTED MANCHESTER'S THESIS THAT THE UNITED STATES WAS VULNERABLE TO A GOVERNMENT COUP OR AN ATTACK BY A FOREIGN POWER DURING THE TRAGEDY IN DALLAS.

"BY EVERY READABLE SIGNAL, THE SITUATION WAS VERY RED," MANCHESTER WRITES, NOTING THAT BOTH THE PRESIDENT AND VICE PRESIDENT WERE OUT OF WASHINGTON AND SIX MEMBERS OF THE CABINET WERE AIRBORNE OVER THE PACIFIC ON A SECRET MISSION IINVOLVING THE VIETNAM SITUATION.

MOST INCREDIBLE OF ALL, MANCHESTER SAYS, VICE PRESIDENT JOHNSON DID NOT KNOW THE CABINET'S WHEREABOUTS WHEN HE BECAME PRESIDENT AND HAD NEVER BEEN INFORMED ABOUT PROCEDURE TO FOLLOW IN THE CASE OF NUCLEAR ATTACK, INSTRUCTIONS FOR WHICH WERE CONTAINED IN A FOOTBALL SHAPED CASE ABOARD THE PRESIDENTIAL JET. IF WAR HAD MATERIALIZED "THE COUNTRY'S RETALIATORY ARSENAL COULD BE SPIKED" UNTIL JOHNSON WAS BRIEFED.

"HAD RUSSIA ATTACKED ACROSS THE DEW LINE, THE GREATEST MILITARY ESTABLISHMENT IN THE HISTORY OF THE WORLD MIGHT EASILY HAVE BEEN MUSCLEBOUND DURING THE 15 FATEFUL MINUTES OF WARNING TIME AND PERHAPS EVEN AFTERWARD, WHEN SECOND-STRIKE CAPACITY BECAME A FACTOR," THE BOOK ASSERTS.

THE AUTHOR SAYS THE MOST SINISTER DEVELOPMENT WAS THE GRADUAL BLACKOUT OF CHESAPEAKE AND POTOMAC TELEPHONE CO., SERVICE IN THE WASHINGTON AREA, SUGGESTING MASSIVE SABOTAGE. ACTUALLY IT WAS DUE TO AN UNPRECEDENTED LOAD OF CALLS BETWEEN 2 P.M. EST WHEN KENNEDY WAS PRONOUNCED DEAD AND 4 P.M. WHEN GOVERNMENT WORKERS BEGAN GOING HOME.

PHONES IN THE SENATE AND HOUSE OFFICES, THE VARIOUS DEPARTMENT HEADQUARTERS, THE WHITE HOUSE AND EVEN THE SIGNAL CORPS WERE TEMPORARILY PARALYZED. SEN. EDWARD KENNEDY ROAMED THE STREETS OF HIS NEIGHBORHOOD, TRYING THE PHONES OF STRANGERS, UNTIL HE GOT THROUGH TO ATTORNEY GENERAL ROBERT F. KENNEDY TO LEARN IF THEIR BROTHER WAS DEAD.

"IT BECAME OBVOUS THAT IN A NATIONAL EMERGENCY THIS (TELEPHONE SERVICE) WOULD BE THE FIRST LINK TO SNAP," MANCHESTER SAYS.

AUTHORITIES FROM THE PRESIDENT AND THE JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF DOWN TO LOWEST ECHELON SECRETARIES FEARED A RUSSIAN PLOT AND ONE CABINET MEMBER OVER THE PACIFIC ASSUMED THAT A NUCLEAR BOMB HAD BEEN DROPPED ON AN AMERICAN CITY. THE JOINT CHIEFS ORDERED EVERY U.S. MILITARY BASE IN THE WORLD ON ALERT.

THE BOOK SAYS GEN. MAXWELL TAYLOR ISSUED A SPECIAL WARNING TO TROOPS IN THE WASHINGTON AREA. JOHN MCCONE, DIRECTOR OF THE CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY (CIA), ORDERED HIS EXTRAORDINARY "WATCH COMMITTEE" TO FOCUS ITS ACTIVITIES ON MOSCOW AND PEKING.

THE CIA GOT AN "ABSOLUTELY RELIABLE" REPORT FROM AGENTS IN GENEVA "WHO HAD POSITIVELY VERIFIED AN ELABORATE PLOT TO MURDER GENERAL DE GAULLE ON THE STRETCH OF PAVEMENT OUTSIDE THE CATHEDRAL (ST. MATTHEWS) IN WASHINGTON WHERE DE GAULLE WAS ATTENDING KENNEDY'S FUNERAL," MANCHESTER REVEALS.

DE GAULLE WAS URGED NOT TO WALK BEHIND THE CASKET WITH OTHE HEADS OF STATE BUT TO TAKE A LIMOUSINE OUT OF "COURTESY TO MRS. KENNEDY." THE FRENCH PRESIDENT REPLIED THAT HIS "COURTESY TO MRS. KENNEDY WOULD BE TO SHOW DISREGARD FOR HIS LIFE," AND HE WALKED. FBI CHIEF J. EDGAR HOOVER MADE A FINAL APPEAL TO DE GAULLE, WHOSE REPLY WAS "PFFT."

WHEN THE STORY OF LEE HARVEY OSWALD'S STAY IN RUSSIA BECAME KNOWN TO THE EXPERTS, THE SUSPICION OF A COMMUNIST PLOT DEEPENED AND THE STATE DEPARTMENT'S PRINCIPAL OFFICERS BEGAN A "SPIRITED DISCUSSION OVER THE POSSIBILITY OF WAR." SOVIET EXPERT THOMAS B. THOMPSON ARGUED THAT THE RUSSIANS MIGHT KILL DEFECTORS BUT DID NOT ASSASSINATE CHIEFS OF STATE.

THOMPSON WAS VINDICATED BY EVENTS, AND FIRST DEPUTY PREMIER ANASTAS I. MIKOYAN OF RUSSIA BECAME ONE OF THE CHIEF MOURNERS AT KENNEDY'S FUNERAL, WEEPING OPENLY ON A NUMBER OF OCCASIONS, MANCHESTER WRITES. WHEN MRS. KENNEDY TOLD HIM HE AND PREMIER KHRUSHCHEV "MUST CARRY ON MY HUSBAND'S WORK" FOR PEACE, HE COVERED HIS FACE WITH BOTH HANDS TO HIDE HIS EMOTION.

THE BOOK BACKS THE "LONE KILLER" -- OSWALD -- AND THE "TWO SHOT" THEORIES OF KENNEDY'S ASSASSINATION. IT DRAWS A SYMPATHETIC PORTRAIT OF JOHNSON AND HIS CLOSE RELATIONSHIP WITH MRS. KENNEDY, WHOSE DIGNITY OF CHARACTER AND SENSE OF PURPOSE DOMINATE THE BOOK.

"AT A TIME WHEN WE SHOWED THE WORLD OUR SEAMY, UGLY SIDE, SHE REVEALED AND SYMBOLIZED OUR NOBLER SIDE," JOHNSON IS QUOTED AS SAYING. "WE SHOULD ALWAYS BE GRATEFUL TO HER."

ONE OF THE FIRST THINGS JOHNSON DID ON HIS RETURN TO WASHINGTON WAS TO WRITE "DEAR JOHN" AND "DEAR CAROLINE" LETTERS TO THE KENNEDY CHILDREN, TELLING THEM "ALWAYS BE PROUD OF WHAT HE (THEIR FATHER) DID FOR HIS COUNTRY."

HE MADE THE CONGRESSIONAL LEADERQHIP, COME TO GREET HIM, WAIT WHILE HE WROTE THESE FIRST NOTES ON EXECUTIVE MANSION STATIONERY.

AMONG PREVIOUSLY UNPUBLISHED MATERIAL IN THE BOOK ARE THESE DISCLOSURES:

--SPEAKER MCCORMACK, SECOND TO JOHNSON IN THE LINE OF PRESIDENTIAL SUCCESSION FOR 14 MONTHS, REFUSED SECRET SERVICE PROTECTION AS AN "INTOLERABLE INTRUSION INTO MY PRIVATE LIFE."

--NOT ONE MEMBER OF KENNEDY'S CABINET RESPONDED WITH ENTHUSIASM TO JOHNSON AND AN UNIDENTIFIED MEMBER WROTE THAT THE NEW PRESIDENT LACKED KENNEDY'S "SENSE OF THE TIME AND THE AGE AND THE FORCES."

Manchester Accuses the Kennedys Of Playing Politics With History

William Manchester has rekindled the controversy over his book "The Death of a President" by accusing "the Kennedy court" of demanding politically motivated changes that would have called for "an outright distortion" of the events surrounding the assassination of John F. Kennedy.

A telegram from Sen. Robert F. Kennedy (D-N.Y.) last August pressing Manchester's publisher to neither publish nor serialize the book is attributed by Manchester to an irrational mental reaction stemming from the Senator's "unresolved grief."

Manchester's account of how he resisted "what can only be described as attempted political censorship" appears in the new issue of Look. The magazine will go on sale Tuesday.

The campaign to suppress parts of his book, which was initially commissioned by the Kennedy family in 1964, had a political basis, Manchester contends. As he puts it:

"A great many gifted men were staking their careers on an RFK Administration. Now, the pull of loyalty was irresistible; they flocked to the standard."

"In sum, over 75 per cent of the deletions proposed in (Mrs. John F. Kennedy's) behalf did not involve her," Manchester said. "They were an extension of the attempt to suppress vital facts."

But Manchester feels that his original problems arose from the attitude taken by Mrs. Kennedy, whom he decribes as a "lovely, graceful, ineffably tragic queen regent."

In retrospect, Manchester writes, it is easy to see how the President's widow had come to think of the author as "a member of her court." She had even convinced herself that "she had 'hired' me," he notes.

Since her husband's death, Manchester says in his article, Mrs. Kennedy "had grown increasingly strong-minded" and it was "inconceivable" to her that "I should deny her anything."

Yet against her wishes the 44-year-old author, who regards himself as "a writer, not a courtier," signed and held fast to a contract giving Look the serialization rights to his book in return for a record payment of $665,000. It was that deal — which Manchester says was initially approved by Sen. Kennedy — that angered the President's widow.

In the tumult that followed, Manchester writes, "unbelievable charges were made, unforgivable words spoken and treasured friendships ruptured."

It was quite different, he said, from the time last summer when Mrs. Kennedy viewed the Manchester project as a volume "that would be bound in black and put away on dark library shelves." Now, Manchester estimates that the book, to be published by Harper & Row on April 7, will earn $5 million for the Kennedy Memorial Library in Cambridge.

By mid-August, Manchester says, the sparks ignited by Mrs. Kennedy had incited the Senator into a "tigerlike" rage toward Manchester. This attitude, in turn, made Manchester "mad enough to fight."

The issue was joined at an Aug. 12 meeting between the author and the Senator that was also attended by Evan Thomas, Manchester's editor at Harper's, and John Seigenthaler, a former Kennedy aide who had read the book on the Senator's behalf.

"Like her, he (Kennedy) appeared to be wholly irrational," Manchester recalled in his article. "He accused me of raising my voice. He pretended to leave the room, hid in an alcove, and leapt out pointing an accusing finger at me. Once, he beckoned Evan aside and held a whispered conversation with him, glaring meantime at me."

It was after this encounter, according to Manchester, that Seigenthaler, now editor of the Nashville Tennessean, proposed to make 111 deletions from a manuscript that "had already [been] approved."

Among the requested changes, Manchester said, was "a new version" of President Johnson's Nov. 23 Cabinet meeting that would have eliminated "the friction between Johnson and Bob." Manchester refused to delete it.

Truth Lost

In "the attempt to suppress vital facts," Manchester said, "veracity seemed to have lost its meaning."

Manchester felt he had been faithful to his trust when he decided on his own accord to destroy 200 pages of his original manuscript, before the editing process began, on grounds that the material was either "too personal or needlessly critical of men still in public life."

Nevertheless, at what Manchester terms "the first stroke of midnight," Mrs. Kennedy moved to enjoin both Look and Harper's from publishing the text. The law suits were eventually withdrawn after the magazine and the publisher negotiated a series of changes and deletions with representatives of the Kennedy family.

Manchester said Kennedy aides Theodore Sorensen and Pierre Salinger both capitulated to the Kennedys' demands in books they wrote on the Kennedy years. Of six "quality" books on the Administration, he said, only "My 12 Years with John F. Kennedy" by Mrs. Evelyn Lincoln, the President's secretary, escaped censorship.

Manchester said his principal ally in his own dispute with the Kennedys was historian Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr., who called the book potentially great and suggested that Manchester restore some self-imposed deletions.

As early as mid-1964, Manchester asserts, "I found it almost impossible to establish any satisfactory professional contact" with either Mrs. Kennedy or with the Senator. Manchester could recall "only three doors" that Mrs. Kennedy opened for him and none of them, he said, was vital.

Nevertheless, Manchester still looks upon the President's widow as "a heroine" and adds: "In our hour of disgrace and confusion, [she], who had lost more than any of us, held us all together, remained true to the leader we had lost and . . . rekindled our national pride."

While writing the book, Manchester said, he pruned his budget and rented a cheap apartment in Southeast Washington, ate in Government cafeterias and walked instead of riding taxis. Typically, he said, he would start a day at the National Archives, walk to Capitol Hill, and then to the State Department. Often, he said, he walked across Memorial Bridge ("very tricky for pedestrians") to Arlington Cemetery — not entirely to save money but because I "simply couldn't bear to drive up to the President's grave."

Secrets Kept

In the course of his lonely research task, Manchester said he was entrusted with confidences that were so intimate and sensitive that "I couldn't hint at them with my own wife."

While the persons he interviewed would often break into tears over their recollections, Manchester said he had to keep a stoic and professional attitude. But, alone, it was different: "In the night, in Southeast Washington or in Texas hotels, I too wept."

Manchester said Chief Justice Earl Warren gave him access to the testimony and all other evidence taken by the Warren Commission, then "rather calmly" invited him to "declare as a friend of the family" that the Warren Report findings were acceptable to the Kennedys. Manchester said he demurred on grounds it would be improper.

The author also said that the "prestigious names on Earl Warren's panel did little except add glitter; the long hours were put in by junior staff men." But Manchester nonetheless supports the Commission's conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald alone killed the President.

Exploiting Profits From a Tragedy

By Marquis Childs

United Feature Syndicate

ON HIS recent trip to four South American countries—Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador and Colombia—Chief Justice Earl Warren was startled to find that at the press conferences he held in each country only one subject was raised—the Warren Commission Report on President Kennedy's assassination.

Had the Commission really considered all the evidence? Shouldn't the inquiry be reopened in view of charges of a conspiracy involving persons other than Lee Harvey Oswald? The questions came hot and heavy at each stop.

At one of his most-crowded conferences, with some 50 reporters bearing down on the assassination theme, the Chief Justice got in a question of his own. How many of those present, he asked, had read the Warren Report? Two hands were raised.

"How many of you have examined the 26 volumes of evidence on which the report was based?" No hand was raised.

"I know these volumes are available to you," the Chief Justice said, "because I saw to it myself that the full set was sent to the principal library in every capital of the world."

This is a sad commentary, not so much on world opinions as on those in this country who have exploited the Kennedy tragedy for profit. The exploiters have fed the conspiracy theory which opinion abroad has been only too eager to seize on. Particularly in the Communist countries it has been a rich propaganda mine—unstable, lawless America with right-wing conspirators powerful enough to plot against the life of a president. Throw in a dash of the CIA and you have a mixture brewed here at home that could hardly be more self-destructive.

THE LATEST manifestation comes in the antics of New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison. He has been making the headlines with weird tales of plot and counterplot and constant promises of new sensations that are like lurid rockets against a night sky. And they endure for just about as long.

Opinion in this country can discount the Garrison sensations. After all, district attorneys, who are fairly far down in the law-enforcement hierarchy, have political ambitions. But for opinion overseas Garrison gives a gloss of officialdom to the belief that conspirators must have plotted the crime long in advance.

It may be that all this was inevitable. After Lincoln's assassination tales of plotters in high places persisted for many years. But no evidence was unearthed to incriminate anyone other than the half-deranged haters around the assassin, John Wilkes Booth. This was our own personal and family preoccupation as were the trials and tribulations of that other Johnson, Andrew, who inherited the Presidency upon Lincoln's death in 1865.

The United States was still regarded as a new, fledgling Nation that had managed to survive a terrible Civil War. Today the United States is a world power with every move, every whisper, communicated to the ends of the earth. That is why the attack on the credibility of the Warren Report has such consequences and why it must seem at times a willful essay in self-destruction.

To believe that there were plotters in a conspiracy to murder the President and to believe further than another assassin or assassins fired shots is to believe that the principal law-enforcement agencies in this country—the FBI, the Secret Service—are, to say the least, incompetent. Or, for those who prefer the dark conspiratorial side, any evidence casting doubt on the Warren Commission findings was suppressed.

WHEN PRESIDENT Johnson first sent an emissary to the Chief Justice shortly after the Kennedy assassination to ask him to head a Commission of Inquiry, the answer was a firm no. Warren felt strongly that the Court should not be involved in controversies outside the jurisdiction of the high tribunal. He cited chapter and verse on the harm such involvement had caused in the past. Later that same day Johnson asked Warren to come to the White House. He solemnly invoked the patriotism of the Chief Justice who, as the President noted, had worn the uniform of his country in World War II. With this appeal Warren agreed to be chairman of the Commission of Inquiry.

The Warren Report can be faulted. The Commission might have taken longer. The Commission members, all of them busy at other jobs, should perhaps have devoted more time to the hearings. There are suppositions—holes in the testimony—frankly acknowledged in view of the fact that Oswald was dead. But, until solid evidence contradicting the Warren findings comes to light, the exploiters who would discredit the report serve a dubious cause.

Carr Denies Manchester Allegation

FORT WORTH, Tex., March 5, (AP)—Former Texas Attorney General Waggoner Carr denied today author William Manchester's report that President Johnson and Texas officials tried to exclude Federal authorities from the investigation of the assassination of president John F. Kennedy.

But he said that Chief Justice Earl Warren tried to prevent Texas officials from working with the Federal investigating commission appointed by the President.

Later, Carr said, the Chief Justice cooperated fully with Texas officials and dealt fairly with the state.

Carr spoke at the annual meeting of the Texas Associated Press Managing Editors Association.

Manchester wrote in his book, "The Death of a President," as published serially in Look magazine, that President Johnson and Carr first intended to limit the investigation of the assassination to Texas officials.

Manchester said that this plan was dropped when the then Assistant Attorney General, Nicholas Katzenbach, horrified by the prospect, vehemently protested to the President.

Carr said Manchester was "wholly wrong" about this.

Carr said he flew to Washington for Mr. Kennedy's funeral and while there Johnson suggested that he call a Texas court of inquiry. Mr. Johnson asked that Carr make the announcement in Washington and not disclose that the suggestion had come from the President.

He said the original plan was for a three-pronged investigation, by Federal and State authorities. First the FBI would make a complete investigation, then turn the facts over to the President.

The FBI report would be available to a Texas court of inquiry which in turn would have the right to subpoena witnesses.

"The court of inquiry would not reach any decision," Carr said. "Everything was to be given back to Washington ... From the very beginning it was to be a cooperative effort with the Federal Government ...

Warren Satisfied With Conclusions In Kennedy Report

LIMA, Peru, March 8 (UPI) —Chief Justice Earl Warren said today that he knew of not one single fact that might change the conclusions of the Warren Commission report on the assasination of President Kennedy.

Facing what he called his largest news conference since leaving politics 14 years ago, the Chief Justice insisted that he was personally satisfied with the conclusions of the Warren Report. The report identified Lee Harvey Oswald, acting alone, as Mr. Kennedy's assassin.

Mr. Warren refused comment on the investigation in New Orleans by District Attorney Jim Garrison because of his "absolute lack of information" about it. He said he did not know Mr. Garrison, had never heard from him in connection with the assasination, and was not well acquainted with the most recent developments because of his absence from the United States.

The Chief Justice said, however, that if any new evidence were uncovered it should be examined and "law permitted to follow its course."

Mr. Warren and his wife are on a private tour of Latin America.

Responding to questions from newsmen who filled the auditorium in the United States Embassy, Mr. Warren said he did not believe that revision of the Warren Report or a new investigation was warranted on the basis of the present known facts.

"Nobody is more interested in truth than myself. Nobody should be afraid of the truth," he responded calmly to questions about the assassination.

Assassination of President Kennedy

UPI-103

(KENNEDY ASSASSINATION)

MEXICO CITY--MEXICAN OFFICIALS TODAY DECLINED TO BECOME ENROILED IN THE CONTROVERSY ABOUT AN ALLEGED CUBAN PLOT TO ASSASSINATE PRESIDENT KENNEDY. THEY SAID "WE WILL NOT GO INTO IT AGAIN" UNLESS ASKED BY THE U.S.

AN OFFICIAL SPOKESMAN SAID THE MEXICAN GOVERNMENT AGREED WITH THE WARREN COMMISSION FINDINGS ON THE ASSASSINATION. HE SAID THERE WAS NO EVIDENCE TO SUPPORT A CHARGE THAT THE CUBAN GOVERNMENT WAS INVOLVED. MEXICO MAINTAINS DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS WITH CUBA.

"WE MADE A THOROUGH INVESTIGATION AFTER THE ASSASSINATION, OUR FINDINGS WERE INCORPORATED IN THE WARREN COMMISSION REPORT, AND WE WILL NOT GO INTO IT AGAIN NOW UNLESS WE ARE ASKED BY RESPONSIBLE U.S. AGENCIES," THE SPOKESMAN SAID.

OSWALD VISITED THE CUBAN EMBASSY IN MEXICO CITY IN THE LATE SUMMER OF 1963 AND APPLIED FOR A VISA TO CUBA, BUT WAS TURNED DOWN. HE ALSO VISITED THE SOVIET EMBASSY IN MEXICO CITY.

SINCE OSWALD WAS IN MEXICO CITY ONLY A FEW MONTHS BEFORE THE ASSASSINATION, NEW ORLEANS DIST. ATTY. JIM GARRISON'S RECENT CONSPIRACY CHARGES HAVE DRAWN PARTICULAR ATTENTION IN THE MEXICAN PRESS.

HOWEVER, IT WAS EMPHASIZED IN OFFICIAL CIRCLES THAT THE MEXICAN GOVERNMENT ACCEPTS THE WARREN COMMISSION REPORT, WHICH DISCOUNTED ANY THEORY THAT THE CUBAN GOVERNMENT WAS INVOLVED IN THE ASSASSINATION.

THE WARREN COMMISSION SAYS IN ONE REFERENCE TO OSWALD'S MEXICAN VISIT THAT "THE INVESTIGATION...HAS PRODUCED NO EVIDENCE THAT OSWALD'S TRIP TO MEXICO WAS IN ANY WAY CONNECTED WITH THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY, NOR HAS IT UNCOVERED EVIDENCE THAT THE CUBAN GOVERNMENT HAD ANY INVOLVEMENT IN THE CASE."

ASSASSINATION 2/19 DA3

WIRE

BY JAMES M. HARVEY

UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)--DIST. ATTY. JIM GARRISON DROPPED OUT OF SIGHT SUNDAY AFTER PREDICTING ARRESTS...AND CONVICTIONS...IN DALLAS, LEE HARVEY OSWALD'S HOME TOWN, IN A NEW PROBE OF THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY.

GARRISON'S EXECUTIVE ASSISTANT, JIM ALCOCK, SAID THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY WAS "PHYSICALLY BEAT" AND UNABLE TO MEET NEWSMEN. HE SAID GARRISON WOULD BE IN HIS OFFICE MONDAY, PROBABLY ABOUT 10 A.M.

GARRISON CONFIRMED REPORTS SATURDAY HIS OFFICE WAS CONDUCTING THE PROBE. HE SAID HE FELT THE WARREN COMMISSION WAS WRONG IN CONCLUDING OSWALD ACTED ALONE.

GARRISON SAID HIS INVESTIGATION WAS GOING OVER GROUND OVERLOOKED BY THE [illegible] COMMISSION.

[illegible] NAMES OF THE PEOPLE IN THE INITIAL PLANNING," HE SAID. "WE HAVE ENOUGH ON THEM SO WE WILL PROVE IT. ARRESTS WILL BE MADE, CHARGES WILL BE FILED AND CONVICTIONS WILL BE OBTAINED," GARRISON SAID.

GARRISON REFUSED TO DISCUSS THE NATURE OF THE ALLEGED PLOT OR TO SAY WHETHER THERE WAS ANY CONNECTION BETWEEN THE POSSIBLE CONSPIRACY AND JACK RUBY, SLAYER OF OSWALD.

THE WARREN COMMISSION CONCLUDED IN ITS OFFICIAL REPORT OSWALD, WHO WAS BORN IN NEW ORLEANS AND LIVED MUCH OF HIS LIFE HERE, DID THE FATAL SHOTS ASSASSINATED THE PRESIDENT NOV. 22, 1963, AND THAT HE ACTED ALONE.

(KENNEDY ASSASSINATION)

WASHINGTON--SEN. THOMAS J. DODD, D-CONN., TODAY REVEALED THAT THE SENATE INTERNAL SECURITY SUBCOMMITTEE HELD A SECRET SUNDAY SESSION ON THE KENNEDY ASSASSINATION TWO DAYS AFTER THE PRESIDENT WAS KILLED.

THE WITNESS AT THE HEARING WAS EDWARD SCANNEL BUTLER, WHO VOLUNTEERED INFORMATION ABOUT LEE HARVEY OSWALD IRONICALLY, BUTLER WAS TESTIFYING ABOUT THE SAME TIME OSWALD WAS SHOT TO DEATH IN A DALLAS JAIL BY JACK RUBY.

DODD, THE SUBCOMMITTEE'S VICE-CHAIRMAN, SAID BUTLER WAS THE ONLY WITNESS HEARD. THE EMBRYO INVESTIGATION ENDED ABRUPTLY WHEN PRESIDENT JOHNSON APPOINTED THE WARREN COMMISSION.

THE CONNECTICUT DEMOCRAT SAID HE COULD NOT RECALL WHETHER THE TESTIMONY GIVEN BY BUTLER WAS EVER TRANSMITTED TO THE WARREN COMMISSION. STAFF DIRECTOR JAY SOURWINE SAID "I AM NOT AT LIBERTY TO DISCUSS EVEN THE EXISTENCE OF A SECRET DOCUMENT."

THE WARREN COMMISSION HEARINGS SHOW THAT BUTLER WAS NOT CALLED AS A WITNESS.

IN A SENATE SPEECH AND LATER INTERVIEW DODD SAID HE WOULD EFFORT TO MAKE PUBLIC BUTLER'S TESTIMONY TAKEN NOV. 24, 1963. KENNEDY WAS ASSASSINATED NOV. 22.

ALTHOUGH BUTLER DID NOT TESTIFY BEFORE THE COMMISSION, HIS NAME WAS MENTIONED BY ANOTHER WITNESS, WILLIAM K. STUCKEY, WHO HAD A WEEKLY FIVE-MINUTE PROGRAM ON NEW ORLEANS RADIO STATION WDSU.

STUCKEY ARRANGED FOR A DEBATE BETWEEN BUTLER, IDENTIFIED AS A DIRECTOR OF THE INFORMATION COUNCIL OF THE AMERICAS IN NEW ORLEANS, AND OSWALD. THE DEBATE TOOK PLACE AUG. 21, 1963.

DODD SAID THE RECORD OF THE DEBATE, WHICH WAS WIDELY PUBLICIZED AFTER THE ASSASSINATION, IS CAPTIONED "OSWALD-SELF-PORTRAIT IN RED."

"MR. BUTLER, WHO WAS KNOWN TO ME PRIOR TO THE ASSASSINATION, CALLED MY OFFICE IMMEDIATELY AFTER IT TO INFORM ME OF HIS DEBATE WITH OSWALD.

AT MY REQUEST, HE CAME TO WASHINGTON TO TESTIFY BEFORE THE INTERNAL SECURITY SUBCOMMITTEE, AND HE DID SO ON SUNDAY, NOV. 24, 1963."

IN HIS SENATE SPEECH, DODD SAID "IN ANY ESTIMATE OF OSWALD'S MOTIVATIONS, IT IS IMPORTANT TO DETERMINE THE STRENGTH OF HIS PRO-CASTRO SYMPATHIES AND THE EXTENT OF HIS ASSOCIATION WITH CASTRO CUBA AND PRO-CASTRO CUBANS IN THIS COUNTRY.

"IT IS ALSO IMPORTANT TO LEARN WHETHER HE WAS SIMPLY A MARXIST SYMPATHIZER OR A HARDENED COMMUNIST ACTING IN CONCERT WITH OTHERS."

DODD ALSO SAID NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT ATTORNEY JIM GARRISON, WHO PREDICTED ARRESTS AND CONVICTIONNS IN CONNECTION WITH THE ASSASSINATION, WAS A MAN OF HIGH REPUTATION.

"...I AM IMPRESSED BY THE FACT THAT HE FEELS CONFIDENT ENOUGH TO SPEAK IN SUCH POSITIVE TERMS ABOUT HIS FINDINGS.

"THE WARREN REPORT HAS FREQUENTLY BEEN CITED AS FINDING THAT OSWALD ACTED ALONE AND THAT THERE WAS NO CONSPIRACY. WHAT THE COMMISSION ACTUALLY SAID WAS THAT IT HAD BEEN UNABLE TO FIND EVIDENCE OF A CONSPIRACY."

ADD 2 KENNEDY ASSASSINATION, WASHINGTON

SEN. RUSSELL B. LONG, D-LA., SAID THAT A REWARD EXCEEDING FIVE FIGURES SHOULD BE OFFERED FOR INFORMATION DEALING WITH THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY.

LONG WOULDN'T NAME AN EXACT FIGURE BUT HE SAID IT SHOULD BE LARGER THAN AMOUNTS WHICH CAN BE OFFERED BY THE FBI.

"THIS WAS A VERY BIG CRIME," THE ASSISTANT DEMOCRATIC LEADER TOLD NEWSMEN. "I THINK A REWARD LARGER THAN FIVE FIGURES THAT THE FBI CAN OFFER WOULD BRING IN SOME IMPORTANT INFORMATION."

COMMENTING ON THE NEW ORLEANS INVESTIGATION OF AN ALLEGED PLOT TO KILL KENNEDY, LONG SAID HE HAD NO EXACT DETAILS ON WHAT DIST. ATTY. JIM GARRISON HAD UNCOVERED.

"I THINK I WILL JUST HAVE TO WAIT AND SEE WHAT GARRISON PRODUCES," LONG SAID. "AND PEOPLE WHO HAVE DOUBTED HIS ABILITY BEFORE HAVE ONLY COME TO GRIEF BECAUSE OF IT."

LONG HIMSELF IS AN OUTSPOKEN CRITIC OF SOME OF THE ASSASSINATION FINDINGS OF THE PRESIDENTIAL COMMISSION HEADED BY CHIEF JUSTICE EARL WARREN.

IF GARRISON'S INVESTIGATION WARRANTED A REOPENING OF THE CASE, LONG SAID HE WOULD OPPOSE RECONSTITUTION OF THE WARREN COMMISSION. "THEY'VE DONE THEIR JOB. I THINK IT WOULD BE BETTER FOR SOMEONE ELSE, NOT NECESSARILY CONGRESS, BUT SOMEONE WHO DIDN'T HAVE PRIDE OF AUTHORSHIP, TO REOPEN THE INVESTIGATION."

HE SAID DEVELOPMENTS IN NEW ORLEANS INVOLVING PERSONS CONNECTED WITH THE GARRISON PROBE "WERE CAUSE FOR CONCERN."

Arrests in Kennedy Case Delayed for Months, New Orleans Prosecutor Says

By GENE ROBERTS
Special to The New York Times

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 20—District Attorney James Garrison, who once said he was only weeks away from making arrests in the Kennedy assassination case, revised his estimate upward today to "many months."

He charged that the delay had been caused by premature publicity from local newspapers, but maintained that "there is no question there will be arrests, charges and convictions."

Arrests, Mr. Garrison said, "probably were just a few weeks away until the disclosures by the local newspapers."

"Now they are most certainly months away," he added.

As he has before, Mr. Garrison refused in a 61-minute news conference with more than 40 out-of-town newsmen to give details of what he has said was a "plot" that culminated in the shooting of President Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963.

However, a source within Mr. Garrison's office named a "suspect," but asked that his name be withheld. This source also said one theory was that President Kennedy's assassination grew out of a plot by anti-Communist forces to kill Premier Fidel Castro of Cuba. According to this theory, the conspirators planned to send Lee Harvey Oswald to Cuba to kill Premier Castro, and later decided to go after President Kennedy when Oswald was denied entry into Cuba.

Theory Is Discounted

Neither the "suspect" named by one of Mr. Garrison's employes, or the anti-Castro theory, is new, according to lawyers who served on the staff of the Warren Commission, which investigated the assassination throughout most of 1964. The commission concluded that Oswald killed President Kennedy alone and unaided.

One member of the commission's staff said that the Federal Bureau of Investigation had accumulated a "great stack" of data on the alleged New Orleans "suspect," and that the information indicated that the man had not seen Oswald in the months just before the assassination and had not been a part of any conspiracy.

Mr. Garrison discounted the investigations of the Warren Commission and the Federal Bureau of Investigation today and said that he thought that neither agency had proper "evaluation machinery" for weighing the information they had collected.

He said he was confident of obtaining convictions for conspiracy to kill the President and for "being accessories after the fact—that is, having substantial knowledge and withholding information."

He said that none of the suspects were officials of the United States Government or agents of a foreign power. He declined to elaborate.

Mr. Garrison, who has been district attorney of Jefferson Parish (County) for five years, seemed surprised by the attendance of more than two score out-of-town newsmen and cameramen. They came here after he told The Associated Press on Saturday night that he planned to make arrests in the Kennedy case.

Expresses His Regrets

When he faced the newsmen today in his first formal news conference on the assassination, he was visibly nervous, perspired freely and extended his regrets to several foreign newsmen who had traveled to New Orleans in anticipation of an immediate arrest.

Again and again, he said "no comment" to questions, and turned the news conference into an attack on the two New Orleans daily newspapers, The Times Picayune and The States-Item.

He said that he had tried to keep the investigation quiet and had been succeeding until the States-Item ran an article saying that he and his staff had spent $8,000 since October in travel expenses to carry out the investigation.

Mr. Garrison contended that articles in the two newspapers had jeopardized the life of one "witness," in jail on a burglary conviction, and would make it more difficult for him to find other witnesses.

He said he was also disturbed by an editorial in the States-Item.

"Has the District Attorney uncovered some valuable additional evidence," the editorial asked, "or is he merely saving some interesting new information that will gain for him exposure in a national magazine? Mr. Garison, it seems, should have some explantion."

Investigation Defended

Until the editorials appeared on Saturday, Mr. Garirson had been cautious about speaking publicly on his investigation into the Kennedy assassination. Then, he quickly defended his investigation and said he expected it to result in arrests.

Mr. Garrison's anger over the local newspapers seemed unabated today. He invited out-of-town newsmen to the news conference because, he said, he felt he "owed" them one conference for coming such long distances.

But he barred reporters from the two local dailies from the conference, and shifted the conference from his office to the Fontainebleu Motel so, one of his staff members said, the local reporters could not assert they had been barred from public property.

And he said that after today he would not speak about the investigation to out-of-town reporters, either, until there was a break in the case.

If a break comes, he said, he will talk first to publications and television networks who have given us information."

Mr. Garrison declined to name them, and refused comment when asked if one publication was Life magazine.

It was known, however, that Mr. Garrison met frequently during the weekend with Mike Wallace and other C.B.S. television employes. Representatives of the network began training to the district attorney about two weeks ago while preparing a special program on the Warren Report.

Mr. Garrison, who is 46 years old, has frequently made headlines since becoming district attorney of Jefferson Parish, which embraces New Orleans. He started a clean-up campaign of what he said was prostitution and blackmail along Bourbon Street here. This touched off bitter protests from the Bourbon Street businessmen.

But he was praised by the States-Item, which said, "maybe we got us a real honest, crusading district attorney."

Mr. Garrison also tangled with eight criminal court judges, who, he charged, were acting "like the sacred cows of India" in refusing to give him funds to carry out his investigation of Bourbon Street.

The judges sued him for defamation of character and he was ultimately fined $1,000. Mr. Garrison appealed to the United States Supreme Court and won.

(KENNEDY ASSASSINATION)

NEW ORLEANS--DIST. ATTY. JIM GARRISON SAID TODAY HE HAS BEGAN TO HAVE DOUBTS ABOUT THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT AFTER DISCUSSING WITH SEN. RUSSELL LONG, D-LA., AN "INCONSI IN THE SEQUENCE OF THE FATAL SHOTS.

THE PROSECUTOR APPEARED CONVINCED AT A NEWS CONFERENCE PRESIDENTIAL ASSASSIN LEE HARVEY OSWALD DID NOT ACT ALONE.

"ALL WE WANT TO DO IS FIND THE MEN INVOLVED IN THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY AND WE ARE GOING TO," HE SAID.

HE REFUSED ADMITTANCE TODAY TO THE NEW ORLEANS STATES-I AND TIMES PICAYUNE, THE NEWSPAPERS WHICH REVEALED LAST FRIDA HE WAS MAKING HIS OWN INVESTIGATION OF THE ASSASSINATION. CALLED THEIR DISCLOSURES "A MONUMENTAL, PROBABLY HISTORIC ACT OF IRRESPONSIBILITY."

GARRISON SAID HE DISCUSSED THE ASSASSINATION WITH LONG LAST NOVEMBER.

"HE POINTED OUT HIS CURIOSITY ABOUT THE INCONGRUITY OF THE SEQUENCE IN THE FIRING OF THE RIFLE SHOTS WHICH KILLED KENNEDY IN DALLAS NOV. 22, 1963, GARRISON SAID.

"HE WONDERED ABOUT THE PROBABILITY OF GETTING ALL THESE SHOTS OUT OF AN INEXPENSIVE GUN IN A FEW SECONDS."

THE WARREN REPORT CONCLUDED THAT THREE SHOTS WERE FIRED FROM TEXAS SCHOOLBOOK DEPOSITORY BUILDING "IN A TIME PERIOD RANGING FROM APPROXIMATELY 4.1 TO IN EXCESS OF 7 SECONDS."

AFTER THE DISCUSSION WITH LONG, GARRISON SAID, HE BEGAN LOOKING INTO THE MATTER. "ALL OF A SUDDEN THE LEADS WERE COMING IN FASTER THAN WE COULD HANDLE THEM," HE SAID.

HIS PROBE IS GOING OVER GROUND NOT COVERED BY THE WARREN COMMISSION, GARRISON SAID.

"I THINK THE INVESTIGATION WAS UNSUCCESSFUL AND INCOMPLETE," HE SAID.

"IN SETTING UP THE WARREN COMMISSION AND INDEXED THERE WAS NO PROVISION MADE FOR EVALUATION MACHINE[illegible] AS TOO MUCH INFORMATION ABOUT SOME AREAS AND NOT ENOUGH ABOUT OTHERS."

AN EXPRESS HANDLER IN A BUS STATION SAID TODAY HE WAS ONE OF GARRISON'S POTENTIAL WITNESSES AND KNEW THE NAMES OF FIVE PERSONS INVOLVED WITH OSWALD IN "A PLANNING PHASE" OF THE ASSASSINATION.

THE MAN, DAVID LEWIS, A FORMER PRIVATE DETECTIVE, SAID HE COULD NOT IDENTIFY THE FIVE WITHOUT GARRISON'S PERMISSION.

WASHINGTON (AP) --SEN. THOMAS J. DODD, D-CONN., URGED MONDAY THAT THE WARREN COMMISSION REOPEN ITS INQUIRY TO CONSIDER EVIDENCE [illegible] PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY'S ASSASSINATION WAS PART OF A CONSPIRACY.

THE SENATOR CALLED ATTENTION TO INFORMATION DEVELOPED BY NEW ORLEANS DIST. ATTY. JAMES GARRISON WHICH ALLEGEDLY POINTS TO THE CONCLUSION THAT OTHERS BESIDES LEE HARVEY OSWALD WERE INVOLVED.

DODD TOLD THE SENATE THAT THE MEMBERS OF THE WARREN COMMISSION "CERTAINLY WOULD BE PREPARED TO REVIEW ANY NEW EVIDENCE BEARING ON THE ASSASSINATION."

HE TOLD NEWSMEN THAT HE THOUGHT THE COMMISSION MIGHT WELL UNDERTAKE A "PRELIMINARY INVESTIGATION" TO DETERMINE JUST WHAT INFORMATION IS AVAILABLE IN NEW ORLEANS.

DODD STRESSED HE DID NOT KNOW WHAT THE INFORMATION CONSISTED OF.

DODD ALSO DISCLOSED THE EXISTENCE OF SOME SECRET TESTIMONY ON KENNEDY'S ASSASSINATION WHICH HE SAID HE WOULD TRY TO MAKE PUBLIC.

THIS TESTIMONY WAS GIVEN ON NOV. 24, 1963--TWO DAYS AFTER KENNEDY WAS SLAIN--TO THE SENATE INTERNAL SECURITY SUBCOMMITTEE BY EDWARD SCANNEL BUTLER.

DODD SAID THAT BUTLER VOLUNTEERED THE INFORMATION ABOUT OSWALD, THE PRESUMED ASSASSIN.

BUTLER WAS TESTIFYING ABOUT THE TIME THAT OSWALD WAS SHOT TO DEATH IN DALLAS BY JACK RUBY.

DODD, VICE CHAIRMAN OF THE SUBCOMMITTEE, SAID THAT BUTLER WAS THE ONLY WITNESS HEARD. THE INVESTIGATION WAS ABRUPTLY ENDED WHEN PRESIDENT JOHNSON APPOINTED THE WARREN COMMISSION.

THE WARREN COMMISSION DID NOT CALL BUTLER AS A WITNESS AND DODD SAID HE COULD NOT RECALL IF HIS TESTIMONY WAS EVER TRANSMITTED TO THE COMMISSION.

JFK Book Irks Aide Of Warren

By ARA PIASTRO
World Journal Tribune Staff

It's "open season" on the Warren Commission report on President Kennedy's death and on the men who worked on the document, according to a high official who is seemingly irked by a policy of silence laid down by Chief Justice Earl Warren.

The official today asked not to be identified because the men who worked on the Warren Commission report have voluntarily followed the chief justice's policy in not publicly commenting on any criticisms directed toward themselves or the findings in the massive document.

But this official feels strongly that many of the statements contained in excerpted articles from William Manchester's book, "The Death of a President," are not based on facts but on pure speculation.

"There are a lot of odd things said in those articles," he said, adding, "I don't know—maybe that's the modern way of writing history."

In addition to finding fault with some material he found in Manchester's articles, the official also spoke up about public statements made by the author and others in connection with the events surrounding the investigations of Pres. Kennedy's death.

"People can say just about what they please knowing they will not be contradicted," said the official.

CITES STATEMENT

To point up his remarks, the source cited a statement made by Manchester on last Sunday's hour-long "Meet the Press" NBC telecast.

Asked whether he believed that in view of possible inadequacies in the findings of the Warren Report the inquiry should be reopened, Manchester replied, "no."

Manchester went on to say: "I was a privileged observer at the Warren Commission hearings at the invitation of the chief justice. I read the testimony, depositions, saw the exhibits as they came in. He (Earl Warren) asked me to read the report in behalf of the family and state it was acceptable to the Kennedy's. I declined because my own inquiry was incomplete and unlike Mr. Mark Lane I was unwilling to rush to judgement in 1964."

The official said that in his opinion it was "highly unlikely that Chief Justice Warren would have asked Manchester to read the report (by inference before it was released) and comment on it."

"I worked intimately for one year with the chief justice—such a thing would be completely out-of-character for him. He just wouldn't do it.

EMPHASIZES DISBELIEF

"Also, I am sure that if by a remote possibility he (Warren) had made such a request, I would have known about it. He would have consulted me."

The official again emphasized his disbelief of Manchester's claim by saying "the chief justice does not operate that way."

In Washington, a spokesman for Warren, when asked for a statement on Manchester's remark, said:

"The chief justice has given instructions that he refuses ever to comment in any way about the report or answer any questions relating to it. His instructions to any questions concerning the matter is at all times, 'no comment.'"

Salinger Drops Manchester Blast

By MAXINE CHESHIRE

World Journal Tribune Special

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9—There is disappointing news for former New Frontiersmen who don't like author William Manchester. Many one-time White House staff members who fared badly in his controversial "The Death of a President" have been eagerly awaiting publication of a magazine article that was calculated to displease him.

Pierre Salinger, presidential press secretary for both JFK and LBJ, wrote the piece. His agent in New York had already sent it out to editors for bids. Now it has been withdrawn from the market.

Salinger has decided not to prolong the clamor all the Kennedys would like to see quieted as soon as possible.

Salinger has in his possession some very revealing correspondence with Manchester on the subject of censorship. These letters came out of Salinger's private White House files.

Salinger's negotiations with Manchester date back to 1961, when the author was seeking authorization and assistance in preparation of his earlier Kennedy book, "Portrait of a President."

UNSOLICITED PLEDGE

One memo that might make Manchester uncomfortable if it saw print was an unsolicited pledge from him five years ago, outlining an elaborate system of clearance, which the White House could impose in exchange for cooperation.

As further evidence of Manchester's willingness to submit to self-censorship, Salinger also had intended to reprint his own copy of a letter the author wrote to Sen. Robert F. Kennedy in 1964.

Referring to the earlier memorandum, Manchester told RFK:

"... I believe we are in absolute accord there. I agree that it is imperative that Mrs. Kennedy and you should review the manuscript. If you had not suggested this, I would have."

Warren Commission

ASSASSINATION 1/29 NX
NIGHT LD

-- BY JOSEPH W. GRIGG
UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

LONDON (UPI)--MILLIONS OF BRITONS RELIVED ON TELEVISION SUNDAY NIGHT THE TRAGEDY AND DOUBT SURROUNDING THE ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY.

THE BRITISH BROADCASTING CORPORATION (BBC) TURNED OVER THE SECOND OF ITS TWO TELEVISION NETWORKS TO AN UNPRECEDENTED 4 1/2-HOUR PROGRAM ENTITLED "THE DEATH OF KENNEDY."

IT DID NOT SEEK TO PROVIDE THE ANSWERS, BUT IT DID SPOTLIGHT THE DOUBTS RAISED BY THE WARREN COMMISSION'S REPORT WITH THE AID OF LIVE INTERVIEWS WITH KEY FIGURES, A 300-SQUARE-FOOT MODEL OF THE ASSASSINATION SCENE IN DALLAS AND THE PREMIERE OF THE FILM VERSION OF MARK LANE'S CONTROVERSIAL BOOK "RUSH TO JUDGMENT."

THE FILM HAS NOT BEEN SHOWN IN THE UNITED STATES.

LANE APPEARED LIVE ON THE PROGRAM WITH THREE OTHER AMERICANS. THEY WERE PHILADELPHIA DISTRICT ATTORNEY ARLEN SPECTER AND ATTORNEY DAVID BELIN OF DES MOINES -- BOTH FORMER COUNSEL TO THE WARREN COMMISSION--AND ALEXANDER BICKEL, PROFESSOR OF LAW AND LEGAL HISTORY AT YALE.

THEY WERE INTERVIEWED BY KENNETH HARRIS, A BBC NEWSMAN WHO RETURNED RECENTLY FROM A PROLONGED TRIP TO THE UNITED STATES DURING WHICH HE TALKED WITH ASSASSINATION WITNESSES AND LEADING MEMBERS OF THE WARREN COMMISSION.

SPECTER ENDORSED THE WARREN COMMISSION'S CONCLUSION THAT A SINGLE BULLET KILLED THE PRESIDENT AND WOUNDED GOV. JOHN B. CONNALLY.

BELIN WAS RESPONSIBLE FOR THE INQUIRY WHICH LINKED LEE HARVEY OSWALD WITH THE MAN SEEN BY WITNESSES AT A SIXTH FLOOR WINDOW OF THE TEXAS SCHOOLBOOK DEPOSITORY OVERLOOKING DEALEY PLAZA IN DALLAS.

BICKEL AND LORD DEVLIN, A FORMER BRITISH APPEALS JUDGE, ASSESSED THE EVIDENCE.

THE PROGRAM ALSO INCLUDED AN INTERVIEW FILMED BY A BBC PRODUCTION TEAM IN DALLAS WITH HUGH AYNESWORTH, A WELL-KNOWN LOCAL NEWSMAN.

AYNESWORTH SAID HE SAW THE NOV. 22, 1963 ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT KENNEDY, THE ARREST OF OSWALD AND HIS MURDER BY JACK RUBY.

DURING THE PROGRAM, A CRACK BRITISH ROYAL MARINE SHARPSHOOTER IN THE BBC STUDIO TWICE FIRED THREE BLANK SHOTS IN QUICK SUCCESSION FROM A 6.5 MILLIMETER ITALIAN RIFLE OF THE TYPE BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN USED AS THE MURDER WEAPON.

THE RIFLEMAN AT HIS FIRST ATTEMPT FIRED THREE SHOTS IN 2.6 SECONDS OR LESS THAN ONE SECOND EACH TIME. ON A SECOND TRY HE FIRED THREE SHOTS IN 3.5 SECONDS.

EXPERTS HAD FOUND THAT OSWALD'S RIFLE COULD NOT FIRE TWO SHOTS IN LESS THAN 2.3 SECONDS.

By ROBERT DEITZ
Courier-Journal Staff Writer

The Warren Commission Report on the assassination of President Kennedy was "valid" and "correct," but the investigation was not as thorough as it could have been, according to U.S. Sen. John Sherman Cooper.

The Kentucky Republican, a member of the Commission during its 10-month study of the assassination, generally defended the investigation and report in an interview that by coincidence was conducted less than 24 hours before the death of Jack Ruby in Dallas.

It was Cooper's first full public discussion of the matter, although other members of the Warren Commission have replied to critics whose numbers have been increasing.

Cooper said the report indicates correctly that he first tended to believe President Kennedy and Texas Gov. John Connally were struck by separate bullets. But the senator said he is "becoming more and more convinced" that they were hit by the same bullet during a motorcade in downtown Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

This was a crucial matter in the investigation. For if Kennedy and Connally were struck by separate bullets the possibility of two assassins was increased.

Despite criticism of the Commission and its report, Cooper said he does not think it would be "helpful" to reopen the investigation. Two national magazines, newspapers and others have urged recently that this be done.

Cooper emphasized that he thinks a new investigation would only corroborate the Commission's finding that Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in murdering Kennedy and Dallas policeman J. D. Tippit and in wounding Connally.

Also, the Kentuckian had strong criticism for some of those who have attacked the Warren Commission.

He said some of the critics were trying to "make a case . . . to support certain contentions." He added that one book, "Inquest" by Edward Jay Epstein, contains passages that are "inaccurate reporting" and "absolutely untrue."

Cooper acknowledged, however, that the Commission's investigation perhaps was not as exhaustive as possible.

On this point he noted that the Commission did not ask for one specific piece of evidence he described as "significant," and all the eyewitnesses to the assassination did not call to testify.

The evidence he referred to was a set of X-rays and color photographs of the president's body taken during an autopsy at Bethesda Naval Hospital near Washington, D.C., a few hours after the assassination.

The photos and X-rays were never requested by the Commission, although many staff members urged Chief Justice Earl Warren, Commission chairman, to do this.

The negatives were possessed initially by the Secret Service. Efforts by news media and authors to find out who has the negatives now have been unsuccessful.

"That could be a valid criticism—that they (the photos and X-rays) weren't called," the senator said. "It would have been much better to see them, so this doubt would not have been raised."

But Cooper said he is convinced that the pictures would reveal a bullet track from the rear to the front of Kennedy's neck, therby corroborating what he and the Commission's report call "persuasive evidence" that Kennedy and Connally were struck by the same bullet.

(Kennedy had a bullet hole in the front of his neck when brought to Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas after the shooting.

(The wound, which doctors at first said was an entry wound, was obliterated when a tracheotomy was performed to help the dying president breathe. The rear portion of the wound, which later was said to be the point of entry of the bullet, wasn't discovered until the autopsy.

One-Bullet Conclusion

The Commission's conclusion that Oswald was a lone assassin, acting without aid of conspirators, is strengthened by the contention that Kennedy and Connally were struck by the same bullet.

The Commission said that bullet, probably the first of only three fired, struck Kennedy in the back of the neck, came out through the front of his neck and then passed through Connally's back and chest and right wrist, finally lodging in Connally's left thigh.

There also is a controversy on this point.

The Commission said the bullet struck the back of Kennedy's neck. Critics say drawings made by doctors and the president's bloodstained jacket and shirt indicate that the wound was much lower, below the right shoulder. The Commission suggested that the President's jacket and shirt had "hiked up" on his back because of his seated position.

Connally Says 2nd Shot Hit Him

One Commission lawyer, Norman Redlich of New York City, said there had to be more than one gunman, hence a conspiracy, if Kennedy and Connally were struck by separate bullets.

He based his conclusion on the commission's finding that Kennedy's and Connally's respective reactions to being wounded were 1.8 seconds apart, while it took a minimum of 2.3 seconds to operate the bolt on the rifle the commission said was used in the assassination.

Connally has insisted that he was wounded by the second shot and not the first one, which wounded Kennedy, as the Commission said.

Three of the seven commissioners have tended to agree with Connally — Cooper, Rep. Hale Boggs, D-La., and Sen. Richard Russell, D-Ga.

During the interview, however, Cooper said he is changing his mind.

The Kentuckian said he was swayed to believe Connally at first "because Gov. Connally was very strong in his testimony" and "because of the governor's later statements that he did not think the bullet that had pierced President Kennedy's neck had entered his (Connally's) back."

SEN. JOHN COOPER
Against new investigation

"But even then, we—Rep. Boggs, Sen. Russell and I—did agree that there was persuasive evidence that they had been struck by the same bullet," Cooper said.

"And the more I think about it the more convinced I am that the same bullet hit them."

Cooper said a principal reason he has changed his mind is that a film of the motorcade taken during the assassination showed that Connally's right hand was raised and to the right of his body in the frame in which Connally thinks he was struck by a bullet.

This position would have made it impossible for the bullet to strike Connally's right wrist and left thigh, Cooper said. He indicated that he thinks Connally was mistaken about when he was wounded.

Further, Cooper said the Commission found no evidence of a conspiracy, and a conspiracy is regarded by many as an inescapable conclusion if Kennedy and Connally were struck by separate bullets.

Called Impossible by Experts

Thus, Cooper reasoned, if there was no conspiracy the two men almost certainly had to be hit by the same bullet.

But even if they were not, Cooper said he "will not say categorically," as did Commission lawyer Redlich, that there must have been a second assassin.

"Of course," the senator noted, "the only alternative (to a second assassin if Kennedy and Connally were hit by separate bullets) is that he (Oswald) could pull off a second shot in that length of time. But maybe he could pull it off."

Cooper added that expert riflemen testified, that firing two shots with a bolt-action rifle that quickly is impossible.

Concerning the eyewitnesses who were not interviewed, Cooper said their testimony would not be as important as the X-rays and color photographs of the president's body.

One critic of the Commission, New York attorney Mark Lane, who claims he was retained by Mrs. Marguerite Oswald to defend her dead son at Commission hearings, said in his book, "Rush to Judgment," that nearly 200 eyewitnesses were never interviewed by the Commission.

"We had hundreds and hundreds of leads," Cooper said. "I can't say we ran down every one of them, but the number of reports—we had 25,000 FBI interviews and 1,500 Secret Service interviews—indicates that we ran down every one we thought had substance.

Conclusions Based on All the Evidence

"Again, I want to emphasize that we made our evaluation on the basis of all the evidence.

"And I will say one thing about Mr. Lane. He testified at length before the Commission. He could not give us any one thing that could bear out the contentions he made (that Oswald was not the assassin)."

Cooper said he had read neither Lane's book nor Epstein's "Inquest," but he did answer some of the charges made in the books.

Epstein hinted that the Commission had a "preconceived notion" that Oswald was the lone assassin who fired only three shots from the Texas Book Depository, and the investigation was conducted only to prove this notion.

Cooper Denies Quote

Further, Epstein suggested that the Warren Commission's major interest was in protecting the people's faith in the U.S. government, rather than in finding the truth.

Epstein quoted Cooper as saying that "one of the Commission's most important purposes was 'to lift the cloud of doubts that had been cast over American institutions.'"

"That isn't true," Cooper said. "I never said anything like that. That is absolutely untrue.

"I don't recall every saying anything like that. We had no preconceived notions, no purpose except to secure all of the facts and on the basis of those facts reach our conclusions.

"We were not hampered by anyone. We never had any communication from the White House or from anyone with the White House."

FOUNDATION

Criticized Reliance on FBI

Epstein also criticized the Commission for relying so heavily in its investigation on the services of the FBI. He said the FBI, which knew about Oswald's background but failed to take precautions for Kennedy's visit, was itself under a "cloud of suspicion."

Specifically, Epstein concentrated on two matters:

✓ A report from Texas newsman Alonzo Hudkins that Oswald was a paid informer for the FBI. Hudkins told the Secret Service that his information came from Allan Sweatt, chief of the criminal division of the Dallas sheriff's office.

Neither Sweatt nor Hudkins was called to testify before the Commission.

"There was no need for them to," Cooper said. "We had reports that they had denied (saying) it. . . . And, of course, we had Mr. Hoover's affidavit that Oswald was not a paid informer."

✓ An FBI report of the autopsy said the wound in Kennedy's back was no deeper than "a finger's length." This was in direct contrast to the official autopsy report, which said the bullet exited through the President's neck.

Cooper said Epstein was guilty of "a very inaccurate piece of reporting."

FBI Didn't Conduct Autopsy

"The FBI's report was made on the basis of a cursory examination," Cooper said. "And that's what the FBI said. They didn't conduct the autopsy. The doctors did. They (the FBI agents) weren't there (at Bethesda Naval Hospital) when the autopsy was completed."

Speaking generally about the Commission's detractors, Cooper said:

"These writers select what this witness said, what this witness said and what this witness said.

"Of course you can make a case for anything if you pick out certain witnesses to support certain contentions.

"We had to take a different view. We had to test it (testimony) for credibility."

Witness Discredited

"Now, I understand that Mr. Lane built his case around the testimony of Mr. Rowland (Arnold Rowland of Dallas, whose testimony indicated that the shots did not come from the window where the Commission said Oswald was located)," Cooper said.

"Mr. Rowland's credibility was no good. He just wouldn't tell us the truth. He said he had been accepted at this college and this college and this college. And we checked and he hadn't been. His wife told us he exaggerates.

"And about the FBI—we didn't accept their reports as conclusive. We checked on our own.

"When we finished our report we expected controversy because of the nature of the thing—a President had been assassinated.

'We Resolved the Questions'

"Of course there are vague and uncertain matters connected with it. If there weren't, then there would have been no reason for the investigation.

"But in the context of all of the evidence we resolved the questions.

"When we finished, there was no doubt in any of the commissioners' minds that Oswald fired the shots and that he acted alone.

"I can't say that some day, in some way, there may be other evidence uncovered. But I will say that we couldn't find it, if it was there.

"Again, I want to say that we made our evaluation on the basis of all of the evidence—not just parts of it. I think our conclusions were correct."

CBS Task Force Reviews Warren Report on JFK

Richard S. Salant, president of CBS News, has announced that CBS News "has been intensively re-examining" the Warren Commission Report and other information concerning the assassination of President Kennedy.

"For some time," he said, "a CBS News task force under the direction of Leslie Midgley, executive producer, has been intensively re-examining the Warren Commission Report and the growing volume of literature concerning the report and the assassination of President Kennedy.

"This examination includes not only an analysis in an attempt to define the major issues and the pertinent evidence concerning those issues, but also an independent journalistic investigation to determine whether new light can be thrown on this important story.

"It is the intention of CBS News to report the results in a special broadcast or a series of special broadcasts if, as its investigation proceeds, it determines that it can contribute to public understanding and enlightenment."

MAGAZINE URGES WARREN REVIEW

Post Is 2d Weekly to Propose New Assassination Study

The Saturday Evening Post publishes in its Jan. 14 issue, distributed today, a review of the assassination of President Kennedy and of the findings of the Warren Commission and its critics. The author concludes that circumstantial evidence supports the theory of a second assassin.

The magazine, in an editorial, also called for a new inquiry into the commission's disputed findings.

The report is by Richard J. Whalen, author of "The Founding Father: The Story of Joseph P. Kennedy." Mr. Whalen proposes that President Johnson appoint a special joint committee of Congress or a citizen's panel of independent investigators to "weigh every shred of evidence, old and new."

The Post's editorial said that its writer's suggestion might not be "the wisest course." It urged instead that there be "a meticulous re-examination of the disputed findings" of the Warren Commission by "a fact-finding comittee of indisputable impartiality" concentrating on the major areas of controversy one by one.

The call for a new inquiry was the second such stand by one of the big mass circulation weeklies. Life magazine called for a new official inquiry on Nov. 21. At that time a White House spokesman replied to the call by citing a statement by President Johnson on Nov. 4.

The President said that if there were any evidence causing any reasonable person to have a doubt about the report, "I am sure that the commission and the appropriate authorities will take action that may be justified."

Mr. Whalen's article concludes:

"The evidence against [Lee Harvey] Oswald remains as 'hard' as it was when [Jack] Ruby's bulet killed him. Every piece of soft evidence, from the puff of smoke to the tracing of the President's head-snap, tends to support the possibility of a second assassin."

Lane Book Cited

The first reference was to evidence marshaled by Mark Lane in his best seller, "Rush to Judgment," that a witness saw "a puff of smoke" curling above the trees on the grassy knoll ahead of Mr. Kennedy's car on Elm street.

The second reference was to an experiment by Vincent Salandria, a lawyer of Philadelphia. At the National Archives he placed two slide projectors side by side and superimposed pictures of Mr. Kennedy receiving his head wound. Then he traced Mr. Kennedy's head snapping backward and to the left, consistent with the theory of a second assassin on the knoll, inconsistent with a shot fired by Oswald from the Texas School Book Depository, where Oswald worked.

The magazine says that Mr. Whalen "was harassed by an official runaround and the constant response of 'no comment' during his three-month investigation into the Kennedy assassination."

In the editorial The Post proposes that the fact-finding group start out by examining the X-rays of President Kennedy's body, which the Warren Commission did not do. Thus the new inquiry could "determine once and for all that the autopsy report was correct or incorrect."

Then it proposes that the inquiry resolve questions arising out of the ballistics reports, and dispose of the questions raised by the amateur movie film of Abraham Zapruder, Dallas dress manufacturer, whether Oswald could have fired three shots that would have been recorded as the film recorded them.

"The possibility of a conspiracy," The Post says, "is too ugly and too important to be left to gossip and speculation."

That Extra Bullet

The third anniversary of President Kennedy's death, marked by a still sorrowing nation last Tuesday, focused new attention on the Report of the President's Commission on the Assassination of President John F. Kennedy. Chief Justice Earl Warren was chairman of the commission, which concluded that President Kennedy was killed by Lee Harvey Oswald acting singly and alone.

The dispute does not center on the bullet that killed the President. There is no doubt, according to any source we have seen, that it was fired by Oswald and that it killed the President instantly. The commission says two other shots were fired, either before or after the death bullet. One went astray and has never been located. The other bullet, according to the commission, entered President Kennedy's back, went through his chest, came out the front of his neck, then went through Governor Connally's chest (the Texas governor was sitting on a jump seat in the presidential car), shattered a rib, went through his wrist, and lodged in his thigh.

The bullet was virtually intact when it was found on Governor Connally's stretcher. It seems doubtful that it could have gone through the bodies of the President and the governor, the wrist of the governor, and entered the thigh of the governor without losing more weight than it did.

But aside from the question of how far one bullet can go, there are other reasons to believe that the President and the governor were wounded by separate bullets. The facts are presented in the current issue of Life Magazine in an article titled "A Matter of Reasonable Doubt."

The best witness to the assassination is an amateur film taken by Abraham Zapruder, a bystander. The frames of the Zapruder film have been enlarged and printed individually. Governor Connally studied them during his Life interview. On the basis of his findings, in addition to his own memory, corroborated by his wife's recollection, Governor Connally insists he and President Kennedy were wounded by different bullets.

If the Connally theory is correct, the bullets hit their targets not more than 1.3 seconds apart, the timing being established by the speed with which the amateur film was taken. Experts have proved that the murder weapon could not have been fired at intervals shorter than 2.3 seconds, leading to the inescapable conclusion (if Governor Connally is right) that two bullets would require two would-be assassins.

The Warren Commission was composed of Sen. Richard Russell, Sen. John Sherman Cooper, Rep. Gerald Ford, Rep. Hale Boggs, John J. McCloy, and Allen Dulles in addition to Chief Justice Warren. It would be hard to imagine a more prestigious committee. It was given all the money it requested, and there was no deadline on its report.

The commission heard Governor Connally's testimony, and decided the Texan's memory was wrong. But three members were opposed to the conclusion that only one person was involved in the plot. Senator Russell told the Atlanta Journal he at first refused to sign the report, asking that his exception be marked in the report.

But, said Senator Russell, Chief Justice Warren "was determined he was going to have a unanimous report." The chief justice personally wrote the part of the report saying the commission found no evidence that Oswald "was part of any conspiracy, domestic or foreign," and persuaded Senator Russell, along with the other dissenters, to sign the report.

Life, in its persuasive study of the matter, says, "The evidence does not prove that Oswald had a co-conspirator. Nor does it disprove it. It does show that reasonable—and disturbing—doubt remains." Life concludes, "The case should be reopened."

Arthur Schlesinger, close friend of the Kennedy family and biographer of the late President, said last week. "It appears to me substantial facts and doubts do exist, which would warrant a very intensive inquiry." He thought Congress should undertake one.

Governor Connally, in a press interview after the Life story was printed, insisted two separate shots wounded him and the President. But he said he saw no reason to reopen the investigation. Since two shots meant more than one would-be killer, Governor Connally seems to be saying it is better to let the dispute continue than to try to resolve it now.

The Republic feels, as it said in an editorial on Nov. 9, that the conspiracy theory should be investigated by "private individuals of great stature, possibly financed by a foundation." It might be well to give it the imprimatur of congressional sanction. But a new investigation must avoid the mistakes of the Warren Commission, mistakes which we believe consisted in the chief justice's determination to still the conspiracy theory in the shortest possible time. Instead of accomplishing that aim, the Warren Report has aroused doubts which will never be put to rest if the job isn't done promptly.

MARY FERRELL FOUNDATION

...sight and Outlook . . .

...natomy of a Commission

By Joseph Kraft

IN THINKING ABOUT ...e Warren Commission it ...useful to have in mind a ...nse of the anatomy of all ...presiden...ial commis...sions. For the white...wash ar...gument, now ...freshened by the death of Jack Ruby, is largely the product of naive people ascribing sinister motives to what are only weaknesses inherent in the way presidential commissions are appointed and do their work.

Kraft

Presidential commissions exist for the purpose of laying before an uninstructed mass audience clear and credible accounts of inordinately complex and controversial matters. Their subject matter is never something easily provable. They deal with things hard to resolve—things like military conscription, or crime, or Pearl Harbor, or the assassination of a President.

Celebrated representatives of important interest groups—what Yeats called "66-year-old, smiling public men"—inevitably find representation on all presidential commissions. It is essential to enlist their participation, for their disavowal would make the commission report not credible.

Between the public men on the commission proper, and the commission staff, there is inevitably bound to be tension. While the commission members tend to be full of honors, years and other preoccupations, commission staffs tend to be peopled by obscure young men, with the emotional drive and intellectual capacity to become singularly well-versed in the subject at hand.

A commission staff is inevitably far more knowledgeable, far more analytic, far more willing to consider new approaches, in a word, far more "with it," than any commission.

THE RELATION between the members and their staff provides the key to commissionmanship. The central problem is a problem of engagement. The difficult thing is to mesh the penetrating and often uncomfortable insights of the staff with the genial wisdom, the instinct for preserving sensibilities and keeping conventions that invariably rules among commission members.

The Warren Commission, it is now evident, presented the features of all other presidential commissions in supreme degree. Olympian figures representing the highest interests in the land—its sections, its parties, its branches of Government—were named to the Commission. The staff included some of the most hard-working, brilliant young lawyers ever to come to Washington.

The real trouble with the Warren Report is that the Commission and the staff were so good that they took on the quality of separate beings, divorced and apart. The issues identified and isolated by the staff were not squarely confronted by the Commission. And that explains the one weakness in the Commission Report that has proved central to the case — the failure to come out unambiguously on the issue of whether President Kennedy and Gov. Connally of Texas were hit by a single or separate bullets.

THE STAFF was in no doubt about the need to settle that issue decisively. Its most intelligent members were unanimous in believing that the Governor was struck by a bullet that had first hit the President. But the staff never had a chance to present its views in their full cogency to the commission.

Connally thought, and testified that he had been hit by a separte bullet. Some of the southern members of the Commission were apparently chary of hurting his feelings. Not knowing the full force of the argument for the one-bullet theory, they leaned toward the two-bullet theory. In the end, the Commission Report straddled the question.

By straddling the issue, by not confronting the hard choice implicit in the work of the staff, the Commission opened the door to most of the troubles that have since dogged its report. For without the one-bullet theory, it is a question whether a single man could have got off the shots within the known time span of the shooting. And that question leads to the idea that there might have been accomplices and then to the suspicion of a conspiracy and a whitewash.

Visions of conspiracy and whitewash, however, are not required to explain the flaws found in the Warren Report by its critics. The major weakness has an natural explanation in the way presidential commissions work. And to me this is one, among many, reasons for being skeptical about the need for an official reopening of the case.

Warren Commission Critic Weisberg

In the Limelight

'Whitewash' Author Is Man on the Go

Harold Weisberg, Montgomery County's critic of the Warren Commission report, is a man on the go these days.

His pace has picked up steam since he published his second book, "Whitewash II: The FBI-Secret Service Cover-Up," early this month.

Last week he spent four dawn to post-midnight days in New York, followed by a stopover in Philadelphia for a four-hour radio broadcast.

This week he's off and running again on a week-long trip through the mid-west and on to the West Coast. Stops include Chicago, Ill., Madison, Wisc., San Francisco, Calif. and Los Angeles, Calif.

Weisberg's original book, "Whitewash: The Report on the Warren Report," was one of the first in the current rash of attacks on the commission and placed him in the international spotlight.

Cross Country

Since the first book was published in a general edition in May 1966, Weisberg has traveled across the country and appeared on national television programs as well as audience participation radio shows in California, Ohio, Illinois and Pennsylvania.

He is confident his follow-up to the first volume will help sharpen the criticism of the Warren Commission and the aftermath of the Kennedy assassination.

"My second book brings this to a new point," he said last week at Coq d'Or, the Hyattstown farm where he once raised geese. "It may sound immodest but this dates everyone's work except my own.

"The turning point in this whole thing was my appearance on a television show in New York in July," declared Weisberg, puffing on a cigarillo and squinting behind silver rimmed glasses.

"Four lawyers were lying in wait to tear me up. It was rough. It took me an hour and a half to teach them silence is golden," he laughed. "The sparks really flew.

Credibility Basis

"But that show laid the basis for credibility. It opened the eyes of the most influential minds in New York. People realized that those who say something is wrong are really seeking the sanctity of our society. Total unknowns are saying we must have the truth."

Weisberg attributes his success as a critic to "a rugged refusal to do anything but face reality and deal with nothing but fact. I'm the only one who's dealt extensively with the commission's findings," he added.

Convinced his first book "couldn't wait" until a publisher could be found to put it out, Weisberg financed the operation himself.

To date 22,500 books have been printed in four editions and Dell Publishing Co. has just come out with a paperback edition guaranteeing a minimum of one-quarter million on the first printing.

"Whitewash II" had 10,000 printed in the first edition, copies of which are being distributed to stores and individuals.

"A lot of people wrote ages ago and asked us to send the next book as soon as it was out," Weisberg explained. He estimated he has received over 3000 letters.

Many fans already are in line for the third book, "Whitewash III: The Archive," which is in the works, Weisberg added.

His current trip across the country is in the usual whirlwind fashion. The agenda is crowded with television and radio appearances, press conferences, speeches, seminars, bull sessions, autographing sessions and meetings with wholesalers.

"One morning I'm supposed to do a 5:30 TV appearance after a 3 a.m. radio show," Weisberg declared. "Can you imagine such a schedule? But I'll do it, too."

Interest Abroad

Weisberg is concentrating on the international as well as the national interest in the Kennedy assasination.

His first book is being distributed throughout the English-speaking world in the Dell edition.

It has been serialized in "Arriba," a newspaper in Madrid, Spain, and "Panorama," a large German magazine. An Italian publishing company has contracted for the book and is coming out with an Italian edition next month, Weisberg said.

Weisberg is satisfied that his doubts about the Warren Commission finally are reaching people. In addition he is delighted with the many new friends he has made through his books.

"Lil (his wife) and I have so many new friends now," he smiled, rubbing his close-cropped brown hair. "So many people have written us.

"People are wonderful," Weisberg declared. "At every point along the way there's been someone there waiting with a hand outstretched to help. People want to be helpful and that's what counts."

Published letters are subject to condensation, and those not selected for publication will be returned only when accompanied by stamped, self-addressed envelopes. The use of pen names is limited to correspondents whose identity is known to The Star.

Error, Not Conspiracy

SIR: You persist in defending the Warren Commission report by staking the personal integrity of the members of the commission on it. This is neither logical nor right. The report can be defended only by fact: Is it right? Your position flies into the face of the entire concept of United States law. We do not expect infallibility in public servants, but we do expect and provide for the rectification of error.

Never before has proclaimed ignorance been accepted as authority, but the papers recently have been full of statements from various officials all, in one form or another, saying, "I do not know what I am talking about, but . . ." And then, it seems, they say the books they haven't read are wrong. I have yet to have an error in "Whitewash: The Report on the Warren Report," called to my attention, and I have seen to it that most of the people most concerned had copies, that most of the correspondents, reviewers and editors had the first copies.

It is not true that for the report to be wrong there had to be a monster conspiracy involving everyone from the chief justice down to the most junior charwoman in the Department of Justice. To persist in this false and illogical conclusion may well destroy the integrity of the members of the commission, who can be wrong without being corrupt.

Neither in "Whitewash" nor in its coming sequel, "Whitewash II," do I assault the integrity of the members of the commission.

Harold Weisberg.

PENN JONES JR.

Stubborn Critic Says Three Fired at JFK

One of the Warren Commission critics said in Denver Monday there were three riflemen firing on President John F. Kennedy's car in Dallas three years ago.

And Lee Harvey Oswald's bullets didn't hit the president, either—it was one of the others, he said.

"Whoever killed him had to be an expert rifleman," said Penn Jones Jr., 52, publisher of a weekly Midlothian, Tex., newspaper and a self-styled investigator of Kennedy's assassination. "Oswald was no expert. He wasn't that good a shot."

Denver Post Photo by Jack Riddle

PENN JONES JR.
"I'm stubborn as hell."

Jones was in Denver to plug his book, "Forgive My Grief," and to speak at Boettcher Auditorium, 1900 E. Iliff Ave., at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

He's promoting a theory that 18 persons—including columnist Dorothy Kilgallen — have died "so far" under mysterious circumstances since Kennedy's death because they knew too much about an equally mysterious plot to kill the president.

Jones said at a press conference in the Cosmopolitan Hotel there were "at least two assassins" but later said there were "two behind the board fence and one in the (Texas School Book) Depository."

Oswald, Jones agreed, was in a sixth floor window of the Depository building with a 6.5-millimeter Mannlicher-Carcano rifle equipped with a four-power telescope sight.

The board fence behind which the other two assassins lurked, according to Jones, was on a grassy knoll ahead and to the right of the Kennedy motorcade when the fatal shots were fired.

Jones attached weighty significance to footprints he said were found behind the fence and his belief — which he said was based on study of the Warren Commission report — that Oswald simply wasn't a good enough shot to have killed Kennedy.

The footprints, he said, were in a pattern indicating someone had been pacing nervously as if waiting for something.

As for Oswald's marksmanship, Jones said "nobody" could shoot the way Oswald is supposed to have done.

As a U.S. Marine, however, Oswald qualified as a "sharpshooter" with a score of 212 in the highpower rifle course, which includes slow and rapid fire at distances of 200, 300 and 500 yards. Sharpshooter is the next to highest classification.

Military shooting is done without optical sights, which Oswald had, and without an artificial rest, which he had ready-made in the window sill of the Book Depository.

Military experts consulted by the Warren Commission described the shots in terms ranging from "very easy" to "not particularly difficult," and Oswald's ability as "good to excellent."

Jones is undeterred.

"I'm not smart," he remarked, "but I'm stubborn as hell."

Jones admitted nobody in an official capacity is taking him seriously — not even the FBI, which has called on him three times.

One reporter, noting that Jones names only 15 of the 18 persons who have fallen victim to the post-assassination "conspiracy," asked for names of the other three.

"I'm not going to tell you that, brother," Jones said. "If you think I'm going to tell you all I know at this stage, you're crazy."

Why not?

"I'm going to print another book just as soon as I can," he revealed.

SUBJECT: WARREN COMMISSION

b3(50 U.S.C.403) per CIA

[redacted] Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), furnished the following to Agent Papich on 1-14-64 on a strictly confidential basis.

Messrs. Rankin and Allen Dulles of the captioned Commission met with CIA officials on 1-14-64. Also present was Mr. Willens (phonetic), presumably from the Department of Justice. The purpose of the meeting was to determine the nature of CIA's capabilities to conduct any inquiries or investigation for the Commission overseas. CIA agreed to cooperate and the Agency was left with the understanding that upon receiving specific requests from the Commission, CIA will obtain "facts, interpretations or any available information" relating to Oswald's activities outside of the U. S. These requests very likely will be predicated upon leads which may stem from documents made available and pertaining to Oswald's overseas travels.

Rankin emphasized to CIA that the Commission may not reach its objective but it is actually endeavoring to determine "every second, every minute, of Oswald's life outside of the U. S."

CIA raised a question concerning the classification of material which the Agency might disseminate to the Commission pointing out that CIA was interested in protecting its "sources and methods." Rankin replied that the matter of classification would be determined at the White House. He further made it clear that if the Commission received any information which directed criticism against any agencies, such data would not be classified and very likely would be made public.

A discussion also arose concerning the advisability of sending a letter to the Soviet Government requesting more details concerning Oswald's life in Russia. Allen Dulles was of the opinion that a letter should be sent within the next few days. Rankin prefers to wait until additional review of material is made by the Commission thus giving the Commission an opportunity to prepare a comprehensive letter. The Commission will continue to review this particular matter.

MEMORANDUM FOR: Director
Federal Bureau of Investigation

SUBJECT: Assassination of President John Fitzgerald KENNEDY

1. Your liaison officer with this Agency, Mr. S. J. Papich, has requested that we indicate our views and wishes with respect to the means by which information, which has been or may be acquired by this Agency, should be made known to the Commission appointed by President Johnson in order that its needs may be met.

2. While we have had extensive liaison on various aspects of this matter and our activities in respect thereto are well known to your Bureau, perhaps a brief, general resume of the steps we have taken would be fitting as background for our response to your request. As you know, following the assassination many reports of various kinds were received by U.S. Government representatives at home and abroad. The sources of the reports were of varying degrees of reliability. Our established sources, including certain foreign liaison services, voluntarily contributed information coming to their attention. Liaison services were also contacted in instances in which it was thought they might be able to provide information of interest. On your request, and also on our own initiative in instances in which names of interest appeared in public media or otherwise came to our attention, we checked our files for information which might be helpful. All information considered significant which was received by this Agency or found in its files, irrespective of the nature, sensitivity, or reliability of sources thereof, was promptly relayed to your Bureau.

3. In instances in which we have been the initial recipient of information of interest, we have sought your wishes where appropriate with respect to further action in deference to the responsibilities given to your Bureau by the President. In some instances your Bureau received abroad information concerning activities and events in the life of Lee Harvey OSWALD which complemented or which coincided with information obtained by this Agency. We have reference to OSWALD's visit to Mexico. Our representatives there were in direct working liaison, and in connection with one aspect jointly conducted an interview to resolve an allegation that OSWALD was in Mexico City at a time when investigation by your Bureau tended to establish that he was in New Orleans. We are advised through liaison that you have already called to the attention of the Commission, through its attorney, that we have information coinciding with dates when OSWALD was in Mexico City and which may have some bearing on his activities while in that area. We are also advised through liaison that you provided to the Commission at the same time information concerning the above mentioned allegation and interview to resolve it, and suggested that inquiry be made of this Agency should further information be desired concerning these matters.

4. OSWALD traveled abroad on occasions to Mexico, Japan, Philippine Islands, to, from and within the Soviet Union where he lived for some time and was married to a Soviet citizen who returned with him to the United States. Documents originating with and/or found to have been in possession of OSWALD or his wife and having possible significance in relation to this matter were recovered and have been made available to this Agency. These documents contain information of possible significance to a determination by the Commission of facts pertinent to their inquiry. To be of all possible assistance to the Commission, we are giving careful study to all materials and information received by this Agency, for the purpose of providing the Commission at the appropriate time with any comments, observations, additional information acquired from checks of our records, or recollections of our sources. We may be called upon to provide possible interpretations to be placed on items of information contained in the documents. These efforts on our part have no bearing upon and should not be interpreted in any way as a change in the procedures by which we have provided support and assistance to your Bureau in carrying out your investigative responsibilities.

5. We anticipate that certain of our personnel may appear before the Commission. With respect to certain information of which you are fully informed, we propose to arrange directly for the cooperation of the Commission in its protection. We feel that given the circumstances outlined above, to meet the needs of the Commission, and to enable us to counsel with the Commission to the end that our sources and methods, with the Commission's cooperation, may be afforded protection, the following policies should be employed:

1) a. Your Bureau not disseminate information received from this Agency without prior concurrence.

b. In instances in which this Agency has provided information to your Bureau and you consider that the information is pertinent to the Commission's interest, and/or complements or otherwise is pertinent to information developed or received by your Bureau through other sources and is being provided by you to the Commission,

[redacted] b3 (50 USC 403) per CIA

[redacted] b3 (50 USC 403) per CIA

you refer the Commission to this Agency. In such cases it will be appreciated if you will advise us of such referral in order that we may anticipate the possible further interest of the Commission and initiate action preparatory to meeting its needs.

c. In any instance in which the above procedure does not meet the needs of your Bureau, you inform this Agency through liaison channels in order that the matter may be resolved in a manner consistent with the interests of both your Bureau and this Agency.

Dear Mr. Rankin:

There are enclosed two copies of report in the Lee Harvey Oswald case of Special Agent Robert P. Gemberling dated January 22, 1964, at Dallas, Texas.

The enclosed report is classified "Secret" in connection with the information set forth on pages 39 through 42 thereof. The remaining material in the enclosed report may be considered unclassified.

On page 44 of the enclosure is set forth information concerning a .16 caliber single-barrel weapon described in a Russian hunting identification booklet found among the effects of Lee Harvey Oswald in Dallas, Texas. For further descriptive data concerning this weapon and its manufacture, you are referred to the Central Intelligence Agency.

This Bureau will continue to furnish copies of reports in duplicate as additional investigation is completed.

SUBJECT: LEE HARVEY OSWALD
INTERNAL SECURITY - R - CUBA

We have received information that the President's Commission plans to have Mrs. Marguerite Oswald, mother of Lee Harvey Oswald, appear before the Commission some time during the week 2/9 through 15/64. Mrs. Oswald has made numerous statements to the press alleging that an Agent of the FBI exhibited a photograph to her on 11/23/63 which she claims now is a photograph of Ruby.

Agent Bardwell D. Odum of the Dallas Office did display a photograph of an unidentified individual to Mrs. Oswald 11/23/63. This photograph had been furnished the Bureau by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and involved an unidentified individual in Mexico that CIA felt possibly could be associated with Oswald. The photograph definitely was not one of Jack Ruby.

Another United States Government agency recently made available a photograph of one Lyudmila Nikolayevna Prusakova, nee Ischenko, a Soviet national who was born February 8, 1932, and who visited England as a tourist in May, 1960. In view of the similarity between this individual's name and that of Marina Nikolaevna Oswald, nee Prusakova, the widow of Lee Harvey Oswald, it was suggested that those two individuals may be related.

On February 25, 1964, a photograph of the above-mentioned individual was displayed to Marina Oswald and she advised that this person is not related to her and she has no information as to that individual's identity.

On the same date Marina Oswald furnished the following additional information to this Bureau:

With reference to information she previously furnished that Oswald had physically mistreated her, Marina Oswald stated that he had mistreated her physically about four times during their married life. This mistreatment consisted of Oswald hitting her in the face. She stated that she retaliated by throwing things at him. She recalled that on one occasion she threw a radio at him. Their fights generally resulted from her criticism of Oswald. She criticized his political beliefs, the books he read and once she

Your attention is directed to pages 88 and 89 of the article in "The Nation," wherein the author is quoted as follows:

"Equally puzzling, his mother, Mrs. Marguerite Oswald, has insisted that an agent of the FBI showed her a photograph of Jack Ruby just about seventeen hours before Ruby shot her son.

'It was understood, however, that Federal agencies had acknowledged that she had been shown a photograph that night for identification, but spokesmen would not disclose whether it was that of Ruby. (The New York Times, 12/2/63.)'

'The next day the FBI denied that the photograph was that of Jack Ruby but they would not comment further. Mrs. Oswald repeated her statement and has demanded that the pictures be produced again."

b7C/FBI SPG [redacted] 1/30/89. #6458.

This is to detail our handling of a situation that developed in Mexico City shortly after the assassination and to set forth the position in connection therewith we took with the State Department here and in Mexico City. The Director has expressed concern about several references to FBI concurrences in actions taken in connection with this situation which appear in a series of telegrams between the State Department and Ambassador Mann in Mexico City from 11/27-12/3/63.

BACKGROUND:

President's Commission

CIA

On 11/25/63 Gilberto Alvarado alleged to the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), Mexico City, that on 9/18/63 he observed Oswald receive $6,500 in the Cuban Consulate, Mexico City, as part payment to carry out an assassination in the U. S. He was extensively interviewed by CIA and through 11/28/63 maintained his story was truthful. On receipt of Alvarado's allegation we undertook investigation endeavoring to place Oswald on 9/18/63 and Ambassador Mann began to theorize, as it had been established that Oswald was in the Cuban Consulate, Mexico City, in late September and early October, 1963, that Oswald was acting as a Castro agent in the assassination. On 11/25/63 Mann cabled the State Department that he recommended an FBI officer thoroughly knowledgeable of all aspects of the assassination investigation be sent from headquarters to Mexico City for consultation as to action to be taken. He told State that the Legal Attache, Mexico City, concurred in this recommendation. This was not so for the Legal Attache by 11/25/63 cable advised that he attempted without results to dissuade Ambassador Mann from requesting assistance from headquarters. The Legal Attache recommended against sending any one from the Bureau to Mexico City and on 11/26/63 the State Department was advised that we felt the Ambassador's request was not warranted.

On 11/27/63 Ambassador Mann sought authority from State to request the Mexicans to arrest three individuals, two of whom were Cuban Consulate officials at the Cuban Embassy, [redacted] Also on 11/27/63 the Ambassador told the Legal Attache he had been advised by Alexis Johnson, Deputy Undersecretary of State, the Bureau was considered to be in full charge of the investigation in Mexico City and that we were expected "to call the shots." Alexis Johnson relayed the same thought to the Deputy Attorney General who was advised by Assistant Director Evans that State and CIA had jurisdiction in dealing with foreign governments and in matters involving intelligence coverage abroad and that while we were cooperating fully with State and CIA in Mexico, the responsibility regarding the Alvarado matter in Mexico rested with State and CIA. (S)(U)

In view of the expressed attitude of Ambassador Mann and Johnson the Bureau dispatched Supervisor Lawrence Keenan to Mexico City on the evening of 11/27/63 and on the morning of 11/28/63 Keenan and Legal Attache unequivocally outlined this position to Ambassador Mann. The Legal Attache recommended on 11/28/63 that the best course of action regarding Alvarado, a Nicaragu[redacted] Un[redacted]

11/29/63 Assistant Director Evans spoke directly with Deputy Undersecret[redacted] of State Johnson and outlined our position. Johnson said that Ambassador Mann had not informed him of the developments and that he realized it was the Ambassador's responsibility to take action in Mexico and if the Ambassador did not do so, it was up to Johnson to issue the necessary instructions. Johnson said that the specific recommendation made by the Bureau concerning turning Alvarado over to the Mexicans was exactly what he had in mind and felt it was most fortunate that the Ambassador was receiving [redacted] professional kind of help from an organization which was most qualified. Alvarado was turned over to the Mexicans and on 11/29/63 admitted that his allegation was a hoax designed to induce the U. S. to overthrow Castro. However, following this Alvarado on his release by the Mexicans on 12/2/63 recanted and alleged that he admitted his allegation was a hoax only through fear of bodily harm at the hands of the Mexicans. At this point the Mexicans were holding Alvarado subject to deportation to Nicaragua. In order to resolve the question of whether or not Alvarado was lying and noting the necessity of some action prior to Alvarado returning to Nicaragua, we, on the morning of 12/3/63, strongly urged CIA to afford Alvarado a polygraph examination in which we offered to participate by having the Legal Attache act as interpreter. This was accomplished on 12/5 and 6/63 with the result that the polygraph examiner concluded Alvarado was not telling the truth. Alvarado at the conclusion of the examination admitted that such was the case. (S)(U)

These recommendations were made after the Deputy Attorney General, Deputy Undersecretary of State Johnson and Ambassador Mann were clearly informed as to our position that the decision for action to be taken in Mexico was that of State and CIA. The fact that Ambassador Mann finally understood this is clear from his statement in his 11/28/63 telegram to Johnson in which he lauded the work of our Legal Attache and said that he wished to make it clear that "the responsibility for all the recommendations made by this Embassy are solely mine and not theirs" (CIA and FBI). Per CIA letter 9/23/88.

In response to a request from Mr. J. Lee Rankin, Malley attended a meeting which was scheduled at the offices of the President's Commission at 4:00 p.m., today. The meeting actually commenced about 4:35 p.m., and those present consisted of Chief Justice Earl Warren, Richard Helms of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), Tom Bellem of the Treasury Department, Inspector Tom Kelly of the Secret Service and Mr. Rankin.

Chief Justice Warren stated that the purpose of the meeting was to consider information now available as a result of investigation relating to Oswald's activities in foreign countries to determine if there was any way to prove or disprove the information now available. Chief Justice Warren stated that he had in mind that there might be some way of talking to individuals that had lived in some of these countries or any other sources that would know whether or not it was possible the information received is correct.

CIA representative Helms then stated that this problem had been presented to the CIA and that they did have some sources who were previously connected with Russian intelligence agencies, one of these having defected from Russia less than two years ago [redacted] and that the question involved was whether information that had been developed could be made available to these individuals for a verification as to whether the situations could have occurred as we now have them from correspondence received from Russian authorities, as well as information from Mrs. Oswald. Helms stated that the FBI had previously indicated they did not want their information turned over to such individuals.

(S) 3-1(2)

[redacted] We have disagreed with this procedure in that we do not trust the defectors to this extent and, therefore, have told CIA that our information is not to be shown to the defectors. Some weeks ago CIA informally proposed to us that they talk to these defectors regarding Oswald, and we told them they should not use our information. Up to now, this has not been a request from the President's Commission. Our fear is that defectors [redacted] in an attempt to build up their importance, will come up with an alarmist picture as to the tactics of Soviet intelligence in recruiting and using persons, whom they allow to leave the Soviet Union, for intelligence and terrorist tactics. If such a report is made to the Commission, the Commission will be stuck with the report, which cannot be proved or disproved, despite the fact that there is no indication that Oswald was recruited by the Soviets; in fact, all the information is to the contrary. Frankly, we think the Commission may be making a mistake in following CIA's suggestion. However, we cannot be put in the position that we refuse to allow our information to be used. We do want to know what they are going to use so we can see if it will imperil our sources.

(S) 3-1(2)

Dawsey said that is the Commission's headache not ours.

At this point the members present were told that the FBI desired to cooperate in every way possible with this investigation. In any instance where information had been developed by the Bureau which would be of value in a particular situation, we would like to be advised so that we could look it over.

Helms stated at this point that it would not be necessary to necessarily turn over any written record for examination, but that in many instances it could probably be accomplished by merely furnishing some facts, without identifying the sources to these individuals, to see if a verification could be obtained.

The group was again told that the FBI would be glad to assist in any way possible, and as soon as a specific instance was made known to us it would be checked.

Following this discussion, Mr. Rankin stated that he believed that all the agencies represented were more than desirous of cooperating to the fullest extent and that he would have members of the Commission staff select that information which he believed offered possibilities along the lines desired, and would then have the respective agencies contacted for the determination of the best procedure to follow.

RECOMMENDATION:

The Director may wish to consider having Malley point out to Rankin that by having these defectors interviewed, the Commission may be saddling itself with theoretical dissertations on the procedures of the Russian intelligence system in using persons, who have been in the Soviet Union, for intelligence and terrorist tactics; that, by inference, this would apply to Oswald, and the Commission will thus have a charge which cannot be proved or disproved, even though all information received to date indicates that Oswald was in no way recruited by Soviet intelligence. Malley would tell Rankin that we are merely pointing this out, and the decision is completely in the hands of the Commission.

INTERNAL SECURITY - R - CUBA

SECRET

The following information was furnished on February 26 and 27, 1964, to representatives of the FBI by Yuri Ivanovich Nosenko, Soviet defector, whose reliability has not as yet been established. (U)

Nosenko said he was Deputy Chief of the Tourist Department, Second Chief Directorate of the Committee for State Security (KGB) at the time of his defection February 4, 1964, at Geneva, Switzerland, and held the rank of Lieutenant Colonel. He said the Second Directorate of the KGB is concerned with the internal security of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR). (U)

Nosenko advised he was familiar with the visit of Lee Harvey Oswald to the Soviet Union in the Fall of 1959 and supervised the handling of the KGB file on Oswald in the Tourist Department. (U)

Nosenko stated that when Oswald arrived as a tourist in the Soviet Union the KGB had no current interest in him and possessed no information that Oswald was a member of the Communist Party, USA, elsewhere, or that he was a member of any pro-Soviet organization. Nosenko advised that upon arrival in Moscow Oswald contacted Intourist, the official Soviet travel agency. Oswald informed representatives of the Intourist that he desired to remain in the Soviet Union. Thereafter, Oswald's case was referred to the Seventh (Tourist) Department, Second Main Directorate, KGB. (U)

Nosenko related Oswald was discouraged from remaining permanently in Russia. It was suggested to him that he complete his visit as a tourist and return to the United States. It was further suggested he could thereafter make application through routine channels at the Soviet Embassy in the U. S. for admission as an immigrant to the Soviet Union. (U)

RE: LEE HARVEY OSWALD

Nosenko said Oswald was not regarded by the KGB as being completely normal mentally nor was he considered to be very intelligent. He stated it was the desire of the KGB that Oswald depart from Russia as early as convenient but no effort was made to curtail his visit or to inconvenience him during his stay in Russia. Nosenko stated, however, that Oswald was pointedly informed he could not remain in Russia permanently. Later Oswald was scheduled to take a tour of Moscow but before the tour began he was again notified he could not remain in the Soviet Union. When he failed to appear for this tour a search was instituted for him and according to Nosenko inquiry was made at the Berlin Hotel in Moscow where Oswald was a guest. This inquiry disclosed Oswald had locked himself in his room and when entry was made to his room Oswald was found bleeding from self-inflicted wounds to his wrists. Nosenko stated Oswald was rushed to a hospital and Nosenko expressed the opinion that if Oswald had not received immediate medical assistance he would have died. (4)

Nosenko stated that upon Oswald's release from the hospital Oswald was again informed he could not remain in the Soviet Union, whereupon Oswald declared if this were true he would commit suicide. Nosenko said that at this point the Second Directorate of the KGB "washed its hands of Oswald". (4)

Nosenko advised that Oswald was, nevertheless, permitted to remain temporarily in Russia and it is Nosenko's opinion this was accomplished through the Ministry of Foreign Affairs or the Soviet Red Cross. Nosenko said Oswald was not granted Soviet citizenship nor was this ever considered. He said Oswald was thereafter sent to Minsk in Byelorussia, northwest of Moscow where he was given a small apartment and a minor position in a plant, believed by Nosenko to be engaged in the manufacture of radio receivers. Nosenko said Oswald received a small salary and this was supplemented by funds provided by the Soviet Red Cross. (4)

SECRET

Nosenko said the KGB file on Oswald was then transferred to the regional office of the KGB at Minsk and that office was instructed to maintain a discreet check on the activities of Oswald. Nosenko commented that the possibility that Oswald might be a "sleeper agent" for American intelligence had been considered by the KGB but at this time the interest of KGB headquarters in Oswald was practically nil. SECRET

Nosenko said no further word was received at the KGB headquarters concerning Oswald until he appeared at the Soviet Embassy, Mexico City, Mexico, and sought to return to the Soviet Union. He stated the headquarters of the First Chief Directorate (Foreign Intelligence) at Moscow was advised of Oswald's interest in returning to Russia. It was subsequently ascertained that Oswald had been of interest previously to the Second Directorate and the Second Directorate promptly informed the First Directorate that Oswald was of no interest to the Second Directorate. The Second Directorate said it wanted nothing to do with Oswald and it recommended to the First Directorate that Oswald not be granted permission to return to the Soviet Union.

Nosenko related he next heard about Oswald approximately two hours after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy when Nosenko was summoned to the KGB center in Moscow and queried concerning his knowledge of Oswald. Nosenko said that since no file on Oswald could be located at the center he was instructed by General Oleg M. Gribanov, Head of the Second Directorate, to telephone the KGB office at Minsk and obtain a dictated summary of information concerning Oswald. Nosenko said he contacted the KGB office at Minsk and obtained a summary wherein there appeared a phrase that the KGB at Minsk had endeavored "to influence Oswald in the right direction". General Gribanov was greatly concerned about this phrase inasmuch as the KGB in Minsk had been instructed to take no action concerning Oswald. General Gribanov ordered all records at Minsk pertaining to Oswald be forwarded by war-plane to Moscow with an explanation concerning attempts "to influence Oswald in the right direction". SECRET

Kosenko advised the MVD at Minsk reported no official action had been taken to direct Oswald and explained that an uncle of Marina Oswald, wife of Lee Harvey Oswald, who was a lieutenant colonel in the local militia at Minsk, had voluntarily approached Oswald and suggested Oswald not be too critical of the Soviet Union when he returned to the United States. Kosenko commented that when the MVD at Minsk was first requested to furnish a summary of the Oswald file it was unaware of the international significance of Oswald's activities and had included the statement reporting their endeavors to influence Oswald as a self-serving effort to impress the MVD center.

Kosenko advised that the Oswald affair was a source of great concern to the MVD center and a large staff of MVD employees was called into service and records were reviewed in great detail to make certain the MVD had not utilized Oswald as an agent.

With respect to Marina Oswald, Kosenko advised that she was not employed as an agent of the MVD. He said she had been a member of the Komsomol (Communist Party Youth Organization) but had been dropped from the rolls on an unknown date for non-payment of dues over a long period of time. Kosenko stated Marina Oswald was not regarded by the MVD as a very intelligent person. Marina was permitted to depart Russia with her husband, but Kosenko said this was of no significance since there was no objection from the MVD.

Kosenko advised that since the death of Stalin it is possible under the law for a Russian wife of a foreign national to leave the USSR with her husband, although in practice this may be prevented as a matter of policy.

On 2/27/64, Mr. C. R. Wilson, Office of Naval Intelligence (ONI), advised Liaison that the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) had requested and had been granted permission to include two ONI messages regarding Oswald in a "package" CIA plans to send to the Warren Commission. The Bureau and CIA both received copies of the ONI documents when they were prepared in 1962 and a copy of each is enclosed for information.

One of the documents is a cable dated 3/13/62 from the ONI Director to the U.S. Naval Attache, Moscow. It referred to Oswald's 1959 visit to the U.S. Embassy, Moscow, when he requested revocation of his U.S. citizenship, asserted he had applied for Soviet citizenship, and allegedly said he intended to tell the Soviets information he gained in the Marine Corps when he became a Soviet citizen. The cable then informed the Naval Attache that Navy Secretary Connally had received a letter in February, 1962, from Oswald complaining about being given a dishonorable discharge from the Marine Corps.

The other ONI document is a memorandum of 4/26/62 to the Bureau, copies to CIA and Immigration and Naturalization Service, transmitting a copy of a letter of 3/22/62 from Oswald, then in Russia, to the Marine Corps. In it Oswald requested a full review of his undesirable discharge and indicated he expected to be back in the United States by the time his letter was received. b3 50 U.S.C. 403 per C IM

Federal Bureau of Investigation
Attention: Mr. S. J. Papich

SUBJECT: Assassination of President John F. Kennedy

1. According to entries for late October 1959 in Lee Harvey OSWALD's "Historic Diary," he attempted suicide in Moscow on 21 October 1959 by cutting his left wrist. In an interview of Marina Oswald, conducted by your Special Agents Anatole A. Boguslav and Wallace R. Heitman on 2 December 1964 at Dallas, Texas, as shown by memorandum dated 3 December 1963 furnished to this Agency, she stated that she never knew OSWALD to speak of or attempt suicide, that she did not think that he was capable of suicide and she did not believe he had ever attempted suicide. She also stated that she recalled seeing a scar on the inner left wrist of OSWALD after they were married. This scar she said was completely healed and she asked him about this and he evaded answering her.

2. In connection with our efforts to assist the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy by providing information which might be helpful in interpreting available materials relating to OSWALD's activities abroad, we have considered the entry with regard to attempted suicide. We consider this entry as being of considerable importance and one which might be subject to verification.

3. The only information we have received which would appear to have a direct bearing on the accuracy of the diary entry is that contained in the above mentioned memorandum of interview dated 3 December 1964. The information contained therein was provided by his widow, a Soviet citizen. We feel that statements on the part of Marina OSWALD are not adequate and that independent corroborative evidence on this point should be obtained if it is possible to do so.

4. We would appreciate receiving any other information, such as statements of observations by police or others, including the undertakers, copies of any reports, such as autopsy or other, which may contain information pertinent to this point.

George and Jeanne de Mohrenschildt

This is in response to your communication of April 15, 1964, transmitting a document from the FBI concerning the above subjects. In reply to your request for any additional pertinent information which this office might have, the following may be useful.

On April 10, 1964, the Department's Legal Adviser, Mr. Chayes, wrote to Ambassador Timmons enclosing a letter from the General Counsel of the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy for transmittal to Mr. and Mrs. de Mohrenschildt. The letter requests them to come to Washington to testify before the Commission beginning April 22. The letter indicates that the testimony will take about two or three days and will concern any knowledge or information the de Mohrenschildts have pertaining to Lee Harvey Oswald and the assassination of President Kennedy.

The Embassy reported on April 15 (Embtel 858) that the de Mohrenschildts had been contacted and were planning to arrive in Washington to begin testimony on April 22 as requested.

Should any additional information on the activities of the de Mohrenshhildts come to our attention, we will be glad to pass it along to you.

Mark Lane speech reported REFTEL and delivered April 5 at International Lawyers Congress carried in local press April 6 as address by "representative Independent Citizens' Committee touring US in lecture series devoted to criticism Oswald case handling." Lane quoted in press as disparaging Warren Committee investigations. Lane also gave radio-TV interview same vein April 5.

Western pressmen who attended Lane's address described his attacks on US in general and US foreign policy specifically as "vitriolic" and "vituperative." Reportedly describes ~~nuancens~~* US as "most imperialistic and militarily aggressive country in world."

One Western reporter asserts he saw photostatic copies of FBI investigation reports which Lane using in attempts document his charges that Kennedy killer still at large and that Oswald case coverup frameup. In view possible improper use official US documents in Lane's activities here, Department may wish pass this information to appropriate authorities.

Lane reported by local press to have departed Budapest April 6. No destination given.

Legation would appreciate information on Lane in order respond to queries which might arise.

Sixth day K visit marked by cancellation morning sightseeing plans, departure for Miskolc in afternoon, and Democratic Lawyers Congress sideshow again attracting attention.

According US press representative Mark Lane, New York Attorney for Oswald's mother, appeared as guest speaker at Association Democratic Lawyers convention in Budapest April 5 and asked that an international commission be formed to investigate assassination President Kennedy. Lane told applauding delegates that Kennedy's killer still at large and waved papers purporting to contain evidence, names of witnesses to back his claim. Lane made himself available for lectures in Europe presumably for fund raising purposes.

Preliminary reports on Khrushchev's (K) apparently off cuff remarks at Miskolc RR station evening April 5 characterize speech as "strongest since last October".

K reported by western press sources to have castigated CHICOMS for attempts incite Soviet people against him. He said fear and suffering under Stalin was too well known to Soviet people to accept a return to Stalinist methods, anyone else wanting a Stalin and his kind was welcome to him if they could stand the stench. K is said to have questioned the ability of any nation to build communism without Soviet assistance or without unity of internationa communism.

Dear Mr. Rankin:

Reference is made to my letter of April 1, 1964, regarding the foreign travel plans of Mark Lane, former legal counsel for Mrs. Marguerite Oswald.

This Bureau has received information from the United States Department of State that Lane spoke at the recent congress of the International Association of Democratic Lawyers in Budapest, Hungary, on April 5, 1964. In his speech Lane reportedly attacked the United States and its foreign policy. Lane was described by newsmen from Western countries as being "vitriolic" and "vituperative" against this country. Lane also stated that he was available for lectures on his version of the assassination of President Kennedy.

Lane is also reported as having asked for the formation of an international commission to investigate the assassination of President Kennedy. The Department of State has advised that press reports in the African nation of Uganda indicate that the International Association of Democratic Lawyers decided to establish such a commission.

Honorable J. Lee Rankin

For your information American representatives in Uganda have expressed concern to the United States Secretary of State for the effects of Lane's comments in Budapest. They note that the Minister of Education, Abu K. Mayanja, who was a delegate from Uganda to the International Association of Democratic Lawyers meeting, has publicly expressed his doubts as to the guilt of Lee Harvey Oswald. The Minister of Education reportedly has said that President Kennedy was more likely killed as a result of a conspiracy of important men in military, Government and big business circles. In addition, the Minister of Education has told the press in his country that he hoped the members of the legal profession there would back the decision to set up an international commission on the assassination matter. U

While this Bureau is not initiating an active investigation of the International Association of Democratic Lawyers, you will be furnished information received as to its involvement in the establishment of an international commission to investigate the assassination of President Kennedy. U

The International Association of Democratic Lawyers has been described as an international communist front organization in the "Guide to Subversive Organizations and Publications" prepared by the Committee on Un-American Activities, United States House of Representatives, Washington, D. C. U

Dear Mr. Rankin:

Reference is made to coverage by this Bureau of the public appearancesof Mark Lane.

During the recent European trip by Lane, this Bureau received from the United States Department of State a copy of a telegram classified "Confidential" addressed to the Secretary of State from the American Legation, Budapest, Hungary, dated April 7, 1964, regarding Lane's appearance at the Congress of the International Association of Democratic Lawyers held in Budapest in early April, 1964. In that telegram a newsman from a Western country was reported to have asserted that he saw photostatic copies of FBI investigative reports which Lane was using in his attempts to support his charges that the assassin of President Kennedy was still at large and that the case against Lee Harvey Oswald was a frame-up.

In view of the serious nature of the allegation, Lane was interviewed at approximately 10 a.m. on April 29, 1964, by Special Agents William E. Folkner and John P. Di Marchi of the New York Office of this Bureau. At the time Lane was departing from his residence at 164 West 70th Street, New York City. After the Special Agents identified themselves, Lane noted their names and credential numbers.

On 5-15-64 Mr. J. W. Scott, Deputy Director, Bureau of Intelligence and Research, Department of State, advised Liaison Agent Bartlett that Chief Justice Warren has made a request of Secretary Rusk in connection with the Oswald case. Mr. Warren requested that an attempt be made to have the Cubans furnish information and documents in their possession concerning Oswald's visit to the Cuban Consulate in Mexico City during the Fall of 1963.

Mr. Scott advised that it would be necessary to go through the Swiss to contact the Cubans; therefore, State is sending a communication to the U. S. Ambassador in Bern asking that the Swiss be contacted in connection with Mr. Warren's request to determine if the Swiss are willing to contact the Cubans in an attempt to secure the requested information and documents. Mr. Scott said this communication will be sent out today.

13 MAY 196[illegible]

MEMORANDUM FOR: Director
Federal Bureau of Investigation

SUBJECT: Lee Harvey OSWALD's Access to Classified Information About the U-2

1. Reference is made to your letter, dated 13 April 1964, captioned "Lee Harvey OSWALD, Internal Security - Russia - Cuba", and to the attachment which contained statements made by one, Eugene J. HOBBS, HMC, USN. Your letter requested certain information regarding subject's Marine assignment at the Naval Air Station, Atsugi, Japan, in 1957 and 1958. The remarks furnished below are addressed to the contents of your letter and to the statements in the attachment.

2. The Atsugi Naval Air Station is located approximately 35 miles south and west of Tokyo, Japan. At the time in question, Atsugi was a "closed" base in the sense that American and indigenous personnel entering the Station were required to possess official identification cards. Within the Station, the flight line areas were restricted, as is the case of all such Stations, and certain hangar areas were further restricted for the performance of classified functions.

3. The Joint Technical Advisory Group (JTAG) occupied an area within the Station, consisting of 20 to 25 individual residences, two dormitories, an office area, a power plant, several Butler-type warehouses, and a club building used for recreation and a bachelor officers' mess. The JTAG area was not closed, but it was located about 400 yards from the main Station area and there was no occasion for the regularly assigned Station personnel to visit the JTAG area. The club was open only to JTAG personnel and their guests. Two of the living quarters were occupied by the Navy commanding officer and his deputy because the quarters at JTAG were of better quality than the housing accommodations provided at the Station.

4. JTAG air activities were conducted from a classified hangar area at one end of the flight line. OSWALD did not have access to this area. Prior to the time in question, JTAG had been publicized by Radio Peking as being a headquarters for American intelligence activity. For this reason, and because JTAG was obviously not a part of the Naval Air Station complement, there were rumors and gossip regarding the unit and its activities. This condition was regarded as normal under such circumstances. Being there at that time, OSWALD could have heard such gossip; however, there is no information to indicate, nor is there reason to believe, that he obtained factual knowledge regarding JTAG and its mission. (For your information, an incident involving the landing of a U-2 in a rice paddy in Kanagawa Prefecture, Japan, was reported in the press and aroused some public interest. That incident, however, occurred in December 1959, which was some time after OSWALD had left Japan).

5. There were no Navy personnel assigned to JTAG. Moreover JTAG did not participate in, or transfer any of, its activities to a Station in Bangkok. Regarding the statement by HOBBS that a Navy Commander was recruiting Navy Personnel for an assignment in Bangkok, it is noted that the Navy at that time was conducting certain air reconnaissance activity from Atsugi using other types of aircraft.

6. The following should be considered with respect to your source's assertions that OSWALD's squadron was in Cubi Point, Philippine Islands in January 1958 where it kept its gear in what the source now knows to have been a hangar for a U-2 airplane; and that the squadron was back in Atsugi, Japan in May 1958. The term "U-2" was not known publicly and did not gain world-wide notoriety until the ill-fated Powers mission some two years later. Therefore, it is highly unlikely that the term "U-2" would have meant anything to OSWALD, even if he had heard it and had been able to identify the term with any aircraft at Cubi Point, at Atsugi or anywhere else.

b3 per CIA
(50 USC 403)

[redacted]

b3 (50USC403
per CIA

7. To summarize: There is no evidence or indication that OSWALD had any association with, or access to, the JTAG operation or its program in Japan. This applies also to information regarding the U-2 or its mission. Even if OSWALD had seen a U-2 aircraft at Atsugi or elsewhere, this fact would not have been considered unusual nor have constituted a breach of security. Limited public exposure of the craft itself -- but not of its nomenclature or mission -- was accepted as a necessary risk. It is most unlikely that OSWALD had the necessary prerequisites to differentiate between the U-2 and other aircraft engaged in classified missions which were similarly visible at Atsugi at the same time.

8. A copy of this memorandum is being forwarded to the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy.

Dear Mr. Rankin:

There are enclosed two copies of a Department of State, Office of Security, report in the Lee Harvey Oswald case dated June 9, 1964, at Caracas, Venezuela, dealing in part with reinterview of Mr. and Mrs. Juan M. De Cuba. The De Cubas were fellow passengers of Oswald on the buses of the Transportes del Norte line from Mexico City, Mexico, to Laredo, Texas, on October 2 and 3, 1963. The De Cubas were reinterviewed at our request.

The enclosed report also makes reference to the Muracciole sisters, formerly of Caracas, Venezuela, who are said to presently reside in Mexico City, Mexico.

In light of recent developments which have established that Oswald departed from Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, on October 3, 1963, by Transportes del Norte bus and as the Muracciole sisters departed from Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, on October 3, 1963, by air en route to Caracas, Venezuela, we do not intend to conduct further inquiry to locate and interview them.

NOTE:

State Department report establishes that the De Cubas were on the Del Norte bus. It previously stated they traveled by Red Arrow bus. The report is essentially negative, however, both De Cubas recall young American, whose description they furnished fits Oswald, being taken off the bus by Mexican immigration inspector at Nuevo Laredo which we knew occurred in the case of Oswald. Not necessary now to interview the Muraccioles for reason stated herein.

By letter dated 6/30/64, the President's Commission requested that the Bureau clarify certain data regarding a photograph that was shown to Mrs. Marguerite Oswald by Special Agent (SA) Bardwell D. Odum of the Dallas Office on 11/23/63. The Commission indicated that there appeared to be some confusion in its records concerning the exact picture shown to Mrs. Oswald and the Director has inquired if we are responsible for this confusion.

Date of Declassification Indefinite 7/6/77

b1 b3 (50USC403) CIA

On the night of 11/23/63 SA Odum exhibited to Mrs. Marguerite Oswald a photograph of an unidentified individual which was obtained from Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) [redacted] Mrs. Oswald was unable to identify the individual as an associate of Lee Harvey Oswald, but later claimed the individual depicted in the photograph was Jack L. Ruby. The picture shown Mrs. Oswald was definitely not Jack L. Ruby nor has the individual depicted therein been identified by the CIA. (5)(4)(4)

On 2/11/64 we furnished the Commission a copy of the photograph shown Mrs. Oswald by SA Odum and at the request of CIA cropped out the background data in the photograph [redacted] Dallas, when displaying the photograph to Mrs. Oswald on 11/23/63, also at CIA's request, deleted identifying detail in the background of the picture. However, they cut the picture in a slightly different fashion from the way the picture was cut when the first copy was furnished to the Commission on 2/11/64. (5)(4)(4)

ENCLOSURE

By letter dated 6/9/64, we furnished the Commission a copy of the exact photograph, same size and same cutaway, that was shown Mrs. Marguerite Oswald by SA Odum on 11/23/63. Attached are copies of the photographs which we furnished to the Commission showing the slight difference in the cropping of the background.

SECRET

There should be no problem or confusion in the Commission's records concerning these photographs which they have in their possession. Inspector James R. Malley contacted Mr. Rankin on 7/2/64 in an effort to arrange a conference to find out what the Commission's problem is in connection with these pictures. Mr. Rankin indicated he would call Mr. Malley back on 7/2/64 if he could arrange a conference with the staff members of the Commission who have raised the question. Mr. Rankin was unable to arrange such a conference on 7/2/64. Inspector Malley again contacted Mr. Rankin at 10:30 a.m. on 7/6/64 in an effort to arrange the necessary conference and Mr. Rankin indicated he would immediately advise Mr. Malley when a conference can be arranged.

ACTION:

This matter is being very closely followed and the Director will be advised of the outcome of the conference.

Reference is made to memorandum W. A. Branigan to W. C. Sullivan dated 7/6/64 advising that we were arranging a conference with the President's Commission to ascertain what the Commission's problem was in connection with the photograph of the unidentified individual taken by Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) in Mexico City. Such photograph was exhibited to Marguerite Oswald 11/23/63 by Special Agent (SA) Bardwell D. Odum of the Dallas Office. (U)

On 7/7/64 Supervisor Robert E. Lenihan of the Domestic Intelligence Division, to whom the Oswald case is assigned, met with Mr. J. Lee Rankin and with Commission staff members W. J. Liebeler and Howard P. Willens, in this matter. SA Lenihan carefully described for the Commission the circumstances surrounding the Bureau's acquisition of the photograph in question from the CIA and our investigative activity in displaying the photograph to Mrs. Marguerite Oswald. SA Lenihan also explained for the Commission the fact that the original of the photograph displayed by SA Odum to Mrs. Oswald was cropped by the Dallas Office at the request of CIA to remove identifying background data [redacted] SA Lenihan also explained the circumstances surrounding the cropping of the photograph by Inspector James R. Malley when such photograph was furnished to the Commission by Mr. Malley on 2/11/64. Mr. Lenihan pointed out to the Commission members that the latter photograph was urgently dispatched to the Commission on 2/11/64 upon oral request from Mr. Liebeler and that the Bureau did not purport such photograph to be the exact photograph that was displayed to Mrs. Oswald by SA Odum. (U)

b1 b3 50USC403 CIA

Mr. Liebeler readily acknowledged that he was aware that the photograph of the unidentified individual furnished him by Mr. Malley was not the original photograph displayed to Mrs. Oswald by SA Odum. Mr. Liebeler also added that he is convinced in his own mind that no matter what photograph had been exhibited to Marguerite Oswald by the FBI on 11/23/63, Mrs. Oswald very likely would have claimed such photograph was of Jack Ruby. Mr. Rankin then carefully examined the original photograph displayed to Mrs. Oswald by SA Odum, which Supervisor Lenihan had in his possession, and the copy of the photograph which was furnished to the Commission 2/11/64 by Inspector Malley. Mr. Rankin stated that any reasonable man would immediately declare that the individual depicted in the two photographs was one and the same. V

Mr. Rankin then requested that, in order to make the Commission's records complete in this matter, the FBI furnish the Commission affidavits executed by Inspector Malley and SA Odum wherein each would clearly describe his cropping of the photograph involved and why such photograph was cropped as it was by each. V

Mr. Rankin added that it will not be necessary for the Bureau to contact our Legal Attache, Mexico City, to obtain details regarding the FBI's acquisition of the original photograph from the CIA. Mr. Rankin stated the Commission would contact CIA directly in this matter since it also desired to obtain additional data from CIA [redacted] (5)

SUBJECT: LEE HARVEY OSWALD
IS - RUSSIA - CUBA

Through liaison channels, CIA has furnished the Bureau copies of Oswald's application for a Cuban visa which was made when the subject visited Mexico City prior to the assassination.

b3 (50 USC 403)
per CIA

[redacted] CIA, advised the Liaison Agent on 9/3/64, that some weeks ago the President's Commission had asked the State Department to explore the possibilities of obtaining from the Cuban Government any available material concerning Oswald's contacts with the Cuban Consulate in Mexico City. The State Department acted on this request through the Swiss Government. On 8/28/64, the Swiss Government made available to the State Department copies of (A) Oswald's application for a Cuban visa dated 9/27/63, and (B) a letter dated 10/13/63, from the Cuban Ministry of Foreign Affairs to the Cuban Consulate, Mexico City, making reference to Oswald's application. These documents were transmitted via State Department to the Commission. On 9/2/64, the Commission furnished copies to CIA and requested that certain [redacted] examinations be conducted. On 9/3/64, CIA informed the Commission that copies of the documents were being made available to the Bureau. In addition to furnishing us copies of (A) and (B) described above, CIA also furnished copies of translations of these documents, which translations were made by State Department; this material is enclosed.

b1/b3 (50 USC 403) per CIA

With regard to the visa application, the document contains routine background data and is signed "Lee H. Oswald." Also included on this same document are typewritten comments presumably made by the Cuban Consulate employee handling the visa application. These comments include the following significant statements: "The applicant states that he is a member of the American Communist Party and Secretary in New Orleans of the Fair Play for Cuba Committee . . . . He displayed documents in proof of his membership in the two aforementioned organizations and a marriage certificate."

[redacted] We previously were informed that Duran was the Cuban Consulate employee with whom Oswald had made contact when he called at the Consulate. For your information, no evidence was ever developed indicating that Oswald had been a member of the Communist Party, USA (CPUSA). We do have evidence that he manifested pro-communist views and we further know that he had corresponded with the Communist Party. With regard to the Fair Play for Cuba Committee, we do know that he was a self-proclaimed member of that organization and had documents in his possession which associated him with this particular group. If the comments on the application are legitimate, it is suggested that Oswald may have displayed copies of correspondence with the CPUSA and with the Fair Play for Cuba Committee and in this way convinced the Cuban Consulate that he was affiliated with both organizations.

No requests have been made of the Bureau to conduct any investigation or examination. We have transmitted copies of the State Department translations to our Dallas Office.

Dear Mr. Rankin:

Reference is made to our letter dated September 8, 1964, transmitting photographs of Exhibits D-243 through D-250.4

There are enclosed for your information two copies of translations of the foreign language material in Exhibits D-244 through D-248. There are also enclosed two copies of a translation of a portion of Exhibit D-250.4

The Walter Neunson referred to in Exhibit D-248 is believed to be one Walter Carl Neunson who was born September 13, 1908, at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and who, as of January 6, 1964, resided at 900 North 40th Street, Camden, New Jersey, where he subscribed to telephone number Woodlawn 4-0857. Neunson was last known to be employed as a machinist by the Piasecki Aircraft Corporation, Philadelphia.4

Neunson resided in [redacted] through early 1940 when he returned to the United States. During his residence in the Soviet Union, he married Maya Mikhaelovna Koslova in 1935 by whom he has three children; namely, Edward Charles, born in 1935, Svetlandia, born in 1936 and Charles, born in June, 1940. The latter child was born subsequent to Neunson's return to the United States. On December 28, 1948, Neunson married Anna Mae Edmonson with whom he presently resides in Camden. A son, John Carl Neunson, was born of this marriage in Philadelphia on May 12, 1950.4

[redacted] On October 23, 1957, he departed from the United States with his son, John Carl Nounson, for the purpose of visiting his wife and Russian-born children. Nounson returned to this country from Russia on April 10, 1958, after experiencing considerable difficulty in leaving the Soviet Union. The Department of State is in possession of considerable information concerning Nounson's activities while in the USSR in 1957 and 1958 [redacted] (S)

b7C per State

Per State letter 2/21/64

[redacted] Nounson's Russian wife and his Russian-born children are not believed to have ever entered the United States. Interviewed by Agents of our Philadelphia Office on April 16, 1958, following his return from Russia, Nounson expressed hatred for the present Russian Government and stated that he was convinced the Soviet regime presented a positive threat to the security of the entire free world. He claimed that he left the Soviet Union on a very unfriendly basis. We intend to interview Mrs. Ruth Paine and Marina Oswald concerning Walter Carl Nounson. The results of these interviews will be promptly furnished to you. (U)

The Mrs. Abraham Schoch referred to in Exhibit D-243 is believed to be identical with the person of same name who is mentioned in report in the Lee Harvey Oswald case of Special Agent Marion C. Street dated December 2, 1963, at Kansas City, Missouri. The Mrs. Maria Pulte who is referred to in Exhibit D-243 is also referred to on pages 1076 through 1078 in the report in the Assassination case of Special Agent Robert P. Gaudreau dated May 15, 1964, at Dallas, Texas. We do not contemplate further investigation in connection with the efforts of Mrs. Schoch and Mrs. Pulte to be of assistance to Marina Oswald. (U)

MEMO:

Per State Dept. letter 2/24/64

[redacted]sified "Confidential" as State Department has so classified facts concerning its dealings with Neunson in Moscow [redacted] (S)

In Exhibit D-248 Mrs. Paine wrote to Marina in Russian telling her that Walter Neunson of Camden, New Jersey, offered to be of assistance to Marina and invited her to live at his home. Paine wrote that Neunson told her Marina had met his son, Edward. This appears significant as Edward has never been out of the Soviet Union and we do not know how Neunson would know of his son's meeting with Marina. This is probably a figment of his imagination. Dallas has been instructed to reinterview Paine and Marina concerning Neunson and when results of interviews are in, we will decide whether or not to contact Neunson. (U)

Dear Mr. Rankin:

Pursuant to the conversation of Miss Jane Vida of your staff with Special Agent Robert E. Lenihan of this Bureau on September 22, 1964, there were delivered to the Commission on September 22, 1964, the following data:

(1) Two copies of amended page seven of the report of Special Agent James J. O'Connor dated April 21, 1964, at Miami, Florida, entitled "Lee Harvey Oswald, Aka, IS - Russia - Cuba." These amended pages are to replace the two copies of pages seven and eight of the report of Special Agent O'Connor dated April 21, 1964, which is in the possession of the Commission.

With the insertion of the amended pages, Special Agent O'Connor's report becomes unclassified.

This will confirm delivery of the aforementioned data to the Commission on September 22, 1964.

This discusses Commission request on 9-22-64 that we declassify a "Secret" 181-page summary memorandum dated 5-18-64 prepared in this case by our Legal Attache, Mexico City, and proposes because of possible international repercussions that we take this matter up with the Department of State.

At 1:05 p.m., 9-22-64, Mr. Malley received request from the office of W. David Slawson, staff member of the President's Commission, that we declassify our 181-page summary memorandum prepared in this case 5-18-64 by our Legal Attache, Mexico City. This memorandum which contains an elaborate Table of Contents and Index summarizes all of our investigation in Mexico through early May, 1964. In preparing the summary, Legal Attache classified it "Secret" in order to protect

MEMORANDUM FOR: The Honorable
John Edgar Hoover, Director
Federal Bureau of Investigation,
U. S. Department of Justice.

SUBJECT : LEE HARVEY OSWALD
INTERNAL SECURITY - RUSSIA - CUBA

I refer to your memorandum on the above subject dated September 23 and bearing the file number (S) 105-82555. The President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy asked that you declassify a memorandum of May 18, 1964, prepared by your Legal Attache in Mexico City on the Oswald case, to enable its inclusion in that portion of the Commission's report which will be released to the public. The Department's position on the desirability of your acceding to this request was telephoned on September 26 by H. Bartlett Wells of INR/DDC to Mr. John F. Wacks, who was then acting as duty officer for the Federal Bureau of Investigation. This memorandum will serve to confirm that conversation.

Mr. Wells said that the State Department considered that declassification of the May 18 report, in the manner and for the purposes described, would not be likely to cause subsequent harmful repercussions between the Governments of the United States and Mexico.

Thus if the Federal Bureau of Investigation sees fit to accede to the Commission's request of September 22, 1964, the Department of State will have no objection.

SUBJECT : Czechoslovak Press Comments on Warren Commission Report

REF :

Czechoslovak press coverage of the Warren Commission Report has been moderate to heavy. The general trend is critical disbelief with many of the Commission's findings. Why, asked Rude Pravo (September 28 and 29) were ten months required for issuance of the report when the investigations and the interrogations were completed and all was "clear" by the beginning of this year. It asserted that the testimony of witnesses was full of contradictions and that the Commission chose to publish only those portions of the testimony favorable to its conclusions.

Rude Pravo also queried the report's conclusions regarding the number of shots fired, the direction(s) from which fired, and the guilt of Oswald. It stated that the Commission's "proof" that Oswald was actually in the room from which the fatal shots were supposedly fired would not be upheld before any court in the world; that the Commission offered no word as to Oswald's motivation; and that the report contained no indication that he hated Kennedy or disagreed with his politics. The newspaper emphasized that Oswald confessed nothing despite a twelve-hour interrogation; that the interrogation by Captain Fritz of the Dallas Police Force was not recorded; and that members of the FBI and Secret Service were present only intermittently during the interrogation.

Rude Pravo also stated that there was no satisfactory explanation of why Officer Tibbits stopped Oswald on the street, or why he tried to draw his gun, since the contention that the description broadcast on the radio matched Oswald more than any other person in Dallas was "fantasy." The paper concluded that the report is insufficient to satisfy American and world opinion.

INITIAL WORLD PRESS REACTION TO THE

WARREN COMMISSION'S REPORT

SUMMARY

The Report of the President's Commission on the Assassination of President Kennedy received heavy and prominent news coverage in most countries. U.S. and foreign wire-service accounts were widely played and many papers ran extensive selections of the text.

Editorial comment on the Report has been extensive in Western Europe and in most of the Near East and South Asia. In Latin America, it has been moderate to heavy. In the Far East, comment has been light, and in Africa, sparse. As full texts of the Report circulate, as reactions are cross-played as news and as the Report continues to generate U.S. actions and discussion, foreign editorial attention continues.

Responses to the Commission's findings varied widely in the non-communist press. That Oswald acted alone was singled out by most news coverage and commentary as the Report's chief conclusion, but editors showed a wide range of difference in accepting or rejecting it.

In most countries of Western Europe,--notably Britain, Germany and the Scandinavian countries--most of the press endorsed the findings of the Commission and gave high praise to the thoroughness, integrity and objectivity of its members. In France especially, and to a slightly lesser extent in Belgium and Austria, critical questioning of the Report--ranging from skepticism to flat disbelief--outweighed favorable comment.

In Latin America, while the integrity of the Commission's members was rarely doubted and the painstaking thoroughness of the investigation was generally praised, reactions range from acceptance to rejection, with many uncertain that the report will satisfy the dubious. A prevalent theme was that "in the final analysis, history will have to give the definitive version of what happened in Dallas."

In the Near East and South Asia, only the Indian press largely accepted the view that Oswald and Ruby had acted alone. Belief in the existence of a conspiracy, however, continued to command widespread support in the Arab press and in Pakistan. Aegean-area papers generally accepted the Report as above suspicion, but expressions of doubt persisted.

In the Far East, comment runs the gamut from complete acceptance to an outright attack on the validity of the report. Commonwealth countries in the area call the report thorough and convincing, and hold that it should dispel existing allegations and doubts. In the Philippines and Japan, commendation of the Commission's work is coupled with doubt that it will put an end to questions about possible conspiracy and motivations, and some see popular legends emerging that are impervious to fact.

The available limited African comment has tended to accept the finding that Oswald was solely guilty, although Ghanaian media have been highly critical. In a number of African countries, broad news coverage gave prominence to foreign wire-service accounts reporting qualified acceptance or skeptical criticism elsewhere.

In other areas as well, cross-reporting of unfavorable comment has been frequent, citing especially the critical statements of Bertrand Russell, Thomas Buchanan and Mark Lane.

The Commission's criticisms of measures taken to protect the President were widely noted and discussed.

Some comment held that the Report did much to clear American society of charges of widespread lawlessness and violence, contending that the Commission's work not only showed the "advantages of democracy in the search for truth" but had also "destroyed the legend of an 'Evil' America." Other comment saw the tragedy in Dallas as reflecting an atmosphere of violence, political extremism and racial conflict: "When all the Commission's recommendations are adopted there will still remain the problem of too much extremism and too many guns."

A recurrent note in discussion of the Report was the expression of renewed sadness and regret for the loss of a man who had won world-wide admiration and respect.

(Accounts of area treatment and reaction, with a section summarizing Soviet Union and Eastern European propaganda treatment of the Report, follow.)

WESTERN EUROPE

The Warren Commission report was the top story in all West European papers. Its publication was greeted with banner headlines and a number of important papers devoted several pages on successive days to publishing its conclusions. Many papers supplemented their own initial views by quoting extensively the opinions of other European and American papers.

The communist and fellow-traveling press bluntly condemned the Report as a whitewash. Other European papers followed country rather than party lines in their assessment of it. In the majority of countries, the press welcomed the Report and endorsed its findings. This was not the case, however, in France, Belgium and Austria, where critical questioning outweighed favorable comment.

Many papers pointed to the high integrity of the Commission members and the painstaking thoroughness of their work to support their own endorsement of the Report. There is little evidence, however, that the Commission's findings have forced any real change of view among those papers where conspiracy theories initially found fertile ground. Both supporters and skeptics pointed to the difficulty for Europeans to accept the idea that the Kennedy assassination was committed by one deranged individual eager to make his mark in history.

The publication of the Report also led to new questions, particularly among those critical of its findings. Texas Governor Connally's disagreement with the Commission was widely noted. Some papers alleged that Robert Kennedy did not agree with the report and used this to buttress their own doubts. Others gave sensational coverage to what they called President Kennedy's premonition of assassination.

Many papers focused secondarily on the Commission's criticism of those charged with protecting the President and on the alleged unbelievable ineptness of the Dallas police. Virtually all welcomed the Commission's recommendations for the improvement of presidential security measures. A few papers held that the Report served to vindicate American society, but for a good number of others it was an additional reminder of the tendency to violence and extremism which they believe permeates the U.S.

Endorsement

In the majority of Western European countries, the press with a few significant exceptions endorsed the findings of the Warren Commission and gave high praise to the integrity and thoroughness of its members. Many felt that the Commission had more than adequately considered all possibilities and that its conclusions that Oswald and Ruby had each acted alone would be the definitive version of the Dallas tragedy.

In Britain, the influential London Times described the report as "thorough, painstaking, voluminous, frank and, above all else, scrupulously careful in its analysis and conclusions." The liberal Manchester Guardian believed that "only the most skeptical will continue to harbor doubts about the assassination in the face of this massive report. The event remains a ghastly tragedy, but no longer a mystery." These sentiments were widely echoed in other countries of Western Europe. Hamburg's influential Die Welt wrote: "There was no conspiracy, no plot of American extremists, no plan or participation of foreign powers ... At the same time, American society has been acquitted of the charge of being a playground of sinister underground forces. The integrity of the persons, both Democrats and Republicans, who tried to find the truth during these long months speaks for itself."

In the Scandinavian countries the majority of papers agreed that the conclusions of the report constituted the final answer to the riddle of Dallas. In Oslo, Norway's largest paper, the Aftenposten, spoke for much of Scandinavian press opinion in calling the report "convincing" and in concluding that it "will go down in history as the truth about the dramatic happenings in Dallas." In Italy, center and right-wing papers cited the work's independence and objectivity and stressed the Commission's finding that the assassination was a one-man job. Italy's Socialist Avanti was, however, more cautious, contending that the "presence of a third man cannot be categorically excluded." The Spanish press generally accepted the accuracy of the Commission's findings and held that the report cleared up most of the questions which had arisen. In Spain and Italy, however, there are indications that the general public remains more skeptical than the press comment would indicate.

There were only a few papers which openly admitted to changing their view as a result of the report. The most notable of these was the influential Neue Zuercher Zeitung, which now revised its initial comment that "until proof to the contrary is provided nobody can suppose that the murder of Oswald does not point to the existence of a widespread conspiracy." After publication of the Report the paper concluded that "there can be no doubt that proof to the contrary has (now) been provided."

Critical Questioning

Not all papers, however, endorsed the Commission's findings. Even in those countries where the Report found greatest favor some criticism was heard. Leeds' conservative Yorkshire Post found it curious that "very little attention seems to have been paid by the Commission to the possibility that Oswald was inspired by communism, not of the Russian but of the Chinese variety." The paper reasoned that Oswald's discontent and failure as a human being made him ideal material for Chinese utilization. In West Germany, the independent Muenchner Merkur held that the Commission "was unable to furnish conclusive evidence." It concluded that "for Washington, which hoped that the Commission would disperse all the clouds that have gathered over U.S. domestic policy after Dallas, this will be a disappointing result."

In France, Belgium and Austria criticism of the Commission's report and open disbelief of its findings considerably outweighed positive judgments. The skepticism in these countries was perhaps most neatly summed up by the pro-Gaullist Paris-Presse. It held that the report "will certainly convince the great mass of Americans. But the French say to themselves instinctively, 'We don't believe all that because it isn't believable!'"

The two leading Parisian papers -- elite-oriented Le Monde and rightist Le Figaro -- voiced the opinion of many lesser papers in challenging the validity of the Commission's conclusions. Le Figaro headlined: "Gaps, Contradictions and Statements Hard to Believe in the Warren Report." The paper's Washington correspondent quoted James Reston's article in the New York Times to buttress his own skepticism and strongly hinted that the Kennedy family was having a private investigation conducted. Robert Kennedy's alleged statement that he had not read the report was sometimes interpreted by critics as casting doubt on the work of the Commission. Paris-Presse even alleged that the former Attorney General had declared that Oswald "did not think of it (the assassination) by himself." Le Monde held that "an important fraction of the Old Continent's public opinion remains skeptical" about the report. The paper's Washington correspondent advised that "there must be no mistake about the truth which has been presented to us. It is a voluntarily limited truth." Conservative and frequently pro-American l'Aurore of Paris was virtually alone among the important French dailies in sustaining the findings of the Report. It believed that "the amateurs of mystery stories will be disappointed by the Warren report. The report is simple, clear, and precise, and its internal logic is prodigious: Lee Harvey Oswald is the sole and only culprit."

Press comments in Belgium and Austria were equally skeptical. Brussels' independent Le Soir doubted the Report's validity on the grounds that it could be either a calculated plan to mislead the American public or the result of naive investigation. The independent Lanterne of Brussels refused to believe that the crime was the work of a single unbalanced man and the Catholic conservative Metropole of Antwerp expressed interest in the "real motives" of Ruby and Oswald. Catholic Le Rappel of Charleroi was one of a number of papers which held that Kennedy had a "premonition" of his death. The paper rather enigmatically contended, therefore, that "the secret of the whole affair belongs to the victim and certainly not to his murderer." Vienna's right-center Volksblatt was typical of many Austrian papers in its open skepticism of the Report's findings. It concluded rather ominously that "it is definitely good for the world and for peace that the Warren Commission did not arrive at some other conclusion, or that it kept silent to spare the world the din of clashing arms."

Communist Treatment

Communist and fellow-traveling papers in Western Europe characterized the report as a whitewash of America's racists and reactionaries, whom they blame for the death of President Kennedy. Under the headline "Service to the Right," London's Daily Worker condemned the Commission's findings as "all very convenient for the American ruling class." In Paris, l'Humanite headlined "The Real Questions Remain Unanswered," and described the report as a "concealment." In Rome, the Communist Party's condemnation played skillfully on real and alleged statements of others. The Party's organ, L'Unita, held that "with the exception of those papers which had accepted the 'official version' from the beginning, reactions to the report vary from the implicit reservations of the (London) Times to the open criticism of Figaro (Paris), from the incredulity of Governor Connally to the rejection of the report by Buchanan and the harsh condemnation handed down by Bertrand Russell." Fellow-traveling Paese Sera advised that "James Reston's view that the report will probably fail to convince historians should be completely endorsed."

The American Temper

Many commentators hold that political extremism and racial conflict have created an atmosphere of violence and lawlessness in the U.S. which in turn made the Kennedy assassination possible. Others pointed to the existence of these conditions to explain why so much of West European opinion is skeptical of the Warren report. Financial Les Echos of Paris, for instance, contended that "the Dallas tragedy took on a suspicious tint because of the passionate climate created at the time by three fundamental elements: the controversial character of President Kennedy, the offensive... for racial equality, and the existence of a small group of extremists." The pro-Gaullist La Nation, also of Paris, speculated on the Commission's emphasis on the absence of a precise personal motive on the part of Oswald and asked if it "wanted to suggest that the isolated mad murderer was only the unconscious instrument of the hatred of the South for the anti-racist action of Kennedy." A number of papers pointed out that although Oswald may have acted alone, his "terrible deed nevertheless benefitted a powerful group of persons" (Vienna's pro-coalition Neues Oesterreich).

The London Times, along with many other papers, praised the Commission's emphasis on the need for tighter security protection, but added that "when all the Commission's recommendations ... are adopted there will still remain the problem of too much extremism and too many guns." In West Germany, where the Commission's conclusions regarding the failures of those charged with protecting the President were extensively highlighted, the pro-Socialist Neue Rhein Ruhr Zeitung held that the Warren report leaves behind "the bitter impression that this great tragedy with its tint of Wild West crime was only possible in Texas." By contrast, some papers felt that the report did much to exonerate American society. Reykjavik's Morgunbladid stated that "the Warren report will strengthen popular trust in the American government" and that the Commission's work shows once again "those advantages of democracy in the search for truth." Berlin's independent BZ held that the Warren report "has destroyed the legend of an 'Evil' America. That is its biggest accomplishment."

LATIN AMERICA

News coverage of the Warren Commission report has been widespread, while editorial comment has been moderate to heavy. Noncommunist comment varies from general acceptance of the Report, through speculation and doubt about certain aspects, to outright condemnation and rejection. Communist media comment is altogether negative as expected. Noncommunist editors rarely cast any doubt on the veracity of the Commission and generally praise the painstaking work of the investigation itself, but many do have real doubts that the Report itself is the definitive analysis of President Kennedy's assassination and the motives and events that led up to it. There are numerous references to Bertrand Russell's charges that the Commission had suppressed many facts and distorted the truth, and many Brazilian commentaries are based as much on European evaluations as on the Report itself. The most frequent theme is that many people still remain unconvinced by the Commission's findings and that history will have to provide the final clarification of the Kennedy assassination.

Favorable Comments

Bogotá (Colombia), Buenos Aires (Argentina), Lima (Peru) and Rio de Janeiro (Brazil) newspapers gave the release of the Warren Commission report heavy wire-service coverage. The headlines stressed the Commission's conclusion that Oswald had acted alone in the assassination of President Kennedy and that there was no discernible conspiracy, either domestic or foreign. In Trinidad, for example, the independent Guardian headlined "Oswald Acted Alone" and devoted an inside page to the story under the heading "Probers Spike Murder Myths."

Moderately liberal and very influential El Tiempo of Bogotá condemned all the "suppositions and the sensationalist accounts which had been fabricated about this tragic event in American history." The editorial called the Warren report "the reality of the drama," adding that it was patently "not interested in being another chapter in this novelesque series of hypotheses meant to attract people's curiosity rather than tell the true facts." If the crime in Dallas was shameful, the paper concludes, it is even more shameful "to give credence to what has been written about it and to censure a people who were the first victims of this ignominious incident."

Two signed editorial comments have appeared so far in the Chilean press. Raúl Silva Castro, writing for conservative El Mercurio, notes that the report blames "careless police protection and technical errors committed by different agencies" for the President's assassination and the "lamentable indolence" of the Dallas police in the case of Oswald's death. He also comments on the "astonishing declarations of Bertrand Russell" and the "gross epithets" which Russell used to refer to the members of the Warren Commission. He concludes that Oswald probably belonged to "that group of criminals who commit an act /of this kind/, without having any clear political ideology at all, moved by the megalomaniacal impulse to attract attention and find a place in history."

The story of the Warren report received front-page headline treatment in all Costa Rican newspapers and was given prime time on both radio and television. Starting on September 29, San José's leading independent newspaper, conservative La Nación, began serializing a 12,000-word summary of the Report. La Nación likewise editorialized on the "impressive precision and clarity with which the Warren report gets to the bottom of the facts" and concludes that the report "leaves no room for doubt." Also praising the report, leftist-liberal La República of San José says that "the seriousness of the report, the minute and extraordinary compilation of data and testimony ... must perforce dispel the dark, mysterious theories that have been elaborated around the brutal and unforgettable act." An editorial in conservative Diario de Costa Rica equally lauds the Report's thoroughness and completeness and declares that erroneous versions of the assassination which "until only a few hours ago were still being believed and circulated, in the European press especially, fall to the ground on the basis of this report." It concludes with the observation that the Report finally demolishes "a series of dangerous political distortions and protects the prestige of the American nation so harshly attacked by versions that were not always circulated without hidden purposes."

Lima's popular tabloid La Crónica praises the Warren report as a "model of seriousness and responsibility and well-founded investigatory technique." The editorial says that the findings establish that "President Kennedy was undoubtedly assassinated by Oswald, a psychopath confused by Marxism and inspired by hate for every manifestation of authority, who acted alone without advice or assistance." Moderately conservative Ultima

Hora of Lima likewise finds that "the laborious conscientiousness and objectivity of the investigation and the indisputable moral integrity of the members of the Commission help to dispel finally the speculation that had taken place concerning the facts and circumstances" of the Kennedy assassination.

Conservative (Blanco Party) El Plata of Montevideo (Uruguay) gave a qualified editorial approval of the Warren report: "The conclusions of the Warren Commission establish the guilt of Lee Harvey Oswald beyond all doubt ... The report ... carries conviction." But, it adds: "It is possible that the conclusions of the report may be totally or partially questioned ... It is legitimate to suppose that, in the final analysis, history will have to give the definitive version of what happened in Dallas at midday of November 22, 1963."

The English-language Daily Journal of Caracas (Venezuela) likewise says: "We believe the report will persuade most Americans that there was no plot and that the murder was the isolated job of a demented or twisted person, but it will probably not convince Europeans, to judge by initial reactions." In conclusion, the editorial advises its readers "to accept the Warren report. Despite what some people call unanswered questions, it has far more substance than the speculations designed to belittle it."

In Jamaica, The Daily Gleaner (independent) carried the full text of Chapter One of the Warren report on two days (September 28 and 29), devoting a total of 21 columns to it. Editorially, it said that "those who doubt that Oswald acted alone will never be completely satisfied" and "its conclusions will continue to be questioned by those who will always be skeptical, but until, if ever, a scrap of evidence is unearthed to show that these conclusions are wrong, the report must be accepted as factual and complete."

Critical Reactions

Following the initial wide news coverage of the Report's release, the Rio press concentrated on the worldwide reactions to the Warren Commission's findings. While many papers quote Robert Kennedy's statement that he is satisfied with the report, the overriding impression created is that world opinion remains divided. For example, nearly all papers quote Bertrand Russell and many draw heavily on numerous sensational French reports, and both nationalist Jornal do Brasil and leftist-nationalist-oriented Correio da Manha headline Robert Kennedy's satisfaction with the report and continuing European skepticism. Even a reasoned argument written for conservative O Jornal by columnist Barreto Leite Filho, after stressing the impeccable work of the Commission and its members, concludes that only history will be able to render the final verdict. Correio refers to doubts raised by such people as Mark Lane, writing for Paris' L'Express, and Thomas Buchanan, in his book "Kennedy's Assassins." It says that although "one cannot question the legitimacy of the investigation ... the final word belongs to history." The Warren report, it continues, "is condemned by a large part of the U.S. and international press, as incomplete, ambiguous, and doubtful." Similarly, highly-conservative Jornal do Comércio reports that while half the European press accepts the Report's findings, the other half speculates "according to their respective political orientations."

A shrug of the shoulders and the opinion that "we'll probably really never know" seems to express the feeling of the editorials that have appeared so far in Mexico City. Moderately-conservative Excelsior says: "The Warren report is very probably correct, in spite of the disquieting fact that a Russian (sic) benefactress found Oswald the job that he used for the assassination ... It may also be, as many are saying, that the truth will never be known. But one thing we know for sure: the events of November 22, 1963 in Dallas will continue to be discussed for a century." The paper also criticizes the Dallas police and concludes that "doubts and shadows probably persist. Perhaps the truth will never be known." Conservative El Universal Gráfico commends the report, but notes that doubts are still held by some people. Independent nationalist La Prensa carries a cartoon depicting the Warren Commission in a surrealist painting with the question: "And this is to clear up the doubts?"

El Comercio, the conservative dean of the Peruvian press, says that the report has "truly disconcerted the world -- and something more than half the world shares the doubt and rejection of the worthy old pacificist /Russell/.... The suspicion remains that beyond Oswald the assassination of Kennedy was elaborated to eliminate his well-intentioned decisions from the scene."

The Panamanian press gave heavy wire-service coverage to the report of the Warren Commission. An editorial in conservative La Estrella de Panamá predicts that "millions of persons within and outside of the United States ... will be disappointed" because they were expecting the report to contain some startling new revelations. Although it concedes that "it is possible, of course, that Oswald may have committed the crime by his own exclusive determination, as reflected by his strange personality full of frustrations, and it is also possible that Ruby, inflamed with indignation at President Kennedy's death, may have decided to punish the killer with his own hand. But nobody can deny that all this is very strange, especially the latter." The editorial concludes that the report, even though it "ends the official investigation;" lacks satisfactory explanations and invites further "speculations and conjectures" for a long time to come.

The far-rightist Prensa Libre of Santo Domingo labels the Warren report "a masterpiece of confusion and ambiguities," and sees the Communists "wringing their hands with joy ... Now the Communists can wash their hands ... as Pilate did 2,000 years ago."

Cuban and Other Communist Judgments

Cuban media stressed that the Warren Committee report does not close the "shameful page on the unpunished crime against the President." They insist that Oswald was a tool of rightist groups -- "headed by Texas reactionary leaders" -- who plotted President Kennedy's death. They continue to express suspicion of the Report's completeness and accuracy. An El Mundo editorial says the Report "does not explain anything in a satisfactory manner. It speaks of "secret documents" not included in the Report and concludes that their omission justifies the suspicion that the "truth" is being suppressed.

A Havana TV broadcast declares that the report leaves "thousands of questions unanswered." Radio Havana to Latin America states that Oswald's mother described the Report as "ridiculous." A broadcast to Europe says the Report "is going to be the basis for questions from now on." It asserts that if Oswald wasn't actually in the employ of rightists, he was so affected by their anti-Kennedy propaganda that he committed the murder. The comment belittles Oswald's connection with communism, and one broadcast declares: "If Oswald was committed to Marxism, then that fact alone would make him opposed to political assassination." Only the CIA and the FBI encourage political murder, the comment concludes. Radio Havana to Latin America insists that the Warren Commission report affirms "against all evidence" that Oswald acted alone.

The most violent Cuban comment was a report of the statement by Bertrand Russell, President of the "Who Murdered Kennedy Committee." According to Radio Progreso, Russell said the Warren Commission report is "lamentably incomplete and covers its authors with infamy." He reportedly said that the "three official versions" of the assassination contain omissions, lies and distortions.

Trinidad's socialist-oriented Mirror ignores the report. Several Peruvian papers, where the Warren report shared the front page with de Gaulle, carry an Agence France Presse item reporting the Russell charges.

Pro-Castro El Diario de México says that the Commission has handed down a report which "has one single virtue: it satisfies nobody. Nevertheless, let us be serene and trust the investigators. Perhaps it is better thus."

Roberto Landaeta, of the Chilean Communist Party organ El Siglo, renders the judgment that "the entire report of the Warren Commission is invalidated and without political, social, or moral basis when it admits: 'Because of the difficulty of proving negative facts to achieve certainty, the possibility that there were others implicated ... cannot be established categorically.'" He goes on to say that "it is irritating the way the famous Commission worries about all the 'no's' to avoid having to express itself on the 'yeses,' that is, on the true proofs ... The Commission leaves the question open."

FAR EAST

Heavy news coverage but light editorial comment marked the Far Eastern press response to the Warren Commission Report. Comment ran the gamut from complete acceptance to an outright attack on the validity of the Report. Editorial comment from the British Commonwealth countries in the area viewed the Report as thorough and convincing and believed it should dispel existing rumors, allegations and doubts. Editorial comment from the Philippines, however, was dubious that the Report would be convincing to all and felt that many of the rumors and allegations had already become so firmly established as legends that they would survive despite the Report's contrary findings. Japanese editorial comment, while voicing acceptance of the Report, was also skeptical that its explanations were sufficiently complete to destroy existing doubts on the vital questions of "conspiracy" and "motivation". The only critical comment appeared in the Cambodian paper La Depeche.

Although there has been considerable straight news coverage of the Warren report in the Far East press, comment has been light. The editorials and special columns that have appeared to date range from complete acceptance to skepticism to outright attack (in one instance).

The British Commonwealth countries praise the thoroughness of the report and find it convincing. For example, an editorial in Kuala Lumpur's Straits Times entitled "Simple Truth" says in part: "All except morbid-minded and right-wing and left-wing fanatics, who believe what they want to believe, will be satisfied by the Warren Commission's report on the assassination of President Kennedy ... Absolute negatives are difficult to prove, but most exhaustive investigation has failed to disclose any trace of evidence of conspiracy, any indication that foreign agents or subversive organizations participated in either crime."

New Zealand's Dominion Wellington similarly comments: "Though the report of the Warren Commission ... will have occasioned no surprise to most people, it should dispose once and for all of the rumors and allegations that gained currency in the wake of that horrendous tragedy."

Hong Kong's South China Post also expresses confidence in the soundness of the report: "The mystery, the doubts, and the dark speculations that have appeared in print were systematically considered and rejected. For clearing away the fog of /rumor/, likewise for its sense of detachment and its strict adherence to facts, the report indicates that a tedious, exhausting job has been thoroughly and expertly undertaken. No less important are the frank criticisms of various law enforcement departments (including the circumstances surrounding the shooting by Jack Ruby) and these will now be -- if they have not already been -- the subject of strict examination by the agencies concerned."

From Australia, the report receives commendation in several newspapers. The Melbourne Age says: "There can be no question of the authority or integrity of the Commission appointed by President Johnson or of the massive labors which it undertook." The Sydney Daily Mirror expresses equal confidence: "The findings of the Warren Commission's inquiry are comprehensive and convincing and will be accepted by sensible people. The report will surely end the wild speculations of international and domestic plots circulating since the President's death." More praise is voiced in the Sydney Herald: "The report's cogent analysis of verified facts demonstrates beyond rational doubt that one unhappy, violent man alone planned and carried out this appalling crime." And the Melbourne Herald adds this to Australia's commendation: "The report is critical of security measures and makes some detailed recommendations for matching safeguards to the disturbingly high risks around the American presidency. To the outside world, which shared the distress of the American people in the Kennedy tragedy, dispelling of rumors of sinister intrigue is one of the positive values of the Warren report."

Press comment from Japan and the Philippines express skepticism. Tokyo's Sankei is willing to accept the Warren Commission's opinion that the assassination was an individual act and not the result of a conspiracy. The editorial notes, however, that doubts will remain in many minds; and it is plain that these will include Japanese minds. Sankei thinks that the question of conspiracy is crucial, because if there should be proof of conspiracy this might constitute a threat to American democratic institutions and even to world peace: "We will believe the Warren report in its full context, but cannot help but tremble to hear that such a person (Oswald) existed and that a president has been assassinated by such a person.... If he had acted in conspiracy with either the right or the left, or with any foreign elements or any other organization ... the incident would have grave consequences on the democratic order of the United States and the peace of the whole world." Similarly, in a commentary in the Mainichi, writer Yorichika Arima expresses the opinion that doubts about the assassination remain and that the Warren report does not analyze sufficiently the motive behind the crime. Mild Japanese radio commentary also worries about the motivation and remarks on continuing skepticism in Europe. The English-language Japan Times is an exception to the general tone of the press. Its comment is, as usual, reasonable and objective and inclined to accept the Warren Commission's conclusions. However, the paper cannot be considered representative of Japanese public opinion or widely influential in forming it.

The Manila Times also expresses doubts. An editorial, entitled "Why the Warren Report Will Never Be Final," says that the Report ought to silence all doubts about conspiracy but will not. The writer bases his conclusion upon the argument that the initial confusion in the first Dallas police reports created suspicion which cannot be silenced by any amount of logic and investigation, now that the tragedy has become legend: "The Warren report ... should dispel all doubt that the killer (Oswald), like his own assassin (Ruby) later, was not acting for a group of conspirators. But it doesn't actually. Like other tragic events in history in which the protagonists left no written record, this one is bound to remain a mystery to later generations ... The Kennedy assassination was such an event. It was not the skeptics who created the mystery but the confusion which attended the first reports from the Dallas police ... Ironically enough, the more complete the report became, the more it was likely to make many observers in other countries doubt its conclusions. To them, so much effort is suspect ... Even supposing that the present generation will eventually come to accept the Warren report as conclusive, the 'mystery' is certain to be revived by posterity ... This is no longer a case of truth or error. Within a relatively short time, it has acquired the nature of legend."

Cambodia's leftist La Depeche attacks the Report. The daily says in part: "We know we have been deceived ... This report poses more problems than it resolves ... The ... report gives ... the impression that, less than a mission of truth, it was a mission of social conformism in the service of the Government ... What disturbs us the most is that the report adapts itself too well to the wishes of the rich and contented and magnificently serves their interests."

NEAR EAST AND SOUTH ASIA

The Warren Commission report received extensive coverage throughout most of the Near East and South Asia. The Indian and a large segment of the Arab press also provided voluminous comment. In the UAR, however, editorials appeared only in sensationalist al-Gumhuriya. Most of the area's press considered the the Report's major findings to be that Oswald had acted alone and that the security forces in the United States had been grossly lax and culpable. Widespread skepticism was expressed, however, about the finding that there had been no conspiracy -- a skepticism that was especially prevalent in the Arab and non-Arab Middle East and in Pakistan. And only in India did a large segment of the press accept the theory that Oswald and Ruby had each acted alone. Most commentators felt that a mystery still remained -- one that would probably never be resolved.

Coverage And Stress

The Warren Commission report received extensive coverage and voluminous comment in the Indian press. Several Indian papers considered one of its major findings to be the characterization of the assasination as "a senseless, irrational act." As Bombay's Indian Express put it: "One of the more satisfactory findings of the Commission is the 'exoneration' of the Soviet Union and of other countries from suspicion of complicity."

Extensive press coverage and comment were given to the Report in Israel and in all Arab countries, with the exception of Cairo, where only al-Gumhuriya editorialized on the subject. The rest of the Cairo press limited itself to straight reporting without comment. The Baghdad press, with the exception of al-Manar, reported it straight, but gave extensive coverage to adverse reaction to it in various parts of the world.

Excluding Beirut's usually pro-UAR ash-Sharq and independent al-Hayat, the Lebanese Arab-language press generally rejected the findings of the Commission, particularly its conclusion that Oswald had acted alone. The Israeli press, with the exception of the Communist Kol-Shay, accepted the Report and limited editorial comments to the failure of the American security organizations to protect the late President.

The Report was given top headline coverage in the Greek and Turkish press. Its major findings were also given prominent coverage in the Cypriot press, despite its preoccupation with the Cyprus-Turkey crisis. Editorial comment, surprisingly, was extremely limited in the Greek and Turkish papers and completely absent from the Cypriot press, although considerable editorializing through headlines was evident in all three countries. And in Turkey, three major Istanbul papers with national circulations and an Ankara paper all serialized a 12,000 word textual summary of the Report.

There was extensive news and headline coverage of the Report's release and some editorial reaction to its findings in the press of Iran and Pakistan but not in that of Karachi. Papers in all three countries played up Lord Russell's critical comments and charges. Iranian and Pak papers pointed up as major findings of the Report the conclusion that Oswald had acted alone and the failure of the U.S. Secret Service, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Dallas police to perform their respective duties. In the Aegean area, all papers similarly highlighted the Commission's major findings that Oswald and Ruby had acted alone, that the two men had not known each other, that Oswald had also murdered a Dallas policeman (Tippit), and that there was no evidence of either a domestic or foreign conspiracy.

Predictability

Few if any papers in India found any surprises in the Commission's findings. There were "no dramatic revelations" in the Report, wrote the Economic Times of Bombay, and The Statesman of Calcutta said that it "follows the entirely obvious and unsensational lines generally expected." In Dacca, Pakistan, English-language Morning News declared that the Report's findings were "not unexpected," though "disappointing." Another paper in Dacca, the Urdu-language Pasban, however was surprised. "For us," it said, "it is a great surprise that President Kennedy was not assassinated in a conspiracy, but that his murder was the result of an individual's action who believed in Marxism." No Arab papers expressed surprise at the findings.

Credibility

In India, Chief Justice Warren was praised as "a man of known integrity and incidentally a Republican," as The Statesman put it. "President Johnson could not have constituted a more thoroughgoing and impartial investigation," the National Herald of Lucknow opined. The Report was termed "a valuable justicial document" by Calcutta's Amrita Bazar Patrike, and Bombay's Economic Times concluded that it "should set at rest all suspicion."

The Arab press rejected the Report either directly or indirectly by emphasizing world press comment hostile to it. The latter approach was particularly evident in the Baghdad press where al-Manar headlined: "Europe Rejects Warrent Report." Beirut's usually pro-UAR ash-Sharq was alone in praising the character of the Commission's members. On the other hand, Beirut's pro-Baathist al-Ahrar suggested that the Commission's members were hostile to the late President and belonged to a "capitalist reactionary class in the U.S." President Kennedy "was killed twice, once at the hands of criminals and again at the hands of justice," wrote Beirut's leftist ash-Shaab.

The simultaneous play of Lord Russell's critical comments about the Warren Commission Report in the press of Iran and Pakistan naturally raised doubts about the Report's credibility. And in Dacca, the Begali-language Ittefaq said: "It will be folly to expect that this (report) will settle questions that arose in the minds of many regarding the mysterious side of the murder. It can not erase very soon from the minds of the people that many definite questions that newsman Buchanan as an eye-witness raised in his book, particularly regarding the role of the Dallas police and the activities of the numerous oil companies of Texas." Partially offsetting this doubt in Iran, however, was Radio Iran's news coverage, which featured British press reactions that the Report was just, objective and satisfactory.

Aegean area papers generally accepted the Report as a bona fide and nonsuspect effort of the U.S. Government to get at the bottom of the assassination, but a number of papers used headline question marks which had the effect of supporting the persistent doubts that all had been revealed about the Dallas shootings. For example, the widely-read pro-Government To Vima of Athens headline read: "888 Pages or 300,000 Words -- The Relentless Question Remains ... The Warren Report: Does it Substantiate the Truth About Kennedy's Assassination?"

The widespread second-day publication of "world reactions," featuring statements by proponents of the "conspiracy school," such as Bertrand Russell, lent further support to the doubters. Robert Kennedy's statement that he did not intend to read the Report was presented by some papers in such a way as to suggest that this was because he had no confidence in its findings. Other papers, by contrast, gave prominence to the former Attorney General's endorsement of the Warren Commission report. Ethnos of Athens, for example, headlined: "Kennedy's Assassination Was Not Due to Conspiracy -- Robert Kennedy Too Agrees with Warren Commission Conclusions."

Extreme-leftist Domokratiki Allaghi (Athens) was the only paper to carry a frankly hostile comment. Its editorial, entitled "The Perfect Crime," sarcastically concluded that the Warren Commission's "great pains ... have led to this triumph of justice. All we need now is to have Goldwater win the elections."

Completeness

Because evidence was lacking to determine Oswald's motives, the consensus of the Indian press was that although "the case is closed, the mystery (remains) at least partly unresolved" (Hindusthan Standard, Calcutta). "None of the reasons attributed to Oswald's action," wrote Calcutta's Urdu Rozana Hind, "seems strong enough to motivate him for such an extreme action ... Not even a child can believe that the poisonous atmosphere on the racial issue had nothing to do with the event ... We do not believe that Kennedy assassination was the result of only one man's enmity against him." Other Indian papers, however, felt that "the Warren Commission's report should put an end to the thrillers, based on surmises, which imitation Ian Flemings have been bringing out" (National Herald, Lucknow). And the Hindustan Times of New Delhi said that "it is unlikely that the future will throw up evidence of some dark plot."

Only the two Lebanese papers ash-Sharq and al-Hayat, and the Israeli press, were prepared to let the Report write an end to the tragedy. The remaining dailies preferred various forms of the conspiracy theory.

Practically all accounts in the Aegean area touched on the extensiveness of the Commission's investigation and the resultant report, noting that the Commission had examined 552 witnesses and studied 30,000 pages of documents before reaching its conclusions. The fact that the Report contained 888 pages and 300,000 words was also much publicized. However, some papers indicated doubts that the Report, which "officially closed the door" on the Kenndy assassination and the sordid Ruby sequel, would satisfy many people. The Athenian newspaper Imera, in a front-page column, asked rhetorically: "Will the Warren Report satisfy the U.S. and the world public in general after its utterly simple presentation of matters? Who knows whether the Report -- categorically closing the door of suspicion -- will not be a great disappointment for the masses? ... The Report confines the whole case to only a shadow individual who, appearing as an anarchist, loses his materiality."

Radio Iran featured British press reaction, which characterized the Report as satisfactory. In Lahore, the Pakistan Times said editorially: "Publication of the Report should ... be followed by thorough administrative investigation into the behavior of the Secret Service and the Dallas police. Those found guilty of permitting Oswald to be silenced should be punished. After all, it was Oswald alone who could have said why and how President Kennedy was killed. Doubts expressed by Lord Russell and shared by many that much is still being hidden from the public ought to be allayed."

The Conspiracy Theory

The fact that the Report had scotched the "conspiracy" theories was labeled as one of its major contributions by a large segment of the Indian press. The prevailing friendly relations between the United States and the Soviet Union and the good personal relations between President Kennedy and Premier Khrushchev were considered sufficient by the National Herald of Lucknow to render a Soviet conspiracy unfeasible. "It was necessary for the American people to grapple with the theory of conspiracy, and the rest of the world will be as relieved as the United States that ... Oswald acted alone." Calcutta's Statesman accused Earl Russell of not having read the Report, or else he could not conceivably have made his derogatory comments.

Cairo's al Goumhouria intimated that internal politics were in some way involved in the assassination. The Report, said the paper, did not take into consideration the existence of "extremist reactionary trends, fascist terrorist gangs and greedy monopolies." The paper also noted that "oil magnates in Texas" were not in agreement with President Kennedy's policies.

The Communist Israeli daily Kal Haam rejected the Report, but did not elaborate. Baghdad's alThawra al-Arabiya contended that a Zionist plot had led to the Kennedy assassination. "The whole world which followed the crime from the beginning and which knows the extent of Zionist infiltration and aggression against liberties is still awaiting the truth which the Report did not reveal and which perhaps history will reveal in the future," the paper wrote. The Damascus daily Ba'th raised the possibility that the Warren Commission had suppressed the truth because it feared reprisal from unidentified criminal gangs. Both Ba'th and al-Thawrah of Damascus gave heavy coverage to foreign comment casting doubt on the findings. Equally vague conspiracy charges were made by the pro-UAR Beirut daily al-Anwar which referred to racial discrimination and arms dealers. "The sheer notion on the part of American officials to believe the Warren Report is a greater scandal yet," the paper asserted.

Despite their widespread publication of world-wide reactions in which continuing doubts and speculations about a conspiracy were played up, most papers seemed prepared to accept the Commission's finding that there had been no conspiracy. Imera (Athens), commenting on the Commission's findings, said: "In all this tragic case of Kennedy, the essence is that behind the anarchist and insane man (Oswald) were no dark and logical forces premeditatively pushing to war." The Athens Daily Post similarly said: "The Report stresses that the assassin, Lee Oswald, acted on his own and that no one was behind the insane hand that interrupted John F. Kennedy's life. This is a relief for U.S. public opinion and, indeed, for world opinion."

Although no papers in Iran or Pakistan came right out and said that President Kennedy was "really" murdered as the result of a conspiracy, the idea was suggested in both countries by the press' simultaneous playing up of critical comments by Lord Russell, General Walker and the Soviet Union.

Lahore's Pakistan Times, for instance, declared: "The tragic events had given rise to a widespread belief that the murders were part of a conspiracy variously described as being instigated by Communists or Southern reactionaries. The Warren Commission's report would seem to set these doubts at rest."

Culpabilities

The "frightening degree of incompetency by the various authorities responsible for the President's safety" (The Statesman, Calcutta) was mentioned in various forms by most Indian papers. The Secret Service, the FBI and the Dallas police have been "rightly censured," said Calcutta's Hindustan Standard, which echoed the opinion of other papers, the majority of which tended to put the major blame on the Dallas police. The Times of India, however, blamed "the ease with which a man in the U.S. can obtain fire arms" and the general atmosphere of hate. The Report "cannot possibly still the feeling that the assassination of President Kennedy could take place only in the atmosphere of hate and violence that then prevailed in the U.S.A. In a deep moral sense, racialism and extremism were accessories to Oswald's crime," it wrote.

Imera Athens declared that Oswald's ideal, "anarchy, which is an abstraction," was the real culprit. For this reason, it suggested, many people will be reminded of the political assassination at Sarajevo which started World War I when they recall the senseless crime in Dallas.

Lessons

The lesson of the Report is the need for "everlasting vigilance," several Indian papers concluded, and added, "it is hoped that not only America but also other nations will take lessons from this incident" (Patna's Pradip). 'Democracy is no protection against assassination," said Calcutta's Amrita Bazar Patrika. "Protection should be given by the police whose job it is."

The Israeli press was alone in the Near East in commenting on the lessons to be gained from the assassination. "How Not to Protect a President," headlined the independent Yediot Aharanot. Both the liberal Haboker and the pro-government Jerusalem Post gave extensive coverage and comment to the Report's criticism of American security organizations.

In Dacca, English-language Morning News commented that, despite the Warren Report, President Kennedy's assassination will "continue to weigh on the national conscience of Americans." In Tehran, Ettelaat ran a banner headline which said: "Committee Established to Protect Johnson as Part of Recommendations by Warren Commission to Step up Precautionary Measures for Protection of President."

The sad comment that no investigation -- however meticulous, thorough, and praiseworthy -- can alter the fact that the life of the world-admired young President was snuffed out by an assassin's bullet was a constantly recurring theme. Athens Daily Post said, for example, that the world will welcome the finding of no conspiracy: "However, the fact remains that a great President of the United States, whose courage and wisdom had been tested successfully on many occasions, lost his life. This is something that no report can change in the hearts and minds of all." The Turkish newspaper, Demokrat Izmir, likewise added: "Thus, the investigation of the abhorred assassination of one of the most-beloved Presidents of the U.S. is 'officially' closed. It remains to be seen whether the Warren Commission Report will satisfy those millions who have carried armfuls of flowers to the humble graveyard for the last ten months. And the main verdict will be given by history which will be read in the future by our children and grandchildren."

AFRICA

With the exception of Ghanaian comment, which termed the Warren Commission report "shocking" for its alleged intention to "suppress the facts," scattered African media comment on the report has tended to accept its basic finding of Oswald's sole guilt. On the other hand, broad news coverage in a number of areas has included foreign wire service accounts expressing qualified acceptance or skepticism, particularly crossplays of criticism by Messrs. Buchanan and Lane and the reprinting of a Komsomolskaya Pravda editorial in two Tunisian dailies directly charging that the assassination resulted from a reactionary-led conspiracy. Textual materials on the Warren report and Robert Kennedy's widely-publicized approval of the report have tended to balance, if not offset, the inimical coverage. Ethiopian and Ghanaian comment, in particular, regretted the lack of adequate security precautions for President Kennedy's safety.

Unqualified Acceptance

Newspapers in Ethiopia, Kenya and South Africa have accepted the Warren Commission's findings at face value and one paper in the Sudan reported the findings in an editorial regretting the loss of President Kennedy "for America and the entire world." South Africa's liberal Rand Daily Mail declared that "all rumors that have circulated about the assassination ... are demolished by the report...." Likewise, Kenya's Daily Nation announced that "the report will thus dispel many rumors which have cropped up since the assassination. By recording the known facts as faithfully as possible," the Nation concluded, "the Warren Commission has once and for all silenced all these rumors." The official Ethiopian Herald repeated this theme, but less emphatically, noting that "among the criticisms made against the ... report is the charge that a number of questions have either been avoided or evasively treated." The Herald added, however, that until the critics specify the "questions" and provide supporting evidence "the Warren report is definitive."

Press headlines in some countries also indicated unqualified acceptance of the Warren report. The Tanganyika Standard headline ran: "Oswald is Naked, He Killed Kennedy -- Official." The ruling party organ in Tanganyika, The Nationalist, headlined its lead article: "Warren Report -- Oswald Shot Three Rounds." Tunisia's La Presse headline ran: "Robert Kennedy -- Oswald Alone Killed Kennedy."

Ghanaian and Other Skeptics

In an editorial titled "Shocking Report," Ghana's government-controlled Daily Graphic said the shock the world had sustained from the Kennedy assassination was "nothing compared to the blood-chilling report" of the Warren Commission. The Graphic editorialist supported Bertrand Russell's reported contention that the Commission was constituted to suppress the facts and observed, "true ... no foreign nation (was) involved ... but is it also true that the hands of the imperialists and neocolonialist hounds who were opposed to Kennedy's peaceful policies are also clean?" News coverage in the official Ghanaian Times cited the Russell statement plus skeptical editorial comment from Denmark and Italy under the headline: "Kennedy Death -- Warren Report Hides Facts." Without commenting directly on the report, a Radio Accra commentary mentioned the Commission's findings and strongly praised President Kennedy's courage and policies.

In some cases, news-coverage headlines suggested mixed reactions to the report. The Moroccan Istiqlal opposition organ Al-Alam headlined: "World Reaction to Warren Report ... Moscow -- Report Did Not Eliminate All Doubts ... World Reaction Ranges From 'High Praise' to 'Not Complete Enough'." Tunisia's semi-independent daily, Le Petit Matin, carried the following: "The Author of Who Killed Kennedy: Did Oswald Have Relations With U.S. Intelligence Agencies?"

News coverage in a few other countries has also tended to be skeptical. Comments critical of the Warren report by Thomas Buchanan, author of the book Who Killed Kennedy?, and Mark Lane, lawyer for Oswald's mother, were carried by several papers in Ivory Coast, Morocco and Tunisia. Two papers in Tunisia, the official Al-Amal and independent Al-Sabah, reprinted a Soviet Komsomolskaya Pravda editorial released before the Warren report which claimed "the report will lay the responsibility on Oswald, but world opinion is sure that Kennedy's assassination was the result of a conspiracy arranged by reactionary forces in the U.S." Tunisia's independent La Presse carried a front-page commentary by a Paris correspondent critical of speculation and rumors on the assassination but which sardonically accepted the Warren Commission's findings. Textual news stories and Robert Kennedy's approval statement of the Warren report appeared in the same papers printing the above coverage and tended to balance it.

Awareness of Security Problem

The Ethiopian Herald and Radio Accra were the only media to comment on the lack of adequate security precautions for the late President's protection, although this subject was well-covered in straight news stories. The Herald quoted the Warren report to the effect that "security measures had been lax and inefficient," and noted that President Johnson had undertaken "in earnest" to carry out the Commission's security recommendations. It added, however, that "as long as there are people in America who are as fanatical as Oswald, no U.S. president could be guaranteed absolute protection." Radio Accra added that President Kennedy's death was "a bitter tragedy because he was entitled to the best means of protection."

SOVIET UNION AND EASTERN EUROPE

Soviet and East European media gave wide publicity to the Warren Report but questioned its validity, suggesting that the Commission has failed to reveal the truth. Some reports tried to link the Report with the election campaign. All agreed that "not everything concealed has been revealed." Yugoslav reaction to the Report was generally milder than Soviet or other East European comment. This Soviet and East European reaction to the Warren Report was neither unexpected nor unusual in view of the allegations and innuendos circulated by Communist media since November 1963.

Soviet Union

Soviet media reacted quickly to the Warren Report. On the day that the Report was released, Komsomolskaya Pravda "cited facts" indicating that the assassination of President Kennedy "was a result of a conspiracy by the most reactionary forces of the U.S." The Soviet youth paper also implied that "the oil business had played a fatal part" in the crime. Later the same day, TASS summarized the Commission's finding. Noting the Report's finding that Oswald had acted alone, TASS asserted that "not everything concealed has been revealed." TASS also stressed the absence of evidence that "Oswald's contacts with the Communists had any connection with the subsequent assassination of the President."

On the following day (September 28) Pravda carried the TASS story under the title: "The Warren Commission On The Crime in Dallas--Report Published, Doubts Remain, Notes The American Press." In its summary, Radio Moscow claimed that "the long report has not dispersed doubts about the Dallas crime." Echoing the same propaganda theme, another Radio Moscow commentary asserted that "mistrust in the official version of the Kennedy assasination is mounting both in the U.S. and in Western Europe."

Eastern Europe

East European media also shared Moscow's doubts about the Warren Report. Radio Prague declared that the Report "supports the official version" and "throws no new light on the suspicious circumstances of the assassination." According to the Czechoslovak broadcast, "the most important factor challenging the reliability of the Report is the complete inability of the Commission to find any motive for Oswald's alleged crime."

Bulgarian commentators for Trud and Radio Sofia also asserted that the Warren Commission had failed to "unmask the real perpetrators" of President Kennedy's assassination. According to these accounts, the Report is "a clumsy attempt" to "conceal the truth." In an effort to link the Report with the election campaign, Trud maintained that the Commission's alleged attempt to conceal the truth when "the madmen" in the U.S. "are making an open bid for power" gives cause for "peace-loving peoples to intensify their vigilance."

Yugoslavia

Yugoslav reaction to the Report was mixed. Borba said that the Report "has cleared up many uncertainties which were the source of doubt, disbelief, and rumors" and has destroyed "once and for all the suspicion that the Soviet Union was somehow behind Oswald's act." On the other hand, Politika claimed that the Warren Commission Report did not answer the crucial question: "Why did Lee Oswald commit the crime?" Without questioning the integrity of Chief Justice Warren, the paper said that "there have been cases in history, like the Dreyfus affair, when the truth has been withheld because the ruling authorities feared that the public might lose confidence in them." Both papers noted that the American public had received the Report with confidence and that world reaction was on the whole favorable.

SMALLER THAN LIFE SHOOTING

Mr. Des McDonnell, a forestry engineer, of Iona Drive, North Circular Road, Limerick, whose theory on the Kennedy assassination was discussed during the R.T.E. programme, "Rush to Judgment," last night, said this morning, that he first became interested in the Warren Commission report following a series of newspaper articles.

He read every available book on the assassination and finally decided that the Warren Commission findings stood or fell on two points.

The first was whether the rifle held by Oswald could be fired accurately three times in 5.6 seconds or less; and secondly, whether the F.B.I. report of the autopsy was in conflict with the single assassin theory.

Des McDonnell

Same action

He decided to test the gun theory himself. He secured a bolt action .22 rifle of Czechoslovakian make with a magazine and a telescopic sight. The bolt action was the same as the gun used by Oswald.

He took the gun to a forest near Murroe, together with a local forester, Jack O'Hara. They could not secure a suitable height of 60 feet, so the distances heights and target mentioned in the Warren report were scaled down to one-third the size.

The result of a pattern of nine shots showed that the rifle tested could be fired accurately three times in less than 5.6 seconds. The fastest firing time, which included one neck hit and two misses was 4.2 seconds. The slowest test, which included one neck and two head hits, was timed at 5.4 seconds.

Mr. McDonnell said that he was not an active rifle enthusiast but had served some time with the F.C.A. in 1947.

Mr. McDonnell is a native of Dundalk and came to Limerick [illegible] ago.

The Warren Report maintains the theory, according to which he who killed Lee Oswald is killing the President of the United States. Is it convincing?

The report indicates that one of the bullets must betray and has not been found. It even specifies the point of the impact of the bullet in the asphalt and gives the name of [illegible] by the [illegible]. Now, the President was hit by two bullets and Governor Connally by one.

[illegible] must admit either that shots were fired, and these in such too short a time for a single individual to have fired them, or the two bullets caused three wounds.

The Commission decided in favor of the theory which would not permit it to conclude that two riflemen existed. It declared [illegible] that a single bullet, after [illegible] struck first, [illegible] in the back of [illegible] and [illegible] the body [illegible] and [illegible] the hand of Governor Connally, [illegible] and [illegible] the left thigh of Governor Connally, [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] and

Dear Mr. Rankin:

Reference is made to your letter dated September 30, 1964, requesting us to declassify certain documents previously furnished to the President's Commission. Your specific attention is directed to the thirtieth item on your list which you identified as follows:

"FBI - Report of John James O'Flaherty dated 12-13-63, Bureau File No. 105-82555 re Lee Harvey Oswald - INTERNAL SECURITY"

For your information, the report of Special Agent O'Flaherty, described above, was originally classified "Secret" because of the information furnished by NY T-2 which appeared on page ten of this report. We have recontacted NY T-2 to ascertain if the data attributed to this source could be declassified. We have been informed by NY T-2 that this source has no objection to declassifying the information providing that the expressions [redacted] "diplomat" appearing on this page be changed to read "source."

Accordingly, there are enclosed two copies of revised page ten to Special Agent O'Flaherty's report. In the revised page we have made the revisions desired by NY T-2. In addition, in order to avoid confusion, we have changed the phrase "unidentified source" appearing in line eight of page ten to read "unidentified individual." Also enclosed are two copies

NOTE: By letter 9-30-64 Commission furnished a list of approximately 100 documents which it desires to publish as backup data to its summary report which was recently made available to the public. Instant report of Special Agent O'Flaherty was classified "Secret" when sent to the Commission because it contained information from CIA (NY T-2 in SA O'Flaherty's report) which was classified "Secret" by CIA. We contacted CIA and received clearance to declassify report provided revisions were made in the data as described herein. CIA desired that its source previously described as a [redacted] "diplomat" (C) be concealed through the word "source." We are also authorizing Commission to disregard our Property Stamp since it was understood throughout this investigation the Commission would probably publish some of our reports and memoranda in its over-all report to the nation. SUBJECT: ~~PRESIDENT'S COMMISSION~~ VISUAL AIDS

On 10-13-64, Dr. Alfred Goldberg, President's Commission, called and requested that the background on Commission's Exhibit 1048 be removed. This involves shading out background details with either an air brush or with retouch grays and is the general type of visual-aid service previously furnished to the Commission by the Exhibits Section.

Dr. Goldberg was advised the Bureau would handle this request pending confirmatory from the Commission. He begged off on putting this request in writing stating that it would not be advisable for the Commission files to show that retouch work had been done to the photograph. That although the photograph was furnished by the FBI (see attachment), it had originated with CIA and that recently CIA voiced concern about having copies of this picture in the Commission's records or printed reports with the background showing. He requested that this matter be handled for the Commission on a personal delivery basis in order that no correspondence would involve either the Bureau or the Commission.

Attached are two original prints furnished by the Commission on 10-14-64 and three retouched copies of each as requested by Dr. Goldberg.

RECOMMENDATION:

REC-64 62-109060-339

That the above-mentioned photographs and copies thereof be returned to Gauthier for delivery to Dr. Goldberg by 10-19-64.

RE: PRESIDENT'S COMMISSION

ADDENDUM, ADMINISTRATIVE DIVISION, 10-16-64 NPC:mah:

I do not agree with the above recommendation. The Bureau should have no part of doing any work for the Commission when they "begged off" putting the request in writing, since they allege it would not be advisable for the Commission files to show that retouch work had been done to the photograph. If the CIA did not desire picture to be utilized by the Commission as it was, then the Commission should take the matter up with CIA and have them submit the photograph as they desire.

I have advised Gauthier in the future he is to perform no such work under no such conditions and in the future to clear this type of request through proper channels before any work is done.

RECOMMENDATION: It is recommended that Gauthier advise Goldberg that due to our heavy commitments we cannot at this time comply with his request and suggest that he have CIA submit the photograph as they desire and include it in the Commissi records.

ADDENDUM - 10-20-64 - LJG:jlk: I telephonically advised Dr. Goldberg that inasmuch as the photograph involved was a matter of security interes to CIA, it would be best for that Agency to handle any retou work to their own satisfaction. He stated he would request CIA to handle. He called back within five minutes to state that CIA was handling this matter for the Commission and thanked the Bureau very kindly for considering this matter.

MEMORANDUM FOR: FBI - Mr. Orrin Bartlett

FROM: INR/DDC - John E. MacDonald

SUBJECT: New Hungarian Book Deals With Warren Commission Report

The American Legation in Budapest, Hungary on November 1, 1964 reported to the Department that a new book has appeared in Hungary which is "described as giving a truer explanation of the KENNEDY assassination than given by the Warren Commission Report."

The Legation adds that "Anna BEBRITS, assistant political editor of the Party daily Nepszabadsag has written a book about the United States which she calls 'From Presidential Assassination to Presidential Election.' Bebrits has written several feature articles on the assassination, all trying to prove that a right-wing conspiracy existed. The book treats this theme in depth.

"According to a review of the book, which appeared in Nepszabadsag on October 29, the author describes the political stage in America, especially the forces pulling the strings behind the scene. She concludes that the shift toward socialism in the U.S. after the war fanned the fear and hatred of the reactionary forces to such an extent that they were ready to set out on the road to fascism and Goldwaterism. She describes the "contradictions of American imperialism" and uses these to explain the assassination as well as the impending elections."

NOTE:

By letter 9/30/64 Commission furnished list of approximately 100 documents which it desires to publish as back-up material to its summary report. One of the items was the report of SA O'Connor which was classified "Secret" because of data furnished by CIA (covered by [redacted] T-1). Through liaison we contacted CIA to determine if data furnished by CIA as contained in SA O'Connor's report could be declassified or whether CIA could suggest changes in the CIA data contained in SA O'Connor's report which would make the report unclassified. CIA, through its liaison with the President's Commission, suggested to the Commission the very minor changes listed herein; that is, changing [redacted] to read diplomat. With these changes our report becomes unclassified. The changes made by CIA were confirmed by [redacted] CIA with SA S. Papich, 11/10/64.

BACKGROUND:

A newspaper clipping from "The Washington Post" of 10-26-66 headlined "Magazines Attack Back Warren Report" indicated that Ramparts magazine, in discussing critics of the Warren Commission, focused on at least 10 persons known to have been murdered, to have committed suicide or died in suspicious circumstances since the Kennedy assassination.

The Director asked, "What do we know of Welsh?"

INFORMATION FROM BUFILES:

Ramparts Magazine and David Prentice Welsh:

Bufiles indicate a letter dated 7-5-66 from the Central Intelligence Agency which briefly describes Ramparts magazine as a monthly publication with a circulation claimed to be 65,000. The Editor-in-Chief, Edward M. Keating, claimed the publication was created to offer a platform for Catholic writers. In February, 1966, total financial backing was approximately $100,000. It is operated, in addition to the Board of Directors, by a 58 member staff. CIA info not Classified Another letter 9/23/88. Sec [redacted] 2/2/89. 1164SF b7C/FBI

Bufiles describe David Prentice Welsh as a white male, born August 10, 1935, at New York City. He is single, saw service in the U. S. Army from 1958 to 1960 as a First Lieutenant. He lists his occupation as a free lance reporter.

Welsh came to the Bureau's attention in July, 1964, when he alleged that he and Daniel D. Pearlman had been beaten at Philadelphia, Mississippi, on 7-14-64. He explained that he was preparing a story on the disappearance of three civil rights workers and Pearlman, a Columbia University student, was accompanying him. He

...ted that after spending the morning in Philadelphia, Mississippi, he and Pearlman ...re attacked by several white males in the afternoon and he was punched in the eye. Pearlman was struck with a chain according to Welsh. Welsh and Pearlman talked briefly with law enforcement officers and then hastily left town.

Welsh came to the attention of the Bureau in a "New York Herald Tribune" article dated 8-7-64 in connection with the three civil rights workers who were slain at Philadelphia, Mississippi. The article indicated that an interview on tape was conducted by Welsh with a Mr. Posey. Posey is supposed to have told Welsh that he had obtained the names of seven persons responsible for the murders of Andrew Goodman, Michael Schwerner and James Chaney.

Welsh again came to the Bureau's attention on 9-3-64 when he was interviewed by the Memphis Division in connection with a civil rights complaint wherein he advised that while traveling near Durant, Mississippi, on 8-31-64 in his car the left front vent of his car was shattered by some object. A garage attendant where he stopped suggested the vent had been shattered by a rifle missile possibly of .22 caliber. Welsh stated it was then that he first came to realize that someone had probably shot at him.

Welsh explained that he had been in the State of Mississippi for approximately three months previously in connection with the Mississippi summer project and had been living in Jackson. He stated that he frequently traveled with both local Negroes and white Council of Federated Organizations workers. Welsh went into great detail regarding his actions prior to and after the above-mentioned incident, but he could not furnish any specific details as to who might have shot at him.

Welsh is again mentioned in Bufiles in connection with the Philadelphia, Mississippi, murders in connection with a magazine entitled "Mississippi Eyewitness" published by Ramparts magazine. The first-mentioned magazine contained several articles concerning Schwerner, Goodman and Chaney and one of them was written by David Welsh who was described as a reporter for the "Detroit News," Detroit, Michigan.

At a luncheon on November 5 Edislaw Szewczyk, Counselor of the Polish Embassy, raised the question of our reaction to Polish press treatment of the Warren Commission report on the assassination of President Kennedy. He made it clear that his comments were a follow up on my statements to First Secretary Ludwiczak, in which I had noted that, to my knowledge, of all of the Eastern European countries Poland had given the most one-sided and prejudiced view of the Commission's report. Szewczyk said

[redacted]

I said Mr. Szewczyk that when we talk about such topics as press treatment of the Warren Report, it concerns the periphery and not the main current of Polish-American relations, but it creates an atmosphere damaging to more fundamental aspects of our bilateral relations. In other words, such unfortunate treatment of a theme so important to the American people could serve as an irritant to basic aspects of our relations.

These irritants have a strong impact on the American public [illegible] the Congress which is responsible to it. Many aspects of our relations with Poland have a legislative component; for example, PL 480 agreements, appropriations, MFN legislation, the Battle Act, Johnson Act, etc. Moreover, the Warren Report has been accepted by responsible elements of the American public including the immediate family of President Kennedy. Thus it is in no way comparable to the Buchanan book, which has little substance but which Polish authorities have caused to be translated and published widely in Poland. Mr. Szewczyk said that he was under the impression that the reason for the full treatment of the report in Poland was because of the intense interest of the Polish people in Mr. Kennedy. He was not aware of the extent to which this Polish treatment might be distorted or one-sided but he would look into it. I pointed out that, if there was this intense Polish interest in the matter, the Polish people certainly deserve to have the full facts.

JOINT STATE/USIS MESSAGE (Per State letter 2/21/74)

All major German papers carried stories on the Warren Report on Monday, with most giving front-page coverage. The stories stressed that, according to the Report, Oswald had acted entirely on his own and that there was no evidence to support a conspiracy. "Point by point the Commission dismissed the allegations of a communist or right extremist conspiracy." (Neue Rhein Ruhr Zeitung, pro-SPD)

Most papers carried substantial extracts from the Report and editorial comment was extensive. The most favorable appeared in the independent Die Welt, which said: "There was no conspiracy, no plot of American extremists, no plan or participation of foreign powers. . . At the same time the American society has been acquitted of the charge of being a playground of sinister underground forces. The integrity of the persons, both Democrats and Republicans, who tried to find the truth during these long months speaks for itself. And there is no longer anything to indicate that the domestic stability of the United States was seriously imperiled."

uncertainties from being exploited politically," editorials in a number of other papers showed that the issue is far from being settled. In a front-page editorial the left-center Sueddeutsche Zeitung said that the question of a conspiracy had been answered in a negative fashion only and that the weak point of the Report was that no real motivation for Oswald's crime had been given. The pro-CSU Muenchner Merkur agreed, stating: "However, as the investigating committee could only express its firm conviction that things happened this way and could not furnish conclusive evidence, the Report probably does not represent the rehabilitation for which many Americans had hoped. Those who were shocked by the fact that such a thing could happen in the U.S. can now be shocked that they have to content themselves with circumstantial evidence. This circumstantial evidence will hardly dispel the fears and suspicion which have developed since the assassination. Even though the conclusion that . . . both Oswald and Ruby were psychopaths was the only conclusion which the Commission could draw on the basis of the material available, many people will consider it too smooth, too simple."

A number of papers also commented on the Commission's opinion that President Kennedy had been "poorly guarded," that the "advance preparations for the visit to Dallas had been lax," and that the "cooperation between the Secret Service, the FBI and local police officials had been weak." This was balanced to some extent by coverage of the Commission's re-

Memorandum for the Record — February 10, 1965

ARA/CAR - Kennedy M. Crockett, Director,
Office of Caribbean Affairs

Mrs. George deMohrenschildt: Comments on "Warren Commission" Report.

DECLASSIFIED BY 9803 [redacted] 6457
ON 4/29/92 (Exempt 3B4, 2/21/84) b7C/E61

The following information has been received from Ambassador [redacted], Port-au-Prince, Haiti: (U)

"Reproduced herein is the substance of a recent conversation Mr. V. E. [redacted] of the Embassy had with Mrs. George deMohrenschildt (and briefly with her husband) on January 13, 1965 during which she commented on the "Warren Commission" report concerning the assassination of President Kennedy. As the Department of State knows, Mr. and Mrs. deMohrenschildt were personally acquainted with the assassin, Lee Harvey Oswald, and had been invited to Washington in the Spring of 1964 to be interviewed by the Warren Commission. For these reasons Mrs. deMohrenschildt's critical comments concerning that Commission's Report are of special interest. (Previous Embassy reports concerning the deMohrenschildts are: A-211 of December 2, 1964; A-313 of March 24, 1964; A-259 of March 2, 1964; A-243 of February 22, 1964; A-153 of December 22, 1963; and A-131 of December 5, 1963). (U)

"With regard to George deMohrenschildt's comments concerning the Embassy's attitude toward him, the record should show that he is not now under an Embassy 'ban' as he put it, although American personnel at the Embassy have been cautioned about the deMohrenschildts' propensity for name dropping and loose talk and have been advised to conduct themselves with special discretion in any contact with the deMohrenschildts. This admonition was voiced following a disagreeable incident at the Embassy last November when Mrs. deMohrenschildt verbally abused and physically shook up a Haitian employee of the Embassy on Embassy premises because of some obscure grievance over a lost dog. Instructions have also been given to Embassy personnel that the deMohrenschildts are to (U)

"Mrs. Schlesinger, during a large and noisy cocktail buffet, made some interesting remarks, first concerning her own personal reaction to the Warren Report and, second, her general impressions about the President's assassination. (U)

"(1) She expressed annoyance with the fact that so much 'personal data' concerning herself and her husband had been 'aired' in the Warren report. Information concerning her divorces, as well as her husband's, need not have been revealed, she stated. Furthermore, they had been promised that personal information would not be publicized. (U)

"(2) She stated that the Warren Report had not been complete and that certain facts and depositions made by her had not been disclosed. She also insinuated that a sinister plot could have triggered the assassination, as Oswald had no personal grudge against the President and was actually only hired on murdering Governor Connally who had been responsible for Oswald's military discharge. She also said something vague and confusing concerning Oswald, as having been observed 'watching' to his right' during the assassination, apparently implying that he, Oswald, was waiting for shots from another position. Tearfully she asserted her great love for President Kennedy on several occasions. (U)

"(3) Mr. Schlesinger said that he felt he had been 'slighted, even banned', from communication with Embassy acquaintances, and that he felt it was the Ambassador who was responsible for the ban due to some personal incident. He then stated that he hoped it would not hurt his reputation because, if it did, he would have to take drastic measures. The conversation then frittered away into trivia as others came around." (U)

On 6/7/65, MIKHAIL STEFAN SOLOVIEV, Translator, Institute of Modern Languages, Incorporated, 1322 18th Street, N. W., advised SA W. SCOTT JARRETT, JR. that during 1946-47 while a displaced person at Saltzburg, Austria, he was the editor of an anti-communist publication called the "Flame."

SOLOVIEV recalled that during this time subject was on the staff of this publication and contributed anti-communist articles designed to discourage displaced persons from returning to Russia. SOLOVIEV commented that the Russians in the Soviet Sector made strong protests to the Americans regarding these publications.

SOLOVIEV stated that in about 1948 subject immigrated to Chile. SOLOVIEV did not know subject prior to 1946-47 and knows nothing of his background prior to this time. SOLOVIEV subsequently immigrated to the U. S. and did not hear of or from subject until about two years ago when he corresponded with the subject. During this correspondence subject asked him if he would recommend that subject come to the U. S. SOLOVIEV told him it would not be easy but that he would find a place.

SOLOVIEV stated that after immigration to U. S. and while subject was at the University of Maryland, about two years ago, he had occasion to meet and talk with subject. At this time subject stated he had been associated with the Univers[illegible] of Chile in research work as a Professor of Physics. [illegible] also understood that subject did research work f[illegible] Government of Brazil and would spend three of [illegible] year in Brazil on this research.

SOLOVIEV again saw subject in March, 1965, at which time subject stated he was working in Cleveland. Subject commented he enjoyed his work but was somewhat remorseful that he is the eldest man in the project.

As a result of his association with the subject, SOLOVIEV was of the opinion subject is strongly anti-communist, hated the communist system and most certainly would have no association or connection with organizations attempting to repatriate persons to the USSR. He stated he felt certain subject would report to the FBI any contacts or approaches which might be made to him by Soviet intelligence personnel or otherwise.

Ramparts Magazine and David Prentice Welsh:

Bufiles indicate a letter dated 7-5-66 from the Central Intelligence Agenc which briefly describes Ramparts magazine as a monthly publication with a circulation claimed to be 65,000. The Editor-in-Chief, Edward M. Keating, claimed the publication was created to offer a platform for Catholic writers. In February, 1966, total financial backing was approximately $100,000. It is operated, in addition to the Board of Directors, by a 58 member staff. (U) Unclassified Per CIA letter 9/23/88 SPL [redacted] 1/17/89. #6454. 67C

Bufiles describe David Prentice Welsh as a white male, born August 10, 1935, at New York City. He is single, saw service in the U. S. Army from 1958 to 1960 as a First Lieutenant. He lists his occupation as a free lance reporter.

Welsh came to the Bureau's attention in July, 1964, when he alleged that he and Daniel D. Pearlman had been beaten at Philadelphia, Mississippi, on 7-14-64. Welsh explained that he was preparing a story on the disappearance of three civil rights workers and Pearlman, a Columbia University student, was accompanying him. He stated that after spending the morning in Philadelphia, Mississippi, he and Pearlman were attacked by several white males in the afternoon and he was punched in the eye. Pearlman was struck with a chain according to Welsh. Welsh and Pearlman talked briefly with law enforcement officers and then hastily left town.

Welsh came to the attention of the Bureau in a "New York Herald Tribune" article dated 8-7-64 in connection with the three civil rights workers who were slain at Philadelphia, Mississippi. The article indicated that an interview on tape was conducted by Welsh with a Mr. Posey. Posey is supposed to have told Welsh that he had obtained the names of seven persons responsible for the murders of Andrew Goodman, Michael Schwerner and James Chaney.

Welsh again came to the Bureau's attention on 9-3-64 when he was interviewed by the Memphis Division in connection with a civil rights complaint wherein he advised that while traveling near Durant, Mississippi, on 8-31-64 in his car the left front vent of his car was shattered by some object. A garage attendant where he stopped suggested the vent had been shattered by a rifle missile possibly of .22 caliber. Welsh stated it was then that he first came to realize that someone had probably shot at him.

Welsh explained that he had been in the State of Mississippi for approximately three months previously in connection with the Mississippi summer project and had been living in Jackson. He stated that he frequently traveled with both local Negroe and white Council of Federated Organizations workers. Welsh went into great detail regarding his actions prior to and after the above-mentioned incident, but he could not furnish any specific details as to who might have shot at him.

Welsh is again mentioned in Bufiles in connection with the Philadelphia, Mississippi, murders in connection with a magazine entitled "Mississippi Eyewitness" published by Ramparts magazine. The first-mentioned magazine contained several articles concerning Schwerner, Goodman and Chaney and one of them was written by David Welsh who was described as a reporter for the "Detroit News," Detroit, Michigan

[illegible] ZAREPHATH, N.J. OCTOBER 7, 1964 VOLUME X NO. 5

WARREN COMMISSION REPORT - A COVER-UP

In accordance with Executive Order 11130 creating it, the Warren Commission was charged with the responsibility of investigating the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, "to ascertain, evaluate, and report upon the facts relating to the assassination . . . and the subsequent violent death of the man charged with the assassination." S.J.Res. 137, 88th Congress conferred upon the commission "the power to administer oaths and affirmations, examine witnesses, receive evidence, and issue subpenas."

The commission was created on November 29, 1963 and its final report was submitted on September 24, 1964. This report consists of over eight hundred pages; and with the testimony and exhibits it amounts to twenty-seven volumes containing over seventeen thousand pages. In this veritable labyrinth of exhibits are many not referred to in the report nor mentioned in the press. A few of the more enlightening ones are included in this issue.

Dr. Revilo P. Oliver, who wrote the lengthy article entitled "Marxmanship in Dallas," published in AMERICAN OPINION magazine, testified before the Warren Commission. Although he testified that the editor of the HERALD OF FREEDOM had done research for him in connection with the article and had many confidential sources of information, the commission did not see fit to pursue the matter by calling upon him to testify before it.

Two issues of the HERALD OF FREEDOM are included among the exhibits, marked Oliver Exhibit #6 and Oliver Exhibit #11. The issues are entitled "Scope of Soviet Activity in the U.S." and "John Fitzgerald Kennedy." In the first of these issues it was pointed out that Jack Ruby had visited Havana during the previous year and made contact with his friend (Solomon) Praskin who operated a novelty store across from the Hotel Seville and who is married to an American girl. Praskin has been reported as a Castro collaborator.

This information was substantiated by reliable witnesses in Florida, one of whom received a letter from Cuba containing the same facts. Ruby's brother also brought out the fact that Ruby had friends in Havana. During the questioning of Hyman Rubenstein, Jack Ruby's brother, by Burt Griffin, a Warren Commission attorney, the following appears:

"Mr. GRIFFIN. How about—have you any occasion to communicate with anybody in Havana?

"Mr. RUBENSTEIN. I don't know anybody in Havana. Jack had friends there. Jack had a lot of friends there when the gambling was going good and one of his friends from Dallas was a big shot down there and he invited Jack down. Jack told me this himself. He invited Jack down to stay with him for a week and Jack flew down...."

It is interesting that many witnesses who supplied information to the F.B.I., the Secret Service and to the State Department were never called to testify before the commission. Throughout the seventeen thousand pages there is an obvious pattern of endeavoring to prove that one man alone (Oswald) did the deed, unaided by anyone. To have involved anyone else would have made it a conspiracy (which, of course, it was) and this would have been all right too, provided it could have been twisted and made to appear the work of "right-wing extremists." But there was just not any escape from the fact that Oswald was far from a "right-wing extremist" as were any others even remotely involved in the case. So Oswald did the impossible, according to the Warren Commission, firing three shots so rapidly that it is not possible that they all came from the same gun, and hitting his target with a precision which he did not display on a previous stationary target, Gen. Edwin Walker.

One of the important interviews conducted during the investigation of Lee Harvey Oswald was made by Special Agent William H. Patterson of the U.S. Secret Service and appears in Volume XXIII, Page 390. This interview was conducted by Mr. Patterson on November 25, 1963, less than seventy-two hours after the assassination of President Kennedy. His report made to the Chief of the U.S. Secret Service reads as follows:

"During the interview of the subject's wife she advised that the FBI had contacted her about the location of her husband about 10 days prior to the assassination and she had told them that her husband worked in the building from which the President was killed. She also stated that she had been interviewed in October and gave the same basic information to the FBI.

"While I was at the police station, I engaged an FBI agent in a conversation and found out that he was on the subversive desk. He stated that Oswald had contacted two known subversive agents about 15 days before the shooting but the entire information was top secret and he could not tell us anymore but he felt sure that the file would be turned over to our Chief.

"The wife also advised that she had seen the rifle that was used in the shooting at her home about three weeks before the shooting.

"She advised that she was a Castro supporter and from the interview it was felt that she is still a hard core communist.

"She stated that he had never mentioned killing the President but would not mention anything about shooting Connally.

"She stated that she did not know the man that killed her husband.

"It was felt by the interviewer that she was not telling the truth and still believed in communism."

Another interesting angle of the investigation has to do with Bernard William Weissman of Mt. Vernon, N.Y., who had placed the much publicized advertisement attacking President Kennedy in the Dallas MORNING NEWS of Friday, November 22, 1963. This advertisement had a black border and was printed before the assassination. A letter was written by Larrie Schmit to Larry Jones, both of whom were associates of Bernard Weissman in American Businesses, Inc., a holding corporation to control Conservativism, U.S.A., an organization allegedly set up to promote conservatism. The letter appears in Volumne XVIII, Pages 878–884 and is written on the stationery of National Indignation Convention, a legitimate group opposing the sale of communist merchandise in the United States. The letter was marked "TOP SECRET" with instructions to "DESTROY." We are quoting many portions of it since it is the blueprint for the cold-blooded take-over of an honest conservative organization.

"Dear Larry;

"Well, gentlemen, we have arrived! Remember, when I said my first correspondence from Dallas would be on NIC letterhead? Here is the score to date.....

"At 9 a.m. Monday I was in their office...held a 7 hour conference with him (one of the partners of NIC). I told Jim (the partner) I controlled and was leader of the powerful "Conservatism, USA," and laid out our goals and plans (abbreviated version we give outsiders, of course). I told Jim that CUSA wanted to merge with NIC effective 1 Aug 63....

"In the interim...I would be made a partner of NIC & paid $125 a week...and each returning (from service) partner of mine would be added to the NIC payroll as soon as they returned.

"Now, Larry, you must understand, I am making this offer with tongue in cheek – we'll get rid of our new 'partners'.....We'll have control of the NIC long before our original deadline this way....

"Here are some facts on the NIC:...

"4) NIC is ripe for take-over exactly as we planned....

"8) NIC is not radical...

"11) I have scored a hit with the office staff..

"12) NIC is considered 'subversive' & 'controversial' even though it is an honest, respectable movement...

"15) NIC leaders are not demagogues – are 'guy next door' nice American guys. Sincere, dedicated.. not ambitious....

"16) NIC is not associated with Birch Society, or any other group...

"18) NIC desperate for dedicated energetic followers.

"My big selling point: CUSA boys are dedicated Conservatives. Great organizers & planners. Men of action. Top salesmen. Ad infinitum.

The writer of this letter and the person to whom it was written had formed a corporation, American Businesses, Inc., along with three other persons, while all were members of the U.S. Armed Forces, in Munich, Germany, on September 30, 1962. The president was Larrie H. Schmidt, writer of the letter, and the other four made up the Board of Directors. They were Larry C. Jones, Bernie Weissman, James L. Moseley, and Norman F. Baker. The corporation was to set up a "non-profit foundation known as Conservativism, USA," with the same directors and with Larrie H. Schmidt as director. These people were opportunists and planned to use the conservative movement in the United States for financial gain which, even if they were not subversive, would have had a bad effect on conservatism in general. An FBI report on one of the partners gives us an idea of how "conservative and anti-communist" his views were: (Volume XVIII, P. 893, 4)

"WEISSMAN also stated that his secondary purpose for going to Dallas, Texas, was political, that is, he decided that this would be the proper area for him to get started in Conservative politics. WEISSMAN described himself as a Conservative on international issues, but a Liberal on national issues.

By this, he explained that he w[illegible]ery much in favor of integration and civil rights and other programs which he associated with the Liberal groups in the United States....

"WEISSMAN freely admitted that he had sought to use his political connections to further his business opportunities."

The same FBI report also brought out the fact that Oswald and Weissman had both lived in the Bronx, N.Y. at addresses only a few blocks apart. On Page 895, Vol. XVIII, the report states;

"WEISSMAN stated he did not know LEE HARVEY OSWALD and to his knowledge never met OSWALD. With respect to OSWALD, he advised that his mother, Mrs. LILLIAN WEISSMAN, has advised him that OSWALD at one time resided at 1061 Sheridan Avenue, Bronx, New York. WEISSMAN pointed out that he, at one time, resided at 1063 Grant Avenue, Bronx, New York, which WEISSMAN described as being only a few blocks from the Sheridan Avenue address."

Among the many witnesses who supplied information about Jack Ruby was George William Fehrenbach, a jeweler of Medford, Oregon, who supplied information to the FBI about a communist cell at Muncie, Indiana and Jack Rubenstein of Chicago. He stated he would be willing to testify in a court of law concerning his knowledge of a group [illegible] men in the neighborhood where he had worked whom he believed to be members of the Communist Party and who tried to interest him in it. He stated that a party of people came from Chicago to meet with these people, that he was introduced to them, and that one of them was named Jack Rubenstein and resembled pictures of Jack Ruby. Mr. Fehrenback was called as a witness before the Warren Commission and all the questioning by committee counsel, Griffin could not upset his story.

Mrs. Thelma Marks of Gary, Indiana, supplied information to the FBI to the effect that she and her husband visited a communist camp and met a Jack Rubenstein there. Her husband, Sidney Marks, was a Communist Party member at the time. Neither she nor her husband were called as witnesses.

As for Lee Harvey Oswald, there have been a number of allegations that he worked in cooperation with some "Latin Americans." The FBI interviewed an attorney-at-law, Dean Andrews, Jr. of New Orleans and shows the following in its report (Vol. XXVI, P 732):

"He (Andrews) advised that in June and July, 1963, dates unrecalled, Lee H. Oswald had visited his office on three occasions and expressed concern about (1) his citizenship status; (2) his wife's status; and (3) his undesirable discharge from the Marine Corps which he claimed had made it impossible to obtain suitable employment.

"Mr. Andrews said that Oswald was accompanied by a total of approximately five persons during the three visits. He said that he knew two of the subjects by sight, and that on two occasions he was accompanied [illegible] a young man of Mexican extraction (not Cuban), whom he did not know. He said he believed that all of Oswald's companions were homosexuals who possibly visited the Gaslight Bar in the French Quarter, where such individuals congregate."

One of the most interesting documents which was stripped of identities, locations, dates, etc., nevertheless, shows that within the Soviet Union information was supplied which involved Lee Harvey Oswald, Jack Rubenstein and Marina Oswald in a plot and that the purpose of the assassination was to get the "wild men" (translation: anti-communists). In the year 1960 the directive went out from Moscow all over the world to combat the anti-communists and immediately after the assassination of President Kennedy, it was reported that he had been the victim of right-wing extremists and anti-communists were harassed and vilified. The following documents buried among the exhibits of the Warren Commission report throw some light on the attempt to crush the anti-communists. (Vol. XXVI, Pages 735,6,7,)

"American Embassy

"Dear _____

"In sum, _____, as a former acquaintance of Mr. and Mrs. Oswald in 1960 in Gorky: 1) maintained that Oswald knew Ruby, at least in 1960; 2) believed Oswald was under the influence of the KBG; 3) presumed Mrs. Oswald was a KGB agent; and 4) said a group of people in the U.S., probably Communists, helped in the assassination.

"We agree these are incredible statements but felt they must be passed on, and in this form due to the sensitivity of the subject. Both _____ agree that _____ gave the appearance of being genuine. I think the fellow is probably a mental case and by his own admission has suffered mental illnesses. Nevertheless, it's conceivable that some of his statements might check out with information available in Washington but not here. He stuck to his story and never contradicted himself, although his tale was long and circuitous. He insisted this all took place in Gorky, even though he knew the Oswalds had been in Belorussia most of the time. This physical location might jibe with facts in the case but we can remember no connection with that city.

Sincerely yours,

"MEMORANDUM OF CONVERSATION

"Introduction:

"On _____ was advised by _____ that a Soviet citizen _____ wished 'to make an important statement on who killed President Kennedy'. ____

"Impression:

"_____ was a relatively pleasant looking man, dressed in comparatively good Soviet clothes, fairly well-composed but justifiably nervous. He spoke very rapidly in good litera[illegible]Russian._____ He looked lost, but reconciled to his fate as he left. He spoke often about how 'they' (the KGB) knew of the information he had to impart and that he would be coming _____. He maintained, however, that the KGB had not contacted him in any way prior to his visit. He came, apparently from near Gorky where he now lives, to_____on_____and has been staying in a hotel.

"The Interview:

"The interview took place_____

"First,_____nervously pulled a slip of paper out of his pocket and asked the two officers to read the penciled contents. A translation follows and the original is attached with the first copy of this Memcon:

"'1. Ruby-an old friend of Oswald, specialist in "slimy" (mokrym) affairs.

"'2. Oswald's wife-KGB agent (photograph)

"'3. A group of people directly helped the assassination, probably they are USA Communists. Now they are running from the USA.'

"_____then set out 'to prove' the above statements:

"1._____knew Oswald in Gorky in April-May, 1960. At the time the former lived in_____near Gorky. Through an interpreter (Oswald spoke little Russian) Oswald told him he was an old friend of Ruby's and he would help Oswald in the future, should he need it (_____interchanged the names Ruby and Rubenstein).

"2._____sister was a KGB agent. She was very close to Mrs. Oswald, before the Oswalds were married, and for a while they were roommates near Gorky._____therefore assumes Mrs. Oswald was also an agent.

"3. Once Oswald invited_____to go shooting. He refused, but in this meeting Oswald asked_____ what he thought would happen if the President of the United States were assassinated. At that time Eisenhower was President, but Oswald was talking in terms of the assassination of Nixon, whom he considered the probable next President. Oswald maintained there were political groups in the U.S. who could carry this out._____assumed Oswald meant some socialist or radical group party, but the latter emphasized it was the Communist Party of the U.S.

"Following this 'proof' of his contentions_____ gave background information on himself and more details on his association with Oswald and the KGB" ...(He had been pressured to join the KGB but had resisted, according to his story) "It was at this point, in April-May 1960 that he met Oswald and his wife in Gorky._____identified the location as the 'Seventh Wharf' (Sedmoi Prichal) and gave the impression that he had met Oswald on several occasions. He was convinced Oswald was undergoing the same 'Press Conference' treatment by the KGB as Oswald gave the appearance of a man under sedation, hypnotized, 'he resembled a madman'._____maintained that Oswald had been put on him by the KGB in order to show_____they still had confidence in him and wanted to use him.

"In answer to the question of what the aim was of an assassination plot against the President,_____ said it was to produce a reaction against the 'wild men' (besheny) in the United States.'"

Commission Exhibit No. 3107 is a Memorandum which states in part:

"This document was made available to the Commission by a cooperating government...(It) is the report of a confidential investigation conducted by the government's intelligence service into an allegation by Citizen A. that Citizen B., allegedly a Communist, had remarked to him long before the assassination of President Kennedy that 'Kennedy should be very careful when he comes to visit in the southern United States that nothing will happen to him and if Oswald gets a hold of him he is finished.'"

A newspaper report in the BOSTON GLOBE of Oct. 12, 1964 states:

"Lee Harvey Oswald's contact with the KGB is not a matter to shrug off lightly. For one thing, the Warren report makes no mention of whom Oswald saw when he visited the Soviet consulate in Mexico City during his stay there from Sept. 27 to Oct. 3 of last year.

"He is known to have spoken to the same official in the consulate a couple of times. The conversations were for longer periods than the 10 or 20-minute once-overs a consular official accords the average visitor. And, that Soviet official happens to be the chief of the KGB for North and South America.

"The encounters could be represented as coincidence. Yet the length of the meetings was hardly the sort of thing the top man of such an apparatus would expose himself to simply to meet an American kook who once chose to live in the USSR and had a Russian wife."

The conclusion of the Warren Commission that Oswald acted alone in killing the President of the United States is an insult to the intelligence of the People of the United States. Why did the commission conceal the truth?

8. Kennedy Assassination

The Lima press continued this week to cast doubts on the validity of the Warren Report. Most of the papers, for example, published a lengthy France Press report which said that "the British Secret Service has certain knowledge that Kennedy was not killed by Oswald but instead by three skilled marksmen." Expreso, in addition, started publishing a four-page series by Richard J. Whalen which disputes the Warren Commission's conclusions. Meanwhile, El Comercio continued its serialization of Manchester's book, "The Death of a President" which is reported to have raised its circulation by nearly 20,000 copies daily.

SUBJECT : TV Show Embodying Film and Discussion on the Warren Report

REF :

On the evening of March 7, Radio Telefis Eireann screened an unprecedented program running from 8:25 p.m. to 12:40 a.m. with only one break for a 15-minute news report. The program consisted of a showing of a film presented by Mark LANE, author of the book "Rush to Judgment", in which he interviewed a number of persons in and near Dallas who are reputed to have special knowledge of the circumstances surrounding the assassination of President Kennedy. Lane's contention is that these persons were not called by the Warren Commission although they should have been, that the Warren Commission was made up of politicians (two of whom were Southerners) and a former CIA Chief "whose business it was to deceive." He maintains that the Commission's aim was to conceal a conspiracy involving more persons than Oswald and possibly some subversive elements.

At one point, Lane came very near to suggesting that the persons engineering the assassination knew that the then Vice President would succeed to the Presidency and would naturally hope to profit from it.

Participating in the program were two Dublin lawyers, Liam HAMILTON and William FINLAY, who attempted to question Lane on many of the points. Lane constantly interrupted them and it was only in the few closing minutes of the program that one of the lawyers was able even so much as to finish a few sentences without interruptions.

The program has excited considerable press comment and one newspaper makes it appear that the doubt as to the probity of the Warren Commission and of the Report itself is now very widespread. Naturally, following this program, the Report has an increased number of both advocates and detractors. The moderator, Brian FARRELL, was better as a commentator in favor of the Report than he was as a referee attempting to insure that each side of the controversy had an opportunity to be heard.

Lane made no secret of his feelings that he had been denied an opportunity to present his case before the American public. Indeed, he said that his film had been banned on American television.

A sampling of the press coverage in Dublin is attached.

TALKING POINTS

W. A. Newman says

MARK LANE HAS A CASE

TELEFIS EIREANN'S presentation of "Rush to Judgment?" was a mammoth performance by any standards, and surely its longest individual programme except the general election broadcast. Scheduled to end at approximately 11.50 p.m., it actually ran until 12.40 a.m.—which, when you allow for a break for the news and sport, represented almost four hours. I wonder what the participants felt like at the conclusion.

Mark Lane's film, which occupied well over half of the presentation, became more absorbing as time went on. This is extraordinary, inasmuch as virtually the whole of it consisted of the interviewing of witnesses—or, more accurately, of people who should have been summoned as witnesses by the Warren Commission, but—for one reason or another—were not. By all the tokens, it should have been dull. It was anything but.

Since there must have been thousands of Irish citizens who failed to see the programme, either because they do not possess TV sets, or were out on other business, or preferred to tune in to lighter fare from across the channel, I should perhaps mention what it was all about. Mark Lane is one of several Americans who have written books in support of the belief that Lee Harvey Oswald was not the sole assassin of President Kennedy, that there were at least two assassins, and that, consequently, his death was the result of a conspiracy either between those two or between those two and others in the background. Lane contends, further, that the Warren Commission, which was set up to inquire into the facts surrounding the assassination and concluded, in a gargantuan report, that Oswald alone did it, ignored a great deal of vital evidence to the contrary. The conclusion to be inferred is that this ignoring could not have been indeliberate—put it, if you like, that a consciously dubious verdict was reached for the sake of allaying American apprehensions.

So far as this viewer is concerned, Lane's film left me in no doubt that he has made, at any rate, a formidable prima facie case for a re-examination of the facts of that terrible day in Dallas. What good, you may ask, would such a re-examination do? It wouldn't bring J.F.K. back to life. A fair answer to that might be that so long as doubts exist the American conscience will not be at ease: Kennedy's ghost will be there in the background; history will be distorted by a dreadful question-mark; men will mutter among themselves as soon as the affair comes into conversation. That is part of Lane's contention, and I think it valid.

They adopted the curious practice on Tuesday night of setting up two unnamed cross-examiners—defined as a barrister and a senior counsel—to dispute Lane's case and, in effect, justify the findings of the Warren Commission. They seemed to me to get nowhere: Lane had his facts and references magnificently at his finger-ends; and the mannerisms of counsel at the bar—more noticeable in the older than the younger man — merely created a prejudice in favour of Lane. (In fact, my faith in the efficacy of legal cross-examination as a means of arriving at truth has been more than somewhat shaken by the forensic technique on display.) The inability of the lawyers to shake their victim compelled Brian Farrell—whose chairmanship was superb all the way through — to cast himself towards the end in the rôle of prosecuting counsel and ask some really telling questions. Even so, the honours remained with Lane.

ENCLOSURE

Oswald alone?

BY BRIAN FARRELL WHO WAS CHAIRMAN OF RTE'S CONTROVERSIAL PROGRAMME 'RUSH TO JUDGMENT'

WHO killed John F. Kennedy?

With every passing day and every new story a credible explanation of the events in Dallas during those November days in 1963 appears less and less possible. There have been so many doubts raised, suspicions voiced, extraneous issues discussed that perhaps the simplest basic facts have been forgotten. Certainly, it seems to me, the body of evidence cited by the Warren Commission in support of its conclusions has become obscured.

The Warren Report is, even in paper-back, a massive document. The first chapter is a summary of the argument and the 12 major conclusions and recommendations of the Commission. The next chapter is a narrative of the actual events of the assassination—a story continued in chapter five with an account of the detention and death of Lee Harvey Oswald. But the main evidence relating to the conclusion that Oswald acted alone and that there was no conspiracy is dealt with in four separate chapters:

● Chapter three—dealing with the shots from the Texas School Book Depository—discusses the eye-witnesses' accounts of what happened; the expert examinations of the rifle, cartridge cases and bullet fragments; the trajectory, speed and number of shots and the President's wounds. Further information on the wounds is given in Appendix VIII and IX and the testimony of the ballistics experts in Appendix X.

● Chapter four, called "The Assassin", discusses Oswald's ownership and possession of the rifle in the building; Oswald's presence in the building and at the window; the killing of patrolman Tippet; statements made by Oswald and the much-discussed matter of Oswald's marksmanship.

● Chapter six describes the Commission's own investigation of possible conspiracy in regard both to Oswald and Jack Ruby. There is also, in Appendix XII, a summary of a wide variety of speculations and rumours together with the Commission's findings on each.

● Chapter seven (and Appendices XIII, XIV and XV) deal with Lee Harvey Oswald, his history and background, marriage, finances and visits abroad.

● Jack Ruby's story, together with "the lie detector" test taken by him are in Appendices XVI and XVII.

I mention all this detail simply to make the point that there can be no question of the Commission not knowing what it was about when it published its Report. It was not presented as a bare summary outline of what happened in Dallas. It purports to state and co-ordinate all relevant, known facts and carefully summarises its conclusions derived from the facts in each chapter. The Commission tells us what it is going to say, says it and then repeats the main relevant points. It is explicit in its statement that Oswald, and Oswald alone, was the assassin and specifically denied suggestions of a conspiracy (whether involving Ruby or not).

This is important because one charge made is that the Warren Commission's inquiries were superficial, dishonest and a cover-off that the members, in Edward Jay Epstein's phrase, were pursuing "political truth", that is to say that they were more concerned to soothe and calm American public opinion about the fundamental good health of its public and legal institutions than to tell the truth. In one sense or other, this kind of accusation is central to the arguments of those who reject the Commission's findings. They cannot make their own version of events acceptable without casting the Warren Commission in the rôle of a public conspiracy to conceal the truth.

Yet this Commission included some of the most respected men in American public life. It was bi-partisan—in fact with a preponderance of Republicans. All the members were lawyers; all were experienced committee men accustomed to evaluating written as well as oral testimony. They published the evidence of their own disagreements on specific issues. They supplied the material for the critics. And yet, we are asked to believe, they deliberately and consciously set out to mislead —not by implication and innuendo but by downright lies.

This is a supposition that I cannot credit. It destroys the possibility of any valid explanation of events. Because if the Chief Justice of the United States—the very man who administered the Presidential Oath to John Kennedy—is capable of bare-faced lying simply in order to avoid "rocking the boat" then all thought of certainty in judicial matters is a myth.

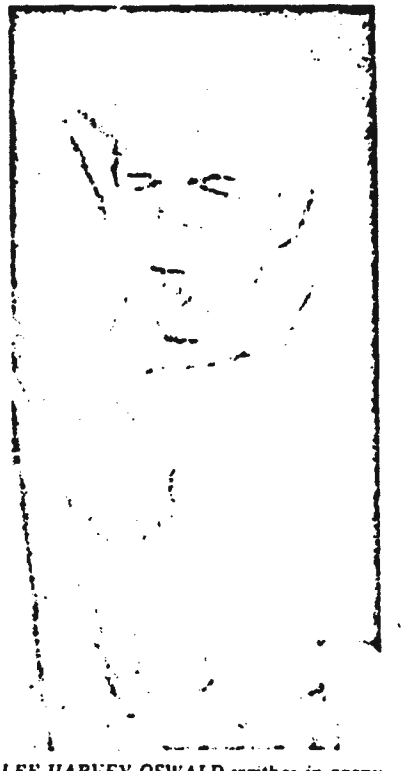
When Epstein's book Inquest was published last autumn he produced statements by a number of the lawyers employed by the Commission derived from his interviews with five of the seven members of the Commission, five of the senior counsel and six of the assistant counsel. This constituted, as he said, "the fourth, and most important, source" of his contention that the Commission never really saw the proper evidence, that the investigation was sporadic and that many of those involved were deeply disturbed by the handling of evidence.

CENTRAL ATTACK

On the basis of Epstein's direct quotations it seemed that here was a really serious and central attack on the bona fides of the Commission. Mark Lane in his Rush To Judgment is more circumspect about approaching this question of credibility. But the rather appalling feature of Epstein's work is that so many of those quoted totally deny the statements attributed to them. His new evidence from this "fourth source" entirely crumbles.

And, of course, if there was a conspiracy by the Commission to suppress the truth, distort the evidence and tell lies, one might reasonably wonder why it was not more efficiently done. Even if the view is taken that this conspiracy was no more than a generalised "understanding" among the Commissioners, I wonder that so much awkward evidence was included in the Report.

But why should such a varied group of senior public men decide to suppress and distort the truth? The suggestion that the Report had to be published before the November election ignores Johnson's massive victory over Goldwater. The notion that it was to still the public conscience must be countered by saying that it has not worked. The idea that it was an agreed piece of official history designed to shelter some unnamed interest, individual or group conveniently evades the fact that the family of the dead President must have become party to the plot.



LEE HARVEY OSWALD writhes in agony after being shot by Jack Ruby.

Indeed, the more I look into the great cloud of speculation that has come to surround the Kennedy assassination, the more clearly it seems to me that the Warren findings are justified. Lord Devlin has summarised the absolute agreed minimum facts of the case against Oswald "stripped of everything that does not amount to practical certainty." He puts the minimum case against Oswald.

"He was in the building at the time of the assassination of the President and could have been on the sixth floor. The President was killed by a gun which belonged to Oswald and which he falsely denied buying or owning. The man who fired it was not unlike Oswald. Three-quarters of an hour later Patrolman Tippit was shot with a revolver belonging to Oswald. Oswald's jacket was found along the path taken by the murderer in flight. Then Oswald was found with the revolver in his possession, and he used violence in resisting arrest. He was a man who had attempted assassination before.

That is a bare outline, fleshed out fully in the Report and evidence. Every contrary suggestion, inquendo and implication relating to these central facts that I have followed up in the volumes of the evidence is refuted. To my knowledge, no new evidence relevant to these points has been produced. I have gone through the evidence of a number of the witnesses exhibited by Mr. Lane in his book and film and, indeed, read carefully the record of his own appearances before the Warren Commission. This examination has weakened the credibility of Mr. Lane's contentions.

And so to end. Who killed John Kennedy? I don't know. But I know no good reason as of now to suppose that anyone other than Lee Harvey Oswald actually shot at and hit the President and I am less convinced than at any earlier point in time by the arguments of those who totally reject the findings of the Warren Commission.

EVENING HERALD, March 7, 1967

THIS FILM WAS 'TOO HOT' FOR THE U.S.

NO event in recent times produced a greater sense of shock than the assassination of President Kennedy. And, in the time which has passed since that sad November day, nothing has been so surrounded with mystery and speculation as the events leading up to and the investigation following that murder.

In the past week or so a new impetus has been given to the belief that the Warren Commission did not uncover all the facts, by the actions of Mr. Garrison.

The world is still wondering what happened before, during and after the moment when the gun or guns spoke their message of death in Dallas.

Best seller

Tonight, at 8.25, Telefis Eireann will be showing a film about the assassination which was considered "too hot to handle" in the U.S. It will run for three hours, and beside it all the other programmes, both on T.E. and the rival channels, pale into insignificance.

The film which you will see this evening is called "Rush To Judgment".

It is the result of an invitation from Telefis Eireann to the distinguished American lawyer, Mark Lane, author of the controversial best-seller, "Rush To Judgment," to present his criticism of the findings of the Warren Commission — and his case for the defence of Lee Harvey Oswald, accused of the murder of the President.

According to Mark Lane and others who have examined the evidence closely, the Warren Commission's report on the assassination leaves some things unanswered. The Commission, for instance, accepted the fact that three shots were fired, and the Federal Bureau of Investigation calculated that the three shots were fired within 5.6 seconds.

Furthermore, a film taken of the event showed that President Kennedy and Governor Connally were hit within the space of 1.8 seconds.

But the rifle which Oswald is said to have used could not be fired twice in less than 2.3 seconds — and with Oswald out of practice, one can extend even that time.

Questions

"There are still questions unanswered, as Mark Lane and others have said. Mark Lane, however, went further than the others who disagreed with the report of the Warren Commission: he put his views in a book, and the film which forms the greater part of tonight's T.E. programme is based on that book, "Rush To Judgment".

After the facts have been presented in the film, a barrister will examine the evidence and a senior counsel will assess it against the authority of the Warren Commission report.

Finally, Kevin O'Kelly will trace the growth of the controversy in the world's press since the publication of the Report on September 28, 1964.

To accommodate this unusually long item, other programmes have gone by the board, with the exception of the news, which will be screened at 9.40, and is the only interruption to the three hours of drama promised in this astonishing film.

T.E. gets full Mark!

By a Special Correspondent

The chances are that anyone late for work this morning had been watching R.T.E.s monumental programme, "Rush to Judgement?" (or "judgment" — we goth both spellings last night)

One would have thought that the Kennedy murder had now become so insufferably boring that it would be impossible to face another four hours of film and discussion. But the truth is that the more one probes the subject the more compelling it becomes, and so the programme emerged as one of the most fascinating television shows we have seen.

Roughly half the time was devoted to a film prepared by Mark Lane, apologist for the theory that Kennedy was shot by more than one man and that the Warren Commission was a fraudulent white-wash to reassure public opinion.

As Brian Farrell pointed out from the chair, the film is clearly partisan, designed to establish one point of view only. And very plausible and disturbing it is.

So coy!

The discussion that followed was between Lane and two coyly anonymous Irish barristers (let us hope that the prim rules of the Bar will not result in them being disbarred when we reveal the dread secret that the junior barrister on the left was Mr. Liam Hamilton, the senior man Mr. William Finlay!).

Presumably, the discussion was intended to produce a dialogue on absolutely essential points, but it didn't quite work out that way. Mr. Lane made a grievous error in tactics e arly on by interrupting so often to refute so many relatively minor points that it became impossible for mere mortals in search of truth to follow a coherent line of argument.

Brian Farrell's lack of firmness at this stage contributed to the disorder, but his experience was enough to make him realise this. Later, it was his far greater control that produced the most fruitful discussion and gave the viewers a chance to reach some conclusions on thei own. His was hy far the most difficult job in the programme and, on the whole, he did it creditably.

A few points should be made fit is no reflection on the barristers to say that they were simply no match for Mr. Lane. He has devoted over three years to a highly concentrated study of the Kennedy murder. He seems to know every line of evidence by heart, every witness intimately. He is the complete master of his subject.

The barristers, on the other hand, have had no remotely comparable opportunity to brief themselves so completely, therefore the programme was wildly in Mr. Lane's favour before it ever began.

The result was that the barristers were often shot down on specific points, but were much more convincing on their general objections.

Again, it was unsatisfactory that the medical aspect of how many bullets were fired was not clearly debated. It's all very well to talk about exit wounds and entry wounds, but at least one viewer longed for an easy diagram which might have illustrated the point of Mr. Lane's argument in simple terms.

Ludicrous

The marathon finished with a remarkable and quite ludicrous piece of chauvinism when Brian Farrell (obviously discomforted by it) read out the bare details of a "test" by a group in Limerick which claimed to prove that Oswald was the sole killer.

I trust the Warren Commission will be re-opened to consider this stunning affirmation of their conclusions.

But it would be criminal to end on a carping note. By any standards in the world this was a magnificent programme which deserves the highest praise for R.T.E. and everyone directly involved in the presentation.

.22 rifle test is shot down

BUT LANE THANKFUL TO RTE

Evening Press reporter

THE introduction without warning of a test carried out by what he described as an unknown group of Co. Limerick people with a ".22 air gun", in surroundings in no way comparable to the scene of the killing, was one of the objections which American lawyer Mark Lane had today to the way in which his marathon, almost four-hour programme "Rush to Judgment", was presented on Telefis Eireann last night.

In general, Mr. Lane was satisfied with the opportunity which he got to put over his point of view, which he described as "very adequate". Compared with a five-hour programme which he had to do on "B.B.C. 2" recently, Mr. Lane said that the Irish presentation was "very fair".

When I spoke to him this morning Mr. Lane told me: "There are, however, a number of points regarding the way parts of the programme were presented, which I do not think were quite fair".

No mention

Mr Lane said that before the programme yesterday he had lunch with Mr. Brian Farrel, who acted as moderator, and with a Mr. Johnson, whom he presumed was a programme producer.

He added: "Mr. Farrell made no mention to me about the introduction of a test in the programme. Then, without warning, the 'findings' of this test was introduced last night as something conclusive, without any indication as to who the people involved were, what their qualifications or knowledge were, or when the test had been carried out and under what circumstances.

"After the programme I asked Mr. Farrell what the test was. When he showed me the paper I saw it had been carried out with a .22 air gun, in an area one-third the size of the area covered in the Warren Commission, and with still targets, as opposed to moving targets in the actual shooting.

Ridiculous

"I said to Mr. Farrell that this was just ridiculous and asked him who were these people in County Limerick who had carried out this test. I asked him were they riflemen. But he didn't know who they were, or whether they were riflemen. And this test was presented as conclusive on the programme. The conditions under which it was carried out were in no way comparable to those at the time of the Kennedy shooting."

Mr. Lane said he thought that Mr. Farrell in his position as moderator on the programme, should have given a summary of both sides of the arguments at the conclusion, rather than to end off with an outline of his own opinions, which he (Mr. Lane) had no opportunity to answer.

Mr. Lane also referred today to the two Irish barristers taking part in the programme. He said that during the programme he did not wish to introduce the point frequently as it might embarrass them, but their knowledge of the Warren Commission evidence — which they defended — was confined to the one volume summary of the complete report.

Falls short

This one-volume summary, he said, had been made available to them by the American Embassy for the purpose of the programme, but it fell far short of the complete evidence of the commission which was contained in 26 volumes.

It was a point of deep controversy whether the one volume summary of the findings they were discussing was in fact a fair summary of all the evidence.

"However," Mr. Lane added, "I am very grateful to the television station here for putting out this programme. It is something which cannot be seen on television in the United States, and compared with the programme on the B.B.C. it was very fair.

"I flew to London from Los Angeles specially to do the B.B.C. programme, and when we were on the air I was told that I would not be able to make any point except to reply to a personal attack."

Warren Inquiry is now doubted

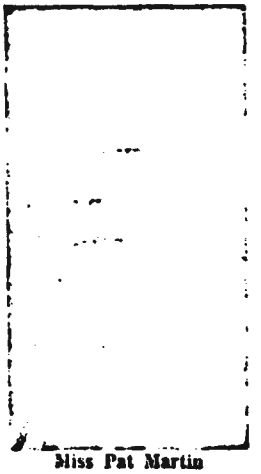
IT'S a long road that has no turning and for New York lawyer Mark Lane the turning point seems to have come in Ireland with his appearance on television last night.

In dozens of interviews the pattern was almost universal. Again and again people told our reporters that their views were changed by what they saw and heard on television — Oswald was not alone and the Warren Commission Report was questionable.

Here is a sample of the views obtained:

Mr. Tadgh Sugrue, credit manager, Ren-T[illegible] Ltd., had accepted the Warren Commission before he saw last night's film. Now he has second thoughts. The cool authority of Mark Lane and his command of his subject impressed him. The fact that so many witnesses were not called was, in his view, a telling point.

Mr. Christy Murphy, Department of Education, has always been doubtful of the validity of the official view of President Kennedy's assassination. Now he is convinced that Mark Lane has destroyed it. "He proved his case to the hilt," Mr. Murphy said.



Miss Pat Martin

Miss Pat Martin, a Trinity College student, found no difficulty in the past in accepting that the Warren Commission was reliable. Now she has grave doubts. "Ruby's former woman employee made me sit up with a jerk when she gave details of his links with the Dallas police," she said. She found Mark Lane to be impressive, logical and forceful.

Mr. Harry McLoughlin was another viewer who changed his opinions as the marthon TV. programme went on. His faith in the Warren Report had been total, but he felt it could no longer be treated with absolute confidence in view of the number of people it did not call. The deaths of important witnesses in the case was another factor which impressed him and he thinks the odds against such a sequence of events must be astronomical.

Extraordinary

Mr Doug Anderson, of Toronto, who is in Dublin on his honeymoon, feels that Lane has at least made a strong case for a review of much of the evidence given to the Warren Commission. He had never felt that Oswald was alone in the assassination, although the image of a vast conspiracy involving leading figures of the U.S. Government was not one he could accept.

Miss Bernadette Magill, of Odeon (Ireland) Ltd., had believed that Oswald was the sole assassin. She had not realised that so much important evidence existed for the Mark Lane point of view. Like Miss Pat Martin she found the link between Ruby and the Dallas police a most extraordinary feature of the whole thing.

MEMORANDUM FOR: Director
Federal Bureau of Investigation
Attention: Mr. S. J. Papich

SUBJECT : "GARRISON and the Kennedy Assassination: Bernard FENSTERWALD et al"

1. A Washington UPI dispatch of 3 January 1969 reads as follows:

> Washington -- New Orleans District Attorney Jim Garrison is one of seven board members of a new national committee to investigate assassinations which is being formed here.
> Bernard Fensterwald, 47, of Arlington, Va., another board member, said the committee's purpose is "To embarrass or force the government to make investigations they have been putting off since Nov. 22, 1963."
>
> That was the date of President Kennedy's assassination in Dallas.
> Fensterwald, who said he was setting up an office which would open in a week, left the senate earlier this week after 12 years as counsel for several committees.
>
> "The committee will concentrate on the three best known assassinations -- President Kennedy, Senator Robert Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King -- but will leave its options open on some other rather mysterious deaths," he said.
> "Our position is there was a conspiracy in Dallas, there were strong footprints of a conspiracy in Memphis where Dr. King was shot and nobody really knows much about what went on in Los Angeles (where Senator Kennedy was slain) but we intend to look."

He said the committee hoped to find private financial support to hire a professional staff for its investigations.

Other board members, said Fensterwald, include Bill Turner of San Francisco, a former FBI agent; Richard Sprague of Hartsdale, N.Y., a computer expert; Fred J. Cook, Englewood, N.J., author; Lloyd Tupling, associated with the Sierra Club here, and Paris Flammonde, a New York writer who will have a book out next week on assassinations.

Eight more board members will be named later, Fensterwald said.

2. William Turner and Fred J. Cook are well known to you. Paris Flammonde appears in the January 1969 issue of Evergreen as the author of an article entitled "Why President Kennedy Was Killed". His book The Kennedy Conspiracy has been published by Meredith Press, New York. The dust cover of the book states that Flammonde was for many years the producer of the Long John Nebel radio show. We have no record of him.

4. Our records show that Richard Sprague, a management consultant and photographic researcher, appeared in a New York Times article of 24 May 1968 in which he claimed that within an hour of the assassination of President Kennedy three men may have been pulled off freight cars in a railroad yard near Dealy Plaza. We have no further identifiable record of him. We also have no record of Lloyd Tupling. [redacted]

A review of our files concerning Bernard Fensterwald, Jr., who was mentioned in news media on January 8, 1969, as being a board member of a new National Committee to Investigate Assassinations, disclosed that Fensterwald was born August 2, 1921, in Nashville, Tennessee, the son of Leonard Fensterwald and Blanche Lindauer Fensterwald. Enclosed is a copy of a memorandum dated March 29, 1963, which sets forth considerable background data concerning Fensterwald. (77-44206-34)

During recent years, Fensterwald has served as General Counsel for Senator Edward V. Long's Subcommittee on Administrative Practice and Procedure.

A check of our files also disclosed that we received correspondence from Richard E. Sprague, 37 Harvard Drive, Hartsdale, New York, in July, 1968. On that occasion,

Mr. [redacted] furnished a copy of his research monograph containing photographs of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy which he had accumulated. Mr. Sprague was afforded an opportunity to meet with a representative of this Bureau to review and discuss his material. However, we noted in reviewing Mr. Sprague's material that there was nothing new that had not already been fully considered in our investigation of the evidence involved in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and, therefore, we informed Mr. Sprague we did not feel it necessary to meet with him to go over his material. (62-109060-6520)

In reviewing some of the books written by critics of the Warren Commission, we noted that Josiah Thompson, in his book entitled "Six Seconds in Dallas," acknowledged assistance from one "Richard Sprague" not further identified.

We also noted that Sylvia Meagher, author of "Accessories After the Fact," acknowledged the assistance of Richard H. Sprague stating "I am grateful to Richard H. Sprague who kindly supplied a list compiled by him of photographs and films which seem to have been overlooked entirely by the Warren Commission and those investigative agencies." In her book, Miss. Meagher was extremely critical of the Warren Commission, the FBI, the Central Intelligence Agency, the Secret Service and the Dallas Police Department. (62-109060-6290)

A check of our files also disclosed that during 1954 V. Lloyd Tupling was appointed the Information Officer of the Board of Richard L. Neuberger, Democratic Senator of Oregon. One Lloyd Tupling, University Home Bureau, Eugene, Oregon, was listed as a member of the "Society of America's Friends of the Russian People" as of August 18, 1953. This group is no longer in existence and was not investigated by the FBI, although indications were that the group was sympathetic to the communist cause. During May, 1950, one Lloyd Tupling was the publisher of "The State-Wide Newspaper," a weekly newspaper published in Boise, Idaho. (100-179915-23)
